INTERESTING ACCOUNT OF MONTH IN PARIS

Mrs. C. S. Winans and Children Met With Many Interesting Experiences.

The following interesting article was written for the Standard by Mrs. C. S. Winans, whose husband was recently appointed United States at Nuremberg, Bavaria, having been transferred from Sevilla, Spain, where he had been stationed for several years.

In complying with the request of friends to give an account of our recent stay in Paris, I fear there will be little that is new to the readers of the Standard, and am sure they will be disappointed if they look for anything startling.

We left Sevilla July 11th with the intention of spending about a month on the journey, via Madrid and Paris, to Nuremberg. The first three weeks of our trip were all we had anticipated. Who would not enjoy seeing something of the Royal Palace and art galleries of Madrid; the cathedral and other structures of Toledo; the Escorial; the ancient town of Avila with its walls and towers intact; Segovia full of beauty; Salamanca with its institutions of learning; another wonderful cathedral in Burgos; San Sebastian with its shell-shaped beach; the sea side at Biarritz; Pau with its mediaeval castle and view of the Pyrenees; and some of the many historic chateaux near Tours and Blois? This is only a hint of what we saw during those three crowded weeks.

We arrived in Paris late in the evening of July 30, expecting to stop a week or ten days before going to our new home in Nuremberg. The second day in Paris we learned that France was ordering the mobilization of her troops to protect her borders.

President Poincaré issued a proclamation giving the reasons for this step and assuring the people that "mobilization is not war." That day's papers stated Germany had declared war against Russia. Of course this increased the fear that other countries, allies of those at war, would be drawn into the struggle. All foreigners were advised to leave the city within twenty-four hours, and a large number did leave, but many others found it impossible to do so, not being able to approach a railroad station for the crowd ahead of them.

That was an uneasy Sunday. At breakfast time we found that the waiters in the hotel dining room had vanished—called to their respective countries. Street cars were not running, scarcely a cab could be found, and soon many shops were closed, all because men, the reserves, had been called out. A large number of the stores remained closed during the month of our stay in Paris, and only a part of the street traffic was resumed.

We also found that rations for breakfast were cut down to "not much bread, no butter, and only a very little milk" in the weak coffee or chocolate. I mention this only to give an idea of how mobilization affected everything and everyone. In a few days the work laid down by those called to the colors was taken up by other hands, as far as possible, and fresh provisions came into the city daily as usual. The price of provisions was not allowed to rise to any amount. If we were correctly informed meat alone rose a little in price.

Our Ambassador's advice to Americans was not to cut short a visit in Paris; and the opinion seemed to be general that in a few days normal conditions would prevail and each could go on his way as usual. At the American embassy and at the Consulate we were told it would be impossible to cross the frontier from France to Germany.

We proceeded to write letters to Consuls in Switzerland and in Holland, to learn if it would be possible to enter Germany via either of these neutral countries. As all mails were delayed no answer reached us.

The first few days were occupied in getting the permits for our enforced residence in a city under martial law. Those who wished to leave after the twenty-four hours were obliged to secure a permit to depart. The Paris New York Herald kept Americans informed as to the necessary steps to be taken (translations of the orders issued by the government) as well as giving us news that was allowed to be published each day.

In accordance with its directions we repaired to the office of the American Consul General on Monday morning. There we found compatriots occupying all the standing room on the three broad flights of stairs leading to the office on the fourth floor. It took exactly two hours to go from the street entrance to the consul and his busy staff—all overworked during many trying days. Here each was given a paper identifying him as an American citizen, and he was instructed to present this paper, at nine o'clock the following morning, at the police headquarters of the district in which he happened to be staying.

It was with misgivings that we heard the same hour given to so many. When we reached said police headquarters we found the sidewalk covered by a line extending half way around the block. The most serious hardship we encountered while in Paris was standing in that line from nine o'clock in the morning until eleven at night, excepting a half hour between three and four in the afternoon when some one kindly held our places while we went for a lunch.

The cause of this delay was an unheard-of situation, (foreigners of many nationalities requiring this permit) lack of helpers and printed forms, and the fact that some disregarded the rights of others, either crowding in near the door or bribing those who guarded it.

Many sensible people dropped out of the line and obtained their permits some time during that week, when numbers were given out and no one was obliged to wait long at a time. We shall know better next time! However, a few weeks later we again spent over five hours in a line at the steamship office trying to get a ticket for New York. Standing in line came to be a habit.

Monday afternoon, August 3, we attended a mass meeting of thousands of Americans who met in the ballroom of one of the large hotels. Here resolutions were passed to ask the American government to send transports for the many Americans in Europe, and to make some arrangement with the banks of France to relieve the financial situation, since many travelers found they could realize little or nothing on some kinds of travelers checks and on letters of credit. After a few days this condition was much improved.

A special committee was also formed to work with the Embassy, and rendered excellent service in helping Americans who were in financial difficulty or who desired to secure passage for America.

Sight seeing had lost much of its charm, and, to our great disappointment, right after August 1st, all the principal places of interest, such as the galleries, museums, etc., were closed. We had a chance however to become familiar with the streets of Paris, the busy markets, and to enjoy visiting the public gardens and parks and some of the many beautiful churches, among these are Notre Dame, Madeleine, St. Etienne du Mont, Sacre Coeur and others.

Our emotions were stirred, as they would have been in any country, when we saw soldiers alone or in company with others, on foot or in cabs, hurrying toward some railroad station, and when we saw long columns (on one occasion a thousand men or more) marching along the streets some times singing the Marseillaise. Once we saw a procession of horses, splendid animals. We were told they had been requisitioned by the government.

Often we walked in the Jardin des Tuileries, or the extensive Place de la Concorde in the early evening, enjoying sunset or the fine vistas ending in the distant Arch of Triumph.

At night fall the powerful searchlight located on the roof of a nearby government building began its night long vigil over the great city. It was an impressive sight to watch the great ray of light sweeping slowly from one side to the other of the horizon on the look out for aircrafts. One could not help thinking sometimes of the possibilities.

Paris during these days and weeks was remarkably calm. The rioters who, in the first days or night, had broken the windows of a few restaurants and other places of business owned by Austrians or Germans, were promptly arrested and imprisoned, guards were placed near others, and that kind of activity ceased.

The days of waiting and uncertainty were relieved by only one letter from Mr. Winans in Nuremberg received August 11, and ten days later a telegram. The letter was carried by a friend to Amsterdam and then sent on by the American consul. It brought the good news that our eldest son had arrived in Hamburg July 30 and two days later in Nuremberg on the last through train—just in the "nick of time." He had been kept busy, helping look after the many Americans who were obliged to resort to American Embassies and Consulates in every part of Europe. The telegram advised us to go to America, and as we received no reply to letters of inquiry about entering Germany via Holland or Switzerland, all mails being much delayed, we could do nothing else.

Later we secured passage on a French liner and after an uneventful voyage arrived in New York, September 7th. In concluding I take pleasure in saying that we received nothing but kindness and courtesy from the French people and officials both in Paris and on the steamer to New York. Also I take pleasure in copying an extract from a recent letter written by Mr. Winans which states:

"The German authorities here have been most courteous and considerate. I have been for chronic constipation or for an occasional purge. For sale by all druggists of Chelsea.—Adv.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Happenings in Chelsea Forty Years Ago This Week.

A social hop was announced to be held at the McKune house for Thursday evening, October 1.

John Martin plead guilty in the circuit court at Ann Arbor to stealing boots and shoes from the store of Ed. McNamara and was given a sentence of three years in the work house.

At the annual meeting of the Detroit Conference of the M. E. church held in Detroit the following appointments were made for the Ann Arbor district: Presiding elder, S. Reed; Chelsea, J. W. Campbell; Lima and North Lake, L. J. Whitcomb; Dexter, J. A. McIlwain; Waterloo, A. W. Wilson.

Decided Not to Relay the Tile Drain.

At the meeting of the Lima township board and taxpayers which was held last Saturday it was decided not to grant the petition of a number of the freeholders, who asked to have the tile relayed and enlarged on the south extension of what is known as the Palmer-Baldwin drain. The township board and taxpayers went over the proposed drain and numerous arguments were advanced for and against the work. At one time during the inspection of the route the highway was filled with teams and automobiles and the scene somewhat resembled the gathering of an annual town meeting.

Ewing-Mott Wedding.

A very pleasant home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ewing, on east Middle street, at 11:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, September 23, 1914, when their daughter, Mina, was united in marriage with Mr. Leo J. Mott, of Dowagiac, Rev. Chas. J. DeLoe officiating.

The ceremony was witnessed by forty guests, most of whom were immediate relatives of the young couple. Following the congratulations a dainty wedding dinner was served.

The bride was the guest of honor at a party given by Miss Jennie Walker at her home last Friday evening. The couple were presented with a number of handsome gifts.

The young couple will be at home to their friends after October 1, at 320 McOmber street, Dowagiac.

His Hand Mutilated.

Harold P. Glazier, of Cavanaugh Lake, met with an accident about noon last Friday that left him with a badly mutilated hand. The young man, at the time the accident occurred was oiling an ensilage cutting machine that was being used to fill the silo at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Glazier at Cavanaugh Lake. He was wearing a leather gauntlet glove which caught in the rollers of the machine and his left hand was drawn into the knives. He lost the first finger at the first joint, the second just below the second joint, and the other two at the knuckle joints.

Mr. Glazier, accompanied by his wife and Dr. S. G. Bush, was taken by L. P. Vogel in his auto, to the office of Dr. Darling in Ann Arbor, where the injured hand was dressed. He returned to his home in the evening.

Held Up and Robbed.

Adelbert Eteo, a farm hand in the employ of James Richards, of Waterloo township, was held up at Leoni Sunday night, robbed of $2 and subjected to indecent treatment by the highwayman while being covered with a revolver. Eteo was on his way home from Jackson. He met a man on the car, who has since been identified as Charles Mallett, and got off the car with him at Leoni at the suggestion of the newly-made acquaintance to have a good time. They walked along together some little distance, when suddenly Eteo was alarmed at seeing a revolver pointed in his face and being demanded to hand over his money.

