DON'T EXPERIMENT DON'T BE FOOLED

Too many healthy heads of hair are being ruined every day through the continued use of inferior hair tonics. Be careful of what you use on your hair. If you would have a healthy, luxuriant growth of hair—if you would exterminate dandruff, keep the scalp healthy and the hair from falling out—use HIRSUTONE. We not only claim superiority for Hirsutone—we prove it to you.

Hirsutone Prevents Baldness

Stop experimenting, use Hirsutone. Price 50c and $1.00

RECORD BREAKING STORM

Rain Monday and Tuesday Flooded
Many Acres of Land.

The rain and electrical storm in this vicinity on Monday and Tuesday was the most severe that has been recorded in this vicinity for a number of years. Almost all of the low land was covered with a great volume of water and every small stream overflowed their banks.

The onion marshes of J. F. and R. B. Waltrous, A. W. Chapman and Mrs. D. Spaulding south of town were covered with enough water to enable a person to take a comfortable boat ride. The marsh lands of H. S. Holmes, Mrs. Thos. Taylor, Martin Merkel and others east of Chelsea were well submerged. The low land of F. H. Sweetland, Geo. Ward and other property owners west of here were miniature lakes.

The Chelsea sub-station of the Commonwealth Power Co. was put out of commission by a bolt of lightning at 10 o'clock Monday evening. P. M. and J. E. Slaybaugh, who have charge of the station, informed the Standard that the high tension feed wires that supply the Michigan Portland Cement Company and the Michigan Central pumping station at Four Mile Lake, with electricity were burned off at a point near the pumping station. The Motor Products Co., which secures power from the Commonwealth, were closed down Tuesday forenoon on account of the lack of "juice," but were able to resume operations in the afternoon. The water pumping outfit at the sub-station was burned out which caused the plant to be shut down while the repairs were being made.

About 11 o'clock Monday night a bolt of lightning struck a tree in Oak Grove cemetery which was uprooted, and broken branches covered the ground in the vicinity of where the tree stood. The crash of thunder following the flash of lightning awoke many. A number of property owners had windows broken by the concussion. S. A. Mapes had five windows, broken, R. D. Walker one, E. Negus one, Mrs. Wm. Fletcher one, Bert Taylor one, the transom over the main entrance to the Wilkinson building, and there are others about town which were broken.

Will Combine the Two Stocks.

The L. T. Freeman Company will make a decided change in their salesrooms in the course of a few days. Carpenters are at work removing the shelving on the south side of the grocery department and the drug store, which is located in the north store, will be placed on the south side adjoining the soda fountain. The grocery stock will be in a more compact space on the north side of the room, and the stock at the east end of the room will be moved forward on a line with the Park street entrance. Ralph Freeman, who has been a member of the firm for several years, has sold his interest in the store, "on account of failing health, and will seek an occupation that will be in the open air. When the two stocks are rearranged the L. T. Freeman Company will have the most complete labor saving salesroom in Chelsea. The store at present occupied by the drug department has been rented and the new tenant will take possession in the near future.

Cavanaugh Lake Grange Meeting.

The next meeting of Cavanaugh Lake Grange will be held at the home of Phillip Schweinfurth on Tuesday evening, May 19th. The following is the program.

Song, Grange.
Questions and Answers.
Recitation, "Daddy Knows," Max Hoppe.

How shall a father train his son in money matters, P. Schweinfurth.

Select Reading, Birdie Notten.

Question, Are we in favor of the bill for the construction of trunk lines throughout the state; and the amendment taking away from the people the right to vote on any bond issue and placing that power in the hands of the legislature, Charles Riemenschneider.

Song.

Coughed for Three Years.

"I am a lover of your goodseed to humanity and science. Your medicine, Dr. King's New Discovery, cured my cough of three years standing," says Jennie Flemming, of New Dover, Ohio. Have you an annoying cough? Is it stubborn and won't yield to treatment? Get a 50c. bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery today. What it did for Jennie Flemming it will do for you, no matter how stubborn or chronic a cough may be. It stops a cough and stops throat and lung trouble. Relief or money back. 50c. and $1.00. Recommended by L. P. Vogel, H. H. Fenn Co. and L. T. Freeman Co. Adv.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Happenings in Chelsea Forty Years Ago This Week.

Rev. Mr. Reed, of Ann Arbor, delivered an able address on temperance in the M. E. church Sunday evening.

Miss Ella H. Lawrence and Mr. Collin E. Babcock, of Chelsea, were married in Ann Arbor May 7, Rev. L. C. Pettengill officiating.

Mrs. Gottlob Hutzler.

Miss Rosina Haessler was born in Freedom, July 30, 1850, and died at her home on Railroad street Chelsea, Monday afternoon, May 11, 1914.

She was united in marriage with Gottlob Hutzler December 9, 1873. The couple have resided in this vicinity for the last thirty-one years, twenty-four of which were spent on their farm in Lima and the last seven years in this place. To this union four children were born, three of whom are living. Mrs. Hutzler has been in failing health for the last three or four years. She was a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's church.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Miss Clara who resides at the family home, two sons, Ernest and Fred of Lima, one sister and one brother. The funeral will be held from the home at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon and from St. Paul's church at 2 o'clock, Rev. A. A. Schoen officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Damaged Automobile.

B. C. Whitaker had his touring car badly damaged last Thursday afternoon. Mr. Whitaker was driving east on the territorial road and a car driven by J. M. Rickett of Detroit, collided with him. Mr. Whitaker gave his portion of the highway, but the Detroit man did not turn out until he was almost opposite of the approaching car.

The front of the Detroit car passed in safety, but the rear skidded and the car of Mr. Whitaker had the axle badly sprung and the fender was damaged. Slight damage was done to the Rickett car.

The Detroit man stopped but refused to give his name or address but Mr. Whitaker took the license number on the car and notified the officers in Chelsea, and they called up the towns west of here, and Mr. Rickett was arrested when he reached Kalamazoo. Justice Witherell was called upon on the long distance phone and Rickett made arrangements to appear in Chelsea Monday afternoon. After a deposit of $25 had been made with the chief of police at Kalamazoo Rickett and his party were allowed to continue their journey.

Monday an attorney for Rickett appeared before Justice Witherell and as his client was unable to appear the case was adjourned until Wednesday, May 20.

Elected Officers.

The Bay View Reading Circle held its last meeting at the home of Mrs. Geo. W. Palmer on Monday evening. A scrub lunch was served at 6 o'clock after which a short program was rendered followed by the election of officers which resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Mary L. Boyd.
First Vice President—Miss Grace Walk.

Second Vice President—Mrs. Sarah Gates.
Secretary—Mrs. Anna Hoag.

Treasurer—Miss Nellie Hall.
The annual picnic will be held on the afternoon of June 3 at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Walz on Chandler street.

Mothers' Day.

The observance of Mothers' Day at the M. E. church on Sunday morning drew a large congregation. The pastor spoke of the origin of the day and the influence of a mother. The solo by Mr. Bartch was well received. One person was baptised and three were received into the church in full. At the close of the Bible study delegates were elected to the boys conference at Milan and to the Sunday School Institute at Ypsilanti.

Weighing the Mail.

The latest order from Uncle Sam is that postoffice employees and rural carriers must weigh and record each and every piece of parcel post which passes through their hands. This requires considerable time and as a result the carriers are unable to start on their trips as early as formerly and the postoffice clerks require considerable more time to take care of the incoming mails.

OLD LANDMARK TO GO

The Historic Old Grist Mill at Sylvan
Center to be Removed.

Homer H., W. C. and J. H. Boyd have sold the historic old grist mill at Sylvan Center to Albert Hinderer, of Lima, who will tear it down and move it to his farm in Sylvan, known as the F. L. Davidson place. The timber in the old mill will be used in a barn that is to be built on the farm.

The old mill was built in 1853, and the funds for its construction were raised by subscription. The mill was the old fashioned stone equipment and did a thriving business for many years. The mill was started by the Sylvan Milling Co., and finally became the property of Orlando Boyd in 1882, and has been in continuous possession of the family since.

Orlando and Homer H. Boyd operated the mill as co-partners for several years. After the brothers dissolved partnership, Orlando operated the mill until about 16 years ago. Most of the old machinery has been sold.

Ordered New Uniforms.

The Chelsea Band have ordered new uniforms which they expect will reach here in time for use on Decoration Day. The new uniforms are being manufactured by D. Klein & Bro., of Philadelphia, and will be made of a dark blue cloth, trimmed with a black braid and will present a handsome appearance.

There are eighteen members in the band and the new suits will cost $235. The band has $200 of the amount on hand, some of which came from a fund that the organization raised by their playing "last year" and the remainder from a contribution by the business men of this place. There remains $35 to be raised to complete the final payment on the uniforms and the public spirited citizens of Chelsea will undoubtedly come forward and contribute this amount. Chelsea has a good band and it should be encouraged and kept up.

New Primary Law Strict.

Many innovations are provided in the 1913 primary law. Among the many things that a candidate can not do during a primary campaign, is that he can not wilfully and intentionally procure more names on his primary petition than the maximum percentage allowed by the act.

In Washtenaw county this means 174 for the Democrats, 120 for the Republicans, 118 for the Progressives and 25 for others. He can not post notices in any building, post, fence, vehicle or other object within the county. He can not use for paid advertising a cut of himself larger than one and one-half by two inches. He can not promise any position or give anything to procure support during the primary campaign, and he can not solicit votes within 100 feet of polling place on primary election day.

The Red Apple Bug.

Michigan has at last acquired the famous red bugs of the apple, that have caused so much activity in New York. The present spring has shown their presence in the central part of the state on apple, though just how far they have spread, is not known. It was of course to be expected that sooner or later they would reach us and perhaps we have escaped as long as could be expected. The first case was found by G. C. Woodin, a member of the Department of Entomology at the Agricultural college, while examining trees for sale. The bugs are hatching out now and are crawling about. One species is bright red in color while the other has blackish markings. They are very small as yet, being about 1-16 of an inch long. The bugs pierce the young fruit as soon as it sets and either cause it to drop or else deform it. The leaves are also curled by the creatures. As to the control, tobacco preparations have proven the most satisfactory. Nicotine or nicotine sulphate (black leaf 40) the latter, one to eight hundred, with a little soap added, have proven successful in killing the nymphs, after once hatched out and before the adult stage is reached. A spray put on at this time has the further advantage of killing many of the plant lice or aphids at the same time.

Complete Short Story.

