VETERANS HELD REUNION

The 20th Michigan Infantry Met in Ann Arbor Monday.

The 49th annual reunion of the 20th Michigan Infantry was held in Ann Arbor on Monday and those of the regiment who were able to attend assembled at Alumni Memorial hall to assist in the event. The reunion is said to have been one of the best that the 20th Michigan has ever held. Not only the men but their wives congregated in the big building and the meeting of these Civil War veterans was a pathetic one. They introduced their wives to the comrades with whom they had fought side by side for the preservation of the United States, and told stories of the old war days. A number of the old veterans are past ninety and are still in good health.

At 11:30 a. m. the tablet which the survivors of the 20th Michigan had had placed in the Alumni Memorial building was unveiled.

C. W. Maynard, of Detroit, gave the committee report on the buying of the tablet. Judge Victor H. Lane, of the law department delivered the address for the unveiling of the tablet. He thanked the veterans in the name of the university for the tablet, and in conclusion said he was sure that it would be an inspiration to every student who gazed upon it.

Col. C. B. Grant spoke briefly and at the close of his remarks, the members and their wives inspected the tablet. The tablet is a memorial to the deceased members of the 20th Michigan Infantry and it gives the names of the battles in which the regiment engaged.

After inspecting the tablet the members and their wives left for dinner. At 2:30 p. m. the veterans and their wives were given an auto ride about the city, at the conclusion of which a business meeting was held. A supper was served at 5:30 in the Congregational church and a campfire in the evening closed an enjoyable reunion.

The season, however is still closed on squirrels, deer, prairie chickens, partridges, spruce hens and shore birds in general, with the few exceptions noted. Rabbit and duck hunting will be the chief diversion for hunters until the season opens on birds, October 1. The law forbids the use of guinea pigs and ferrets in hunting rabbits.

THE CHAUTAUQUA

Was Well Attended and Highly Instructive—Another Next Year.

The Chautauqua last week was well attended and the audiences were highly pleased with the programs that were rendered each afternoon and evening for the five days. Dante and his band which appeared last Thursday was the biggest drawing feature.

The Chautauqua was put on under a guarantee signed by forty of the Chelsea business men, most of whom had ten season tickets assigned to them to sell. Some of them were fortunate enough to sell all of their tickets and others were not, but in all events each of the forty came across with the sum that had been assigned to them that made up the $800 that was required as a guarantee by the Chautauqua management.

Chelsea will have a Chautauqua next year as there has been pledges enough signed for the advance sale of tickets to guarantee the amount required by the management of the Chautauqua. The sale of both season and single admission tickets will undoubtedly be far better next year than they were this year.

Mrs. C. J. Heselenschwerdt.

Miss Eliza Ortring was born in Hanover, Germany, April 24, 1855, and died at her home in Sharon, Sunday, August 30, 1914.

The deceased came to this country in 1871 with her parents, who settled near Francisco. She was an active member of the M. E. church of which she became a member soon after coming to this country. Her illness was of about forty-eight hours duration and her mother, Mrs. Wilhelmina Ortring, aged 84 years, was at the bedside when the end came. She was united in marriage with C. J. Heselenschwerdt April 24, 1875, and they have been well known residents of Sharon for many years.

She is survived by her mother, husband, five sons, John W., of Sharon, Milton, of Rochester, Reuben, Lewis and Ray, of Sharon, two daughters, Mrs. John Kilmer and Mrs. Otto Meyer, both of Sharon, and a number of grandchildren.

The funeral was held at 10 o'clock Wednesday forenoon from the home and at 12 o'clock from the Chelsea M. E. church, Rev. H. R. Beatty, of Grass Lake, officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

School Notes.

The senior class has a membership of twenty-eight; the freshman class enrolls forty-three.

School opened Monday with a very large enrollment. The attendance in the grades is about 275; while that in the high school is 136, of these about 55 are non-residents.

Miss Markey, the music and drawing teacher, will not commence her work until the fourteenth of September. She will give her entire time to the work in Chelsea and will not spend two days a week in Dexter as has been reported.

The senior class of 1914 have very generously voted the balance in their treasury to the school. They designated that the money be used to pay the debt on the pneumatic clock system installed last year. The amount voted was slightly over $41. The class is to be highly commended for their very generous spirit.

It has been rumored by certain individuals, who are neither loyal to the school nor to the village, that the high school has been removed from the accredited list of the university. This is not so as we are still accredited by the university authorities although we are to be examined this fall to determine whether we are to remain accredited or not. This is done once every two or three years by the university examiner appointed by the board of regents. If we had been removed from the list it would not have been possible for the following to be entered in the university this fall without examination: Vivian Klingler, Earl Schumacher, and Clarence Stipe in the literary department; Max Roedel and Elmer Hammond in the pharmacy department; and Dean Hall in the department of chemical engineering. If these men, who have been spreading such false reports, would first know the facts, it would be better for them and certainly better for the school and for the village. When we boost the school, we boost the village. Why not be a booster?

Diseases caused swine breeders of Michigan to lose 81,400 hogs, valued at $1,101,000 last year, according to a report which has just been issued by the Department of Agriculture.

This is an average death rate of 62 per 1,000 head. During the year 1913 the ratio was 40 per 1,000 head and a total of 52,500 were lost. The latest census reports, which are dated January 1, 1914, show that there are 1,313,000 head of hogs in Michigan and they are valued at $16,150,000 or $12.30 per head.

The farmers of the entire nation last year lost 7,004,800 head of hogs from disease. Their total value was $75,000,000 and the death rate 119 per 1,000.

BLISSFIELD.—There was picked up from the streets at the corner of Adrian and Lane Wednesday an object that conclusively proves that the meanest man lives in this locality.

The object was a heavy, sharp-pointed staple which had been forced through a flat piece of celluloid so as to form a base to hold the sharp prongs in an upright position. Had an automobile wheel struck it a bad puncture would have been caused. If the person who placed it in the road is found he should be made to sit on it.—Advance.

SLAUGHTER AT CHARLEROI IS GREATEST IN HISTORY

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
International News Service.

Paris.—Burned villages and heaps of bodies lying on Belgian soil around Charleroi show the ferocity with which the allied French and British troops opposed the wave of German troops that rolled them over and drove them back to France.

For ten hours the tide of battle ebbed and flowed at Charleroi, the town being taken and retaken five times before the allies withdrew.

Part of the city was wrecked, according to reports received by the war office. The villages of Marchiennes, Monceau, Chatelet and Landelles were burned.

Citizens Killed.

Though the inhabitants of the peaceful little villages had been warned that the conflict was coming, scores remained in their homes and perished in the flames or were killed under the rain of shot and shell that swept the streets when they were driven from the shattered structures.

Pierce hand to hand fighting took place in Charleroi. The French were the first to occupy the town, but they were driven out by a bombardment from the German artillery. The Germans then entered by the left bank of the river Sambre, but within a short time more of the allies' troops arrived and the conflict was renewed. The Germans sought cover in the houses in the lower part of the town and to dislodge them the French were forced to sweep that section with their artillery.

Wounded Fill Town.

The lower part of the town was soon in flames and the Germans were forced into the streets. Back and forth through these surged the contesting soldiers, fighting desperately for victory. The dead lay thick when the French were finally forced to withdraw.

For three days wounded soldiers have been pouring into Maubeuge. The monastery and nursery there are filled. The inhabitants have given up their homes to the war's victims. On Sunday the Germans drove the French troops through the town of Charleroi, back to the second defensive position on the line defined by the towns of Avesnes, Rocroi and Metz.

Recaptured by French.

The French artillery from the heights now turned a furious cannonading on Charleroi, which had been bombarded previously by the Germans from the other side. The German position was so weakened by the deadly accuracy of the French gunnery that a counter attack by the allies was ordered and at daylight on Monday the entire line advanced, charged the German position and recaptured Charleroi.

The conflict probably was unequalled in history in severity and casualties. The Germans must have succeeded in bringing up reserves, for early on Tuesday they made a successful counter attack along the whole battle line and retook Charleroi, driving the French back to an entrenched position, which they held until the morning of the second day.

Retreat in Good Order.

The retreat was made in good order, the main forces of the French remaining intact.

Both armies suffered terrific losses. The battle has not yet finished.

The German catapult is hammering at the French and British allies again, trying to batter its relentless way to Paris. There is desperate fighting along the Belgian frontier at several points, and French victories are reported at two places, Charleroi and Courtrai, though nothing official has been given out.

Turcos Charge Battery.

At the beginning of the combat, the French made a sortie in a medieval manner, with the object of surprising the enemy. The latter were found in number far exceeding the French expectations, and the attempt to rout them failed.

Then the Turcos, in the face of a withering fire, charged a German battery at the point of the bayonet. Five hundred of these brave French soldiers from North Africa left on the charge. Only 100 returned.

Their sortie had no effect against the steady German advance, which continued to creep step by step through the outskirts of Charleroi.

Before the railway station the Germans fought for two hours in an effort to capture the bridge. Their losses were enormous, but the bridge was captured.

French Beaten Rapidly.

After the Teutonic advance overwhelmed the bridge, the Germans gained ground rapidly, taking in succession the villages of Marchiennes, Landelles and Montignies and the country as far as Walcourt.

Later the French artillery opened fire on Charleroi and the French infantry advanced under this cover. The tide of battle appeared to favor the tri-color, but not for long.

French infantrymen declared the route became so jammed with dead that the victims of battle remained standing where they were shot, and were used by the living as breast-works from behind which to fire on the enemy.

The last stand of the French was along the line between Thuin and Metz.

At nightfall the fighting ended, both sides tired beyond endurance. Monday morning the French returned to the attack, entering the town in the face of a withering fire from machine guns mounted in the steeples, and driving the German defenders in confusion across the river Sambre.

Many Houses in Flames.

They found many houses smoldering or in flames. The inhabitants, terror-stricken, were in the cellars. German officers and soldiers were found dead in the streets, side by side with Frenchmen who had fallen before or afterward.

One German officer was shot while he was washing his face, and his head was bowed over a basin, while his face was covered with soap.

Another had been lifting a cup of coffee to his lips when a French bullet brought death. He was found lying face downward across a table, the broken cup beside him on the floor.

German Losses Enormous.