Monday morning Eteo went to Jackson to swear out a warrant. When the car stopped at Leoni Charles Mallett got on. Eteo recognized him as the man who had made him the trouble the night before, and when the car reached Jackson, pointed Mallett out to the officers, who took him into custody. Mallett is an ex-convict, having served two or three terms in prison for highway robbery and other offenses.

FIERCE BATTLE LASTS FOR DAYS; FIRST DETAILS

Gigantic Conflict as the Allies Attempt to Hurl Back the Invading Armies.

CARNAGE HAS BEEN AWFUL

Really a Series of Attacks and Repulses That Have Gone on Along Front of One Hundred and Fifty Miles—Bravery Amounting to Fanaticism Has Been Shown by Both Sides—Petrograd Advances Are All Extremely Optimistic.

On the Battle Front, via Paris, Sept. 23.—The western wing of the German line has been thrust back seven miles during the last 48 hours as a sequel to continuous fighting night and day.

Both armies, despite almost superhuman fatigue, show the utmost determination not to yield an inch of ground without a terrible struggle, but the fresher troops at the disposal of the allied commanders have gradually forced the Germans to recede.

The recklessness displayed at the beginning of hostilities, with the resultant carnage through the machine guns, has almost disappeared and every movement of the attacking and defending troops is carried out with the utmost caution until the moment of actual contact.

The French report that they have made progress in the territory between Reims and the Argonne forest. On their left wing they have reached the heights of Lassigny. With the French on this part of the battle line are the British, who, according to an official statement issued by the British press bureau, have fared badly since the beginning of the war in the loss of officers.

It is now becoming the conviction of military men that nothing but outflanking movements can have any serious effect on either army.

The Germans, according to their official report, have been strongly reinforced both on their right, where General von Kluck is making such a stubborn stand in almost impregnable positions on the hills north of Aisne, and in the center, where the Germans are making almost superhuman efforts to recapture Reims.

Seventh Day's Battle.

From the Battle Front, via Paris, Sept. 22.—The seventh day of the battle of the Aisne has ended with the Germans and allies entrenched in practically the same positions they held for the last two days.

Artillery duels such as never have been seen before are being carried on with the hope of compelling the evacuation of the strongly held positions, with occasional successes to the opposing sides, while the infantry, in the face of a galling fire, have charged right up to the guns, only to make their opponents give way slightly, or to be repulsed with great losses.

The Germans took the allies' trenches on the river to the north of Soissons after hard fighting. A counter-attack was executed by the allies and the trenches were won.

The fighting may go on for days yet, but sooner or later one side must find the continual fall of shells and the disconcerting infantry attacks too much for them, and, leaving a strong rear guard, will draw back.

First Details of Great Combat. It is now possible to give the first details of the terrible battle of the Aisne—the greatest battle in the history of the world.

It is a story of a deadly duel of big guns, of furious attacks, of terrific counter-attacks, of hand-to-hand clashes and bayonet charges and of frightful carnage.

It is a story of a succession of battles, which have been fought now on one part of the line and now on the other, hour after hour for every hour of the twenty-four, day after day and night after night, for six long days, and still with no result at the time of writing.

The story starts with the day of the fourteenth. From the twelfth to the morning of the fourteenth, the rival armies had been fighting a rear-guard action, precipitated when the retreating Germans turned at bay to give battle to their allied pursuers.

The real fighting started on the morning of the fourteenth, when the battle became general along the range of heights to the north of Aisne.

The fighting was sustained with deadly earnestness during all of the next day, the Germans contesting every foot of the way in a supreme endeavor to hold their positions until reinforcements could arrive.

On the night of the fifteenth they appeared to have been strengthened, and commenced their formidable movement against the French and British all along their front. A furious attack on the Allies' extreme left, with the big guns of the rival artillery lighting the line of the opposing fronts in fierce silhouette, was repulsed with great courage by the allies. Again and again the Germans returned to the attack with the tenacity that was the marvel of French troops, but each time they were repulsed. No fewer than ten times did they drive their dense masses of troops at the allied infantry, but never were they able to break through.

All night long the fighting lasted, the allies bracing themselves, after each successive counter-attack to meet the furious onslaught of charging Teutons, until toward dawn the men of both sides were ready to drop from sheer exhaustion.

Just before daybreak the Germans threw all their remaining strength and energy into one final charge, that was conducted with all the vim and courage that could be expected of fresh troops.

They charged like madmen—like fanatics who knew nothing of the fear of death.

But they were rolled back again, and to their enormous losses of the night was added another long roll of dead and wounded. It was as if this was their one chance of salvation, and all the desperation and all the resolution at their command was thrown into it.

Hardly had they recovered from this final grand sortie when the allies followed with a vigorous counter-attack in an effort to catch the Germans off their balance. In this the allies were partly successful, for they gained ground slightly.

On the morning of the seventeenth fighting again was resumed with the desperation that rivaled that of the big night attack.

At the end of the day it appeared that the Germans had been forced to retire about seven miles.

During the fighting, which lasted all day and into the night, the Germans lost 600 prisoners, aside from the dead and wounded, which could not be computed, and a number of rapid-fire guns.

Darkness made the operations extremely difficult, as the use of searchlights by the rival commanders was refrained from, owing to the danger of exposing their positions.

Hand-to-hand fighting, in which the bayonet was used extensively, resulting in terrible losses, marked the combat as one of the most furious ever fought.

The progress of the battle indicated that the rival supreme commanders are going to leave a decision of the struggle to the big guns. The struggle is so titanic that mere numerical strength, even when that strength is counted in the millions, has proved itself inadequate to force the issue to a decisive result.

Batter Reims and Soissons. With Reims and Soissons being battered to pieces by German artillery, the ninth day of the world's greatest battle found both the invaders and the allies moving huge bodies of infantry into the conflict.

The greater part of the soldiers of the two mighty opposing armies have been able to gain a rest as a result of the artillery duel which has been raging for more than a week.

The arrival of German reinforcements estimated in number at 100,000 men resulted in the invaders taking the offensive at several points and it was necessary for the allies to throw forward heavy bodies of men to engage the German attacking forces.

The activity of the British and French round Soissons shows that the allies are continuing their flanking movement against the troops of General von Kluck.

Hardest Fighting Near Soissons. According to the official announcement issued by the war office the hardest fighting is in progress near Soissons on the extreme western end of the battle line and near Reims in the center.

The French have been able to move their heaviest artillery to the firing line east of the Oise, near its junction with the Aisne, and a continuous night and day bombardment against the German positions is in progress. It is confidently believed that the French military authorities in Paris that the German positions can be so thoroughly weakened by the cannonade that the French and British will be able to sweep the Germans from their entrenchments at the point of the bayonet, despite the reinforcements.

Already it is said the French have been able to silence several of the German batteries at that point compelling them to take up new positions.

Both Soissons and Reims are reported to be in flames.

Petrograd Sure of Victory.

According to Petrograd advices, the fortress of Jaroslavl is being bombarded. Przemysl has been invested, and General Dankl's army, which is retreating toward Cracow, has been surrounded.

The capture of the town of Dublecko, on the River San, by the Russians has cut Przemysl off from the western armies, so that it must now rely for defense on the Austrian and German army corps which are there.

General Dankl is believed to be in a difficult position. Driven out of South Poland and separated from the main body of the Austrian army, he has been compelled to make a race for Cracow.

The Germans have retaliated to some extent by penetrating the territory of Suwalki, Russian Poland.

Many British Officers Killed.

The official casualty lists received at London are proof that the battles in France exceed in violence and stubbornness anything since the struggle in Port Arthur.

The part the British officers are playing is illustrated by the bare testimony of the casualty lists. Seven hundred and ninety-seven officers are among the killed, wounded and missing, which is a percentage out of all proportion to the losses in the ranks. One hundred and thirty officers have been killed, 388 have been wounded and 279 are missing. Many of the missing probably must later be recorded as killed or wounded.

Famed Cathedral Razed.

The French minister of the interior, Louis J. Malvy, announced that the famous cathedral of Notre Dame at Reims had been destroyed and all the other historic and public buildings either laid in ruins or seriously damaged during the bombardment of Reims by the German artillery.

Great Britain has received no proposals for peace from Germany or Austria, according to a message received by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British ambassador at Washington, from Sir Edward Grey.

BRITAIN ADMITS LOSS OF CRUISERS IN NORTH SEA

Three Ships Sunk By German Submarines Early Tuesday Morning

ABOUKIR, THE HOGUE AND CRESSY ARE THE VICTIMS

Allied Armies' Claim That Germans Are Going Steadily Forced Back Along Long Line of Battle of Aisne.

London—Three British cruisers—the Aboukir, the Hogue and the Cressy—with more than 2,200 men on board, and two German submarines, whose complements were not known here, were sunk early Tuesday morning in an engagement, presumably off the German fortifications at Helgoland, in the North sea.

The sinking of the British cruisers was given out officially by the London war office, but the destruction of the submarines was made known only through survivors of the English ships who were picked up and taken to Ymuiden, Holland.

Thirty uninjured officers and 80 seamen, survivors of the British cruisers, arrived in Harwich, England, Tuesday night, and said that they believed at least 1,000 of the officers and men of the two cruisers had been picked up. Two ships, the Titon and the Flores, took survivors into Ymuiden, the former 287 and the latter 20. These men said that many more had been picked up and transferred to British torpedo boats; also that the British warcraft had rushed to the rescue immediately following the disaster and no doubt had succeeded in rescuing many.

It is taken for granted that the three cruisers, which have been used as scout ships were skirting close to the coast at Helgoland at the time. The Aboukir suddenly, according to the meager details, was lifted into the air by an explosion, and settled down into the water and sank almost immediately.

The Cressy and Hogue rushed at once to the spot, to pick up the men of the Aboukir's crew and were almost simultaneously torpedoed, both sinking as quickly as had the Aboukir. The survivors at Ymuiden said that there were five submarines in the attacking party and that other ships of the British fleet which rushed up to the scene on hearing the explosions, succeeded in sinking two with rapid-firing guns. The other three are believed to have escaped, whether uninjured or not is not known.

Allies Still Claim Advantage.

Paris—While the German center in the region around Rheims is apparently still holding the strong position it took up at the opening of the battle of Aisne 10 days ago, French success there being limited to the repulse of severe counter-attacks, all reports from the extreme right indicate that the turning movement of the allies is on the eve of being crowned with victory.

