Battle Creek Auto Driven by Boys Ran Into Hitching Post.

A five-passenger Buick touring car crashed into the hitching posts at the rear of the McKune block on Middle street east, about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The machine carried state license plate number 21842, which gives the name of the owner as A. K. Zinn, of Battle Creek, but residents of this place who are acquainted with the owner inform the Standard that he was not with the car.

The car was occupied by a middle-aged gentleman and lady in the rear seat and was being driven by two boys, aged from 12 to 15 years. When the party, which was going east, reached the intersection of Main and Middle streets, instead of turning to the south ran to the front of the Standard office where they made an attempt to turn. The machine was being driven at a high rate of speed and in making the turn the driver brought up against the hitching post with a bang that was heard for some distance and a good sized crowd soon gathered at the scene of the accident.

The impact broke the post from its foundation, the couplings of the top rail, the curbing and a section of the sidewalk. The radiator of the car was considerably bent, otherwise the machine was but slightly damaged. The gentleman with car gave orders to have the necessary repairs made to the village property and the bill forwarded to him.

The boy who was driving the car was too young to have charge of it, and the occupants were very fortunate in escaping a more serious accident. When the party resumed their journey the gentleman occupied the drivers seat. A case of "locking the barn" after the horse had been stolen might be applied in this instance.

The Band Concert.

The open air concert given by the Chelsea Band at the intersection of Main and Middle streets Tuesday night drew a large crowd. There were between fifty and sixty automobiles and a goodly number of carriages on the streets which were driven in from the country, some of them were from Dexter, Pinckney, Grass Lake and Waterloo, and the streets were packed with the citizens of this place.

The band rendered a program of eight numbers, one of which was a vocal solo by Louis Burg, and they not only gave the visitors a high class musical feast but presented a handsome appearance in their new uniforms.

An improvement could be made if a public band stand could be erected for the use of the musicians, and it could be made at a small outlay. The city of Marshall has a portable stand for the use of the band. The stand is built on wheels and when not in use can be readily removed. The platform on the wheels is built so that it will fold up into a compact form and when it is to be used is wide enough to accommodate twenty players, their folding chairs and music racks. When not in use the vehicle is drawn away and stored.

A Successful Event.

About fifty men made way with the fish supper which was served by the Brotherhood of the Congregational church at A. E. Winans' cottage at Cavanaugh Lake Friday afternoon. Several of the men went to the lake the night previous and started out with the sun on Friday morning to catch the fish. The wind blew too hard for "Denny" Walker and he came back to town early—simply couldn't stay on the lake—but Mr. Winans, D. H. Wurster, Supervisor VanRiper and H. D. Witherell anchored themselves securely and hauled in the fish. Just as it began to look as though there might be a shortage Frank Brooks came over the hill from Cedar Lake with a pair of the finest fish one ever laid eyes on, and after that joy was unconfined.

Struck by Lightning.

Lightning struck one of the chimneys on the Freeman block about 6:30 o'clock Monday night. The chimney was split from the top to the roof and will have to be rebuilt. A brick was thrown through the skylight over the room formerly used for the drug department of the L. T. Freeman Co. The store had been closed for the night and there was no one in the salesroom when the bolt of lightning struck the building. The operators in the Michigan State Telephone exchange were considerably frightened but escaped without any injury. The lightning did not enter the building and damages will amount to about $30.

Commencement Exercises.

The Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was filled last Sunday evening with an interested audience, assembled to witness the commencement exercises of St. Mary's school. The altars and sanctuary were beautifully decorated, and the children marched in a body from the school, and occupied the front seats in the middle aisle—the two graduates of the 8th grade, Frank Nordman and Marie Riedel, being in the place of honor.

Rev. Father Carey, of Detroit, gave a most eloquent and masterly address, setting forth the Catholic idea in the matter of Christian education. It was one of the best discourses ever given in the local church. Rev. Father Considine, the pastor of the church, read the list of honors, and the recipients advanced to the sanctuary and received their medals and premiums from the hands of Rt. Rev. Monsignor DeBever, who presided on the happy occasion.

Solemn benediction followed with Rev. Father Hally, of Dexter, as celebrant; Rev. Father Coyle, of Pinckney, as deacon; and Rev. Father Carey, of Detroit, as sub-deacon. The Te Deum was then sung by the entire congregation. We append a list of the honors:

CROPS DAMAGED

Heavy Frost Last Friday Night Played With Garden and Farm Produce.

The frost that struck in this vicinity last Friday night did considerable damage and a number of the large gardens in the west part of the village were badly injured.

The corn, potatoes and tender plants on the lands of Fred Gutekunst, John Reule and Albert Nicholi were a sight to behold. There was hardly a plant that escaped without the foliage being nipped and when the sun came out Saturday morning the vegetation turned black and in most instances look as if they might not recover from the effects of the freeze. All three of these men and Chas. Lambrecht have adjoining plots of ground sown to onions and they were somewhat affected with the frost but not sufficiently to injure the growing crop.

James L. Wade has between four and five acres planted to corn, potatoes and other small vegetables and from a close inspection there is hardly a plant in his garden that escaped the freeze. The land of Mr. Wade adjoins the other but is considerably above the level of the marsh lands, and his prospect for a full matured crop is not very flattering.

The onion lands of John and Jacob Alber, Dr. G. W. Palmer and H. S. Holmes that were planted with corn and potatoes suffered a similar fate of the others in this vicinity. In fact the reports from the farmers who have corn and potatoes on low lands are to the effect that they are more or less damaged, and while they may come to maturity the yield will probably be considerably below the average. A number of the farmers who have beans planted that were up will probably have to replant them.

Opinions are somewhat divided among the farmers as to the recovery of the frost bitten fields. Some contend that the corn and potatoes will recover and come to maturity about three weeks later, and others are of the opinion that the crops are lost.

Alumni Banquet.

About 125 attended the 19th annual alumni banquet of the Chelsea high school was held at the Methodist church last Friday evening. After a social hour spent in the reception rooms, the meeting was called to order by the president, Paul Belser.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Paul Bacon; vice president, Doris Schmidt; secretary, Norma Turnbull; treasurer, Ella Barber.

After the business session the banquet was served in the dining room which had been transformed into a place of beauty by means of yellow and white bunting, with ferns and masses of large daisies. After the four-course supper was served the president introduced the toastmaster, Dr. Faye Palmer, of the class of 1899.

Toasts were given as follows: "The New Era," W. S. McLaren, '05; "Past," Mrs. B. B. Turnbull, '02; "Present," Mildred Daniels, '06; "Future," Margaret Eppler, '11; "Our Class," Doris Schmidt, '14. At the close of Miss Schmidt's toast came the hit of the evening when the entire class arose and sang a song, the words and music of which were composed by Miss Schmidt. Misses Josephine Miller, 14; Agnes Gorman, '12, and Esther Riemen-schneider, '11, gave piano solos, while vocal numbers were given by Winifred Bacon, '08, and James B. Barch, '11. Music was furnished during the banquet by an orchestra from Jackson. The serving was done by members of the sophomore and junior classes.

A New Patrol Wagon.

E. H. Chandler converted his dray into a police patrol wagon Wednesday forenoon. Two young men who had been indulging too freely made their sleeping apartment at the billboard on north Main street, and Mr. Chandler was called to convey the men to the village house of detention. Patrolman Evans was called to assist Patrolman Chandler in loading the men on the hurry-up wagon. The men landed here early in the morning and proceeded to unload "schooners" until they became overcome with their task. The men gave Grand Rapids as their home and that they were on their way to work with a threshing outfit in the west, and had taken the wrong train at Jackson. They were taken before Justice Witherell in the afternoon who let them off on a suspended sentence with instruction to get out of town within one half hour. They faded away.

JACKSON—The Central Michigan Odd Fellows Picnic Association will hold its annual picnic at the Odd Fellows home, Jackson, August 15.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

ASSESSMENT ON CASH VALUATION TO BE ACCOMPLISHED WITHIN ONE YEAR.

BARNES PRAISES NEW LAW

Michigan to Have Most Complete Chain of Interurban Railways of Any State in Union in Few Years.

