First Visit in Thirty-Two Years.

Mrs. Mary Becker, of Jackson, attended the morning services at the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart last Sunday. Mrs. Becker was a former resident of this place and will remember the residence here their home was on Park street in what is now known as the Hepler place. Mr. and Mrs. Dancer moved from Waterloo to Chelsea and he was in business here for some time. The family moved from here to Jackson, where Mr. Dancer died. This is the first visit Mrs. Becker has paid here in thirty-two years and the many changes during that period were quite a surprise to her. She was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Emmer a portion of the day.

Heim-Koebe Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Celia M. Heim, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Heim of Sylvan, and Mr. Elmer Koebe of Chelsea, took place in the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Tuesday morning, November 10, 1914, Rev. Fr. Considine celebrating the mass.

The couple were attended by Miss Loretta Heim, sister of the bride, and Mr. James Heim, cousin of the bride. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends of the young couple. Following the church services the contracting parties and a number of their immediate relatives were entertained at a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Howard Gilbert. After a short western trip the couple will be at home to their friends at the residence of C. T. Conklin on east Summit street.

Sunday Fire Alarm.

The Chelsea fire department was called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. BeGole about 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon by a small blaze in the cellar. Mr. and Mrs. BeGole were absent from home and the blaze was discovered by Mrs. T. E. Sullivan and son George, who saw smoke escaping from the door leading to the cellar and the kitchen windows. The fire started on top of a pile of dry pine kindlings and if it had not been for the timely discovery the result would undoubtedly have been quite serious. The fire was put out with the use of the garden hose before the fire department turned on a stream from the hydrant. All of the rooms in the house were filled with smoke, which is the extent of the damage. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

The chief of the fire department informs the Standard that he was unable to locate the fire as he could not get any response from the operator at the local telephone exchange and the firemen at the fire barn called eight times before they could get any response to their call. Mr. BeGole, who was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. McLaren, had been informed by the operator just as the alarm was sounded, so it was known at the exchange where the fire could be located.

Lindenschmitt Elected Sheriff.

Times News: By request of the friends of the two candidates for sheriff at the recent election, Ross Granger and Herman G. Lindenschmitt, the board of county canvassers, Tuesday afternoon took up the returns from Ypsilanti township, where there had been a discrepancy between the total vote cast for other candidates, and that officially reported for sheriff.

From the finding of the board of canvassers, it appears that instead of Mr. Lindenschmitt receiving 42, and Mr. Granger 50 votes, as telephoned to the county clerk's office on election night, Mr. Lindenschmitt received 83 votes, and Mr. Granger 50. The mistake was due to the fact that the vote, as telephoned to the county clerk's office, took into consideration only the straight ballots cast and did not include the "split" ballots.

From the returns, so far canvassed, it would appear that, instead of Mr. Granger's plurality being 17, as at first unofficially computed, Mr. Lindenschmitt will have a plurality of 24.

The board of canvassers will not conclude its labors until today.

A New Screen.

Last Friday an O. K. screen was placed in the Princess Theatre by P. J. Hanlon of Ann Arbor. This screen consists of a heavy coating of a patented composition painted on a cloth or plaster surface and the pictures projected on this are exceedingly brilliant and distinct showing much more detail and greater perspective than on the ordinary white surface. These screens have recently been installed in several Detroit theatres including the "Claret" circuit of houses and in the "Temple" theatre in Ann Arbor.

Pasteurize the Milk.

The State Board of Health recommends as a means of human safety that during the epidemic among cattle of the foot and mouth disease, all milk be pasteurized before being placed on the market.

Mrs. Mary H. Curtis.

Miss Mary H. Curtis was born in Vermont, December 20, 1824, and died at the home of her son in Middlebury, Vermont, Friday, November 6, 1914. She was united in marriage with Z. A. Curtis at Panton, Vermont, February 2, 1843. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Curtis were residents of Grass Lake and after the death of her husband Mrs. Curtis became a resident of Chelsea, making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Schenk, for several years. She was a member of the Baptist church which she joined in early life.

She is survived by one son, W. H. Curtis, of Middlebury, Vermont, two daughters, Mrs. Emily Tenbrooke, of Battleboro, Vermont, and Mrs. Wm. P. Schenk of this place, and several grandchildren and great grandchildren. Funeral services were held in Middlebury, Rev. Samuel Rose officiating.

The remains were brought here Tuesday forenoon for burial in Oak Grove cemetery beside her husband. A short service was conducted by Rev. C. J. Dole.

Father Considine's Anniversary.

Next Sunday records the anniversary of Rev. W. P. Considine, respected priest of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart parish of this village. Twenty-nine years ago to the day, Father Considine came to Chelsea and in these many years has labored zealously for the good of his people. The fine church property on Congdon street is a grand testimonial of the untiring efforts of this good priest, and well may he look back over the fullbrimmed days of duty, of triumph and of pleasure, the reminiscences of which may now elicit from him many a smile when viewed afar off, but for all that those were trials upon which were based the endless chain of graces, that have gone to make up his life.

The children of St. Mary's school, for whom Father Considine has labored so earnestly in the last eight years, by causing the erection of the splendid school building on the corner of Congdon and Summit streets which gives his children the advantage of a Christian education in all the grades, including high school, will show their appreciation next Sunday by receiving holy communion for their beloved pastor. In the afternoon and evening Father Considine will be entertained by the Ushers Club of the parish. Many happy returns of the day is the sincere wish of the good priest's friends and parishioners.

Many years he's labored for you,
And before God's Altar Throne,
He has breathed his intercessions,
That from God you might not roam.
We in turn, can offer Sunday,
A communion for the priest
Who will love and serve us always
As these many years increase.

Foot and Mouth Disease.

About the middle of September a disease of cattle characterized by sore mouth and feet was reported to exist in a few herds near Niles, Michigan. Investigation revealed the fact that the state was confronted with another outbreak of foot and mouth disease or apthous fever.

The reappearance of this disease in Michigan after its eradication six years ago has given rise to a demand for information concerning it.

Previous outbreaks of this disease have occurred in North America in 1870, 1880, 1884, 1902 and 1908. This is the second time that Michigan has become involved in an outbreak of foot and mouth disease.

Foot and mouth disease or apthous fever is a very contagious disease of cattle, sheep, goats, deer (ruminants) and swine and occasionally human beings. It is characterized by fever, loss of appetite, reduction of milk of flow, in milk cows, and later by the appearance of vesicles or blisters on the mucous membrane of the lips, dental pad or tongue and on the heels or between the toes and frequently on the teats and udder. In from a few hours to one or two days the blisters break, peeling off and leaving a reddish, slightly depressed raw surface which usually heals in one or two weeks but which may remain sore for a longer time as a result of complications due to other disease-producing organisms. At the beginning of the disease the animal is greatly depressed and as the mouth becomes involved there may be profuse salivation and frequently a smacking of the lips which produces a clicking sound. Lameness usually results from the very painful condition produced by the diseased feet.

The disease is spread by contact with affected animals or by their milk directly or indirectly through creameries or cheese factories, by manure, grain or any fodder contaminated by their discharge; also by their transportation over public highways and stock yards.

It may also be carried by an apparently healthy recovered animal for several months after recovery. It may be carried on the feet or clothes of parties from affected farms, or who have visited infected stock yards. It may also be carried other animals as horses, dogs, cats, birds, etc.

Foot and mouth disease is usually not fatal, complete recovery being the rule. Over 20 per cent. mortality has been recorded under usual conditions. Young animals furnish the largest number of fatal cases. The rule is that under favorable conditions all animals recover.

In the presence of an outbreak of foot and mouth disease all suspicious cases should be reported without delay to the authorities having the matter in charge. Only in this way can the spread of the disease be prevented. Previous experience with five outbreaks of this disease in this country conclusively proves that its immediate eradication is not only possible but practicable.

Fortunately Michigan is in a position to actively co-operate with the Federal authorities and it is much to the credit of the State Live Stock Sanitary Commission that the work of eradication was begun without delay.

The farmers of Michigan have already shown a commendable willingness to accept the gravity of the situation and to heartily co-operate with their Live Stock Sanitary Commission and the representatives of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. We are sure that this spirit of co-operation will continue with the result that the early and economical eradication of the disease will be accomplished, thus dissipating this cloud which temporarily hangs over the live stock industry of a small portion of our state.

Veterinarians and stock owners should immediately report all suspicious cases and address all communications relative to foot and mouth disease to H. H. Halladay, president Live Stock Sanitary Commission, Lansing, or to Dr. U. G. Hough, Inspector in charge, B. A. L. Niles, Adrian or Coldwater, Mich.

Prohibition Rallies.

The bills pending in Congress relative to nation-wide prohibition call for the intelligent interest of every citizen. That all may understand the issue, a campaign of speaking is being conducted throughout the entire country.

During the week of November 16-23 Michigan is to be favored with one hundred rallies. The speakers are all of national reputation, and include such men as P. A. Baker, Sam Small, John G. Woolley, Richard P. Hobson and ex-Governors R. B. Glenn and M. R. Patterson.

Chelsea has been selected by the committee as one of the strategic points included in the itinerary. The meeting will be held in the Methodist church, Monday evening, November 16.