General Joffre, commander-in-chief, reported Tuesday to the minister of war, M. Millerand, that the French advance on the German right continues, that not only has General von Kluck been forced to retire, but there are indications that the German center has reached the high tide of its resistance and will soon be forced to join in a general retrograde movement to the new lines.

The army under Crown Prince William is reported to have already fallen back to new lines.

The official communique issued simply says that "on the right bank of the Oise the Germans have been forced to give way before French attacks," but unofficial reports from English correspondents who have been behind the lines of the allies place French troops at Peronne and Le Catelet, the latter town 12 miles due north of St. Quentin, which is the extreme right of the army under General von Kluck, against which the turning movement has been directed.

The official communique issued at 11 o'clock Tuesday contains just four words: It says:

"The situation is unchanged."

French and British aviators who have made reconnaissances over the German lines report that von Kluck has begun to move his heavy siege guns northward. This, of course, may be simply in view of the French advance on the west of the German lines, but experts see in it the beginning of the German retreat toward the Belgian frontier.

BRITISH SOLDIERS TELL HOW THEY WON THE DAY AT MARNE

By GEORGE DRU.

International News Service.
Paris.—Details given me by British soldiers enable me to give the following account of the participation of the British in the great battle of the Marne:

The troops had marched since dawn through a country of fields and comfortable farm houses. As the afternoon wore on they could see the foe had been driven back from positions recently held. On all sides began to appear stretches of charred waste and broken, gaunt walls, relics of happy homes—even a church on the edge of a village given to the flames, and tombstones trampled under foot.

As the march was renewed the temper of the men exhibited a distinct change. There was no more whistling, no more light banter. Each man's face was set and determined. As night drew near the rumbling of guns was audible in the distance. Then came a gallop on a foam-spattered horse bearing dispatches to the general. After delivering the dispatches he mounted a fresh horse and disappeared into the darkness.

Still the khaki-clad wave marched on, every mile bringing the sound of heavy firing nearer. Toward midnight a squad of cavalry came into touch on the right, and a little later the men were in what they soon discovered was to be the firing line.

Trenches Dug at Night.
The army came to a halt, but hard-pressed men than blankets were in store. Gallopers came flying from nowhere and were as quickly dispatched into the darkness. After a wait of no long duration the men dug trenches and threw up breastworks to be ready for the coming fray.

Daylight showed in front of an almost level stretch of open country, backed up by a belt of growing timber, where the Germans had taken up their position. Although none of the foe was visible, the woods were alive with armed men, and behind the woods lay artillery in trenches protected by breastworks. The British troops waited, backed up by heavy guns in the rear. Suddenly there was shooting in the distance, followed by a long wall as a shell passed over their heads, to explode with a deafening roar at a safe distance from the trench. The Germans had opened the duel.

Guns Begin to Answer.
The guns of the British soon began to answer with greater effect. All at once little spurts of dust were noticeable rising in front. The men in the woods were trying to get the range, but still our men had no orders to fire.

One of our men, unable to control his anxiety to use his rifle, rose from the trenches, fully exposing himself to the enemy's fire, only to fall back dead.

Finding themselves unable to draw our fire, the Germans advanced in the open, only to be met by a heavy volley. They quickly sought cover, and then the fight became vigorous. With two hours' continuous fighting, the foe returned into the heart of the woods.

Our guns practically silenced the German battery, thanks to information received from a French aeroplane. They then turned their attention to the riflemen in the woods and under protection of their fire our soldiers silenced the infantry. If it had been a parade they could not have shown more coolness and steadiness.

Enemy Quite Thicket.
After covering most of the intervening space at a march they broke into the double and soon were in the vicinity of the thicket. Finding our guns had located them, the enemy had retreated.

Our left and right flank cavalry rounded the edge of the woods while the infantry passed through the center of the timber. On reaching the far side they fell into close formation and charged the foe, and what they missed was not enough to fill a liquor glass, let alone a tumbler.

Dead Germans, struggling, wounded horses and broken guns made a thrilling but terrible picture. Great gasps torn in the earth were eloquent signs of the accuracy of British gunnery.

At another stage of the great battle the Germans massed near a wood. The British lay well away from them on one side, the French under General Pau on the other. Some desultory firing took place and the Germans tried to hide their real strength under cover of the forest, but the allied commanders had been well supplied with information and were on the alert.

The Germans' right asked for an armistice for the purpose of attending to their wounded and burying their dead, but while this request was under consideration a British aeroplane discovered the Germans were setting a trap for the allies. Negotiations at once were broken off and the fighting recommenced.

Death Trap Falls.
An airman had seen an immense number of guns enter the woods, the foe evidently having planned to put up a sham fight and retreat so as to draw the British to the hidden guns. It was a well planned death trap, but the allies by this time were aware of the tactics. The motive behind the request for an armistice was to lure the allies into a sense of security and so enable fresh German forces to arrive from Compiègne.

A terrific cannonade at once was opened upon the wood, which took fire, and as a brisk wind was blowing, the flames soon turned the forest into an inferno. The Germans rushed out in great disorder, and the British, who were waiting, fell on them hip and thigh. The men, remembering all that had been done by them and the peasantry, fought with terrible fury, and wiped out the score.

The German commander concentrated all his energies on saving the guns, but this was just the thing the allied commanders had decided to frustrate. Much fierce fighting took place around the artillery, the British cavalry distinguishing itself by its dash and determination, sweeping down upon the German horsemen trying to escort the guns to places of safety. They were through them like an avalanche, and it will be long before those Teutons who escaped forgot the headlong, irresistible rushes of our hard riders.

Once again it was demonstrated that the cavalry arm still is one of the most effective an army can possess when it is used at the proper moment and in the right way. Cavalry may be useless against men entrenched on kopjes, but in the open field it is as effective as in the days of the first Napoleon.

Not only did the cavalry prevent the German guns from escaping, but their lightning-like delivery of charges prevented the gunners from taking up positions from which to work havoc on our infantry. The Germans were busy at all times, and the accuracy of their firing soon made every fresh position untenable.

Our infantry went also into the fray with terrible relish and zeal. The zouave-like open formation is the best on earth for rapid advance and heavy volleys on the move.

Our men got over the ground at a swinging pace, and closed up for bayonet work. The men literally were on the run, and nothing could stop them. They went through the Germans like fire through flax.

The French are loud in their praises of the British in this battle. Stand after stand was made by the Germans in hope of stemming the tide of disaster until support should arrive, but the British knew the value of time as well as the Germans, and pushed the attack home so hotly that, according to the latest verbal reports, the enemy lost, in dead and wounded, 35,000 men. A large amount of artillery, great and small, big guns and rapid firers, fell into the British hands.

RIVERS CHOKED WITH BODIES OF AUSTRIANS

London.—The newspaper correspondents describe horrible scenes on the battlefields abandoned by the Austro-German forces last week," says the Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent.

"Streams, they say, were choked full with slain men, trodden down in the headlong flight till the waters were dammed and overflowing the banks. Piles of dead are awaiting burial or burning. Hundreds of acres are sown with bodies and littered with weapons and battle debris, while wounded and riderless horses are careering madly over the abandoned country. The trophies captured command prize much German equipment. An ammunition train captured at Janow (11 miles northwest of Lemberg) was German, while the guns taken include 46 heavy caliber bearing Emperor William's initials and belonging to the German Sixth army corps.

"The line of retreat of the Austro-German forces was blocked with debris of every kind—valuable military supplies, telephone and telegraph installations, light railway and other stores, bridging material—in fact, everything needed by a modern army was flung away in flight. Over one thousand wagons with commissariat supplies alone were captured.

"Newspaper dispatches assert that the German troops have been interspersed with Austrian troops in the trenches in order to raise the morale of the Austrians. One correspondent declares that while the Austrians took flight the Germans were ready to the last man to perish."

advance on Paris. The French army, according to the staff, is showing signs of having shot its bolt and has fought itself to a standstill, being unable to fill its depleted ranks like the Germans.

The headquarters announcements still give no definite information regarding the position of the battle line, contenting themselves with speaking of it generally as located between the Oise and Meuse rivers, but not mentioning what part of this large region the Germans occupy.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Let me live in my house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by—
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish—so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scotchman's seat,
Or hurl the cynic ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

An attractive way of serving cranberry jelly, or, in fact, any kind of jelly which one desires to serve for a company lunch, is to put it into the little paper cases used for salted nuts. The jelly will not soak through, even if put in hot.

Add a few sweet pickles to salmon with bread crumbs to absorb the oil, then serve as a salad with any desired dressing.

Olive Cream Sandwiches.—Mix one tablespoonful of olives stuffed with red pepper, add to a cake of cream cheese. When well mixed spread on buttered bread.

Mixed Spanish onion added to creamed cheese also makes a most tasty sandwich filling.

Stuffed Cabbage.—Take a firm, solid head of cabbage, cut out a cavity in the top and fill with well-seasoned sausage, cover with a cabbage leaf tied on and boil until tender in a kettle of boiling salted water.

Ham Salad.—Mince a cup of cold boiled or fried ham, four hard-boiled eggs, a teaspoonful of celery seed, one of mustard, one of Worcestershire sauce, two green peppers. Arrange in nests of crisp lettuce and serve with boiled dressing.

Marshmallow Rice Pudding.—Take a cup of cold boiled rice, add a pint of milk, sugar and two eggs, or one will do, place in the oven and bake slowly after putting a dozen or more marshmallows, which have been soaked in milk for a few hours, on the top. Bake until a light brown. The marshmallows make a very pretty decoration and also add to the flavor.

Almond Junket.—Grind a half cupful of blanched almonds, pound them until fine, and add with flavoring a quart of milk which has been thickened with a junket tablet. Pour into sherbet cups and serve with sugar and cream.

If you save money you are a miser.
If you spend money you are a loafer.
If you get it you are a grafter.
If you don't get it you are a bum.

AUTUMN GAME AND FISH.

We have come to regard game nowadays as so high priced at all times and so out of season most of the time that we must do without it altogether. The locality and time of the year has much to do with the abundance of game, and when we can have it occasionally it certainly makes a wholesome change.

Where quail and prairie chickens are plentiful these delicacies are in high favor. Quail is best roasted, and usually all small birds are best stuffed, as stuffing takes the flavor from the bird.

