Mr. Munn had the right side of his face considerably skinned, and his neck and one of his wrists was also injured, and the front wheel of his bicycle was smashed to pieces. Other than punctured tire, Mr. Miller escaped with slight injuries. Both men were thrown from their machines when they came together.

His many friends in this vicinity will be pleased to learn of his promotion.

Pioneer Resident of Freedom.

Daniel Strieter was born in Freedom, March 6, 1849, and died at his home in that township Tuesday evening, May 5, 1914.

Mr. Strieter has resided in Freedom his entire life, most of which has been spent on the farm where he was born. Owing to failing health he rented his farm about a year ago and moved to a residence in the same neighborhood. He was a member of Bethel church. In 1877, he was united in marriage with Miss Amanda Wacker.

He is survived by his wife, six sons, two daughters, one brother, two sisters. The funeral will be held on Friday morning from the home at 9:30 and from Bethel church at 10:30 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Meyers officiating. Interment at Bethel cemetery.

Made Some Noise.

A special train of four sections, on the Michigan Central, east bound, carrying members of the Mystic Shrine, a branch of the Masonic order, passed through Chelsea between one and two o'clock Tuesday afternoon of this week. The party were from California, and were going to Atlanta, Georgia, where they will attend the National Conclave of the order. As the trains passed through here the residents were greeted with all kinds of noises. When one of the sections when through most of the inhabitants were startled by a mocking bird screeching instrument that they mistook for the village fire whistle. In the baggage cars were cages that contained almost every species of wild animals that inhabit the Pacific coast. The party spent the afternoon and evening in Detroit.

Primary School Money.

From present indications the $7.41 which each pupil in Michigan was entitled to draw from the primary fund this year, based on the primary school taxes for last year, will be slightly decreased.

The primary school fund at present amount to $5,450,000. This time last year it was $5,061,000. This time last year the Pere Marquette had settled its taxes, amounting to about $500,000. This year it has not done so and yet the fund is increased without it. When the Pere Marquette and some others pay it is figured that the primary fund will be $1,000,000 ahead of last year by July 1.

But last year there were 795,000 pupils and this year there are 809,000. As it stands now the per capita draw is practically $7, but figuring on the July estimate, it will amount to $7.23. This money must be used either for the pay of teachers or for tuition to high schools. It cannot be used for buildings or repairs.

JOIN COUNTY LEAGUE

Chelsea Will Have a Baseball Team This Year—Organized Last Friday.

Chelsea will have a baseball team in the Washtenaw County League this season, and from the enthusiasm shown by the local fans; it looks as if the organization will give this place some lively games of ball.

A large crowd of the admirers of the national game met in the hall over Brooks' billiard room last Friday evening and perfected an organization.

The meeting was called to order by Geo. P. Staffan, who stated the object of the gathering, and after a thorough discussion of the prospects for a ball team, the following were elected as the officers of the club:

Manager and Captain—J. S. Allen.
Secretary—Roy Dillon.
Treasurer—T. W. Watkins.

As Chelsea has a number of good ball players the team will without a doubt be one of the best in the county league.

Memorial Day.

With the fact in mind that only for a few years more will the commemorative exercises of Memorial Day be carried on by those who fought by the side of those who fell, Supt. Fred L. Keeler is most earnestly urging that schools, both normal and public schools observe the day with appropriate exercises. The spirit of patriotism and gratitude to those who answered the call of the nation, must be kept alive. How rapidly the host of the Grand Army is vanishing is shown by the pension rolls. During the year ending June 30, 1913, the number on the pension list was decreased by 36,064 deaths. The inheritance left by these men to the youth of today is a love for the flag and an unswerving loyalty. The inculcating of this spirit is a duty of the school of no small importance. Exercises should be held in every schoolroom of the state Friday, May 29. On May 30 schools should as far as possible assist in the exercises of the day. Memorial Day needs no proclamation. It is almost nationally observed.

School Notes.

The school entertainment will be given during the third week of May. Miss Irwin is busy drilling the pupils for the choruses.

The chemistry class visited the plant of the Michigan Portland Cement Co. Wednesday where they made a study of the making of cement.

The track squad expect to enter the state contest at Ann Arbor and Lansing. The tri-county meet will be held at Wayne, May 29. The boys hope to win the cup. If Plymouth wins it this year, it will become their permanent property.

The following are the members of the senior class and all have been recommended for graduation by Supt. Hendry: Grace Schenk, Gladys Schenk, Josephine M. Miller, Irene Dole, Erma F. Gage, Clara H. Riemen-schneider, Veva J. Hadley, Rosaline C. Kelly, Alma Marie Widmayer, Doris Theodora Schmidt, Frieda A. Widmayer, Pearl Maier, Ernest L. Wagner, Earle E. Schumacher, Roland E. Kalmbach, John F. WHAT MEXICANS HAVE FOUGHT FOR Agrarian Democracy Has Been the Aim of the Peon Class for Past Century.

STRUGGLE STILL GOING ON

Position of Revolutionists and Constitution of 1857 for Which They Stand, Set Forth in Book by Senor de Lara.

In the confusion and lack of exact knowledge that attend the embroglio with Mexico the big issue that has moved the Mexican people to revolt against Huerta has been lost sight of or is not known to most Americans.

What the people of Mexico have fought for from the first war of independence, and what they are fighting for now under Carranza and Villa is the right to buy and till farms. For a hundred years the peon class has waged a continuous struggle to achieve agrarian democracy. Time after time the revolution has been carried to the verge of success, and time after time the Mexican ruling class has invoked foreign intervention in order to prolong its power.

All this and a great deal more is made clear in a book just published by Doubleday, Page & Co., "The Mexican People; Their Struggle for Freedom," by L. Gutierrez de Lara and Edgcomb Pinchon. It is frankly a statement of the position of the revolutionists, and shows why they believe American intervention in Mexico at the present time would only bring about more loss of life and worse conditions in the long run.

Senor de Lara has much to say about the constitution of 1857, that has been ruthlessly set aside by successive governments, and he gives a digest of that instrument, the heads of which follow:

Article I. The Mexican people recognize that the rights of men are the foundation and the purpose of social institutions. In consequence they proclaim that all the laws and authorities of the country must respect and sustain the warranties stipulated by this constitution.

Article II. In the republic every one is born free. The slaves who step into the national territory recover their freedom by this mere fact, and have the right of the protection of the law.

Article III. All education is free. The law will determine which profession needs a diploma for its exercise, and what requisites are to be fulfilled.

This fundamental principle was later amplified to make education universal, free, non-sectarian and compulsory.

Article IV. Every man is free to adopt the profession, trade, or work that suits him, it being useful and honest; and to enjoy the product thereof.

Article V. No man shall be compelled to work without his plain consent and without just compensation. The state will not permit to become effective any contract, pact or agreement with the purpose of the curtailment, the loss or the irrevocable sacrifice of the liberty of any man, may the cause be for personal labor, education, or religious vows. The law in consequence does not recognize monastic orders, and will not permit their establishment, no matter what may be the denomination or purpose for which they pretend to be established. Neither will be permitted a contract or agreement by which a man makes a pact for his proscription or exile.

Article VI. The expression of ideas shall not be subjected to any judicial or governmental prosecution except in cases of attack upon the public morality, the rights of a third party, or the prevention of a crime or a disturbance of public order.