An idea of the enormous losses of the Germans in the great battle in southwestern Belgium and of the bravery of the Kaiser's soldiers is given in the story of a returned traveler who witnessed part of the fighting along the Sambre river, southwest of Charleroi.

"I was near Fereux, in a region covered with dense woods, while the fighting was taking place," said he. "I could hear the sound of cannon away to the east and knew that a big battle was raging. From my place in the forest I suddenly saw the advance guard of a German army approaching along a roadway which skirted the trees.

"There seemed to be an endless procession of soldiers, all dressed in a uniform of gray. Rank after rank passed by and I thought that the end would never come.

"There was no hesitation. The men swung forward with quick steps and I saw officers galloping along the lines urging them forward.

French Open Fire.

"Suddenly there was a fresh sound of battle, this time in front of me and I knew that the French artillery had opened upon the advance guard of the Germans. I moved cautiously forward to a point where I could get a view of the battle scene. It was a view which seared itself into my memory.

"The French guns were hurling a hurricane of steel and flame into the German ranks, but the soldiers pushed forward with their battle shouts on their lips. Straight into that pit of destruction rushed the advancing troops. Men fell on every hand. It seemed that whole platoons melted away.

"Over the bodies of the dead and wounded pushed the rear ranks of the invading army, rushing with fixed bayonets upon the smoking muzzles of the French artillery. It was a superb picture of gallantry.

Aeroplane Is Smashed.

"Near Erquennes I saw a German aeroplane brought down. The military aviator was flying high in the air, taking a reconnaissance of the allies' positions. The specially constructed guns, designed to attack air craft, were turned upon the aeroplane, but the aviator continued his work. Suddenly I saw the machine lurch, splinters flew, and then the shattered machine began to drop. It had been smashed by a projectile."

GERMANS DRAG GUNS OVER THEIR OWN DEAD

London.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail describes a visit among the French who were wounded in the battles of the Vosges and have been brought to Vichy, where the hospitals have been transformed into hospitals. A wounded artilleryman contributed the following experience:

"I witnessed one horrible scene. The Germans were shooting from the deep trenches among which our artillery was doing terrible work. But as fast as a German dropped a fresh man took his place until bodies of the Germans were on a level with the surface of the earthworks.

"At this moment a German battery was ordered to advance. The heavy wheels sank in the trench, but the drivers furiously lashed their horses and finally dragged the guns across the human bridge."

WHAT PRISONERS OF WAR WILL EAT

The following scale of daily rations for prisoners of war has been approved by the military authorities:

One pound of bread, three-quarters of a pound of biscuit, one pound of preserved meat, three ounces of cheese, five-eighths of an ounce of tea, one-quarter of a pound of jam, three ounces of sugar, one-half of an ounce of salt, one-twentieth of an ounce of mustard, one-thirtieth of an ounce of pepper, one-half of a pound of fresh vegetables.

Two ounces of tobacco will be furnished each week for smokers.

Guns Made Stone Deaf.

London.—A medical correspondent of the Times who has just returned from Belgium says it is morally certain that all the artillerymen of the forts at Liege are now stone deaf.

"The nerves of hearing must fall under the strain of dwelling upwards of a fortnight in a world of mighty explosions," he says. "For these men the guns thunder now only in a silence which may never be broken."

OTHER COUNTRIES ABOUT TO ENTER GREAT STRUGGLE

Great Britain Asks United States to Care for Her Turkish Interests

ALLIES CONTINUE TO GIVE GROUND TO GERMAN ARMIES

Paris Claims That Retreat Does Not Mean Defeat for Forces—French Capitol Prepares for Siege.

London.—Great Britain asked the United States to be prepared to care for British diplomatic interests in Turkey, indicating that the allies had practically lost hope of persuading the Ottoman empire to remain neutral. Dispatches received at the British embassy referred to the incorporation in the Turkish army of several German officers which was regarded as the forerunner of intervention by the chief porte in behalf of Germany.

Turkey's entry into the conflict means the immediate alignment of Italy as well as Greece on the side of Great Britain, France, Russia, Serbia, Montenegro and Roumania, diplomats here believe. Just what the attitude of Bulgaria will be is a matter of uncertainty, though the Turkish ambassador here gave out a statement speaking of the community of interest of Bulgaria and Turkey. The Turkish situation was watched with deepest concern by diplomats because of the imminence of a general war in the Balkans.

Allies Again Retreat.

London.—The allied forces in northern France have again retreated to avoid the continued German attempt to envelop their line from that quarter, according to official advice received here from Paris. The French embassy gave out this statement:

"The Anglo-French army corps have had to give ground, but nowhere have they been broken through."

The Paris correspondent of the Evening News quotes the driver of one of the automobiles of the British general staff, who has returned to Paris from the front, as saying that the German advance has been well checked to the north of Compiègne and the Germans have asked for an armistice to bury their dead.

Compiègne is at the junction of the Oise and the Aisne river, 28 miles southwest of La Fere, where the British were reported the last of last week, and is only 45 miles northwest of Paris.

Rumors of Heavy Fighting.

The Boulevard correspondent of the London Daily News, in a dispatch, says that news has been received of the battle which has been raging on the allies' left wing being hotly continued Tuesday. Batches of wounded are coming through to be rushed to England or to points along the coast.

A regiment of the Germans is reported cut to pieces and it is said numerous German troops have been surrounded by the allies in a forest and are being subjected to heavy and constant fire. The allies are said to have forced the Germans to retire, amid heavy slaughter on both sides.

"The news is reassuring," says the dispatch. "Our retirement is not a retreat, but all in accordance with a carefully formulated scheme. There is no need for worry."

In the northeast of France, the French have checked the Germans in the district of Rethel, 20 miles southwest of Sedan, the scene of the crushing of French hopes 44 years ago.

Paris Reports Are Hopeful.

French military experts, according to Paris dispatches, express the opinion that the allies are now in a better position than they have yet occupied, while the Germans, should they fall in the present battles on the northern line, would be left in a dangerous position and with exhausted troops.

The British army is believed to be about to engage the German extreme right, unless it already has done so. The British troops are rested after the severe fighting of last week and their losses have been made good with fresh troops.

The statements that the British, while losing heavily in the fighting at Cambrai, St. Quentin and the other towns in their retreat last week—the official figures were 6,000 men—had inflicted far greater losses on the enemy are borne out by a dispatch from Middelkerke, Belgium, quoting a Red Cross nurse as saying that the Germans lost 25,000 men at Cambrai alone.

Washington.—President Hoffman, of the Swiss Confederation, cabled the Swiss legation here telling of suffering among the population of the republic and authorizing the legation to raise a relief fund in America.

Paris.—The ministry of war announces that it has been decided to give out the class of 1914 which will give at least 500,000 additional troops and also to call out the active reserve and the eldest classes of the territorial reserve.

MAINZ, CENTER OF GERMAN OPERATIONS

ALLIES OBJECT TO U.S. PLAN TO BUY SHIPS

Washington.—Great Britain has joined with France in objecting to the purchase by the United States of any German liners in connection with the plan to build up an American merchant marine.

At first England hesitated to protest, believing her action might be interpreted as placing obstacles in the way of a resumption of commerce to England. After France had communicated her viewpoint to London, however, the British foreign office decided to urge the American government to buy neutral vessels to avoid complications.

France takes the view that the purchase of German liners now tied up in ports would be tantamount to giving Germany important financial assistance. England's position is that there is no precedent in international law for the purchase of a large number of ships, during war, from a belligerent nation.

Dispatches from Ostend say that a German troop train has been blown up in southern Belgium and that many of the troops aboard were killed.

Paris Preparing for Siege.

With their anxiety in regard to immediate developments in the north at a feverish height, the Paris officials continue to prepare for a siege. Every possible precaution is being taken, as well as the heavy reinforcement of all the garrisons in the encircling defense works.

The city is on the qui vive, but withal remains quiet, inhabitants having grown accustomed to the prospect of imminent siege by the invaders. Even German aeroplanes dropping bombs no longer occasion much excitement. Two aircraft, one Tuesday morning and the other late Monday evening, flew over the city and dropped desultory bombs, which, however, did no damage. Guns have been mounted specially for use against the aircraft and the officials are confident that in the event of an attack from above the enemy's airships could be driven away without serious consequences.

The heaviest fighting appears to be taking place along a line from Peronne, in the department of Somme, to Vervins, in the department of Aisne. There the flower of Emperor William's army is trying to pierce the British defense.

Further to the east the forces of the German crown prince still are attacking the French in the region about Metziers, the capital of the department of Ardennes.

The only points where the French claim to have gained positive successes are in the Vosges mountains and in Lorraine, where the Germans are said to be in retreat.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Rome declares that news has been received there from Bucharest, Rumania, setting forth that the Russians have inflicted a crushing defeat on the Austrians in Galicia. The Russians inflicted a loss of 20,000 on the enemy, who sought to cross the Vistula.

Berne.—Prince Antoine of Orleans has arrived here, having escaped from Austria. He is an officer of the Austrian Ninth Hussars Cavalry, but says he wants to fight for France.

London.—The French embassy here has received official news that the French troops successfully held their ground on the line before Nancy. They repelled repeated rushes of the enemy with heavy loss.

Brussels, via Antwerp.—The Germans have mounted a large number of rapid-fire guns along the northern entrance to the city in anticipation of a possible Belgian raid from the direction of Antwerp. In addition dozens of motor car tracks, with automatic guns mounted thereon, patrol the roads and the suburbs of the city.

CLAIM RUSSIAN DEFEAT

German Sources Say Seventy Thousand of Czar's Army Are Taken

St. Petersburg Dispatches Claim That Germans Are Retreating Before Invasion of East.

London.—Dispatches from Berlin say that the German defenses in East Prussia have been strengthened. It also reports that the Russian advance has met with reverses. The engagement at Allenstein was one of the greatest battles of the war, that 120,000 Russians were killed and 70,000 taken prisoners. The Russians declare that their advance has not been checked and that they are occupying defenses around Koelnberg.

Other Side of Story.

Rome.—Dispatches from St. Petersburg received here say the German garrisons at Thorn and Graudenz failed to check the Russian advance.

Despite the reinforcements which they have received the Austrians are retreating from Galicia. They are unable to stand the Russian bayonet charge. Numerous prisoners, guns and flags have been captured by the Russians.

Germans Lose Four Ships.