Roast Quail.—Tie a strip of salt pork around each bird after stuffing with buttered bread crumbs, browned. Put the birds into a roasting pan, cover with bits of butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dust with flour, cover the pan after adding a little boiling water and cook in a hot oven 15 minutes, basting often. Serve each bird with a square of fried hominy. A celery salad is good served with quail.

Broiled Quail.—Split the birds down the back and rub all over with butter. Lay a broiler over a clear fire and cook the bird ten minutes, turning frequently. Serve on squares of fried bread and pass currant jelly with them.

All small birds like, snipe, pigeons, woodcock are prepared in the same way. One thing to remember in cooking all small birds, is to cook them quickly so they will not dry out and become hard and tasteless.

When the season for venison arrives, as it will shortly, see that it hangs long enough to develop a flavor. It is a good plan to sponge it inside and out with vinegar several times while hanging.

Venison Roast.—Rub a piece of roast over well with a lemon, dot with butter, season with salt and pepper. Chop an onion fine, also one carrot, and spread this over the meat. Baste often and cook three-quarters of an hour for four pounds. Serve with spiced grape jelly.

HARVESTING FALL AND WINTER APPLES

Apples as They Grow on Long Island.

(By M. ROBERTS CONOVER.)

That apples may reach maturity properly, it is necessary that they develop under normal conditions.

Wormy or diseased apples ripen prematurely and will not keep. Fruit that is to be kept for winter, must not mellow on the trees, nor soon after picking.

Healthy winter apples are yet immature in late summer. That is why they do not ripen under the warm August sun that mellows the pears and peaches and fills the purple grapes with sweetness.

At this time, winter apples should not have colored, nor quite attained to their full growth. During the early fall when the days are shorter and the heat less intense, maturing of the winter apples is slower than with summer varieties and this retarded process seems to insure firmer flesh and tougher skin than is the case with summer varieties.

During late September and early October, the sap flow is gradually lessening. The leaves turn to yellow and brown. The apples are now fully matured, colored and as far as growth is concerned, ready to come off—but nature will yet do something for the fruit. The succulent vegetation which developed the squash and pumpkin, has been severed from their fruits by the careful grower, but this rule need not apply in the case of the winter tree fruits.

The tree having withdrawn its exuberant sap flow, the fruit does not stand risk from frost. Under the influence of the cool nights the skin of the apple brightens and toughens.

This ability that fruits and vegetables have for strengthening their tissues in the autumn sunshine, is called curing, and while vegetables and many fruits must be separated from the parent plants to perfect this process, the winter tree fruits are naturally subjected to this curative process in that the tree no longer lifts such quantities of sap to the fruit, and the stem instead of conveying moisture, becomes merely a means of suspending the fruit in the sun and air where it cures.

The wise farmer likes to see two or three frosts upon his apple crop before he gathers it.

The next essential is to gather the fruit without bruising it. Hand-picked they must be for winter keeping.

After gathering, the fruit should not be allowed to lie long in heaps upon the ground, but should be sorted and kept in a cool, airy building until barreled.

Double-headed barrels are used for those apples destined for storage. The finest specimens are placed at the bottom and top of the barrel with good fruit in the center.

Only fair apples are used for this. Speckled or bruised fruit is rejected and sold in open barrels for immediate use.

The barrels are shaken lightly, in order to insure their being full. A good heading device is imperative where a large crop is to be handled.

Apples to be held for shipment or stored for home use, should be kept in a temperature ranging between 32 to 40 degrees—neither higher or lower.

COMBATING INSECT PESTS IN ORCHARD

Remove All Refuse, Such as Decayed Fruit, Dead Leaves, Limbs and Trees.

The orchard should be thoroughly cleared of all refuse such as decayed fruit, dead leaves, limbs and trees, just after harvesting the fruit. There is only one way to produce good fruit and that is to keep the orchard in a healthy condition and as free as possible of the many ravenous pests, that would, if not held in check, quickly destroy it.

Where rubbish is allowed to remain in an orchard, especially through the winter season, it makes a good harbor for insects; but if removed and burned will destroy a large portion of them.

Every sucker, dead limb and tree should be removed from the orchard as well as all refuse under the trees for upon these useless branches and trees and under the rubbish winter the enemies which next spring will lay the eggs which will produce thousands of pests.

There are many insects and fungous growths which never begin their attacks until the trees are commencing to die from some other cause, but hasten the death of sickly trees and then spread to the others.

Some persons will often permit dead trees to stand year after year in their orchards to decay while others will simply cut the trees down and pile them until the insect life which they contain has developed into myriads and passed on to attack the nearby living trees.

Dead trees should never be cut down and the roots left in the ground. They must be taken out roots and all for the roots contain insects which if not removed will pass to the roots of other trees.

Two of the most destructive insects we have to trees are the root borer and the bark beetle. They are both easily detected. The root-borer can be found near the surface boring its way into the roots while the presence of the bark-beetle is noticeable by the limbs and body of the trees containing small holes as though a charge of buckshot had been fired into them. If these enemies are allowed to run their course the result will be the death of the trees.

The birds are our best friends and the very best means of destroying all insect pests and should be encouraged to live and nest in the orchards. There is scarcely a bird that is not worth more than its weight in gold because of the many insects it destroys.

GOOD TREATMENT NEEDED BY PLUMS

Dropping of Fruit Before Maturity May Be Prevented by Giving Proper Attention.

(By BESSIE L. PUTNAM.)

There is a common complaint among those who have plum trees, that the plums always drop before maturity. This can be easily prevented by proper treatment. It is usually due to lack of nourishment, late frost, or the curculio—most frequently to the latter, though often the two enter as damaging factors.

In early spring while the ground is still frozen, mulch heavily with horse manure. This serves the double purpose of supplying the necessary plant food, and of holding the frost in the ground, and retarding the growth of the buds until danger from frost is over. After the weather becomes settled, the coarse part of the mulch should be raked off and removed, leaving the fine part to contribute its richness to the soil.

Just before the buds open, spray with paris green or london purple for curculio, using in proportion of one pound of the arsenite to 300 or 350 gallons of water. Stone fruits require a more dilute solution than apples.

Paris green is less liable to burn the foliage, though we have ourselves used the london purple for years, with no bad results. By mixing the arsenite with twice its bulk of lime one may guard against injury to the leaves.

A cheap, tin pump, costing only a dollar, has proved all that is wished for the spray, though if one wished to use bordeaux mixture, the brass pump would be required.

Never spray when the trees are in bloom, as this will be fatal to any bees in the neighborhood; besides, the best time for the preservation of your fruit is just before the buds open, just after the petals fall, and still again two weeks later. If this is thoroughly done there will be no more trouble from curculio.

When the trees are small enough to be easily handled, jarring every morning into sheet spread for the purpose, will lead to the capture of this pest, as it goes up from the ground to its work.

The insects' method of work is this: It cuts a tiny flap out of the embryo plum, deposits its egg, and leaves it to hatch, where the larva will find the table literally spread for it.

Plums are rich, wholesome, delicious. No other fruit requires so little trouble in gathering or preparation; few are so well liked.

DAIRY FACTS

COWS FRESHEN IN THE FALL

Milk Flow Kept Up for Longer Period and Produced During the Season of High Prices.

(By W. FREEHOFF, Wisconsin.)

For cows to freshen twice a year really sounds like nature faking, but that is just what happens to cows that freshen in the fall.

Good feeding and careful attention keep up a large flow of milk all winter; then in the spring when the green herbage comes the rule, again the manufacture of milk receives a fresh stimulus.

Thus by fall freshening the milk flow is not only kept up for a longer period of time than would otherwise be the case, but the most milk is produced during the season of highest prices. In this lies the chief superiority of winter over summer dairying.

Cows that freshen in the spring dry up quickly in the fall when the grass is no longer present; few farmers take good care of a dry cow during the winter so that the next year the animal will be still less useful. Such deterioration in a cow is often greater than the entire value of her milk products.

Then again, the cows need most protection during the summer months when labor may be used to better advantage in the fields, while during the winter months no labor can find employment. Summer dairying has absolutely nothing to commend it.

Feed is about the same price in the summer as in the winter, while winter labor is cheaper; this, with the increased price for winter products makes winter dairying by far the more profitable.

CLEANLINESS IS ESSENTIAL

Too Much Care Cannot Be Exercised in Handling Milk, as is Demonstrated by London Case.

In the handling of milk, both for home consumption on the farm and also for shipment to the various markets, too much care cannot be taken in keeping it absolutely free from contact with anything in which there is a possibility of being germs of disease. The following paragraph amply illustrates the deadly results of carelessness, and should be a warning to all who have to do with the handling of milk:

"A milkman near London picked his finger with a thorn. It festered, but he refused to give up his work until he was obliged to go into a hospital. At the same time an epidemic of diphtheria broke out in the neighborhood, an epidemic which eventually caused 117 deaths. The doctors were at first at a loss to trace the cause, but presently they found that the germs came from milk supplied from the farm where the man with the pricked finger worked. Then they examined the man and found that his poisoned hand reeked with germs of this deadly disease."

ner side of the hook by a spring, but is easily released by a pull on the ring at the opposite end of the rod. The user simply stands at a safe distance and clamps the device over the sensitive central wall of the bull's nose. In case of necessity it can be used effectively as a club.

Cows Get Homesick.

Cows are nervous, timid and sensitive and they suffer with homesickness. The newly purchased cow is apt to fall off in her milk flow for a time until she gets used to new surroundings.

Ice Cream Doubles Profits.

Many dairymen, who reside adjacent to cities, find that they can double their profits by making ice cream. This industry has been greatly aided by the pure food law requiring a high-grade article of ice cream.

Kalmbach-Brown Wedding.

On Wednesday evening, September 23, 1914, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Kalmbach, was the scene of one of the prettiest weddings of the season, when their daughter Maude L. was united in marriage to Mr. John Brown, of Detroit, formerly of Kilmarnock, Scotland. The house was prettily decorated with white and yellow flowers.