Article VII. The liberty of writing and publishing writings upon any matter is inviolable. No previous censorship nor imposition of bonds upon the writers nor the publishers for the purpose of curtailing the freedom of the press can be established by any law or authority, such freedom being restricted to respect of private life, morals and public business.

Article VIII. This deals with the right of petition to the government.

Article IX. This gives the right of assembly.

Article X. This establishes the right of every man to possess and carry arms for his safety and legitimate defense.

Article XI. This deals with immigration to the country and other traveling both from the country and into the same.

Article XII. This establishes the invalidity of all titles of nobility, prerogatives and hereditary honors.

Article XIII. In the Mexican Republic no one shall be subjected to private laws nor special courts. No man or corporation shall enjoy favors or receive emoluments unless they be a compensation for public services and already fixed by law.

Article XIV. This establishes the principle that no one shall be tried by retroactive laws.

Article XV. No treaties can be made for the extradition of political offenders; neither for those criminals whose crime was committed in a country where they had been slaves; neither was a treaty or agreement made by which the warranties of rights that this constitution gives to man or citizen be altered.

Article XVI. This article establishes the principle that the family and domicile are inviolable, except for the purposes of arrest under a warrant from a proper court expressing the charge.

Article XVII. No one shall be arrested or imprisoned for debts of a purely civil character. No one shall exercise violence to claim his rights. The courts will always be ready for the administration of justice. This will be free, the costs being abolished.

Article XXVII. Private property shall not be taken without the consent of the owner, except in case of public utility, and by just payment therefor. Religious corporations or institutions, no matter of what denomination, character, durability or purpose, and civil corporations when under the patronage, direction or superintendency of religious institutions, or ministers of any cult, shall not have the legal capacity to acquire or manage any real estate except the buildings which are used immediately and directly for the services of the said institutions; neither will the law recognize any mortgage on any property held by these institutions.

Article XXVIII. State and church are independent. Congress cannot make any law establishing or forbidding any religion.

The practical abrogation of the constitution under Diaz and Huerta has resulted in the building up of a privileged class and the cruel exploitation of the people. Vast territories have passed into private ownership. The disinherited peon has become the virtual slave of the land owners, and freedom has been a privilege purchased from the government by those who had the means.

These are the conditions that De Lara pictures, and it is to end them the present fight of the constitutionists is waging.

FORCED TO BUY PROTECTION

Refugees Arriving at Vera Cruz Tell of Paying Money to Huerta's Soldiers.

Vera Cruz.—Sixty-three members of the Medina colony in the state of Oaxaca are among the refugees who have arrived here. They were held two days in Cordoba and report they were well treated, except that they were obliged to sleep on the floors of the barracks. They were relieved of guns, but not of the scanty belongings which they were able to bring with them.

J. W. Elliott, a locomotive engineer, was in Tierra Blanca when news of the occupation of Vera Cruz reached him. With his wife and children he started for Cordoba under guard of Mexican soldiers. At Cordoba the guards said they were hungry and demanded 50 pesos on the threat to surrender Elliott and his family to a howling mob which surrounded the station and filled the streets.

The money was paid and Elliott and his family were marched more than a mile through the streets to the barracks, hounded all the way by the mobs. They were kept in the barracks six days, during the first two of which crowds surrounded the place demanding their lives. On two occasions members of the mob forced their way into the barracks and except for the efforts of the colonel and two other officers Elliott and his family would undoubtedly have been killed. Toward the end of their stay the demonstrations ceased to a large extent.

Manager Boyd of the Motorzongo Hacienda, when he arrived at Cordoba, was forced by the federal guards to pay 1,050 pesos for protection through the streets to the jail.

Circulars containing the words "Kill the Gringos" and urging the people to rise and massacre the prisoners were posted about Cordoba.

One of the refugees who have arrived here from the interior is F. W. Lehmer, a ranch manager from Tuxtepec, whose home is in Omaha and who was on his way to Vera Cruz for a visit, not knowing of the developments here. He was picked up at Tierra Blanca by federal soldiers.

"I was placed with ten others in a train which was standing overnight, surrounded by a mob which continually threatened to attack us," he said. "The guards ate up everything available on the train, compelling us to go hungry. At every station up to Cordoba, on the following day, similar crowds looted the train and threatened us."

"While being taken through the streets of Cordoba a squad of young volunteers who had just been presented with a flag swept down upon us and tried to run us down. This happened at the corner where the municipal palace is located or otherwise we would not have escaped as well as we did. As it was, I was hit on the head with a flagstaff and a man walking beside me was struck on the head with a rock. His scalp was badly cut."

"It was due to the fine conduct of the Mexican colonel that we ever reached the palace. He rushed from the door with a squad of police and soldiers and plunged into the crowd, scattering them and surrounding us."

"Later we were put in the penitentiary, and for six days we slept on the stone flagging. There were two women in the party, one with a little baby. We were allowed to send out and buy blankets, and managed to get enough to eat, such as it was."

"Monday we were placed on a train and brought down to Soledad. We spent that night on the tracks. There was one passenger coach left for us and in this the women and children slept, the rest of us sleeping on the ground."

WED BEFORE FLEET SAILED

Mrs. Donald Taylor Hunter was the latest navy bride when the fleet sailed from Hampton Roads. On the day before she was Miss Emily Hancock Hughes, and she was to have been married to Lieutenant Hunter of the Arkansas on May 14. When sailing orders were received the lieutenant radiographed to his bride, she hurried to Fort Monroe and the wedding ceremony was performed at once.

Feminine Master Mariner. Mrs. Von Bauditz, Denmark's only woman sea captain, now commanding a vessel running between Russia and England, claims to be the only real feminine master mariner in the world. Mrs. Van Bauditz, who is the wife of a physician, was for a long time interested in yachting as a sport and, after passing an examination for a master's license, she took up the sea as a profession. So adept did she prove herself that a shipping company soon gave her command of one of its largest steamships.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE TO FIGHT FOR DRASTIC LAW AT NEXT SESSION.

TO MAKE MANY TOWNS DRY

State Railroad Commission May Increase Time Limit on Filing Claims for Damages on Shipments of Cattle.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing, Mich.—It was claimed here by one who is high in the councils of the Michigan anti-saloon league that the headquarters of the league would be moved from Detroit to Lansing in the near future in order that the advocates of temperance would be able to train their heavy guns on the next legislature at short range.

According to the plan outlined the league workers will not ask for the submission of a constitutional amendment providing for state wide prohibition, as they have evolved a plan which will be nearly as effective if it materializes and a great deal less expensive. It is said that a bill will be introduced providing that no saloon, brewery or wholesale liquor house shall be located within five miles of a state institution. If such a bill should be passed it would mean that nearly all the principal cities of the state would be in the dry column with the exception of Detroit.

If such a law is passed Lansing would be barred from having any more saloons because of the fact that the state capitol is located here and because the Michigan Agricultural College is located at East Lansing three miles from the capitol. The University of Michigan being located at Ann Arbor would put that city in the dry column. Ypsilanti would be dry because of the fact that the State Normal College is located there. Marquette would have to banish its saloons and breweries as the Northern State Normal College and Marquette prison are in that city.

