Wants a Man.

The state of Michigan want a man to shoot wolves. He must be a regular "Dick Dead Eye" with a gun and must be willing to be marooned on Isle Royale all winter. This island, according to the game warden's department, is becoming over-run with wolves. Game is disappearing under the attacks of the ferocious animals and the department has decided that it will employ a hunter. The job will pay well for the man selected, with extra pay as deputy warden and in addition to that will get the state bounty on wolf pelts.

Dispatcher Is Missing.

That train on this division of the Ann Arbor railway were being operated Saturday night without the supervision of a dispatcher in Ann Arbor was discovered at 1 a. m. Sunday when the conductors of two freight trains tried to find him for orders. Not only was the dispatcher, Frank Miller, gone, but the cash drawer had been emptied of $113. Miller's hat was found in the office. He had reported the arrival and departure of a train at 9:30 p. m. and disappeared between that time and 1 a. m. Miller went to work in Ann Arbor at 6 p. m. Saturday, having been transferred from Durand.

A Contemptible Act.

Some one scattered a quantity of rusted tacks, pointed glass and nails in the drive leading from Grant street to the garage at the residence of Frank Leach some time Monday night. Tuesday Mr. Leach had 12 tacks removed from one tire on his auto and before he discovered the tacks and glass in the drive he had punctured the tires on the machine 16 times and one of the inner tubes was completely ruined. Mr. Leach has gathered up the junk, and says that he will pay a reward of $50 for information that will lead to the conviction of the guilty party. Mr. Leach has had nine warrants issued for violating the speed ordinance, not a single one of whom has been a resident of this place, and six of them have pleaded guilty and paid a fine and costs. Three residents of Detroit will probably be brought here Friday and called upon to pay up for their speeding through this place. To say the least, the act was a contemptible one.

The Progressive Ticket.

Members of the Progressive party held a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building of Ann Arbor last Thursday and recommended the nomination of the following candidates on the Progressive ticket:
Sheriff—Henry Wilson, Lima township.
County Clerk—Herbert A. Hodge, Ann Arbor township.
County Treasurer—James H. Hopkins, Ypsilanti.
Register of Deeds—Herbert D. Armstrong, Ann Arbor.
Surveyor—Leigh G. Palmer, Chelsea.
Drain Commissioner—K. H. Wheeler, Dexter.
Coroners—Dr. Floyd E. Westfall, Ypsilanti; Dr. Harry H. Avery, Chelsea.
No nomination was recommended for the office of prosecuting attorney. The candidacy of Henry R. Patten-gill for governor and of Hubert F. Probert of Jackson for congressman was endorsed, as was that of John I. Breck of Jackson and Mr. Lamb of Adrian, for state central committee-men.

Six and Six Plan.

The high schools of Michigan are each year increasing in importance. The last five years has seen a remarkable movement of rural students to the high school. There has also been a marked effort on the part of authorities to make the high school teach the things that will be of most use to the boys and girls. For the purpose of aiding in this problem the Department of Public Instruction will publish in August a suggestive Course of Study for Michigan high schools. It will indicate work along four distinct lines: college preparatory, agriculture, domestic arts and commercial. The work will be outlined so that pupils may begin to choose the line they wish to pursue in the seventh grade instead of the ninth as at present. This will make the division between the elementary school and high school come in the seventh grade. It is believed the large number of children who now leave school in the seventh and eighth grades will be held in school by giving them work which meets especially with their needs. This organization will enable schools to teach all grades above the sixth by the departmental plan, that is by having a special teacher for each subject. Moreover the pupil will advance by passing subjects instead of grades.
Present conditions in Michigan schools are such that the proposed plan can be adopted easily. Several cities of the state have already tried the plan. In other states also the plan is meeting with favor wherever tried. Because it divides the school course into two parts, each covering six years, the proposed organization is commonly called the Six and Six Plan.

Chelsea Druggist Has Valuable Agency

H. H. Fenn Co. has the Chelsea agency for the simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-ika, the remedy which became famous by curing appendicitis. This simple remedy has powerful action and drains such surprising amounts of old matter from the body that JUST ONE DOSE relieves sour stomach, gas on the stomach and constipation almost IMMEDIATELY. The QUICK action of Adler-ika is astonishing. Adv.

Successful Sunday School Picnic.

Tuesday of this week the members of the M. E. Sunday school held their annual picnic at Vandercook lake. There were about one hundred and forty-five tickets sold and two special cars on the D. J. & C. left the Chelsea waiting room at 8:10 in the morning. A very enjoyable day was spent and not a single accident happened to mar the pleasure of the picnic party and in every respect it was one of the most successful picnics ever given by the M. E. Sunday school of Chelsea.

Roy C. Leach.

Roy C. Leach was born in Paw Paw March 31, 1873, and died at the U. of M. hospital in Ann Arbor, Tuesday forenoon, July 21, 1914, aged 41 years, 3 months and 21 days.

The deceased was the youngest surviving son of the late James and Cordelia Leach, and for the last twenty-five years has resided most of the time in this vicinity. Mr. Leach was badly burned on May 29, and has been in the hospital since that date. At the time of the accident he was assisting with the work of putting a new roof on the town hall and the staging at the melting kettle gave away and he was thrown to the ground, a pall of boiling asphalt landed on him scalding his left arm the entire length. Up to two or three days before his death the hospital authorities thought that he would recover. Mr. and Mrs. Mason Whipple, of Lima, were at his bedside when the end came.

He is survived by two brothers, Frank A., of Chelsea, Charles, of Phoenix, Arizona, two sisters, Mrs. Mason Whipple, of Lima, Mrs. Lorenz Bagge, of this place, one uncle, Chas. Downer, one aunt, Mrs. Allison Knee, both of Chelsea, and a number of nephews and nieces.

The remains were brought here and the funeral was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Leach at 2 o'clock this afternoon, Rev. C. J. Dole officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Who Shall March.

In regard to who is entitled to march in the parade at the National Encampment, a Chelsea comrade received the following letter from National Commander Washington Gardner:

"The National Encampment, which is the supreme authority, has fixed this matter and I have no alternative even if I had the disposition, but to obey. They have declared that only the Grand Army of the Republic, and the sons of veterans as escort, should be in line, and in so far as I am concerned that order will be strictly adhered to."

Pastor Gives Up Son.

John Cooper, formerly a student in the University of Michigan, and a son of Rev. D. H. Cooper, of Detroit, who was arrested last spring on a charge of issuing bad checks in Ann Arbor, has been surrendered to the Washenaw county authorities by his father, who was his bondsman. Rev. Cooper stated that an effort by his son to pass bad checks in Youngstown, O., caused him to take the action. He petitioned the probate court to order an inquiry as to his sanity with a view of committing him to the psychopathic hospital in Ann Arbor.

Princess Theatre.

The Saturday night feature at the Princess is an unusual dramatic feature in three parts "A Spy for a Day." This story produced by the celebrated Ambrosia company is said to be as thrilling a war story as has ever been shown on a picture screen. Mr. Neff will sing one of Chas. K. Harris latest song hits, "Suppose I Met You Face to Face." This song has taken the country by storm and all should hear Mr. Neff sing it.

Can you imagine a more thrilling moment than the finish of an exciting horse race with the favorite coming into the stretch two lengths behind the field? In "Master Bob's Last Race," there are numerous scenes taken at the fashionable racecourse just outside the city of Paris, where Parisian society goes on dress parade each year during the week in which the grand steeplechase is run off. In action, plot and photography, this gripping feature production excels through sheer merit.

Throughout the three parts of this exciting production, there is an undercurrent of suppressed excitement—tense scenes that will keep your interest aroused as no other type of photoplay could. "Master Bob's Last Race" will affect you like a tonic, and send you home with that satisfied feeling which follows an evening of delightful pleasure. It is truly a remarkable feature—one that you cannot afford to miss. See this thriller at the Princess Tuesday evening, July 28th.

SALINE—The fourth reunion of the Bond school district will be held at the school house on August 13.

REVISED SYSTEM OF STUDY URGED

SUPT. KEELER SETS FORTH ADVANTAGES OF "SIX-AND-SIX" PLAN.

KEEP STUDENTS IN SCHOOL

Work Along Elective Lines May Be Begun in Seventh Grade and Four Lines of Study Are Offered.

Lansing, Mich.—A revised system of study for pupils in Michigan schools, which, its backers assert, should be of great importance in keeping students in school after passing through the seventh and eighth grades, will be urged during the coming year by Fred L. Keeler, superintendent of public instruction. Supt. Keeler stated Tuesday that his department is now preparing an outline of the proposed system.

"The course will indicate work along four distinct lines—college preparatory, agriculture, domestic art and commercial," says Keeler. "The work will be outlined so that pupils may begin to choose the line they wish to pursue in the seventh grade instead of the eighth. This will make the division between the elementary school and the high school come with the seventh grade. It is believed that the large number who now leave school in the seventh and eighth grades will be held in school by giving them work especially which meets their needs. This organization also will enable schools to teach all grades above the sixth by the department plan—that is, by having a special teacher for each subject. Moreover, the pupils will advance by passing subjects instead of grades.

"Present conditions in Michigan schools are such that the proposed plan can be adopted easily. Several cities of the state have already tried it. In other states the plan is meeting with favor wherever tried. Because it divides the school course into two parts, covering six years, the proposed organization is commonly called the 'six-and-six' plan."