The Detroit Journal is now publishing every day a complete short story, each one written by one of the most famous of modern, short-story writers. The series will comprise adventure, mystery, love, horse racing, heart throbs and horror tales. Among the writers will be James Oliver Curwood, H. G. Wells, Edna Ferber, Robert Barr, Gouverneur Morris and Richard Harding Davis.

SYLVAN HAPPENINGS.

John Merker visited his brother George of Jackson, last Sunday.

Charles Young is preparing to build a fine new basement barn on his farm this spring.

Misses Ruth and Viola Dyer, of Jackson, spent Sunday with Mrs. Christina Knoll and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Riggs, of Detroit, spent several days of last week with Mr. and Mrs. W. Eisenbeiser.

The bucket brigade of Sylvan made a hasty run to the home of John Merker on Tuesday afternoon when the alarm of fire was given.

The burning out of a chimney caused the alarm. No damage was done.

Quite a novel sight in the way of fire works was witnessed by Mrs. Homer Boyd and Darwin Boyd during the electrical storm Monday afternoon, when lightning struck the high tension wire post west of Homer Boyd's residence. The bolt rolled along the wire several feet before exploding, when it burst into a flame sending the electricity down several poles. No damage was done except the splintering of the poles.

It so frequently occurs that people in automobiles telephone back from some town inquiring if there has been a hat found or did we notice whether they had their hats on when passing our homes, as was the case again last week when a lady lost her hat. Now we wish to say we never take any notice whether they have hats or even beads, (which are the most frequently lost.) They had better engage some one to watch their hats go by.

LYNDON CENTER.

Raymond McKune visited Plainfield friends Sunday.

Andrew Harr now drives a new Overland automobile.

Fred Howlett, of Ann Arbor, visited his brother, John Howlett, Sunday.

Misses Mary and Frances McIntee, of Detroit, are spending some time with their mother, Mrs. Eugene McIntee.

Good Suggestion to Chelsea People.

It is surprising the amount of old food matter the simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-Ka, drains from the system. This remedy became famous by curing appendicitis and acts on BOTH the upper and lower bowels so thoroughly that ONE DOSE relieves sour stomach, gas on the stomach and constipation almost IMMEDIATELY. We are mighty glad we are Chelsea agents for Adler-Ka. H. H. Fenn Co. Adv.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS AT CEREMONIES OVER HERO-DEAD AT NEW YORK

Bluejackets and Marines who Gave Lives in Occupation of Vera Cruz are Honored by City, State and Nation when their Remains are Brought Home

New York.—The dead from Vera Cruz were landed on American soil Monday, and city, state and nation paid their tribute.

Two hours before the city was astir, 17 flag-draped coffins were removed from the deck of the armored cruiser Montana and placed on caissons on the plaza in Battery park. Few witnessed this ceremony, for the sun was hot and bright; but thousands later lined the streets to watch the slow procession wind its way to the navy yard. Perhaps not since the Dewey parade has there been such a spontaneous demonstration. That, however, was a noisy tribute to a returning victor; this a reverent one to the returning dead.

Great Throng Witness Procession.

Silent thousands long before 9 o'clock began making their way toward lower Manhattan; others massed about the city hall, where the procession was to halt briefly; still others lined the approaches to the Manhattan bridge, and finally a great throng gathered at the navy yard, where eulogies were to be said. Many wore little bows of black; others wore bands of black on their sleeves.

President Wilson arrived in the city from Washington shortly after 7 o'clock almost unobserved. He was taken immediately to the home of his friend, Col. E. M. House, and thence to the Battery to take a place in the procession. It had at first been arranged that the president was to go to the navy yard to receive the nation's dead on government ground, but at the last moment Mr. Wilson changed his mind and was driven to the Battery so as to participate in the ceremonies from beginning to end. When he reached the Battery the hero-dead were on gun caissons, police had lined the way and the procession was ready to move.

Twenty-four picked mounted police led the way. Behind them were the combined bands of the dreadnaughts Wyoming and Texas, and behind the band, 600 bluejackets from these ships.

Next came the coffins, in single file. At the side of each rode a policeman, and at the corner of each caisson trudged a national guardsman. The Stars and Stripes alone covered the caissons.

Behind the last caisson came the carriages bearing the president, the secretary of the navy, senators, congressmen and representatives of the state and city.

Such a Scene Never Witnessed Before

Never had the battery witnessed such a scene. Noiselessly almost, tugs nosed up to pier A and with a precision that is the navy's, the 17 dead were landed, grouped on the caissons. Immediately the bluejackets who were to march began to assemble. The men from the Texas came by tug from the navy yard whence their ship was to sail later in the day for Mexican waters. The Wyoming's men came ashore in their own boats. It was the Wyoming that conveyed the funeral ship into the harbor Sunday, and all night long, outlined in lights, she swung at anchor 300 yards ahead of the Montana's bow.

The cortege began to move at 9 o'clock, the ships' bands playing a funeral march; bluejackets with arms reversed. The crowd stood with bared heads, silent. Through the sky-scraper canon of lower Broadway, past old Trinity church and into the city hall plaza the procession passed.

Services Simple and Brief.

At city hall, whose columns and portico were draped in black, the cortege halted while Mayor Mitchell placed on a caisson a wreath of orchids, the city's tribute. As he did so the bluejackets stood at present arms, and 800 school children sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Gathered at the city hall were perhaps 10,000 spectators.

From there the route lay north, across Manhattan bridge to Brooklyn and the navy yard. There the ceremonies, as arranged, were simple and comparatively brief. A hymn by the battleship bands, an invocation by Chaplain William G. Cassard, of Annapolis; then President Wilson's address. Prayers by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and Fr. John P. Chidwick, chaplain of the Maine, followed. Three volleys fired by a detachment of marines from the Texas, and "taps" by a bugler concluded the program.

Address of President Wilson.

President Wilson had no formal address prepared for the ceremonies. Secretary Daniels read to him the names of the 19 American dead, in whose honor the services were held. The president's reply was delivered with slow impressiveness. His voice was low and fervent and his face was grave.

"Mr. Secretary," he said, "I know that the feelings which characterize all who stand about me are not feelings that can be expressed in eloquence or oratory. For my own part I have a mixture of feeling.

"The feeling that is uppermost is one of profound grief that these lads should have had to go to their death. But yet I feel a profound pride and envy that they should have been permitted to do their duty so nobly.

"Their duty is not an uncommon thing. Men are performing it in the ordinary walks of life, but what gives these men peculiar distinction is that did not give their lives for themselves, but gave their lives for us because as a nation we called upon them.

"Are you sorry for the lads? Are you sorry for the way they will be remembered? I hope to God none of you will join the list, but if you will, you will join an immortal company, and while there goes out of our hearts and affectionate sympathy for them we know why we don't go away from this occasion with our hearts cast down, but with confidence that all will be worked out.

"We have gone down to Mexico to serve mankind if we can find the way. We do not want to fight the Mexicans; we want to serve them.

"A war of aggression is not a thing in which it is proud to die, but a war of service is a war in which it is a proud thing to die."

The president referred then to the cosmopolitan personnel of the victims.

"I listened to the list," he added, "with profound feeling, because they were not Irishmen, or Germans or Hebrews when they went to Vera Cruz. They were Americans, and no matter where their people came from they did the things that were American."

"War is only a sort of dramatic representation, a symbol of a thousand forms of duty. I never was in battle or under fire, but I fancy it is just as hard to do your duty when men are sneering at you, for when they shoot at you they take your natural life and when they sneer at you they wound your heart.

"As I think of these spirits that have gone from us, I know that the way is clearer for the future, for they have shown us the way."

Tribute of Mayor Mitchell.

Mayor John Purroy Mitchell's tribute to the memory of the heroes was as follows:

"The people of New York pay their solemn respects to the honored dead, to the stricken families of these men. Their loss is irreparable. Nothing that we can say now, nothing that we can do can mitigate it. But to the American people their loyalty and sacrifice is a new inspiration. Their deaths have driven home to the entire nation the awful significance of war, but the sacrifice they have made will be gloried by the part these men, who gave up their lives at Vera Cruz, have played in America's attempt to bring peace to a sister republic."

"These men gave their lives not to war, but to the extension of peace. Our mission in Mexico is not to engage in conquest, but to help restore to a neighboring republic tranquility and order, which are the basis of civilization."

THIRTY-SIX HOURS OF RAINFALL BREAKS OLD RECORDS IN MICHIGAN.

MANY FACTORIES CLOSED

In Suburbs of Detroit Many People
Are Driven From Their Homes and All Business Is Paralyzed.

Detroit.—Thirty-six hours of almost steady rainfall, the heaviest May downpour recorded in Detroit in 42 years, Tuesday sent swollen rivers foaming over banks that formerly rimmed mere creeks, inundated vast spaces within and just beyond the city limits, flooded countless basements, transformed streets into streams, paralyzed trolley and steam traffic in the districts affected and created a property and industrial loss of millions of dollars. Many people were rendered homeless. The great Ford factory was forced to close down for three days.

The mill dam in the Battle Creek river at Olivet, has gone out and a flood swept down on Bellevue and Battle Creek. Adrian was without fire protection for several days, what Standish dam at Tecumseh is gone, several factories in Kalamazoo have been closed, and scores of farms in southern Calhoun and Kalamazoo counties have been devastated as a result of the wind and rainstorm that swept over southern Michigan Monday and Tuesday.

CHARGE AND PRESIDENT TALK

O'Shaughnessy Tells Wilson of Conditions in Mexico City.

Washington.—Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires of the American embassy at Mexico City, Tuesday night told President Wilson the story of what happened in the Mexican capital during the days immediately preceding and following the occupation of Vera Cruz, and gave him an intimate picture of Gen. Huerta. It was the first time Mr. O'Shaughnessy had seen the president since his arrival in Washington last week. He was at the White House for more than an hour, and went away highly pleased with his reception.

The charge advised the president that General Huerta was a very stubborn man and not apt to surrender his position as dictator easily. He expressed the opinion, however, that any government set up in Mexico which has the support of the United States, will stand.

FINE PORTRAIT IS SLASHED

English Suffragette Uses Hatchet on Likeness of Duke of Wellington.

London.—A militant suffragette, armed with a hatchet, Tuesday seriously damaged a valuable portrait of the duke of Wellington in the Royal academy.

The woman was standing looking at the painting when she suddenly drew the hatchet from her muff and slashed the canvas three times. An attendant promptly seized her and took her to the police station, where she said her name was Mary Ansell. The painting was by the late Sir Hubert Von Herkomer, who died March 31 this year. It was considered one of his finest works.