Whatever his personal views on this subject, every man should hear the speaker, whose name will be announced later.

DEER HUNTERS ARE NOW AFTER GAME

SEASON OPENS ON TUESDAY AND CONTINUES UNTIL FIRST OF DECEMBER.

EACH MAY KILL TWO ANIMALS

Record of Thirty Thousand Licenses Issued Last Year Likely to Be Equalled or Surpassed This Season.

Lansing—The deer hunting season in Michigan opened Tuesday, to continue until December 1.

All sections of the United States will be represented among the thousands of hunters who will visit the northern woods in the state during the coming few weeks in search of game. Last year, it was estimated that approximately 30,000 hunters were in Michigan woods during the three weeks of the deer season, and officials believe that this number will be at least equalled and possibly exceeded this year. They base their estimates upon the number of licenses already issued.

Each hunter, if he is skillful enough, may kill two deer, under the state law. Non-resident members have the same privileges with regard to the deer hunting as do the Michigan residents, with the exception that they are prohibited from shipping more than one animal out of the state.

In an effort to reduce to a minimum the number of accidents which each year attend the hunting season in Michigan, the state game warden's department has issued a list of precautions for all persons who enter the woods for game. Among the precautionary measures urged, to prevent accidents, are the following:

Don't shoot until you know what you are shooting at.
Don't carry a loaded gun at cock.
Don't carry gun with muzzle pointed toward another person.
Don't permit boys of immature age to handle weapons.
Don't fall to remove cartridge from gun while carrying to and from hunting grounds.
Don't drop lighted matches in the woods.
Don't leave a burning camp fire before extinguishing.

Reward for Act of Heroism.

Hudsonville—Twelve years ago Oscar Diceman, now of this village, saved a little girl from drowning in a canal in Holland. He was profusely thanked by the child's father, and shortly afterward came to this country and forgot all about the incident. A few days ago, however, he received a letter from the old country saying that the father had died recently, and in his will provided a bequest of $9,000 for the man who had saved his daughter's life.

Small Per Cent Attend Church.

Lansing—The Ingham county survey has revealed the fact that not half the population in Lansing, known as the "City of Churches," attend any form of divine worship, or claim any church home.

The figures obtained by the survey workers show that out of the 40,000 population 28,000 do not belong to a church and 14,000 say they have absolutely no church preference.

Carnegie Rewards for Boy Scouts.

Charlotte—Dr. and Mrs. Dewey of Olivet, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Lansborough of this city will receive $1,000 and Mr. Lansborough's son Lawrence, Ward Kenney and Merwin Van Wey of Olivet each $2,000 for education of the boys from the Carnegie Hero Fund commission, growing out of the drowning at Pine Lake, Olivet, Jan. 2, 1912, when Stanley Lansborough, George Dewey and Clarke Morgan lost their lives in spite of the brave efforts of the three survivors to save their companions. The boys were all boy scouts.

The sum has now been returned to it, and hundreds of similar companies throughout the country, which had paid $10 to $150 each, will also be reimbursed.

The state board of canvassers will meet in the office of Secretary of State Martindale Dec. 2 to canvass the state election returns.

BELGIAN PATROLS REACH OSTEND

London Newspaper Announces Retirement of Germans From That Vicinity.

FIGHT GOES ON NEAR YPRES

Both Sides Make Official Claims That They Are Satisfied With the Progress of Operations—Germans Reported to Have Evacuated Poland—Russian Armies Push Into Territory of the Kaiser—Tsing Tao Surrendered.

London, Nov. 10.—A dispatch from "northern France" to the Daily Chronicle says that advance patrols of Belgians have penetrated to Ostend, which means that the coast line from Dunkirk to Nieuport and Ostend is relieved from the menace of the last two weeks.

Germans Renew Offensive. The Germans have renewed their offensive in the vicinity of Ypres, and Dixmude, where several previous attempts to break through the allied lines and gain the coast of France have been repulsed after the most severe fighting of the war.

There has, however, been no decisive action fought along the whole front, but each side is making gains, which may count when the crisis is at hand. With the tremendous forces opposing each other any progress must necessarily be slow in these days of siege battles, but both the allies and the Germans express satisfaction with the way in which the battle has gone.

Claims Made by Germans. The views of the Germans are told in the following report issued by general headquarters:

"During the evening a sortie of the enemy from Nieuport, which was repeated during the night, completely failed.

"In spite of obstinate resistance our attacks on Ypres are progressing slowly but steadily.

"The hostile counter attacks southwest of Ypres have been repulsed and several hundred men taken prisoners."

This is denied by a statement by the Belgian ministry of war, which says:

"The situation at Nieuport is stationary, with slight advantage to us. Dixmude has been bombarded by the enemy."

A dispatch from Berlin, received here tonight by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company, says:

"Main headquarters reports that several of the enemy's ships again attacked our right wing yesterday, but were rapidly driven off by our artillery."

Official French Statement. The text of the communication issued in Paris follows:

"On our left wing the Germans have undertaken again an offensive movement on Dixmude and in the region of Ypres. Particularly to the southwest of Ypres their attacks have been repulsed."

"At the end of the day, referring to the entire front between Dixmude and the Ys, we have made progress along the major part of the line. Nevertheless our advance is slow on account of the offensive movements undertaken by the enemy and because of the strong organization the enemy already has had the time to effect around his points of support. Since the beginning of the fighting the fog, furthermore, has made operations difficult, particularly between the Ys and the Oise."

Report Ypres Burning. London, Nov. 10.—A correspondent with the Belgian army reports tonight that Ypres is in flames and that the greater part of the fine old Flemish town is in ruins. He says that the Germans poured 11 and 13 inch shells into the place from dawn onwards. Nobody was killed, as the town was deserted.

RUSSIANS ON GERMAN SOIL

Petrograd Reports "Continued and Irresistible" Advance of the Armies of the Czar.

Petrograd, Nov. 10.—What is described as a continued and irresistible offensive of the Russian army, resulting in the evacuation of Poland by the Germans, is reported today as successfully establishing itself in German territory at Pleschen, 15 miles west of the Russo-German frontier.

In addition the Germans are said to be generally relinquishing their stand along the Warthe river, and it is believed they have given up their first plan of offering resistance to the Russian advance on the positions which they had prepared.

Cavalry Outflanks Germans. The Russian advance was accomplished, it is stated, by a cavalry movement outflanking the German left.

Russian penetration of German territory to Pleschen, Prussia, northwest of Kallias, upon which latter point the Germans appear to be withdrawing, threatens the German line of communications.

The cavalry operations with strong supports, have nullified the entire defensive preparations of the Germans inside the Polish frontier. The Russians now hold without resistance the great line of entrenchments running from Czenstochow southward on Cracow and northward on Kallias. German reserves and local forced labor had been employed for a month in digging and equipping these works, which were built and buttressed like underground dwellings. Now all are abandoned.

Attack on Cracow Begins. The Russians are now attacking the Austro-German rear guard on the outer line of the fortress of Cracow. The Russian cavalry, which invaded Posen, has pierced the left flank.

Along the south Polish frontier the Russians attacked the Austrian rear guard at Pincow, which commands an important crossing on the upper Vistula, 25 miles from Cracow. It is asserted here that a general retreat of the Austrian forces on Cracow as a new base is now apparent.

Berlin Reports Russian Repulse. Berlin, Nov. 10.—The following German official statement was given out today:

"In the eastern war theater an attack by strong Russian forces north of Wysztyer lake has been repulsed with severe Russian losses. Four thousand Russians and ten machine guns were captured."

Germans Troops Being Shifted. Amsterdam, Nov. 9.—The correspondent of the Tild at Antwerp says:

"The movement of German troops from the western theater of war is now progressing on a big scale. A larger number appear to have been withdrawn from the Yser. Long military trains filled with men and munitions are moving into Germany by way of Brussels and Louvain."

Many Prisoners Reach Kieff. London, Nov. 9.—A Reuter dispatch from Kieff, Russia, says:

"Three thousand German and Austrian prisoners, including 90 officers, together with 50 guns and several thousand rifles, captured in the recent fighting, have arrived here."

British Ships Seek Safety. Cruiser Glasgow and Transport Otranto on Their Way to the Falkland Islands.

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 10.—The British cruiser Glasgow, which was engaged with the German squadron in battle off the Chilean coast on Sunday, November 1, and the British transport Otranto, have passed Delgada Point lighthouse in the Straits of Magellan.

The two vessels are bound for the Falkland Islands, a British possession to the east of the extreme southern point of South America.

This information is contained in advices received here by the admiralty from the naval authorities in the Straits of Magellan, who said they had seen the Glasgow and Otranto passing through the straits toward the Atlantic.

(After the cruiser Good Hope had been sunk by the Germans and the Monmouth was so badly damaged that it appeared unable to steam away, according to the British admiralty report of the sea fight off Chile, the Glasgow accompanied the Monmouth as it drifted away in the darkness. The admiralty said the Glasgow was not extensively damaged and had few casualties, although during the battle it had fought the Leipzig and the Dresden while the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau were taking care of the two larger British vessels. The Otranto, the admiralty said, was not engaged in the fight.)