PLANT BURNS AT ST. JOSEPH

Forty Thousand Dollar Loss Sustained By Sash and Door Factory.

St. Joseph, Mich.—A $40,000 fire in the heart of the manufacturing district between this city and Benton Harbor, early Tuesday morning, destroyed the sash and door plant of the W. A. Preston Co. and threatened to wipe out a half mile of lumber yards along the canal. The fire originated in the boiler room of the Preston plant and one wing of the structure was in flames before discovery was made. The Benton Harbor fire department was hampered early in the fight by poor water pressure.

The Preston mills are among the oldest in southwestern Michigan. John Arbuckle, superintendent, was injured when a stack fell across the power leads. A wire caught him under the chin. A frame structure, the building went fast and people from all parts of the city rushed to the scene, attracted by high flames.

Aged Wanderer Is Killed.

Flint, Mich.—Clifford Beebe, 70, died Tuesday morning in Hurley hospital from injuries received Monday night, when he was struck by a Saginaw and Flint car a short distance north of the city. He and his wife are tramping through the country working at odd jobs. They have no home. They had been picking berries north of the city and Beebe was sitting on a platform while they waited for a car to go to Clio. As the car drew up to the platform it caught Beebe's legs, breaking one of them in two places and badly cutting it. He died from the shock.

Farmer Killed Under Wagon.

Ithaca, Mich.—Frank Walters, 45, was run over and killed by his own wagon after racing with death for a block. He was walking behind his team of horses and his heavy load of lumber when the animals bolted, giving him no time to escape. A hundred people saw him lose his frantic dash, when one of the horses swerved tripped him and sent him under the wheels.

MICHIGAN NEWS ITEMS

Lightning struck Mike Superczynski's house near Bessemer Wednesday night, following an electric wire. Another bolt killed two cows in the field. The house was only slightly damaged.

The foundation for the new St. Clair county poor house has been laid and work of construction will be pushed rapidly, the contractors planning to have the building ready by fall.

Acting on the advice of Attorney-General Fellows, Secretary of State Martindale will refuse petitions for the placing of names of candidates for the state central committee on the ballots for the August primary. The last legislature passed a law providing for the election of the committees at the primaries, but the attorney-general held that the law was defective.

HUERTA'S RULE HAS BEEN ONE OF BLOODSHED

Killing of Madero Marked Beginning of Despotism.

MADE VAIN BOAST TO TAFT

Dictator Declared He Would Restore Peace at Once, but Refusal of United States to Recognize Him Assured His Downfall.

Victoriano Huerta took oath as provisional president of Mexico February 19, 1913, the day after President Francisco I. Madero, Jr., had been arrested at the national palace.

Three days later Madero and Jose Maria Pino Suarez, vice-president, were shot to death while on a midnight ride under guard from the palace to the penitentiary. The precise manner of their death has never been explained.

One of Huerta's first acts as provisional president was to telegraph William H. Taft, then president of the United States, the following message: "I have the honor to inform you that I have overthrown the government. The forces are with me, and from now on peace and prosperity will reign."

PROVOKES CIVIL WAR.

The Mexican republic, however, was at once plunged into civil war again, notwithstanding the issuance by Huerta of a proclamation of general amnesty. The Sonora state congress officially repudiated the Huerta government before Huerta settled himself comfortably in the presidential chair.

Zapata, revolutionary leader to the south of the capital, after negotiating a few days with the new regime, went back to his guerrilla campaign. Salazar, one of the highest generals in the army, denounced Huerta.

Carranza, constitutionalist leader in Chihuahua, assailed Huerta in a bitter statement made public at San Antonio.

Francisco Villa announced himself an adherent of Madero and joined the northern army.

Pasqual Orozco of the clan of the northern revolutionists was the lone notable figure among the disaffected who declared for the new government.

TAFT LEAVES PROBLEM.

President Taft, nearing the end of his term, left to his successor the problem of adjusting diplomatic relations with Mexico. To Woodrow Wilson Huerta sent felicitations on the day of the American president's inauguration.

Hampered at the outset of his administration by the refusal of the United States to recognize him, Huerta soon faced growing difficulties in raising funds to run his government. His uneasy hold on affairs was weakened by minor constitutionalist victories in the north and by recurring rumors of a break with Felix Diaz, nephew of Porfirio Diaz and Huerta's ally in the overthrow of Madero.

HUERTA CALLS ELECTION.

May 1 Huerta announced that he would urge congress to call elections in October to choose his successor. The congress selected October 26 as the date of the election, and a decree to that effect was issued by Huerta June 3.

Felix Diaz, who had announced himself as a candidate for the presidency, was sent to Japan July 17.

Henry Lane Wilson, American ambassador, was recalled to Washington, and Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires, was left in charge of American interests in Mexico.

REJECTS PEACE EFFORT.

Early in August it became known that President Wilson intended to send John Lind, former governor of Minnesota, to Mexico as his personal representative in an endeavor to arrange a basis for the republic's peace. Huerta announced that he would not tolerate foreign interference.

Nevertheless Mr. Lind delivered his note from President Wilson. Huerta rejected all proposals made by the American government, chief of which were the suggestions that he resign and not be a candidate election day.

Relations between Mexico and the United States became acute. President Wilson proclaimed his policy in an address before congress to which was attached the correspondence between Mr. Lind and the Huerta administration.

HUERTA ARRESTS DEPUTIES.

Huerta was attacked in the Mexican senate October 5 by Senator Dominguez, who had the hardihood to speak what was in the minds of himself and some of his colleagues. Dominguez disappeared.

The chamber of deputies adopted a resolution calling for an investigation. To this Huerta's reply was dramatic and swift. He marched a column of troops to the deputies' chamber, seized 110 of them and threw them into prison.

Through Mr. O'Shaughnessy the United States made representations against violence to the imprisoned deputies.

In the election campaign certain influence close to the dictator worked for his return to the presidency, with General Blanquet as his running mate, and lent color to the persistent report that Huerta really desired to be elected and that his pretenses to the contrary were a sham.

U. S. DEMANDS HE RESIGN.

When it became certain that the elections had resulted in no constitutional choice on account of the failure of voters to go to the polls, the American government peremptorily called on him to resign.

In a statement to the diplomatic corps November 9 Huerta announced that he would declare the result of the election null and order another election.

November 12 Huerta refused to accede to the American demand for his resignation, and Mr. Lind left Mexico City for Vera Cruz.

Meantime the United States dispatched warships to the Mexican coast and Americans continued to leave Mexico.

U. S. VEERS TO CARRANZA.

Definite proposals were made by the United States to Carranza and his adherents.

Several of the European powers, notably Great Britain, Germany and France, gave strong support to the policy of the United States.

The constitutionalists grew stronger and continued their advance to the south. They captured Victoria, Chihuahua, Juarez and Tullacan.

The situation became so critical that Great Britain, Germany, France, Spain and Japan ordered warships to Mexican waters.

Fighting continued at Tampico and many other centers. Torreon soon was taken by the constitutionalists.

RAISES EMBARGO ON ARMS.

An embargo placed on the exportation of arms from the United States to Mexico was raised early in February of the present year.

A large number of American troops were concentrated on the border, and the American fleet in Mexican waters was strengthened.

The constitutionalists advanced on Torreon and Monterey. The former place was captured early in April.

Then came the departure of Mr. Lind from Vera Cruz and the arrest of a party of American bluejackets at Tampico, for which an apology and salute were demanded by the United States and refused by Huerta.

AMERICANS TAKE VERA CRUZ.

April 21 American bluejackets and marines were landed at Vera Cruz in consequence of the reported arrival of a large consignment of arms and ammunition for Huerta. A number of Americans were killed in the street fighting. The Mexicans retired and destroyed a portion of the railroad and the Americans held the port.

Shortly after a mediation proposal from Argentina, Brazil and Chile was accepted. A conference ensued at Niagara Falls.

In the interval American troops re-leased the bluejackets at Vera Cruz. These have since remained in occupation of the port.

Tampico and Zacatecas fell into the constitutionalists' hands and the victorious armies continued their march on Mexico City, where rumors were in circulation for many weeks of the resignation of Huerta.

With Huerta's retirement the constitutionalists feel that their revolution has virtually triumphed. They turned against him the moment he overthrew Madero, the constitutional president of Mexico, in February, 1912, and have waged war with unrelenting vigor ever since.

U. S. TROOPS REMAIN IDLE.

The prospect of an early solution of the Mexican problem gave both president Wilson and Secretary Bryan much joy, naturally. American forces will not be withdrawn from Vera Cruz until a stable government has been established in Mexico City and recognition has been accorded the new government.

The feeling is general, however, that if Carranza gives guarantees to political offenders as well as the people generally recognition will be promptly extended by the United States and other nations of Central and South America, as well as Europe.

LAWYER IN PLACE OF POWER

For the First Time in History Mexican Republic Has a Civilian in Presidential Chair.

Mexico City.—Francisco Carbajal is forty-four years old, a native of the state of Campeche, and a lawyer. Almost ever since the start of his career he has occupied posts in the judiciary. In the Madero administration he was a senator, but relinquished his post to re-enter the supreme court, of which he was chief justice at the time General Huerta appointed him minister of foreign relations.