London.—At last the fleet has been heard from. Two German cruisers, sunk and another fading into the mist, wrapped in flames and in a sinking condition; two German destroyers sunk and others damaged, but to what extent is not known; and every vessel of the squadron afloat returning in good order is the message.

Only the strategist expected the British squadron on guard to take the offensive; the amateurs long ago decided that the squadron would simply wait, content to keep the Germans bottled and prepared to attack them when they attempted a sortie; but, apparently, the British got word that the time was favorable and delivered a blow, with the light cruisers and battle cruisers supporting the destroyers, which were attended by submarines, and every one that went into this engagement came out under its own steam.

Austria Wars on Belgium.

Vienna, via London.—Austria Friday declared war on Belgium. The Belgian ambassador was handed his passports at the foreign office, all diplomatic relations were broken off and the way cleared for Austrian troops to join the Germans in the operations on Belgian soil, if necessary.

Until this action Belgium was the only one of the allied powers at war only with Germany, France, England and Russia had heretofore made declarations against both Austria and Germany.

The Austrian declaration of war was accompanied by the explanation that Austria was going to war because the Belgians were giving assistance to England and France.

The American minister in Belgium will look after the interests of Austria.

BRIEF NOTES OF WAR

London.—A Central News dispatch from Brindisi, Italy, says that a British destroyer sank an Austrian destroyer off Corfu after a 10-minute fight.

Paris.—A buffet has been opened by the Society of Actors and Actresses for needy stage people, of whom there are thousands in Paris. Not a theatre is open. Two meals a day will be given to any actor, actress or theatre employee at the buffet.

London.—Virtually all the wounded men brought back to England from the front will be disembarked at the Southampton docks and from there sent to the various hospitals in the country.

CANADA'S HUGE GRAIN BINS

Port Arthur Paper Is Pleased at the Mention of Kansas City Elevators.

From the Port Arthur (Canada) Evening Canadian. Kansas City gains the attention of the New York Evening Post and is given five inches of space in that admirable newspaper by reason of increasing the capacity of a grain elevator there. The Evening Post says: "When the additions and alterations to its huge grain elevator at Kansas City now under way are completed the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain railroad will have one of the largest plants of its kind in the world."

The present capacity of the Kansas City product is one million bushels. When it gains its promised stature and becomes "one of the largest in the world" it will have a capacity of 2,133,000 bushels.

At the mention of grain elevators the twin ports at the head of the lakes prick up their ears and take notice. The name of Lloyd-George at a Turkey garden party, or of President Wilson at a bankers' convention catches attention no quicker than the word "elevator" in the hearing of a Port Arthur-Fort William man. Toronto prides itself on its churches; Pittsburgh specializes on millionaires; Chicago has its pork and Boston its pork and beans—as for us, we rise to

THOUSANDS SEE SOLDIERS MARCH

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT OF G. A. R. BRINGS GREAT CROWDS TO DETROIT.

BOY SCOUTS ACT AS GUIDES

Naval Procession On Tuesday and Big Parade On Wednesday Are Great Features of Reunion.

Detroit—The forty-eighth national encampment of the G. A. R. was held in this city, beginning on Monday, August 31st. Beginning Saturday the veterans began rolling into the city by every train while the boats and automobiles conveyed a continuous stream of the city's honored guests. The streets and business houses had been beautifully decorated for the occasion and the old soldiers were hearty in their praise of the preparations that had been made for their entertainment and comfort.

One of the most notable features of the entire encampment was the service rendered by the boy scouts as guides. All over the city could be seen groups of veterans in the care of the little fellows in khaki. The boys made themselves invaluable to the visitors in many ways.

The various state headquarters were established in the down town hotels where the comrades could locate friends of their own regiment or company. An emergency hospital tent was established in Grand Circus Park, but in spite of their advanced age few of the old boys needed medical attention while in the city.

The first notable feature of the encampment was the naval parade on Tuesday when the U. S. revenue cutter, Morrill lead a procession of excursion steamers around Belle Isle. They were escorted by a fleet of motor boats and many fad bedecked crafts made an impressive sight. When the circuit had been completed the Morrill fired a national salute of twenty-one guns as the boats passed her in review.

On Wednesday morning the great feature of the entire encampment, the parade was held. Commander-in-Chief Washington Gardner with the other national officers, mounted, headed the impressive column as it moved down Woodward avenue. The various state departments and the auxiliary organizations followed. Although plenty of automobiles were in readiness for any who were too feeble to walk, the veterans for the most part preferred to march. As one old soldier expressed it: "Me ride in a parade—not until the closed carriages follow." Three immense grand stands had been erected at points along the line of march and many thousands of people from these and other vantage points reviewed the impressive procession.

Thursday and Friday had been set aside for business meetings, addresses etc. No meetings were scheduled for Saturday.

Cape for the School Girl

THE simplest of wraps both for children and grownups happens to be the strongest feature of the new fall styles. This is the cape. It was inconceivable that it should be developed in so many variations of shape and combinations with other garments until the fact was apparent. Now we have long plain capes covering the figure, half length and three-quarter length capes (some of them in combination with other wraps and nearly always detachable), and others that are short and used as a touch of style on coats. So that the cape may be accepted and used in any way the individual chooses.

A pretty cape for a school girl is shown in the picture. Such a simple garment is easily made at home, and nothing could be better for the cool days of autumn and the long Indian summer. This cape is made of a rather heavy woolen fabric in a fancy weave which looks like a wide wale cheviot. Any of the standard woollens are appropriate for these capes, and we shall see them in serge, broadcloth, cheviot, Scotch mixture, homespun and various novelty weaves. The old reliable staple colors, dark blue, brown, gray, and the dark reds make the best choice for the children. The capes are lined either with plain material or with stripes or plaids.

When the home dressmaker undertakes to make a cape she should provide herself with a pattern in order to get the adjustment over the shoulders as it should be. Some capes flare more than others, also, and the finishing at the neck varies, as do the methods of fastening.

It would be difficult to find a more desirable model than the one pictured here. It is so managed that it may be fastened up about the throat, when required, by buttons and loops on the under side. Straps crossing in front hold it in place when it is worn open at the front, as shown in the picture.

In keeping with the fad for suit hats, capes to match capes or other wraps keep pace with the times. The cap shown in the picture is a type illustrating this fashion. Patterns for this and for Tams and for simple cloth hats are sold by all standard paper pattern companies.

Millinery Which Reflects the Season

END-of-the-summer-millinery, for those who are able to indulge themselves in hats which illustrate the seasons, is shown in greater variety this year than ever before in the memory of the most observant of milliners. The poet celebrates the coming and going of the year in verse and women note its passing seasons lovingly in their apparel.

Three exquisite hats are pictured here, one of them from the most renowned establishment in Paris, and the other two, in every way as excellent, originated in America. They are especially appropriate for wear at the end of the summer and through the coming fall.

In the first hat a straw shape is decorated with a very heavy ribbon laid across the crown and tied at the left side at the shoulder. This ribbon is very heavy and soft. There is a wreath of velvet plums with velvet foliage and small white berries about the crown. This hat may be developed in several colors, but in bronze or purple shades and in bronze-browns will be found most beautiful.

The second hat is a combination of straw braid and velvet which may be developed in any of the rich and quiet colors now fashionable. It is remarkably simple in design. The round crown is covered with velvet, and the outline of the brim is emphasized by a track on to another to let a freight train pass.

perfection of workmanship. Thrust through the brim and under this fold a coronet of the daintiest of feathers, known as the Numidi, furnishes the decoration for this elegant hat.

The third hat is a straw shape faced with chiffon in black. It shows the movement toward wider brims and picturesque shapes. Its trimming consists of a spray of autumn flowers, posed in the bandeau and upturned brim at the left side, and a similar spray at the right. The chrysanthemum or the hydrangea or small fruits, with foliage, may be selected for this model.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Putting On, Taking Off.

Do not forget the old rules for putting on and taking off gloves. When putting them on, do not try to get the whole glove on at once, but first work on the fingers, taking care to have the seams fit exactly even at the sides; draw the glove over the hand and then put in the thumb, but leave the seam of the thumb down the center. Remember that a glove once put on wrong can never be stretched into the right shape again, so it is well to take the little care at the start.

One of the features of the season is a touch of color in white dresses. Sometimes this touch is in the form of black velvet.

Tires at Before-War Prices

Goodyear Prices

It is Folly Today to Pay More

There exists now a new, compelling reason for buying Goodyear tires. It results from War conditions.

These leading tires—built of extra-fine rubber, in the same way as always—are selling today at June prices.

You will find today a very wide difference between most tire prices and Goodyears.

Due to Quick Action

Early in August—when war began—the world's rubber markets seemed closed to us. Rubber prices doubled almost over night.

Men could see no way to pay for rubber abroad, and no way to bring it in. We, like others—in that panic—were forced to higher prices. But we have since gone back to prices we charged before the war, and this is how we did it:

We had men in London and Singapore when the war broke out. The larger part of the world's rubber supply comes through there. We cabled them to buy up the pick of the rubber. They bought—before the advance—1,500,000 pounds of the finest rubber there.

Nearly all this is now on the way to us. And it means practically all of the extra-grade rubber obtainable abroad.

Today we have our own men in Colombo, Singapore and Para. Those are the world's chief sources of rubber. So we are pretty well assured of a constant supply, and our pick of the best that's produced.

We were first on the ground. We were quickest in action. As a result, we shall soon have in storage an almost record supply of this extra grade of rubber.

And we paid about June prices.

Now Inferior Grades Cost Double

About the only crude rubber available now for many makers is inferior. In ordinary times, the best tire makers refuse it. Much of it had been rejected. But that "off rubber" now sells for much more than we paid for the best.

The results are these:

Tire prices in general are far in advance of Goodyears. And many tire makers, short of supplies, will be forced to use second-grade rubber.

Be Careful Now

In Goodyears we pledge you the same grade tire as always. And that grade won for Goodyears the top place in Tiredom—the largest sale in the world.

And, for the time being, our prices are the same as before the war. We shall try to keep them there.

We accept no excessive orders, but dealers will be kept supplied. And we charge them, until further notice, only ante-bellum prices.

That means that Goodyears—the best tires built—are selling way below other tires.

AIRSHIPS AND SUBMARINES, WASPS OF WAR

Both Are Getting Their First Real Test in This Conflict in Europe.

