Sawyer, of Ann Arbor, in the circuit court against the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Railway Co., in behalf of Mrs. Ella Sawyer and her daughter, Miss Mary, both of whom were seriously injured in the Michigan Center wreck on July 1. The suits which are for $10,000 each, were instituted by summons, and no declaration has been filed.

A Pioneer Resident.

Mrs. Mary J. (VanVleet) Freer was born in Seneca county, New York, March 25, 1829, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. H. Stocking in Detroit, July 30, 1914. She was united in marriage with the late Lewis Freer, December 12, 1856, in Peoria, Ill., coming directly to Lima where she and Mr. Freer resided until his death in 1904. Mrs. Freer remained at the old home until about four years ago, when she moved to Detroit to reside with her daughter. Her life was one of unflinching Christian love and charity to all. A devoted wife, a gentle loving mother to Mr. Freer's two little children, a sincere and loyal friend. Always ready to extend sympathy and help to the afflicted and needy. She bore the thirteen long weeks of pain and suffering of her last illness with patience and resignation, believing that the close of earthly life was drawing near. She expressed no fear, but had a firm belief that she would be reunited to her loved ones gone before. She will be greatly missed by her family and friends. She is survived by one brother, Jas. VanVleet of Flint, aged 95, one half-sister in New York, and numerous nephews and nieces. The funeral was held from the Baptist church, last Saturday afternoon. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery Chelsea.

LOST HIS LIFE

Paul Casterline Drowned at Island Lake Sunday Afternoon.

A drowning accident occurred at Island Lake about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon when Paul Casterline, aged 19 years, of Ann Arbor, lost his life. The young man was spending the day at the lake in company with his father, brother, two sisters and John and Charles Strieter.

According to the reports given to the Standard the drowned boy and three of his companions left the shore in two boats and three of them went swimming. Finally the young man, who was unable to swim, having undressed, made a leap from the boat into the water. He landed on his stomach and it is supposed that the force of the contact was sufficient to drive the breath from his body and he sank in about 15 feet of water.

Wm. Fox, who conducts a boat livery at the lake, was on the shore and going to the spot made two dives for the body which he recovered on the second attempt. The body was in the water about 20 minutes before it was recovered and the spark of life had departed when brought to the surface. John Visel, C. W. Maroney, Wm. Fox and two others worked for a long time trying to resuscitate the

Hold Up The Ticket Agent.

Armed robbers held up the Ann Arbor railroad agent in Ann Arbor and escaped with $300 belonging to the company early Monday morning.

At about 2 o'clock Monday morning a man appeared at the ticket office window and Agent Frank Maynard found himself looking into a revolver held by a very determined looking Italian, who ordered him to unlock the door, and kept him covered until he did so. As Maynard opened the door he was confronted by another Italian and revolver. While the second man kept him covered the first searched the agent and emptied the cash drawer of $300. Then the men, still covering the agent, backed away into the darkness.

drowned boy but their efforts were in vain.

Medical aid from Chelsea was called to the lake, but services of the physician was of no avail, as the drowning had occurred nearly one and a half hour before his arrival.

The young man made his home with his sister, Mrs. B. B. Kuhl, of Sharon, and is survived by his father, two brothers and three sisters. The body was taken to the home of his relatives in Ann Arbor Sunday evening.

MEN AND ISSUES THAT FIGURE IN WAR SITUATION

To Count Leopold Berchtold, Austrian Foreign Minister, Must Be Given First Place

BROUGHT ABOUT CONTEST

It is Understood He Believed the Time Ripe for Favorable Action—Career of Nikola Pashitch, Serbian Premier—Russia's Part in Embroglio.

Count Leopold Berchtold, a quiet man, with English manners, sitting at a desk in the foreign office in Vienna—such is the unimposing presence of the Austro-Hungarian statesman who precipitated a situation more serious to Europe than any that has arisen since the events that immediately preceded the Franco-Prussian war.

When he took office as the director of the foreign office, Berchtold found a situation full of portent. Serbia, incensed by Austria's absorption of territories which formerly had belonged to Turkey and to which Serbia considered itself the heir, because they are populated largely by a people of Serb race, was clamoring for the undoing of that which had been accomplished by the decree of annexation.

Berchtold set himself to work to reduce relations to a normal basis. Behind him were the two other members of the triple alliance—Germany and Italy—and opposing him were Russia, the self-imposed protector of all the Slavic nations, including Serbia, and the two other members of the triple entente, Great Britain and France.

Then came the Balkan war in 1912, in which the Bulgarian and Serbian Slavs crushed the power of Turkey in Europe. The formation of the Balkan alliance and the utter defeat of Turkey were startling events which caught Berchtold napping. His next move was to break up the Balkan league by stimulating the land hunger of Serbia and Greece, with their ally, Montenegro, and turning them against Bulgaria, which was the predominant military factor in the war of 1912.

The Græco-Serbian success, though were another development for which Berchtold was unprepared. After Bulgaria had been defeated by the combination of five nations, including Turkey, the czar at Belgrade against the annexation of Bosnia-Herzegovina. Austria resumed with redoubled vituperativeness and noisy rancor.

This agitation, it has been pointed out by Berchtold, was the direct cause of the tragedy at Sarajevo, when the archduke and his morganatic wife fell by bullets fired by a Serbian. The Austrian minister of foreign affairs demonstrated in the judicial inquiry that followed the crime, that Serbian officials, civil and military, had been involved in the events that led to the assassination.

Deemed Time for Action. The moment for action had come. Berchtold surveyed the international horizon.

He observed that Russia was involved in a big strike which had a revolutionary tinge.

That France was in a turmoil of political uncertainty. That Great Britain was facing an internal convulsion as a result of the Ulster situation.

The Austrian ultimatum to Serbia, demanding an apology for Serbia's part in the tragedy of Sarajevo and a suppression of the anti-Austrian agitation in Belgrade, followed promptly in the midst of the preoccupation of the triple entente.

Berchtold realizes more clearly than anybody else that he has challenged the entire Slav world, with the exception of Bulgaria; that his quarrel is not with Serbia, but with Russia, which has stood back of Serbia in her attacks upon Austria.

Nikola Pashitch, Serbian Premier. Nikola Pashitch, premier and minister of foreign affairs of Serbia, has twice before been the dominant figure in Serbian politics in the course of his 10 years in the public affairs of his country. His policy always has been bitterly hostile to Austria-Hungary, and the present crisis in the relations of the two countries is largely the outcome of his provocative attitude.

Pashitch throughout his career has conducted a vigorous fight for the economic freedom of Serbia from Austria. By means of railway tariffs and inspection regulations on the frontier of Austria, Serbia's natural road to the markets of western Europe, the Austrian government has been able to control Serbian trade in pigs and poultry, the staple products of Serbia.

But the chief grievance of the Serbians has been the continued domination of Austria-Hungary over a large population across the frontier which the Serbians maintain is of Serb blood. Although a considerable part of this population has contested the claims of the Serbian jingoes and has

EUROPE'S FIVE GREAT POWERS ARE NOW ENGAGED IN "WAR OF WARS"

England Decides to Enter Fight and Declares War on Germany

ORDERS FLEET TO CAPTURE OR DESTROY THE ENEMY

Germany Declares War Tuesday on France and Belgium—Total Strength of All Armies Now in Fight is More Than Eighteen Million Men.