Emden Escapes British Cruiser. London, Nov. 9.—A Sydney, N. S. W. dispatch to the Evening News says that the skipper of the steamer Parom, arriving from Singapore, reports that after the German cruiser Emden's success in sinking the Russian and French warships at Penang the German warship and two store-ships were overtaken by a British cruiser. The speedy Emden fled, but the British man-of-war sunk one store-ship and captured the other.

FORCED TO GIVE UP TSING TAO

German Fortress Surrendered to the Japanese After a Stubborn Resistance.

Tokyo, Nov. 8.—It is officially announced that the German fortress of Tsing Tao has surrendered to the Japanese and British forces.

The first step in bringing about the surrender of the fortress occurred when the infantry charged and occupied the middle fort of the line of defense. In this operation they took 200 prisoners.

Casualty List issued. Complete casualty lists containing the names of the killed and wounded in the operations around Tsing Tao given out before the announcement of the surrender of the fortress show that the British lost two killed and eight wounded, their wounded including two majors, and that the Japanese lost 200 killed and 878 wounded.

History of Struggle. The capture of Tsing Tao loses to Germany her last fort of possessions on the Asiatic mainland.

For nearly three months the little German garrison, amounting to about 7,000 men and nearly wholly composed of reservists who were living or doing business in China, has held out against the land and sea attacks of the Japanese, of certain British detachments of both white and Indian troops that found themselves in the East at the outbreak of the war.

What the losses of the garrison have been is not known.

New Troops Asked From Canada. Montreal, Nov. 9.—A dispatch from Ottawa says that Earl Kitchener, British secretary of war, has asked Canada to furnish 100,000 men for the war against Germany.

Holy War Proclaimed. London, Nov. 9.—Official announcement was made in Berlin, says a wireless report, that the Sheikh-ul-Islam, the chief ecclesiastical dignitary of Mohammedanism in Turkey, has issued a decree in Constantinople, saying that in the fighting with Russia, England and France the duty of every Muslim is to his faith.

This decree has been spread throughout the Mohammedan world and announced to the pilgrims at Mecca.

CRUISER EMDEN IS DESTROYED BY THE SYDNEY

Australian War Craft Finally Disposes of Boat Which Makes Much Trouble

RUSSIA CLAIMS VICTORIES IN EAST THEATRE OF WAR

Official Reports From Vienna Say That Russians Have Suffered Reverses From Austrians and Turks.

London—The German cruiser Emden, whose sensational raids on British shipping and even on allied warships have been a constant source of humiliation to the British admiralty, is no more. Finally forced into battle by the Austrian cruiser Sydney, the Emden was sent ashore on fire from stem to stern. Her grave is on the Cocos or Keeling group of islands, in the Indian ocean, southwest of Java, where she was driven by the Sydney after a sharp fight.

The news of the destruction of the Emden was announced by the admiralty Tuesday. Almost at the same time came word of another British victory on the sea when it was announced that the German protected cruiser Koenigsberg had been driven into the Rufiji river, German East Africa. The British cruiser Chatham ran down the Koenigsberg, and the admiralty declared the German vessel has been bottled up.

It is believed here that the loss of life aboard the Emden must have been heavy. She carried a crew of 321 men.

The Emden's career has been the most picturesque in the German navy. Commanded by Capt. Karl von Muller she has swept the seas, capturing or sinking more than a score of merchant vessels of the allied nations and brought her raids to a climax by entering Penang harbor, where she sank two allied warships.

Russian Version of Fighting.

Paris—A dispatch to the Havas News agency from Petrograd says that the following Russian official statement was issued Tuesday:

"In Eastern Prussia the right wing of the enemy, who has been stubbornly resisting in the region of Lyck, has been driven back towards Mazourie lake.

"East of Neiderburg (24 miles south of Koenigsberg) near the Muschen railroad station, a Russian cavalry force defeated a German detachment which was protecting the railroad. The Russians captured a train and blew up the railroad bridges.

"On November 8, Russian cavalry meeting a cavalry division of the enemy, forced it to retire toward Kallias.

"On the route leading to Cracow we have attained Miechow (a town 44 miles southwest of Kieles).

"In Galicia our troops have traversed the River Wisloka. They now occupy Rzeszow, Dynow and Lisko."

Official Report From Vienna.

London—The following dispatch from Berlin was received Tuesday evening by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co.:

"It is officially reported from Vienna that the Russians have evacuated the greater portion of Bukovina and retired in the direction of the Dniester river, where they have been pursued by the Austrian troops, who have taken many prisoners.

"It is officially reported that after two days' heavy fighting on the Caucasian frontier the Turkish troops have completely defeated the Russian army and captured the Russian positions.

"A Turkish fleet has pursued Russian ships which were bombarding Kozul, but the ships escaped in the fog."

Kiau-Chau Formally Occupied.

Tokio—Japanese and British troops formally took possession of the German leasehold of Kiau-Chau, in China, Tuesday. The troops cheered wildly as they marched into Tsing-Tao and saw the Japanese and British flags floating over the citadel. The allies were led on their triumphal march of entry by Gen. Yamada, General Yohoy and Lieutenant-Colonel Barnardiston. The regimental bands played the Japanese national air and "God Save the King."

It is officially announced that "the most considerate" treatment is being shown the German prisoners, because of the gallant fight they made.

The work of mounting heavy Japanese guns on the wrecked German forts will be commenced at once.

BRIEF NEWS OF WAR

Buenos Aires—The British cruisers Carnarvon and Defence arrived here Tuesday accompanied by the transport Orama. They are supposed to be on their way through the Straits of Magellan to the Pacific.

Amsterdam—The Vossische Zeitung has published a dispatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, saying that Turkish cruisers have successfully bombarded the Russian fortified seaport of Batum, on the east shore of the Black sea.

CHAPTER I.

The Message of the Rose.
Lapped deep in the leather-bound luxury of an ample lounge-chair, Mr. Alan Law sprawled (largely on the floor of his neck) and, squinting discontentedly down his nose, admitted that he was exhaustively bored.

Now the chair filled so gracefully stood by an open window, some twenty feet below, which lay a sizable garden, an old English garden in full flower. And through the window, now and then, a half-hearted breeze wafted gusts of warm air, suave and enervating with the heavy fragrance of English roses.

Mr. Law drank deep of it, and in spite of his spiritual unrest, sighed lightly and shut his eyes.

An unspoken word troubled the depth of his consciousness, so that old memories stirred and struggled to the surface. The word was "Rose," and for the time seemed to be the name neither of a woman nor of a flower, but oddly of both, as though the two things were one. His mental vision, bridging the gap of a year, conjured up the vision of a lithe, sweet silhouette in white, with red roses at her belt, posed on a terrace of the Riviera against the burning Mediterranean blue.

Mr. Law was dully conscious that he ought to be sorry about something. But he was really very drowsy indeed; and so, drinking deep of wine-scented roses, he felt gently asleep.

The clock was striking four when he awoke; and before closing his eyes he had noticed that its hands indicated ten minutes to four. So he could not have slept very long.

For some few seconds Alan did not move, but rested as he was, incredulously regarding a rose which had materialized mysteriously upon the little table at his elbow. He was quite sure it had not been there when he closed his eyes, and almost as sure that it was not real.

And in that instant of awakening the magic fragrance of the rose-garden seemed to be even more strong and cloying sweet than ever.

Then he put out a gingerly hand and discovered that it was real beyond all question. A warm red rose, fresh-plucked, drops of water trembling and sparkling like tiny diamonds on the velvet of its fleshy petals.

Impulsively he took it by the stem, he discovered a most indisputable thorn—which did service for the traditional pinch.

Convinced that he wasn't dreaming, Alan transferred the rose to his sound hand, and meditatively sucked the a sign from her, so that he had grown accustomed to the unflattering belief that she had forgotten him.

And now the sign had come—but what the deuce did the trey of hearts mean?

When morning came, London had lost Alan Law. No man of his acquaintance—nor any woman—had received the least warning of his disappearance. He was simply and sufficiently removed from English ken.

CHAPTER II.

The Sign of the Three.
Out-of-doors, high brazen noon, a day in spring, the clamorous life of New York running as fluent as quicksilver through its brilliant streets.

Within-doors, neither sound nor sunbeam disturbed a perennial quiet that was yet not peace.

The room was like a wide, deep well of night, the haunt of teeming shadows and sinister silences.

Little, indeed, was visible beyond the lonely shape that brooded over it, the figure of an old man motionless in a great, leather-bound chair.

His hair was as white as his heart was black. The rack of his bones, clothed in a thick black dressing-gown with waist-cord of crimson silk, from the thighs down was covered by a black woolen rug. He stared unblinkingly at nothing: a man seven-eighths dead, completely paralyzed but for his head and his left arm.

Presently a faint clicking signal disturbed the stillness. Seneca Trine put forth his left hand and touched one of a row of crimson buttons embedded in the desk. Something else clicked—this time a latch. There was the faintest possible noise of a closing door, and a smallish man stole noiselessly into the light, paused beside the desk and waited respectfully for leave to speak.