[By GURD M. HAYES.]

Lansing, Mich.—Within one year the entire state of Michigan will be assessed on a cash valuation basis according to O. F. Barnes, one of the three state tax commissioners. Nineteen counties have been appraised by the commission and at present the assessments in the other counties are being placed on a cash basis by the commissioners by supervision of the assessments of the supervisors throughout the state. This was made possible by action of the legislature at the last session and as a result the work of assessing the assessments of all property in the state to its cash valuation will be completed four years sooner than was anticipated two years ago when the commission began appraising various counties and placing the assessments on a cash basis.

The counties which were appraised by the commission follow: Charlevoix, Gogebic, Iron, Baraga, Marquette, Dickinson, Bay, Saginaw, Genesee, Allegan, Ingham, Oakland, Van Buren, Kalamazoo, Calhoun, Jackson, Berrien, Grand Traverse and Isoc. Commissioner Barnes highly commended the action of the law makers in passing the bill which is assisting the commission to a great extent.

"The last legislature, recognizing that the supervisors were sworn to assess at cash values greatly increased the powers and duties of the tax commission by passing the law which declares that the tax commission shall supervise and assist supervisors to the end that their assessments shall be at cash value," said Commissioner Barnes.

"Under this law the commission organized a plan to assist supervisors. It placed its entire force of examiners—50 in all—at the disposal of the supervisors of the state. It published a pamphlet on cash value assessments and in other ways assisted the local assessing officers.

"The result has far exceeded the best hopes of the commission. The great majority of the supervisors entered into the spirit of cash value assessments, and the reports which come hourly to the commission show that 75 per cent of the territory not before reassessed by the commission and not including Kent and Wayne counties, has been put up to approximately cash value by the supervisors themselves. In Kent county reassessment is now being made by the tax commission and a large force of our field men has been at work in Wayne county since last December. It is safe to say that the new program has pushed the time for cash values ahead four years. Another year the uneven assessments left can be adjusted and then cash value assessments will prevail over the entire state.

"Where ever the supervisors have honestly and heartily entered into the spirit of cash value assessments the tax commission will not reassess those townships but will endeavor to ascertain how near cash value the supervisors have got. The commission will recommend the amounts it thinks the supervisors differ from the commission's idea and will ask those townships to be increased by the county boards at the equalization sessions. This will be done on the promise that the assessments the next year shall be brought up to the full sum by the supervisors."

The state railroad commission has been advised of the sale of $5,000,000 worth of five-year six per cent gold notes out of an $8,000,000 authorization, which was recently given the Michigan Railways Co., an electric corporation with headquarters in Grand Rapids, and whose outside offices are in Chicago and New York. The sale of the notes was made to New York parties.

This means that the Michigan Railways Co. will complete its task of forming a chain of electric lines through central Michigan. Information has been given out that the proposed electric line from Owosso to Saginaw, already surveyed, will be started Jan. 1 next. The Michigan Railways Co., formerly known as the Chicago-Michigan Railways Co., has constructed an electric line from Kalamazoo to Grand Rapids and recently gained permission to enter the furniture city, a terminal already having been located there.

This line will be completed by Jan. 1. Work has been commenced on the line from Allegan to Battle Creek, now a steam line, which has been purchased by the company. It will be changed to an electric line. The Saginaw-Flint, operating from Bay City to Flint, is owned by the company, and with the Owosso-Saginaw line now assured, a direct connection between Grand Rapids and Bay City will be established through the connections via Jackson and Lansing. The Michigan Railways Co. now owns and operates the M. U. T.

When the chain is completed it will form one of the most complete chains of electric lines in any state. It has been known for some time that the new company was getting a hold in this state, and only needed to sell its recent note issue, authorized by the railroad commission, to perfect the chain of lines.

Those in close touch with the situation say that soon the company will have acquired all the electric lines in this section of the state, outside of the D. U. R.

Contracts were awarded a few days ago at Grand Rapids for bridges to be constructed in that vicinity and the maps of the line from Kalamazoo to Grand Rapids have all been approved by the railroad commission.

Governor Ferris will have three good appointments to make in the near future as one vacancy has already been created by the resignation of De Hull N. Travis as a member of the state pardon board and the terms of Ora Reeves as a member of the industrial accident board and John Owens as state oil inspector will expire this summer.

Members of the state pardon board receive $7 per day and expenses and as the work is pleasant and not very irksome, there is generally a large number of patriots who are willing to serve in this particular capacity. Travis, who was appointed by former governor Osborn quit the board in order to accept a position on the Chautauqua platform.

Ora Reeves of Jackson was placed on the industrial accident board by Osborn when the commission was created two years ago. Reeves is the only representative of organized labor on the board and it is reported that he may be reappointed by Governor Ferris because of the fact that he has made an excellent record. Members of the accident board were originally appointed for terms of two, four and six years. Reeves was appointed for the short term and if he is re-appointed by Gov. Ferris and confirmed by the senate he will be entitled to sit on the board for the next six years.

Although the term of State Oil Inspector John Owen will not expire until August, when Reeves' time is also up, there are many applications for the job. This position pays $2,500 per year and the appointment is good for two years from the date of appointment by the governor as confirmation by the senate is not necessary.

Since the first of January, 63,000 automobile licenses have been issued by the state department according to Secretary Martindale. The department has already issued 3,774 chauffeurs licenses and 5,524 motorcycle licenses. The number of licenses issued so far this year is considerably in excess of the number issued during 1913.

As the result of the decision of the supreme court which knocked out the new automobile tax law, the state department has been forced to spend considerable time in reissuing to motorists who secured licenses by paying on a basis of the horse power of their machines. Already $100,923 has been returned and vouchers are being made out at the rate of 400 per day. It will take some time to complete the work of returning the funds, but the orders are being rushed through as rapidly as the force of clerks in Secretary Martindale's office can prepare them for the auditor general's office and the treasury department.

Several applications for bond issues and increases of capital stock have received the approval of the state railroad commission. An order has been signed by the commission authorizing the Detroit & Port Huron Shore line to issue $803,000 in bonds for the retirement of $600,000 bonds of the Rapid Railway company and $3,000 of the Port Huron, St. Clair & Marine City Railway company.

The Menominee & Marinette Light & Traction company has been authorized to increase its capital stock from $1,000,000 to $1,250,000. Permission has been granted the Detroit, Bay City & Western to issue $68,000 of par value corporate bonds, while the Escanaba & Garden Bay Transportation company is authorized to issue $10,000 of par value capital stock. The Detroit United Railway company has been authorized to issue $50,000 in bonds for the retirement of a like amount of bonds of the Detroit Railway company.

Hereafter the Ann Arbor railroad will be required to carry brakemen on all emergency trains on the main line south of Owosso. This decision on the part of the state railroad commission followed a hearing Thursday afternoon in which representatives of the railroad protested that such an order would cost at least $50 per month additional on each train.

"The Ann Arbor appears to be the only railroad in Michigan that is attempting to operate a steam passenger train on its main line with a conductor and baggagemen as a train crew in addition to the engineer and fireman," said Commissioner Canning.

CARE OF THE DAIRY PRODUCTS IN SUMMER

THE WATCHWORD OF THE CAREFUL DAIRYMAN SHOULD BE

"CLEANLINESS AND COOLNESS"

[By C. E. Newlander, Instructor in Dairying, Michigan Agricultural College.]

The dairy interests of the state suffer immense losses every year from spoiling and deterioration of products during the summer season. These losses occur all the way from the way from the dairy farm to the large dealers in dairy products and are the result of improper methods of handling milk on the farm, on the road and in the shipping stations. From the point of view of greater profit, as well as that of public health, every person who produces or handles milk should give thoughtful attention to the means by which milk may be kept cold and free from contamination. The result will be greater satisfaction to the consumer and greater profits to the producer.

Importance of Cleanliness.