When General Porfirio Diaz determined in 1911 to treat with the Madero revolutionists, Senor Carbajal proceeded to Juarez as his commissioner. Senor Carbajal has a reputation for possessing considerable intellectual force and independence of character. His demeanor is quiet. He shuns the exuberance in verbiage and gesticulation to which Latin-Americans are prone. He is courteous, but a man of few words and little given to elaborate compliments.

Besides, he is neat and well groomed in appearance. His features indicate pure European descent, without any admixture of Indian blood. Altogether he is a man who conveys an impression of reserve power. He is a good man of business.

His probity has never been questioned. He has been sagacious and successful in investments and, while not rich, is a man of independent means. He is a man of family.

FREELAND STORES BURNED TUESDAY

BUSINESS HOUSES ON ONE SIDE OF STREET DESTROYED BY FLAMES.

EXPLOSION STARTS BLAZE

Owner of Restaurant Is Badly Burned and Milliner Loses Finger in Removing Goods From Doomed Building.

Freeland, Mich.—All of the stores on one side of Main street were burned Tuesday as the result of an explosion in the restaurant owned by Geo. Thurber. The latter was badly burned and is in a serious condition. There were five business places and three empty buildings burned to the ground.

The Saginaw fire department was rushed here on a special train, but arrived too late to be of assistance. About 200 citizens formed a bucket brigade from the river to the burning district and passed buckets of water along the line, but this proved of little use, as the stores were destroyed in a few minutes. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

Neva Pangborn, 19, the local telephone operator, who was kept busy from the moment the fire was discovered, fainted after she received word that the Saginaw department was coming.

Mrs. Edward Pierce, milliner, caught her finger between a door and casing while carrying goods from her place, and pulled the member off.

FRANK E. KIRBY HITS LAUNCH

Two Men Drown and Three Are Rescued at Detroit Sunday.

Detroit—Two men were drowned when the port paddle wheel of the steamer Frank E. Kirby, of the Ashley & Dustin line, struck an 18-foot motor boat containing five men, amidships Sunday evening in the Detroit river about 150 yards from the Studebaker plant at the foot of Clark avenue.

The other occupants were rescued by the steamer's crew, which put off in two small boats as soon as the Kirby was backed to the scene of the accident. The men who lost their lives were Frank Brown, of 208 Porter street, and Charles Valentine, of 190 Euclid avenue east. Those who were rescued are Wesley Brown, owner of the craft, James Taylor and Roy Randall, of 208 Porter street. Brown was steering the boat.

Stationary Engineers Elect Officers.

Muskegon, Mich.—Michigan branch of the National Association of Stationary Engineers elected these officers: President, John Andrews of Pontiac; vice president, Fred Tech of Flint; secretary, E. C. Smith of Kalamazoo; treasurer, Henry Badley of Muskegon; conductor, George Maloney of Jackson; doorkeeper, Edward Rose of Detroit; trustees for one year, C. H. Sisson of Muskegon, William Maute of Muskegon, and Charles White of Detroit.

Youth Drowns in Lake Orion.

Detroit—C. J. Kincaid, 19 years old, 849 Junction avenue, was drowned in Lake Orion Sunday when he and Edward J. Donohue, 276 McMillan street, Detroit, attempted to change places in the canoe in which they were riding. The canoe turned over. William Horner, a Detroit, living near Twenty-fifth street and Shady lane, succeeded in rescuing young Donohue. Kincaid was a shipping clerk for the Standard Bros., hardware dealers.

Robbers Raid Pastry Shop.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Robbers disappeared in getting but $1.50 from the cash drawer of the Cardon bakery early Sunday morning, after their fill of cakes and pies and took a substantial lunch with them when they left.

The robbery followed that of the store of A. F. Gell, two doors away. Here $75 was obtained. Entrance was effected through the transom of a rear door.

Wilson Approves Conservation Bills.

Washington.—President Wilson Monday came out in support of the dam bills agreed on at a series of White House conferences and now pending in congress. In answer to inquiries he said he believed them to be in accord with the best conservation ideas and in no sense party measures. The president said he considered himself as much a conservationist as anyone else.

MICHIGAN NEWS IN BRIEF

Leona Spates, four years old, of Flint, died Sunday night from the effects of eating berries from deadly nightshade growing in her parents' yard.

The ban is on the slot machine in Jackson county. Prosecuting Attorney Rossman has issued orders that all kinds of machine and card devices be done away with immediately. Confiscation of gum drawing cards, gum slot machines, and the regular slot machine is threatened.

Cadillac's city water has been declared unsafe by the state board of health, and all users have been notified to boil their water. Recently thousands of fish died in the lakes from which the city water is produced.

The claim of Mrs. Mary Fox, of Arcadia, against the defunct Fox & Mason Furniture Co. of Corunna, was disallowed in bankruptcy court at Bay City, Friday afternoon. She asked $20,000, claiming it was due her on notes issued by the company.

WIFE OF FORMER FRENCH MINISTER ON TRIAL

MME. HARRIETTE CAILAUX.

Paris—Troops are required to hold back the crowds from the palace of justice where the wife of Joseph Cailaux, former French minister of finance, is on trial for the killing of M. Calmette, late editor of Le Figaro, on March 16. Not since the famous trial of Mme. Steinheil in November, 1909, has public attention been aroused to such a high point as by the present trial. The intrigue of love and politics, which lay beyond the assassination and the wealth and social position of the prisoner tend to elevate it to a position to attract attention far beyond the borders of France.

BOOSTS HEALTH MOVEMENT

Dr. John I. Burkhart, Secretary of State Board Indorses Idea of County Organization.

Lansing—Indorsement of the movement for the organization of county health organizations was given Monday by Dr. John I. Burkhart, secretary of the state board of health, who declared that through such organizations the general health of the citizens of the district may be bettered to a great extent.

"Starting with Jackson county, quickly followed by Hillsdale county, the latter making the organization a permanent one, other counties have signified their intentions of organizing such associations, the latest to make arrangements for a good health week being Barry county, and we expect several others to follow," said Secretary Burkhart.

"The fact that several counties are perfecting arrangements for a good health organization is encouraging evidence of the rapidly growing spirit of sanitation among people. We earnestly plead for an organization in every county. Where conditions prove that a county organization cannot be developed, why not organize city, village and township good health movements?"

WOULD AVENGE THE MURDER OF MADERO

CARRANZA SAYS NO UNIVERSAL VENGEANCE NEED BE FEARED.

REFERS TO LINCOLN TRIAL

Foreign Landholders in Lower California Who Hold Land Grants From Diaz and Huerta to Be Ousted.

Laredo, Texas—"No nation need fear an indiscriminate taking of vengeance against the federalists," General Carranza Monday told representatives of President Wilson, according to reliable reports, which Tuesday reached the border.

When Philip C. Hanna, United States consul general, John R. Sullivan and T. Ayres Robertson questioned General Carranza as to his plans, they were told, it is said, that there would be neither universal political amnesty nor universal condemnation of political prisoners. Each case would be dealt with "according to the procedure of civilized countries which have passed through a similar stress of civil war."

It was made plain, however, that the men implicated in the death of President Madero and Vice-President Suarez would be dealt with severely. Carranza, it was said, referred to the military trial of those connected with Lincoln's assassination, which, he said "met the approval of the civilized world."

A high constitutionalist official at Nuevo Laredo, opposite here, Tuesday said General Carranza had issued an edict forbidding all constitutionalist generals becoming candidates for the presidency of Mexico at future elections.

To Annul Huerta Concessions.

Los Angeles, Cal.—American, French and Japanese landholders in Lower California, who received concessions through Huerta or Diaz, are to be ousted and their land turned over to the Mexican people by General Carranza, according to Adolfo Carrillo, local agent of the Mexican constitutionalists.

This will be accomplished when Carranza's government takes control at Mexico City, Carrillo said Tuesday. He added General Carranza had notified his agents that Ignacio Bonillas, now minister of fomento in the constitutionalist provisional cabinet, had been appointed chief engineer of a committee to conduct an investigation of land conditions in Lower California. Bonillas is a graduate of Cornell university.

Huerta Sails From Mexico.

Puerto Mexico, Mex.—The German cruiser Dresden, with General Huerta and his family and former War Minister Blanquet, Senora Blanquet and their daughter aboard, sailed at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening for Jamaica. The departure of the former chief executive was without incident, there not even being any shouts of "good-bye" to him from the docks.

TWO PERISH AS HOME BURNS

Fire at Farm House Takes Toll of Two Lives at Bingham.

Traverse City, Mich.—When fire destroyed the farm house of Will Michem, of Bingham, Monday morning, his mother, Mrs. John Martin, and his 11-year-old brother, of this city were burned to death.

Mr. Michem arose, built the fire and started out to do his morning chores. His wife, who slept next to the kitchen, was awakened by the flames falling out of the cupboard in the kitchen and managed to get out of the house with her year-old baby, after receiving several bad burns. No help could reach the occupants of the upstairs rooms.

Mrs. Martin and her son arrived Saturday to make a short visit.

WASHINGTON CITY SIDELIGHTS

Swarm of Bees Is Attraction in Capital Street

WASHINGTON—Chauncey C. Brainerd, the Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle, entered his office on Fourteenth street in the heart of the business section early the other morning and found a compact group of visitors there ahead of him. The guests were rolling about the office, not on the floor, but halfway between it and the ceiling. A swarm of bees coming from the land of no man knows where had taken possession.