"Well?"

"A telegram, sir—from England."

"Give it me!"

The old man seized the sheet of yellow paper, scanned it hungrily, and crushed it in his tremulous claw with a gesture of uncontrollable emotion.

"Send my daughter Judith here!"

Two minutes later a young woman in street dress was admitted to the chamber of shadows.

"You sent for me, father?"

"Sit down."

She found and placed a chair at the desk, and obediently settled herself in it.

"Judith—tell me—what day is this?"

"My birthday. I am twenty-one."

"And your sister's birthday? Rose, too, is twenty-one."

"Yes."

"You could have forgotten that," the old man pursued almost mockingly. "Do you really dislike your twin-sister so intensely?"

The girl's voice trembled. "You know," she said, "we have nothing in common—beyond parentage and this abominable resemblance. Our natures differ as light from darkness."

"And which would you say was—light?"

"Hardly my own: I'm no hypocrite. Rose is everything that they tell me my mother was, while I—I am more your daughter than my mother's."

A nod of the white head confirmed the suggestion. "It is true. I have watched you closely, Judith, perhaps more closely than even you knew. Before I was brought to this—the wasted hand made a significant gesture—"I was a man of strong passions. Your mother never loved, but rather feared me. And Rose is the mirror of her mother's nature, gentle, unselfish, sympathetic. But you, Judith, you are like a second self to me."

An accent of profound satisfaction informed his voice. The girl waited in a silence that was tensely expectant.

"Then, if on this your birthday I were to ask a service of you that might injuriously affect the happiness of your sister—"

The girl laughed briefly. "Only ask it!"

"And how far would you go to do my will?"

"Where would you stop in the service of one you loved?"

Seneca Trine nodded gravely. And after a brief pause, "Rose is in love," he announced.

"Oh, I know—I know!" the father affirmed with a faint ring of satisfaction. "I am old, a cripple, prisoner of this living tomb; but all things I should know—somehow—I come to know in course of time!"

"It's true—that Englishman she scraped an acquaintance with on the Riviera last year—what's his name?"

Law, Alan Law."

"In the main," the father corrected mildly, "you are right. Only he's not English. His father was Wellington Law, of Law & Son."

She knew better than to interrupt, but her seeming patience was belied by the whitening knuckles of a hand that lay within the little pool of blood-red light.

And presently the deep voice rolled on: "Law and I were once friends; but the year had lapsed with never then—it came to pass that we loved one woman, your mother. I won her—all but her heart: too late she realized it was Law she loved. He never forgave me, nor I him. Though he married another woman, still he held from me the love of my wife. I could not sleep for hating him—and he was no better off. Each sought the other's ruin; it came to be an open duel between us, in Wall street. One of us had to fall—and I held the stronger hand. The night before the day that was to have seen my triumph, I walked in Central park, as was my habit to tire my body so that my brain might sleep. Crossing the East drive I was struck by a motor-car running at high speed without lights. I was picked up insensible—and lived only to be what I am today. Law triumphed in the street while I lay helpless; only a living remnant of my fortune remained to me. Then his chauffeur, discharged, came to me and sold me the truth; it was Law's car with Law at the wheel that had struck me down—a deliberate attempt at assassination. I sent Law word that I meant to have a life for a life. For what was I better than dead? I promised him that, should he escape, I would have the life of his son. He knew I meant it, and sent his wife and son abroad. Then he died suddenly, of some common ailment—they said; but I knew better. He died of fear of me."

Trine smiled a cruel smile: "I had made his life a reign of terror. Ever so often I would send Law, one way or another—mysteriously always—a trey of hearts; it was my death-sign for him; as you know, our name, Trine, signifies a group of three. And every time he received a trey of hearts, within twenty-four hours an attempt of some sort would be made upon his life. The strain broke down his nerve."

"Then I turned my attention to the son, but the distance was too great, the difficulties insuperable. The Law millions mocked all my efforts; their alliance with the Rothschilds placed mother and son under the protection of every secret police in Europe. But they dared not come home. At length I realized I could win only by playing a waiting game. I needed three things: more money; to bring Alan Law back to America; and one agent I could trust, one incorruptible agent. I ceased to persecute mother and son, lulled them into a sense of false security, and by careful speculations repaired my fortunes. In Rose I had the lure to draw the boy back to America; in you, the one person I could trust."

"I sent Rose abroad and arranged that she should meet Law. They fell in love at sight. Then I wrote informing her that the man she had chosen was the son of him who had murdered all of me but my brain. It fell out as I foresaw. You can imagine the scene of passionate renunciation—pledges of undying constancy—the arrangement of a secret code whereby, when she needed him, she would send him a single rose—the birth of a great romance!"

The old man laughed sardonically. "Well, there is the history. Now the rose has been sent; Law is already homeward bound; my agents are watching his every step. The rest is in your hands."

The girl bent forward, breathing heavily, eyes aflame in a face that had assumed a waxy pallor.

"What is it you want of me?"

"Bring Alan Law to me. Dead or alive, bring him to me. (But alive, if you can compass it; I wish to see him die. Then I, too, may die content.)"

The hand of hot-blooded youth stole forth and grasped the icy hand of death-in-life.

"I will bring him," Judith swore—"dead or alive, you shall have him here."

CHAPTER III.

The Trail of Treachery.
But young Mr. Law was sole agent of his own enslavement; just as he was nobody's fool, least of all his own. The hidden meaning of the trey of hearts perplexed him with such distrust that before leaving London, he dispatched a code cablegram to his confidential agent in New York.

What do you know about the trey of hearts? Answer immediately.

The answer forestalled his arrival in Liverpool:

Trine's death sign for your father. For God's sake, look to yourself and keep away from America.

But Alan had more than once visited America incognito and unknown to Seneca Trine via a secret route of his own selection.

Eight days out of London, a second-class passenger newly landed from one of the C.P. steamships, he walked the streets of Quebec—and dropped out of sight between dark and dawn, to turn up presently in the distant Canadian hamlet of Bale St. Paul, apparently a very tenderfooted American woods-traveler chaperoned by a taciturn Indian guide picked up heaven-knows-where.

Crossing the St. Lawrence by night, the two struck off quietly into the hinterland of the Notre Dame range, then crossed the Maine border.

On the second noon thereafter, trail-worn and weary, as lean as their depleted packs, the two paused on a ridge-pole of the wilderness up back of the Allagash country, and made their midday meal in a silence which, if normal in the Indian, was one of deep misgivings on Alan's part.

Continually his gaze questioned the northern skies that lowered portentously, foul with smoke—a country-wide conflagration that threatened all northern Maine, bone-dry with drought.

Only the south offered a fair prospect. And the fires were making southward far faster than man might hope to travel through that grim and stubborn land.

Even as he stared, Alan saw fresh columns of dun-colored smoke spring up in the northwest.

Anxiously he consulted the impassive mask of the Indian, from whom his questions gained Alan little comfort. Jacob recommended forced marches to Spirit lake, where canoes might be found to aid their flight; and withdrew into sullen reserve.

They traveled far and fast by dim forest trails before sundown, then again paused for food and rest. And as Jacob sat deftly about preparing the meal, Alan stumbled off to whip the little trail-side stream for trout.

Perhaps a hundred yards upstream, the back-lash of a careless cast by his weary hand hooked the state of Maine. Too tired even to remember the appropriate words, Alan scrambled ashore, forced through the thick undergrowth that masked the trail, found his fly, set the state of Maine free—and swinging on his heel brought up, nose to a sapling, transfixed by a rectangle of white pasteboard fixed to its trunk, a trey of hearts, of which each ply had been neatly punctured by a 22-caliber bullet.

He carried it back to camp, meaning to consult the guide, but on second thought, held his tongue. It was not likely that the Indian had overlooked an object so conspicuous on the trail.

So Alan waited for him to speak—and meantime determined to watch Jacob more narrowly, though no other suspicious circumstance had marked the several days of their association.

The first half of the night was, as the day, devoted to relentless progress southward—thirty minutes of steady jogging, five minutes for rest—and repeat.

No more question as to the need for such urgent haste; overhead the north wind muttered without ceasing. Thin veils of smoke drifted through the forest, hugging the ground, like some weird acid mist; and ever the curtailed heavens glared, livid with reflected fires.

By midnight Alan had come to the bounds of endurance; flesh, bone and sinew could no longer stand the strain. Though Jacob declared that Spirit lake was now only six hours distant, as far as concerned Alan he might have said 600. His blanket once unrolled, Alan dropped upon it like one drugged.

The sun was high when he awakened and sat up, rubbing heavy eyes, stretching aching limbs, wondering what had come over the Indian to let him sleep so late.

Of a sudden he was assailed by sickening fears that needed only the briefest investigation to confirm. Jacob had absconded with every valuable item of their equipment.

Nor was his motive far to seek. Overnight the fire had made tremendous gains. And ever and anon the wind would bring down the roar of the holocaust, dulled by distance but not unlike the growling of wild animals feeding on their kill.

Alan delayed long enough only to swallow a few mouthfuls of raw food, gulped water from a spring, and set out at a dog-trot on the trail to Spirit Lake.