MAY FIGHT ONE ANOTHER

Each Invention Now Is Prepared to Pull the Other's Sting, But Their Actual Value Is Yet to Be Demonstrated.

Every modern war has been fought with new weapons, and for the last century there have been countless inventions for the carrying on of warfare in a particularly destructive manner, with the philanthropic intent that war was fast becoming so horrible and terrible that it must soon pass away from the face of the earth, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

But it happened that as soon as a particularly horrible cogitance was invented and introduced into armies and navies inventors immediately busied themselves by offsetting and discounting its probable effect. Consequently war not only has not passed away, but we still have it with us. Thus it is that each big war, after being heralded as the world's last configuration, is found upon examination to be false, and the end of war is not yet arrived.

Trying Out Inventions.

In the present war in Europe there are being tried under the conditions of actual hostilities many improvements and inventions that previously have been tried only under laboratory conditions. Their real worth will only be discovered at the close of the conflict.

No army or navy engaged in the present conflict in Europe but what is possessed of nearly all of the modern improvements made since 1870. The submarine, which was a dream in 1865, is owned by the navy of the smallest power. It is true that single submarines are not expected to accomplish much in a real struggle, so the larger navies of the great powers have fleets of submarines. The aeroplane and the dirigible balloon are to be found in the possession of all armies in Europe today, yet they, too, are only expected to be of real service when they are possessed in large numbers.

The airship and the submarines are the wasps of modern warfare. Like the little insect, while they have a powerful sting, they are very vulnerable, and may be easily crushed and rendered powerless.

Aeroplanes and Wireless.

In the recent smaller wars, aeroplanes have been used to a limited extent, and this use has been so much limited that their real efficiency is expected to be finally determined by the present war.

It is much the same with the wireless telegraph. While it was used in the Russo-Japanese war of ten years ago, the apparatus was still rudimentary, and the installations too few, while the range of the apparatus was too limited to show the greatest efficiency. In the intervening decade, however, great advance has been made in wireless. It is now possible and, indeed, is a custom every day, to send and receive messages from a distance of more than 5,000 miles. This, then, is a new and important factor in naval operations, as was seen by the censorship put over the great sending stations on this side of the Atlantic by the United States authorities.

Wireless has also been successfully attached to aeroplanes.

The submarine was in existence in 1904, but it was a very different sea weapon to that which England, France and Germany are using today. Yet its real value is yet to be determined, and it is expected that this demonstration will come during the present conflict.

Rapid Increase of Submarines.

At the time of the Spanish-American war there were only five submarines in all the navies of the world.

The latest edition of Brassey's Naval Annual for this year gives the number of submarines in the various navies, and shows what interest is being taken in the wasp of the sea. Great Britain has 76 built, and is building 20 more; Germany, who only began building a few years ago, already has 27, and is building 12 more; France has 70 and is building 33 additional ones; Russia has 45, and is building 18; while the United States has 29, and is building 21; Austria has 18, and has four under construction, while Italy owns 18, and is building two. Yet the submarine is still an unknown quantity in warfare.

Submarine in War.

Many of the early submarines are small and probably of little efficiency and France has numerous types about which little is known by the outside world. The German submarines are said to be built along the Holland lines, while the Russian submarines are said to follow one or more of the French types.

The submarine, from a romantic viewpoint, should be a great factor in deciding a naval engagement, but the fact remains that up to the present time it has done nothing to prove its value. It was believed that the moral effect of the submarine would be almost as important as its physical effect upon an enemy's warship, but this belief has not been justified up to the present moment.

There were notions that there would be terrific fights under the seas by submarine meeting submarine and destroying each other. But it has been found that when submerged the submarine is as blind as the traditional bat. Its crew cannot see any object under water, and is compelled to resort to the use of the periscope, which emerges unobtrusively above the water, in order to see its own course.

It is known that the periscope is the eye of the submarine, and naturally attention has been paid to the best way of destroying this vital part of these boats.

Submarine Versus Airships.

The designers of the submarine did not count upon it being seen. It was believed that it would go upon its way, dealing death without observation, although its periscope does make a slight wake on the water, and when submerged there are telltale bubbles. But it has been discovered that from a certain height an observer may trace the course of a submerged submarine with as great accuracy as if it was running on the surface. The dirigible balloon and the aeroplane now can ferret out the sneaking submarine, and they both are supposed to be armed to destroy the warship that moves like a fish.

ing had grown on it. A scientific system of irrigation and drainage was laid out, under direction of Lord Kitchener, at a cost of $50 an acre, and it was then handed over to the fellahs in five-acre plots for cultivation. Last year the land was washed, and a crop of rice was grown, giving a satisfactory yield. After the rice crop the salt distribution was measured, and the percentage was considerably reduced. To the great astonishment of the fellahs cultivators, a permanent result had been achieved in one year, which under the ordinary system prevailing in the country would have taken three or four years to accomplish. Cotton is now, therefore, being satisfactorily grown on a fair proportion of this area, and it is expected that it will bring from $75 to $100 an acre.

WASTE LAND MADE FERTILE

Remarkable Results Have Followed Experiments Only Recently Undertaken in Egypt.

As an indication of the ultimate outcome in the great delta of Egypt, where 1,500,000 acres of wash salt land awaits development, toward the end of 1913 about 800 acres of absolutely waste land at Biala were taken in hand. The land was so heavily impregnated with salt that for ages nothing had grown on it. Memoirs of Napoleon

In Three Volumes

The personal reminiscences of Baron de Méneval, for thirteen years private secretary to Napoleon Bonaparte, bring out, as no history can, many enlightening and interesting side lights on the character of that greatest of leaders. De Méneval's descriptions have the piquancy and interest possible only because he was an actual eyewitness of the scenes and incidents of which he writes. Their reliability and historical interest can be judged by the fact that the very conservative French Academy publicly recommends them.

YPSILANTI—Mrs. Clark has received word that her daughter, Miss Pearl Clark, critic teacher in the Normal training school, who was in Switzerland when the war began, has reached London safely and sailed for home Saturday.

MANCHESTER—They had the same idea in Saline and in other places that they had here, that those who backed the Chautauqua were making a big thing out of it, and refused or held back from buying season tickets, so the committee had to pay the deficiency out of their own pockets. Enterprise.

MILAN—On September 17 Milan will have the honor of entertaining the survivors of the seventeenth Michigan Infantry, of which our townsman, James Johnson was a member. Their annual reunion will be here on that date and about fifty of the fifty-seven survivors expect to attend. They were here about eight years ago for their reunion. Leader.

GRASS LAKE—The funeral of Miss Ida Bunker, whose body was found in Grass Lake last Saturday evening, was held at the home of Mrs. Susan Murry on Monday afternoon. The cause of Miss Bunker's suicide was depression of spirits superinduced by loneliness and a want of a home. Several years ago she resided with her sister, but since her death she has had no home. She was about 70 years of age.

MANCHESTER—The teachers for the coming year, which begins next Monday are: George A. Smith, superintendent; Marie Kirchhofer, principal; Gottlieb Jacob, mathematics; Katherine Dwyer, music and drawing; Julia M. Conklin, Lydia H. Grossman, Katherine Dwyer, grammar department; Nellie Ackerson, Lucy Schaefer, primary department; Edith Whitte, ward school. Enterprise.

Clinton—A young man giving his name as Jack Moore drove into town last Tuesday evening in a Ford machine and his actions aroused the suspicions of Deputy Sheriff Lancaster, who took him in charge. After considerable "pumping" the young fellow confessed that he had stolen the car he was driving and also another which had gone wrong and he had left in Ypsilanti. He was taken to Ypsilanti where the car was found and brought back to Clinton. Detroit officers were notified and came Wednesday afternoon and took Moore to Detroit. Before leaving town the youth stated he was one of a gang of five who have been stealing autos in Detroit for some time past. Courier.

The Exotic Spell of St. Denis.

Rarely has the contemporary stage granted to its followers such a revelation of pure, strange beauty as is afforded by the dances of Miss Ruth St. Denis, opportunity to see which will be granted at the New Whitney Ann Arbor, Friday night, September 4. In these visualizations of Hindoo glamour all the esthetic senses may revel, may find a refinement of pleasure that is exotic without a trace of decadence. Here is inspiration for artists and poets and dreamers; rhythm, color and plastic grace blended with sensuous appeal and illuminated with imaginative intensity. The performance is, in fact, a symphony of lovely moods rendered through the medium of the dance. It is an idealization of the Oriental soul which takes the chronicle of the theatre out of his element; the stock phases of dramatic reviewing fall away from it as useless means of appreciation. To convey the enthralling spell of St. Denis, there is needed the luscious impressionism of Arthur Symonds, as displayed in his papers on "Plays, Acting and Music."

The five numbers of this perfect program which with its less than two hours of enchantment brings consolation for almost an eternity of banal theatrical entertainment, have a unity in their development that may escape the casual observer who views them merely as detached and independent incidents. They constitute an epitomized interpretation of Hindoo life and culture, expressed poetically and with a spirituality that deepens progressively. First let us understand that these are "dances" in the widest sense of the word, rhythmic movements and pictorial poses in a free style, conveying the appeal of a personal temperament with a technique that is highly individual. "Poetic pantomime" would be a more accurate label, since each episode has its definite story.

Miss St. Denis and her assisting company of artists will appear at the New Whitney, Ann Arbor, Friday night, September 4th.

THE G. A. R. REUNION.

BY S. M. B. P.

This week the reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic is being held in Detroit. From the north, east and west these boys in blue come together once more. We are glad they have these reunions for they must be replete with fellowship and good cheer. Here they may recount the scenes of other days in which they participated; here their battles are refought although, thank God, they are unstained with human gore; here their tears mingle as they recall sad episodes of the battlefield and here as they look into each other's faces they thank the Heavenly Father that he has brought them once more together before the great bivouac.

We well remember when the sound of the first gun at Fort Sumpter sang like a death-knell through the length and breadth of our fair North, and how it brought forth from fireside and field its legions of resolute boys to meet the issue that had come and which they too well knew must be met. We remember, too, how the mothers' prayers ascended to Heaven—not that the bitter cup might pass, but that strength be given to drink of it, if need be to the very dregs, and await with prayerful breathless heart the verdict. The remembrance of those dark days come back to all who were old enough at that time to feel their ominousness.