London—England has declared war on Germany. The declaration was made at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, although the announcement was not made until 11 o'clock.

With England and Germany openly at war, Europe's five greatest powers and one of the smaller states are in the conflict, the greatest in the world's history.

As these powers are now alligned the war is between England, Russia, France and Serbia, the Triple Entente, on the one side, and Germany and Austria, on the other.

That Italy will be drawn into the war is a foregone conclusion. She has declared her neutrality, but as a member of the Triple Alliance she must either join forces with Germany and Austria or break with them and fight with the Triple Entente.

Broad as was the scope of the war before Britain's declaration, it has now assumed proportions that are almost beyond the grasp of imagination. The total war strength of the countries involved is 18,000,000 men.

With England and Germany in the lists the two greatest navies of the world are pitted against each other. Already orders to destroy the enemy have gone forth from London and Berlin, and fleets that make the Armada seem insignificant are moving for battle.

The momentous decision of the British government, for which the whole world had been waiting, came before the expiration of the time limit set by Great Britain in her ultimatum to Germany demanding a satisfactory reply on the subject of Belgian neutrality.

Germany's reply was the summary rejection of the request that Belgium neutrality should be respected. Germany declared war on both France and Belgium Tuesday.

The British ambassador at Berlin thereupon received his passports and the British government notified Germany that a state of war existed between the two countries.

The British foreign office issued the following statement: "Owing to the summary rejection by the German government of the request made by his Britannic majesty's government that the neutrality of Belgium should be respected, his majesty's ambassador, at Berlin has received his passports, and his majesty's government has declared to the German government that a state of war exists between Great Britain and Germany from 11 o'clock p. m., August 4th."

"Destroy Enemy," England Orders. Immediately after war declaration this message was sent by the British admiralty to the great British fleet in the North sea: "Great Britain declares war on Germany. Capture or destroy the enemy."

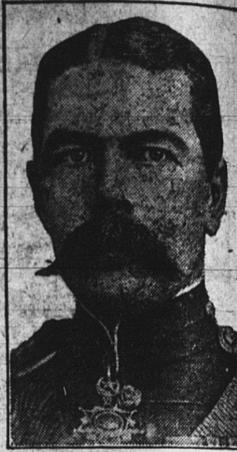

King George had proclaimed the mobilization of the British army earlier in the day and parliament had voted $525,000,000 for emergency purposes. Practically all Europe is now in arms.

Italy has declared her neutrality, but is mobilizing. Belgium, Holland and Switzerland have mobilized. The German demand that the Belgian government should permit the free passage of German troops through Belgium was answered by hasty preparation to resist such an advance across Belgian territory.

Sweden has made no answer to inquiries from Russia and Germany regarding her attitude, but is preparing to defend her neutrality. Japan Making Ready. Japan is making ready to live up to her alliance with Great Britain in case of certain eventualities.

Austria-Hungary for the moment has retired from her campaign against Serbia, for the purpose of holding back Russia, and Serbia has mobilized with the reported intention of invading Bosnia.

France Ready for War.

Paris—News that Germany had actually declared war on France was made public Tuesday. It was responsible for one of the greatest patriotic demonstrations in the history of the capital.

Thousands of frantic men and women paraded the streets in military formation, waving the national colors and singing patriotic songs. A number of Germans and Austrians were attacked, but the police acted promptly and no one was seriously hurt.

Baron von Schoen, the German ambassador, left before midnight. He was escorted to his special train by a column of cavalry and Paris police.

In order to have more time for his duties as premier, Rene Viviani Tuesday announced his withdrawal as foreign minister. Former Premier Doumergue was tendered and accepted the post of minister of foreign affairs.

Ministers Gauthier, Firry and Jaquier resigned Tuesday. Thetwo last named joined the colors without waiting for acceptance of their resignations. Gauthier's resignation was accepted and former Deputy Augagneur named in his stead. Albert Sarraut was named for the vacant post of minister of instruction.

The cabinet changes cement the Radicals in power. Viviani's cabinet was formed originally of a coalition of Radical and Socialist members. It was a makeshift following the failure of the ministry formed by Ribot to sustain a vote of confidence in the chamber. Viviani himself had also failed, just before Ribot's resignation.

Politics, however, seems forgotten in the war crisis now over France. All horses in the republic have been requisitioned by the government for war purposes, with the exception of the brood mares of the big racing studs. Even these will probably be taken over should the conflict be prolonged.

Among those already taken over are some of the best race horses in France, which will be used by high officers of the army at the front. The French mobilization is complete. The chief army, it is stated, is ready. The reserve bodies are at the concentration camps.

Sea Prize Returns to U. S.

Bar Harbor, Me.—The North German Lloyd steamer, Kron Prinzessin Cecilie, carrying more than $10,000,000 in gold and whose whereabouts have been a mystery since she sailed from New York Tuesday of last week, arrived in the harbor here Tuesday.

The Cecilie dropped anchor here at 6 a. m. after a forced run of four days, her officers fearing capture. With a cargo of ten millions in gold and a million in silver, consigned to French and English bankers, with an estimated value of over five millions in herself, the Kron Prinzessin Cecilie has constituted probably the finest sea prize ever open to capture.

As she crept along the Maine coast and into the harbor under the cover of night, each deck, at every port hole, was blanketed with canvas, so that not a gleam of light betrayed her whereabouts. Her four stout stacks had been tipped with black paint so that she resembled an English steamship.

BRIEF NOTES OF WAR

M. Sverbelev, Russian ambassador, at Berlin, was handed his passports Monday morning. The Canadian cruiser Rainbow lay in the royal roads, Victoria, Monday, with her decks cleared for action awaiting for orders concerning the German cruiser Leipzig, reported somewhere off Cape Flattery.

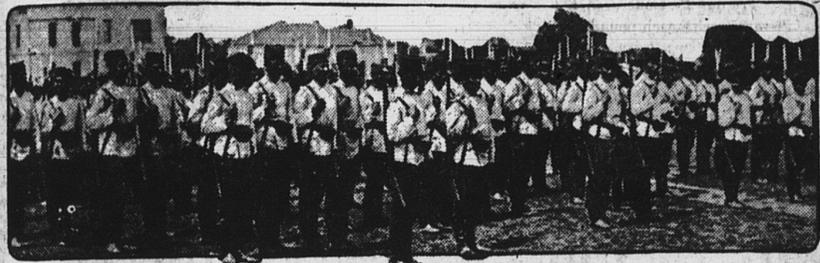

Five hundred French reservists will leave Mexico City at the earliest possible moment to join their regiments. The French legation is now endeavoring to make arrangements for a steamer to hold the next state convention of the society and named Muskegon as the place.

Washington—Relief for the tens of thousands of Americans in the war zones of Europe will be extended through every power and influence at the disposal of the United States government.

Millions in gold will be sent on a war ship for immediate needs, and as many ships as can possibly be gathered from American coastwise trade and from neutral nations will be utilized in an effort to bring the 100,000 Americans in Europe back home.

Officials of the state, war, navy and treasury departments conferred together in plans to coordinate the work. For immediate relief, President Wilson asked congress to appropriate $2,500,000. This together, with the $250,000 appropriated Monday by congress, will be shipped on the armored cruiser Tennessee. Bankers and express companies also will send five to eight millions of gold on the Tennessee to cash checks, letters of credit, money orders, etc.

Officials to Sail on Cruiser.