Brainerd knows little about bees except that they sting, a fragment of knowledge which made him cautious. He turned on the electric fan, and the visiting swarm getting into the path of the wind passed out in a body in the window to fasten themselves in a body in the place of a storm-broken maple.

The bees were an attraction. Traffic was blocked for a while with a throng of curious but none too courageous spectators. Finally a bold one fastened a big paper box to the tree just below the bees, saying that they soon would settle in it and that when this happy result was reached he would clap the cover on and be the owner of a swarm that would bring him $20 in the market.

The bees would not go into the box. For half an hour the crowd watched expectantly, but the buzzing bunch clung to the foliage of the poplar and ignored the trap retreat. Soon there happened along James P. Hornaday, for years the Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis News. In his youth Hornaday had lived on a farm, and he knew about bees. He said: "Get a small box, put it in the box, tinkle it and the bees will enter."

The crowd told Hornaday he was a fine josh, but that it could not fall for such stuff. The correspondent, finding his advice reproached, went his way. Five minutes later a man in a wagon came along. He was a farmer, for he showed it. He took a little bell off a bicycle which was standing at the curb, put it in the box and rang it. In two seconds the bees had dropped in a bunch from the foliage into the box, the cover was clamped on and the farmer drove away with his prize.

One Side of Politics at the Nation's Capital

HE HAD a keen eye, and from the neck up he looked like a brilliant, successful young man. A survey of him from his chin down disclosed the fact that he wore a shiny evening suit a size too small for him, that he had a telltale sinking-in somewhere in the immediate vicinity of his wishbone, and the tops of his shoes were in far better condition than the soles. Altogether, he was on his uppers—a fact which he was confiding to his friend in the hotel lobby.

After a while there appeared in the distance the picture of unlimited wealth, unsullied success, and uninterrupted prosperity. Instead of a sinking-in at the wishbone, he exhibited a Dutch-window effect. His clothes fitted him to perfection. Evidently he had come out a victor in every battle he had fought against adversity.

As soon as he appeared, the young man in the small evening clothes was electrified into new life.

"Excuse me," he said to his friend. "That old duffer is from Wisconsin, and he wants to get an ambassadorship. I'm helping him to get it."

All of which is another indication that strangers looking for honors in Washington will pay large sums of money to any needy person who claims to have influence with Bill Jones, who says he has influence with Congressman Smith, who is known to have influence with Senator Jones, who must have influence with a cabinet official who has more influence than anybody else with the president.

It's a fine old graft.—Popular Magazine.

Found a Good Way to Defeat a Political Boss

THE most abject slaves of a political boss will revolt if their slavery is slung in their faces," philosophized Representative McKellar, who comes from the Memphis (Tenn.) district.

"I had a concrete example of that in my first congressional campaign," he continued. "One day I met in the street the political boss of Binghamton, a manufacturing suburb. For years he had voted the men like sheep, and he was proud of his auto-erotic rule. He had opposed General Gordon, my predecessor, and was now violently, but good-naturedly, opposing me."

"Mac," he said, "you won't get but four votes in Binghamton; there are 352 votes there altogether, and I'll poll the 348. I carry them in my vest pocket."

"We'll see about that, Tom," I replied, with a laugh.

"And thereupon, relying upon that principle of human nature I have just stated, I planned my attack upon Tom's stronghold, where I was to speak the following night."

"I got my crowd in a good humor that evening with a few preliminary stories, and then electrified them by assuring them that I did not expect their votes; that they could not vote for me, even if they wished to, for, no longer ago than yesterday, I told them, their fellow townsman had informed me that he carried all their votes but four in his vest pocket—and they would all be cast against me. I called for a show of hands from those whose votes reposed in Tom's vest pocket; not a hand! I then called for the hands of the independent voters—and every hand went up!

"And, on election day, I carried Binghamton by a handsome majority!"

Wilson Likes June Brides, But Couldn't See 'Em

PRESIDENT WILSON has no desire to spoil the honeymoon of any June bride. Unfortunately, however, affairs of state prevent him from granting all the favors asked by June brides who happen to come to Washington on their honeymoons. That is why a certain June bride and her darling hubby from Passaic, N. J., had to leave town very much disappointed.

Accompanied by the aforesaid darling hubby, and clad in a very, very diaphanous gown, this June bride strode into the executive offices to see Secretary Tumulty.

"We have just been married," announced the bride, blushing.

"Congratulations," said Tumulty.

"Isn't it delicious!" she exclaimed.

"It is," agreed the secretary.

"We want to see the president," announced the bride.

"Sorry miss—I mean madam, but he is very busy."

"But," she pouted, "John and I thought it would be just too nice if he posed with us for a photograph."

The secretary gasped and then gulped.

"Impossible," he said. "He's too busy."

"Then," exclaimed the bride, "won't you do it?"

"I am very sorry," explained Tumulty, "but the president needs no right away."

MEN'S BELONGINGS

By VERN POEHLMAN.

"Why is it," demanded pretty Mrs. Penton of a company of young matrons who had assembled at her house for afternoon tea, "that a man's belongings are often more trying, more irritating to one's nerves than even the man himself?"

"What kind of belongings do you mean?" inquired young Mrs. Troy with a smile that seemed to say that she knew what Mrs. Penton was going to say.

"Oh, I mean what in official terms is called their 'personal effects,' their clothes."

"Yes, clothes are about all the personal belongings men are allowed to have," laughed a small matron. "But even clothes are trying at times. Can't you understand the feelings of the woman who wanted a divorce just because she couldn't stand it to see a man's clothes hanging in her closet?"

"In her closet!" echoed Mrs. Troy. "Well, if she could get her husband to hang his clothes in any closet, I think she ought to have been satisfied. What irritates me is to see my husband's clothes hanging over all the chairs."

"Isn't it strange," mused Mrs. Penton, "that one can grow quite romantic over a woman's empty glove, her opera coat, or her dancing slippers, but did anybody ever grow poetic over a man's glove or his tuxedo or his pumps?"

"Do you know," spoke up the small matron, "that one of the most trying experiences of my life as a housekeeper is putting away my husband's laundry?"

"Well, really," said Mrs. Troy, "if you never have anything to do more trying than that I think you are not in danger of an immediate breakdown."

"But there's something so hard and uncompromising about a laundered shirt. It seems to be the very symbol of a man's commercial spirit. I never take the pins out of a shirt of my husband's, but I feel like musing it all up and making it amenable to reason."

"So you've become a lawyer, Rastus?"

"The only opportunity that a man has to betray his individuality in the matter of clothes is in his choice of ties," declared Mrs. Penton, "and see what he wears! They say a woman's history might be written from an inspection of the clothes in her closet, and I think a man's biography might, with equal truth, be gathered from the drawer in which he keeps his ties."

"I endure his ties and his unoccupied shirts," declared a young and baby faced matron, "but his cigars and all his smoking apparatus drive me to the brink. Not that I particularly object to a nice, neat row of cigars, or even a freshly lighted one, but think of the horrid, smelly ashes that innumerable the carpets! Think of the smoke that lingers forever in the curtains, and the vile smelling cigar stub that is always present, and that is so distressing to the nerves of the nice and the neat."

"Well, really," said Mrs. Penton, "it is a pity that there is not some one here to speak for the other side. Don't you suppose that our belongings, our gewgaws and baubles sometimes annoy our husbands? Surely, our infinite variety of possessions, our hairpins and hatpins, our veils and laces, our beads and buckles must have their effect upon nervous men."

"But we have nothing that corresponds to the bad smelling cigar stubs," protested the baby faced matron.

"We have our perfumes and our sachets," declared Mrs. Penton, "and you know that to some men the odor of perfume is intolerable. As for sachet powder, I had to give that up early in my married life, because it made Mr. Penton ill, and now I dislike it as much as he does."

"He ought to have married the woman who couldn't endure the sight of a man's clothes in her closet," laughed Mrs. Troy. "What a sweet time they would have had together! But isn't it ridiculous to make such a fuss over little things, when life is so full of big issues?"

"Well, it's a truth as old as the hills," sighed the small matron, "that the little things that cause all the trouble."—Chicago Daily News.

GATHERED SMILES

GLIMPSES OF THE PAST.

"Xantippe," ventured Socrates, "if I should be a little later than usual in coming home to dinner this evening, on account of a pressure of business, would it make any difference?"

"It would!" snapped Xantippe. "Would that difference," he inquired, "differ materially from the little differences we have had at different times in the past?"

"Wh-what? Yes, it would!"

"Ha! Don't you see, then that to differ from previous differences is differing differentially from—"

"Stop right there!" exclaimed Xantippe. "You can use your little copy-righted 'Socratic' method of arguing on other people, but don't you try it on your wife or you're going to have trouble!"

Socrates didn't pursue the subject any further—and he came home to dinner that evening on time.

"Does he lose his temper?"

"No. He's so heartless that he laughs when the other fellow loses his temper."

Frocks for the Small Girl

IN THE restless realm of fashion one finds greater stability and uniformity in the styles created for little girls than in any other direction. In fact, a very large proportion of all frocks for young misses show variations of a single model. The long waist, or blouse, joined to the short skirt, as pictured here, is developed in all sorts of fabrics and is followed closely in line in the simplest as well as the most elaborate of children's dresses.