Milk is one of the most perishable of foods. It will not remain in good condition more than a few hours, when produced and handled carelessly. It quickly ferments of acids and may undergo other changes. The changes in milk are due to bacteria, commonly called germs, some of which may cause disease. The chief source of bacteria in milk is the foreign matter which finds its way into milk, such as small particles of soil or manure, hairs, dust, old milk, impure water, etc., all of which are carriers of bacteria.

The watchwords of the careful dairyman should always be cleanliness and low temperatures, but more especially so during the warm season. Since it is impossible to exclude all bacteria from milk, the producer should aim to exclude as many as possible and then to check the growth of those which have got into the milk. The first may be done by practicing cleanliness. The cows should be kept clean by brushing and by wiping of the flanks and udders. This does not require much time and is necessary where the cows have access to marshes and dirty barnyards. The milking should take place in a clean, well lighted stable as free from dust as possible. The milker should wear a clean suit used only when milking, rather than his dusty working clothes. Above all he should milk with clean, dry hands. But with all the care that can be exercised some dirt and bacteria will be constantly falling where milking is in progress. The amount falling into the milk pail can be greatly reduced by the use of a pail with a small top.

Necessity for Cooling Milk.

The second point, that of checking the growth of bacteria, can be accomplished by cooling the milk to a low temperature, 50 degrees F. or below, because bacteria do not readily grow at this temperature. The cooling may be done by pouring the milk over a cooler or by stirring it in cans set in cold water. Use a thermometer to note the temperature. It is not sufficient to simply cool the milk, it must be kept cold until delivered to the station or factory. Milk hauled to the station or factory in hot weather must be covered to protect it from heat. This can readily be done by covering the cans with blankets which have been thoroughly soaked in cold water. In case of long trips on exceptionally hot days it may be necessary to wet the blankets more than once.

In addition to the above it should be stated that milk should not be handled or stored in the stable. It is much better to have a separate milk room or milk house used for this purpose only, which can more readily be kept free from dust and odors. Also the proper cleaning and sterilization of utensils is a matter of great importance. The pails, cans, strainers, etc., should first be rinsed in lukewarm water, then thoroughly scrubbed with a brush in warm water to which some alkali like soda has been added, and then rinsed carefully in clean warm water. If possible the utensils should then be sterilized by the use of live steam, but good results may be obtained by dipping in boiling water for a minute or two. This will warm them sufficiently so they will dry of their own heat making wiping unnecessary.

Tobacco Spray Destroys Grape Insect. Washington, D. C.—The insect known as the leaf-hopper that has seriously menaced the vineyards of Ohio and Michigan may be controlled by the use of a tobacco spray, according to the scientists of the Department of Agriculture. The time for the application of this spray is during the last few days in June or very early in July. Successful control of the insect depends on thoroughly wetting all parts of the under side of the infested leaves with the spray liquid.

He lowered himself into the stream, which was deep to the shore, as silently as a ghost. A dozen feet away I lost sight of him entirely amid the dim, dancing shadows. Then I followed with equal caution, my face turned up to the sky. It was a dark night, but with a few stars visible peeping down through rifts of cloud. The small river was not wide, nor the current particularly swift, and I had not been carried far down stream when the overhanging branches of the opposite bank gave shelter. I drew myself ashore, and sat there, shivering in my wet clothes, the night air chill, and stared anxiously about, and across to the shore we had just left.

I moved down the shore cautiously, keeping well below the concealing bank until I found Brady. He was crouched in the shadow of a great tree root, his whole attention riveted on the opposite side.

"There are no signs of pursuit?"

"Not that I can see. I have watched here some minutes, but there has been no movement along the bank. We will move on down stream."

It was hard walking amid the tangled roots, and we made slow work of it. Brady, in advance, stumbled once or twice, and I noticed, held one hand pressed against his side as though from pain, breathing heavily. To our left, but some distance away, a voice called, and was answered by another. So, telling on, we came to a sharp bend in the stream.

"It must be about opposite here, Hayward," he said stopping, "the girl told you the boat would be. What is that lumping shadow yonder? Your eyes are younger than mine."

I looked where he pointed, shading my eyes, and gradually focusing the outlines until they assumed definite shape.

"It is a big tree bent down over the river; no doubt the one she meant."

"You see no movement?"

I strained my eyes, searching the dark shore inch by inch, but could perceive nothing; the lights of the fires were far away.

"It is still as death over there."

He shot a swift glance at me, as if the words pleased him little. In the dim starshine his face appeared ghastly white.

"Perhaps the days of miracles are not gone," he said doubtfully, "and dirty may have played fair. Anyhow there is nothing to be done now but test it. Come on, lad; we'll take to water again."

The cheerful note in his voice bolstered my own courage. We swam straight this time, with steady strokes, our eyes scanning the bank we were approaching. And the canoe was there, huddled under the leaning tree, bow to bank, rendered shapeless by a covering of broken branches. We lay hold of the sides, standing waist deep in water, our eyes searching the high bank towering dark above us. There was no movement, no sound, and I lowered the branches one by one into the water, and permitted them to float silently down stream.

Circled by the shade of the great tree, I waded cautiously ashore and crept into a mass of roots. The higher bank rose sheer before me. To the right there was an opening, as if a trail led down to the river, and revealed there against the upper sky, something moved. For an instant I could tell no more; but I recognized a human figure stealing cautiously toward me through the gloom. It moved silently as a spirit, and my heart beat fiercely as I rose up and stared. She was close upon me before I was sure.

"Rene."

"Oh, a little catch in the quick whisper; 'then—then it is you; how—how did you come here?'"

I drew her back into the deeper shadow, and told her the brief story in swift words, clinging to her hands, as I held her close. I could not distinguish her face, but she listened, her soft breath on my cheek.

"Oh, I am so glad—so glad, monsieur. I did not know until after I gave the signal. I—I came down here to be sure—to, to say good-by," she faltered, "and—saw them waiting."

"Then it was treachery? The purpose was to kill us? Dirty lied?"

"Yes, monsieur. You—you will not believe I knew? That I suspected such a thing?"

My handclasp tightened.

"No, dear, no; go on. Where are the men?"

"Most of them, ten or twelve as near as I could make out, are in a ravine at the edge of the camp, yonder close to the shore. There are three others up above here, hiding behind the bank."

"I see; the attack was to be made by those above as we crept along, and if either of us got away those three devils were to complete the job."

"Never mind that; will you go as I say?"

There was a silvery gleam of star on her upturned face, and I could see her eyes, startled, puzzled, half frightened, gazing up into mine. Then the long lashes drooped over them.

"Yes, monsieur," she said, her lips trembling. "I will go with you."

The dawn found me with the paddle, but Rene still wide awake. There was a thin, gray fog over the river, which turned to purple as the light strengthened, and we were at the apex of a great bend, the course of the stream ahead leading into the northwest. That was not our direction, and besides I felt if there was pursuit it would be safer far ashore. Just as the sun broke through the mist we came unexpectedly to the mouth of a small stream leading into the main river from the south. So thoroughly was it concealed by a thick growth of bushes, that we would have slipped by, had I not been skirting the shore closely, seeking some such opening. I headed the canoe straight in, pressing aside the branches to gain passage, and found beyond a narrow creek, up which we managed to paddle for several hundred yards. Then I stepped overboard, and dragged the light craft still higher, until I discovered a place of concealment behind a huge rotting log.

Here we left it, Rene and I bearing with us the guns and our small stores of provisions. I had cut a canoe for Brady, and with its help, he managed to get along slowly, although sight of his face made my heart ache. Thus in single file we waded up the tiny stream, until we attained a ledge of rocks where our feet would leave no trail. Over these we toiled, helping each other, until we came to the upland, into an open forest, carpeted with autumn leaves. By this time Brady was too exhausted to go further, sinking helplessly on the ground. Rene also looked worn and heavy-eyed, and I had no heart to urge them on. We ate sparingly of that food we had, but Brady barely touched his portion. I wrapped him in our only blanket, and the three of us slept.

It was the gray dawn when mademoiselle awoke me, shaking me soundly ere I could be aroused. That something was wrong I perceived instantly from the expression of her face, and sat up, glancing hastily about, expecting the approach of savages.

"What is it?"

"He is gone, monsieur! Monsieur Brady is gone."