The Tennessee will carry government officials charged with the duty of distributing quotas of gold at the principal European ports for the use in aiding stranded Americans.

The transportation problem has not been an easily settled, as most of the steamship lines are foreign-owned, and transatlantic traffic is virtually at a standstill, a canvass of available ships revealing that, with the exception of six ocean liners flying the American flag and capable of carrying about 1,000 persons each, there are only 30 transports, coastwise ships and other vessels of American register available for service.

While definite figures are not at hand, it is estimated at the state department that of the 100,000 or more Americans in Europe about 20,000 urgently want to return. The others have money enough to stay in Europe until the second trip of the fleet of American steamers is made.

FIVE INSANE MEN CAPTURED

Detroit Slayer and Other Ionia Fugitives Caught Near Greenville.

Ionia, Mich.—Deputy Sheriff Mark Hoppough, of Smyrna, is the hero of the day in the capture of Walter Kuhlman, Detroit slayer, and four others of the eight Ionia state asylum fugitives Saturday morning at Kiddville Junction of the Pere Marquette, between Greenville, Ionia and Belding.

Hoppough started out early in the morning to see if he could pull down some of the rewards. He ran right into five of the insane men at the Kiddville crossing. Armed with but one gun and a single pair of cuffs, Hoppough decided he needed help and raced back to Belding, enlisting Deputy Sheriff Webster, Marshal McGinley and a young son of Hoppough.

Less than 80 rods from where Hoppough first saw the lunatics the officers encountered them again. Kuhlman saw them first and quickly bolted a fence. The others followed, but up went the five pairs of hands when a shot from Hoppough's gun stopped them.

Gown Designed to Lengthen Stout Figure

AFTER all, blue and black divide between themselves the distinction of being the most elegant of colors for an afternoon gown, and therefore they form the choice of a majority of women who find one really good visiting gown a season sufficient for their needs. And "visiting gown" is to be construed as meaning a gown in which to call or to receive calls. The deep, clear shades of blue—"true blue"—are becoming to every complexion.

A stunning afternoon gown is shown here from a French designer who keeps to conservative and refined styles. It is cleverly planned to add the effect of slenderness and height to the figure. The waist line at the back is normal and a downward dip of the belt at the front makes the waist look small.

The drapery in the skirt is placed very low and the material hangs without fullness over the hips. All the sharp curves which characterize the stout figure are softened in this model. The two graduated and shaped flounces are splendidly effective for this purpose, and also take the place of the much-admired tunic.

The bodice is slightly bloused and very plain, as it should be to carry off the vest of handsome brocade. This vest is the feature of the gown and is to be more or less gorgeous, not too tame in any case. For a bit of real finery, a touch of splendor, is properly a part of the visiting gown. Buttons (covered with the brocade) and button-holes are used for fastenings at the front. A double frill of narrow lace, extends from the dainty turnover collar, which it edges, to the waistline. There is a plain turnover collar of the fabric; it is noticeable that the collars are not wired and flaring, which is so much the vogue just now, because, for the stout woman, this style is better followed "in the breach than the observance."

The skirt, drawn in about the feet by the drapery, is cut sufficiently wide for a free step. The flounces have a hemstitch finish at the edges.

The close-fitting tall turban worn with this gown foreshadows the modes of fall and is worth studying. The shape is very graceful and very simply trimmed. It is of bright-finished straw, trimmed with narrow moire ribbon, with a brush of fancy feathers standing up at the back. It looks like, or rather it suggests, the glengarry cap in effect. The ribbon is tied in small flat double bows at the front, back and sides, which lie flat to the coronet. The "brush" is finished with a tuft of feathers which conceal its fastening to the hat. Such a turban adds length to the figure of its wearer.

A gown of this character is very useful, being suited to almost any affair that calls for dress that is somewhat formal.

Two Views of a Superb Dress Hat

NOTHING more unusual than our old and honored friend in straw, the leghorn hat, is employed in making this piece of real millinery, in which exquisite design is matched with exquisite workmanship.

An unusually clever milliner might evolve almost an exact copy of this hat from one of those fine old-fashioned leghorn "flats" which we have always known. She would have to substitute a caplike crown of rice net or buckramette for the original crown, cut away an inch and a half from the edge, and use the cutaway strip for bordering the underbrim and mount to brim on the crown with the required extra headsize net cut out at the front and right side.

Preparing a shape in this way is not an easy matter, but the shape once obtained is easy enough to trim. Inasmuch as the upper brim and the top crown are covered with lace this is an excellent model to choose for making over a "hat" of leghorn that has become discolored or sunburned.

A very wide moire ribbon in natter blue is sewed about the brim edge, and at the crown line. From there it is brought over the bandeau and turned under the edge. The fullness is disposed of by gathering the ribbon in at the crown line and at the edge. It disposes itself in scant irregular folds when sewed down to the hat. After the ribbon is placed, a band of leghorn (or other braid) is sewed about the edge of the underbrim, forming a border to the facing.

The top of the hat is covered with a wide chantilly lace in cream white which extends from the center crown to the edge of the brim.

A sash of ribbon with a cluster of small chrysanthemums make the prettiest of trimmings for the top of the hat. The upward curve of the brim at the left forms the natural resting place for a full bow of ribbon with ends hanging over the hair.

For a youthful face a hat of this kind forms a bewitching background.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

To a boiling pot flies come not. Weakness of mind is the only fault incapable of correction. Unquiet meals make ill digestions. Three can hold their peace if two be away.

SOME UNUSUAL SALADS.

From a firm, ripe watermelon, cut with large scoop used for making potato balls rounds of the red melon. Serve well chilled in lettuce cups with mint dressing.

Mayonnaise With Vegetables.

Chop very fine one onion, one-half a cucumber, one green pepper and one stalk of celery. Put in a cloth and wring out all the moisture possible. Just before serving stir into very thick mayonnaise.

Tomato and Peanut Salad.—Peel and carefully remove with a spoon the center of firm tomatoes to form a cup. Fill with finely shredded new cabbage and finely chopped roasted peanuts, mix well and add French dressing. Fill the cups and just before serving add a teaspoonful of mayonnaise to each serving.

Cucumber Salad.—Cut up six cucumbers, cover with water and simmer fifteen minutes, letting most of the water boil away. Add salt and cayenne and take from the fire, measure and add a teaspoonful of gelatin to each pint of the liquid. Decorate the bottom of the mold with slices of fresh cucumber and fill with the warm jelly. Set away to become firm. Turn out on a bed of white lettuce and decorate with over-lapping slices of fresh cucumbers.

Tomato and Green Pepper Salad.—Cut rather thick slices of peeled tomatoes and spread each with chopped green pepper, mixed with French dressing, on each place a small white onion, cooked, and French dressing over all.

Red Pepper and Cauliflower Salad.—Cut the tops off of large red peppers and take out the inside, fill with boiled cauliflower in bits and add a few cooked mushrooms to each. Pour on French dressing, stand on white lettuce leaves and surround with cream cheese in balls.

Peel ripe pears, cut in halves, hollow out the center and fill with chopped nuts. Serve with French dressing made with lemon juice instead of vinegar.

Is not marriage an open question, when it is alleged, from the beginning of the world, that such as are in the institution wish to get out, and such as are out wish to get in.—Montaigne.

SOME RECOMMENDED DISHES.