At the appointed time to the strains of the beautiful "Lohengrin" wedding march, played by Miss Esther Riemen-schneider the wedding party marched from up stairs to their places in the parlor where the ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Campbell, the beautiful and impressive service of the Methodist Episcopal church being used. Miss Minola Kalmbach, cousin of the bride, was bride's maid. Mr. James Brown, brother of the groom, was best man and little Miss Helen Dancer was ring bearer, carrying the ring in a beautiful white aster. The bride was dressed in a gown of white crepe de chine and carried a large bouquet of white asters, and Miss Kalmbach was gowned in yellow silk and carried a large bouquet of yellow flowers.

After the ceremony the guests numbering eighty-five were served to a sumptuous four course wedding dinner. The following were the out of town guests: Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Mitchell, of Jackson; Dr. and Mrs. F. Foote, Miss Pearl Foote and E. Wilson, of Marshall; Mr. and Mrs. M. Anderson, uncle and aunt of the groom, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. D. Turney, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. S. Monie and Miss Nettie Monie, of Detroit formerly of Kilmarnock, Scotland; James Moulds, of Detroit; Mrs. C. Foote, of Vermontville; grandmother of the bride. The presents were many and beautiful.

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancey are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to give up their mining claim and return to the United States. In the border town of Gadsden Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The Mexican revolutionists have spent a large sum of money in an unsuccessful attempt to relocate the vein and then allowed the land to revert for taxes. Hooker and De Lancey arrive at Fortuna, near where the Eagle Tail mine is located. They engage Cruz Mendez to acquire the title for them and begin preliminary work. Aragon accuses them of jumping his claim. Hooker discovers that matrimonial entanglements prevent Mendez from acquiring a valid title. Phil, who has been paying attention to Gracia Aragon, decides to turn Mexican and acquire the title. Aragon falls in his attempt to drive them off the claim. Rebels are reported in the vicinity. A rich vein of gold is struck and work on the mine is stopped until the title can be perfected. Phil is arrested by Manuel del Rey, captain of the rurales and squire of Gracia. He is released on promise to stay away from Gracia. Phil is forced to enlist in the rurales. He asks Bud to take care of Gracia. The rebels are defeated in a fierce battle near Fortuna. Phil deserts and returns to the United States. Bud turns Mexican and takes steps to secure title to the mine in his own name.

CHAPTER XIX—Continued.

He looked the adobe house over thoughtfully, listened long to the news of the border and of the rurales' raid on their camp, and retired to the rocks for the night. Even Bud never knew where he slept—somewhere up on the hillside—in caves or clefts in the rocks—and not even the most pressing invitation could make him share the house for a night. To Amigo, as to an animal, a house was a trap; and he knew that the times were treacherous.

So indeed they were, as Hooker was to learn to his sorrow, and but for the Yaqui and his murderous knife he might easily have learned it too late. It was evening, after a rainless day, and Bud was cooking by the open fire, when suddenly Amigo vanished and four men rode in from above. They were armed with rifles, as befitted the times, but gave no signs of ruffianly bravado, and after a few words Bud invited them to get down and eat.

"Muchas gracias, señor," said the leader, dismounting and laying his rifle against a log. "We are not hungry."

"Then have some coffee," invited Hooker, who made it a point to feed every one who stopped, regardless of their merit; and once more the Mexican declined. At this Bud looked at him sharply, for his refusal did not augur well, and it struck him the man's face was familiar. He was tall for a Mexican and heavily built, but with a rather sinister cast of countenance.

"Where have I seen you before?" asked Bud, after trying in vain to place him. "In Fortuna?"

"No, señor," answered the Mexican politely. "I have never been in that city. Is it far?"

"Ten miles by the trail," responded Hooker, by no means reassured, and under pretext of inviting them to eat, he took a look at the other men. If they had not stopped to eat, what then was their errand while the sun was sinking so low? And why this sullen refusal of the coffee which every Mexican drinks?

Bud stepped into the house, as if on some errand, and watched them unseen from the interior. Seeing them exchange glances then, he leaned his rifle just inside the door and went about his cooking.

It was one of the chances he took, living out in the brush, but he had come to know this low-browed type of semi-bandit all too well and had small respect for their courage. In case of trouble Amigo was close by in the rocks somewhere, probably with his gun in his hand—but with a little patience and circumspection the unwelcome visitors would doubtless move on.

So he thought, but instead they lingered, and when supper was cooked he decided to go to a show-down—and if they again refused to eat he would send them on their way.

"Ven amigos," he said, spreading out the tin plates for them. "Come and eat!"

The three low-brows glared at their leader, who had done what little talking there was so far, and, seized with a sudden animation, he immediately rose to his feet.

"Many thanks, señor," he said with a cringing and specious politeness. "We have come far and the trail is long, so we will eat. The times are hard for poor men now—this traitor, Madero, has made us all hungry. It is by him that we poor working men are driven to insurrection—but we know that the Americans are our friends. Yes, señor, I will take some of your beans, and thank you."

He filled a plate as he spoke and lifted a biscuit from the oven, continuing with his false patter while the others fell to in silence.

"Perhaps you have heard, señor," he went on, "the saying which is in the land: Mucho trabajo, poco dinero; no hay frijoles, viva Madero! [Much work, little money; no beans, long live Madero!]

Threw Them About Like Dogs That Hang Onto a Bear.

them to halt. Cheated of his victim at the first he was claiming the right to kill.

As Hooker stood blinded by the smoke and ashes the fellow took deliberate aim—and once more his rifle snapped. Then, as the other Mexicans stood agape, surprised at the failure of the shot, the cannonlike whang of a Mauser rent the air and the leader crumpled down in a heap.

An instant later a shrill yell rose from up the canyon and, as the two Mexicans started and stared, Amigo came dashing in upon them, a spitting pistol in one hand and his terrible "wood-chopping" knife brandished high in the other.

In the dusk his eyes and teeth gleamed white, his black hair seemed to bristle with fury, and the glint of his long knife made a light as he vaulted over the last rock and went plunging on their track. For, at the first glance at this huge, pursuing figure, the two Mexicans had turned and bolted like rabbits, and now, as the Yaqui whirled in after them, Bud could hear them squealing and scrambling as he hunted them down among the rocks.

It was grim work, too, even for his stomach, but Hooker let the Indian follow his nature. When Amigo came back from his hunting there was no need to ask questions. His eyes shone so terribly that Hooker said nothing, but set about cleaning up camp.

After he had washed the ashes from his eyes, and when the fury had vanished from Amigo's face, they went as by common consent and gazed at the body of the chief of the desperadoes. Even in death his face seemed strangely familiar; but as Hooker stood gazing at him the Yaqui picked up his gun.

"Look!" he said, and pointed to a bullet-splash where, as the Mexican held the gun across his breast, Bud's pistol shot had flattened harmlessly against the lock. It was that which had saved the Mexican chief from instant death, and the jar of the shot had doubtless broken the rifle and saved Bud, in turn, from the second shot.

All this was in the Yaqui's eye as he carefully tested the action; but, when he threw down the lever, a cartridge rose up from the magazine and glided smoothly into the breach. With a rifle full of cartridges the ignorant Mexican had been snapping on an empty chamber, not knowing enough to jack up a shell!

For a moment Amigo stared at the gun and the man, and his mouth drew down with contempt.

"Ha! Pendejo!" he grunted, and kicked the corpse with his foot. But if the Mexican had been a fool, he had paid the price, for the second time he snapped his gun Amigo had shot him through and through.

CHAPTER XX.

In a country where witnesses to a crime are imprisoned along with the principals and kept more or less indefinitely in jail, a man thinks twice before he reports to the police.

With four dead Mexicans to the Yaqui's account, and Del Rey in charge of the district, Hooker followed his second thought—he said nothing, and took his chances on being arrested for murder. Until far into the night Amigo busied himself along the hillside, and when the sun rose not a sign remained to tell the story of the fight. Men, horses, saddles and guns—all had disappeared. And, after packing a little food in a sack, Amigo disappeared also, with a grim smile in promise of return.

The sun rose round and hot, the same as usual; the south wind came up and blew into a bellowing mass of clouds, which lashed back with the accustomed rain; and when all the earth was washed clean and fresh the last trace of the struggle was gone. Only by the burns on his hands was Hooker aware of the fight and of the treachery which had reared its head against him, like a snake which has been warmed and fed.

Nowhere but in Mexico, where the low pelado classes have made such deep a subtlety, could the man be found to dissimulate like that false assassin-in-chief. To pause suddenly in a protracted speech, swing over and pick up a gun, and halt his victim for the shooting by the preparatory click of the lock—that indeed called for a brand of cunning rarely found in the United States.

There was one thing about the affair that vaguely haunted Hooker—why was it that a man so cunning as that had failed to load his gun? Twice, and with everything in his favor, he had raised his rifle to fire; and both times it had snapped in his hands. Certainly he must have been inept at arms—or accustomed to single-shot guns.

The reputed magic of the swift-firing rifles evidently had been his undoing, but where had he got his new gun? And who was he, anyway? With those two baffling questions Bud wrestled as he sat beside his door, and at evening his answer came.

The sun was swinging low and he was collecting wood down the gulch for a fire when, with a sudden thud of hoofs, a horseman rounded the point and came abruptly to a halt. It was Aragon, and he was spying on the camp.

For a full minute he scanned the house, tent and mine with a look so snaky and sinister that Bud could read his heart like a book. Here was the man who had sent the assassins, and he had come to view their work!

Very slowly Bud's hand crept toward his six-shooter, but slight as was the motion, Aragon caught it and sat frozen in his place. Then, with an inarticulate cry, he fell flat on his horse's neck and went, spurring out of sight.

The answer to Bud's questions was very easy now. The Mexican who had led the attempt on his life was one of Aragon's bad men, one of the four gunmen whom Hooker had looked over so carefully when they came to drive him from the mine, and Aragon had fitted him out with new arms to make the result more sure. But with that question answered there came up another and another until, in a sudden clarity of vision, Bud saw through the hellish plot and beheld himself the master.

As man to man, Aragon would not dare to face him now, for he knew that he merited death. By his sly approach, by the look in his eyes and the dismay of his frenzied retreat, he had acknowledged more surely than by words his guilty knowledge of the raid. Coming to a camp where he expected to find all dead and still, he had found himself face to face with the very man he had sought to kill. How, then, had the American escaped destruction, and what had occurred to his men?