For hours he blundered blindly on, holding to the trail mainly by instinct.

At length, panting, gasping, half-blinded, he staggered into a little natural clearing and plunged forward headlong, so bewildered that he could not have said whether he was tripped or thrown; for even as he stumbled a heavy body landed on his back and crushed him savagely to earth.

In less than a minute he was overcome; his wrists hitched together, his ankles bound with heavy cord.

When his vision cleared he found Jacob within a yard, regarding him with a face as immobile as though it had been cast in the bronze it resembled.

Beyond, to one side, a woman in a man's hunting costume stood eyeing the captive as narrowly as the Indian, but unlike him with a countenance that seemed aglow with a fierce exultation over his downfall.

But for that look, he could have believed her the face that had brought him overseas to this mortal pass. Feature for feature, even to the hue of her tumbled hair, she counterfeited the woman he loved; only those eyes, aflame with their look of inhuman ruthlessness, denied that the two were one.

He sought vainly to speak. The breath rustled in his parched throat like wind whispering among dead leaves.

Thrusting the Indian roughly aside, the woman knelt in his place by Alan's head.

"No," she said, and smiling cruelly, shook her head—"no, I am not your Rose. But I am her sister, Judith, her twin, born in the same hour, daughter of—can you guess whose daughter? But see this!" She flashed a card from within her hunting shirt and held it before his eyes. "You know it, eh? The trey of hearts—the symbol of Trine—Trine, your father's enemy, and—yours, and—Rose's father and mine! So, now, perhaps you know!"

A gust of wind like a furnace blast swept the glade. The woman sprang up, glanced over-shoulder into the forest, and signed to the Indian.

"In ten minutes," she said, "these woods will be your funeral pyre."

She stepped back. Jacob advanced, picked Alan up, shouldered his body, and strode back into the forest. Ten feet in from the clearing he dropped the helpless man supine upon a bed of dry logs and branches.

Then, with a single movement, he disappeared.

CHAPTER IV.

Many Waters.
Overhead, through a rift in the foliage, a sky was visible whose ebullient darkness called to mind a thundercloud.

The heat was nearly intolerable; the voice of the fire was very loud.

A heavy, broken crashing near by made Alan turn his head, and he saw a brown bear break cover and plunge on into the farther thickets—fore-runner of a mad rout of terrified forest folk, deer, porcupines, fox or two, a wildcat, rabbits, squirrels, partridges—a dozen more.

Two minutes had passed of the ten. Something was digging uncomfortably into Alan's right hip—the automatic pistol in his hip pocket, of which Jacob had neglected to relieve him.

Then a sharp, spiteful crackling brought him suddenly to a sitting position, to find that the Indian had thoughtfully touched a match to the pyre before departing. At Alan's feet the twigs were blazing merrily.

It would have been easy enough, acting on instinct, to snatch his limbs away, but he did not move more than to strain his feet as far as their bonds permitted. Conscious of scorching heat even through his hunting boots, he suffered that torture until a tongue of flame licked up, wrapped itself round the thick hempen cord and ate it through.

Immediately Alan kicked his feet free, lifted to a kneeling position, and crawled from the pyre.

As for his hands—Alan's hunting-knife was still in its sheath belted to the small of his back. Tearing at the belt with his hampered fingers, he contrived to shift it round until the sheath knife stuck at the belt-loop over his left hip. Withdrawing and conveying the blade to his mouth, he gripped it firmly between his teeth, and saved the cords round his wrists against the razor-sharp blade.

Before Alan could turn and run he saw a vanguard of flames bridle 50 yards at a bound and start a dead pine blazing like a torch.

And then he was pelting like a madman across the smoked-filled clearing, and in less than two minutes broke from the forest to the pebbly shore of a wide-bosomed lake, and within a few hundred feet of a substantial dam, through whose spillway a heavy volume of water cascaded with a roar rivaling that of the forest-fire itself.

Two quick glances showed Alan two things: that his only way of escape was via the dam; that there was a solitary canoe at mid-lake, bearing swiftly to the farther shore Judith Trine and the Indian—the latter wielding the paddle.

In the act of turning toward the dam he saw Jacob drop the paddle. The next instant a bullet from a Winchester .30 kicked up a spurt of pebbles only a few feet in advance of Alan.

He quickened his pace, but the next bullet fell closer, while the third actually bit the earth beneath his running feet as he gained the dam.

Exasperated, he pulled up, whipped out his pistol and fired without aim. At the same time, he noted that the distance between dam and canoe had lessened perceptibly, thanks to the strong current sucking through the spillway.

His shot flew wide, but almost instinctively his finger closed again upon the trigger, and he saw the paddle snap in twain, its blade falling overboard. And then the Indian fired again, his bullet droning past Alan's ear.

As he fired in response Jacob started, dropped his rifle and crumpled up in the bow of the canoe.

Simultaneously earth and heavens rocked with a terrific clap of thunder.

He turned again and ran swiftly along the dam, toward two heavy timbers that bridged the torrent of the spillway.

Then a glance aside brought him up with a thrill of horror; the suck of the overflow had drawn the canoe within a hundred yards of the spillway. The dead Indian in its bow, the living woman helpless in its stern, it swept swiftly onward to destruction.

His next few actions were wholly unpremeditated. He was conscious only of her white, staring face, her strange likeness to the woman that he loved.

He ran out upon the bridge, threw himself down upon the innermost timber, turned, and let his body fall backward, arms extended at length, and swung, braced by his feet beneath the outer timber.

With a swiftness that passed conscious thought, he was aware of the canoe hurtling onward with the speed of wind, its sharp prow apparently aimed directly for his head. Then hands closed round his wrists like clamps; a tremendous weight tore at his arms, and with an effort of inconceivable difficulty he began to lift, to drag the woman up out of the foaming jaws of death.

Somehow that impossible feat was achieved; somehow the woman gained a hold upon his body, shifted it to his belt, contrived inexplicably to clamber over him to the timbers; and somehow he in turn pulled himself up to safety, and sick with reaction sprawled prone, lengthwise upon that foot-wide bridge, above the screaming abyss.

Later he became aware that the woman had crawled to safety on the farther shore, and pulling himself together, imitated her example. Solid earth underfoot, he rose and stood swaying, beset by a great weakness.

Through the gathering darkness—a ghastly twilight in which the flaming forests on the other shore burned with an unearthly glare—he discovered the wan, writhen face of Judith Trine close to his and he heard her voice, a scream barely audible above the commingled voices of the conflagration and the cascades.

"You fool! Why did you save me? I tell you, I have sworn your death!" The utter grotesqueness of it all broke upon his intelligence like the revelation of some enormous fundamental absurdity in Nature. He laughed a little hysterically.

Darkness followed. A flash of lightning seemed to flame between them like a fiery sword. To its crashing thunder, he lapsed into unconsciousness.

When he roused, it was with a shiver and a shudder. Rain was falling in torrents from a sky the hue of slate. Across the lake dense volumes of steam enveloped the fires that faintly beneath the deluge. A great hissing noise filled the world, muting even the roar of the spillway.

He was alone.

But in his hand, tattered and bruised by the downpour, he found—a rose.

FABLE THAT CARRIES MORAL

Comparison of Lusty Falsehood With Certain Class of Truths Is Worth Consideration.

A fox that was caught in a farmer's hen coop concluded that prevarication might save him. In response to the farmer's query as to what he meant by stealing chickens, the fox said: "I never stole chickens in my life. I'm a vegetarian."

"What were you doing in my hen coop?"

"I merely stopped here to talk about the war from a perfectly neutral standpoint."

"But how about that dead and half-eaten chicken? Perhaps you know nothing about that?"

"But I do, though," said the fox. "A mink did that. He ran away at your approach. I would have left, too, but the smell of fresh blood made me sick and faint."

When the farmer regained consciousness the fox was gone and so was another fat hen.

Moral: An athletic falsehood is better than a kindergarten truth.

True to His Principles.

A newcomer to Idaho from the strictly prohibition state of Kansas had the misfortune one wintry day to fall into the rapids of a swift-running river when the thermometer stood several degrees below zero. He was saved with difficulty, and his clothes became a rattling sheath of ice before his rescuers could get him to the nearest saloon.

"What'll you have, Dan?" inquired the barkeep, solicitously.

The Kansan opened his eyes and answered weakly: "Guess I'll take a glass of lemonade.—Lippincott's."

Held Their Annual Meeting.

The annual business meeting of St. Paul's German Evangelical Church and Society was held in the school house last Friday evening. The reports as read showed the affairs of the society to be in a flourishing condition. During the year five new members were taken into the church.

Watch Out For Fakirs.

There are coming in reports of fakirs who are operating in the townships pretending to be agents of the state in the suppression of the foot and mouth disease. Their method is to use their pretended official position to enable them to sell a specific for the cure and prevention of the epidemic, getting from $1 to $2 according to the gullibility of the farmer. When one of these so-called agents presents himself the farmer should put on his heavy plow shoes and place them firmly and with vigor on that part of the fakir's anatomy that will ensue his hasty removal from the farm.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

District of Columbia to Be Square With Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON.—With the payment by the District of Columbia to the federal government next spring of a balance of $76,283.29 on account of advances for special park improvements, the municipality will have completely discharged all indebtedness to the United States under the several acts of congress directing reimbursement for advances. This is shown by the annual report of the auditor, Alonzo Tweeddale, submitted to the District commissioners.