Other cities that would be kept dry should the proposed law be passed are Mt. Pleasant, where the Central Michigan Normal School is located; Kalamazoo, where the Western State Normal is located; Houghton, which has the Michigan College of Mines; Flint, where the Michigan School for the Deaf is located; Saginaw, where the Michigan Employment for the Blind is located; Coldwater, where the State Public School is located; Adrian, where the Industrial School for Girls is located; Grand Rapids, which has the Michigan Soldiers' Home; Traverse City, Pontiac and Newberry, where state hospitals are located; Ionia and Jackson, where state prisons are located; Howell, where the state sanatorium is located. If the new state house of correction to be located in Bay City is placed within five miles of Bay City, another place may be added to the list.

It is said that the dry advocates will make a determined effort to elect men to the legislature next fall who are in sympathy with the temperance movement and if a majority of the 1915 legislature is dry the Michigan anti-saloon league will have easy sailing.

The state railroad commission has started something which will, if it succeeds, eventually prove a great boon to the shippers of cattle in the state of Michigan. The commissioners have started to take up with the interstate commerce commission and the various railroads of the state, the question of increasing the time limit for claims for damages on shipped cattle.

Under the present system and attached to and made part of the railroad tariffs is a specification by which all claims for damages, either through injury or death of cattle in transit, must be made within five days after the delivery to the consignee. In many instances it has been proved that this time is not long enough.

If a man ships cattle from the upper peninsula to Detroit, it requires three days and some times five days before the shipper gets a report from the consignee as to the condition of the stock on its arrival. His time has passed in which he can make demands of the railroads.

For some time past complaints have been received at the state railroad commission relative to the short limit. It is said and can be made a matter of regulation by the commission, for one reason, if for no other, that the agreement and stipulation is made a part of the tariff rate. Before doing anything, the commission, through Commissioner Glasgow, has decided to find out just what regulation the government commission and other state commissions have made.

Where the application for the adoption of a child is rejected because of unsuitable home surroundings, the county agent has no authority without proper proceedings in probate court to take charge of the child, according to a ruling by Attorney General Fellows.

In another opinion Fellows holds that the board of education of a graded district has the authority of fix the number of grades, subject to the right of the voters to vote the necessary funds.

Fellows informed the tax commission that land upon which home rights have been granted should be assessed to the owner in fee simple and that a power plant owned by municipality in adjacent townships may not be assessed in taxes. Fellows also holds that an estate may not be held liable because the owner made false statements of taxable property during his lifetime.

Fellows has ruled that villages may amend their charters so as to impose a tax on saloons, in addition to the regular license fee required under the state law.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the state grange a strong resolution was adopted calling upon all granges to vote against the proposed amendment to section 10, article 10 of the constitution to be submitted at the general election this fall which provides "the state may also issue bonds for the purpose of raising money for the construction and permanent improvement of the public wagon roads of the state."

The executive committee of the state grange points out that the attorney general has held that this amendment, if adopted, would place the power of bonding the state for roads in the hands of the legislature without a vote of the people, and that the amendment provides no limit for bonding.

The resolution says in part: "Be resolved that the state grange executive committee, while stoutly affirming its support of better market roads hereby records its emphatic protest against any state bonding scheme for good roads, except by vote of the people and especially against the amendment, which would place power in the hands of the legislature that would be exceedingly unwise and might easily become as vicious in practice as it is dangerous in principle."

State Fire Marshal John T. Whelan, in his annual report to Gov. Ferris Saturday, shows that 9,660 fires occurred in Michigan last year, causing a loss of $7,448,768.57. Of these, 2,745 were in Wayne county with a loss of $1,618,604.89.

From Ingham county 267 fires were reported with a property loss of $82,141. Jackson county reported 51 fires with a loss of $101,022.72, and Kent, 563 fires with a loss of $117,849.26.

The report shows there were 11 fires of unknown origin, causing a loss of $1,928,180.77. Sparks from chimneys caused 566 with a loss of $180,143.02; overheated stoves, 14 and a property loss of $103,762; lightning caused 1,333 and a loss of $749,492.66. Careless smokers are said to have caused 484 fires and a loss of $255,282.35.

Since the last legislature authorized the state fire marshal's department to inspect buildings where moving picture shows are located, 63 theaters were inspected, 439 licenses were issued, 59 theaters were closed and 46 other theaters ordered to discontinue the moving picture business.

"The feature of the work done in the department during the year is the discovery that the people of Michigan are thoroughly awake to the fact that the best way to fight fires is to prevent them," said Fire Marshal Whelan. "Property owners on whom orders were issued have in most cases complied promptly."

"During the year 837 official inspections made in 105 cities and villages were recorded by the department; 261 orders directing that buildings be repaired were issued; 235 orders directing the razing of buildings; 133 directing compliance of the law relating to the storing or handling gasoline and explosives."

"The fire chiefs of the state, with one or two exceptions, have cooperated with the department to bring about better conditions and reduce the fire hazard in Michigan."

Following a conference with Gen. John P. Kirk, Adjutant General, C. Vandercook announced that commanders of the various national guard companies throughout the state have been advised to begin quiet preparations to meet a call to arms.

"Men who are members of the guard and men who would have to make great sacrifice to go will be replaced by single men," said Maj. Vandercook.

Dr. John L. Burkart, secretary of the state board of health has been appointed as a delegate from Michigan to attend the twelfth annual conference of state and territorial health officers with the United States public service to be held at Washington, C. June 19 and 20.

Theodore Gerasimos, a Detroit Greek, sent a telegram to the executive office in which he says that Greeks of that city have instructed him to offer their services for military service in case volunteers are needed. "There is only one condition that countrymen desire me to state, and that is that they be kept intact as directed by an American officer instead of being separated among different companies," said Gerasimos.

CRASH KILLS TWO IN DETROIT

CROWDED CAR JUMPS THE TRACK AND COLLISION RESULTS.

FOURTY-TWO SUFFER INJURIES

Passengers Trapped by Pay-As-You-Enter Doors Bruised and Battered in the Wreck.

Two men were killed and injured when a Victor-Sherman car, jumping rapidly on an uneven road, crashed into a Fourteenth car coming in the opposite direction on Oak street, near Philadelphia avenue, at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Both cars were wrecked. The motor of the Fourteenth car, Charles Pogue, 1027 West Warren avenue, was fatally injured, dying soon after reaching Grace hospital. Gunner, a passenger, 561 North Main street, died in the ambulance. A passenger, 561 North Main street, was very seriously injured. Forty-one others were injured. Many of the injured were Ford Motor Co. employees. The passengers on the Victor car, which was pay-as-you-enter-doors, and unable to escape from the car, were thrown in a heap and hurled in every direction. Finally the pay-enter doors were closed and the imprisoned men emerged, some of them cut, bruised and battered beyond recognition. A similar scene took place on the other car. Both cars are said to have been overloaded.

LEADS GUILTY OF MURDER

John Davis and Noah Stanley Arraigned at Marshall.

Marshall, Mich.—John Davis, 15, and Noah Stanley, 24, charged with the murder of the former's father, Harvey Davis, near Battle Creek, April 26, were arraigned before Judge North, Monday. Davis pleaded guilty, and was remanded for sentence. Stanley stood mute, a plea of not guilty being entered.