Scarcely had the southern breeze brought the echo of that gun to our cities, villages and hamlets, ere the sound of the fife and drum was heard calling the faithful to the front. The principles of Washington, and his creed, not to give up an inch of soil nor a drop of water, but to hold all in trust for the people, for humanity, for liberty and God, were too well grounded in every loyal heart; the wealth of this nation was too sacred to the name of the great chief of our industries, the thrifty farmer of Mt. Vernon and the far seeing surveyor of our earlier borders, as well as the captain of our armies and the head of our councils. The integrity of our domain was threatened from afar and every loyal heart cried out: "By the sword of the Lord and Washington we will strike down the robbers of our birthright."

The South, as all knew, became the battle-ground between slavery and liberty, and in spite of the sound old doctrines of emancipation and no more slavery, tried to keep and extend slavery into the territories. The mantle of Washington had fallen upon a patriot president at the capital and the loyal heart of the North responded to his call. There were no lagers among our boys, no shrinking, no skulking, but with one common desire and purpose they went and their going was in earnest of the glorious day which in God's own time spread its mantle over our own fair land, now free and sanctified from bondage which for years had held us in its terrible thalidom.

Brave boys were they that went at their country's call. We honor them and cannot make them too welcome to our metropolises. A score of years or less and all will follow those that have already gone across the "mystic river." I pray God that "amid green pastures and beside still waters" this army host may bask in the rays of God's eternal sunshine, that a grand reunion may be held, review the victories of redeemed souls, while the stars and stripes of Heaven's banner float over them.

"Forty-five Minutes From Broadway."

Giving his followers their money's worth has long been an axiom of Geo. M. Cohan whose "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," with "Corinne" and Bernard Riggs in the leading roles, is to be presented at the Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, matinee and night Saturday, September 5th. Following out this theory he has provided an entertainment that would succeed along either of two lines and as a result scores unusual success along both. His play might be considered entirely by itself for there is a real plot that it acted for all there is in it by a company of real actors, and in addition there are enough song hits to entitle the piece to recognition and fame on that score alone and make the fame of a mediocre musical comedy. In this case the songs have been subordinated to the drama and both gain in strength thereby. It is filled with delicious comedy moments interspersed with bits of heart interest to say nothing of the six musical gems that go along to make "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" the tremendous success it always will be.

WAR SECRETARY ASKED TO SEND CAVALRY TO FAIR

General Manager Dickinson Sees Opportunity For Michigan Breeders.

SCARCITY OF WAR HORSES.

Demand Becomes Unprecedented Now That All Europe Is In Conflict—State Fair Wants Michigan to Know Type of Animal For Which There Is Need.

Realizing the demand that exists for horses suitable for cavalry service, the management of the Michigan State Fair is making an effort to interest Michigan farmers and horse breeders in this branch of the horse raising industry. So it may be known exactly the type of animals that is desired as cavalry mounts General Manager George W. Dickinson has asked Secretary of War Garrison to station a troop of soldier horsemen at the Fair grounds during the Fair. The request carries with it an offer of quarters for the troop and the giving over of a portion of the evening horse show program to drills by the soldiery.

General Manager Dickinson made the same request of the war department last year and was informed by Secretary Garrison that the only squadron available had been selected to participate in a cavalry camp of instruction in the vicinity of Gettysburg. Secretary Garrison indicated at that time that if the soldiery was not otherwise engaged permission might be granted, and Mr. Dickinson hopes he has his request in early enough this year.

Says Scarcity Is Alarming.

"My attention was called to this matter through an article which appeared in the Army and Navy Register and which quoted army quartermasters to the effect that there really is an alarming scarcity of such animals," said Mr. Dickinson. "If there were an emergency requiring a larger number of horses than will supply the commands at peace strength, the article went on to say, the war department would have great difficulty in getting them even with the reasonable departures from the official specifications. "It occurs to me that here is an excellent opportunity for Michigan horse breeders. An unprecedented demand for cavalry horses is felt just now because of the war activities abroad, and there is no telling how long it will keep up. I am hopeful Secretary Garrison will see his way clear to give the necessary permission. It certainly is a great chance for Michigan people who are interested in the horse industry, and I believe the government will reap a benefit too."

BELIEVE FUR SHEEP MEAN A NEW INDUSTRY.

Great Interest Taken In American Experiment—Lambs Exhibited Here.

Great interest is being taken all over the world in the experiments which F. E. Dawley of Fayetteville, N. Y., is making in raising fur sheep, the rare breed which will be one of the attractions at the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 7-18. For some years Mr. Dawley has been carrying on this work, and his efforts have met with marked success, so much so that those interested in the fur trade believe raising Persian lamb fur will be to the sheep business what the development of the Holstein has been to the cattle industry.

This year a large percentage of the grade Persian lambs which were dropped have had skins of exceptional value for fur. The best lamb had a skin equal to the highest priced imported baby lamb fur, and its dam was a half blood Lincoln ewe, so that the lamb carried only three-fourths of the Persian blood. The pure bred fur sheep are somewhat more nervous than the domestic sheep, but they are vigorous and grow fast and make a most valuable cross for meat or early lamb production on all the breeds which do well in America.

Mr. Dawley has experienced difficulty in the importation of these sheep, as the Persians realize the advantage of keeping a monopoly on the lamb fur business. Their exportation now has been stopped. Last year over $14,000,000 worth of Persian lamb fur was imported.

These sheep will be exhibited in one of the buildings on the grounds where they will have a central pen and may be viewed from every side.

After Dark Chores are Easy for Jones

Jones has a big enclosed Acetylene light in his barn.

A big, round, brilliant, white light.

A light he calls "the sun's little brother."

This big light is solidly fastened to a heavy timber, and unlike Jones' old oil lantern, it can't be tipped over.

Jones turns this high candle power light on—without a match, by simply pulling a little wire rod that hangs from the light.

On cold winter nights when it's dark at 4:30. When he gets home from town late—

Or when he has a sick "critter" to look after, Jones finds his big barn light a great convenience.

He says he wouldn't take $1,000 for it.

Mrs. Jones too, shares in the good thing.

She has "acetylene" light in every room in her house, and her light fixtures are handsome ornaments of brass and bronze.

Mrs. Jones cooks also on a big gas range—an acetylene range that furnishes heat on tap—just like millions of gas ranges in big cities.

The "acetylene" which feeds this range and the lights on the Jones' place is, of course, home made.

Jones makes it himself with the aid of a Pilot Lighting Plant.

He fills the light machine with UNION CARBIDE and plain water, once a month.

This Pilot Lighting Plant gives Jones the safest and most practical light and cooking fuel available for country home use.

These Pilot Lighting Plants

Are not storage tanks.

They make Acetylene very little at a time—as the burners use it.

The Pilot is one of hundreds of patented Acetylene machines.

All built on different principles to do the same work.

The test of time has brought "The Pilot" out on top.

The principle on which it works has proved to be the correct one.

Today we sell more Light machines than all other manufacturers in this country put together.

We sell these Pilot plants complete—through three factories and 3,000 local representatives.

We have a big eastern factory in Newark—a big central factory in Chicago and a Western Warehouse in Los Angeles.

A complete plant includes the machine, gas pipes, light fixtures and the cooking range.

Such a plant costs much less than a water or heating system. It is far more permanent as either, and as necessary to make your home modern.

Our 3,000 representatives are residents in the districts they serve! Each one established in a permanent growing business.

They are on the grounds to see to it personally that purchasers of Pilot plants get "value received" for their money.

AROUSING OVER A. A. ACTION

"Going to See Whether This Is a Free Country," Says General Manager Dickinson—Cycle Car Meet Not Under Auspices of State Fair.

The directors of the Michigan State Agricultural society have been aroused by the notice published throughout the country by the American Automobile association that the Michigan State Fair track has been blacklisted, and interesting developments are promised for the next few days.

The contest board of the A. A. A. has been informed that even though the ban is kept on the Michigan track it will not affect the automobile speed program here. Contracts have been made with a dozen of the best known drivers in the country, and they will appear in the events scheduled. If they do not they may not be allowed to participate in the automobile races at the Minnesota, Nebraska and the many other fairs where they are listed. The Michigan State Fair is a member in good standing of the American Association of Fairs and Expositions, and should a contract be broken with one member it is the policy of the association to protect itself and its members by severing all relations with the erring party.

Inasmuch as these state fair meetings are one of the chief sources of revenue of the A. A. A., it is believed the situation will receive careful consideration by that body. It is even asserted that the association may, if it is found necessary, inaugurate a series of automobile speed contests under its own auspices.

"To make it short, we're going to see whether this is a free country or not, if our track can be blacklisted when we are not even members of the A. A. A. and no sanction had yet been asked for our state fair meeting," said George W. Dickinson, general manager of the Fair. "This action has been taken against our track because of the cycle car races that were held there July 4 and 5. The races were not under our auspices; we merely leased the track as we lease it for motorcycle and harness race meetings. We never have had any difficulty over those. We regret this misunderstanding has arisen. We have taken counsel in the matter, however, and are confident our position is justly taken."

"Contracts with a number of well known drivers were made some months ago, long before the A. A. A. made the announcement concerning our track. Should any driver violate his contract with us he may not be allowed to drive on the track of any fair that is a member of the American association of fairs and expositions. When we sign a contract we live up to it and we expect the people who sign contracts with us to do likewise. That has been the position the association has taken in many instances to guard itself and its members from those who cannot be depended upon, and we will have the association's aid in this case."

"You can depend upon it there will be automobile races at the Michigan State Fair."

OLD SOLDIERS AGAIN TO BE GUESTS OF STATE FAIR.

Tuesday, Sept. 8, is Day G. A. R. Button is Admission Badge.

Tuesday, Sept. 8, will be Old Soldiers' day at the Michigan State Fair. The invitation issued last year by the Fair management to the old soldiers in the state was accepted in such a hearty spirit and the veterans had such a splendid time that they are asked to come again.

In his letter to the old soldiers General Manager Dickinson says: "The management of the Michigan State Fair, desiring to recognize the old soldiers of Michigan, extends to them an invitation to spend Tuesday, Sept. 8, at the State Fair. It was thought best to set aside a special day for this occasion that we might make every arrangement for your entertainment. The only requirement for admission will be the wearing of the regulation Grand Army button. A special tent will be provided, where the members may get together and talk over reminiscences. We trust that all members who are able to attend will be with us to enjoy a day's recreation and witness the great display of Michigan's agricultural and industrial exhibits."