"But he is not here, monsieur," she insisted. "See; it was there he lay. I will tell you all I know. I woke up in the night and thought of him, of how hard it was for so strong a man to be so weak and ill. Then I got up and went over quietly to be sure he was all right. But he was awake, monsieur, staring up at the sky with eyes wide open. He saw me, and said he was nervous and could not sleep. No, he told me he was not in pain, but complained of being cold. I spread more leaves over him, and he said that was better. Then—he took my hand and kissed it, and begged me to go back and—lie down. He was very nice and gentle, and smiled at me. So I went back, and crept into my leaves, and tried to sleep. He did not move, yet I lay there a long while, thinking—I think I cried a little, monsieur, for I felt so sorry. At last I slept again. It was just a little light when I awoke once more, and my first memory was of him. I went over there and—and he was gone. I could see where he had rested in the leaves, and the blanket on the ground, but—he was not there. I sought for him, but there was no trace—nothing. So I came and woke you."

I was on my feet, a feeling of dread tugging at my heart. I felt that I already knew what had happened, yet I could not tell her—not now, not until I was sure.

"He could not have gone far, Rene," I said hastily. "Perhaps to the river for a drink. Come, we will see."

The ground about the camp had been so trampled by our feet that, at first, I could not pick up the trail. Finally, taking a wider circle, I came upon softer soil and the imprint of his moccasins. I knew they were his because of one foot dragging, and the impression of his cane. They led down toward the river, and I followed swiftly, the girl close behind, until we stood at the edge of the stream. The man's trail ended there. I explored the bank for some distance up and down, but without result. There were tears glimmering in Rene's eyes, as I came back—she also was beginning to understand. Without a word I waded out into the water, and swam across to the other shore. There was nothing there—no sign, no mark of any description—and I came back to where she waited, wading out with dripping garments to the bank.

"There—there was nothing, monsieur."

"Nothing," I answered gravely. "He has not crossed over." I hesitated an instant, but could not resist the question—horror in her eyes. "You understand, do you not?"

"You—you think," she faltered, "that—"

"Yes, you; I am not going to leave you here for Hamilton to wreak his rage on. There is no time to argue now."

"But, monsieur—"

"No time to argue now."

Monsieur Brady has—has killed himself."

"He has given his life for others, my girl—for you and me, and those soldiers of St. Clair's."

She stood a moment, silent, tears on her cheeks, looking blindly out at the water. Then she sank upon her knees, holding the crucifix against her face. I could see the movement of her lips, but heard nothing; only I knew that she prayed for his soul, and my own eyes were moist as I knelt beside her. Then I lifted her up by the hand, and we went back up the hill to the camp.

There was nothing to hope for in waiting, and all our duty lay beyond. Without the exchange of a word we packed what few things we had, and started, following the bank of the stream.

It was a raw November morning that we came unexpectedly upon St. Clair's outposts. The ground was covered with snow, and the little pools were skimmed over with thin ice. It had been too cold to rest, and we had walked much of the night, afraid to build a fire. Chilled to the marrow by the icy wind that swept through the trees and buffeted us, I had wrapped the girl in our only blanket, fastening it about her head and face, hurt as I did so by the dumb, patient, bewildered look in her eyes. She tried to protest, yet at my first stern word ceased and wrapped herself closely in the folds. I was in front, breaking the trail that she might have easier marching, when suddenly a man stopped out of a thicket, and with gun at his breast roughly commanded a halt. I paused instantly, uncertain as to which side the challenger was on, yet a glance at his face and dress reassured me.

"Who are yer, an' what do yer want?" he asked suspiciously.

"I am an officer of the Fort Harmar garrison," I answered, "with news from the north. To what command do you belong?"

"The Kentucky militia," he acknowledged sullenly. "Colonel Oldham."

"Where is your colonel?"

"Back yonder on that rise o' ground; you kin go on, but I'll keep an eye on yer."

We left him, following the direction pointed out, hearing him call to some one in our rear, yet paying no heed.

"He Has Given His Life for Others, My Girl."

The very ease with which he had passed us on was evidence enough of lax discipline, and small conception of the danger of the command. There was a plain track through the snow, which led to a camp fire blazing cheerily in a grove of trees, with maybe a dozen men clustered about it. No one appeared to notice us as we drew near.

"Which is Colonel Oldham?" I asked, glancing about the group. One stood up, a smooth-faced, ruddy-cheeked man of fifty, with iron-gray hair, and eyes that looked as if they laughed easily. I liked him at first glance.

"That is my name," he said shortly. "What is it? St. Denis, man?" as his glance swept over me, "you look as if you had been far from the settlements and had a hard trip."

"I have, sir; I come from the Maumee. I am an officer of regulars with news of importance for St. Clair."

Every eye was on me now and Oldham took a step nearer.

"The Maumee?" he exclaimed. "Ay, that is a journey. News for St. Clair, you say—what news? There was a rumor down below that the Indians of the northwest were mustering. Know you anything of that?"

"They have already mustered, sir. I was at their rendezvous. Even now they are at my heels—the whole of them, Shawnees, Miamis, Delawares, Wyandots, and for all I know, as many more. There are white renegades with them, and English officers I suspect—I saw Hamilton myself on the Maumee, and he evidently was managing affairs."

There was a muttering of voices, and Oldham let out an oath.

"Well, sir, I believe it, but I'll be hanged if you can make St. Clair. The arrogant old fool may listen to you, but I doubt even that. He thinks this is a pleasure party we are on. What do you think he did a week ago?"

I looked at him uncomprehending, stunned by such mutinous words openly spoken.

"Sent back a whole regiment of regulars on a wild-goose chase after deserters, and we within fifty miles of the Miami towns."

"What force have you here?"

"Less than fourteen hundred—all militia but one regiment. From the Maumee, ensign? And did you come through alone with that squaw?"

"Yes, sir; I came alone."

"You—you think," she faltered, "that—"

I glanced back at her, standing silently behind me, the blanket drawn over her head and face.

"Take it off, Rene," I said quietly. "Yes, monsieur."

Her hands obediently threw the wrapping aside, permitting it to drape over her shoulders. She lifted her head, and stood facing them, with eyes centering upon Oldham. He gasped, and jerked the hat from off his head.

"I beg your pardon," he stammered. "A white woman?"

"A French girl, sir, whom I found with the Wyandots. Can you send us back to St. Clair?"

He stared at her so long, hat still in hand, that I thought he did not hear. An officer touched him on the shoulder and spoke a word.

"Ah, yes, certainly—St. Clair. At once, sir, but I don't envy you your reception. By Jove, I lost my wits seeing such a woman as that here in this hole. Someone send Masters here."

He came quickly, a youngish lad, with white hair and eyebrows, but intelligent face, who never took his eyes off Rene. Oldham spoke brusquely.

"Take this officer and the lady to General St. Clair at once." Tell Butler I say it is important, that he be given immediate interview. Here, wait! get the lady a horse somewhere. Captain, can he take yours?"

"With pleasure, sir; I will fetch the animal."

They watched us depart until we had crossed the ridge, Masters and I trudging through the snow at the horse's head. Rene had drawn up her blanket, but I could see her eyes watching me, when I glanced around at her. It was not long, however, until we came out of the forest, into a bit of lowland near the river, where a dozen tents, grimy and dirty looking, stood on the bank. There were soldiers everywhere, gathered about the camp fires, with a few guards patrolling beats along the forest edge. Masters led the way through the motley crowd up to the central tent. There was delay there, Rene sitting motionless in the saddle, and I waiting impatiently beside her. At last Masters came back.

"He will see you, sir."

"Very well; are there any women in camp?"

"A few, sir; 'non-com' wives mostly, washerwomen and cooks; they are in those two tents there—the officers' kitchens."

"Take the lady over there, and leave her in good hands, Rene."

She looked down at me.

"Yes, monsieur."

"This soldier will take you to some women who will take care of you until I come. You will wait for me."

"Yes, monsieur."