It is not likely the case will be tried until the September term of court, and Judge North may not sentence Davis until after Stanley's trial.

Detroit Youth Shoots Himself Accidentally While Fishing.

Pontiac, Mich.—Max Lempe, 17, of 228 Berlin street, Detroit, was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of his 12-gauge pump gun while fishing at Union lake, this county, Sunday morning.

The youth and his cousin, Louis Lempe, of Detroit, went to the Lempe cottage, at Union lake, to spend Sunday and went fishing early Sunday morning. While attempting to land a fish, young Lempe tipped over his gun and the charge entered his right ear, blowing the top and back of his head off.

TROUT CAUGHT ILLEGALLY

Fish More Numerous Than Ever in Northwestern Michigan.

Cadillac, Mich.—Protests were filed Monday with Game Warden Oates because of alleged illegal trout fishing Sunday at the Wellston dam in Manistee river. Thousands of trout have reached the dam and can get no farther.

Sunday scores of men with grappling-iron contrivances dragged the stream near the dam, and according to farmers near Wellston pulled out between 2,000 and 5,000 pounds of trout. Trout never were so numerous in northwestern Michigan as this year.

BOY SLEEPS AS ROOM IS MUSSUED UP BY BOLT

Lightning struck the house during a thunder storm Monday, and a bolt of lightning entered Charles' room and played hob with the decorations and bric-a-brac, but Charles was blissfully unconscious.

No one was injured, and no other room was damaged.

ENVOYS WILL NOT CONSIDER REBELS

CONSTITUTIONALISTS ELIMINATED FROM PEACE PROCEEDINGS.

AN ARMISTICE IS REFUSED

Admiral Mayo at Tampico Will Probably Wait for Rebels to Take the Town Before He Enters the River.

Washington—Gen. Carranza and the constitutionalists Monday were practically eliminated from the proceedings of the three South American envoys who have undertaken to solve the Mexican problem by diplomacy. In a telegram to Gen. Carranza, the mediators announced that in view of his refusal to accept an armistice with Gen. Huerta, they withdrew their invitation to him to send a personal representative to participate in the mediation negotiations.

The mediators told the constitutionalist that as long as he maintained his present attitude they must decline to treat with him. Gen. Carranza had inquired in a note to the envoys, what subjects a special representative might be required to discuss, pointing out that if the general problem of pacifying Mexico were to be approached, he could not authorize any one to participate in the negotiations. He reiterated that he would consent to mediation only on the incidents which had brought about a controversy "between the United States and Mexico," holding that he was the constitutionally chosen leader to whom complaint about the insult at Tampico and other offenses originally should have been made.

Will Let Rebels Take City.

Vera Cruz—The constitutionalists at Tampico have notified Rear-Admiral Mayo, commander of the American warships stationed there, that if any of his vessels attempted to enter the Panuco river the oil reservoirs above the city would be emptied and the oil ignited, which would mean certain destruction to the town.

This situation was reported by commander of the United States torpedo boat destroyer Jenkins, which arrived at Vera Cruz Monday from Tampico. Both the federalists and the rebels are reported to have planted mines in Tampico harbor.

It is generally thought here that Admiral Mayo will await the capture of the city by the rebels through the slow process of starving out the federalists.

APRIL ACCIDENT REPORT.

Fatalities Fall Below Average for Past Few Months—Railroads Contribute But One.

Lansing, Mich.—Accidents to the number of 1,109 were reported to the Industrial Accident board during April. There were 22 fatal accidents; 58 causing permanent partial disability, such as the loss of a member of the body, and 1,044 accidents resulting in temporary disability.

The number of fatal accidents fell below the average of the past several months.

The copper and iron mines contributed the largest share of fatalities, eight workmen having met death in the mines. Lumbering was responsible for four and construction for two.

The railroads reported only one fatal accident, a fine showing, and undoubtedly a result of their accident prevention campaign. Reports of accidents causing permanent partial disability did not show a decrease, but remained near the average. Other accidents were about the usual number.

The old homeopathic building has been an eyesore on the campus for many years and will be torn down to make room for the new science building which will be started soon.

The Michigan Agricultural college plans to conduct a summer camp at Torch Lake for the farmer boys of the state. There will be definite educational programs each morning, with sports the remainder of the day.

GOOD JOKES

INSATIABLE.

George A. Birmingham (Canon Hanay), the versatile Irish clergyman, playwright and novelist, was talking to a New York reporter about the American business man.

"I'll tell you a story," he said, "which hits off the American business man well."

"A wife, still young, turned from the window of her sumptuous nineteenth-story apartment and said to her husband:

"George, ten years ago you promised me that when you made a million you'd retire from business, and then we'd travel and enjoy life."

"Here she began to cry."

"You've got your million now," she sobbed. "Why do you keep on working?"

"George, as he hurried into his overcoat, growled:

"Ah, that's just like you—never satisfied!"—New York Tribune.

Showing His Love.

"Looka here, Sam!"

"Yes, 'Liza."

"I begins 't think yer doesn't love me no more."

"Nonsense, 'Liza; what put dat in yer head?"

"Why, yer just sit there by the fire and sees me work."

"Why, 'Liza! The more I sits by this 'ere fire and sees you workin' the more I loves yer, honey!"

One Reason for High Prices.

"What's the matter with this coal bill?" demanded the indignant consumer. "Why have you raised the price a dollar a ton?"

"Why, haven't you heard?" asked the coal man.

"Heard what?" asked the consumer.

"A government expert announces that our supply of coal will not last more than five thousand years," replied the coal man.

"Well, I should say that was coming to a rash conclusion."

AN ELECTRIC WORKER.

"Don't you do anything for a living?" asked the lady at the back door to the seeker after food.

"Oh, yes'm," was the reply; "I use a lot of electricity in the course of a day."

"How so?"

"Well, I was reading in the paper this morning that nearly seventy per cent of the residents of the United States are using electricity in some form every day, if only for telephoning or ringing door-bells. You can just bet I ring a good many door-bells in a day."

DAIRY

PROFIT FROM FAMILY COWS

Important Animal Be Vigorous and Sound and Be Submitted to Tuberculin Test Annually.

(By LAURA ROSE STEPHENS. Copyright, 1914.)

A question often asked is: "Does it pay to keep a cow for family use?" If there is a fair sized family, if no extra help is needed to look after the cow and if there be a convenient place to house and pasture her, then keep a good cow.

A Jersey, Guernsey or Ayrshire might be chosen. The Jersey and Guernsey give rich milk, which readily creams owing to the fat globules in their milk. The Ayrshire gives a well sustained flow for table use, as it contains the smallest fat globules and does not cream so readily.

If a family is to consume the milk of one cow it is important that she be vigorous and sound and be submitted to the tuberculin test once a year, for the danger of drinking milk continuously from a diseased cow is apparent. That is the reason why herd's milk is to be preferred to the individual cow's, unless the health of the cow is assured.

Spring Styles in Banking

Not in years have savings accounts been so popular. Some people just lay by a little now and then when it is perfectly convenient. In this way they are able to have a modest, unobtrusive account. Others, desiring a more substantial account, bring us a certain amount every week, rain or shine. This way it counts up "like sixty."

Never were check accounts in such demand. They seem to fit every style of purse. The ladies—bless 'em—are learning that we do all their book-keeping for them when they pay by check.