Frazer Is Wayne Prosecutor.

Detroit.—Allan H. Frazer has been appointed by the circuit judges as prosecuting attorney of Wayne county to succeed Hugh Shepherd, resigned.

In a letter to the judges Tuesday morning, Mr. Frazer announced his acceptance. The new prosecutor, who held four terms in the same office in the 90's, took his oath of office before County Clerk Thomas Farrell at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Annual Rally in Hastings.

Hastings, Mich.—The annual rally of the eighth grade graduates of all the rural schools in Barry county will be held at the fair grounds in Hastings on Thursday, June 4. It is expected that 1,000 persons will be present. About 400 pupils will receive certificates. When it was discovered that some children had grown up in Barry county without ever having been in the county seat, these field days were originated two years ago.

CHARLES W. POST KILLS HIMSELF

NOTED BATTLE CREEK MILLIONAIRE
A SUICIDE IN CALIFORNIA.

BAD HEALTH THOUGHT CAUSE

Built Up Great Fortune As Cereal
Manufacturer By Spending Great
Sums of Money in Advertising.

Battle Creek.—This city was shocked Saturday by the news that Charles W. Post, wealthy cereal food manufacturer, had shot himself to death with a rifle at Santa Barbara, California.

Mr. Post had been out of health for some time. Recently he made a hurried trip to Rochester, Minn., to undergo a major operation to save his life. He had been in a nervous state since his return to California and had fought against an inclination to suicide for some time, according to the testimony given at the inquest by Miss Ella Benson, his nurse.

Could Not Control Nerves.

The nurse said Mr. Post had a horror of a weapon of any kind for several weeks. He had requested that firearms be removed from the house, and it was thought that the Post home was free of them.

"My mind is perfectly clear, but I cannot control my nerves," he complained to the nurse.

Both Mrs. Post and the nurse said they did not know how Mr. Post had procured the rifle. Its presence in the room was taken by them to indicate that he had planned his death some time in advance.

Mr. Post discussed his private financial affairs with his wife Saturday, and at his request Mrs. Post went downtown to transact some business for him. It was while she was away that he shot himself.

Spent Millions in Advertising.

Post came to Battle Creek first as a patient in a sanitarium. His first venture here was a health resort known as "La Vita Inn." He afterwards took up the manufacture of cereal foods which made him millions of dollars. His success was due to extensive advertising for which he expended enormous sums of money.

This city is greatly interested in the effect Mr. Post's death will have on his enterprises here. He was chief owner and in personal touch with the Postum Cereal Co. and its allied manufacturing interests; the Post Tavern, a 10-story hotel; the Post and Majorie business blocks; Battle Creek Paper Co.; Square Deal Magazine Publishing Co.; Post Land Co.; Central National bank; Morning Enquirer and Evening News, and other businesses. Most of these will continue as usual without a doubt, as Post had a "cabinet" of efficient and wealthy men capable of looking after all interests.

PLAN MEETING OF FIREMEN

State Convention Will Be Held at Saginaw, June 23-25.

Saginaw, Mich.—Plans are well under way for the entertainment of the delegates to the fortieth annual convention of the Michigan State Firemen's association to be held here June 23-25.

The program will include feasts in fire-fighting efficiency and practical demonstrations in ladder raising, wall scaling, running lines of hose on roofs of high buildings, jumping into life saving nets as well as an exhibition by makers of several kinds of modern fire fighting appliances.

A banquet will be given for delegates.

Lindsay Given Minimum Sentence.

Bay City, Mich.—Edward T. Lindsay, teller of the Second National bank of Saginaw, who on Thursday pleaded guilty to embezzling about $12,000 from the bank, was given the minimum sentence allowed by law by Judge Tuttle of the United States court Saturday. Lindsay will go to the Detroit house of correction for five years.

Unnerved by the sight of the suffering in the street car wreck at Flint Saturday night, Ernest Sharron, factory worker, went to his room and fired three 22-caliber bullets into his body, one of them grazing his forehead. He then cut both wrists and went out into the street, where he was found nearly dead. He died later.

The recount of the vote on the proposition to bond Gogebic county for $65,000 for a new courthouse was finished Saturday. It shows the proposition carried by a majority of 100, while by the original count it was defeated by one vote.

The Tamarack mine, the last to reopen after being closed since last July, because of the copper strike, has employed 300 former strikers and is operating two shafts. There are now in Michigan copper mines nearly 16,000 men, 3,000 more than when the strike was called.

REPRESENTATIVES OF U. S. ARE ANNOUNCED

JOSEPH RUCKER LAMAR.

Washington.—Associate Justice Joseph Rucker Lamar of the U. S. supreme court and Frederick W. Lehmann, of St. Louis, former solicitor general, have been selected by the president to represent his views before the South American mediators in the Mexican mediation negotiations at Niagara Falls, Canada. Secretary Bryan made this official announcement Monday.

LABOR LEADERS WIN CASE

Sentences Imposed On Gompers,
Mitchell and Morrison Set Aside
By Supreme Court.

Washington.—The contempt sentences imposed by the district supreme court upon Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, labor leaders, were set aside by the supreme court for the second time, as barred by the statute of limitations.

Justice Holmes said the case turned upon the point that the contempt proceedings should have been started within three years from the date of the committing of the offenses. He said that proceedings for contempt should be speedy and thus come within the purpose of the statute of limitations, which request prosecution within three years.

Justices Pitney and Vandewater dissented.

The contempts charged against the labor leaders occurred in 1907 and early in 1908, about the time the District of Columbia supreme court issued an injunction prohibiting the federation officials from boycotting the Buck's Stove & Range Co. of St. Louis, then in a labor war with organized labor.

The labor leaders were sentenced to jail but the supreme court of the U. S. in 1911 set the conviction aside because they had been proceeded against as if the proceedings were a part of the boycott suit. The district court the day after the reversal then began proceedings against the leaders for the same offense.

ROBBERS LOOT FIVE STORES

Business Houses in Vicksburg Visited
By Burglars.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Burglars Thursday night looted five different business places in Vicksburg, securing nearly $100 in cash. In several of the places safes were pried open with heavy iron bars.

Not until the stores were opened Friday morning were the robberies discovered. Entrance was gained in all of the places through rear doors. The Rochester Clothing Co. lost $35, the A. M. Palmer hardware store $48, and the Vicksburg Lumber Co. about $7. The R. D. Jenkinson grain elevator and the Goodfield feed mill were broken into, but nothing was taken. It is believed the men made their escape on a freight train.

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

Every teacher in Flint will receive from $125 to $200 a year increase, which will boost the budget.

Harry J. Rill, of Detroit, has made the plans for the new $50,000 addition to be built to St. Phillip's Catholic church of Battle Creek. Work has been begun on the church and will be completed this fall, giving it a seating capacity of 1,000.

Peter F. Gray, who was recently appointed postmaster of Lansing, has not resigned his position as city clerk because the charter provides no method for filling a vacancy in any city office. City Attorney Dunnebecke, who refused the postmastership is trying to figure out a solution of the problem.

Nine passengers and one trainman were slightly injured Thursday when P. O. & N. passenger train ran into an open switch at Eames and collided with several freight cars.

The Grand Rapids street car company has announced a voluntary increase in the wages of its older motormen and conductors. They are now getting 26 cents an hour; after May 15 they will receive 26 1/2 cents for their fourth year in the service and 27 cents for their fifth year and thereafter.

SOME WAYS WITH MEATS.

A tasty way of cooking a rabbit is the following: Joint and wash a rabbit, drain it, slice up two Spanish onions; take a saucepan, lay in a thick layer of onions, then a layer of rabbit, a sifting of flour, pepper and salt, another layer of onions, and proceed until all the rabbit is used, finishing with the onions. Place the saucepan over a moderate fire and when heated draw to one side and let simmer very gently for two hours or more. As in this cooking there is no water

Boys' Conference.

The Washtenaw County Boys' Conference will be held in Milan on Friday and Saturday of this week under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and it will probably be the largest and best ever held in this county. Three delegates are chosen from the Sunday schools throughout the county and the committee in charge report that more Sunday schools than usual have responded to the call. Milan citizens will entertain the visiting delegates.

On the program for Friday afternoon a baseball game between Chelsea and Saline is announced. Saturday forenoon Austin Palmer of this place will read a paper entitled "To Each Other." Two of the officers of the conference are from Chelsea. E. P. Steiner is general chairman and Lloyd Kalmbach vice chairman.

Remove the Rooster From the Flock.

J. O. Linton, assistant professor of poultry husbandry at the Michigan Agricultural college says:

"The hens will lay as well, and in many instances better, without the presence of the male birds in the flocks.

"Fertile eggs will spoil much quicker in the hot summer weather than those which are infertile. Since it is the presence of the male birds which cause fertile eggs, and these are really desired only during the hatching season, they should be removed from the flock for the rest of the year.

"Buyers will pay better prices for fresh, infertile eggs than for fertile ones.

"For Michigan the breeding season should be finished by the middle of May. Disposing of the roosters at that time would certainly be an important step in helping to improve the condition of market eggs during the hot summer months. It is estimated that the increase in profit to the farms of the state would be at least a half million dollars ($500,000).

"In Kentucky and Tennessee, Saturday, May 16, is to be known as Rooster Day. Announcements will be made to that effect in all the schools on Friday, May 15. State wide movements will be made to encourage the removal of the roosters from the flocks on that day.

"It would be an excellent start for the uplift of Michigan poultry conditions if the poultry raisers in Michigan would designate Saturday, May 23 as the day on which all male birds should be killed, sold or removed from the flock."

Must Report

The state board of health has notified health officers that the law will be enforced against physicians and householders who fail to report dangerous and communicable diseases to the boards of health. The cases listed are: Infantile paralysis, chickenpox, diphtheria, measles, pneumonia, scarlet fever, smallpox, spinal meningitis, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, whooping cough.

Dr. King's New Life Pills keep stomach, liver and kidneys in healthy condition. Rid the body of poisons and waste. Improve your complexion by flushing the liver and kidneys. "I got more relief from one box of Dr. King's New Life Pills than any medicine I ever tried," says C. E. Hatfield of Chicago, Ill. 25c. Recommended by L. P. Vogel, H. H. Fenn Co. and L. T. DON'T LIVE THE PART

WHY AUTHORS AND ARTISTS
FAIL TO MAKE GOOD LOVERS.