There is nothing finer or more elegant than a dress of embroidered organdy or swiss or batiste, trimmed with one or two of the several durable laces that will stand any amount of cleaning. Cluny and the filet laces, with the best German or French val, will last as long as the fabric of the dress, and in fact cluny and filet laces will outwear strong fabrics. Val is somewhat less durable, and also less expensive.

In the picture a straight panel extends down the front of the dress from neck to hem. The required fullness is introduced into the waist by groups of tiny hand-run tucks in the material at each side of the panel. The front, including panels and sides, to the underarm seams, is in one piece and an extra length at the bottom provides the ruffle. The fullness in the back is provided by tiny tucks, as at the sides.

The ruffle is set on to the body of the dress by means of an insertion of filet lace. There is a cape collar edged with a filet edging, which in turn is finished with a val ruffle of very scant fullness. The short puffed sleeves are finished in the same way.

The bottom of the skirt is finished with the filet edging. After the French fashion, dainty patterns in hand embroidery (nearly always in flower form) are put in after the lace and material have been sewed together. Sprays of flowers extend over the organdy and lace. The pattern, in graceful lines, is repeated on the front panel and about the sleeves.

As a finishing touch crochet buttons in groups of three simulate a fastening of the panel to the dress at each side. There is a folded sash of light blue ribbon in which an end hangs from the simplest of knots to the edge of the ruffle at the left side.

These dresses for young girls are worn very short. In fact, the impression is that they are a trifle small for the wearers. But there is ample room across the shoulders, and careful mothers usually see to it that there is a chance of lengthening the skirt by letting out tucks placed in the ruffle or by adding a second lace edging. The softness of the material allows more fullness than is really needed, and these little dresses last out two or three seasons' wear, in this way making the hand work well worth doing.

Snow-White Hat for Hot Weather

AS cool and refreshing looking as the white crest of a wave is a hat made of white mulline and white ottoman ribbon, and trimmed with white camellias and rose foliage. Like the lingerie hats of former seasons it speaks only of midsummer time and seems no more burdensome than a bit of mist swirling above the head.

The frame is made of the finest silk-covered wire and the mulline is first laid smoothly over it in two thicknesses. The construction of this hat is extremely simple. The brim is covered on the upper side with ruffles of the mulline, and the crown with row after row of ottoman ribbon.

The mulline is cut in strips about three inches wide and each strip is folded along one edge in a double hem one-third of an inch in width. This hem is machine stitched in white silk thread. The thickness of the hem and the machine stitching gives the edge enough body to support it.

The ruffles are laid on with very little fullness. The rows of ribbon covering the crown are not pulled on a gathering thread, but sewed down to the crown, with an occasional plait laid in to accommodate the ribbon to the shape. This plait in each row is laid directly above that in the preceding row.

In the wire shape a wide bandeau is provided at the back, which is covered with plain mulline and bound with ribbon at its lower edge. A few ruffles are set on the bandeau.

This is a pretty and elaborate-looking affair that is really quite simple. It is one of those hats which the home milliner can undertake to make for herself with no reason to expect a failure.

After the frame is covered two full-blown white roses, with their foliage, or two camellias are tied together with a bit of black velvet ribbon and mounted against the bandeau and under the brim. The hat is lined with mulline.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Blouse Trimming.

The little plaited frills of mulline that fall down the backs of some blouses are very quaint and attractive.

BREVITIES.

PINCKNEY—The owner of the Dispatch has just had a new press installed in his office which will print four pages of his paper.

BRIDGEWATER—Mrs. Catherine Arnold has commenced a suit in the Washtenaw circuit court for a divorce from her husband, Stephen D. Arnold.

GRASS LAKE—A. K. Collins, who has been the M. C. telegraph operator in Grass Lake for a number of years, has accepted a similar position at Lapeer and is moving to his new home this week.—News.

YPSILANTI—A letter to President Charles McKenny from Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews, secretary of the International Peace league, states that the third prize in the national prize peace essay contest of the league has been awarded to Samuel J. Skinner of Ypsilanti, a member of this year's graduating class in the State Normal college.

ANN ARBOR—George Weller, a 15-year-old youth of Dexter, shot a dog belonging to Michael Alber of Saline township, Thursday and, as a result complaint has been made to the authorities and prosecution before the juvenile court may follow. The dog was shot in the neck. The authorities were told that the animal had been an extremely valuable foxhound.

ANN ARBOR—Robbers disappointed in getting but $1.50 from the cash drawer of the Cardon bakery early Sunday morning, ate their fill of cakes and pies and took a substantial lunch with them when they left. The robbery followed that of the store of A. F. Gfell, two doors away. Here $75 was obtained. Entrance was effected through the transoms of a rear door.

MILAN—Last Sunday morning Rev. George Woolcock, pastor of the Baptist church, greatly surprised his congregation by the announcement of his resignation, to take effect September 1st. He has been given a call by the First Baptist church of St. Clair, Mich., and as it is a larger church and town, carrying a larger salary and good prospects, he feels that he should accept. Rev. Woolcock has been pastor of the Baptist church of Milan for over five years and has commanded the respect and esteem of everyone.—Leader.

Stops Neuralgia—Kills Pain.

Sloan's Liniment gives instant relief from neuralgia or sciatica. It goes straight to the painful part—Soothes the nerves and stops the pain. It is also good for rheumatism, sore throat, chest pains and sprains. You don't need to rub—it penetrates. Mr. J. R. Swinger, Louisville, Ky., writes: "I suffered with quite a severe neuralgic headache for four months without any relief. I used Sloan's Liniment for two or three nights and I haven't suffered with my head since." Get a bottle today. Keep it in the house all the time for pains and all hurts. 25c, 50c and $1.00. The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DARE COOLIDGE

SYNOPSIS

Don Hooker and Phil De Lancey are fleeing from a revolution in Mexico. They are in the border town of Guadalupe. Don Hooker is a wealthy miner who has been driven out of his mine by the revolution. Phil De Lancey is a young man who has been driven out of his home by the revolution. They are both looking for a place to start a new life.

CHAPTER V

The journey to Fortuna is a scant fifty miles by measure, but within these eight kilometers there is a landscape of contrasts in standards. As Bud and De Lancey rode out of Guadalupe, they traveled a good road, well worn by the Mexican stock-ways. One that led in a straight line from the hills. Then, as they left the town and the road, they found themselves on a trail, dogged by the feet of pack-animals and marked by the light of a single lantern. It followed along the railroad, cutting over hills and down through gulches, and by evening they were in the heart of Old Mexico.

Here were men in sandals and women in barefoot, children led up by the legs outside of their parents; long, loose, flowing robes, and the air was filled with the smell of food, and the sound of children, starting like startled rabbits at the strangers.

The smell of garlic and fresh-roasting coffee was in the air as they drew into town for the night, and their room was an adobe chamber with the floor and iron bars across the windows. Riding south the next day they met a man, mounted on a white Mustang, who saluted them gravely, saying to them for their primitive wooden saddles and girths as broad as soap-traces.

As they left the broad plain and clambered up over the back of a mountain, they passed Indian houses, built of mud and thatched with long, coarse grasses, and by the first of the women ground corn on stone mortars as their ancestors had done before the fall. For in Mexico there are two peoples, the Spaniards and the natives, and the Indians still remember the days when they were free.

It was through such a land that Phil and Hooker rode on their gallant ponies, leading a pack-animals well loaded with supplies from the north, and as the people gazed from their miserable hovels and saw their outfit they wondered at their wealth.

But if they were moved to envy, the bulk of a heavy pistol, showing through the swell of each coat, discouraged them from going farther, and the cold, searching look of the tall cowboy as he smiled past stayed in their memory long after the pleasant "Adios" of De Lancey had been forgotten.

Americans were scarce in those days, and what few came by were riding to the north. Now, however, must this big man be who rode in front, and certainly he had some great reward before him to risk such a horse among the revolutionaries. So reasoned the single-minded natives of the mountains, gazing in admiration at Copper Bottom, and for that look in their eyes Bud returned his forbidding stare.

There is something about a good horse that fascinates the average Mexican—perhaps because they breed the finest themselves and are in a position to judge—but Hooker had developed a romantic attachment for his trim little chestnut mount and he resented their wide-eyed gazing as a lover resents glances at his lady. This, and a frontier education, fostered him short-spoken and gruff with the patience and it was left to the cavalier De Lancey to do the courtesies of the road.

As the second day wore on they dipped down into a rocky canyon, with huge cliffs of red and yellow sandstone glowing in the slanting sun, and soon they broke out into a narrow valley, well wooded with sycamores and mesquite and giant hackberry trees.

The shrill tones of a dummy engine came suddenly from down below and a mass of black smoke rose majestically against the sky—then, at a turn of the trail, they topped the last hill and Fortuna lay before them.

In that one moment they were set back again fifty miles—clear back across the line—for Fortuna was American, from the power-house on the creek bank to the mammoth concentrator on the hill.

much like Mexico—or a revolution, either!"

"No, it don't," admitted Bud, "everything running full blast, too. Look at that ore train coming around the hill!"

"See, what a burg!" roared Phil; "see, there's some class to this—what? It's a mistake not, we'll be able to find a few congenial spirits here to help us spend our money. Talk about a company town! I'll bet your barroom is full of Americans. There's the crowd down below—let's ride by and leave our horses and see what's the price of drink. They can't fence me, whatever it is—we doubled our money at the line."