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harman, meets Simon Girty, a renegade whose name has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Harman, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Harman's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auvray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harman to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of Wa-pa-tah, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Rene asks Hayward to let her accompany him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father, she insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut. It proves to be Raoul D'Auvray, a former French officer who is called by the Wyandots "white chief." Rene appears and Hayward is puzzled by her insistence that they have met before. Rene recognizes the murdered man as her father, who was known among the Indians as Wa-pa-tah. She tells Hayward her father was killed from the French court and had spent his life among the Indians as a missionary. Brady reports seeing a band of marauding Indians in the vicinity and with them Simon Girty. Brady's evidence convinces the girl that there is a British officer by the name of Hayward, who resembles the American. They had escaped from the island cut off.

Brady flung forward his rifle, yet hesitated, fearing to fire. Whatever it might be—animal or man—the thing was coming directly toward us, swimming with long, stringy locks of wet hair dangling to the shoulders. It was a man beyond doubt, yet for the instant I could not determine whether red or white. As he stood there sunk to his armpits in water, he beheld us for the first time, and there burst from his lips a sudden, guttural exclamation of alarm. With the strange sound Schultz leaped forward, lumbering against me as he passed, and splashed his way out toward the fellow, uttering some exclamation in his native tongue. He reached him, the two voices greeting each other.

"Well!" exclaimed Brady in disgust. "It isn't another Dutchman. Come in here, you!"

The two waded ashore onto the sand, Schultz's heavy hand grasping his companion's arm, and helping him along. I saw a face white and ghastly in the starlight, lean, smooth-shaven, looking emaciated against the long, dark hair, the eyes bright with fanaticism. He was a tall, spare man, shaking so he could hardly stand. The very sight of him aroused my sympathy.

"Don't be afraid," I said soothingly. "We're all white. How did you come here?"

His eyes looked at me as I spoke; then shifted to Schultz's face in silent questioning. The latter was breathing hard, but managed to explain.

"He not talk English very good, mynheer. I tell you vat he say mit me—he vos a Dutch preacher; yav, mine Gott; just over py mine own country—he vos named Adrian Block."

"Did he swim all the way?" asked Brady grinning, but Schultz kept his eyes fastened on me, held by the one thought to which he sought to give utterance.

"He vos Moravian, mynheer; vot you call mis-sionary—so? He von month in dees country, an' know only to preach."

The girl leaning forward, interrupted with a whisper:

"I recognize the man, monsieur; he was the prisoner I told you of in the Indian camp—the Protestant."

"They let him only mit one guard, an' after while, dot fellow he fall asleep. Den he got loose mid his bonds, an' creep down mit der shore of der lake where a boat was. So he drift out on der water; but der boat leak, an' go down, leaving him mit nottings. Dot vas it, mynheer. Den he swim som' an' pray mooch, an' so com' here mit us, alreedy."

"Where did the Indians go?"

"Up mit der lake shore—so like dis," waving his hand.

"All of them? The two white men also?"

Schultz repeated the question, and Block answered, never once removing his eyes from mademoiselle.

"He know not what became of der little man; he see him not for long while, but der big man he go mit der Indians—yav, he tells dem der way, an' talk all der time."

"We have got the situation clear enough," concluded Brady, coolly. "Whoever that red-coat is, he evidently knows the best way to this island, and the fix we're in. So far as I can see there is nothing left us but to fight. We can't get away now; the boat is useless, and those Indians have blocked the ford. That's exactly where they are now, watchin' fer us to attempt to cross. The only question is: Where can we hold out the longest? I'm fer goin' back to the house."

"And I also," I said, deciding instantly, and as quickly assuming command. "There is small chance of our holding out long against those fellows, but

"we'll do the best we can. What about you, mademoiselle?"

"I go with you," she answered quietly.

"Against your own people?"

"Those are not my people! They are outlaws, renegades, led by the murderer of my father."

"Then let us go back; every moment lost will count against us. Pick up the packs. Brady, you lead off; Schultz, take care of the preacher and keep his tongue still."

The house was exactly as we left it, a few red embers on the hearth alone shedding spectral light about the main room, as we groped our way forward. There were heavy wooden bars to fit across the doors, and I secured these as soon as I deposited my pack on the floor.

"Mademoiselle," I said, staring about at the blank walls in some perplexity. "You know this place better than any of us; surely it was not erected here in the wilderness without some provision for defense in case of attack. Are those walls solid?"

"No, monsieur; they were made tight, so no gleam of light would ever show without, but there are gunports here—see."

She slipped aside a small wooden shutter, disclosing ingeniously between the logs, revealing an opening sufficient for a rifle barrel.

"There are four along this wall, and as many opposite. At the rear you must stand on the bench, so as to fire above the shed roof."

"Leave that preacher alone, and open them up, Schultz," I commanded sharply. "There is not light enough here now to show without. Now, Brady, see if there are any extra guns in the shack, or ammunition. Lay everything out here convenient. A rifle? Good! We'll give that to our Moravian friend; he may be opposed to war on principle, but, by all the gods! he'll fight now, if Schultz can pound the truth into him. What is that, mademoiselle? Powder and ball in the big chest; show Brady where it is. This isn't going to be such a one-sided affair after all. Five of use, counting Block, who may not know which end of the gun to point. I am going to scout outside and see when those fellows cross over."

Brady shaded his eyes to stare across at me through the gloom.

"You'd better let me go."

"No; I'll try it alone; get everything ready, and leave the bar down."

"You will be careful, monsieur?"

There was an unconcealed note of anxiety in the voice that caused me to glance back at her quickly in surprise.

"Be assured of that, mademoiselle," I returned. "I know the duty of an ally, and stepped without, closing the door behind me."

CHAPTER XI.

I Fight a Red-Coat.

Convinced that my coming had not been perceived, and that no Indian scouts were watching the cabin, I pressed forward into the depths of the woods, obliged to proceed slowly because of the darkness. So cautious was I, lest some noise might betray my presence, that I was some moments in passing through the fringe of trees to where I could obtain view of the lake, and the dark line of shore opposite.

I had advanced for perhaps a hundred yards, passing beyond where we had attained land the evening before, when I suddenly came to a halt, sinking to my knees, and staring forward across a slight opening in the forest growth. At first I was not sure that what I saw was actually a man, but as the object moved toward me, all doubt vanished. He was not only a man, but a white man; at least he was not clothed as an Indian; and as he stepped forth into the open, more clearly revealed for an instant, I could have sworn that he wore a uniform coat, with buttons that gleamed dully in the twilight. He looked a giant, a great, hulking outline, but stepped lightly enough, not the slightest sound betraying his cat-like movements, as he came steadily onward, with head bent forward, his rifle advanced. I felt sure of his identity almost at once; surely he could be no other than the British agent, whom mademoiselle held guilty of her father's murder, the man who masqueraded under my own name. I felt my blood grow hot with anger. He would pass within a yard of me; he was alone, seeking his way, endeavoring to plan how he should lead his savages to an assault. If I could get him it would be half the battle.