MODERN SURGERY A MARVEL

Operations at Recent Clinic Only a Short Time Ago Would Have Been Considered Miracles.

The Clinic Congress at Chicago seems the climax of modern surgery and is surely a triumph of which the medical world everywhere may be justly proud. Before a thousand experts in surgical technique there have been performed operations which the age of miracles in almost every particular save raising the dead. To adduce a few instances. At the clinics portions of the intestines have been removed. A piece of bone has been taken from the leg of a patient and used to mend a diseased spine. Splint arm bones that would not knit have been pinned together by silver nails and screws. The entire lung of a dog has been removed and replaced as a hint of what may be the future treatment of tuberculosis. The calloused skin on the eyes of a child thus blinded from birth has been pierced. By brain operations upon prisoners the savants demonstrated the surgical cure for criminals. Spectators have watched the effects of radium mineral upon malignant growths such as tumor and cancer. And patients under a new anesthetic method have actually watched an operation performed upon themselves. In short, the whole clinical exhibit at this congress has been one startling feat of professional practice following close upon the heels of another.

A generation ago many of these operations which have come into actual and assured practice would have been deemed chimerical and impossible of achievement. Thanks to the assiduous study and persistent experiment of medical enthusiasts, surgical science has reached a level where none dare dogmatize upon its limits. It has, next to the laboratory, made a new era, exalting medical lore and research among the mightiest excellencies of a marvelous age. Sufferers whose desperate plight was once judged hopeless have the greatest reason to rejoice over the victories of surgical research and experiment.

Love vs. Chancellors.
The ancients knew that love laughs at locksmiths, but it was left for modern times to prove that the little blind god can outwit chancellors and kaisers as well.

Prussia has spent more than her finances like to reckon trying to denationalize those Poles who live under the German flag. Land has been bought by state money in Prussian Poland and German colonists assisted to settle there. It was hoped that in this way Teutonic influence would become paramount; but this is where Cupid upset calculations of Bismarck and his successors.

Among German colonists settled in Prussian Poland there is a considerable excess of men. Among the Poles, owing to emigration to America, there is a small excess of women. Polish girls are pretty and attractive. German settlers want wives. The stanch Brandenburg, planted on a farm in Posen at state expense, takes a Polish wife—and all the efforts of his government have gone for naught. The children of this marriage are uniformly raised as Poles, and usually the nominal head of the house comes to feel that Poland is an ill-used nation, which has some right to complain.

When Newspaper Writers Fail.
Newspaper English at its best has the qualities that its enthusiastic admirers claim for it—vigor, concreteness, directness and that demand on the attention which comes from dealing with the living facts of a vital, contemporary world. Yet this is no more than to say that a stirring message usually compels its expression. But it would be idle to deny that the newspapers are not always delivering vital messages; that there are days when the fate of the world is not in the balance; and yet the newspaper must proceed on the assumption that every day is Armageddon. Then one gets newspaper English at its worst. Let a battle be fought in Mexico, with the attention of a continent hanging upon the issue, and the reporter will rise to his opportunity. But when no battles are being fought, when no crises are reaching their climax, what comes out of Mexico? Columns upon columns of vague conjecture, if not worse; of irrelevant facts; of rumors magnified and multiplied, and all this vague matter diluted with repetition, prolixity, tautology, pleonasm and all the other ills against which the rhetorical textbooks warn us.—New York Evening Post.

When You Laugh.
It is a well known and easily demonstrated scientific fact that different people sound different vowels when laughing, from which fact a close observer has drawn the following conclusions: People who laugh in A (pronounced as ah) are frank, honest and fond of noise and excitement, though they are often of a versatile and fickle disposition. Laughter in B (pronounced as ay) is peculiar to phlegmatic and melancholy persons. Those who laugh in I (pronounced as ee) are children, or simple-minded, obliging, affectionate, timid and undecided people. To laugh in O indicates generosity and daring. Avoid if possible all those who laugh in U, as they are declared to be wholly devoid of principle.

SEVEN NATIONAL CATTLE CLUBS OFFER PRIZES

Importance of Michigan Exhibit Shown by Awards.

HERDS AGAINST THE WORLD

Shorthorn, Hereford, Aberdeen-Angus, Jersey, Guernsey, Holstein-Friesian and Brown Swiss Breeders' Associations Make Announcement.

The importance of the cattle exhibit that will be made at the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 7-18, is revealed by the fact that seven national cattle breeders' associations have offered special premiums and awards for cattle at this show. Michigan herds will compete with the world for the majority of these rich prizes, as the entry list has been thrown open to breeders everywhere.

The American Shorthorn Breeders' association offers $405 in specials for champions, herds, groups and single animals. There are $10 premiums for the grand champion bull and the grand champion female and ribbons for senior and junior champion bulls, senior champion cow and junior champion heifer. The association also made an additional appropriation of $200 for Michigan Shorthorns exhibited at the Fair provided the Fair management would give a similar amount. This offer was accepted, and $400 consequently is offered as special premiums for Michigan animals of this breed.

The American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association offers special premiums for the best specimens of its breed in twelve different classes.

Must Win Cup Twice.
The American Aberdeen-Angus Breeders' association, through Secretary Charles Gray, has made announcement of liberal special premiums for twelve classes.

The American Jersey Cattle club offers prizes for five special classes, as follows: Cow having an accepted record in authenticated test for one year exhibited by her owner, who must have been her owner during the time the test was made, which is awarded the highest number of counts by adding to the counts allowed for conformation one count for each twenty pounds of butter fat produced by the cow in one year over and above the minimum required at her age; get of sire, bull with four of his daughters; breeders' young herd—one bull six months and under two years, two heifers two months and under one year and two heifers one year and under two years; grand champion bull, exhibited by his owner, who must have been his owner for one year and over; grand champion female, same conditions.

The special trophy silver cup given by the American Guernsey Cattle club for the exhibitor winning the most money premiums in the several classes with animals bred by himself again is offered. This cup must be won twice before it becomes the property of any exhibitor. W. H. Tichenor of Oconomowoc, Wis., won it in 1912 and A. W. and F. E. Fox of Waukesha, Wis., in 1913.

The Holstein-Friesian Association of America will add 15 per cent in cash to each award in the classes under this breed, with the exception of the champion.

The Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders' association will give a special of $25 to the grand champion cow at the Fair.

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DANE COOLIDGE

Author of
"The Fighting Fool"
"The Taming of the Tiger," Etc.

Illustrations by Don J. Lavin

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancey are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to give up their mining claim and return to the United States. In the border town of Guadalupe Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The Mexican subsequently spent a large sum in an unsuccessful attempt to relocate the vein and then allowed the land to revert to taxes. Hooker and De Lancey arrive at Fortuna near where the mine, known as the Eagle Tail, is located. They engage the services of Cruz Mendez, who has been friendly to Kruger, to acquire the title for them, and get a permit to do preliminary work. Aragon protests and accuses them of jumping his claim. Bud discovers that matrimonial entanglements prevent Mendez from perfecting a valid title. Phil, who has been paying attention to Aragon's daughter, Gracia, decides to turn Mexican and get the title in his own name. Bud objects to Phil's intentions to Gracia. Aragon fails in his attempt to drive them off the claim. Rebels are reported in the vicinity. Stories of rapine and bloodshed are brought in. Bud and Phil begin work earnest on their claim. They make a rich strike of gold and stop work on the claim until the title can be perfected.

It was through some chicanery, he knew—some low-down trick on the part of Aragon—that his partner had been imprisoned, and he swore to have him out or know the reason why. Either that or he would go after Aragon and take it out of his hide.

It was outside Bud's simple code even to question his partner's innocence, but, innocent or guilty, he would have him out if he had to tear down the jail.

So he slapped his saddle-gun into the sling, reached for his gun, and went dashing down the canyon. At a turn in the road he came suddenly upon Aragon and the rural, split a way between them, and leaned forward as Copper Bottom burned up the trail.

It was long since the shiny sorrel had been given his head, and he needed neither whip nor spur—but a mile or two down the arroyo Bud suddenly reined him in and looked behind. Then he turned abruptly up the hillside and jumped him out on a point, looked again, and rode slowly back up the trail.

Aragon and the rural were not in sight—the question was, were they following? For a short distance he rode warily, not to be surprised in his suspicion; then, as he found tracks turning back, he gave head to his horse and galloped swiftly to camp.

The horses of the men he sought stood at the edge of the mine-dump, and, throwing his bridle-rein down beside them, Bud leaped off and ran up the cut. Then he stopped short and reached for his six-shooter. The two men were up at the end, down on their knees, and digging like dogs after a rabbit.

So eager were they in their search so confident in their fancied security, that they never looked up from their work, and the tramp of Hooker's boots was drowned by their grubbing until he stood above them. There he paused, his pistol in hand, and waited grimly for developments.

"Hi!" cried Aragon, grabbing at a piece of quartz that came up. "Aqui lo tengo!" He drew a second piece from his pocket and placed them together. "It is the same!" he said.

Still half-buried in the excavation, he turned suddenly as a shadow crossed him, to get the light, and his jaw dropped at the sight of Bud.

"I'll trouble you for that rock," observed Bud, holding out his hand, and as the rural jumped, Aragon handed over the ore. There was a moment's silence as Bud stood over them—then he stepped back and motioned them out with his gun.

Down the jagged cut they hurried, awed into a guilty silence by his anger, and when he let them mount without a word the rural looked back, surprised. Even then Bud said nothing, but the swing of the Texan's gun spoke for him, and they rode quickly out of sight.

"You da-burned greasers!" growled Bud, returning his pistol with a jab to his holster. Then he looked at the ore. There were two pieces, one fresh-dug and the other worn, and as he gazed at them the worn piece seemed strangely familiar. Aragon had been comparing them—but where had he got the worn piece?

Once more Bud looked it over, and then the rock fell from his hand. It was the first piece they had found—the piece that belonged to Phil!

CHAPTER XV.