The following is not a common dish but one which seems to be a great favorite with those who like beans:

Bean Stew.—Cover a pint of navy beans over night with cold water; in the morning drain and cover with fresh cold water, bring slowly to boiling point and add a fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, boil five minutes.

Now drain and rinse with warm water, then put to stew in a clean saucepan with just enough hot water to come to the top of the beans. Cook very gently until the beans are tender, season with salt, and just before serving there should be no water left in the pan. Add a half pint of rich cream and serve hot.

Date Cakes.—Take a cup of sugar, an egg, a cup of dates which have been covered with a cup of boiling water, and a teaspoonful of soda, cool, add two tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of vanilla, a teaspoonful of baking powder and one and two-thirds cupfuls of flour, a half cupful of walnut meats. Bake in a sheet and frost with a half cupful of sour cream, a cupful of brown sugar boiled together until creamy.

For a change of flavor when making a white cake mixture, caramelize three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and a half cupful of boiling water, boil until thick, cool and add to cake.

Pimiento Bisque.—This is certainly most appetizing for those who enjoy the red pepper. Take the pulp of six red peppers, two teaspoonfuls of salt, half a teaspoonful of tabasco sauce, three pints of chicken stock cooked with a half cupful of cooked rice, add more seasonings if needed.

Spanish Chop.—Grate French chops to the bone and stuff with six tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, three tablespoonfuls of boiled ham chopped, two tablespoonfuls of mushrooms, two tablespoonfuls of butter. Dip in egg crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Princess Theatre.

Here is the kind of picture everybody likes. It sparkles with action and the plot centers around a pretty girl.

The story opens with a scene showing Winters, an old pioneer gold miner, on his deathbed, revealing to his daughter, Bessie, the hiding place of the papers which will establish her claim to the Western Star Mine, worth a million dollars.

Bessie sends a telegram to her brother, Jack, back east, asking him to come west at once. From then on until the end of the picture, there is a thrill in every foot. It's a thrilling picture throughout.

There is action in every part of this startling Warner's feature. It is one of the new type of western pictures. The plot is gripping and the interpretation is by an all-star company. A genuine treat. Don't miss this remarkable production at the Princess on Saturday evening.

It will be the last Warner feature to be shown at the Princess, as the management of the Princess will again show Universal films, starting Monday, August 10.

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DANE COOLIDGE
Author of "The Fighting Fool," "The Tension," etc.
Illustrations by Don J. Lavin

(Copyright, 1914, by Frank A. Munsey)

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancy are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to give up their mining claim and return to the United States. In the border town of Gadsden Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The Mexican subsequently spent a large sum in an unsuccessful attempt to relocate the vein and then allowed the land to revert for taxes. Hooker and De Lancy arrive at Fortuna near where the mine known as the Eagle Tail is located. They engage the services of Cruz Mendez, who has been friendly to Kruger, to acquire the title for them and get a permit to do preliminary work. Aragon protests and accuses them of jumping his claim.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

For a minute Don Cipriano stood looking at him, his black eyes heavy with rage; then his anger seemed to fall away from him and he wiped the sweat from his brow.

"Very well," he said at last, "I perceive that you are a gentleman and have acted in good faith—it is only that fellow Mendez has deceived you. Let it pass, then—I will not quarrel with you, my friend—it is the fortune of war. But stop at my store when you go by and come and see me. It is indeed lonely here at times, and perhaps I can pass a pleasant hour with you. My name, señor, is Don Cipriano Aragon y Tres Palacios—and yours?"

He held out his hand with a little gesture.

"Philip De Lancy," replied Phil, clasping the proffered hand; and with many expressions of good-will and esteem, with a touching of hats and a wiggling of fingers from the distance, they parted, in spite of Bud, the best of friends.

CHAPTER VIII.

There are some people in this world with whom it seems impossible to quarrel, notably the parents of attractive daughters.

Perhaps, if Gracia Aragon had not been watching him from the window Philip De Lancy would not have been quite so cordial with her father—at least, that was what Hooker thought, and he was so badly peevish at the way things had gone that he said it, too.

Then, of course, they quarreled, and, one thing leading to another, Phil told Bud he had a very low way of speaking. Bud replied that, whatever his deficiencies of speech might be, he was not fool enough to be drawn in by a skirt, and Phil rebuked him again. Then, with a scornful grunt, Bud Hooker rode on in silence and they said no more about it.

It was a gay life that they led at night for the Fortuna hotel was filled with men of their kind, since all the staid married men had either moved across the line with their families or were under orders to come straight home.

In the daytime the hotel was nearly deserted, for every man in town was working for the company; but in the evening, when they gathered around the massive stove, it was a merry company indeed.

There were college men, full of good stories and stories not so good, world-wanderers and adventurers with such tales of the East and West as never have been written in books. But not a college boy could match stories with Phil De Lancy, and few wanderers there were who could tell him anything new about Mexico. Also, when it came to popular songs, he knew both the words and the tune. So he was much in demand, and Don Juan passed many drinks across the bar because of him.

In all such festivities the two partners stayed together; Bud, with a broad, indulgent grin, listening to the end, and Phil, his eyes alight with liquor and good cheer, talking and laughing far into the night.

Outside the winter winds were still cold and the Mexicans went wrapped to the eyebrows; but within the merry company was slow to quit, and Phil, moping up for the lonely months when he had entirely lacked an audience, sat long in the seat of honor and was always the last to go.

But on the evening after their spat Bud sat off to one side, and even Phil's sprightly and ventriloquist conversation with the little girl behind the door called forth only a frowning smile.

Bud was thinking, and when engaged in that arduous occupation even the saucy little girl behind the door could not beguile him.

But, after he had studied it all out and come to a definite conclusion, he did not deliver an ultimatum. The old good-natured smile simply came back to his rugged face; he rolled a cigarette; and then for the rest of the evening he lay back and enjoyed the show. Only in the morning, when they went out to the corral to get their horses, he carried his war-bag with him and, after throwing the saddle on to Copper Bottom, he did the same for their spare mount.

"What are you going to pack out, Bud?" queried Phil, and Bud snipped his fingers as he answered.

Then, with a heave, he snaked it out of the harnessroom where it had been stored and slung it deftly across the pack-saddle.

"Why, what's the matter?" said De Lancy, when they were on their way; "don't you like the hotel?"

"Hotel's fine," conceded Bud, "but I reckon I'd better camp out at the mine. Want to keep my eye on that Mexican of ours."

"Aw, he's all right!" protested Phil. "Sure," said Bud; "I ain't afraid he'll steal something—but he might take a notion to quit the country."

"Why, what for?" challenged De Lancy. "He's got his wife and family here."

"That's nothing—to a Mexican!" countered Bud. "But I ain't figuring on the excuse he'd give—that won't buy me nothing—what I want to do is to keep him from going. Because if we lose that Mex now, we lose our mine."

"And—"

"No 'and' to it," said Bud doggedly. "We ain't going to lose him."

"But if we did," persisted De Lancy, "why, then you think—"

"Your friend would get it," finished Hooker grimly.

"Ah, I see," nodded De Lancy, noting the accent on "friend." "You don't approve of my making friends with Aragon?"

"Oh, that's all right," shrugged the big cowboy; "it won't make no difference now. Go ahead, if you want to."

"You mean you can get along without me?"