I watched him closely, peering about the smooth bark of the tree, one foot advanced, ready for a spring. Some instinct of wild life must have told him of my presence, for he stopped still, peering about suspiciously, his rifle flung forward. I dared not delay, yet swift as I was, his quick eye caught my movement. The gun butt swinging through the air met his rifle barrel, slid along the steel, and struck a glancing blow. He reeled back, dazed, half stunned, dropping his own weapon, yet seizing the muzzle of mine to keep from falling. I endeavored to jerk it free, but he hung to it desperately. Scarce knowing how it was done, we were together, grappling each other, the disputed gun kicked aside under our feet.

He swore once, a mad English oath, but I choked it back, clutching his throat in iron grip, straining to force him to the fulcrum of my knee. Then he found grasp of my hair, hurling my head back until the agony compelled me to let go. I struck him square in the face, a blow that would have dropped an ordinary man, but he only snarled, and closed in, grappling my wrist with one hand, the other fumbling for a knife at his belt. By God's mercy I got it first; yet could not strike, for he had me foul, gripped to him as if held in a vise. I could feel the muscles of his chest, the straining sinews of his arms as they crushed me. I gave back, down, my limbs trembling beneath the force with which he flung the whole weight of his body against mine. I had met my match, and I knew it. Yet the knowledge gave me fresh strength, fiercer determination. The very conception of defeat crazed me; my brain held no thought save a mad impulse to conquer him, show him who was the better man!

I wrenched aside, breaking that strange-hold by sheer strength and wrestling skill. Again we grappled, face to face, our muscles straining as we sought advantage of hold. My hunting shirt gave, tearing apart like brown paper, giving me a scant second as his grasp slipped. It was enough, I had him locked at my hip; yet strain as I would his weight baffled every effort. Back and forth we struggled, crushing the bushes under foot, our breath coming in sobs, every muscle aching under the awful strain. Neither dared loosen a finger grip. Our eyes glared into each other with savage hate. How it would have ended God knows, had the fellow not slipped on the brush root, so that the added weight of my body flung him headlong. Even as he went over, bearing me along with him, his head crashing into the side of a tree as he fell, his lips gave vent to one wild cry. Then he lay still, motionless, a huge black shape outstretched on the ground in the ghastly light of dawn.

I got to my knees, scarcely realizing what had happened, peering down into the upturned face, one hand raised to strike if the man moved. There was not a motion. I bent lower—the eyes were closed, blood dripped from his hair. I turned the head, so as to better perceive the features—surely this was not the man for whom I had been mistaken! He was big enough, but marked by dissipation, and wore a black mustache. As I live there was not a resemblance. Who was he then? I got to my feet and searched out my rifle in the tangled brush. Some noise reached me—the splash of water, the echo of a far-off voice. They were coming, the Indians; they had heard his last cry; they were already crossing the ford. I hesitated an instant, staring down at him, listening intently that I might be sure, then turned and ran swiftly toward the clearing. It was already gray dawn, and even in the dense woods I could see to avoid the trees. Behind me rang out a wild whoop of savagery; they had discovered the body! I glanced back across my shoulder, as I ran; burst forth into the clearing, and, reckless of all else, raced for the house. I fell once, my foot slipping on a hummock, but was up instantly, plunged at the door, and leaped within. Brady caught me, thrust the wooden bars down into their sockets, and half dragged me over to the bench.

"What is it?" are they coming?" he asked.

It was darker in there than outside, and I could barely perceive his face.

"Yes," I panted. "They are just behind me. I—I had to run for it. Get to the stations; I'll—I'll tell you later what happened out there."

He left me, and my eyes, accustomed themselves to the gloom, began to discern objects in the room. I got to my feet, still breathing heavily from exhaustion, yet with brain active.

Brady was close beside me, kneeling on the floor, his eyes at an opening between the logs.

"See anything?"

"There are figures moving at the edge of the wood," he answered, without glancing around, "but they don't come out so I can tell what they look like. The way your clothes are torn you must have had a fight!"

"I did—with the big fellow in a red jacket. He's lying out there with a cracked skull. That is why those fellows don't know what to do—they're short a leader."

I got to my feet, and stared about, seeking mademoiselle. She was beyond the table, and our eyes met.

"You—you killed him, monsieur?"

"I do not know; I threw him, his head struck against a tree, and he lay still. I had to run; only he was not your man, mademoiselle; he looked no more like me than you do."

"You—you are sure?"

"Yes; I saw his face. It was lighter out there, and he lay flat on his back. He was big enough, if anything larger even than I am, and gave me a fight for it until his foot slipped. He had black hair and mustache, and his face was full of purple veins. He looked French to me."

"Yet wore a red coat?"

"Ay! and swore in English, the one oath I heard. You know anyone like that?"

There was a shot without, and the clug of a ball as it struck against the logs; then another, and Brady's voice tense with strain:

"They're goin' to try it, an' there's sure some injuns out ther; the whole edge o' the woods is alive with 'em. Get ready now! This ain't goin' ter be no slouch o' a fight."

I sprang across to the nearest opening, yet stopped to be sure of the arrangement within. The gray light stealing in through the small firing holes failed to give distinct view across the room.

"Where are you Schultz?"

"Oh, all right; what has become of your friend?"

"He vas to load; he do dot, but not fight. Maybe dot help some, don't it?"

I saw the man then, his white face showing dimly, and before him three rifles lying across the table.

"You found more guns?"

Brady glanced aside to answer.

"The girl did; she knew where they were—ah! now the rumpus has begun!"

Reports, blending almost into a volley, sounded without, the thud of lead striking the logs in dull echo. One stray ball found entrance, splintered an edge of the bench, and flattened out against the stone chimney. I dropped to one knee, my eyes at the opening.

CHAPTER XII.

We Meet Them With Rifles.

Small as my peek hole was, just large enough to admit a rifle barrel, it yet afforded clear view to east and south of the house. As I gazed, striving to determine what the various movements meant, and from which direction to anticipate final attack, an Indian crept out into the open, crawling on his stomach like a snake through the grass. Others followed, until a dozen wriggling forms began to advance inch by inch, hugging the ground so closely I could scarcely perceive their movement. I heard a slight sound within, as Brady quietly thrust forward his rifle.

"Wait a moment," I called to him, not venturing to glance about, but holding up one hand in warning, "it is a long shot yet, and we must make every one tell. Wait until the first fellow is half across; then pick your man. Who is at the loophole beyond us?"

"It is I, monsieur."

"You, mademoiselle! Hadn't you better let Schultz take that place?"

"An' why, monsieur?"—the soft voice coolly indignant. "Am I afraid? Am I unable to shoot? Why should I not stay?"

"Those are Indians," I began, "I thought—"

"Bah! My people! Those robbers and cowards. I told you there is no Wyandot among them. You will see, monsieur."

"All right then. I take that first one, and you pick the two to the left. Fire when I give the word. Schultz lay out one of those extra guns beside each of us. Ready now; the fellows who are not hit will jump and run for the woods as soon as we fire; give them a second shot before they can reach cover."

"Ready now!" I commanded sharply. "Let them have it—fire!"

Old Beliefs Lost.