Seem Unable to Detach Themselves
From the Creatures of Their Fancy
Long Enough to Appreciate the Real Thing.

One might suppose that the writers—authors and poets—who have immortalized women's charms from the beginning of time would provide the ideal lover, but in actual fact it is often their interest in women in the abstract which spoils them for the one woman. To her they may appear more engaged in the expression of life than in life itself, and she feels in their company that she runs the risk (a very genuine one) that the tenderest emotions will be used as "copy."

Even to be the heroine of a book has disadvantages nowadays, since heroines are generally faulty creatures and the author is so engrossed by the study of human nature that his love herself may fancy she is under the dissecting knife.

Then the writer of imagination, living with the creatures of his fancy, is necessarily somewhat detached from the outside world. "I feel terribly jealous of my husband's heroines," said the wife of a well-known author. "I am sure he is as fond of them as he is of me." Often the creator of a world of his own is rather ineffective in the actual world.

He seems in such a hurry to get away from the latter and resembles the woman who has cooked the feast and, in consequence, has no appetite for it. Life with him is apt to be tame, because his dreams have destroyed his interest in realities, and there seems almost a lack of sincerity about his human relations.

The artist, with his eye trained to notice and analyze external loveliness of form and feature, has similar faults and some special ones of his own. For instance, though a woman likes a man who notices her dress, she prefers him to be appreciative rather than critical. She is apt to be annoyed by a meticulous attention to trivialities in the house and in her own appearance, which she imagines part of her province, and unless she has the artist's point of view, with its hatred of conformity, she is more bothered than flattered.

A girl engaged to an artist said, with a sigh: "Before he kisses me, Fred looks to see if my draperies hang in classic folds. He can't bear modern fashions, and I do feel such an object when I try to please him. To be beautiful in a picture is not nearly so gratifying to the pride as to be well dressed in a drawing room."

Both artists and authors have, probably, too much of the feminine in them to be ideal lovers, and are often subject to moods and nerves, accounting feminine privileges.

Irishman Turns to Mahomet.
An Irishman who worships at the shrine of Mahomet, prophet of Allah, and who prays with his face turned toward holy Mecca—such is Baron Charley Mark Allanson Winn Headley. The venerable Irish lord is a recent convert to the faith of Islam, the announcement that he had embraced Mohammedanism having been made at a meeting last month of the Islamic Society of Great Britain. Many Englishmen have become disciples of Mahomet within the last few years, but Hibernian Moslems are almost as rare as the proverbial hen's teeth.

Lord Headley comes of a distinguished ancestry, the baronetcy dating from 1680 and the baronial title from 1797. He is the fourth baron, and succeeded his father in the title and estates in 1877. He married a daughter of an Anglican clergyman. Baron Headley has been a representative peer for Ireland for 30 years, and has also had a distinguished military career. As an attaché he went through the Franco-German and Carlist wars. He has a handsome town house in London and owns about 126,000 acres in Ireland, including Aghadoe house in Killarney and Mlaunaglin in County Galway.

Wild and Tame.
An American professor recently made a list of 17 common "weeds" which in his judgment ought to be cultivated for food. This was a mere off-hand jotting down of facts which occurred to him, not a study of the subject, but it shows that man has not made very extensive use of the opportunities which nature affords him.

The learned professor might have included the animal world as well. Why was not the American bison or buffalo domesticated by Indians? Why, when he has proved his value in many parts of the west, is he not bred in larger numbers now? Why was the African elephant left wild while the Indian brother was trained to harness and war?

Why is the pheasant still half wild and the grouse wholly so, when they have at least as many possibilities of usefulness as the ancestors of domestic fowls? The quagga of South Africa is larger as well as handsomer than the wild ass of western Asia. Why was one taken for service and the other left?

Two Ways.
"Ever been hauled in?" asked the first motorist.
"Hauled in?"
"Yes, hauled in."
"How do you mean hauled in? By a cop or a rope?"

BREVITIES

STOCKBRIDGE—Wirt Boyce and another fellow got into the lake Saturday night and if it had not been for a handy muskrat house would have been there yet.

ADDISON—There is at least one woman in Addison who does not fear war. Mrs. Pearl Albright informs the editor that she is willing to go as nurse to the scene of Mexican troubles at any time. In fact, she anticipates an early call, should hostilities continue.—Courier.

JACKSON—Jerry C. O'Neill, former president of the Jackson common council, was appointed to the position as manager of the Michigan Free Employment Bureau in this city Friday by James V. Cunningham, state labor commissioner. There were 57 applicants.

MANCHESTER—The state fire warden ordered a fire escape placed on the Manchester house and men came here last Friday to place it in position. The high school building, Arbeiter hall block and Manchester are now all supplied with approved fire escapes.—Enterprise.

CLINTON—The Clinton Woolen Company have received a contract from the United States government to furnish 15,000 blankets for use in the navy. The blankets are of fine quality and workmanship which is characteristic of the Woolen Company's products, and is the first blanket order turned out by them.—Courier.

JACKSON—Besides paying a fine of $25 and costs of $4.20 John Turkow, an M. U. T. interurban conductor, acquainted in Jackson, lost his job at Battle Creek Saturday. The complaint against him was signed by C. E. Morgan, general superintendent of Jackson. This action was taken as a part of a new policy to prosecute every employee who is caught taking fares or otherwise pilfering from the M. U. T.

BROOKLYN—By all means and emphatically, Brooklyn will have a Product Show again this year. This was decided at a meeting of representatives business men as called at the council rooms last Friday evening. Not a dissenting voice was heard, and all were in favor of thus making an early start in order that the premium lists and the necessary financial backing might be pledged at once.—Exponent.

HOWELL—If there is any one in these parts who thinks that the Livingston County fair will not be a go this year that idea would have been quickly dispelled if the doubter had been in attendance at the meeting of stockholders, at the auditorium last evening. There was a real spirit of optimism present throughout the meeting and everything was really delightfully harmonious.—Tidings.

YPSILANTI—A plan is being worked up to beautify the land on both sides of the Huron river between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti. Both cities are educational centers of national reputation and men connected with the university and normal as well as prominent and wealthy citizens believe that by beautifying the landscape, the formation of lakes, gardens etc., the section will become the most attractive of any in the country.

JACKSON—That the state of Michigan is in possession of clay lands more valuable than was at first supposed is asserted by L. Lorensen, clay products expert, recently employed to aid in the management of the state prison brick and tile plant. Mr. Lorensen says the clay here is of high quality and may be utilized for making fire brick, vitrified brick, porous tile and glazed tile. Some of it, he says, is of such consistency that it could be utilized in making pottery.

"IN A BAD WAY"

Many a Chelsea Reader Will Feel Grateful for This Information.

If your back gives out; Becomes lame, weak or aching; If urinary troubles set in; Perhaps your kidneys are "in a bad way."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Local evidence proves their merit. C. Lehman, 420 Garfield St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "Several years ago I was bothered by weak kidneys and backache. Constant lameness across the small of my back annoyed me and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. At night I was restless and got up in the morning all tired out. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they put a stop to the trouble. My kidneys became normal and the lameness left my back. I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have found them to be a fine remedy."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Lehman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

Mother Has Earned this Comfort and Convenience

More than 250,000 "Mothers" in country homes are today enjoying this comfort and convenience:

Gas Lighting and Cooking with Gas

These greatest of modern conveniences are today available for every home no matter where it is located.

The modern farm home can have its own miniature gas plant—the PILOT Lighting Plant—which supplies pure home-made Acetylene—a better light than the city home enjoys.

The World's Standard

These PILOT Lighting Plants are so compact and perfectly constructed that they can be placed right in a corner of the cellar or in an out-building—as you prefer.

If we had space we would tell just how the PILOT makes pure Acetylene, automatically, from Union Carbide and water, a little at a time—

How the PILOT has stood the test of years until today, it is the Standard of all Acetylene Machines—

How its record for safety, efficiency and satisfactory service surpasses that of any other lighting device in the world. So much so that the highest authorities in the insurance world allow its installation in insured property without increase in insurance rates—

How the United States Government uses the PILOT for lighting many of its Indian Schools, and other public buildings.

A Hundred Uses for Acetylene

Acetylene is used in a hundred different ways in many industries all over the world—until it is today one of the most universally used gases, we know anything about.

Hundreds of thousands of automobiles are lighted with Acetylene—from little generators or Prest-O-Lite or Searchlight tanks—

Countless numbers of little Acetylene lamps are used by miners in their work beneath the ground—

Locomotive headlights and passenger coaches are lighted with Acetylene—

Light-houses and buoys use Acetylene—

Parts of the Panama Canal are lighted entirely with Acetylene—

The use of Acetylene for welding and cutting metals has become one of the big factors in the great metal industries of the world—

The story of Acetylene and its uses is one of the most fascinating commercial stories of the age. It would take pages to tell.

Lighting and Cooking for Country Homes

The mission of the PILOT is to bring a clear, clean, safe light and quick, cool easy cooking service, to take the place of the drudgery, dirt and inconveniences of kerosene lamps and the dirt, heat and labor of the old coal or wood stove—

Convenience in place of back breaking labor—

Cleanliness instead of dirt, grime and ashes—

Beautiful city-like fixtures in place of unsightly kerosene lamps—

A cool kitchen instead of a hot, stifling one—

Order instead of confusion—

Comfort instead of dim, hot, smelly lights—

Safety instead of constant risk—

Twenty minutes once a month or so to put Union Carbide and water in the PILOT, instead of a half hour every day filling lamps—

Light always on tap in every room—

Barn lights, fastened to permanent iron piping and protected by heavy glass globes instead of dangerous lamps and lanterns.

Automatic ignitors instead of matches—

All these and more—costing no more than you are now paying for kerosene.

The proof is shown in 13 years of satisfactory results—

In the large factories we have been compelled to build in Newark, N. J. and Chicago, Ill. to take care of the steadily increasing demand for PILOT Lighting Plants—

In our salesmen and dealers in more than a thousand towns and villages throughout the country.

Consider Your Women Folks

They're the ones who have to spend half their days in the kerosene grime of filling, cleaning and carrying oil lamps around the house. In slaving away their strength and health over hot, cranky stoves.

Ask the "Mother" in your house how much this beautiful, clean, always-ready light and a real gas range will mean to her.

Ask yourself if she hasn't earned this comfort and convenience—when you consider its low cost—a thousand times over.

Then write or phone me and let me come out and show you how little this entire improvement will cost.