"No," answered Bud, "I don't mean nothing—except what I say. If you want to palaver around with Aragon, go to it. I'll round up Mendez and his family and keep 'em right there at the mine until we get them papers signed—after that I don't care what happens."

"Oh, all right," murmured De Lancy in a subdued tone; but if his conscience smote him for the moment it did not lead to the making of any sentimental New Year's resolutions, for he stopped when he came to the store and exchanged salutations with Aragon, who was lounging expectantly before his door.

"Buenos dias, Don Cipriano!" he hailed. "How are you this morning?"

"Ah, good morning, Don Felipe," responded Aragon, stepping forth from the shadow of the door. "I am very well, thank you—and you?"

"The same!" answered Phil, as if it were a great piece of news. "It is fine weather—no?"

"Yes, but a little dry!" said Aragon, and so they passed it back and forth in the accepted Spanish manner, while Bud hooked one leg over the horn of his saddle and regarded the hacienda with languid eyes.

But as his gaze swept the length of the vine-covered corridor it halted for a moment and a slow smile came over his face. In the green depths of a passion-flower vine he had detected a quick, birdlike motion; and then, suddenly, like a transformation scene, he beheld a merry face, framed and illuminated by soft, golden locks, peering out at him from among the blossoms. Except for that brief smile he made no sign that he saw her, and when he looked up again the face had disappeared.

Don Cipriano showed them about his mesquite plant, where his men kept a continual stream of liquid fire running from the copper works, and gave each a raw drink; but though De Lancy gazed admiringly at the house and praised the orange trees that hung over the garden wall, Spanish hospitality could go no farther, and the visit ended in a series of adioses and much as glances.

"Quick work!" commented Phil, as they rode toward the mine; "the old man has got over his grinch."

"Um," mused Bud, with a quiet, brooding smile; and the next time he rode into town he looked for the masked face among the flowers and craned again. That was the way Gracia Aragon affected them all.

He did not point out the place to Phil, nor betray her by any sign. All he did was to glance at her once and then ride on his way, but somehow his heart stood still when he met her eyes, and his days became filled with a pensive, brooding melancholy.

"What the matter, Bud?" railed Phil, after he had jolled him for a week; "you're getting mighty quiet lately. Got another hunch—like that one you had up at Agua Negra?"

"Nope," grinned Bud; "but I'll tell you one thing—if old Aragon don't spring something pretty soon I'm going to get uneasy. He's too dog-gone good-natured about this."

"Maybe he thinks we're stuck," suggested De Lancy.

"Well, he's awful happy about something," said Bud. "I can see by the way he droops that game eye of his—and smiles that way—that he knows we're working for him. If we don't get a title to this mine, every tap of work we do on it is all to the good for him, that's a cinch. So sit down now and think it out—where's the joker?"

"Well," mused Phil, "the gold is here somewhere. He knows we're not fooled there. And he knows we're right after it, the way we're driving this out in. Our permit is good—he hasn't tried to buffalo Mendez—and it's a cinch he can't denounce the claim himself."

"Maybe he figures on letting us do all the work and pay all the denouncing fees and then spring something big on old One-Eye," propounded Bud. "Scare 'im up or buy 'im off, and have him transfer the title to him. That's the way he worked Kruger."

"Well, say," urged Phil, "let's go ahead with our denouncement before he starts something. Besides, the warm weather is coming on now, and if we don't get a move on we're likely to get run out by the revolutionists."

"Nope," said Bud; "I don't put this into Mendez's hands until I know he's our man—and if I ever do go ahead I'll keep him under my six-shooter until the last paper is signed, believe me. I know we're in bad somewhere, but hurrying up won't help none."

"Now I tell you what we'll do—you go to the mining agent and get copies of all our papers and send them up to that Gadsden lawyer. I'm going to go down and board with Mendez and see if I can read his heart."

So they separated, and while Phil stayed in town to look over the records Bud ate his beans and tortillas with the Mendez family.

They were a happy little family, comfortably installed in the stone house that Mendez had built, and rapidly getting fat on three full meals a day. From his tent farther up the canyon Bud could look down and watch the children at play and see the comely Indian wife as she cooked by the open fire.

Certainly no one could be more innocent and contented than she was, and El Tuerto was all bows and protestations of gratitude. And yet, you never can tell.

Bud had moved out of the new house to furnish quarters for El Tuerto and had favored him in every way; but this same consideration might easily be misinterpreted, for the Mexicans are slow to understand kindness.

So, while on the one hand he had treated them generously, he had always kept his distance, lest they be tempted to presume. But now, with Phil in town for a few days, he took his meals with Maria, who was too awed to say a word, and made friends with the dogs and the children.

The way to the dog's heart was easy, almost direct, and he finally won the attention of little Pancho and Josefa with a well-worn Sunday supplement. This gaudy institution, with its spic stories and startling illustrations, had penetrated even to the wilds of Sonora, and every Sunday as regularly as the paper came Bud sat down and had his laugh over the funny page.

But to Pancho, who was six years old and curious, this same highly colored sheet was a mystery of mysteries, and when he saw the big American laughing he crept up and looked at it wistfully.

"Mira," said Bud, laying his finger upon the smirking visage of one of the comic characters, "look, and I will tell you the story."

And so, with laborious care, he translated the colored fun, while the little Mendezes squirmed with excitement and leaped with joy. Even the simple souls of El Tuerto and Maria were moved by the comics, and Mendez became so interested that he learned the words by heart, the better to explain them to others.

But as for Mexican treachery, Bud could find none of it. In fact, finding them so simple-hearted and good-natured, he became half ashamed of his early suspicions and waited for the return of Phil to explain Don Cipriano's complacency.

But the next Sunday, as Bud lay reading in his tent, the mystery solved itself. Cruz Mendez came up from the house, hat in hand and an apologetic smile on his face, and after the customary roundabout remarks he asked the boss as a favor if he would lend him the page of comic pictures.

"Seguro!" assented Bud, rolling over and fumbling for the funny sheet; then, falling to find it instantly, he inquired: "What do you want it for?"

"Ah, to show to my boy!" explained El Tuerto, his one eye lighting up with pride.

"Who—Pancho?"

"Ah, no, señor," answered Mendez simply, "my boy in La Fortuna, the one you have not seen."

Bud stopped fumbling for the paper and sat up suddenly. Here was a new light on their faithful servant, and one that might easily take away from his value as a dummy locator.

"Oh!" he said, and then: "How many children have you, Cruz?"

Cruz smiled deprecatingly, as parents will, and turned away.

"By which woman?" he inquired, and Bud became suddenly very calm, fearing the worst. For if Cruz was not legally married to Maria, he could not transfer the mining claim.

"By all of them," he said quietly.

"Five in all," returned Cruz—"three by Maria, as you know—two by my first woman—and one other. I do not count him."

"Well, you one-eyed old reprobate!" muttered Bud in his throat, but he passed it off and returned smiling to the charge.

"Where does your boy live now?" he asked with flattering solicitude, the better to make him talk, "and is he old enough to understand the pictures?"

"Ah, yes!" beamed Mendez, "he is twelve years old. He lives with his mother now—and my little daughter, too. Their mamma is the woman of the mayordomo of the Señor Aragon—a bad man, very ugly—she is not married to him."

"But with you—" suggested Bud, regarding him with a steely stare.