During the year just closed the District reduced its indebtedness by reason of cash payments made thereon in the amount of $1,986,250.23. Its total debt at the close of the year amounted to $7,015,433.29, made up of the item referred to on account of advances for park improvements and $6,939,150 of the bonded debt, which does not expire until 1914.

The report shows that the payment of $621,521.71 to the United States on account of advances, general fund, for extraordinary improvements, closes the account made during the fiscal years 1901 to 1909, inclusive, for certain extraordinary projects of permanent improvement in the District. Total advances on this account amounted to $4,144,696.35 and the interest charges thereon paid by the District to $587,887.64.

"During the period in which the foregoing advances were made," it is stated, "there was expended on account of permanent improvements over eighteen million dollars, one-half of which, paid from District revenues, amounted to between nine and ten million dollars. All of these extraordinary improvements have been paid in cash from current revenues, without resorting to long-term loans, or permanent improvement bonds, which is the usual practice in other municipalities."

The District government, according to the report, closed the year with a balance in the treasury of $75,875.24, and in the hands of the collector of taxes of $45,694.65.

Crank Inventions for War Offered the Government

WITH the outbreak of war in Europe even more than the usual large number of crank inventions and ideas relating to war on land and sea and in the air poured in to the army and navy departments, and there is no letup in the flood. Most numerous of the recent inventions which have been sent to the departments in Washington are those relating to bomb-dropping devices. The bombs assume many ingenious forms. Some are loaded with a vapor which produces sleep, so that an enemy may be lulled to slumber and easily captured without loss of life and the suffering which comes from the explosion of bombs of more destructive character. One man suggested that the bomb be filled with printed leaflets that should make an appeal to an enemy, and so instill a spirit of forgiveness and generosity, and thus produce the sentiment of peace.

There are also incendiary projectiles and bullets that, as the name and title implies, produce conflagration and are capable of creating havoc by fire. In the class of devices that are defensive rather than offensive there is the arrangement of huge mirrors set up at such angles that the approaching enemy does not see the opposing force behind these mirrors, but gets the impression of terrain, which is merely the reflection of that over which they are traversing. Then there are the electrical devices which betray the approach of an enemy, such as threads stretched across the country which on fracture communicate with signals or sound alarms indicating the location of troops. There are hidden platforms which can be so nicely adjusted that there will be an indication at headquarters of the strength of the enemy and its character, whether infantry, cavalry or artillery.

One invention has to do with what is described in the files as "composite armor," which may be of alternate thicknesses, or, as in one case, be mounted on powerful springs, affording no adequate backing for the attacking shell to penetrate. The projectile, it is represented, under such nonresisting target, will bounce back.

Poor Thomas Jefferson May Have to Move Again

WASHINGTON'S most artistic bronze statue—that of Thomas Jefferson by the French sculptor, P. T. David Angers—has had many locations since it was presented to the United States in 1834 by Capt. Uriah P. Levy, U. S. N., and may before long be told again to "move on," finding a final resting place in Monticello. For several years after the statue was delivered it remained in obscurity for some reason not explained, but it was finally placed in the semicircle in front of the White House, about where the fountain now stands. In 1874 it was removed to Statuary hall in the capitol, and occupied a position between the plaster statue of Washington, after Houdin, and the statue of Edward Dickinson.

Baker of Oregon, where it remained for several years. It was then transferred to the rotunda of the capitol and placed between the pictures representing the surrender of Cornwallis and General Washington surrendering his commission, by Trumbull. After occupying this position for some time it was again removed and placed on the right hand side of the east entrance to the rotunda, opposite the statue of Washington, where it now stands, but just how long it may continue in this position is not certain.

Just why Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States (1801-1809), should change his location so often is rather peculiar; surely Thomas Jefferson of Virginia (1743-1826) and author of the Declaration of Independence and signer of the same, member of congress and minister to France, is entitled to have his statue located in some permanent and conspicuous place.

The bronze of which the statue is composed, having been cast in Paris, is of a most excellent quality, having withstood the ravages of the elements for many years while exposed in front of the White House.

This statue of Jefferson was the first statue of artistic merit—in fact, the first statue of any kind—to be placed in Statuary hall, formerly the old house of representatives, in the capitol.

Secretary Bryan Beats Swords Into Plowshares

ANOTHER delicate hint to the European belligerents to cease their fighting is contained in a present which Secretary of State Bryan has made to each of the 29 ambassadors and ministers who have signed with him one of the Bryan peace treaties. Included in the number are the representatives here of Great Britain, France, Russia and Belgium, all of which countries are at war.

Recalling the Biblical text, "They shall beat their swords into plowshares," the secretary obtained from the war department a number of obsolete swords, the blades of which he had made into miniature plowshares. On them he had engraved the text quoted.

It is the secretary's hope that these plowshares be always on the desks of the diplomats as paperweights, as perpetual reminders of "the better way." The handles of the swords Mr. Bryan has had made into paperweights for the members of the senate committee on foreign relations, who passed on the peace treaties, while the scabbards were cut into short pieces, filled with lead and polished up so that they also may serve as paperweights of peace.

The secretary also had replicas of the plowshares made of brass, nickel-plated, which he presented to the newspaper men who call upon him daily at the state department.

Chic Hats for Midwinter Gayeties

A GROUP of beautiful hats includes three ostrich-trimmed shapes, such as women of fashion delight in for those occasions on which the hat is worn. At the club luncheon, at five o'clock tea, at the afternoon reception, in the box party and for calling, the hat is the dominant feature of the toilet and must play its leading part or reduce all the other apparel to its own level. Women are right in giving much time and study to the matter.

Among the newest and most captivating hats are those with wide brims, made of velvet. One of these is shown in the picture having a brim much wider at the left side than at the right. The brim is covered smoothly with velvet, and flares upward very gently at the wide portion. The crown is soft at the top, having the sides encircled by a smooth collar of velvet. A sash of soft satin ribbon is tied about it, finished with two short loops at the front.

At the side, a short, very wide plume is fastened to the underbrim with a small flat bow of ribbon like that around the crown. It curls up over the brim edge and rests on the upper brim.

Just above is a pretty felt hat in a light color. The facing of black velvet forms the narrow binding at the edge of the brim. A stiff collar of velvet stands up about the crown. Between this collar and the crown four short ostrich tips are mounted, no two of them in just the same manner.

A hat of gold lace with narrow, flat brim and low crown is daintily trimmed with a long straight ostrich quill in white, and a soft black plume. There is a twist of velvet at the base of the crown. The tall quill and the plume both spring from the front of the hat, the quill sweeping upward and the plume falling backward over the brim. Hats of silver lace, with rosettes made of ostrich feathers in which a rose is set, placed flat on the brim at intervals, are about the same shape as the hat of gold lace just described.

Coiffures for Matron and Maid

A COIFFURE which is always "in," a staple style in hair dressing, and a second one, which is typical of the newest vogue, are pictured here together. In the first one a mode of dressing the hair is shown, which, with very little variation, has been used for many years. In the second, an idea quite unfamiliar is set forth for what it is worth, and it remains to be seen with what success it bids for favor.

The middle part should not be adopted by any woman unless she is a great beauty, who can "carry off" anything, without a bit of experimenting. There are a few types that it is becoming to. It happens nearly always that they are women with very abundant hair.

In the coiffure pictured the hair is waved (but not "marcelled") in loose but regular waves at the front and across the back. The hair on the crown is not waved. This style is not at all difficult to dress. The waving may be done with the curling iron, or, better still, on heavy wire hairpins or "curlers" or with kid rollers.

The unwaved hair and the back hair is combed up to the top of the crown, where it is arranged in a smooth twist with ends pinned under. It will stay in place if it is first tied at the top of the crown with a short piece of shoelace or tape.

The front hair is parted and combed down at each side as far as the temples. Here it is turned back and brought to the coil at the back, where it is pinned in. The ends of the side hair are twisted lightly into a coil and arranged in a short loop of hair at each side of the middle twist. Small shell pins look well and are in keeping with this neat and conservative hair dress.

If a hair net can be adjusted so that it can hardly be seen it will keep gray or white hair, which is inclined to be wiry, in place and preserve the neatness which is essential to this coiffure.

A conservative example of the new cascade coiffure, in which the hair is marcelled in very regular waves and combed back off the face, is shown in the second picture. In the extremes of this style the ears are uncovered, the hair drawn back off the forehead and combed up to the top of the head. There are several arrangements of the back hair, the favorite being a long, soft French twist, considerably fuller and higher than that shown here.

The forehead, in these new coiffures, is innocent of curls and quite bare. This proves so trying to the majority of women that they have softened the line of hair about the face by bringing it down in the middle of the forehead in a "dip" and combing the locks in front of the ears back over the top of the ears, as shown in the picture.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Be no longer a Chaos, but a World. Produce! produce! Were it but the pitiful infinitesimal fraction of a product, produce it in God's name! 'Tis the utmost thou hast in thee; out with it, then. Up, up! Whatever thy hand find to do, do it with thy whole might.—Carlyle.