Perhaps, in his ignorance, Aragon was raging at his hirelings because they had shirked their task; perhaps, not knowing that they were dead, he was waiting in a fever of impatience for them to accomplish the deed. However it was, Bud saw that he held the high card, and he was not slow to act.

In the morning he saddled Copper Bottom, who had been confined to the corral for weeks, and went galloping into town. There he lingered about the hotel until he saw his man and started boldly toward him. Surprise, alarm and pitiful fear chased themselves across Aragon's face as he stood, but Bud walked proudly by.

"Good morning, señor!" was all Bud said, but the look in his eyes was eloquent of a grim hereafter.

And instead of hurrying back to guard his precious mine Hooker loitered carelessly about town. His mine was safe now—and he was safe. Aragon dared not raise a hand. So he sat himself down on the broad veranda and listened with boyish interest to Don Juan's account of the war.

"What, have you not heard of the battle?" cried portly Don Juan, delighted to have a fresh listener. "Agua Negra has been taken and retaken, and the railroad will soon be repaired. My gracious! have you been out in the hills that long? Why, it was two weeks ago that the rebels captured the town by a coup, and eight days later the federals took it back."

"Ah, there has been a real war, Mr. Bud! You who have laughed at the courage of the Mexicans, what do you think of Bernardo Bravo and his men? They captured the last up train from Fortuna; loaded all the men into the ore cars and empty coaches; and, while the federals were still in their barracks, the train ran clear into the station and took the town by storm."

"And eight days later, at sundown, the federals took it back. Ah, there was awful slaughter averted, señor! But for the fact that the fuse went out two hundred Yaqui Indians who led the charge would have been blown into eternity."

"Yes, so great was the charge of dynamite that the rebels had laid in their mine that not a house in Agua Negra would have been left standing if the fuse had done its work. Two tons of dynamite! Think of that, my friend!"

"But these rebels were as ignorant of its power as they were of laying a train. The Yaquis walked into the town at sundown and found it deserted—every man, woman and child had fled to Gadsden and the rebels had fled to the west."

"But listen, here was the way it happened—actually, and not as common report has it, for the country is all in an uproar and the real facts were never known. When Bernardo Bravo captured the town of Agua Negra the people acclaimed his hero."

"He sent word to the junta at El Paso and set up a new form of government. All was enthusiasm, and several Americans joined his ranks to operate the machine guns and cannon. As for the federals, they occupied the country to the east and attempted a few sallies, but as they had nothing but their rifles, the artillery drove them back."

"Then, as the battle ceased, the rebels began to celebrate their victory. They broke into the closed cantinas, disobeying their officers and beginning the loot of the town, and while half of their number were drunk the federals, being informed of their condition, suddenly advanced upon them, with the Yaquis far in the lead."

"They did not shoot, those Yaquis; but, dragging their guns behind them, they crept up through the bushes and dug pits quite close to the lines. Then, when the rebels discovered them and manned their guns, the Yaquis shot down the gunners."

"Growing bolder, they crept farther to the front—the rebels became disorganized, their men became mutinous—and at last, when they saw they would surely be taken, the leaders buried two tons of dynamite in the trenches by the bull-rings and set a time-fuse, to explode when the Yaquis arrived."

"The word spread through the town like wildfire—all the people, all the soldiers fled every which way to escape—and then, when the worst was expected to happen, the dynamite failed to explode and the Yaquis rushed the trenches at sundown."

"Did those Yaquis know about the dynamite?" inquired Bud.

"Know?" repeated Don Juan, waving the thought away; "not a word! Their commanders kept it from them, even after they discovered the mine. And now the Indians are making boasts; they are drunk with the thought of their valor and claim that the rebels fled from them alone."

"The roadmaster came into town this morning on a velocipede and said that the Yaquis are insufferable, thinking that it was their renown as fighters and not the news of the dynamite that drove all the soldiers from town."

"However, Agua Negra is once more in the hands of the government; the track is clear and most of the bridges repaired; so why quarrel with the Yaquis? While they are, of course, nothing but Indians, they serve their purpose in a battle."

"Well, I guess yes!" responded Bud warmly. "Serve their purpose, eh? Where were these Mexican soldiers and them Spanish officers when the Yaquis were taking the town? And that was just like a dog-gone Mexican—setting that time-fuse and then not having it go off. More'n likely the poor yep that fired it was so scared he couldn't hold a match—probably never lit it, jest dropped the match and run. They're a bum bunch, if you want to know what I think. I'd rather have a Yaqui than a hundred of 'em!"

"A hundred of whom?" inquired a cool voice behind him, and looking up Hooker saw the beautiful Gracia gazing out at him through the screen door.

"A hundred Mexicans!" he repeated, and Gracia murmured "Oh!" and was gone.

"Miss Aragon is very loyal to her country," observed Don Juan, but Hooker only grunted.

Somehow, since those four Mexicans had come to his camp, he had soured on everything south of the line; and even the charming Gracia could not make him take back his words. If she had intended the remark as a challenge—a subtle invitation to follow her and defend his faith—she failed for once of her purpose, for if there was any particular man in Mexico that Bud hated more than another it was her false-hearted father.

Hooker had, in fact, thought more seriously of making her a half-orphan than of winning her good-will, and he lingered about the hotel, not to make love to the daughter, but to strike terror to Aragon.

The company being good, Bud stayed over another day. In the morning, when he came down for breakfast, he found that Aragon had fled before him. With his wife, daughter and retinue, he had moved suddenly back to his home. Hooker grinned when Don Juan told him the news.

"Well, why not?" he asked, chuckling maliciously. "Here it's the middle of the rainy season and the war going on all summer and nary a rebel in sight. Where's that big fight you were talking about—the battle of Fortuna? You've made a regular fortune out of these refugees, Brachamonte, but I fail to see the enemy."

"Ah, you may laugh," shrugged the hotel-keeper, "but wait! The time will come. The rebels are lost now—some day, when you least expect it, they will come upon us and then, believe me, my guests will be glad they are here. What is a few weeks' bill compared to being held for ransom? Look at that rich señor Luna, who was here for a time in the spring. Against my advice he hurried home and now he is paying the price. Ten thousand pesos it cost to save his wife and family, and for himself and son his friends advanced ten thousand more. I make no evil prophecies, but it would be better for our friend if he stayed on at my poor hotel."

"Whose friend?" inquired Bud bluntly, but Don Juan struck him upon the back with elephantine playfulness and hurried off to his duties.

As for Hooker, he tarried in town until he got his mail and a copy of the Sunday paper and then, well satisfied that the times were quiet and was a thing of the past, he ambled back to the Eagle Tail and settled down for a rest.

Flat on his back by the doorway he lay on his bed and smoked, reading his way through the lurid supplement and watching the trail with one eye. Since the fight with Aragon's Mexicans all his apprehensions had left him. He had written briefly to Phil and Kruger, and now he was holding the fort.

It had been a close shave, but he had escaped the cowardly assassins and had Aragon in his power. Not by any force of law, but by the force of fear and the gnawing weakness of Aragon's own evil conscience.

Aragon was afraid of what he had done, but it was the suspense which rendered him so pitiable. On a day he had sent four armed Mexicans to kill this Texan—not one had returned and the Texan regarded him sneeringly. This it was that broke the Spaniard's will, for he knew not what to think. But as for Bud, he lay on his back by the doorway and laughed at the funny page.

As he sprawled there at his reading, Amigo came in from the hills, and he, too, was content to relax. Gravelly scanning the colored sheet, his dark face lighted up.

It was all very peaceful and pleasant, but it was not destined to last. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

SOMETHING WENT WRONG.

By SADIE WOODS.

"My, but you've got a cold!" said the girl with the accentuated robes-pier collar at the enamelware counter as she passed in the act of putting a nicked saucepan under the pile out of sight.

"Gold?" echoed the girl at the small hardware counter in a tone of infinite scorn. "Got a gold? What I've got is an iceberg to a small icicle when it comes to golds! But I thought I had a good time getting it, M'ree!"

"Howjuh do it?" inquired the girl with the robes-pier collar.

"Why, the Jolly Rover Social club gave a midsummer party the other night," explained the afflicted one.

"In zero weather!" cried the girl at the enamelware. "For the land's sake! Were they crazy? S'pose you had a beach party and went for a swim, and had ice cream for refreshments afterward! Brr-r!"

"Not exactly," said the sufferer. "Of course, it was zero, but that's what made it interesting. It's always interesting to do things people don't expect you to do, isn't it?"

"Maybe," agreed the girl at the enamelware counter. "But there are limits! Now, if any one requested me to go on a violet picking expedition in January it would be unexpected, but, nevertheless, crazy. I hope I have sense enough to know a snowbank from a steam radiator. I don't wonder you have a cold!"

"We had the party at the hall," explained the girl at the hardware counter. "And it would have been all right only something seemed to go wrong with the heating plant. The president of the club said he told the janitor to have it hotter than usual, but the janitor must have got mixed and done the opposite. So when we came in dressed in white organdies and such things everybody turned purple almost at once."

"Now, it doesn't help a girl's temper to know that she's a light heliotrope tinge and she can't be her own sweet self when she realizes that she has a bright red nose and goose pimples on her hands and arms! So everybody started with a bad temper. Jimmy said I stepped on his feet, but I didn't—it was his last summer shoes that were too small for him and his feet were numb from cold, anyhow. He didn't listen kindly to my explanation, because when we sat down to talk there was an icy blast from the window right down his collar, and Jimmy is awfully sensitive to drafts. So he got mad at me and went over to talk to that Flossy Soller—her in the ribbons—because he said he wouldn't get pneumonia for any girl and I had put him there on purpose."

"To get even with Jimmy I smiled at Percy Wagner and he took me to have some lemonade that ought 'a' been boiled, it was so cold, and then he sat me down in a corner and talked to me, and Jimmy could see us, and I wouldn't 'a' moved if I'd frozen to the spot. I most did, too, because there was a cold air radiator in the floor right there and I know the other end was connected with the north pole. I had on my ruffled dimity and white shoes and hosiery and my teeth were chattering. Percy's nose looked frost-bitten and his knees knocked together. When we tried to dance we sort of fell around like clothespins."

"Then we sat in a circle and ate ice cream and our throats froze up till we ought 'a' called a plumber and everybody said, 'Ain't we having a fine time?' and Jimmy glowed till I was afraid his face would crack with the cold and everything. Then finally, just as Percy and I were getting some more lemonade, Jimmy grabbed me by the arm."