"Only by the judge!" exclaimed Mendez virtuously. "It was a love-match, and the priest did not come—so we were married by the judge. Then this bad mayordomo stole her away from me—the pig—and I married Maria instead. Maria is a good woman and I married her before the priest—but I love my other children, too, even though they are not lawful."

"So you married your first wife before the judge," observed Bud cynically, "and this one before the priest. But how could you do that, unless you had been divorced?"

"Ah, señor," protested Mendez, holding up his hands, "you do not understand. It is only the church that can really marry—the judge does it only for the money. Maria is my true wife—and we have three nice children—but as I am going through La Fortuna I should like to show the picture paper to my boy."

Bud regarded him in meditative silence, then he rose up and began a determined search for the funny sheet.

"All right," he said, handing it over, "and here is a panocha of sugar for your little girl—the one in La Fortuna. It is nothing," he added, as Mendez began his thanks.

"But oh, you marrying Mexican," he continued, relapsing into his mother tongue as El Tuerto disappeared; "you certainly have dished us right."

CHAPTER IX.

Not the least of the causes which have brought Mexico to the brink of the abyss is the endless quarrel between church and state, which has almost destroyed the sanctity of marriage and left, besides, a pitiful heritage of deserted women and fatherless children as its toll.

Many an honest laborer has peoned himself to pay the priest for his marriage, only to be told that it is not legal in the eyes of the law; and many another, married by the judge, has been gravely informed by the padre that the woman is only his mistress, and the children born out of wedlock.

So that now, to be sure that she is wedded, a woman must be married twice, and many a couple, on account of the prohibitive fees, are never married at all.

Cruz Mendez was no different from the men of his class, and he believed honestly that he was married to the comely Maria; but Hooker could have enlightened him on that point if he had cared to do it.

Bud was playing a game, with the Eagle Tail mine for a stake; and, being experienced at poker, he stood pat and studied his hand. Without doubt Mendez had lost his usefulness as a locator of the mine, since Maria was not his legal wife and could not sign the transfer papers as such. According to the law of the land, the woman now living with Aragon's mayordomo was the "legitimate" wife of the contract, and she alone could release title to the mine once Mendez denounced the claim.

But Mendez had not yet denounced the claim—though for a period of some thirty days yet he had the exclusive privilege of doing so—and Bud did not intend that he should.

Meanwhile they must walk softly, leaving Aragon to still hug the delusion that he would soon, through his myriads of infinitely petty, wasteful and useless thoughts and actions, distress and dislikes which occupy you day after day. At the moment you read this take yourself back two years ago. Of course, you have not the slightest conception of what happened. But let me tell you that on that day, two years ago, were happening two, a dozen or a hundred things which seemed to you to be of supreme importance. Do you understand how we fill our lives to the brim with millions of such trifling inconsequentials?—Kansas City Star.

He Took the House. Cittyman (to house agent)—"I thought you said there was a charming view from the front windows? Why, there are only houses to be seen." House Agent—"So there is a charming view. In the house opposite lives the most beautiful widow you ever clapped eyes on, and she's always at the window."

Great Influence of Beauty. Though Too Often Ignored, It Is as Deep and Useful a Part of Life as Utility.

Beauty is as deep and as useful a part of our general life as is what we term utility. It has just such a reason for being; it has a similar force; it has a set place in the scheme of the world. Eyes not fully opened to the beautiful are not wholly alive to the influence of beauty upon our lives and our actions. Alas! sometimes we scoff at the highest expressions of beauty. That is to say, the highest human expression.

Those even greater beauties, which are divine expressions, we ignore. Just think for a moment. Take yourself away from yourself and contemplate yourself and your living, set against the background of the universal scheme of things. Think of the mayordomo, have them in his power—and when the full sixty days of Cruz Mendez's mining permit had expired they could locate the mine again.

But how—and through whom? That was the question that Bud was studying upon when Phil rode up the trail, and in his abstraction he barely returned his gay greeting.

"Well, cheer up, old top!" cried De Lancy, throwing his bride-reins to the ground and striding up to the tent. "What ho, let down the portcullis, my lord semesball! And cease your vain repining, Algeron—our papers are all O. K. and the lawyer says to go ahead. But that isn't half the news! Say, we had a dance up at the hotel last night and I met—"

"Yes—sure you did," broke in Bud; "but listen to this!" And he told him of El Tuerto's matrimonial entanglements.

"Why, the crooked devil!" exclaimed De Lancy, leaping up at the finish. "Oyes! Mehdes!"

"Don't say a word," warned Bud, springing to the tent door to intercept him, "or you'll put us out of business! It is nothing," he continued in Spanish as Mendez came out of his house, "but put Don Felipe's horse in the corral when he is cool."

"Si, señor—with great pleasure!" smirked Mendez, running to get the horse, and after he had departed Bud turned back and shook his head.

"We can't afford to quarrel with Mr. Mendez," he said; "because if Aragon ever gets hold of him we're ditched. Just let everything run on like we'd overlooked something until the sixty days are up—then, if we get away with it, we'll locate the mine ourselves."

"Yes; but how?"

"Well, they're two ways," returned Bud; "either hunt up another Mexican citizen or turn Mexican ourselves."

"Turn Mexican!" shrilled Phil, and then he broke down and laughed.

"Well, you're a great one, Bud," he chortled; "you sure are!"

"I come down here to get this mine," said Bud laconically.

"Yes, but you're a Texan—or was one!"

"That makes no difference," answered Bud stoutly. "The hot weather is coming on—revolution is likely to begin any time—and there ain't a single Mexican we can trust. Jest one more break now and we lose out—now how about it?"

"Who's going to turn Mexican?" questioned De Lancy, "you or me?"

"Well—I will, then!"

"No, you won't, either!" cried Phil, forgetting his canny shrewdness. "I'll do it myself! I'm half Mexican already, I've been eating chile so long!"

"Now here," began Bud, "listen to me. I've been thinking this over all day and you jest heard about it. The man that turns Mexican is likely to get mixed up with the authorities and have to skip the country, but the other fellow is in the other way—he's got to stay with the works till hell freezes over."

"Now you're an engineer and you know how to open up a mine—I don't so, if you say so, I'll take out the papers and you hold the mine—or if you want to you can turn Mex."

"Well," said De Lancy, his voice suddenly becoming soft and pensive, "I might as well tell you, Bud, that I'm thinking of settling in this country, anyway. Of course, I don't look at Aragon the way you do—I think you are prejudiced and misjudge him—but ever since I've known Gracia I've—"

"Gracia!" repeated Bud; and then, stirred by some great and unreasoning anger, he rose up and threw down his hat pettishly. "I'd think, Phil," he muttered, "you'd be satisfied with all the other girls in the world without—"

"Now here!" shouted Phil, rising as unreasonably to his feet, "don't you say another word against that girl, or I'll—"

"Shut your mouth, you little shrimp!" bellowed Bud, wheeling upon him menacingly. "You seem to think you're the only man in the world that—"

"Oh, slush, Bud!" cried Phil in disgust, "you don't mean to tell me you're in love with Gracia too!"

"Who—me?" demanded Hooker, his face suddenly becoming fixed and masklike; and then he laughed hoarsely in derision and sank down on the bed.

Certainly, of the two of them, he was the more surprised at his sudden outbreak of passion; and yet when the words were spoken he was quick to know that they were true.