Do it today while you have it in mind.

Twelve Flag Days.

There are twelve days in the year when the laws provide the United States flag should be displayed on all public buildings. There is now a law in Michigan requiring the floating of the flag from every school house but there are only twelve official federal flag days in the year. Many people know of only a few of these days. The twelve days are as follows:

February 12—Lincoln's birthday.

February 15—Anniversary of the sinking of the Maine.

February 22—Washington's birthday.

April 19—Anniversary of the battle of Lexington.

May 30—Memorial day.

June 14—Flag day.

June 17—Anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill.

July 4—Independence day.

October 12—Columbus day.

October 17—Anniversary of the battle of Saratoga.

October 19—Anniversary of the surrender of Yorktown.

November 25—Anniversary of the evacuation of Yorktown.

Of course convention days, G. A. R. reunions and like events call for the display of the glorious stars and stripes, however, such events are not covered by law but are varied in every community.

On two of the flag days the flag should be shown at half mast, these days being Memorial day and the anniversary of the sinking of the Maine, as both days have a mourning character. The hours for displaying the flag are from sunrise to sunset.

CHINA'S FUTURE OF INTEREST

Every Student Realizes the Possibilities That Are Part of Country's Present Development.

China is tossing restlessly in her age-long sleep, and shows signs of awakening. This situation appeals to the United States only indirectly; but most of the land-hungry European nations are waiting at her bedside, and are guessing as to her present pathologic condition and her outlook for future health and strength. Competent judges near at hand agree that if China were to produce, soon, some great leader, he would become the center of crystallization for the saturated solution of loyal sentiment, which is latent in this mighty people. Lacking such a living leader, the Chinese may call upon Confucius, and unite the several diverse provinces under a potent bond of religious fervor. However the influence of the great ethical teacher may have waned during the past century, he has not become a negligible quantity, as the recent surprising observance of his birthday fully attests. About a week before that date a circular letter was sent to all the governors of provinces, setting forth the virtues of Confucius. The intention was that this statement should be presented to local magistrates, and by them be brought before the plain people. Thus a way would be prepared for the subsequent elevation of the great and honored sage as the true leader of the new republic. Naturally, we would expect him to be held most highly in honor by the old dethroned Manchu dynasty. "Young China," however, realizes that the country greatly needs both a leader and a religion, and that these two needs could be met by a revival of the Confucian cult probably in a modernized form. Twenty years ago the sage's birthday was observed only slightly and sporadically, but this year there has been a widely spread and distinctly fervent expression of public devotion to him. Decorations, processions and public meetings are reported from all the provinces. "Young China" is willing to concede much, if only it can gather in most of the factions, conservative and radical, throughout this heterogeneous nation. At one celebration, not far from Canton, hymns in favor of Confucius were sung by four graduates of the Canton Christian college; and the words were set to the music of "Ye Banks and Braes of Bonnie Doon," and to a favorite Methodist melody. The effect of this year's observance is to suggest the conjecture that China's awakening may have to be primarily religious, and secondarily political. What will result from this call to Confucius?—American Review of Reviews.

Prison Reform Praised.

Law Notes makes this comment on the recent prison reform in the state of Washington by which the inmates of the penal institutions are allowed a small daily wage for their labor, which is paid to their families:

"Aside from the humaneness of this practice, it has its value in the administration of the criminal law, for no one will venture to dispute that many criminals who should be in prison are at large because juries, out of regard for the suffering of their families, have refused to convict, or judges after conviction have suspended sentence, or imposed a light sentence, out of regard for the same fact. Of course with such a system in force the reason for such unwarranted (from a legal view) leniency is removed, and the criminal receives his just punishment regardless of family connections. And certainly if the state can make money out of the labor of its convicts, there is no good reason why it should pocket the gains, leaving the family of the criminal, in no way responsible for his misdeeds, to bear the real punishment for his crime."

College's Ten Commandments.

The college students' "Ten Commandments" have been discovered at Columbia university. They were published by the Dorms, a paper issued by the residents of Hartley, Livingston and Farnald halls. A strange feature about the list is that there is no provision for spending a single moment at his lessons. These are the commandments:

1. To rise at 7:30, to retire at 10:00.
2. To exercise half an hour daily.
3. To read at least a chapter of the Bible daily.
4. To attend the theater once a week.
5. To attend all the important lectures on the campus.
6. To spend a few minutes daily reading periodicals.
7. To get as much out of myself as possible.
8. To read one novel and one play a week.
9. To write to mother every week.
10. To take inventory of myself the first of each month.

Audience Bowed to Artist.

Jean Gerardy, the 'cellist, who has finished a successful month's tour in England with Tetrazini, will tour in Germany, Russia, Paris, Belgium and Austria. He tells the story of how a delightful provincialism is still prevalent in England: "I was invited to stop off at a village not on my regular itinerary by a deputation of music lovers. I couldn't resist the invitation. The hall was packed. "Fancy my amused amazement when on coming on to the stage and making my usual perfunctory bow the entire audience politely rose from their seats and bowed back with the utmost formality, some of the older women throwing a curtain."

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harmer, meets Simon Girty, a renegade whose name has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Harmer, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Harmer's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harmer to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of Wa-pa-tee-tah, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Rene asks Hayward to let her accompany him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north across the border. He is followed by a private soldier named Brady and a private soldier named Brady. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians. A scout named Brady and a private soldier named Brady. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians. A scout named Brady and a private soldier named Brady. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians.

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

The three guns spoke at once, the smoke of their discharge for an instant blotting out the scene, yet not before I saw war-bonnet crumple up beside the stump, and a warrior just behind him leap into the air with both arms flung out. I gripped the fresh gun beside me, and fired again into a huddle of fleeing figures, hearing the sharp crack of the two others, as the blue smoke blew back into my eyes. One Indian fell forward clanking at the ground; another staggered wildly, yet kept his feet. A chorus of yells rent the air, and the fleeing forms vanished into the fringe of woods.

Brady, glanced about from his loophole, and motioned me with his hand. I crossed hurriedly to join him, again the soldier.

"What is it? Can you guess what they mean to do?"

"No, but they seem to be forming there to the right; bend down here; see, back among those trees. Ay! and your red-coat is among the devils, I've caught glimpses of him twice."

I grasped the situation in a glance. Brady moved to the next loophole, and knelt down. Opposite me I could distinguish an Indian or two, skulking in the tree shadows, well out of range—sentries, no doubt, stationed to guard against any possibility of our escape. Yes, and there were others also along the fringe of forest to the left, although only occasionally did a half-naked form fit into view. They were forming for assault, for a swift rush forward, trusting that the suddenness of their attack would put them across that open space without great danger. They had tried stealth and failed; now they would try recklessness.

I pressed back the wooden shutter, kneeling to look out. For an instant, blinded by the bright light, I saw nothing, then, back in the edge of the timber, I could dimly distinguish the groups of savages, stripped for fighting, their naked bodies gleaming. I knew little then of Indian warfare, yet it occurred to me that the representatives of each tribe were gathered together, and I watched the war-bonnets moving from group to group, as final orders were passed among them. Only once did I catch a glimpse of the red jacket, as its wearer stood at the foot of a huge tree, suddenly outlined by a ray of sun finding opening through the leaves above. As I caught view of him, he flung up one red arm, a rifle grasped in his hand, and, as if it was a signal, voice after voice whooped in savage yell, the noise blending into one fierce scream, horrible and menacing. Above even this mad volume of sound there was a shout of command, emphasized by the discharge of a dozen guns. Then out of the smoke, springing forth into the open, I saw the devils come. It was as if hell had broken open and belched them forth. "Shawnees!" roared Brady. "Give it to 'em!" and he pulled trigger.

Describe what followed no man could. It was pandemonium, uproar, action, no two seconds the same. I fired twice, three times, leaping back to grasp a gun from the bench, and groping my way through smoke. My eyes smarted, perspiration streamed down my face; I heard the bark of rifles, voices calling within, wild echoing yells without. Over the barrel of my rifle I could distinguish the naked forms of savages leaping amid the smoke wreaths, stumbling, clutching at the air with empty hands. Then all at once they disappeared, vanished as if by magic. Smoke clung to the ground, yet amid its swirls I could perceive no movement; the fierce yelling ceased. What this sudden cessation meant I could not guess, but my hand reached instinctively for powder and ball. Then another yell, louder, more deadly with ferocity, smote my ears; bullets chugged into the logs, some one near me gave utterance to a roar of pain, and blows crashed against the barred door. I thrust my rifle forward—a tomahawk struck the protruding barrel as I pulled trigger, and I was flung backward to the floor, blood streaming from my shoulder. I could hardly breathe in the thick smoke; I could see nothing, yet out of the babel of noise I was conscious of Brady's voice yelling an order:

"The door! Barricade the door!"

I staggered to my feet and dragged the bench forward; some one gripped the table along with me, and together we hurled it on top, our bodies holding it there. I had dropped my rifle, but some one thrust another into my hand. Blood streamed down into my eyes from a cut on my forehead, blinding me so I saw nothing, yet my fingers touched a hand. Even then I felt the thrill of that contact.

"You, Rene! Go back! For God's sake, go back!" I sobbed breathlessly. Just an instant she grasped me, clung to me, her head pressing against my sleeve.

"Yes, monsieur!"

Then she was gone; I reached out for her, but she was no longer there. Tomahawks crashed into the wood of the door; there was a sound of splintering. Brady ripped out an oath, a wild yell of triumph echoed without. Through a nearby loophole some savage thrust his gun, and fired blindly, the sudden flash lighting the murk. In the instant red glow I caught a glimpse of the interior of a body lying before the fireplace, of Schultz still on his knees, rifle in hand, of Brady gripping an ax, his head bare, a ghastly wound on the side of his face. Then the smoke hid all.

Something crashed against the door, shaking the whole cabin; again and again the blow fell, the tough wood bursting asunder, the stout bar bending, yet snapping back once more as the sockets held. Amid the din of shouts, the crash of wood, my eyes met Brady's.

"You're hurt!"

"Ay!" spitting out blood before he could answer. "Jaw shot."