"Say," he hissed, "I've had enough of that sissy fellow trailing after you!"

"Just as I drew away, indignant like—for nobody can boss me even if it is Jimmy—Percy sort of fell against the lemonade bowl and it tipped over and soaked Jimmy and me. I'd hate to think of Percy, but I can't see how he could have upset that bowl without planning it."

"Well, of course, Jimmy and I had to go home then, and my! the language that man used was something wonderful! I didn't see how there could be any more language in the world, but I found there was, for when we started to get off the street car Jimmy found his duck trousers that had got soaked with lemonade were frozen to the seat. The conductor wouldn't hold the car while Jimmy tore them loose! He said there were no rules 'n regulations requiring a conductor to delay service just because a passenger got frozen to the seat."

"By the time we got home my dimity dress skirt was so frozen with lemonade that it rattled like tin, and when I hit the doorstep it cracked and ruined itself. I s'pose I must 'a' got my gold somehow during the evening."

"It looks that way," agreed the girl at the enamelware counter.

Scared to Go Home.
"Do I look like a milkman?" asked a tango dancer of a patron, as he was leaving his temple of tango about four o'clock this morning. "Why, no; what an idea," was the response. "Well, I'm glad of it," said the tango dancer. "My wife took a shot at a milkman the other morning, and I'm kind of skittish about going home at this hour. Best little woman in the world, you know, but hasty, and I'd regret any mistake in my case."

PARADISE FOR THE ARTIST

Devotees of the Brush Are Accorded Accommodations Without Price at Inn at Capri.

Capri, beautiful in itself as a winter resort, offers an irresistible invitation to artists, since it has an inn where anyone, by painting a picture on the wall, can get free board.

To the lovely island of Capri, with its perennial summer, its blue groves and its lemon groves, came, some fifty years ago, a ruined artist. He opened an inn, and died rich. In his will he left the inn to his heirs, he made these conditions: "The charge per day, two bottles of red Capri wine included, is never to be more than six francs. "If any artist is too poor to pay, he shall paint a picture upon some wall space, receiving all the accommodations accorded to those paying the highest price."

"If any German artist shall come to the inn he shall be accommodated and shall receive the amount of his fare to Germany upon his promise never to return to Italy."

The inn is conducted today on these conditions. Its walls are covered with paintings. Now and then a German gets his fare home.

"Now, Nora," said Mrs. Geddes, "I'm terribly exercised over the omission of this is the sixth time I've had to tell you about the finger-bowls. Didn't the woman you last worked for have them on the table?"

"No, mum," replied Nora. "Her friends always washed their hands before they came."

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing a stimulant the worst way, is valuable. "An attack of grip, so severe it kept me making an end of me, left my stomach in such condition I could retain any ordinary food. I knew, of course that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover."

"I began to take four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was all my only food. It tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength."

"Grape-Nuts is of great value as a food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate ordinary foods."

"I am convinced that were Grape-Nuts more widely used by physicians, it would save many lives that are otherwise lost from lack of nourishment. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich."

LUMBER TOWN IS SWEEPED BY FIRE

GREATER PART OF HARRIETTA DESTROYED BY FLAMES TUESDAY.

FARMERS DO VALIANT WORK

Fire Is Discovered Shortly After Midnight and Is Stopped at Eight O'clock After Loss of Ninety Thousand Dollars.

Cadillac—The greater part of the business section of Harrietta, a lumber town, was burned early Tuesday morning, with a loss estimated at nearly $90,000. Seven business blocks and two dwellings were destroyed and considerable damage done to a half dozen other stores and dwellings.

The fire, which originated on the north side of the main street, was discovered shortly after midnight, and was extinguished at 8 o'clock. Farmers assisted in fighting the flames and saved the town from complete destruction. The bank of Harrietta and the Methodist church were on fire several times.

M. E. CONFERENCE IS CLOSED

Appointment of Four Superintendents Announced at Muskegon.

Muskegon—The Michigan conference of the M. E. church closed Monday afternoon with the reading of the appointments, and there were some surprises in the list. Four new district superintendents were named, although but three were expected, as there were only three vacancies.

M. I. Fox, who had not completed his term as superintendent of the Niles district, was appointed to the pastorate of the Lansing Central church, and W. P. French, of Kalamazoo, was appointed superintendent. Instead, C. S. Wheeler was named as superintendent of Big Rapids district to succeed W. L. Cogshall. H. W. Phelps, of Lansing, was named superintendent of the Lansing district. Hugh Kennedy, of Big Rapids, was named superintendent of the Albion district.

YOUNG MAN KILLED BY AUTO

Parents Drive to Scene of Accident to Find Victim Is Their Son.

Flint—While Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mann, of this city, were driving home from Mt. Morris Sunday, they came upon a crowd gathered about a wrecked auto at the roadside. They stopped to see what had happened, and found that the auto belonged to their son, Charles, and that he had been instantly killed when it went into the ditch as he tried to pass another car.

The younger Mann was on his way to visit his grandfather at Clio when the accident happened, and was to have returned to Detroit Tuesday to resume his studies at the Detroit College of Law.

CAR STRIKES BIG ENGINE

Motorman Fatally Injured and Four Others Seriously Hurt.

Battle Creek—Motorman Fred Hall, of Battle Creek, was fatally injured Monday evening when his interurban car crashed into a heavy traction engine which had stalled on the track four miles west of this city. Four others were seriously injured in the crash and are now in Nichols hospital in this city.

The force of the collision was so great that the engine was demolished and the car body thrown from the trucks and partially upset. The vestibule in which Hall stood was crushed, but the rest of the car, which was of steel, was uninjured.

San Jose Scale Threatens Fruit.

Battle Creek—That the San Jose scale is so bad that the next five years will see the raising of no apples in Calhoun and adjoining counties unless something is done in a hurry to fight the pest, is the rather discouraging information brought to the local chamber of commerce by Secretary Charles Ward and by W. B. Snell, secretary of the Central Fruit Growers' association, following a trip through the districts mentioned. Evidences of the scale are to be found in the very best orchards.

MICHIGAN NEWS ITEMS

F. W. Speer of Houghton has been elected vice-president of the American mine safety association.

Parley Gardner, 15 years old, of Ithaca, was terribly burned when Marshall Salter turned the hose of an auto-filling tank on him, saturating him with gasoline just as some one lighted a cigar nearby. Salter was arrested for assault and battery and fined $1.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Twenty-five veterans attended the annual reunion of the Twenty-seventh Michigan Infantry at Portland Tuesday.

John D. Rockefeller has given $60,000 to the University of Michigan. M. C. A. to be used in the erection of a club house.

An apple evaporating plant will soon be added to the industries of Traverse City, Frank D. Pier, of Evart, and D. H. Baldwin, of Reed City, having decided to enter the business.

The postoffice at Riverdale was robbed of cash amounting to about $200 and jewelry, gems and stamps amounting to about $700. The robbers escaped, probably on a freight train.

The Ann Arbor Railroad Co. on Monday paid $25,000 to the state, thus completing the payment of its 1912 state tax. The road still owes the state $159,000 for its 1913 taxes.

At a special election Friday a franchise was granted to the Consumers' Power Co. to furnish light and power to the village of Morrice for 30 years. There was but one dissenting vote.

Charles Jones, 40, Clayton township farm hand, died Wednesday night from injuries sustained when kicked by a horse. He is survived by a widow and three small children.

James Sallows, known as the hermit whittler of Ogden, is dead at the age of 95 years. In front of his cottage at Ogden is a fence containing 73,000 pieces of wood, all whittled by the old man.

George M. Close, 50 years old, was crushed to death when a clay bank in the brick yard at James Day's kilns, six miles from Saginaw, caved in Friday. His back was broken and several arteries burst.

Arthur Baker, a Pere Marquette brakeman, fell under the wheels at Grand Ledge, and although a special train rushed him to a Lansing hospital, he died shortly afterward. His home was in Grand Rapids.

P. B. Willis, assistant general secretary of the Milwaukee Y. M. C. A., and for 10 years engaged in general "Y" work in the Cream city, has been engaged as general secretary of Saginaw's new west side "Y".

The Michigan conference of the M. E. church at Muskegon Saturday morning decided unanimously to hold its annual meeting in 1915 at Hastings. The invitation was extended by John C. Ketcham, of Hastings master of the state grange.

With the inauguration Monday of the new motor car service between Port Huron and Bad Axe and intermediate points, Postmaster Wittliff at Port Huron has been instructed to place mail for those cities aboard the car in addition to using the steam trains.

Ira A. Beck, of Battle Creek, has been notified that he is one of two Michigan men to be accepted for a thirty-third degree Mason at a meeting of the executive council in Chicago. General Counsel Thomson, of the Reo Automobile Co., of Lansing, being the other man.

Just after workmen had left the structure Saturday night, the weight of the great steel roof frame, which had been put in place at the new St. Joseph's church at Kalamazoo caved in the walls and the entire structure fell into the basement. The loss will probably exceed $25,000.

Tom Marsh and Lyle Dye of Ionia have spent two years building an aeroplane. When it was completed, Marsh started the machine for a trial spin on a farm near Ionia. After circling a field eight times the machine struck a rough spot and was wrecked. Marsh was thrown out and slightly injured.

Chauncey Cook, 7-year-old son of a farmer five miles west of Clio, was literally scalped Saturday afternoon when he fell under a drill being drawn behind a wagon driven by his brother. One of the spouts of the drill tore his scalp from his skull, but a physician, hastily summoned, stitched it back in place.

While the city council at Benton Harbor, Monday evening was voting a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of an incendiary who, in the past week, has started half a dozen fires in the city, the fire department was called out to fight a new blaze, also of incendiary origin. The Business Men's association has offered $500 reward, making a total of $1,000.

L. A. Helmka, a prosperous farmer of Logan, while excavating a cellar for a new house, unearthed an iron kettle containing $1,486 in gold and silver, which had apparently been buried many years ago.

Empty Titles.