Financially considered, they had done just that—for, for every American dollar in their pockets they could get two that were just as good, except for the picture on the side. This in itself was a great inducement for a ready spender and, finding good company at the Fortuna hotel bar, Phil bought five dollars' worth of drinks, threw down a five-dollar bill, and got back five dollars—Mex.

The proprietor, a large and jovial boniface, pulled off his facial miracle with the greatest good humor and then, having invited them to partake of a very exquisite mixture of his own invention, propped himself upon his elbows across the bar and inquired with an ingenuous smile:

"Well, which way are you boys traveling, if I may ask?"

"Oh, down below a ways," answered De Lancey, who always dominated himself the heart of strategy. "Just rambling around a little—how's the country around here now?"

"Oh, quiet, quiet!" assured their host. "These Mexicans don't like the cold weather much—they would freeze you know, if it was not for that arazo which they wind about them so!"

He made a motion as if of a native wrapping his entire wardrobe about his neck and smiling, and De Lancey knew that he was no Mexican. And yet that soft "which away" of his betrayed a Spanish tongue.

"Ah, excuse me," he said, taking quick advantage of his guess, "word from the way you pronounce that word 'arazo' I take it that you speak Spanish."

"No one better," replied the host, smiling pleasantly at being taken at his true worth, "since I was born in the city of Burgos, where they speak the true Castilian. It is a different language, believe me, from this bastard Mexican tongue. And do you speak Spanish also?" he inquired, falling back into the staccato of Castile.

"No indeed!" protested De Lancey in a very credible imitation; "nothing but a little Mexican, to get along with the natives. My friend and I are mining men, passing through the country, and we speak the best we can. How is this district here for work along our line?"

"None better!" cried the Spaniard, shaking his finger emphatically. "It is of the best, and, believe me, my friend, we should be glad to have you stop with us. The country down below is a little dangerous—not now, perhaps, but later, when the warm weather comes on."

"But in Fortuna—no! Here we are on the railroad; the camp is controlled by Americans; and because so many have left the country the Mexicans will sell their prospects cheap."

"Then again, if you develop a mine near by, it will be very easy to sell it—and if you wish to work it, that is easy, too. I am only the proprietor of the hotel, but if you can use my poor services in any way I shall be very happy to please you. A room? One of the best! And if you stay a week or more I will give you the lowest rate."

They passed up the winding stairs and down a long corridor, at the end of which the proprietor showed them into a room, throwing open the outside doors and shutters to let them see the view from the window.

"Here is a little balcony," he said, stepping outside, "where you can sit and look down on the plain. We have the band and music when the weather is fine, and you can watch the pretty girls from here. But you have been in Mexico—you know all that!" And he gave Phil a roguish dig.

"Well, my friend, I am glad to meet you—" He held out his hand in welcome and De Lancey gave him a firm grip. "My name," he continued, "is Juan de Dios Brachamonte y Escalante; but with these Americans that does not go, as you say, so in general they call me Don Juan."

"There is something about that name—I do not know—what makes the college boys laugh. Perhaps it is just post, Byron, who wrote so scandalously about us Spaniards, but certainly he knew nothing of our language, for he rhymes Don Juan with 'new one' and 'true one'!" Still, I read part of that poem and it is, in places, very interesting—very, very interesting—but Don Juan?"

He threw up his hand in despair and De Lancey broke into a jolly laugh. "Well, Don Juan," he cried, "I'm glad to meet you. My name is Phil De Lancey and my partner here is Mr. Hooker. Shakes hands with him, Don Juan de Dios! But certainly a man so devoutly named could never descend to reading much of Don Juan!"

"Ah, no," protested Don Juan, rolling his dark eyes and smiling rakishly, "not much—the most interesting passages!"

He saluted and disappeared in a rear of laughter, and De Lancey turned triumphantly on his companion, a self-satisfied smile upon his lips.

"What?" he said, "you see? That's what five dollars' worth of booze will do in opening up the way. Here's our old friend Don Juan willing, nay, anxious, to help us all he can—he sees I'm a live wire and wants to keep me around. Pretty soon we'll get him feeling good and he'll tell us all he knows. Don't you ever try to make me sign the pledge again, brother—a few shots just gets my intellect to working right and I'm crafty as a fox."

"Did you notice that coup I made—asking him if he was a Spaniard? There's nothing in the world makes a Spaniard so mad as to take him for a Mexican—on the other hand, nothing makes him your friend for life like recognizing him for a blue-blooded Castilian. Now maybe our old friend Don Juan has got a few drops of Moorish blood in his veins—to put it politely, but—has raised his tenor voice and improvised—

"Just because my hair is curly I'm no reason to call me 'shine'!"

"No," agreed Bud, "feeling cautiously of the walls, and just because you're happy is no reason for singing so loud, neither. These here partitions are made of inch boards, covered with paper—do you get that? Well, then, considering who's probably listening, it strikes me that Mr. Brachamonte is the real thing in Spanish gentleman; and I've heard that all genuine Spaniards have their hair curly. Just like a—huh!"

But De Lancey, made suddenly aware of his indiscretion, was making all kinds of exaggerated signs for silence, and Bud stopped with a slow, good-natured smile.

"See!" hissed De Lancey, touching his finger to his lips; "don't say it—somebody might hear you!"

"All right," agreed Bud; "and don't you say it, either. I hate to knock, Phil," he added, "but sometimes I think the old man was right when he said you talk too much."

"Past!" chided De Lancey, shaking his finger like a Mexican. Tip-toeing softly over to Bud, he whispered in his ear: "See, I can hear the feller in the next room—shaving himself!"

Laughing heartily at this joke, they went down stairs for supper.

CHAPTER VI

If the Eagle Tail mine had been located in Arizona—or even farther down in Old Mexico—the method of jumping the claim would have been delightfully simple.

The title had lapsed, and the land had reverted to the government—and it needed in Arizona was a new set of monuments, a location notice at the discovery shaft, a pick and shovel thrown into the hole, and a few legal formalities.

But in Mexico it is different. Not that the legal formalities are lacking—far from it—but the whole theory of mines and mining is different. In Mexico a mining title is, in a way, a concession from the general government giving the concessionaire the right to work a certain piece of ground and to hold it as long as he pays a mining tax of three dollars an acre per year.

But no final papers or patents are ever issued, the possession of the surface of the ground does not go with the right to mine beneath it, and in certain parts of Mexico no foreigner can hold title to either mines or land.

A prohibited or frontier zone, eighty kilometers in width, lies along the international boundary line, and in that neutral zone no foreigner can denounce a mining claim and no foreign corporation can acquire a title to one. The Eagle Tail was just inside the zone.

But—there is always a "but" when you go to a good lawyer—for purposes of war and national safety foreigners are not allowed to hold land along the line, they are at perfect liberty to hold stock in Mexican corporations owning property within the prohibited zone; and—here is where the graft comes in—they may even hold title in their own name if they first obtain express permission from the chief executive of the republic.

Not having any drug with the chief executive, and not caring to risk their title to the whims of succeeding administrations, Hooker and De Lancey, upon the advice of a mining lawyer in Guadalupe, had organized themselves into the Eagle Tail Mining company, under the laws of the republic of Mexico, with headquarters at Agua Negra.

It was their plan to get some Mexican to locate the mine for them and then, for a consideration, transfer it to the company.

The one would spot in this scheme was the Mexican. By trusting Aragon, Henry Kruger had not only lost title to his mine, but he had been outlawed from the republic. And now he had bestowed upon Hooker and De Lancey the task of finding an honest Mexican, and keeping him honest until he made the transfer.

While the papers were being made out there might be a great many temptations placed before that Mexican—either to keep the property for himself or to hold out for a bigger reward than had been specified. After his experience with the aristocratic Don Cipriano Aragon y Tres Palacios, Kruger was in favor of taking a chance on the lower classes. He had therefore recommended to them one Cruz Mendez, a wood vender whom he had known and befriended, as the man to play the part.

Cruz Mendez, according to Kruger, was hard-working, sober and honest—for a Mexican. He was also simple-minded and easy to handle, and was the particular man who had sent word that the Eagle Tail had at last been abandoned. And also he was easy to pick out, being a little, one-eyed man and going by the name of "El Puerto."

So, in pursuance of their policy of playing a waiting game, Hooker and De Lancey hung around the hotel for several days, listening to the gossip of Don Juan de Dios and watching for one-eyed men with prospects to sell.

In Sonora he is a poor and unimaginative man indeed who has not at least one lost mine or "prospect" to sell; and prosperous-looking strangers, riding through the country, are often beckoned aside by half-naked peoneros eager to show them the gold mines of the Spanish padres for a hundred dollars Mex.

It was only a matter of time, they thought, until Cruz Mendez would hunt them up and try to sell them the Eagle Tail; and it was their intention reluctantly to close the bargain with him, for a specified sum, and then stake him to the denouncement fees and gain possession of the mine.

As this was a commonplace in the district—no Mexican having capital enough to work a claim and no American having the right to locate one—it was a very natural and inconspicuous way of jumping Senior Aragon y Tres Palacios' abandoned claim. If they discovered the lead immediately afterward it would pass for a case of fool's luck, or at least so they hoped, and riding out a little each day and sitting on the hotel porch with Don Juan the rest of the time, they waited until patience seemed no longer a virtue.