The door crashed in, the great butt of a tree coming with it, and half blocking the passage. All that remained was instantly filled with savage figures. Into the mass of them I fired my last shot, the flame of discharge searing the hideous faces. Then I was hurled to the right, shoulder to shoulder with Schultz, gripping my gun barrel with both hands, swinging it like a flail. I crushed the skull of a savage, drove the butt into the face of another; saw the flash of a tomahawk, held up for an instant the soldier's reeling body, only to throw it aside; smashed the red head held out to grip him as he went down, drew back a step in search of more room, and, with one mighty sweep of my weapon cleared a circle before me. God! It was ghastly, inhuman, devilish! Those behind pushed and yelled; there was no escape! I saw painted faces, naked shoulders; wild eyes glared hatred into mine; tomahawks and knife flashed. The butt of my gun smashed, I gripped the iron, my teeth clinched, and blood on fire. I had no sense of fear left, no consciousness of peril. I wanted to strike, to kill, to bruise those hideous faces, to batter them into pulp. The rage of conflict seized me; there swept over me the ferocity of the insane.

I gave back, compelled by the mere force of numbers hurled against me, yet kept clear a space no savage left unhurt. I felt in my arms the strength of a dozen men, and not the grip of a red hand reached me. The devils snarled and struggled, but the fierce swing of the iron bar crushed them back. It was twilight when I stood at bay, the narrow opening, almost blotted out by those struggling figures striving to enter, to me, was a mere blotch, an inferno of movement and sound. Through a dim, red haze, where blood dripped before my eyes, I had glimpses of uplifted arms, of distorted faces, of glittering weapons. Once there was a gun shot, the sudden flash flaming into my eyes; twice tomahawks, turning in the air, grazed my cheek; a knife, desperately hurled from out the ruck, struck the iron, slashing my arm as it fell. I felt no pain, no weakness; I was going to die, but it would not be alone. I rushed forward, treading on bodies, battering at shoulders and heads. I heard yells, shrieks, groans, cries of horror and agony. The frenzied war-whoop rang in my ears; an order roared out over the babel. I have no recollection of being touched, yet some force buried me back. I stumbled over the bodies, yet somehow kept my feet. I was breathless, weak, reeling upon my legs, everything before my eyes shrouded in mist. Yet the instinct to fight remained; I knew nothing else.

Suddenly I became aware that Brady and I were together, that we were foot to foot, his deadly ax rising and falling as though he was a woodsman in the forest. Out of the mad din in my ear came the sound of his voice in broken, breathless sentences.

"Good boy! Good boy! Ay! That was a blow. Stand to it, lad; they'll tell of this fight on the border. Oh, you will, you painted devil—that finished you! Do you see Red-Coat back there, Hayward?—Ay! I'd like one swipe at him, but the coward keeps safe. Strike lower man! They're creeping in on us. That's the kind. Ah! I thought so; they're taking us from behind—quick, lad, back to the wall!"

I got there; God only knows how—but I was alone. I felt the force of the rush that struck him down; it had lifted me bodily and hurled me against the logs. Yet I kept my feet, kept my grip on the twisted iron, and struck blindly. The whole cabin seemed jammed with red demons; they piled on me, jerked the bar from my grasp. Once, twice, I sent clenched fist against painted faces; then it was over with. I never saw or felt the blow that felled me; I went down into darkness, and they trampled me under foot.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Help of Mademoiselle.

The sound of a voice speaking, apparently far off, was the first thing of which I was dimly conscious. The language was French, and, for what seemed a long time, no word sounded familiar. My mind was blank of any distinct impression, although there appeared to float before me, in recollection of some former existence, the face of mademoiselle. Her wonderful eyes were gravely smiling through a strange mist that appeared to hide all else in its circling folds. I could not get away from their silent pleading, their invitation. Then somehow that speaking voice became hers, and I picked out a word here and there, detached, meaningless, and yet recognizable. I struggled to arouse myself to her actual presence.

The struggle must have been physical as well as mental, for I became conscious of pain, a sharp pang shooting through my body, as if a knife had been twisted in a deep wound. The agony brought me wide awake, my eyes open, staring about, yet scarcely realizing where dream and reality met. "Monsieur," the voice was a whisper at my ear; I could even feel her soft breath on my cheek. My eyes instantly opened, and looked into her face as she bent above me. "Do not move, do not speak aloud—but listen, I knew you were not dead; I found you first and kept them away, but there is no time now for me to explain. Are you badly hurt?"

"I cannot tell, mademoiselle—those heavy bodies will not let me move." She glanced about swiftly, as if in fear of being seen; then released my limbs, dragging the two dead Indians aside. I felt cramped, lifeless below the waist, yet as the blood began to circulate I knew there was no serious injury. She stared into my face as I worked the numb muscles, and her eyes told me that she was frightened. "We are alone here!"

"Yes, for the moment," breathlessly. "It is your only chance; I have prayed and schemed to get to you. We must lose an instant. Can you move, monsieur? Can you even crawl a dozen feet?"

"Where—where do you want me to go?" I asked faintly, inspired to effort by the firm, eager grip of her hand. "Tell me; I'll try."

"There—just to the left of the fireplace. It is the one chance, monsieur. They will be back, those devils, they will burn the cabin. Mon Dieu! Try! Try!"

I got to my knees once more, the plea of her voice yielding strength and determination. At whatever cost I would make an effort to please her. With teeth clinched tight, I fixed my eyes on the spot indicated and started. Terrible was the effort!

But I made it inch by inch. I shall never know how the deed was accomplished—only that she helped, and I fought on. I had to; she asked me; there were tears in her eyes. No matter if it did hurt, if I was blind, if I reeled on hands and knees like a man drunk—I must go there. I had not the faintest thought of why she urged me on, of what hope animated her.

And when I finally gave out, helpless to advance another inch, my face came down hard on a slab of stone beside the chimney. She uttered a low sob of despair, and left me an instant.

"I am so sorry, monsieur," she faltered. "But you must hold out—you must!"

"Is it any farther? What do you want me to do?"

"No, no—only you will need strength; it will only take a minute now. See, monsieur."

She gripped the flat stone against which I had fallen, prying it with the broken blade of an Indian knife that lay on the floor, until her fingers found hold, and ended it up against the chimney. A narrow black opening was exposed. I stared down with lack-luster eyes, startled, but unable to realize the purpose. Driven by fear she wasted no time in either explanation or urging. Doubtless my face told its own story, and made her desperate. With a strength I had not supposed her slender body possessed, she dragged me about, until my feet dangled helplessly in the opening.

"Now push yourself down, monsieur! I say you must! It is not far, not more than four feet—it is not to hurt, no. You will come easy to the bottom. Good! That is the way. See, I will hold tight to you like this."

Helped by her, yet exercising all my remaining strength, and now comprehending her plan, I sank slowly into the hole, but so numb were my limbs, that, the instant the girl released her grasp, I sank limply to the bottom.

"Good Boy! Good Boy! Ay! That Was a Blow."

resting there, leaning against the side wall, looking eagerly up at her face framed above me in the narrow opening.

"You are safe, monsieur? You are not hurt?" she asked in trembling anxiety.

I murmured a word or two, for I had exhausted all my strength. She must have accepted this as reassurance, for she lifted her head, and glanced swiftly about. Then she reached down to me the pannikin of water.

"I cannot wait longer," she whispered. "Some one will come here; take this, monsieur; put it down carefully—ah! that was fine. Wash out your wounds, and the blood from your face. It will be dark, but fear nothing. I will come again to you soon."

"Where does this tunnel lead?" I asked, as her hand grasped the stone slab.

"To the cave cellar at the rear; where we first met—but you must wait for me to come, monsieur."

I saw the shadow of the stone descending, shutting out the light. "Just one question more, mademoiselle," I managed to articulate. "Is Brady dead?"

I could dimly perceive the outline of her face.

"No, monsieur, he is a prisoner." Slowly I made effort to explore my wound. This was most painful, as my rough shirt was held to my flesh by congealed blood, and had to be torn away. I possessed no knife, but stuck to the work manfully, my teeth clinched, my face beaded with perspiration, until I separated the last shred, and could explore the wound with my fingers. It proved deep and ragged enough, but had penetrated nothing vital. If I could staunch the flow of blood, and bind it up so as to prevent its being reopened, there should be no serious result. I went at this as best I could in the dark, and, by sense of touch, groaning at the pain, I swabbed out the wound until it practically ceased to bleed, and then bound it up with a silk neckerchief and a strip torn from my shirt.

Air Brakes for Aeroplanes.

A highly ingenious device is about to be embodied in a new British aeroplane now nearing completion. A difficult problem, which has always confronted the aeroplane designers, has been that of enabling machines to land at a reasonably slow speed and yet fly as fast as possible. The necessity of this provision may be gauged from the fact that the modern aeroplane, with its full load, weighs the better part of a ton, and that the usual flying speeds range from sixty to eighty miles an hour. Accordingly, Mr. A. V. Roe, the well-known designer, has adopted the expedient of providing his latest biplane with what he termed "air brakes." These consist of flaps hinged to the rear of the planes, capable of being turned at right angles to the direction of flight, with the object of enabling the pilot to reduce his speed materially preparatory to alighting.

WINNING OF FATHER

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

"I will win over your father yet, Lella."

"Oh, Ned, I sincerely hope so! But he has changed—he is not like the dear old papa, who used to enter into all our joys and sorrows. I can't understand it."

"I can," asserted Ned Walters bluntly. "Your father was a fine business man. He retired too early in life. Idleness never yet suited a nature like his. The result has been—hypochondria."

"Oh, dear!" uttered Lella Taylor dismally. "What a dreadful sounding name. Is this hypo—hypo—"

"—Chondria, exactly," nodded Ned. "A disease? Not in the true sense. It's fancy, imagination, but its victim suffers. A business man like your father finds himself at leisure, nothing to work for, nothing to occupy his mind. Result: the megrims. He gets all kinds of ridiculous ideas in his head."

"Well, papa's seem to be a new disease every day. He hopes, takes no exercise, says he can hardly walk. The doctor told mamma there was not an earthly thing the matter with him. We can't persuade him as to that, though. He is crabbed and cross to all of us. You are the last object of his aversion. He has forbidden you the house—oh, Ned, hurry! there is papa now."

Robert Taylor came into view as his daughter spoke. She and Ned had met clandestinely at the garden fence.

There was a hurried exchange of kisses. Paterfamilias, looking strong enough to meet a giant, but wearing a scowl and slouching along as if his feet had dead weights attached to them, came to the spot where his daughter stood.

"Lella, who was that?" he challenged sharply.

"Only a neighbor, papa," reported Lella demurely.

"What neighbor?"

"It was Ned—that is, Mr. Walters—oh, papa, dear, don't be angry!"

But instantly the retired merchant went into a paroxysm of his usual rage when anything crossed him.