I waited until they started, and then advanced to the tent. A tall, slender man, in a colonel's uniform, pointed the way within, and I stepped through the narrow opening. The interior was plain—a bearskin stretched on the ground, two officers on campstools against the canvas; a sentry beside the open flap standing motionless; a rude table of one unplanned board, and behind it, seated, St. Clair. He was a spare man, with broad shoulders and prominent nose, wearing a long queue of thick, gray hair, which was plainly visible below his three-cornered hat. He was attired in blanket coat, with hood dangling down his back. I had met him once, but it was clear he retained no recollection of me, as he surveyed me coldly across the table.

"Well, sir," he snapped, "Colonel Oldham says you bring news. Who are you?"

"Ensign Hayward of Fort Harmar," I answered, bringing my hand up in salute. "I was sent with a message to the Wyandots."

The stern lines of his face broke into a grim smile.

"Ah, yes, I recall that. One of Harmar's fool notions. Told him as much when I got back. Well, your peace offering didn't do much good, did it? I hear there is hell brewing in those north woods."

"It is already brewed, sir. The tribes have got together to crush you. They rendezvoused on the Maumee."

"Huh! that is a ways away. No great danger from that source till we're ready. What tribes were there, do you know?"

"I saw them, sir; Wyandots, Pottawatomies, Shawnees, Delawares, and Miamis. There were also some Ojibwas, and a sprinkling of others, mostly young warriors."

"Who heads the conspiracy?"

"Little Turtle, of the Miamis, but there are Englishmen with them also; Hamilton himself was there."

"The cursed hound; so you were there, with them, hey? A prisoner?"

"Yes, general; a scout named Stephen Brady and I. We got away by means of a canoe on the river."

"Where is Brady? I know the old coon."

"He died, sir, and I came on alone."

"No one spoke, and I went on."

"It was a hard journey, and there were many delays on the way. I came as quickly as I could, sir, but I don't think the savages are far behind."

"Oh, don't you, indeed," sarcastically. "It was not advice I was asking, and as to what is in front of us my own scouts keep me posted. I happen to know there isn't a hostile Indian within fifty miles of us—not a bloody one. I don't care what they do up on the Maumee. We'll go on to the Miami towns tomorrow, raze them, and be back to the Ohio before that bunch gets started. I doubt if there is a shot fired. It's all a big bluff, sir; we've got them frightened half to death. I wrote Washington so a month ago."

Fruit of Evil Associations.

Go with mean people and you think the world is mean.—Emerson.

Through Switzerland with Knapsack

I was on May 3, 1867, that I started from St. Gall on a two months' tramp through Switzerland, with a light heart, a light purse and light baggage, the latter consisting of a small knapsack, while in my pocket I carried a sketch-book. This was much too early in the year to reach the higher parts of the country, which are then covered with deep snow. Indeed, some of the highest resorts are accessible for only two months in the year—July and August, writes Harry E. Brook in the Los Angeles Times.

Tramping is not only the most independent, but is the best way to see a rough country like Switzerland, where one often has to take trails and bridge paths that are only accessible to men and mountain goats; that is to say, if one wishes to get among the people and see how they live. Travelers who move from one big hotel to another come back with very little impression of a country beyond the menus and hotel bills. The Germans tell a story about an Englishman traveling up the Rhine who sent his son on deck while he sat below in the cabin with a bottle of Rhine wine and Murray's guide-book, and checked off the places of interest as his son called out the names. That is one way to "see" a country, but it is not the best.

A Cheap Trip.

On my trip I averaged about thirty miles a day. Sometimes I would take a train or stage or steamboat for a short distance, but nine-tenths of the trip was made on foot. It was a cheap trip, as I gave myself out as a Swiss student. I put up at second-class hotels.

A certain time before they are permitted to work as craftsmen. They are a jolly, care-free crowd, their baggage usually consisting of an undershirt and a pair of shoes.

In Napoleon's Footsteps.

On my journey I covered the greater part of Switzerland, which is not a difficult task, as it is only about three-fourths as large as San Bernardino county. Among the greatest charms of Switzerland are its beautiful lakes, some of them encircled by snowclad peaks. I went all around the lakes of Wallenstadt, Zurich, Zug, Lucerne, Geneva, Lugano, Como and Maggiore, and then by steamer across them.

At the conclusion of my tramp I followed in the footsteps of Napoleon, crossing the Alps over the Simplon pass, which he constructed to carry his guns into Lombardy, a wonderful road, smooth as a billiard table, winding by easy gradients. At short intervals on one side are stone pillars, for the protection of vehicles. From Brig, in the Rhone valley, to Domo d'Ossola, in Italy, is over forty miles. I made the trip in one day. By means of the Simplon tunnel, the longest in the world, the traveler now is carried between these two points in about half an hour.

After a few weeks spent among the Italian lakes, I took the train for Milan, for sensible people do not walk in Italy. Besides the climate, there are too many other inconveniences. The cathedral of Milan—to the top of which I climbed—with its 5,000 statues, I regard as one of the artistic tels, which are much more comfortable than the big caravansaries, where, unless you have a lot of luggage, they are likely to shove you up into an attic. My total expenses on this trip did not average over five francs, or $1, a day. Probably they would be somewhat more today, for the country has to a great extent been spoiled by the senseless extravagance of Americans.

One never has any trouble about finding accommodations in Switzerland. Almost every peasant house is to some extent an inn, keeping on hand a little plain liquid and solid refreshments, and a few beds, for there are no licenses to pay. One evening I was crossing the mountains that border the Lake of Geneva on the north on my way down to Vevey, as it was growing late, I put up for the night at a peasant's cottage near the summit of the pass. All they could offer me in the way of refreshments was a large Swiss cheese, some homemade bread and a flask of country wine, with a clean bed in an attic room.

In the morning, when I asked the daughter of the house how much I owed, she told me it was one franc—20 cents. Another time, in the upper Rhine valley, I was charged only ten cents for a room. However, conditions have changed of late years, although one may still travel quite inexpensively if one knows something of the language, is content with modest fare, and does not make great pretensions.

One charm about traveling in Switzerland is the excellence of the roads; another is the absolute cleanliness everywhere. I have slept in several hundred different places in Switzerland, and never found a dirty room. When one crosses over the border into Italy the contrast is striking. There one comes across dirt and other drawbacks that make traveling unpleasant.

On my journey I would often encounter a couple of "handwerker"—apprentices to a mechanical trade—who, under the law prevailing in Germany and some other countries, have to travel around the marvels of the world. The Taj Mahal, in India, is more artistic, but it is beauty of another order. When one comes suddenly into the square in which stands the cathedral of Milan, against a background of blue, one is forced to gasp. It looks for all the world like a magnificent piece of white lace hung up in the sky.

After a few days at Milan I took the train to Genoa, the Liverpool of Italy, where I spent a month. It is a most interesting city of narrow, winding streets and tall, dilapidated marble palaces, that have been transformed into lodging houses and offices. On the sixth floor of one of these I had my modest room, in an apartment kept by a broken-down Russian countess and her daughter. Elevators were, of course, unheard of, and there were no lights in the stairways and halls, but one could purchase tiny wax tapers, called "scalletti," that would burn just long enough to enable one to reach the top floor without barking one's shins.

Value of Dead Files.

Dead files are worth ten cents a hundred in Chatham, N. J., and that amount will be paid for them at Borough hall by a number of prominent citizens who have organized the Cleanup club. It was for the purpose of making Chatham more sanitary that the fly swatting campaign was decided upon. As a part of the anti-fly campaign thousands of swatters will be purchased and presented to all school pupils and householders, storekeepers and men working about business houses. The club has decided also to do away with all poison ivy within the limits of the municipality.

Increased Responsibilities.

"So you think a member of congress ought to have more salary?"

"Yes, sir," replied the plain person. "Time was when all he had to do was to shake hands, send around garden seats and tell funny stories. Now he's got to sit down and study and try to understand things."

Pure Bred Cow Best.

The pure bred cow carries a great possibility of reproduction of the qualities of her ancestors. In her the power of heredity predominates because she is bred for that particular line. The scrub cow is likewise a great example of hereditary influence, but her tendencies are along the lines of inferior production and a yield that does not make a profit.