DAIRY TALK

GREAT VALUE OF SEPARATOR

Device Concentrates Time of Work Into Definite Hours of Day and Saves Much Rehandling.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.) While the man who has learned the real value of the separator is usually emphatic in his praise, it is really on the feminine side of the house that many of the advantages are most signally apparent.

It concentrates the time of work into definite hours of the day, and these are short. There are no heavy milk cans coming home near the noon hour, rank with the acidity of their contents.

All milk utensils may be taken care of during the morning hours and while thorough scalding is necessary to keep them in order they are sweet to begin with, thereby rendering the work less tedious. Then the sun scalding which puts on the finishing touches may be given through the entire day.

It is a great time saver in skimming and saves much handling and rehandling of the milk. This may seem like a small matter, yet it is really a very large one, and much of the old-time labor in caring for milk has been abolished, proved by the separator wholly useless.

The cream is in much better condition for churning and of uniform quality. One of the prime recommendations for the butter maker is that her product always may be of the same grade.

Few can attain this and only with the best facilities. The cream gauge fixes the thickness of the cream absolutely.

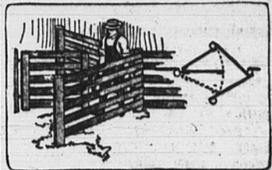

The rule for salting may thus be as rigid as for bread. The cream can easily be kept at the same temperature every time by the use of the ice or cold water. And thus the butter is always alike, consequently is in demand at fancy prices.

Cream for the table uses is always available in the very best form. The most delicious desserts can be extemporized on short notice and time saved from the once laborious work of making pastry.

GOOD GATE FOR STOCK FARM

Plan Devised Whereby Cows and Horses Cannot Follow Person Who Is Feeding Animals.

It is often desired to separate the smaller stock from the larger at feeding time, and in providing a passage-way for this purpose, I devised a plan to make the gateway so that I could pass through with a milk pail in each hand while the cows could not follow me, writes H. S. Long of Basile Mills,

Excellent Farm Gate.

Neb., in Popular Mechanics. This plan was realized as shown in the sketch. The smaller animals, such as hogs, chickens and sheep can pass through the V-shaped part, but a horse or cow could not make the turn. The small swinging gate can be fastened to one side, to make a permanent inclosure for the smaller stock.

FACTORS IN DAIRY FARMING

Among Other Things Co-Operate With Neighbors in Establishment of Co-Operative Creamery.

1. To grow milk-producing feed on the farm and put it up in such condition as to preserve the greatest amount of food value possible.
2. To have cows capable of producing 250 pounds or more of butter fat annually.
3. To have buildings that provide comfort and convenience.
4. To have a systematic method of work that will do justice to the dairy labor without extending the hours of labor beyond reasonable time.
5. To have records showing the amount of milk and butter fat production of the individual cows of the herd, the kind, amount and cost of feed and the profit or loss of the business.
6. To have every cow in the herd freshen every year if possible.
7. To feed neither too little nor too much, but in proportion to the requirements of milk production.
8. To be acquainted with the symptoms of contagious diseases so as to be able to apply effective treatment should they appear in the herd.
9. To provide a clean product at all times for the market.
10. To co-operate with neighboring farmers in the establishment of a permanent market in the form of a co-operative creamery or cheese factory or shipping station.

Splendid Feeds. Silage or roots (either turnips or mangels) are elegant feeds not only for the milking heifer, but also for the youngster.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Not Safe to Miss an Appointment With President

WASHINGTON.—If you have an appointment with the president at the White House and fail to keep it, you must have a mighty good excuse or you may be considered guilty of lese majeste, or, what would be more serious in this country, you may lose a good piece of federal patronage. Be there on the day, date and hour, is the rule, even though you may be kept waiting in the anteroom for a time.

On a certain Wednesday Representative Edward W. Townsend of New Jersey (Chimmie Fadden) and his colleague, Representative William E. Tuttle, Jr., called at the White House by appointment to recommend to the president a candidate for United States judge. They were cordially received and the president listened attentively to their argument in favor of their candidate. But he frankly told them that this particular judgeship matter was closed, that he already had made a selection, although he spoke very highly of the man recommended by Townsend and Tuttle.

"But, gentlemen," remarked the president, good naturedly, "are you not a little late in keeping your appointment? According to my engagement book you were to be here on Tuesday, and I am not aware that you called then."

It was up to Messrs. Townsend and Tuttle to explain, and they laid the cards upon the table. There was no use trying to fib out of it, so they confessed. Townsend said he went to the station to take a late train for Washington from his home in Newark Monday night, and fell asleep, only to be awakened by the station agent just as the tail lights of his train were disappearing in the west. He had to wait for a day train next morning.

Tuttle admitted that he had no excuse, except that the engagement had slipped his mind, due to the fact that the Fourth of July had intervened and mixed him up on his dates. The president listened to their excuses with interest and showed no annoyance over them. He joked them about their forgetfulness and told them a story about a delegation which kept an appointment by arriving a year too soon, remarking that he didn't know whether it was better to arrive a year too soon or a day too late.

He sent his visitors away in a good humor, but Messrs. Townsend and Tuttle can't help wondering whether they would have found that judgeship matter closed up had they kept their appointment.

Wanted to Know About George Washington Glick

A NEW statue has just been placed in Statuary hall at the capitol. It being a likeness in stone of George Washington Glick of Kansas. When the other occupants of the Hall of Fame had been jockeyed around to make room for Mr. Glick and the latest addition had been rolled into position, the question asked by those who had noticed the newcomer was, "Who was Glick?" A Kansan could have answered the query off-hand, but so fleeting is fame that the average citizen failed to identify George Washington Glick. However, Senator Thompson of Kansas threw the desired light upon the situation when he introduced in the senate a resolution providing for fitting exercises appropriate to the reception and acceptance of the statue. He said:

"Mr. President, there is being placed in Statuary hall today the statue of George Washington Glick. Under the law each state is entitled to place two statues of its distinguished men or women in that famous hall. About ten years ago Kansas selected from her citizens as one of the recipients of this honor John James Ingalls, who was formerly a celebrated member of this body. About one year ago Kansas chose another of her citizens, George Washington Glick, the only Democratic governor the state ever had until the present administration, to receive the same high honor.

"As everyone knows, Senator Ingalls was an uncompromising Republican. As is equally well known, Governor Glick was an uncompromising Democrat. These men lived and died in the same town, Atchison, Kansas, and are buried in the same cemetery. It is, therefore, very fitting that the statues of these eminent sons of Kansas, representing, respectively, two branches of political thought and the two great political parties of the country, should stand side by side in the Hall of Fame."

Check Signing Device Is a Great Labor Saver

TWENTY miles of signature, half of the distance from here to Baltimore, is saved by J. S. Jones and William Adreon, two pension office clerks, every year because they sign checks by machinery.

About 820,000 checks, disbursing a total amount of $180,000,000, pass under the pens of these men during each year of pension office business. The money is, to all practical purposes, checked out over the signature of Guy O. Taylor, disbursing clerk of the bureau. Without the aid of machinery it would take ten years to finish the work. Every pension check that leaves the office bears the written signature of one of these clerks.

The signatures of William Adreon to old notions of things. New ideas often lead to better health, success and happiness.

A Wis. couple examined an idea new to them and stepped up several rounds on the health ladder. The husband writes:

"Several years ago we suffered from coffee drinking, were sleepless, nervous, sallow, weak and irritable. My wife and I both loved coffee and thought it was a 'bracer.' (Delusion.)"