"If I find that young man on these premises again," he stormed, "I'll thrash him within an inch of his life. H'm—Ned! Why isn't he at work? Loitering his hours away sweethearting, wasting his employer's time. I never did that, and see where I am."

Where he was, Lella reflected sadly, was at a climax in his life where money was a surfeit and time a burden. The tears came into her eyes as she contrasted the soiled, imperious tyrant with the old-time, cheerful, bustling man of business.

"You've heard me say," snapped out Mr. Taylor viciously. "If I learn of your meeting that young man again, I'll—I'll look you up."

"Yes, papa," said Lella meekly, and went into the house crying.

Then Robert Taylor walked deliberately across a pet flower bed, kicked a sleeping dog, roared at the hired man to oil that noisy lawn mower, and plumped down into a hammock nursing one foot with a desolate groan.

The ailment of that foot was tangible in a trivial way. He had stumbled over a porch step and it was sensitive and swollen. However, it afforded him a new pet complaint. "The beginning of dropsy, I feel it, I know it," he had groaned to his wife. "Bad symptom—bad case!"

For a week the only consolation Lella had was a note from Ned, slipped under a loose stone near their favorite trysting place—the fence. Always his affectionate words of cheer and hope wound up with "I'll win him yet."

The ex-merchant nursed his aching tender foot as a pet affliction. He kept Lella so constantly suspiciously in sight that the poor girl did not see her devoted lover for over a week. One day Mr. Taylor decided to walk to the bank to deposit a large amount of cash and some valuable securities had received by express.

For a day he groaned, growled and complained about the dangerous experiment when he finally started out on his mission, gloomily predicting a possible fall in the street—a dizzy spell—the probable uselessness of his lame foot.

"I'm pretty bad," he mourned, "when I have to go at a snail's pace this way."

"Why not take the automobile, papa?" suggested Lella meekly.

"And let that reckless chauffeur of ours dump me out or shake up my injured limb so I can't use it for a month? Not much!" and he went off with the bearing of a cripple, but his outrageous temper just as vivid as ever.

Three nights previous an attempt had been made to burglarize the Taylor home. The faithful dog that its master had kicked had scared the intruders away. His own pet ailment instead of that incident was in Mr. Taylor's mind as he proceeded on his way. Instantly, however, the latter flashed into his thoughts as he passed a vacant lot two blocks from home, "Hands up!" sounded an ominous voice.

Three men had suddenly sprung into view from behind some shrubbery. One pointed a revolver at Mr. Taylor.

"Keep a lookout," he directed one of his accomplices.

Then to the third: "Get away with the stuff," and the man addressed wrenched from the grasp of Mr. Taylor the portfolio he carried under his arm and started to move away.

"You keep quiet for a spell, or I'll bore a hole in you," threatened the first hold-up man.

He came a step nearer to his victim. Mr. Taylor was fairly terrified. However, the thought of being despoiled of over $10,000 in tangible property added a frantic desperation to the situation.

In pressing upon him the leader of the footpads trod upon his sore foot. A roar issued from the sufferer. He saw blood, he grew reckless. A frenzied impulse swayed him.

Swinging one arm as in the days before he had acquired the whimsies of a nervous man, Mr. Taylor brought his fist with a sounding crack directly across the face of his captor. The man went head over heels to the ground.

The lookout sprang now at Mr. Taylor. The blood of the latter, however, was fairly up.

Whack!—he launched out that powerful arm of his again. He thrilled to realize the latent strength he had nursed. His second assailant went prostrate, stunned.

"Stop thief!" next yelled the retired merchant, and he put down the street after the fellow who had moved away with the booty.

The latter had been proceeding at a reasonable pace so as not to attract attention.

"Help! murder! police! stop thief!" the street rang with the vociferous cries of the ex-merchant, now dashing in hot pursuit like a crack sprinter.

And the man turned the corner just as Ned Walters was coming around it.

"I told you I would win father over!" chuckled the lucky Ned that evening, seated in a hammock with Lella, a welcome guest and an accepted suitor now at the Taylor home.

Father was strutting around the garden in great fettle. He had rigged up a punching bag and marked out a running course back of the house.

"Son, Ned," he smiled expansively, "soon as I can get this extra fat off me, I'm going back into business again—with you as a partner."

MAKE A TRADE OF BEGGARY

Parisians May Almost Be Said to Have Cultivated It Until It Is a Fine Art.

In many parts of the world beggary is made a regular trade. Indeed, some who practise it may almost be said to have made it an art or a profession.

An accomplished mendicant, like a clever salesman, studies his customers, discovers their weak points, if he can, and trades upon them. In this regard it is of interest to note the skillful methods whereby a certain class of Parisian beggars play upon the superstitions of their victims.

There is a common saying in France that giving alms brings good fortune—a saying that has not been overlooked by the Sorbonne on the days of examination for the bachelor's degree he will see an interesting sight. The collegians approach, each with his dictionary under his arm on his way to make the famous Latin version, on the success of which all his future depends. A crowd of beggars surround them.

"A son, monsieur, a morsel of bread," the beggar will say to a collegian. "It will bring you happiness."

The candidate hurries on. "You will be blackmailed, monsieur," the beggar continues.

This sinister prediction always takes effect; the collegian pulls out his purse and the beggar turns away, chuckling.

A similar scene may be witnessed at the Hotel de Ville on the days of examination for certificate of ability for teaching. When there are no examinations in progress there may be races, and to them go the beggars, for gamblers and sporting men are notoriously superstitious.

Life That Is Worth While.

No man can be greater or less than his own life, and his life is largely of his own making. It is to be a beautiful thing, rounded and approaching the possibility of perfection, thought, considered action, conscientious weighing of possibilities, must go to the making of it. But above all, it must be a thing of true life, of firm outline, of genuine strength, and these can sincerely alone bring to the making.

Indigestion and the attendant discomforts of mind and body are certain to follow continued use of improper food.

Those who are still young and robust are likely to overlook the fact that, as dropping water will wear a stone away at last, so will the use of heavy, greasy, rich food, finally cause loss of appetite and indigestion.

Fortunately many are thoughtful enough to study themselves and note the principle of cause and effect in their daily food. A. N. Y. young man writes her experience thus:

"Sometime ago I had a lot of trouble from indigestion, caused by too rich food. I got so I was unable to digest scarcely anything, and my clothes seemed useless."

"A friend advised me to try Grape-Nuts food, praising it highly and a last resort. I tried it. I am thankful to say that Grape-Nuts not only relieved me of my trouble, but built up and strengthened my digestive organs so that I can now eat anything I desire. But I stick to Grape-Nuts."

Ever read the above letter? A young man appears from time to time in the columns, true, and full of interesting interest.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Great Excitement, But the Goat Was Serene

WASHINGTON.—This is about a lawyer and a goat. Not the lawyer's goat, but a real Billy that belonged to a boy. All the lawyer had to do with it was to tell what happened to show the serenity of a goat when subjected to excitement. And as a serene goat isn't an everyday affair, here goes:

Scene, Massachusetts Avenue as it enters Scott Circle. Hour, about 9:15, when bankers, brokers, corporation lawyers and capitalists of early bird habits were whizzing downtown in their limousines, touring cars and what not—which means any vehicle above a street car—until they came to the goat.

He was on the wrong side of the street. And he wouldn't budge. The conveyance to which he was hitched—a box on wheels, 1914 model—was crowded with sections of six small boys whose legs were dangling outside. They urged and beseeched, cajoled, threatened and whacked, but the goat calmly chewed his gum and stayed put.

There's never any telling what goes on under the horns of a billy goat in the brains we don't concede him.

Perhaps he had a hunch that his one best way to get rid of hauling six boys was to refuse to haul one. So he stood and stood and stood, until—

The composite banker, broker, corporation lawyer and early bird capitalist in his nifty machine had blocked the asphalt, and the street was fringed with mere everyday humans, who will have to walk until they acquire wings. No reference whatever to airships. Then a blue cloth guardian of the law breezed into the foreground and—

Got his goat.

Call Him the Story Teller in Chief to the House

ONE funny story in one ten-minute speech, by all tradition, unwritten rules and precedent of the house of representatives, is amply sufficient. But since this administration has set its face against following precedent, Tom Heflin, representative from Alabama and story teller in chief to the house, has started out loyally to upset tradition. He has taken to telling two stories instead of one in the time mentioned. Here are two samples Mr. Heflin recently interjected into debate:

"A fellow had lost an eye, and he said to the surgeon, 'Doc, I have just naturally got to have another eye, and I don't want any glass eye. I want a flesh eye.' The doctor replied, 'I can put a cat's eye in for you.' The man said, 'All right, just so I can see with it.'"

"So the surgeon very skillfully transplanted the cat's eye in the place of the one the man had lost. In about three months the surgeon saw his patient and said, 'Bill, how is your eye?' Bill replied, 'Well, Doc, it is all right, I guess. The only objection I have got to the darned thing is that it is always looking for crickets and mice.'"

The second one:

"On one occasion a dyspeptic preacher went home with a member of his church for dinner. The good wife had prepared a feast fit for the gods. There was fried chicken, round, robust biscuits, red ham swimming in red gravy and the finest coffee that ever flowed from a spout. The good lady was just proud of what she had spread before the parson.

"Bud, the nine-year-old son, with fork in hand, was just ready to do battle with the good things before him, when his mother said, 'Parson, won't you have some of the chicken?' To their surprise and the utter bewilderment of Bud, the parson replied, 'No, I never eat chicken.'"

"The good lady then asked, 'Parson, have a piece of ham.' But the parson answered, 'No, I dare not eat ham.' Bud dropped his fork.

"The good lady then said, 'Won't you have a biscuit?' and the parson replied, 'Did you use soda in the composition of those biscuits? Well, then, I cannot eat biscuits made with soda.'"

"Bud, in wide-eyed astonishment, looked at his mother and exclaimed, with anger and earnestness, 'Ma, maybe the darned old fool would suck a raw egg!'"

How a North Carolina Moonshiner Won His Case

REPRESENTATIVE E. W. POU of North Carolina tells a good one on himself. He says: "In my home county was a man by the name of Reeves, who was indicted for a violation of the revenue laws, and retained me to defend him. As he was regarded as a weak-minded man, the judges were disposed to be lenient, though the evidence was conclusive as to his guilt.

"I told Reeves that he must act as foolish as he could in order to help his case. So on the day the case was tried Reeves appeared in court—it was a roasting summer day—wearing a heavy overcoat buttoned up to his throat.