"Don Juan," said De Lancey, taking up the probe at last, "I had a Mexican working for me when we were over in the Sierras—one of your real, old-time workers that had never been spotted by an education—and he was always talking about 'La Fortuna.' I guess this was the place he meant, but it doesn't look like it—according to him it was a Mexican town. Maybe he's around here now—his name was Mendez."

"Jose Maria Mendez?" inquired Don Juan, who was a living directory of the place. "Ricardo? Patello? Cruz?" "Cruz!" cried De Lancey; "that was it!"

"He lives down the river a couple of miles," said Don Juan; "down at Old Fortuna."

"Old Fortuna?" repeated Phil. "I didn't know there was such a place."

"Why, my friend?" exclaimed Don Juan de Dios, astonished by such ignorance. "Do you mean to say you have been here three days and never heard about Fortuna Vieja? Why, this is the Fortuna! This is the American mining camp—the old town is down below."

"That's where the mine Aragon, the big Mexican of the country, has his ranch and store, Spanish? What? No, indeed—mine? He is not Spanish and half Yagui Indian, but his wife is a pure Spaniard—one of the few in the country. Her father—don't know his name—is a Villavieja—a very fine man, in his day, with golden hair and the presence of a queen."

"No, not rich! My goodness, you Americans think that everybody with red hair is a giant! Why, the most beautiful woman in Madrid has chestnut hair as soft as the fur of a dormouse. It is the old Castilian hair, and they are proud of it. The Senora Aragon married beneath her station—it was in the City of Mexico, and she did not know that she was an Indian—but she is a very nice lady for all that; and never omits to bow to me when she comes up to take the train. I remember her once—"

"Does Cruz Mendez work for him?" inquired De Lancey desperately.

"No, indeed!" answered Don Juan, patting the back of his head from the hills—but as I was saying—"and from that he went on to tell of the unfailing courtesy of the Senora Aragon to a gentleman whom, whatever his present station might be, she recognized as a member of one of the oldest families in Castile."

De Lancey did not press his inquiries any further, but the next morning, instead of riding back into the hills, he and Bud turned their faces down the canyon to seek out the elusive Mendez. They had, of course, been acting a part for Don Juan, since Kruger had described Old Fortuna and the Senora Aragon with great minuteness.

And now, in the guise of innocent strangers, they rode on down the river, past the concentrator with its multiple tanks, its gliding tramway and mountains of tailings, through the village of Indian houses stuck like dugouts against the barren hill—then along a river bed that oozed with slickens until they came in sight of the town.

La Fortuna was an old town, yet not as old as its name, since two Fortunas before it had been washed away by cloudbursts and replaced by newer dwellings. The settlement itself was some four hundred years old, dating back to the days of the Spanish conquistadores, when it yielded up many multitudes of gold.

The present town was built a little up from the river in the lee of a great ridge of rocks thrust down from the hill and well calculated to turn aside a gush of water. It was a comfortable huddle of whitewashed adobe buildings set on both sides of a narrow and irregular road—the great trail that led down to the hot country and was worn deep by the pack-trains of centuries.

On the lower side was the ample store and cantina of Don Cipriano, where the thirsty arteries could get a drink and buy a panocha of sugar without getting down from their mounts. Behind the store were the pole corral and adobe warehouses and the quarters of the peons, and across the road was the mesnal still, where, in huge copper retort and worm, the fiery liquor was distilled from the sugar-laden heads of Yucca.

This was the town, but the most important building—set back in the shade of mighty cottonwoods and pleasantly aloof from the road—was the residence of Senior Aragon. It was this, in fact, which held the undivided attention of De Lancey as they rode quietly through the village, for he had become accustomed from a long experience in the tropics to look for something elusive, graceful and feminine in houses set back in a garden.

Nothing stirred, however, and having good reason to avoid Don Cipriano, they jogged steadily on their way.

"Some home!" observed Phil, with a last hopeful look over his shoulder.

"Uh," assented Bud, as they came for a fork in the road. "Say," he continued, "let's turn off on this trail. Lot of burro tracks going out—expect it's our friend, Mr. Mendez."

"All right," said De Lancey absently, "wonder where old Aragon keeps that beautiful daughter of his—the one Don Juan was telling about. Have to stop on the way back and sample the old man's mesnal."

"Nothing doing!" countered Hooker instantly. "Now you heard what I told you—there's two things you leave alone for sixty days—beams and women. After we ditch our title you can get as gay as you please."

"Go set!" piped Phil, "hear the boy talk!" But he said no more of wine and women, for he knew how they do complicate life.

They rode to the east now, following the long, flat footprints of the burros, and by all the landmarks Bud saw that they were heading straight for the old Eagle Tail mine. At Old Fortuna the river turns west and at the same time four canyons came in from the east and south. Of these they had taken the first to the north and it was leading them past all the old workings that Kruger had spoken about. In fact, they were almost at the mine when Hooker swung down suddenly from his horse and motioned Phil to follow.

"There's some burro coming," he said, glancing back significantly; and when the pack-train came by, each animal piled high with broken wood, the two Americans were busily tapping away at a section of country rock. A man and a boy followed behind the animals, gazing with wonder at the strangers, and as Phil bade them a pleasant "Buenos dias" they came to a halt and stared at their industry in silence. In the interval Phil was pleased to note that the old man had only one eye.

Carlyle and Ceremony. Thomas Carlyle and his wife were so wedding-frightened that it is said to think of it. Replying to a letter of his describing his fantastic terror, she wrote: "For heaven's sake get into a more homely humor, or the wedding will not only wear a very original aspect, but likewise a very heart-breaking one. I can not tell how to go through with it."

DAIRY

SIX COWS FEED REGULARLY

Of Great Importance That Strict Regularity Be Observed in Both Feeding and Milking.

By T. L. HAECKER, Dairy and Animal Husbandman, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.

It is of great importance that strict regularity should be observed, both in feeding and in milking, in order to secure the greatest degree of contentment in the herd. If cows are fed at stated intervals, they will not worry for food until the time for feeding arrives. If it is then given to them in proper quantity, they will eat and lie down, chew the cud and sleep or rest contentedly until time for another feed. First give the grain mixture, and milk the cows while they are eating it. This routine is recommended because, with some cows, the milk comes more freely while they are eating that portion of their ration which has the most relish. Cured roughage should be fed after milking because it fills the air in the barn with dust. Succulent feed, like silage and roots, should also be fed after milking, because of the odor that it gives. Feeding twice a day will bring better returns than more frequent and wasteful feeding. Give half the concentrates and half the roughage in the morning, and half in the evening. Cows will soon become accustomed to this routine. In the winter they should be allowed to spend the day in the stall, and for two or three hours about midday they should not be disturbed. Turning them out into the yard, or giving them access to a straw-stack or field of corn stalks, will cause them to shrink in milk, no matter how much or how well they may be fed in the morning and evening. No more feed should be given them than they will eat up. The managers should be absolutely clean and free from any feed, during the day and night.

KEEPING BUTTER IN SUMMER

Wooden Box Lowered Into Well by Means of Pulley Serves to Keep Dairy Products Cool.

We always have nice, sweet cream and good, firm butter in hot weather by keeping it in a box in the well, writes J. A. McKinney of Lafontaine, Kan., in Farmers' Mail and Breeder. For a well with water at a depth of 20 feet, take two pieces of 2 by 4-inch timber 26 feet long, and spike a 2 by 4-inch piece, 30 inches long to each end. This makes the frame. Put the frame in the well to one side, letting it extend through an opening in the platform, a few feet higher than the curbing. Make a cupboard or box out of light lumber just wide enough to slip easily up and down in the frame, and long enough to hold two or three shelves. Attach a rope to the box and bring it over a well pulley hung to the frame above and then to the windlass. I also have a second pulley (not shown in the drawing) on top of the frame, with a small wire cable running over it. One end is fastened to the box and a heavy iron weight is suspended from the other which hangs down the well. With this device a child can raise the loaded elevator with ease.

TRYING SEASONS FOR COWS

Something Required to Take Place of Pastures During Latter Part of Summer and Early Fall.

One of the most trying seasons of the year for the dairy cow is the latter part of the summer and early fall. At this season the pastures are often short or dried up, and in such cases it is a common mistake of dairymen to let their cows drop off in flow of milk through lack of feed. Later they find it impossible to restore the milk flow, no matter how the cows are fed. Good dairy practice demands that the milk flow be maintained at a high level all the time from parturition to drying off. It becomes necessary, therefore, to supply some feed to take the place of the grass. The easiest way to do this is by means of silage. Silage is cheaper and decidedly more convenient to use than soiling crops.

The amount of feed will depend upon the condition of the pastures, varying all the way from ten pounds to a full winter feed of 40 pounds. It should be remembered in this connection that silage contains a low percentage of protein, so that the greater amount of silage fed the greater must be the amount of protein in the supplementary feeds to balance the ration.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Women suffer a great deal from kidney diseases. Their indoor life, tight clothing and trying work all tend to weaken the kidneys. Women's life also includes times of danger that are apt to leave the kidneys weak and to start attacks of backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness and urinary troubles. Prompt treatment, however, will cure the danger of dropsy, gravel, or fatal Bright's disease.

Take Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended, special kidney remedy. Doan's are used successfully throughout the civilized world—have brought new life and new strength to thousands of tired, and overworked men.

THOUGHT SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.—"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not sleep, nor eat to any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live."

Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong.