The dairy cow deserves the very best water that can be had. Do not make her depend upon pools, running streams and sloughs for her drink.

The cake is then forced out through the other frame and divided into four times as many smaller squares.

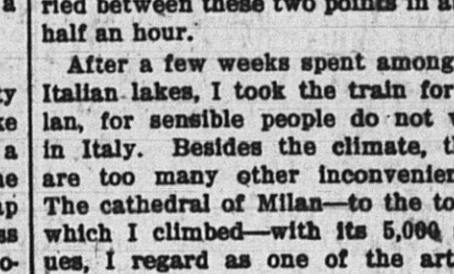

When Cut Just Before It Commences to Head it is Relished by Cows.—Wheat is Also Good.

Rye cut just before it commences to head makes an excellent early green feed for milk cows. When in full head the stalks become tough and woody, and much of it will be rejected by the stock. Wheat drilled at the rate of three bushels per acre, on rich, mellow ground, makes a good second, early green feed. Wheat has more leaf and is much relished by all stock, especially cows and sows with suckling pigs. For a herd of twelve to fourteen head of cows in full milk, one acre should be drilled to rye and one acre to wheat. The ground for these early green feeds should be deep, mellow and heavily dressed with rotted cow manure spread broadcast and well harrowed in before drilling. Diluted urine from the manure vault spread during the winter when ground is slightly frozen, will greatly increase the yield and early maturity of both rye and wheat. The rye and wheat, for early green feed should be seeded to red clover and herds grass, as a half yield of hay may be cut from the same field the latter part of August. This is the favorite method with the dairymen in this part of the state as the one plowing and fertilizing answers for a crop of rye and several crops of hay, says a writer in Baltimore American. Rye, if not wanted for grain, when too tough for the cows should be cut and cured for hay. If quickly cured without getting damaged by rain, it makes an excellent hay. One-half peck of salt spread to the ton as it is hauled in will improve its feeding value and also prevent molding in the mow. After the rye hay is hauled in roll the stubble down and sow two bushels of hardwood ashes to the acre. This mixture, sown as soon as rye crop is removed, will increase the growth of the clover and grass.

WIRES FOR CUTTING BUTTER

Excellent Arrangement of Ohio Man for Making Small Square Pieces for Individual Use.

For the speedy and neat division of a cake of butter into a number of small square pieces for individual use, the butter cutter designed by an Ohio man seems to fill the bill admirably. A standard has a cutter frame rotatable upon it. A platform holds the butter cake, and at the end of the platform is another frame, like the footboard of a bed, with two fine wires bisecting it both ways. The rotatable frame

Keeping Milk in Summer.

When ice or cold water cannot be obtained, or where a can of milk has to be left in a place where water and ice cannot be conveniently used, a wet cloth—preferably flannel—wrapped around the can is an aid in keeping milk cool.

One end of the cloth is best left extending from the bottom of the can, and immersed in a pail of water. A large amount of the sun rays falling on the wet cloth is consumed in evaporating moisture, and is thus prevented from reaching the milk. So long as the cloth is kept wet it is a protection, but as soon as it becomes dry heat passes through it to the milk uninterrupted.

DECIDE TO SELL SHIPS TO GREECE

CONGRESS CONCURS WITH THE SENATE IN APPROVING DEAL

$12,000,000 PRICE AGREED ON

Protests of Turkish Government Against Selling War Vessels to Ancient Enemy is Not Given Consideration.

Washington—Sale of the American battleships Idaho and Mississippi to Greece was approved late Tuesday by the house, which accepted by a vote of 174 to 87 a senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill to authorize the transaction and the building of a dreadnaught with the proceeds. Formal protest from Turkey was not altered the plans of the administration, and the two warships, probably will be in the hands of agents of the Greek government within a week.

Representatives of the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. and the Bethlehem Steel Co., who have been acting as intermediaries in the negotiations, will call at the navy department and hand to Secretary Daniels a certified check for about $12,000,000, the price agreed on.

The Mississippi is now at Pensacola navy yard, and it will be necessary to unload from her the supplies and personal property of the officers and enlisted men and place her in the hands of officers and crew to be provided by the Newport News Co. to take her to Athens. The Idaho is at Gibraltar, with a number of midshipmen aboard on their summer cruise from the naval academy. Though no definite arrangements have been made, it is believed the boys will be transferred with the ship's company to the battleships Illinois and Missouri, also in the Mediterranean, and the Idaho will be turned over to a Greek crew.

RAILROAD WINS BIG SUIT

Land Worth Five Hundred Millions Given to Southern Pacific By Decision.

Washington—A decision favoring the title claimed by the Southern Pacific railroad to 200,000 acres of California oil land worth $500,000,000 was given Monday by the supreme court in two test cases of Edmund Burke and J. J. Lamprecht.

The decision was unanimous. The court, while holding generally in favor of the Southern Pacific railroad's title, held that the government still may bring suits to set aside the railroad patents for fraud, but the railroad's title is safe against collateral attack by private persons to get mineral grants for the lands and claiming title superior to that of the railroad.

LITTLE GIRL DIES OF BURNS

Clings to Mother When Flames Envelop Her Body.

Port Huron, Mich.—Her body a pillar of flames, 12-year-old Lett Pickard clung tenaciously to her mother Monday evening, and not until neighbors interfered would the little girl release her hold, with the result that she was burned so terribly that death resulted at the City hospital a short time later. The mother, while terribly seared about the hands and face, will recover.

The girl undertook to pour some kerosene into the kitchen stove and in a twinkling the oil exploded and she was enveloped in flames.

SUCCESS WITH A LONG ROW OF CARROTS

Some of the Carrots From the Long Row.

(By FRANK L. RISLEY.)

It extended the whole length of our kitchen garden and I planted it for curiosity and for the pretty green foliage.

The sowing was thick and not much cultivation was given them.

The roots were large size, short, and some of them weighed nearly a pound, and had they been carefully thinned out might have exceeded that.

From the trail we had all the carrots the family and stock needed for the season.

PRACTICAL HINTS FOR FRUIT GROWER

Constant Planting is Necessary to Keep Peach Orchard Thoroughly Up to the Mark.

Whenever we see a farmer, particularly in the peach belt, buying peaches, we feel that one part of his education has been neglected.

There are scores of communities in which about one-half of the residents grow their own peaches and the other half buy from them, and then emit a wail that they cannot grow peaches themselves.

Peaches perhaps do best on sandy soil which, thoroughly enriched and cultivated, is now growing, in many parts of the country, excellent fruit.

No matter how thrifty our peach orchard may be, constant planting is necessary to keep it thoroughly up to the mark, because the trees develop and mature rapidly and are therefore short lived.

Peach trees decay more readily than any other fruit tree. No reason now why fruit should not go to market packed in the most attractive manner. Boxes and hampers are being made of paper, and are just as cheap as wood.

There is almost as much in the selling of fruit as in raising it, and fruit that is well packed in attractive packages, always brings the best prices.

It is a sad mistake to plant young trees in the midst of old and worm-eaten trees, particularly when no attention is paid to the eradication of insects.

It is permissible to allow a saw in an orchard occasionally, but it becomes pretty nearly a crime to take an ax among the trees.

Not much use to spray for leaf-curl after the buds break. We tried to convince a man of this fact when we saw him spraying during the middle of June. He said he was spraying to prevent leaf-curl, but did not know what caused it. Do you?

Orchard soil must be rich in organic matter, and for this purpose, if no other, clover crops are valuable.

Corn for Silage.

If corn is for silage the best time to cut it is when it is in the dough stage; it keeps the best and contains the largest amount of food when just beyond the milk and just before entering the grain stage.

FOUNDATION OF UTMOST CONSIDERATION

Asphalt Used as a Platform in Front of This Modern Barn.

(By O. P. PENNOCK, Colorado Agricultural College.)

Failure in concrete structure can usually be traced to one or more of the following causes: Poor foundation, wrong proportioning of materials, insufficient mixing, and freezing.