Few are the beliefs and still fewer the superstitions of today. We pretend to account for everything until we do not believe enough for the humanity so essential to moral discipline. The phantasmic age has long been unfurnished of all its ingenious garniture. That glowing day has set, leaving none of its ethereal hues in our old twilight. We have lost something for which we have no substitute

Novelty for Spring Outdoor Wear

SERGE with a wide wale or a heavy whipcord or any of the fancy corded weaves in fabrics used in making a gown like that shown here will develop a costume as chic as any of the season has offered, although in a design so simple that it is distinguished. By comparison with the flounced or, more properly, tiered skirts, and the much fussed up but pretty jackets which the present mode parades in endless variety, this dress is uncompromisingly simple. Yet it follows the mode and will be singled out as one of the most attractive exponents of it.

The same style is pretty in taffeta silk, in satin and in plain cloths. But the last do not prove so easy to hang in the lines pictured in this illustration. There must be a certain degree of stiffness in the weave for the best results.

This gown, like all the other successful ones, hangs upon the figure in the easiest manner. The skirt is narrowed at the bottom by gathering the body into a wide band at the lower edge. The band, in this case, is of the same material as the rest of the skirt, although with a sparing use of the striped trimming elsewhere it might be made of the stripe, with fine effect.

The plain blouse, open at the front, has a fairly long skirt of the fabric of the gown. It terminates in a wide border of Roman striped ribbon with a panel let in at the front which extends up on the bodice to the bust line. There is a vest of white net and, flaring collar which turns back from the neck all around. It is supported with fine wires that hold it in shape, and finished with a narrow binding of ribbon.

The overskirt is shaped to lengthen at the sides and back and is turned up across the back, showing the reverse side of the striped border across half its width. The sleeves are long with the upper part wide at the arm's eye and gradually narrowing to the elbow. Below this they are narrowed to the arm with no room to spare.

Altogether this gown and hat may be classed among those that possess distinction. Black colonial pumps and black silk hose clothe the feet.

The Coiffure and the Hat

EARLY in the season's career of style changing, there came an edict from Paris to the effect that "three quarters of the hair to show" should govern the shaping and posing of hats.

Although we have developed much independence of Parisian edicts, this particular one has been favorably considered. The "three-quarters of the hair to show" means that one side of the face and hair is to be silhouetted against the hat brim, or at least to be uncovered by the shape of the hat.

With this in mind the coiffure has risen to the occasion and is considered with reference to the hat. The hair is waved and, since something of the front and back and much of the side must be in evidence, its arrangement across the forehead, at the nape of the neck and at the sides, are all to be considered in adopting a style with reference to its fitness for the hat.

It must fit the face of the wearer, too, and the effort to meet all these requirements has resulted in a variety of new coiffures, mostly high, all waved and, as a rule, attractive.

Women whose length of neck warrant it may wear the hair in a coil at the back, more or less low. The lines of the hair have to be adapted to the face and their direction controlled for it. In the coiffure pictured here with a hat the face will bear the long sloping line of the waved hair from the top of the head to the low coil. In the coiffure without a hat the hair is drawn back from the face in lines that lift instead of falling, and the hair pinned in above the coil. In this coiffure, too, the coil is higher.

This latter arrangement of the front hair, loosely waved about the face and drawn back, is used with a French twist at the back of the head terminating in a coil and puffs at the top. But the hair is very loosely drawn up at the back, with fullness enough to fill in between the hat brim and the head. Bandeau trimmings and underbrim bows are cleverly arranged to help out in this matter of filling in.

Another noteworthy feature of the adaptation of hat to hair is evidenced in the use of malines matching the hair in color. Facings of shirred maline on the underbrims of hats, if made in the color of the hair, are wonderfully effective.

In all the new coiffures the hair is waved and the ears are almost entirely covered. And the hair is brought forward on the cheek when the coiffure is designed for youthful wearers. Sometimes a wave is combed forward and adjusted by means of invisible pins. Sometimes a lock is curled into a wiry ringlet and plastered down with bandoline, as in the coiffure shown here, and rarely a cluster of short ringlets is flattened and fastened down with invisible pins which hold them in place.

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very grateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached, and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHEA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

AFTER HALF-CENTURY MARK

No Real Reason Why Man of That Age Should Not Be Capable of Good Work.

Speaking of the age of efficiency, a Toledo gentleman locates it beyond the half-century mark. He calls our attention to the fact that Columbus was fifty-six when he discovered America, that Darwin, Kant, Spencer, Wagner, Haydn and others did their greatest and best work when far past the fifty mark, and that some have persisted in great accomplishment until seventy or more years of age. This argument won't help the man who is aged and broken and tottering at fifty, will it? But it will hearten the man of forty or more who has been careful of his resources, to think that to him achievement still is a possibility—and it may find him the opportunity to achieve by convincing some master of opportunity that years do not always spell senility or loss of virility. The young man may reflect that he has the opportunity to run a long race—and he may catch sight of the fact that the man of fifty is not necessarily a "back number" merely because of his half-century.

HAPPY NOW

Family of Twelve Drink Postum.

"It certainly has been a blessing in our home," writes a young lady in regard to Postum.

"I am one of a family of twelve, who, before using Postum, would make a healthy person uncomfortable by their complaining of headache, dizziness, sour stomach, etc., from drinking coffee."

"For years mother suffered from palpitation of the heart, sick headache and bad stomach and at times would be taken violently ill. About a year ago she quit coffee and began Postum."

"My brother was troubled with headache and dizziness all the time he drank coffee. All those troubles of my mother and brother have disappeared since Postum has taken the place of coffee."

"A sister was ill nearly all her life with headache and heart trouble, and about all she cared for was coffee and tea. The doctors told her she must leave them alone, as medicine did her no permanent good."

"She thought nothing would take the place of coffee until we induced her to try Postum. Now her troubles are all gone and she is a happy little woman enjoying life as people should."

Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

THE CHIEF

BREVITIES

HOWELL—In the case of the estate of William R. Wood, deceased, vs. the Grand Trunk Railway company, mention of which was on trial last week, the jury Friday returned a verdict of $4000 for the estate.—Democrat.

YPSILANTI—Rev. Father Kennedy left here Sunday for New York City, whence he will sail for a trip through Europe. The members of his church presented him with a purse amounting to several hundred dollars. Members of a hunting club of which he is a member, in addition to many other people, gave him several hundred dollars for the trip.

BRIDGEWATER—The ticket agent George Sanford, has resigned and expected to be relieved Monday but was not on account of the sickness of Mr. Gordon, who was to take his place. After using a preparation for his head, blood poisoning set in and the doctors thought his recovery rather doubtful. Mr. Gordon was here as operator when Mr. Sanford was on his western trip.

TECUMSEH—Good progress is being made on the new water works well, which is to be 25 feet in diameter and 25 feet deep. Water has already been struck in good quantity and it is expected that when the full depth is reached that the question of an adequate water supply for the village will be solved. The well will be one and one-half times as large as the present well now in use.—News.

YPSILANTI—Attorneys for Wm. H. Brooks, who brought suit against the city of Ypsilanti for $30,000 after the little Brooks boy had met his death while playing on the shoot the chutes at Recreation park, have offered to settle the suit for $250. The offer was submitted to the common council last night. The aldermen passed a resolution offering to settle for $150, with the provision that if the city's offer was refused the case would be fought out in court.

ANN ARBOR—Rev. Bishop E. D. Kelly left Ann Arbor Tuesday and will sail on Thursday from New York on the White Star liner Baltic for Liverpool. The bishop's objective point in Europe is Rome, where he will lay before the holy father the conditions of the diocese of Detroit. This is the year when every bishop is required to visit the Holy See in person or by proxy and to make his report. Because of the advanced age of Bishop John S. Foley, Bishop Kelly was delegated to make the visit to the Eternal City.—Times News.