"I have always recommended your medicine ever since I was so wonderfully benefited by it and I hope this letter will be the means of saving some other poor woman from suffering."—Mrs. MARTHA SEAVEY, Box 1144, Unionville, Missouri.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as that above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

If there are any complications you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Puzzled the Parson.

At a marriage service performed some time ago in a little country church in Georgia, when the minister said in a solemn tone: "Will those have this man to be thy wedded husband?" Instead of the woman answering for herself, a gruff man's voice answered: "I will." The minister looked up very much perplexed, and paused. He repeated the sentence, and again the same gruff voice answered, "I will." Again the minister looked up surprised, not knowing what to make of it, when one of the groomsmen at the end of the row said: "She's deaf, parson, an' I'm answerin' for her."

Women's Times of Danger

Women suffer a great deal from kidney diseases. Their indoor life, tight clothing and trying work all tend to weaken the kidneys. Women's life also includes times of danger that are apt to leave the kidneys weak and to start attacks of backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness and urinary troubles. Prompt treatment, however, will cure the danger of dropsy, gravel, or fatal Bright's disease.

Take Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended, special kidney remedy. Doan's are used successfully throughout the civilized world—have brought new life and new strength to thousands of tired, and overworked men.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

WORKING OUT THE PROBLEM OF FARM LABOR AT PORTS OF ENTRY.

SEC. CARTON WRITES LETTER

Experts From Federal Agricultural Department to Visit Michigan and Help Improve Potato Crop.

[By Guard M. Hayes.]

Lansing, Mich.—Secretary A. C. Carton of the public domain commission finds that the farmers of Michigan appreciate the efforts of the public domain commission in assisting them to secure desirable farm laborers and the new plan inaugurated by Secretary Carton and Chairman Frederick C. Martindale several months ago is working out in a most satisfactory manner.

Secretary Carton is sending to farmers in various parts of the state the following letter: "The public domain commission and immigration commission of Michigan is desirous of assisting the farmers, as far as possible, in procuring farm laborers to work upon the farms of this state. With this object in view we have a special representative of the Michigan immigration department located at the port of entry, in the city of New York, for the purpose of directing desirable immigrants from the rural districts of Europe to the farms of Michigan."

"Our great industrial activities in the cities during the last two decades have made heavy drafts upon the rural districts and the drift of labor has been from the country towards the cities. This, in addition to the fact that a great many of our young men and women have left the rural districts and gone to the manufacturing centers, has left the rural districts without the labor necessary to produce the agricultural products the land is capable of producing. This shifting of our population, whereby the consumers have increased out of proportion to the producers, is the main reason for the high cost of living."

"With all the talk about the farmer's great prosperity, I am thoroughly convinced that the farmer, even with the present prices, is not making any more money, or as much as he should. I am also convinced that it costs the farmer fifty per cent more to produce an article today than it did fifteen years ago. Any movement to reduce the high or check the higher, cost of living at the expense of the producer, will be a blow at the root of the whole industrial situation of this country. The net annual income of the farmer, which represents his purchasing power, must be preserved, in order that the industrial activities of the city may continue. The greater the prosperity of the rural districts, the greater the prosperity of the urban. The country needs the city and the city needs the country."

"The efforts of the Michigan immigration department will be directed along the line of assisting the rural districts in obtaining a larger production, by supplying farm labor to help do the producing. In this way it is hoped that the prosperity of the farmer will be increased and the prosperity of the country as a whole."

"There are about 190,000 farms in Michigan, half of which hire help. This would make 98,000 farms in the state upon help is needed. The best statistics available show that there is only about one-half enough farm labor obtainable in this country, and if this is true we can use 49,000 good, honest, industrious farm laborers helping the farmers of this state which will have a great effect upon the prosperity of the rural districts."

Farmers who are in need of help are requested to fill out a blank which accompanies Carton's letter showing the number of men he wishes to hire and giving the nature of their duties. The farmer is also asked to state which nationality is most acceptable, whether experienced or "green" hands are desired and whether married or single men are preferred. The prospective employer is also requested to tell whether children are objectionable and whether the services of a farm hand's wife are desired, giving the wages to be paid in all cases. The hours of labor and a declaration as to whether the position is of a permanent nature must also be stated.

Replies are forwarded to the Michigan immigration agent at New York and he gets into direct communication with a farmer in need of help whenever desirable applicants are available. Many farmers have benefited by this plan which costs them nothing and it is expected to develop into one of the big features of the work of the public domain and immigration bureaus.

The recently inaugurated state-wide campaign for the improvement of the Michigan potato crop will in August receive support from the federal department of agriculture, which has announced to M. A. C. authorities that three specialists will arrive here next month to join with Michigan workers in the grappling of the tuber problem. One of the specialists with the federal party will be Geheimrat D. R. Appel, of Berlin, Europe's leading authority upon potato diseases. The other government experts will be W. A. Orton, pathologist in charge of cotton and truck diseases and sugar plant investigations and William Stuart, potato specialist for the department of agriculture at Washington. They will be joined by Prof. George W. Coons, Michigan's plant pathologist, and C. W. Ward, secretary of the Michigan Potato Growers' association.

All five men will tour the state. On August 15 they will make a general inspection of the potato growing districts of southwestern Michigan, on August 16 they will go north and on August 17 and 18 they will visit Houghton and other points in northern Michigan.

According to word received at M. A. C. from Washington, the purpose of the trip will be to promote the breeding of new productive and disease resistant varieties, the production of improved strains of standard varieties for seed purposes, the elimination of diseases that are carried by seed potatoes and the introduction of an official system of seed inspection and certification with adequate standards and safeguards.

The specialists will do their work in the fields. Visits will be made to the field stations of the department of agriculture, to the state experiment stations and to farmers and seed growers.

COMMISSIONER A. C. CARTON

The Michigan public domain commission is doing a good work in assisting farmers to secure desirable immigrants for help.

Probate Order

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw, ss.
I, the undersigned, Judge of Probate for said county of Washtenaw, do hereby certify that the will of the late Charles H. Schmidt, deceased, is the will of said deceased, and that the same may be heard and allowed.

It is ordered, that the 17th day of August, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office be appointed for hearing said will.

And it is further ordered, that a copy of this order be published three successive weeks, once each week, in the Standard, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Washtenaw, to wit: the Standard, published at Ann Arbor, Michigan, by the Standard Publishing Co., Inc., of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Witness my hand and seal of office, this 15th day of July, 1914.

Katherine M. Jervis, Register.

Season Tickets for Our Forthcoming Redpath Chautauqua

In arranging to inaugurate this Chautauqua this year the local committee secured 600 $2.50 season tickets, which will be sold, while they last, by them for $2.00 each.

When these tickets are exhausted no season tickets thereafter can be had for less than $2.50. Also, the price of season tickets will not be reduced from the first day to the close of the Chautauqua.

The single admissions to the different sessions of this Chautauqua aggregate more than $4.00, so it will pay you to buy a season ticket even after the program has begun. For the single admissions to the respective entertainments see program. Season tickets are non-transferable except within the owner's family.

CHILDREN'S TICKETS admit children aged six to fourteen years inclusive. All children are admitted to the children's work free.

Waldo Mack Abbot.

A strong candidate for the Democratic nomination of Prosecuting Attorney is Waldo Mack Abbot of Ann Arbor who is at present the Assistant Prosecuting Attorney.

Mr. Abbot has many friends in Chelsea who wish him the best of success. He is well fitted for the position he seeks having been educated in the schools and University at Ann Arbor. Upon his graduation from the law department of the University he took up the practice of law in the offices of Cavanaugh & Burke in Ann Arbor and last November was appointed Assistant Prosecuting Attorney by Judge Kinne which position he now fills.

Mr. Abbot is truly a son of Washtenaw County not only of Ann Arbor. He is a grandson of the late Christian Mack of Ann Arbor and the nephew of Walter C. Mack. Mr. Abbot is married and the father of a daughter. He is a sincere and active worker and is well fitted for the position he seeks. He is a true democrat and therefore has made many friends, he has appeared in court often and has had some experience in the office which he now seeks to be nominated for.

DECIDE YOURSELF

The Opportunity Is Here, Backed By
Chelsea Testimony.Don't take our word for it.
Don't depend on a stranger's statement.Read Chelsea endorsement.
Read the statements of Chelsea citizens.And decide for yourself.
Here is one case of it.

Charles Schmidt, W. Middle St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "I had lumbago and backache and when I stooped, it was hard to straighten. My kidneys were disordered and knowing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I began using them. They gave me relief. I don't hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to others who suffer from kidney trouble."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Schmidt had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Hague Park.

Some of the most daring exhibition in aviation ever presented in this part of the country are being featured at Hague park, Jackson, this week where Frank J. Terrill, the noted bird-man is filling an engagement. While most persons have read of remarkable feats performed by daring aviators not many people in this vicinity have had the opportunity of witnessing exhibitions of this kind.

Saturday and Sunday will be two big days of the engagement and it is expected that thousands of persons from throughout southern Michigan will visit the resort on these two days. The machine used by Aviator Terrill is an aeroplane, a machine which starts from the land. Terrill is known as the man who defies the elements inasmuch as nothing short of a cyclone prevents him from making the flights advertised.

Hague park has one of the most beautiful picnic groves in the state and the management of the resort extends an invitation to the public to bring lunch baskets and spend a day at the popular amusement place and witness the flying exhibitions.