In all structures, the foundation is the first and one of the most important considerations. The sand and broken stone should be tested for voids, so as to determine the proper proportioning of the materials. No set proportions can be given, as the voids will differ in sand from different places.

It will pay one to experiment with carrots, and get a sure crop. If one person won't eat them another will.

From our very small trial of this variety, which is easily pulled, we reaped a very satisfactory harvest of carrots and the work spent upon them was limited.

We were not troubled by bugs or pests of any kind, and that alone proved them a success.

GOOD SUCCESS IN CULTURE OF CELERY

Profitable Plant is Not as Generally Grown as it Should Be—Mucky, Damp Soil is Best.

(By W. H. UNDERWOOD.)

I have good success in growing celery for the market, and do not believe this profitable plant is as generally grown as it should be.

I plant the seed in a bed in May, after the ground is thoroughly warm. I make the bed in rich, damp and not wet, soil, pulverize it as finely as possible and drill the seed scantily in shallow rows eight inches apart.

As high as 5,000 plants may be secured from one ounce of seed.

The seeds germinate slowly, often taking two weeks or more to appear above ground. If the weather becomes dry I partially shade the young plants with strips of thin boards.

When three inches high I clip off the tops of the leaves to make the plants stocky. In six weeks I transplant into larger beds, clipping off the tap roots as well as leaves, and set them two inches apart.

In July I set the plants in rows five feet apart, and eight inches apart in the row. When about a foot high I begin to draw earth against the rows and between the plants. Later this process is repeated until all the stalks and part of the leaves are covered. This keeps the stalks white and tender.

When the growing season is over I place wide boards along the sides of the rows, to blanch the stalks still more.

Unless the ground is richer than is necessary for most garden vegetables and is very moist, celery will not give satisfaction.

Unleached ashes and well rotted manure are the best fertilizers, and they must be applied liberally.

Mucky or damp black land, properly drained is best for celery. It is useless to try to grow successfully in dry upland unless the land can be properly irrigated in some way.

Room for More Pure-Breds.

There are not so many pure-bred bulls among the farmers as there ought to be for ideal results. Let there be more interest in improving the herd. A good bull is the first consideration.

WANTED TO KNOW THE FIGURE

Fortune Hunter's Mother Was Not Dealing in Uncertainties, If She Could Help It.

Miss Jeannette Gilder, the brilliant critic, toyed with a pink and gold mustache cup at the mustache cup tea concluding the Bad Taste exhibition in New York.

"The mustache cup," said Miss Gilder, "holds its own even better than the hand-painted cuspidor. But, after all, there is spiritual as well as material bad taste, and a spiritual bad taste exhibition is now in order.

"In the forefront of it I'd put the fortune hunter. Not all our fortune hunters come from across the water. I heard of one the other day who belongs to the oldest family in America.

"But his family is very poor, and so he and his mother have decided that he must marry for money. They were discussing recently, the pair of them, a western girl.

"Her fortune is large but vague," said the mother. "Besides, she is gauche. Her feet are broad and flat. She has a gold front tooth. Her French is execrable. She—"

"Oh, I could make something out of her," the young fortune hunter asserted confidently.

"Yes, but how much—that's the question," said his mother.

Lowest Bidder.

"I have come to ask for the hand of your daughter," announced the young man.

"Have a chair," said her father, kindly. "I presume you have made an estimate of what it will cost to keep my daughter in the style to which she has been accustomed?"

"I have, sir."

"And your figures?"

"Ten thousand dollars a year."

"I'm sorry, my boy," said the older man, "but I cannot afford to throw away $2,000 a year. Another suitor has figured he can do it for $8,000."

Job a Secondary Consideration.

Brother Buckaloo—Whitewash yo' woodshed for two dollars, sah?

The Colonel—I have no woodshed.

Brother Buckaloo—Scuse me, boss, but it don't make no difference to me whudder yo' ain't got no woodshed or not. It's de money I's lookin' out for.

Child Acts Surgeon's Role.

Sarah Shaffer, thirteen years old, of Los Angeles, Cal., developed into a little heroine when her five-year-old sister fell on the sidewalk while at play and shattered her elbow. Dr. Edward G. Wiley, chief police surgeon, explained patiently over the telephone how the splint should be put on, and Sarah made such a good job of it as to win the admiration of all who saw the tiny patient when she arrived at the receiving hospital with her little amateur nurse. The children's father is at the county hospital and their mother went to visit him. Maybelle fell and broke her arm. Sarah called up the receiving hospital, but owing to the distance was advised to call one of the district doctors. She could raise none, and again called the receiving hospital. Doctor Wiley told Sarah what to do to relieve the baby's pain, while the ambulance raced out to the Shaffer home, and Sarah obeyed instructions to the letter.

Too Late.

On an Atlantic City pier, gazing sadly out over the blue water, a veteran of the Civil war talked about the late General Sickles.

"A good man," he said, "a brave man, but a most theatrical one. In the black tragedy of his youth, he was kind to his wife, but something marred, something vitiated his kindness—I think it was theatricalism—and the poor young woman died two years after he took her back.

"Once, at an army reunion, I heard Sickles rebuke a man who was running down wives and marriages. Sickles said with a queer smile, a significant smile, perhaps:

"Ah, Jim, the trouble with the average married man is that he doesn't know what a jewel his wife is till he comes to put her in a casket."

Fooled Once.

Little Francis was not to be fooled twice.

The heavy black clouds had massed in the east and west, the lightning was flashing fiercely between the heavy, incessant rolling of the thunder.

Francis was terribly frightened, and his fond mother had gathered her young hopeful into her arms and tried logically to calm his fears.

"Don't be afraid, darling. There's nothing to fear. God sends the thunderstorm to clear the air, water the flowers and make it cooler for us. Now, don't cry, dear; it won't harm you, and everything will be better when it's over."

The little fellow listened intently, and as his mother finished he looked up at her gravely and said: "No, no, mother, you talk exactly the way you did last week when you took me to the dentist to have my tooth pulled."

Post Toasties

For That Bedtime Snack

The kiddies need something that is dainty and appetizing, don't they? And you want to be sure that they have a food that is easily digested—one that will not disturb their sleep.

Post Toasties are surprisingly good at any time.

They are made of the hearts of the finest Indian corn, perfectly cooked, delicately sweetened and salted, rolled into thin, ribbonary flakes and toasted to a crisp, golden brown.

They have that indescribable flavour—sweet and delicious, that so delights the taste.

Just pour from the package and add cream and sugar, or sprinkle over fresh berries or fruit.

Easy to serve and mighty good.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

This Farmer Man Knew Something About Crows

WASHINGTON.—Consider crows: A farmer man was going along a business street up Georgetown way when, above the clash of traffic, he heard a sound that caused him to look upward. And there on a chimney ledge perched a crow shrilling out his:

"Caw, caw, caw." While the farmer man was craning his neck, another man, in passing, paused to inquire fraternally: "Pet of yours got away?" The answer went off like an explosion:

"What in thunder do you suppose a farmer wants with a crow except to shoot him? I'm plagued to death every year of my life with the darn things watchin' my corn hills from the fence rails, and the first thing I hear when I get to town is this infernal cawin'. What do you reckon that rascal up yonder means by wasting his time here where there are no crops to rob, huh?"

"Oh, we've got a rookery of 40,000 crows near Arlington, and I've watched their goings and comings for forty years. You could time a clock by their movements. Every morning in the early gray they fly down the Potomac to their feeding grounds."

"That's where they get me, blank 'em!" The farmer man made his adjective good and strong—no, not good, just strong!

"Live along the eastern shore?"

"No, sir; I'm from old Charles county, God bless her—"

"You don't say! I've got relatives down in that section—fine people, too—and at dusk you ought to see those crows come trailing home in a long, black line, high up in the sky, in clear weather and sailing low in storms. Oh, you can't put me against crows, friend. I've watched them too long."

"That's how I got my opinion—by watchin' 'em, with a shot gun. The rascals are so sharp, though, these days, doggone 'em, that it's hard work getting a pop at them. And you can't frighten 'em with scarecrows any more. Blank it, sir, they light on 'em, right before your eyes."