When the solid earth quakes, though it move but a thousandth of an inch beneath our feet, the human brain reels and we become dizzy, sick and afraid. So, too, at the thought that some trusted friend has played us false, the mind turns back upon itself and we doubt the stability of everything for a moment. Then, as we find all the trees straight up, the world intact, and the hills in their proper places, we cast the treacherous doubts aside and listen to the voice of reason.

For one awful moment Hooker saw himself betrayed by his friend, either through weakness or through guile, and then his mind straightened itself and he remembered that Phil was in jail.

What more natural, then, than that the rurales should search his pockets and give the ore to Aragon? He stooped and picked up the chunk of rock—that precious, pocket-worn specimen that had brought them the first promise of success—and wiped it on his sleeve.

Mechanically he placed it beside the other piece which Aragon had gouged from the edge, and while he gazed at them he wondered what to do—to leave their mine and go to his friend, or to let his friend wait and stand guard by their treasure—and his heart told him to go to his friend.

So he swung up on his horse and followed slowly, and as soon as it was dark he rode secretly through Old Fortuna and on till he came to the jail. It was a square stone structure, built across the street from the cantina in order to be convenient for the drunks, and as Bud rode up close and stared at it, some one hailed him through the bars.

"Hello there, pardner," called Hooker, swinging down and striding over to the black window, "how long have they had you in here?"

"Two days," answered Phil from the inner darkness; "but it seems like a lifetime to me. Say, Bud, there's a Mexican in here that's got the jim-jams—regular tequila jag—can't you get me out?"

"Well, I sure will!" answered Bud; "what have they got you in for? Where's our friend, Don Juan? Why didn't he let me know?"

"You can search me!" railed De Lancey. "Seems like everybody quits you down here the minute you get into trouble. I got arrested night before last by those d—d rurales—Manuel Del Rey was behind it, you can bet your life on that—and I've been here ever since!"

"Well, what are you pinched for? Who do I go and see?"

"Pinched for nothing!" cried De Lancey bitterly. "Pinched because I'm a Mexican citizen and can't protect myself! I'm incomunicado for three days!"

"Well, I'll get you out, all right," said Hooker, leaning closer against the bars. "Here, have a smoke—did they frisk you of your makings?"

"No!" snapped De Lancey crossly, "but I'm out of everything by this time. Bud, I tell you I've had a time of it! They threw me in here with this crazy, murdering Mexican and I haven't had a wink of sleep for two days. He's quiet now, but I don't want any more."

"Well, say," began Bud again, "what are you charged with? Maybe I can grease somebody's paw and get you out tonight!"

There was an awkward pause at this, and finally De Lancey dropped his white face against the bars and his voice became low and beseeching. "I'll tell you, Bud," he said, "I haven't been quite on the square with you—I've been holding out a little. But you know how it is—when a fellow's in love. I've been going to see Gracia!"

"Oh!" commented Hooker, and stood very quiet while he waited.

"Yes, I've been going to see her," hurried on Phil. "I know I promised; but, honest, Bud, I couldn't help it. It just seemed as if my whole being was wrapped up in her, and I had to do it! She'd be looking for me when I came and went—and then I fixed it with her maid to take her a letter. And then I met her secretly, back by the garden gate. You know they've got some holes punched in the wall—loopholes during the night last summer—and we'd—"

"Sure, I'll take your word for that," broke in Hooker harshly. "But get to the point! What are you pinched for?"

"Well," went on De Lancey, his voice quivering at the reproach, "I was going to tell you, if you'll listen to me. Somebody saw us there and told Aragon—he shut her up for a punishment and she slipped me out a note—well, I couldn't stand it—I hired the string band and we went down there in a hack to give her a serenade. But this cad, Manuel del Rey, who has been acting like a jealous ass all along, swooped down on us with a detachment of his rurales and took us all to jail. He let the musicians out the next morning, but I've been here ever since."

"Yes, and what are you charged with?" demanded Bud brusquely. "Drunk," confessed Phil, and Bud grunted.

"Huh!" he said "and me out watching that mine night and day!"

"Oh, I know I've done you dirt, Bud," wailed De Lancey; "but I didn't mean to, and I'll never do it again."

"Never do what?" inquired Bud roughly.

"I won't touch another drop of booze as long as I'm in Mexico!" cried Phil. "Not a drop!"

"And how about the girl?" continued Bud inexorably. "Her old man was out and tried to jump our mine today—how about her?"

"Well," faltered De Lancey, "I—she—"

"You know your promise!" reminded Bud.

"Yes; I know. But—oh, Bud, if you knew how loyal I've been to you—if you knew what offers I've resisted—the mine stands in my name, you know."

"Well?"

"Well, Aragon came around to me last week and said if I'd give him a half interest in it he'd—well, never mind—it was a great temptation. But did I fall for it? Not on your life! I know you, Bud, and I know you're honest—you'll stay by me to the last ditch, and I'll do the same by you. But I'm in love, Bud, and that would make a man forget his promise if he wasn't true as steel."

"Yes," commented Hooker dryly. "I don't reckon I can count on you much from now on. Here, take a look at this and see what you make of it." He drew the piece of ore that he had taken from Aragon from his pocket and held it up in the moonlight. "Well, feel of it, then," he said. "Shucks, you ought to know that piece of rock, Phil—it's the first one we found in our mine!"

"No!" exclaimed De Lancey, starting back; "why—where'd you get it?"

"Never mind where I got it!" answered Hooker. "The question is: What did you do with it?"

"Well, I might as well come through with it," confessed Phil, the last of his assurance gone. "I gave it to Gracia!"

"And I took it away from Aragon," continued Bud, "while he was digging some more chunks out of our mine. So that is your idea of being true as steel, is it? You've done nobly by me and Kruger, haven't you? Yes, you've been a good pardner, I don't think!"

"Well, don't throw me down, Bud!" pleaded Phil. "There's some mistake somewhere. Her father must have found it and taken it away! I'd stake my life on it that Gracia would never betray me!"

"What Are You Pinched For?"

"Well, think it over for a while," suggested Bud, edging his words with sarcasm. "I'm going up to the hotel!"

"No; come back!" cried De Lancey, clanking at the bars. "Come on back, Bud! Here!" he said, thrusting his hand out through the heavy iron. "I'll give you my word for it—I won't see her again until we get our title! Will that satisfy you? Then give me your hand, pardner—I'm sorry I did you wrong!"

"It ain't me," replied Hooker soberly, as he took the trembling hand; "it's Kruger. But if you'll keep your word, Phil, maybe we can win out yet. I'm going up to find the comisario."

A brief interview with that smiling individual and the case of Phil De Lancey was laid bare. He had been engaged in a desperate rivalry with Manuel del Rey for the hand of Gracia Aragon, and his present incarceration was not only for singing rag-time beneath the Aragon windows, but for trying to whip the captain of the rurales when the latter tried to place him under arrest.

And De Lancey was the prisoner not of the comisario, but of the captain of the rurales. Sore at heart, Bud rode up through the Mexican quarters to the court of the rurales, but the captain was inexorable.

"No, senor," he said, waving an eloquent finger before his nose, "I cannot release your friend, No, senor!"

"But what is he charged with?" persisted Bud, "and when is his trial? You can't keep him shut up without a trial."

At this the captain of the rurales lifted his eyebrows and one closely waxed mustache and smiled mysteriously.

"Y como no?" he inquired. "And why not? Is he not a Mexican citizen?"

"Well, perhaps he is!" thundered Bud, suddenly rising to his full height. "But I am not! I am an American, senor captain, and there are other Americans! If you hold my friend without a trial I will come and tear your jail down—and the comisario will not stop me, either!"

"Ah!" observed the dandy little captain, shrugging his mustache once more and blinking, and while Hooker raged back and forth he looked him over appreciatively.

"One moment!" he said at last, raising a quieting hand. "There are perils of times, senor, in which all the defenders of Fortuna should stand together. I do not wish to have a difference with the Americans when Barnardo Bravo and his men are marching to take our town. No, I value the friendship of the valiant Americans very highly—so I will let your friend go. But first he must promise me one thing—not to trouble the Senor Aragon by making further love to his daughter!"

"Very well!" replied Bud. "He has already promised that to me; so come on and let him out."

"To you?" repeated Manuel del Rey with a faint smile. "Then, perhaps—"

"Perhaps nothing!" broke in Hooker shortly. "Come on!"

He led the way impatiently while the captain, his saber clanking, strode out and rode beside him. He was not a big man, this swathing captain of the rurales police, but he was master, nevertheless, of a great district, from Fortuna to the line, with a reputation for quick work in the pursuance of his duty as well as in the primrose ways of love.

In the insurrections and raidings of the previous summer he had given the coup de grace with his revolver to more than one embryo bandit, and in his love affairs he had shown that he could be equally summary.

The elegant Felis Luna, who for a time had lingered near the charming Gracia, had finally found himself up against a pair of pistols with the option of either fighting Captain del Rey, or returning to his parents. The young man concluded to beat a retreat. For a like offense Philip De Lancey had been unceremoniously thrown into jail; and now the captain turned his attention to Bud Hooker, whose mind he had not yet fathomed.

"Excuse me, senor," he said, after a brief silence, "but your words left me in doubt—whether to regard you as a friend or a rival."

"What?" demanded Bud, whose knowledge of Spanish did not extend to the elegances.

"You said," explained the captain politely, "that your friend had promised you he would not trouble the lady further. Does that mean that you are interested in her yourself, or merely that you perceive the hopelessness of his suit and wish to protect him from a greater evil that may well befall him? For look you, senor, the girl is mine, and no man can come between us!"

"Huh!" snorted Bud, who caught the last all right. Then he laughed shortly and shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know what you're talking about," he said gruffly, "but he will stay away, all right."

"Muy bien," responded Del Rey carelessly and, dismounting at the jail, he threw open the door and stood aside for his rival to come out.

"Muchas gracias, senor captain," saluted Bud, as the door clanged to behind his partner. But Phil still bristled with anger and defiance, and the captain perceived that there would be no thanks from him.

"It is nothing," he replied, bowing politely, and something in the way he said it made De Lancey choke with rage. But there by the carcer door was not the place for picking quarrels.

They went to the hotel, where Don Juan, all apologies for his apparent neglect—which he excused on the ground that De Lancey had been held incomunicado—placated them as best he could and hurried on to the news.

"My gracious, Don Felipe," he cried, "you don't know how sorry I was to see you in jail, but the captain's orders were that no one should go near you—and in Mexico we obey the rurales, you know. Otherwise we are placed against a wall and shot."