"When the court was opened by the marshal Reeves jumped up and made a spectacle of himself by calling out foolish statements. As the judge would have to take action, I rose and told the judge that he could see for himself that my client was not a responsible person; so the case was nolle prossed and Reeves told to go and sin no more.

"Several years later, when I was the prosecuting attorney, I found that Reeves had been up to his old tricks and was in court for trial on another violation of the revenue laws. When he took the stand I asked him the following questions:

"You have frequently been indicted for this offense?"

"You ought to know," replied Reeves. "You were my lawyer."

"Yes," I returned, "but did you not go in court and play the fool to get out of trouble?"

"No, sir," said Reeves, quickly. "As for playing the fool, it was you, sir, did that!"

Why John Sharp Williams Never Joined the Army

SENATOR JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS was never in the Confederate army. But the fault is not his. He started with the best intentions, as well as with a knapsack filled with a good lunch. The war was at its height when he was a big boy of eleven, and as his father was in the army, and dozens of friends and relatives had gone forth to battle against the dreaded "Yank," John Sharp one night decided that his country called him to arms.

The fact that he was only eleven, and about the only road he knew was that to the candy shop, did not deter him. Out in the darkness of the night the "call" of his country sounded as loud as the dinner horn to hungry hands in the harvest field.

So young Williams arose and set forth down the road in the early dawn. And as he tramped down the lanes of dust, past the still farmhouses over which hung the early smoke from the kitchen chimneys, he dreamed dreams of how he would come back on a prancing charger covered with glory, gore and gold lace. Then suddenly behind him he heard the lope of an approach and gold lace. Looking back, he saw it was old Uncle Zeph on the blind mule. "Uncle Zeph pulled up the mule with a jerk beside his young master.

"John, your maw says as how you better be gittin' back home in a hurry. She ain't no goin' to stand for no sich goin's on!" exploded Zeph. "You jest sit up here 'hind me on dis mule and he'll tote us home ter breakfast!"

"I'm goin' to the war!"

HOME FRUIT GARDEN IS MOST IMPORTANT

Japanese Plum Tree in Bloom.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the most important features of a suburban home, from the standpoint of health, is a fruit garden maintained for the purpose of supplying the family with fruits. It is amazing that even those who have suitable situations and facilities for raising fruits, and who cannot purchase them because of remoteness from markets, have not established home fruit gardens.

The inhabitants of this country are notably a fruit-loving and fruit-eating people. Notwithstanding this, however, fruit culture has grown to be classed among specialties, and few persons who consume fruit are actual growers. The possibilities in fruit culture upon restricted areas have been very generally overlooked with the result that many persons who own a suburban home, or even a farm, now look upon fruit as a luxury. A great deal of the land which is now practically wasted and entirely unremunerative can be made to produce fruits in sufficient quantity to give them a regular place upon the family bill of fare, and at the same time, add greatly to the attractiveness of the table and healthfulness of the diet.

With the growth of commercial fruit interests of the United States the home fruit garden has been overshadowed by the orchard. While both the home garden and the orchard are essential to the good of the community, they bear different relations to the country as a whole. The home garden is always a forerunner of commercial development, and even in those localities where climatic and soil conditions are adverse to conducting such industries on an extensive scale, the home fruit garden of the enthusiastic amateur is certain to be found.

The home production of fruit stimulates an interest and love for natural objects, which can only be acquired by that familiarity with them which comes through their culture. The cultivation of fruits teaches discrimination. If every purchaser was a good judge of the different kinds of fruits, the demand for fruits of high quality, to produce which is the ambition of every amateur as well as every professional fruit grower, would become a reality. The encouragement of the cultivation of fine fruits in the home garden will do much toward teaching buyers to discriminate between the good and the inferior varieties of fruit.

The maintenance of a fruit garden brings pleasure and healthful employment, and as one's interest in growing plants increases, this employment instead of proving a hardship, will become a great source of pleasure. The possession of a tree which one has planted and reared to fruit production carries an added interest in its product as well as in the operation by which it was secured.

Most persons engaged in the cultivation of home fruit gardens will have as their chief aim the production of fruit for the family table, and the pleasure it affords. Fruit growing should claim the attention of the producer from early spring to late autumn.

In order to secure satisfactory results in a limited area devoted to fruit culture one must know the methods of pruning, training, and culture best suited to the space at command. In proportion to size, dwarf trees are more fruitful than standards; they come into bearing sooner and are therefore of special value for use in fruit gardens.

At planting time all broken or decayed roots should be cut away, leaving only smooth-cut surfaces and healthy wood to come in contact with the soil. If a large part of the root area of the plant has been lost in transplanting, the top should be cut back in proportion to the roots remaining. By so doing the demand made by the top when the plant starts into growth can be met by the root.

The holes in which trees, vines, or shrubs are to be set should be ample, so that the roots of the plants may have full spread without bending them out of their natural course. The earth at the bottom of the holes should be loosened a spade depth below the line of excavation. The soil placed immediately in contact with the roots of the newly set plant should be rich top soil, free from sod or partially decayed organic matter. Firm the soil over the roots by tramping, as this brings the soil particles together and at the same time in close contact with the surface of the roots. A movement of soil water is thus set up and the food supply of the soil brought immediately to the use of the plant. When the operation of transplanting is complete, the plant should stand 1 or 2 inches deeper than it stood in the nursery.

The interest in a fruit garden may be greatly enhanced by growing in it plants not adapted naturally to the climatic region in which the garden is located, as, for instance, the growing of figs as far north as the latitude of Philadelphia. The sum of the region are sufficiently long and warm to induce a strong growth in the figs, but as the fruits normally require a long period in which to mature, the plant becomes useless as a fruit producer unless sufficient protection is afforded to carry over winter the immature fruits set the previous fall. This can be successfully accomplished in several ways. The most hardy sort should be selected, in addition to which the fruiting shoots may be wrapped in matting, covered with straw, and the fruits thus successfully protected; or, if it seems desirable, temporary sheds may be built over the plants, and these thatched with straw or fodder sufficiently to protect them from frost.

A cozy summer veranda may be covered by grapevines, thus securing the double advantage of a cool, shady nook during summer and a supply of fruit in autumn. The vines may be utilized as a cover for walks and drives or as a canopy over small outbuildings.

POULTRY DROPPINGS ARE OF BIG VALUE

According to Maine Station, Collection Should Be Made Daily to Conserve Strength.

A recent bulletin of the Maine agricultural experiment station shows that the poultryman or farmer can materially add to the profits of his business by properly caring for the droppings of his fowls. For example, it is shown that the droppings from 1,000 fowls if preserved without needless loss are worth at least $300 per annum, and this estimate is based on the assumption that less than half of the droppings, or only 30 pounds per hen per year, can be collected.

According to the Maine station, the droppings should be collected daily and mixed with substances which will (1) prevent loss of nitrogen; (2) add sufficient potash and phosphoric acid to make a better balanced fertilizer; and (3) improve the mechanical condition of the manure so that it can be applied to the land with a manure spreader.

This can be done as follows: To each 30 pounds of the manure add ten pounds of sawdust, good dried loam, or peat, 16 pounds of acid phosphate and eight pounds of kainit. Such a mixture will contain about 120 per cent of nitrogen, 4.5 per cent of phosphoric acid and 2 per cent of potash, which, used at the rate of two tons per acre would furnish 50 pounds of nitrogen, 185 pounds of phosphoric acid and 80 pounds of potash, and at the present price of fertilizing ingredients it would be worth about $10 per ton.

The mixture would furnish a well-balanced stable fertilizer, which, although not fine enough to work well in drills, can be successfully applied with a manure spreader. The treated manure should be well sheltered until time to apply to the land—that is, shortly before plowing.

Green Manure Crops. Green manure crops may be injurious the first season in exhausting the soil moisture if they are permitted to grow too late in the spring before being turned under. If too much green manuring is practised, it may be detrimental to the ground, since it will cause acid conditions.

Naphazad Method. There are many men in the core belt who consider themselves good farmers and who are today shoveling hundreds of bushels of corn into their feed lots every month without knowing whether they are feeding it at a profit or a loss.

A Boon to the Farm Housewife

The kitchen loses its terrors with the NEW PERFECTION Wick Blue Flame cook stove. Does exactly the work of the coal range without the terrible exhausting heat and the dirt and trouble. Burns clean, convenient, economical; oil; almost saves its cost during the season.

Makes the heavy summer cooking easy, the kitchen pleasant. None of the dangers of gas—line; no smoke, no odor. Note, in the picture, the cabinet top, the fine, big oven, the shelves and the towel racks. Roasts, bakes, toasts and broils to "perfection."

Be sure and see the latest model with the new THERMOS oven, an invention that gives you a range and a broiler and a steamer and a fireless cooker combined. Don't forget that fuel saving soon makes up the price of the stove. That a cool kitchen makes cooking easy, especially when striking a match gives you your fire.

NEW PERFECTIONS come in 2, 3, and 4 burner sizes, which your dealer can show you. Ask him to explain the special burner construction, how the broiler broils on both sides at once, and about the patented fuel reservoir, refilled without turning off your fire.

Spiritual.

The new minister in a western parish was making his first calls, and when he reached the home of the Peerys he said to Mr. Peery:

"I don't think that I have seen Mr. Peery at church yet, have I, Sister Peery?"

"Well, no, you ain't," replied Sister Peery. "The fact is, Peery likes to lay abed late of a Sunday morning, and time he gets up an' has his breakfast and gets through the Sunday papers an' does his Sunday shavin' an' mebbe an' hour or two of tinkerin' around the house that he allus puts off to do of a Sunday, an' then has a smoke an' mebbe cuts some o' the children's hair or beats rugs for me, or even mops up the kitchen if I'm hurried—time he's done all that it's too late for church. Fact is, Peery ain't a real spiritual-minded man nohow—at least not the same as I am."—New York Saturday Evening Post.

ERUPTION ON CHILD'S BODY

R. F. D. No. 2, Jackson, Mo.—"Our daughter who is ten months old was suffering from an eruption all over the body. In the beginning they were small red spots and afterwards turned to bloody sores. We tried all sorts of ointments but they did not procure any relief for our child. She cried almost day and night and we scarcely could touch her, because she was covered with sores from head to foot.

"We had heard about the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and made a trial with them, and after using the remedies, that is to say, the Soap and the Ointment, only a few days passed and our child could sleep well and after one week she was totally well." (Signed) August F. Bartels, Nov. 25, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.