FOR THE SWEET COURSE.

There are so many dainty little sweets which make a good finish for a heavy meal when a hearty dessert is out place that in the following may be found some suggestions:

Cream Puffs.—Filled with any desired filling, like jam, jelly or preserves, powdered with sugar and heaped in a standard dish make a pretty as well as toothsome dessert.

Apple Trifle.—Make a good, well-seasoned sauce sufficient to make a pint. Put through a sieve and reheat. Have ready half a package of gelatin softened in a cupful of cold water and stir this into the scalding hot sauce. When it is dissolved and the sauce is quite cold, fold in a pint of whipped cream and flavor with nutmeg. Turn into a mold that has been wet with ice water and let stand for several hours in a cold place. Serve with plain cream or a custard sauce.

Orange Cream.—Beat until stiff a pint of cream. Soak a half package of gelatin in a cupful of cold water until dissolved. Beat the yolks of three eggs, add the strained juice of two large oranges and the rind of one. Stir into a cup of boiling water, adding the eggs, and when hot and thick stir in the softened gelatin and a cupful of powdered sugar. Pour into the halves of oranges to mold, or serve in sherbet cups with cream. Kumquats make a good garnish for this dainty dish.

Chocolate Junket.—Bring to a lukewarm heat a pint of milk. Let cool and stir in a half cupful of sugar and a third of a cupful of boiling water, a quarter of a cupful of grated chocolate, and when dissolved add a crushed junket tablet and a pinch of salt. Flavor as desired with vanilla and let stand in a warm place to set. Be careful not to scald the milk or the junket will lose its virtue. Serve with nuts sprinkled over the top or with whipped cream.

Rice is so well cooked in a cooker that it is a favorite dish with many. It may be served with cream and sugar as a dessert or with butter as a vegetable.

All men whom mighty genius has raised to a proud eminence in the world have usually some little weakness which appears the more conspicuous from the contrast it presents to their general character.—Pickwick Papers.

SOME BEST DISHES.

Here is a dainty dessert which is good enough for the best of companies: Mix together two and a half cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of water and a tablespoonful of flour, boil and strain with the juice of three lemons, three oranges three mashed bananas and a can of grated pineapple, with three cupfuls of water. Fold in three egg whites beaten stiff and freeze as usual.

Marshmallow Cream.—This is a most delicious dessert which may be easily made and takes the place of a frozen dish. Cut half a pound of marshmallow in fourths, add to a cupful of cream beaten stiff, and two stiffly beaten whites of eggs, one cupful of walnut meats broken in bits, a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and a pinch of salt. Flavor with any desired flavoring and serve in sherbet cups. Garnish with cubes of jelly or with candied cherries.

Filled Cookies.—To a half cupful of shortening add a cupful of sugar, one egg and half a cupful of sweet milk in which one teaspoonful of soda is dissolved. Sift three and a half cupfuls of flour with two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar add a teaspoonful of vanilla and mix well, roll out thin and cut with a cookie cutter. Cook a cupful of chopped raisins with half a cupful of water, a tablespoonful of flour and lemon juice to taste. When thick remove and place a teaspoonful on one cookie, cover with another and bake until brown. A filling of figs and dates may be used instead of raisins if so desired.

String beans either canned or freshly cooked make a most satisfying salad, with a bit of chopped onion and any salad dressing desired.

Pertinent Suggestion.

A wealthy but miserly merchant was celebrated for having a magnificently decorated dining room, whilst his hands were very few. A well-to-do wit was invited to dine on a certain occasion, and the host asked him if he didn't think the room elegant.

"Yes," was the reply. "But it is not quite to my taste."

"And what change would you make?" asked the host.

"Well," answered the wit, "if this were my house, you know, I would have 'looking at the ceiling'—less gliding and—here he glanced furtively at the dining table—"more carving."

Hard Job for Agent.

Some years ago the owner of a small vaudeville house out West, who had spent some time in the clothing store he had formerly owned than he had in school, found the receipts of the theater dropping off, and decided to cut expenses. A few days later his vaudeville agent called him up and said he was sending him a quartet for the next week's bill.

"How many in a quartet?" asked the manager.

"Four," answered the agent, naturally a bit surprised at the question. "Nothing doing," came back the manager. "You'll have to cut it to a quartet of two."

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Yes, waiting for every farmer or farmer's son—an industrious American who is anxious to establish for himself a happy home and prosperity. Canada's hearty invitation this year is more attractive than ever. Wheat is higher but her farm land is just as cheap and in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

160 Acre Homesteads are Actually Free to Settlers and Other Land at From $15 to $20 per Acre

The people of European countries as well as the American continent must be fed—thus an even greater demand for Canadian Wheat will keep up the price. Any farmer who can buy land at $15.00 to $20.00 per acre—get a dollar for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre is bound to make money—that's what you can expect in Western Canada. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed Farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutritious, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is an unusual demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service in the war. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintending Immigration, Ottawa, Canada; or to:

DEFENDS POPULAR REMEDIES

Speaker Says Newspapers Should Investigate Merits of Medicines Before Barring Advertisements.

That an organized attempt has been made to blacken the reputation of the popular family remedies of this country, and to mislead the newspaper publishers into rejecting the advertising of such medicines, was the charge made by Carl J. Balliett, of Buffalo, N. Y., at the convention of the Advertising Affiliation at Detroit.

Mr. Balliett is a director of the Proprietary Association of America, which includes in its membership two hundred firms which make the popular prepared medicines of America.

Mr. Balliett pointed out that it is the duty of the newspaper publisher to refuse the advertising of any fake or fraudulent medicine, just as it is his duty to refuse any fake or fraudulent advertising, but it is not right to shut down on all medical advertising because there have been some fakers, any more than it would be right to refuse to publish all department store advertising because certain stores have made a practice of lying about bargain sales.

Disease and death are mysteries. People who are perfectly well are skeptical. They laugh at the time-worn patent medicine joke, just as they laugh again and again over the many variations of the operation joke.

"The operation was a success but the patient died." This so-called humor has perhaps hurt the medicine business with well people, but when the hitherto healthy man feels a severe pain or illness, he immediately wants medicine, and will bless the cure whether it be at the hands of a regular doctor, a homeopath, an osteopath, a Christian Scientist or patent medicine. There is nothing more deadly than disease; nothing more honorable than to cure it.

Mr. Balliett refuted the idea sought to be spread about that patent medicines are unpopular by showing that from 1900 to 1912 the amount of prepared medicines consumed in America increased from $100,000,000 to $160,000,000 annually. He showed that, although the American Medical Association is trying as an organization to exterminate so-called patent medicines, the family doctor, individually, is not fighting them but prescribing them. He estimated that 40% of the prescriptions written by doctors today include proprietary medicines.

The writings of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, he said, have also aimed to destroy confidence in proprietary medicines; but that Dr. Wiley's ideas are not infallible is shown by cases where his analyses were entirely wrong. Mr. Balliett mentioned a case where, with all the power of the Government, he fought a preparation as being dangerous to health, and was ingloriously walloped.

There has been spread the idea that a clever faker can mix a few useless ingredients and, by smart advertising, sell tons of it and win sudden wealth.

With Least Exertion

To do one's best work with comfort, body and brain must be in good condition. That requires proper food—food that contains all the elements that build brain and brawn.

Grape-Nuts

Is that kind of food!

Made of wheat and barley, it contains all the nutriment of these most nourishing grains, including those vital mineral salts—phosphate of potash, etc.—that are discarded in making white flour.

Long baking breaks down the starch cells of the grain and makes this food easily digestible by the most delicate stomach.

Economical, appetizing—

DAIRY THE DAIRY

GETTING FIRST GRADE CREAM

Dairy Commissioner of Kansas Offers Suggestions to Dairymen—Cleanliness is First.

In his grading circular, State Dairy Commissioner Hine of Kansas offers suggestions as to how first grade cream can be produced. The principal thought is that of cleanliness in every detail, and the following are the principal rules:

Remove all milk from the barn immediately after milking and separate at once.

Set the separator screw so that the cream will test about thirty-five per cent butterfat.

Wash, scald and air the separator and all other milk utensils immediately after using.

Cool the cream immediately after separating it. Never mix warm cream with cold cream.

Keep the milk and cream cool. This is best done by placing the cans containing it in a tank of flowing water. Stir all cream at least twice a day. Do not allow the cream to freeze.

Keep the receptacles containing milk and cream covered with a wet blanket while delivering these products during warm weather.

He suggests also that every patron ascertain from the cream buyer the grade of the cream delivered, so that the patron will labor under no misapprehension and may be able to exercise such precaution as may be necessary to improve the grade.

He says: "Do not blame the buyer if your cream does not grade first. Find out and remedy the evil. Every one can produce first grade cream."

MOST SUPERIOR DAIRY COWS
Advanced Registry Testing Shows Ayrshires Uniformly Come Up to High Standard of Production.