The emperor of Austria, it has been noted, lays claim to the title marquis of Antwerp. If all European sovereigns could make good their minor territorial titles there would, indeed, be a reconstruction of the map. The king of Italy, for instance, is officially styled king of Sardinia, France, Spain and England, of Italy and Jerusalem, of Greece and Alexandria, of Hamburg and Sicily, Master of the Deep, King of the Earth. The king of Spain also claims to be king of Jerusalem, king of Galicia (a title shared with the emperor of Austria), and, in addition, king of Gibraltar, of the West Indies and of India.

'He's Too Good.

Dolly—At last I have met my ideal! Kind hearted, modest, patient, self-denying! But, alas, married! Daisy—Don't worry! No woman will live long with such a freak! You'll get a chance at him.

Sorry for Him.

"John, there's a burglar in the house." "Poor fellow; it's hard to work for nothing."

Between two evils it is better to marry for money than for a chance to get even.

The Bridal Trousseau.

The old idea of providing brides with a score or more of gowns, wraps and hats has quite gone by. Even the fashionable trousseau of today contains no more than a dozen gowns, if as many. Styles change so fast that by the fall the gowns for the June wedding, necessarily made some weeks before the ceremony, begin to look odd. Some authority has declared that the best dressed woman in Paris buys no more than three new toilets each year, but the opinion may be ventured that she is altering her last year's supply most of the time. The vast assortments of lingerie have also dwindled. Nobody provides such a multitudinous wedding outfit nowadays as used to be required—Leslie's.

Social Welfare.

Second Politician—Well, ye-see, it's like this. You don't pay nothin' to no body and the government pays it for ye.

First Politician—Well, that sounds a bit of all right, don't it.—London Punch.

Keep Down Uric Acid

Uric acid and its poisons formed in the body in digesting certain foods, especially meat, and by the burning up of nerves and muscle cells during exertion.

Uric acid is harmless as long as the kidneys filter it promptly from the blood, but people who overeat and overwork, make uric acid so fast that it overloads the blood, weakens the kidneys, and attacks the nerves, causing rheumatic pains. It forms gravel, hardens the arteries and brings on dropsy or Bright's disease.

By removing the kidneys to normal activity Doan's Kidney Pills help to overcome excess uric acid.

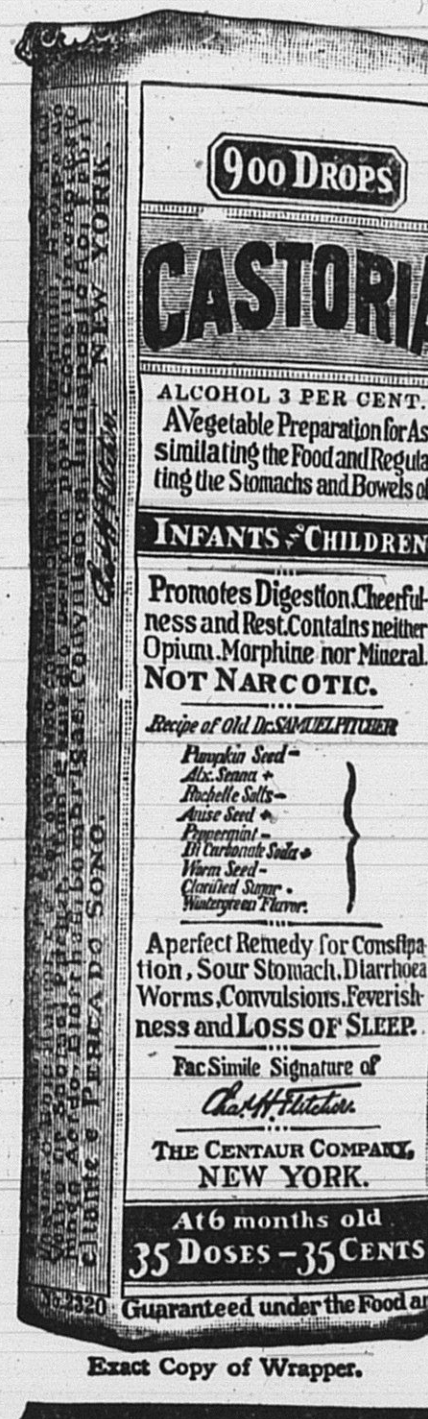

A Michigan Case
"Every Picture Tells a Story"
Mrs. J. Reither, 415 Delta St., East-Lansing, Mich., says:
"My kidneys were
terribly disordered and my case was bordering on dropsy. My feet and ankles were swollen and my back achieved. The kidney action was retarded and I was unable to do my housework. I bought a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and soon after I got another and I was rid of all the trouble. I am now in good health."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless; Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food; Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory." Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place." Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent." Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J. McCann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

DESCRIPTION WAS ALL RIGHT

Not Just What Jones Was Looking for, But Brown Surely Had Told the Truth.

As Brown landed on the platform he ran full butt into Jones.

"Where bound, Jones, and why such speed?" queried Brown.

"Just off to Seashell-on-the-Mud, and am anxious to get some fruit before I start."

"Fruit? Just the thing! Now she's just off; jump in that carriage. I left a fine pear in the corner."

Jones got in and started searching around.

"My friend said he left a fine pear in the corner," explained Jones, as an old lady sniffed angrily at the way he searched round her.

"Guess he meant that corner, my man," she snapped. Jones looked and saw a young couple blushing furiously.

offered $100 for the dog more than once and he naturally feels pretty sore about it. It was a pet dog that never did anybody any harm and it was a low down piece of business to feed the brute poison.—Argus.MANCHESTER—The 80th reunion of the Fellows family the antecedents of which were English and came to this country before the revolutionary war, was held at the home of Rev.
Addis Leeson in Ypsilanti this year.
There were about 40 members present and of course they had an enjoyable time with story telling, music, a big dinner and fun in plenty.—Enterprise.MANCHESTER—President Kingsley informed us this morning that the village is out of debt, excepting the bonds, and has money on hand to meet these as they accrue. October 1 bond No. 5 of $1,000 will be paid.
All bills against the village have been paid and our citizens should congratulate themselves over the good financial conditions.—Enterprise.JACKSON—The inmates of Jackson prison are to build a church at Henrietta to replace the one that burned last summer. Arrangements have been made with Warden Simpson to erect the edifice, which will be constructed of prison-made brick and with prison labor. The penitentiary has a number of good brick-layers, who are serving time, also carpenters, masons, painters and decorators.YPSILANTI—George Paine and George Witte, son of the bond of William Waldner, who was arrested last May for resisting an officer, and whose trial comes up during this October term of circuit court, learned late Saturday night that Waldner was planning to go to Oklahoma, and asked to have him taken into custody.
Waldner was accordingly taken into custody by Deputy Sheriff Hipp and lodged in the city jail.JACKSON—That he visited the county fair last Monday, walked back and forth in front of the prison exhibit tent, where officers of the institution were stationed, talked with former employees, and was generally careless about whom he "rubbed up against," asserts LeRoy Bowers, 20, who escaped from the probation gang on the Chanter prison farm about a month ago and was arrested at Onaway, Mich., last Friday.STOCKBRIDGE—Some time Thursday night thieves entered the Stockbridge creamery and stole 800 pounds of butter that was ready for shipment. This is the second time within a few weeks that the creamery has been entered and butter stolen.
The robbers also stole a horse and wagon from Man A. Smith to transport the loot. They headed for Jackson and the officers followed their tracks for a long distance in that direction.MILAN—Mr. and Mrs. Nat Smith were in Azalia Sunday where they visited with Mr. and Mrs. Waite and their daughter, Mrs. Coral Sweeney, who has recently returned from Germany where she went with a company of teachers to spend the summer. She had great difficulty to obtain passage home and finally bought another woman's chance by paying her $600 besides her regular fare. She has some interesting facts to relate to her friends and states that in America we can hardly imagine the true conditions existing.—Leader.Notice.Roller skating and roller skate cars

Stop That First Fall Cough.Check your fall cough or cold at once—don't wait—it may lead to a serious lung trouble, weaken your vitality and develop a chronic lung ailment. Get a bottle of Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey to-day; it is pure and harmless—use it freely for that fall cough or cold. If baby or children are sick give it to them, it will relieve quickly and permanently. It soothes the irritated throat, lungs and air passages. Loosens Phlegm, is antiseptic and fortifies the system against colds. It surely prevents colds germs from getting a hold. Guar-

Arbor last Saturday evening George Woods was stabbed in the back three times with a jack knife. Two of the wounds are in his shoulder blade and the third, which is the most dangerous, pierced the kidneys. The gathering consisted of a number of brothers, sisters, boarders and a quantity of beer. Woods is in the hospital.
Bert Flippin is held at the county jail, charged with having inflicted the wounds upon Woods.Bert Hath was arraigned before Justice W. G. Doty Monday morning charged with assault and battery on Mrs. George Woods, who is a sister of his wife and over whom, some ven-erous Mrs. Woods, however, says that all of the commotion, assaults and the stabbing arose from her voicing vociferous objection to the bringing in of lager beer in a basket by some of those who made up the evening's party.The case against Hath was put over until Friday when Flippin will in all probability also be arraigned, as by that time it will be known to the authorities just how serious Mr.
Woods' wounds are.The participants in the fight were former residents of Chelsea and moved from here to Ann Arbor at the time the ball plant was moved to that city."Excuse Me."The S. T. King Amusement Co.
(Inc.) is offering the Rupert Hughes farce "Excuse Me" at the Whitney theatre, Ann Arbor, September 26th."Excuse Me" is a farce among farces. It strikes at the heart of the entertainment and is full of true humor.
It is a laugh and it is remarkable for its novel and ludicrous situations, its diverting characters, its unusually amusing dialogue. Any effort to recite the incidents of so crowded and amusing a piece must be hopeless.Mr. Hughes has missed no chance to make fun. His characters have reality in them, his play moves quickly, he has weaving every drop of humor of railway travel, he displays a truly amazing ingenuity and resourcefulness."Excuse Me" is a journey by rail from Chicago to Reno. Much of its humor lies in its probability. The author has devised a series of screamingly funny incidents that are probably true to life as if they had really happened up to the ticket window and purchased transportation to Reno. The various characters work out the different stories that unite in a highly interesting and amusing comedy, with lively action and up-to-date light romance and adventures. The local public should consider the quality of this offering. It is the biggest laughing hit of the times, a genuine Broadway success.Cost Kept Down—Quality Kept Up.