"But have you heard the news from down below? Ah, what terrible times they are having there—ranches raided, women stolen, rich men held for ransom! Yes, it is worse than ever! Already I am receiving telegrams to prepare rooms for the refugees, and the people are coming in crowds."

"Our friend, the Senor Luna, and his son Felis have been taken by Bernardo Bravo! Only by an enormous ransom was he able to save his wife and daughters, and his friends must now pay for him."

"At the ranch of the rich Spaniard, Alvarez, there has been a great battle in which the red-faggers were defeated with losses. Now Bernardo Bravo swears he will avenge his men, and Alvarez has armed his Yaqui workmen."

"He is a brave man, this Colonel Alvarez, and his Yaquis are all warriors from the hills; but Bernardo has gathered all the insurrectos in the country together—Campos, Rojas, the brothers Brizabosa, and they may crush him with their numbers. But now there is other news—that they are marching upon Fortuna and El Tigre, to seize the mines and mills and hold the rich American companies up for ransom."

"No, senores, you must not return to your camp. Remain here, and you shall still have your room, though Spanish gentlemen sleep on the floors. No, allow me, Don Felipe! I wish to show you how highly I value your friendship! Only because we cannot disobey the rurales did I suffer you to lie in jail; but now you shall be my guest, you shall!"

"Nope," answered Bud; "we're safer out at the mine."

He placed at De Lancey, in whose mind rosy visions were beginning to gather, and he, too, declined—with a sigh.

"Make it a bed for the night," he said. "I've got to get out of this town before I tangle with Del Rey again and find myself back in jail. And now lead me to it—I'm perishing for a bath and a sleep!"

They retired early and got up early—for Bud was haunted by fears. But as they passed through Old Fortuna the worst happened to him—they met Gracia, mounted on a prancing horse and followed by a rural guard, and she smote him to the heart with a smile.

It was not a smile for Phil, gone astray and wounded by chance; it was a dazzling, admiring smile for Bud alone, and he sat straighter in his saddle. But Phil uttered a groan and struck his horse with the quirt.

"She cut me!" he moaned.

"Aw, forget it!" growled Bud, and they rode on their way in silence.

CHAPTER XVI.

At their camp by the Eagle Tail mine, even though they held it still and were heirs to half its gold, the two partners were glum and sorrowful. The treacheries which Bud had forgiven in a moment of exaltation came back to him now as he brooded; and he eyed his friend askance, as if wondering what he would do next.

He recalled all the circumstances of their quest—the meeting with Kruger, Phil's insistence on the adventure, the oath of loyalty which they had sworn; and then the gradual breaking down of their brotherly devotion until now they were strangers at heart.

Phil sat by himself, keeping his thoughts to himself, and he stood aloof while he waited for the worst to happen.

From the first day of their undertaking Hooker had felt that it was unlucky, and now he knew that the end was coming. His friend was lost to him, lost alike to a sense of loyalty and honor; he gloomed by himself and thought only of Gracia Aragon.

The oath which Phil himself had forced upon Bud was broken and forgotten; but Bud, by a sterner standard, felt bound to keep his part. One thing alone could make him break it—his word to Henry Kruger. The Eagle Tail mine he held in trust, and half of it was Kruger's.

"Phil," he said at last, when his mind was weary of the ceaseless grind of thoughts, "I believe that mineral agent is holding back our papers. I believe old Arago has passed him a hundred or so and they're in cahoots to rob us. But I'll tell you what I'll do—you give me a power of attorney to receive those papers for you, and I'll go in and talk Dutch to the whole outfit."

"What do you want to do that for?" demanded De Lancey querulously. "Why can't you wait a while? Those papers have to go to Moctezuma and Hermosillo and all over the City of Mexico and back, and it takes time. What do you want to make trouble for?"

"Well, I'll tell you, Phil," answered Bud honestly. "I've got a hunch if we don't grab them papers soon we won't get 'em at all. Here these rebels are working closer all the time, and Aragon is crowding us. I want to get title said turn it over to Kruger, before we lose out somewhere."

"What's the matter with me going in and talking to the agent?" suggested Phil. Then, as he saw his partner's face, he paused and laughed bitterly.

"You don't trust me any more, do you, Bud?" he said.

"Well, it ain't that so much," evaded Hooker; "but I sure don't trust that Manuel del Rey. The first time you go into town he's going to pinch you, and I know it."

"I'm going to go in all the same," declared De Lancey, "and if the little squirt tries to stop me—"

"Aw, Phil," entreated Bud, "be reasonable, can't ye? You got no call to go up against that little fellow. He's a bad actor, I can see that, and I believe he'll kill you if he got the chance. But wait a little while—maybe he'll get took off in the fights this summer!"

"No, he's too cursed mean for that!" muttered De Lancey, but he seemed to take some comfort in the thought.

As for Bud, he loafed around for a while, cleaning up camp, making smoke for the absent Yaqui, and looking over the deserted mine, but something in the changed atmosphere made him restless and uneasy.

SHOULD COPY NATURE'S WAY

Human Planners of Reform Would Do Well to Make Note of Her Methods.

The divergence between man's ways and nature's ways becomes emphasized as we reflect on the mass of reforms and laws which are eagerly urged for the education and the moral and physical welfare of our youth, remarks the Brooklyn Eagle. One group wants trade training, one group "sex hygiene" taught in the schools, and another wants nonsectarian religious training there. Still another tells us that marriage is becoming more and more difficult, while vice and diseases which spring from it are increasing at a rate which threatens race extinction, or perhaps the decay of the now dominant races and replacing them by stock nearer to the soil and less easily molded by our present social ideals.

The discouraging thing about all this is that very few of these enthusiasts realize that they all have hold of corners of the same problem, and there is no sign of co-operation, co-ordination or coherence among them. That is the reverse of nature's way. She is synthetic, while the most that altruistic human planners seem able to do is to separate processes which nature has grouped, analyze them and, when any growth proves sickly or too lush, to treat its particular symptoms without tracing the root of the disease.

DAIRY FACTS

DEHORNING THE YOUNG BULL

Animals Are Made Less Combative and Are Easier Controlled—Time for the Operation.

The practice of dehorning heifer calves with caustic potash is becoming more popular all the time and the big majority of dairymen are feeling that the dairy cow has no right to carry round a pair of horns. Perhaps the bulls will continue to wear horns, owing to a suspicion that a dehorned bull is not as virile a one as nature made him, though it seems to be quite firmly believed among many breeders that the horns do no good and that no bull ought to be allowed to wear them.

However, the practice when horns are desired, is different than when heifers, according to the opinion of one pure bred dairymen, who wants no horns on the bulls he keeps. He uses the potash on the horns of his heifer calves, but permits those of the bulls to grow normally until the time when they begin to develop the bull temperament pretty strongly, at which time he uses a dehorner. This makes the bulls less combative and easier controlled.

If the potash is successfully used the bull temperament develops as usual and nothing can be done to quiet his disposition. He will be as dangerous as he otherwise would be except for the slightly lessened ability to do damage; while the bull whose horns developed, but were removed, will be like the other in not having horns to do damage, and in addition by their removal will be made of a more peaceful disposition. In brief, if a bull calf is not going to be permitted to wear horns when he grows up, he will have a better disposition of the horns are let to grow and then removed than if they are never allowed to start.

SWEET MILK DURING SUMMER

To Keep Out the Dust Stretch Piece of Cheese Cloth Across Pail and Milk Through It.

Bacteria are the sole cause of the souring of milk, and it is when the weather grows warm that bacteria find living conditions which just suit them. To get as few bacteria as possible in the milk wash the cow's udder before milking. The milker's hands and the pail should be thoroughly clean. Keep out the dust. To do this some dairymen go so far as to stretch cheese cloth across the pail and milk through that. A covered pail is a help. Immediately after milking strain the milk from the pail through three thicknesses of cheese cloth, then put it in a cool place and keep it cool until the cream rises. The sooner the milk is cooled after being taken from the cow the longer it will remain sweet.

RAISE GOOD HEIFER CALVES

Many Farmers Do Not Realize That an Excellent Market There is for a Good Cow.

It is surprising that so many farmers do not raise their good heifer calves. It must be that they do not know what a fine market there is for a good cow. Well-bred grade heifers are bringing good prices and pure bred stock have a ready sale at what might be called high prices. In both cases the demand is greater than the supply.

There is another way to look at this matter; in the raising of these calves you find a good way to market your surplus feed. You can get a good price through this channel besides paying for your time and trouble. Figure out the cost of raising a good heifer calf on your farm, what kind of a price she will bring at two years, and you will see the profit there is in it.

Mature Young Cows Best.

In the purchase of cows for the dairy it is better to buy those that are about four years of age rather than younger. By that time the real ability of the cow to produce milk will have manifested itself. In the six years following that age the cow will produce her maximum yield of milk and will produce the strongest and best calves.

Trying Season for Cows.

One of the most trying seasons of the year for the dairy cow is the latter part of summer and early fall. At this season the pastures are often short or dried up, and in such cases it is a common mistake of dairymen to let their cows drop off in flow of milk through lack of feed. Later they find it impossible to restore the milk flow, no matter how the cows are fed.

Rhodes and Rain. Among the stories in the duchess Aosta's book is one relating to the celebrated statue of Cecil Rhodes which stands in the main square of Bulawayo. The empire builder is shown in contemplation of his achievement, with head bowed. The whole district had been cruelly plagued by drought for over twelve months, when the natives got a great agitation and marched in enormous numbers to the square, thronging around the statue of Cecil Rhodes, insisting that it should be immediately given a top hat. They said that "Heaven reward this great creator of empire too good to send the needed rain while he stands there bareheaded."

ECZEMA SPREAD OVER HANDS

101 S. Boots St., Marion, Ind.—"The eczema started on my fingers, spread all over my hands. It broke out in tiny blisters, then would dry and crack and swell so I could have my hands in warm water and hurt me so badly. I could not do my work. The itching and burning were terrible. The more I scratched my hands the worse it made them. They were so bad I could not help scratching them and would walk the floor they annoyed me so. I could not sleep, lost many nights of rest on account of the eczema. My hands were not fit to be seen and I kept them wrapped up and wore mittens that made out of old linen."