It is an interesting and instructive fact in regard to the Ayrshire cow that as new herds and new cows are entered for the advanced registry testing they seem to uniformly come up to the high standard of production, showing that the great majority of the breed are most superior dairy cows.

The imported cows and the home-bred cows, the cows of the East and the cows of the West, the cows of the North and the cows of the South, all show that they belong to the same high class of dairy cows.

The records show that as dairy cows no one man or no one herd has all the great dairy cows.

When we think we have struck a wonderful dairy family, behold some breeder who has never given his cows an official test starts in and shows that he, too, has wonderful producers that stand on a par with the noted Ayrshires.

It is interesting to notice that with the increase in number being tested, there is also a steady increasing total average in all the classes.

DAIRY NOTES

Don't put a dairy cow on starvation diet.

Diversified farming should include dairying as the most important factor.

When cows are stabled to stand face to face, they become restless and nervous.

When a cow produces a half ton of butter per year, as some do, she has a right to be called a factory.

The manger should be low, since the cow gets upon her hind feet first, and a high manger also makes it tiring for her to get her food.

How the cows do draw up the water during hot days! A tubful to a thirsty cow is as a single chocolate sundae to a thirsty school girl.

See that plenty of clean water is provided the dairy cows. A dairy cow drinks about four pounds of water for each pound of dry food eaten.

The best cow is always the cheapest. A $70 cow costs little more to feed than a $40 cow and is likely to give much more and better milk.

Override cream makes rancid butter. It may taste all right when taken from the churn, but in a few hours becomes the same old sour cream.

"DEVOTEDLY, BILL"

By IZOLA FORESTER.

"Where are the matches?"

Nan stumbled over a taboret and emitted a startled exclamation.

"Forevermore! Eleanor, where on earth are you?"

"Stand still until I can find where the switch is, goose." There came the click of a button and the long reception hall lay revealed in a flood of light.

It was after twelve, and they both needed rest more than anything after the trip down from the mountains.

It was cheerier in the cozy bedroom suite upstairs. The rooms connected with each other, and Nan, rambling about, her brown hair in two long braids and a kimono wrapped about her, tucked into a corner was a photograph that seemed different from the rest.

It was such a splendid, manly young face that smiled out at one from the back in a scrawling, boyish writing:

"Devotedly, Bill."

Over at the little white dressing table Eleanor sat brushing her hair. Somehow no one would ever have connected her with college boys who signed themselves, "Devotedly, Bill."

"What are you chuckling over?" asked Eleanor.

"Devotedly, Bill."

Eleanor turned around, her fair hair falling loosely over her shoulders, her eyes filling with tears.

"Oh, Nell, I didn't mean to stir up anything."

"Oh, it's all right. You didn't strike any heavy minor chord." She looked down at the photograph tenderly. "He was just a boy I met up at Cornell last winter, the very first boy that ever dared to love me."

"Bless his old brave heart," interrupted Nan fervently, leaning forward, her chin on her hands. "Doesn't he even write to you?"

"We promised we wouldn't, not for a year. What's that?"

Both girls rose to their feet with startled eyes.

"Somebody fell over the taboret in the hall," Nan whispered, her dark eyes wide with dread. "You turned off the lights."

Eleanor thought quickly. The house had been closed since June. A caretaker came every day to look after it, and at night the watchman was supposed to guard it. She crossed the room and locked both doors leading into the hall, then went to the windows.

"Did you hear that?" Nan whispered, her face pressed against the door listening. "Somebody whistled, and it was answered."

Nan shrank back, her face covered with her hands, but Eleanor slipped one arm around her, soothing her even while her own heart throbbed heavily.

"Come on, now!" called a deep voice. "Open up. You know you can't get out of there."

"And you cannot get in," returned Eleanor clearly. "If you attempt to break in the doors I will fire."

"Sure, 'tis a woman's voice," they heard some one say. "Shall I break in the door, Mr. Blair?"

"No, no, wait." The knob turned. A shoulder pressed against the door panel. "Nell, open the door, please. I know your voice. It's Bill."

"Who's with you?"

"Just the watchman. I saw the lights and thought burglars were in here. Open the door, please."

Eleanor turned the key. Tall and very lovely she looked in her long, blue crepe kimono, her face pale and determined, her hair in two long braids over her shoulders like some old-time Saxon princess.

Out in the hallway stood Bill, the original of the picture, and the old watchman.

"Nell," he cried, "I had no idea it was you in here. I've had a room across the street all summer just to be near the house, and when I saw the lights flash on, I called Sullivan here and we hustled over to get the burglars. I'm awfully sorry."

Sullivan moved tactfully down the hallway, testing locks here and there. Nan had dropped limply into a willow chair, with its back toward the two at the door. Bill raised two white, slim hands to his lips and kissed them.

"It's so wonderful to see you again, girl dear. I've watched these barred shutters all summer, waiting for you to come back. I won't wait a year, Nell. Look at me. Aren't you glad to see me?"

"Don't you know, Billie boy?"

"Listen, dear. Don't let them take you away from me again. It's Providence, this mixup here tonight. I've been patient for months. Don't say no, Nell. I'll be over early for you, and we'll be married before anything can happen."

He was gone before she could even protest. From the willow chair came a contented chuckle, and a brief remark:

"Devotedly, Bill."

Put That Pain to Use

The network of nerves in your body, like the network of wires in a burglar alarm system, gives quick warning when anything is going wrong inside. Looking at it in this way a pain is a useful alarm. Now, kidney weakness is a dangerous thing—a condition not to be neglected—and it is wise to know and pay attention to the early alarm signals of sick kidneys.

Backache is a common warning of congestion or inflammation in the kidneys. It may be dull, nagging pain, or a sharp twinge when stooping or lifting. There are likely to be disorders of urination, dizziness, headaches, and drowsy, despondent, tired feelings.

It is very hard to strengthen weak kidneys at first, but neglect invites rheumatic or neuralgic attacks, gravel, dropsy, and fatal Bright's disease.

As a special medicine for weak kidneys Doan's Kidney Pills have been used for years all over the civilized world, and surely are considered reliable. The patient can always help the medicine immensely, however, by dieting lightly, using little or no liquor, tea or coffee, keeping regular hours and drinking lots of pure water.

"I can hardly straighten up."

As to Doan's Kidney Pills, read the following enthusiastic endorsement by one who has tested them.

GAVE UP HOPE Weak and Discouraged with Kidney Ills

William Hough, 816 Alderman St., Belding, Mich., says: "I think I contracted kidney trouble in 1902 when I was in the army. The secretions from my kidneys contained a thick, white sediment and the passages were accompanied by terrible pain. The flow was scanty and the passages too frequent. My back and limbs were stiff and lame and my arms were all crippled up. The joints in my fingers were swollen. I could hardly move my fingers or limbs. I got so bad I couldn't do any work and was laid up. I doctored, but physicians gave me only temporary relief. I didn't think I would ever get better and was discouraged. One day a druggist told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I used half a box. I soon felt better and by the time I had used two boxes I was able to go back to work. I kept on taking them and enjoyed the best of health. I have been feeling in good shape ever since and a short time ago when I was examined for an insurance in pension the physician said my kidneys were in the best of shape. Doan's Kidney Pills have worked wonders in my case and I am anxious to have others profit by my experience. I shall be pleased to give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement whenever a favorable opportunity occurs."

TWO WAYS TO LOOK AT IT

If Customer Was in Luck in Getting Hat to Fit Him, How About the Shop Keeper?

After playing a matinee performance recently in Omaha, relates a popular actor, I discovered my hat was missing from my dressing room. This was really a serious loss, for, being possessed of an exceptionally large head, it is not unusually necessary for me to visit every hat shop in the town before I can find a hat to fit.

Finally, after a lot of effort and determination, I found a hat shop where they had just one hat that would fit me. I inquired the price of it, and the shop keeper answered with an encouraging smile that it was five dollars.

It struck me that the hat wasn't worth that, being somewhat out of date, I offered him two and a half.

"Two and a half!" he exclaimed, shrugging his shoulders. "Why, you ought to be mighty glad to get that even for five dollars. Where will you be able to find a hat large enough to fit your head?"

"That may be true," I answered, "but where will you be able to find a head large enough to fit your hat?"

I got the hat for two and a half.

A very stout old lady, going through the park on a very hot day, became aware that she was being followed by a tramp.

"What do you mean by following me in this manner?" she indignantly demanded. The tramp slunk back a little, but when the stout lady resumed her walk he again took up his position directly behind her.

"See here!" she exclaimed, angrily, "if you don't go away I shall call a policeman."

"For heaven's sake, kind lady," urged the tramp, looking at her appealingly, "have mercy and don't call a policeman. You're the only shady spot in the whole park."—Harper's Magazine.

St. Simon's Skeleton.
The duke of Portland has presented to the British Museum of Natural History the skeleton of the famous racehorse St. Simon, still now preserved at Welbeck, and it will eventually be exhibited beside the skeleton of St. Simon's son, Persimmon, now shown in the museum. It is of interest to note that the first four horses in the recent Derby were all descendants of St. Simon. Other famous racehorses of which the skeletons are preserved in the museum are Stockwell, Ormonde, Bend-Or, Royal Hampton and Donovan.