"Caw, caw, caw," shrilled the crow.

Not So Bad as Cynics Would Have Us Believe

A MAN was limping through Lafayette square.

It was so early of a Sunday morning that the grounds were empty except for the man and a lone person who was coming down a path toward him, and the same primeval stillness lay over the streets outside, not counting the iconoclastic rattle of passing cars.

The man limped because of a stiff leg that had to be helped out with a cane, and it was a slow limp because, again, his architecture included a bay-window front incompatible with high speed. He carried a newspaper and was lumbering toward a tree-shaded bench, when—

Something in the grass caught his eye. It must have been an important find, for, stiff and stout as he was, he made an elaborate effort to reach down to it—and failed.

Then he straightened up, gave a jiu-jitsu twist to his body and tried to stoop sideways. He failed again.

Nobody wants to be officious, but the lone person who had come along and was about to pass thought it might be a case of dropped specs, or something vital like that, and volunteered first aid.

"Thank you, madam. I would very much like to have one of these white clovers if I might tax your kindness."

The lone person picked exactly one clover from the white powdered grass, and handed it to him. The man accepted it with a bubble of confidence due the occasion.

"These little blooms take me back a half century to the farm that was my home when I was a boy."

The woman smiled appreciative recognition of the sentiment as she passed on; the man lumbered over to his bench and—well, that was really all there was to it except—

When a stiff, stout man, over fifty, can carry about with him enough honest boyhood to prize a clover for the sake of its associations, the world can't be half so bad as the cynics would have us believe.

What the Bride Went Away In

A GEM of a dress is shown here, in this copy of a French model by one of the greatest of those designers who have vindicated the art and precedence of Paris. This three-piece dress, made by Kurzman for Miss Wilson, makes almost no departure from the original design which inspired it.

Corbeau, or raven's bill blue, which is so dark as to be near black, and so clear that it is a fascinating shade, is the color. It seems to be suited to the materials used, which were gabardine and charmeuse.

The bodice is made of dark blue chiffon over white. Over the shoulders are braided straps of gabardine, and the belt is made of gabardine covered with 12 rows of narrow silk braid. The bodice opens over vestee and collar of white organdy edged with a rose and green-flowered ribbon border, fastened in front by three ribbon buttons. The sleeves are long and made over white chiffon, ending in a wide cuff of 16 rows of narrow black braid.

The short skirt is made of gabardine and has three circular flounces starting at the sides. These are fastened at the back with a strap of small black silk tassels. The flounces are attached to corbeau charmeuse and about one inch of this shows between them. The flounces and the bottom of the skirt are edged with black silk braid.

The coat is a combination of the gabardine and charmeuse. The front is of the charmeuse, which extends over the shoulders and upper part of the back. It is gathered in at the collar.

Carrying out the idea of combining the two materials, the three-quarter sleeves of gabardine are topped with charmeuse. The edges are bound with flat silk braid. There is a soft girde of gabardine ending in front with an oval charmeuse buckle.

This quiet-looking but really elaborate costume is of that fashionable type which has replaced the more severely tailor-made. It is a gown that presupposes many things in the way of luxurious traveling and may be taken as a model of an afternoon or visiting gown of cloth which will answer many requirements.

WRONG KING OF GARDENING

Form That Patient Had Been Indulging In Was Not What Doctor Would Have Recommended.

"Now comes the season when the wife goes to the country and the husband, in the words of the immortal song, shouts 'Hooray! Hooray!'"

Thus Jofone S. McWade, in an after dinner speech at Duluth began his response to a toast on "The Ladies."

"When the ladies are with us, we are safe," he resumed, "but when they go off to country or shore, leaving us in town alone, then our troubles begin."

"A man one summer day called on a doctor."

"Doc," he said, "I'm all run down."

"You look it, too," said the doctor sympathetically. "I'm not going to prescribe drugs for a man in your condition. No, sir, what I'm going to prescribe for you is gardening."

"The patient started and his unhealthy pallor turned to a dull brick red."

"But, doc," he said, "gardening is the cause of all my trouble."

"Humph, what kind of gardening?" said the doctor incredulously.

"Roof," the man replied.

Modern Business Man.

"How was the game, Plimpton?" asked Withersley.

"Don't ask me," growled Plimpton. "Just as I was starting for the park a man came in and insisted on talking business to me the whole afternoon."

"That's tough. He took up your time and you got nothing."

"Oh, I made $1,000, confound the luck."

Limitation of Art.

The head of a certain Washington family was recently approached by his son, just nearing his majority.

"Father," said he, "I want a talk with you concerning my future. I have decided to become an artist. Have you any objections?"

The old man scratched his head effectively and replied:

"Well, no, son—provided, of course, that you don't draw on me."

eruption disfigured face

Lock Box 35, Maurice, Ia.—"In the spring of 1911 our little daughter, age five years, had a breaking out on her lip and part of her cheek that we took for ringworm. It resembled a large ringworm, only it differed in that it was covered with watery blisters that itched and burned terribly, made worse by her scratching it. Then the blisters would break through and let out a watery substance. She was very cross and fretful while she had it and had very little rest at night. When the eruption was at its worst the teacher of the school sent her home and would not allow her to attend until the disfigurement of her face was gone."

"I wrote and received a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, which we used according to directions, and they gave instant relief, so we bought some more. It gradually grew better. We kept on using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in three or four months the child was entirely cured."

PRINCESS THEATRE

COMING ATTRACTIONS

For next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the Princess will offer Lewis & Lewis, known far and wide as the greatest exponents of "Travel Pictures" that are before the picture fans today. They present over 3000 feet of scenic, educational and travel pictures each night, with a good comedy or two thrown in for good measure. The pictures are all shown accompanied with natural sound and talking effects. Among the travel pictures shown are "Canadian Rockies in the Winter," "Paris," "Portugal," "The Alps," "Yellowstone Park" etc. Don't forget that the Princess will be open next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday presenting the above pictures, with Warner's features on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Warner's features that are to be presented at the Princess next week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday are as follows: "Twilight" featuring Miss Gene Gauntier in a story of the great Northwest in three parts on Thursday, July 2. "Disaster in Shaft 18" a powerful story of a brave mining engineer, who saves his employer from ruin and poverty, on Friday evening, and The second installment of "Zingo" on Saturday, July 4th. This second "Zingo" picture is "Zingo in Africa," and is in four parts.

So sensational are the Mexican war pictures made by Warner's features that they are without doubt the biggest drawing cards in the film game today. Manager McLaren considers himself lucky that he has been able to hook one for Saturday night. The title of this feature war drama is "The Raiders of the Mexican Border" a story of the great Southwest, replete with stirring incidents of today on the Mexican border all shown with a realism so vivid that audiences can scarcely keep from rising from their seats. It employs 1500 people, 400 horses and two troops of cavalry in its making, making one of the most expensive films ever made. Look for a banner crowd at the Princess Saturday evening.—Adv.

A cross in the circle over the column will not vote for the party candidates as in the regular fall election, and therefore is of no other use than that of indicating your party affiliations. You can vote for any candidate you care to, regardless of former party affiliations, if you confine your voting to any one column on the ballot. You will find my name in the Democratic column.

ANN ARBOR—Considerable excitement followed the finding of several bones, including those of a woman's foot, by workmen excavating for the foundation for the girls' residence hall on South University avenue, Friday. A POPULAR VERDICT

Based on Evidence of Chelsea People.
Grateful thousands tell it—Of weak backs made strong—Of weak kidneys made well—Urinary disorders corrected. Chelsea people add their testimony. They praise Doan's Kidney Pills. Chelsea evidence is now complete. Chelsea testimony is confirmed. Reports of early relief substantiated.

Merit doubly proved by test of time. Let a Chelsea citizen speak.
Mrs. Charles Grant, 604 S. Main St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "I gladly confirm the statement I gave praising Doan's Kidney Pills a few years ago. They promptly relieved me of backache and kidney trouble. I am constantly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to my friends."

Mrs. Grant is only one of many Chelsea people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Grant had—the remedy backed by home testimony, 50c all stores.