MANCHESTER—Postmaster Bailey barely escaped having a conflagration at his residence Sunday night. He has an incubator heated by kerosene oil and after attending to it Sunday night a bright light was seen in the room. He found one end of the incubator in flames and he had to work lively to smother it. After all was over he discovered that he had filled the tank with gasoline instead of kerosene. The storekeeper made the mistake and but for prompt work the house might have been destroyed. Merchants and others cannot be too careful in handling gasoline.—Enterprise.

MANCHESTER—It may be of interest to our readers to state that our venerable townsman Gilbert Putman is a veteran of the Mexican war and as such is drawing a pension. He is the only Mexican war veteran in these parts and though confined to his home with sickness he eagerly listens to the reading of all news relative to the trouble we are having with our sister republic. The old war spirit is still alive in him and his love for the stars and stripes, for which he fought in two wars, is as strong as ever and he would gladly give his services to his country in compelling these people to respect the flag.—Enterprise.

BROOKLYN—Resort keepers and cottagers at Wampers Lake are in a controversy with the Norvell township officials over the deepening of the channel and lowering of the lake. The object in lowering the lake by cutting the channel deeper was to protect the road which winds around the north shore of the lake and which is continually washed out and damaged by water and ice when the lake is high. Hundreds of dollars have been spent by the township to keep the road even in passable shape. The resorters reply that the water level of the lake has been lowered beyond all reason. A meeting has been called and some sort of compromise will probably be effected before war is declared.—Exponent.

For an engagement of one night only Mrs. Fiske will appear at the Whitney theatre, Ann Arbor on Monday, May 18.

"Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," Mrs. Fiske's present medium, is the farcical comedy from the pen of Harry James Smith, which so startled and convulsed New York during her engagement at the Lyceum Theatre in the spring of 1911. From New York the play was taken on a summer tour of the West and the Pacific coast and the following year it was given in eastern territory, prior to the production of another play. Mrs. Fiske who has a particular fondness for the comedy has now again taken it up following two years of "The High Road" from which it will be a complete change in the demands it makes upon her artistic resources.

The play is distinctly unlike any other in which Mrs. Fiske has ever been seen, being an out-and-out comedy, almost a farce. It treats of the social battles waged by the daughter of an Indiana manufacturer of "paukellers" and "stomach elixirs." Putting the pelf gained by her father "the sufferer's friend," to such good use that she marries into the English aristocracy, she returns to America to still further advance the family's social fortunes, meets with obstacles which make up the incidents of the play. During the former tour the author's work was found to be hilariously funny, and Mrs. Fiske's characterization of the resourceful climber, with its sudden and complete transitions from the veneered English lady to the natural Indiana product, is one of the most striking contributions ever given to our stage.

In announcing my candidacy for the position on the Democratic ticket for Sheriff, I do so early to give the voters plenty of time to look into my qualifications. If elected, the people of Washtenaw county will receive my undivided time and the same class of service I have given the city of Ann Arbor as City Clerk and Comptroller. ROSS GRANGER. Adv.

Notice to Real Estate Owners.

Have you an abstract of the title of your property, if so, have you had it examined by a competent examiner, to learn whether your title is free from such defects as are commonly referred to as "a cloud upon the title."

A cloud upon the title to real property is created in many different ways, the most common of which are, that the person who located the land from the United States Government failed to obtain and record his LETTERS PATENT, or that one of the respective owners did not record his deed, or that a mortgagee, after receiving payment of mortgage debt, failed to discharge the mortgage, or that the conveyancer in drafting deed or mortgage made a mistake in the description of the property or in the names of the parties. All defects of this character, can be easily and inexpensively cured during the lives of the interested parties, but become difficult and expensive if not taken in time.

Owners of thirty per cent of the property in this county have no abstracts of their title and no way of determining its true condition as shown by the official records. Is the title to your HOME or FARM included in this list, if so, would it not be well to procure an abstract at once and have it carefully examined. Many a sale has been defeated because of a defect in the title, the owner having waited until he wanted to sell his property before ordering an abstract.

The records of this company, established in 1863, are very complete, and we shall be pleased to serve you. WASHTENAW ABSTRACT COMPANY, Adv. 45 Ann Arbor, Michigan.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Another feature act has been signed to a contract by Manager McLaren of the Princess. This time it is the celebrated "Hobo Quartet" direct from the famous Barber Shop Circuit, where they have just completed 90 days of first class bookings. This attraction is one of the best the Princess has ever offered and their appearance at the Princess Friday evening is sure to attract a huge crowd. The quartet is composed of those famous singers, "Peanut" Anderson, "Fireman Jim" Kuhl, "Fusser" Kalmbach and "Wattles" Barbour. Among the late popular song hits these boys will warble "I'm on my way to Mandalay" and "Sympathy" and Mr. Anderson will sing a solo.

For the Saturday evening show at the Princess, the feature picture is a three part drama "Thorns of the Great White Way." This Warner feature will arouse your sympathy for the struggling girls that are confronted with many traps of injustice, in trying to follow the straight and narrow path of decency. Conditions similar to the ones here portrayed are the existing ones in many of our large cities—conditions that baffle the civic authorities. The complete story is as follows:

The politician places his motherless daughter in an exclusive seminary when she is quite young. Here, when a grown girl of eighteen, she meets a young man who fascinates her. She finally elopes with him, and her father from that moment loses all trace of his daughter. Her husband is found out to be an escaped life-terminer from Sing-Sing and is sent back to prison. On the verge of being put out of her boarding house for back rent, she accepts aid from a strange man. He deceives her and uses her as a tool. She is accused of theft and is sent away to the penitentiary for three months. After serving her term she tries to secure a living but is rebuffed and becomes so melancholy over her fight for existence, that she is about to plunge into the river and end her strife, but is saved in doing so by a Salvation Army lass, who asks her to accompany her to the man that saved her. She is taken to this same cafe that her father operates and after a few minutes is recognized by him. He is so overcome that he closes up and seeks a cleaner and better life by persuading her to leave the lure of the city.

On next Tuesday evening at the Princess, the feature picture will be a three part Warner's feature drama "In the Shadows," featuring that popular actress Miss Gene Gaultier with Jack J. Clark, playing the opposite lead. "In the Shadows" is a dramatic story, taken from real life and contains a plot of gripping intensity. Adv.

International Harvester manure spreaders have a score of good features in their construction. Each one is the result of careful field experiment. An IHC spreader is low enough for easy loading, yet it has plenty of clearance underneath. The rear axle is well under the load, rear wheels have wide rims and Z-shaped lugs, insuring good traction under all conditions. Frame, wheels, and all driving parts are of steel. Apron tension is adjusted by a simple device. Winding of the beater is prevented by large diameter, and beater teeth are strong, square and chisel-pointed. International manure spreaders are built in several styles and sizes, low or high, endless or return apron, for small farms or large. Examination will show sturdiness of construction in every detail. Repairs, if ever needed, may always be had of the local dealer. Examine International spreaders at the dealer's. We will tell you who sells them, and we will send you interesting catalogues.