"Finally, after years of suffering, we read of Postum and the harmfulness of coffee, and believing that to grow we should give some attention to new ideas, we decided to test Postum."

"When we made it right we liked it and were free of ills caused by coffee. Our friends noticed the change—fresher skin, sturdier nerves, better temper, etc."

"These changes were not sudden, but increased as we continued to drink and enjoy Postum, and we lost the desire for coffee."

"Many of our friends did not like Postum at first, because they did not make it right. But when they made Postum according to directions on pkg., they liked it better than coffee and were benefited by the change."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkg.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages. Instant Postum—Is a soluble powder. Made in the cup with hot water—no boiling. 30c and 50c tins. The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum. Sold by Grocers.

when measured straight from the tip of the first "W" to the tail of the final "n," varies from two and a quarter to two and three-quarters inches in length.

If he signs half of the 820,000 checks, or 410,100 checks, he repeats his two-and-one-half-inch signature 410,100 times, which makes a total of 1,025,250 inches of signature—without the machine. There are 73,360 inches in one mile. By a simple process of division, we find that, were it not for the machine, Mr. Adreon would have to write within a tiny fraction of 14 miles of signature each year. That would be impossible and, besides, dire diseases like writers' cramp would kill him or paralyze his arm in a month.

By the same method of figuring, J. S. Jones, whose signature averages one and a half inches, would have to sign his name eight and one-half miles. Writers' cramp would claim him, according to calculation, the second Wednesday after Adreon went down and out.

But by the aid of the signagraph, the name is written with a wooden stick and by the movement of his arm ten fountain pens sign ten checks simultaneously.

Some of the Cabinet Members Are Speed Fiends

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY M'ADOO is an automobile enthusiast, and he is something of a speed fiend at that, though probably he would not admit it. He drives a gray roadster and when he gets out on the good country roads he lets it out and wrecks all the speed regulations made and provided by the state of Maryland. Frequently his bride, who was Miss Eleanor Wilson, the president's daughter, accompanies him on these spins, and she apparently is not alarmed when Secretary McAdoo opens up the gas throttle. So far as known none of the law officers have yet captured the secretary of the treasury when he is "burning up the road," but then getting "punched" for speeding is not a serious matter for a cabinet officer. Generally the incident closes by the motorcyclist cop apologizing for interrupting the burst of speed and telling the cabinet member to go ahead. Secretary of Labor Wilson (he used to be a coal miner and a labor leader in the old days) recently drove out into Maryland to make a speech and on his return trip his chauffeur sprinted and was arrested by a minion of the law. When the secretary's identity was learned, however, the officer told him to go along unmolested.

First Time He Had Shaved Man Whose Face Had an Unequal Growth of Hair.

Capt. W. V. Lucas, who was an officer in the Fourteenth Iowa regiment, tells an amusing story of an incident that occurred during General Price's raid into Missouri in the last year of the Civil war. The story appears in "Pilot Knob," by Messrs. C. A. Peterson and J. M. Hanson.

"On arriving at Pilot Knob the afternoon before the engagement of the Twenty-seventh, I went into a barber shop to be shaved. Suddenly, when the barber had shaved only one-half of my face, the long roll was beaten. I left my chair instantly, and reached my company, half a block away, with one side of my face shaved smooth, whereas the other displayed a two weeks' growth of beard. I did not complete the shave until six days afterward, when a colored barber did the job at Rolla, 75 miles away. While working the dirt and sand out of the 'long side,' the fellow's curiosity was excited, until he could no longer refrain from comments.

"I never see a face befo', sah,' said he, 'dat-one side was richer dan de odder; but yo's is, suah!'

Aladdin rubbed his lamp. Almost immediately there was a sound at the door and the slave entered.

"Bring me the prettiest girl in New York," said Aladdin, "and get a move on you, too."

The slave vanished, and almost in an instant the door opened, and the slave, wearing in his arms the prettiest girl in New York, entered and put her down in a chair. Aladdin looked at her in astonishment. She had on a lacy dress. Her hair was tousled. Evidently she was from the East side.

"What are you trying to do?" he said to the slave. "Why don't you fill my order correctly? I asked for the prettiest girl in New York."

"Here she is, your honor."

"Impossible!"

"I never make a mistake."—Life.

The Flame of Acetylene Light is Small and the Burner Peculiar

You have probably noticed that a Pilot Country Home Acetylene burner is shaped like the letter "Y."
And that the little gas opening in the arms of the burner are only out only half of a cubic foot of Acetylene in an hour.
You might leave one of these Acetylene burners open by accident all day—and even then there wouldn't be gas enough in the air of the room to enable you to set fire to it if you tried.
As a matter of fact, you would have to leave the burner open fully three days and nights in a room twelve by fourteen, with windows and doors closed tight, before there would be any fire or explosion whatever.
And the chance of your leaving a burner open that long is not worth considering. The pungent odor of the escaping gas would be certain to attract attention in a few seconds.

Frederick C. Martindale

As promised in our last, here is a summary of reasons given by over 250 of Michigan's leading citizens from the various walks of life for supporting Mr. Martindale for Governor. All gave several reasons. Some of the reasons were given by nearly every one of the 250. The opinion quoted is in the language of some one person, it being differently phrased by other.

- "Because he stands for all that is good in public and private life."
- "Because from his record in positions of trust we would be assured of an honest, straight-forward, economical business administration."
- "He neither stampees nor effervesces, but is always right."
- "He is a man of deeds rather than words; he keeps every promise. With him there are no empty or broken promises or mere platitudes."
- "I consider him a square-toed, honest man and one who will give everybody a square deal."
- "Because with him for Governor every man, woman and child, and every interest and industry would be guaranteed a square deal. All men, rich or poor, with or without political influence, look alike to him and receive the same treatment at his hands."
- "Because he is a vote-getter and his nomination would mean a united party and guarantee a Republican victory, not only for the entire State ticket, but for the Congressional, Legislative and County tickets as well."
- "He is progressive and yet conservative; progressive, insofar that he advocates and works for every measure that is for the good of the common people; conservative, insofar that he believes in protection to every human and property right."
- "Having been associated with him in the Legislature, I know him to be right on public issues and well qualified for the position of Governor."
- "His record is one of service and he has proven faithful to every trust and thereby endeared himself to the common people."
- "Of all the candidates, Mr. Martindale is best fitted by experience, training and temperament to be Governor of a great state like ours."

In the election of 1910 Mr. Martindale, running on the same ticket, had 15,000 plurality more than Osborn, and in 1912, 25,000 more than Muselman and 10,000 more than our popular Lieutenant-Governor Ross.

- Our cash rate for these courses is only $70.00. Many schools charge $100.00.
- We will give these courses for $46.67 to all who enter between August 15 and September 15. You can decide this matter in ONE MINUTE and thus make $23.33. That's easy.

If your back gives out; Becomes lame, weak or aching; If urinary troubles set in, Perhaps your kidneys are "in a bad way."
Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.
Local evidence proves their merit. C. Lehman, 420 Garfield St., Chelsea, Mich., says: "Several years ago I was bothered by weak kidneys and backache. Constant lameness across the small of my back annoyed me and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. At night I was restless and got up in the morning all tired out. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they put a stop to the trouble. My kidneys became normal and the lameness left my back. I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have found them to be a fine remedy."
