LIVE STOCK EMBARGO

No Live Cattle Being Received Here for Shipment to Detroit.

W. J. Poor, Chelsea agent for the Michigan Central has been notified by the railroad officials not to receive any live stock for the Buffalo stock yards, as they have been closed by the federal authorities, owing to an outbreak of the mouth and hoof disease. Shipments can be made to the other eastern yards, provided they are unloaded and fed at Toledo, so that the loads can go through Buffalo without being stopped.

This order also applies to the stock yards in Detroit, so far as the shipment of live stock is concerned. The Detroit yards are so crowded with live cattle that it is impossible to take care of any further shipments for a few days. As soon as this congestion is relieved, this order will be rescinded. The usual shipments of hogs and sheep to the Detroit yards has not been stopped and all of the Chelsea buyers are making their usual shipments.

A Sudden Death.

The sudden death of Conrad Heschelwerdt at his home on west Middle street, Sunday morning, February 14, 1915, was a great shock to his relatives and friends.

Mr. Heschelwerdt, so far as known, was in his usual health and worked on the east section of the Michigan Central and was about the streets until about 8 o'clock Saturday evening. At about 12:45 Sunday morning his wife heard him groan and when she attempted to raise him she discovered that he was beyond all human aid. A physician was called, and apoplexy was given as the cause of his death. He had been suffering with a cold for the last two weeks but no serious results were anticipated. He was a member of Chelsea Tent of the Macabees.

He was born in Sylva, July 10, 1861, and his entire life has been spent in this vicinity. He was united in marriage with Miss Maggie Jackson, February 7, 1895.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, two daughters, three brothers, one sister and a number of nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held from the home at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. A. A. Schoen officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Charles Fish Dead.

Charles Fish, who has been a well-known resident of this vicinity for many years, died at his home on east Middle street Friday morning, February 13, 1915, after an illness of several months.

Mr. Fish was born in Grass Lake township, January 8, 1843. He made his home for many years on his farm in Sharon and became a resident of Chelsea about twelve years ago. He also spent several years in the western states. He was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Dale, July 4, 1869, at Salt Lake City, Utah, and she died in February 13, 1913. His second marriage was with Mrs. Mary White, which took place in Ypsilanti, October 26, 1913.

He is survived by his wife, and a number of nephews and nieces. The funeral was held from his late home at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. G. H. Whitney and C. J. Dole officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Barn Burned Monday Night.

The barn on the premises of Mrs. J. Schiller, on Madison street, was burned to the ground Monday night. The alarm was turned in about 11:30, but the flames had gained considerable headway when they were discovered. The fire department made a quick run to the home of Mrs. Schiller. They were unable to save the barn, but kept the fire from spreading to the adjoining buildings.

The barn was occupied by Alfred Kaercher, who had a young colt and wagon in the building. The colt was running about the yard when the fire was discovered, but the wagon was burned. Just how the colt came to be running at large and the cause of the fire is unknown. Mrs. Schiller had an insurance of $175 on the barn which will fall far short of covering the loss.

Colds Are Often Most Serious—Stop Possible Complications.

The disregard of a cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of sneezing, coughing, or a fever should be warning enough that your system needs immediate attention. Certainly loss of sleep is most serious. It is a warning given by nature. It is man's duty to himself to meet by doing his part. ## FORTY YEARS AGO

Happenings in Chelsea Forty Years Ago This Week.

It was announced that Chelsea was to have a new passenger depot.

Geo. E. Wright is in Detroit as representative to the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., from Vernon Lodge, Chelsea.

The weather for the past week has probably never been equalled for its severity. In this county cattle and sheep have suffered, vegetables frozen in cellars where such a thing never occurred before. Water was almost impossible to be obtained, wells, cisterns and creeks freezing. Business generally has been inactive.

Resided Here Many Years.

William R. Taylor, who has been a well-known resident of this village since 1861, died at his home Sunday, February 14, 1915, after an illness of about two years. He was stricken with paralysis on February 18, 1913, and has suffered two other strokes since that time, the final one being Sunday morning.

He was born in Unadilla, Michigan, February 18, 1844, and with his parents moved to Chelsea when he was 18 years of age, and his entire life since that time has been spent on the farm on what is commonly called Taylor's lane. Mr. Taylor lacked two days of being 71 years of age at the time of his death. He was united in marriage with Miss Martha E. Noble, of Unadilla, at Howell, March 20, 1872.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, Albert W., of this place and Fred, of Jackson, several grandchildren, three brothers, James and George of this place, David B., of Lansing, and a number of nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held from the family home at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. C. J. Dole, officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Auto Ran Into Buggy.

W. J. Beutler, who is employed on the farm of Herman Fletcher, of Lima, had an unpleasant experience about 7 o'clock Sunday evening at the corner of Main and Summit streets. He was accompanied by Miss Lella Fletcher and they were on their way to church when an auto came up behind them and ran into the buggy and one of the wheels was broken.

The auto was occupied by two men who claimed that they were business men residing in Tekonsha and they were on their way home from Detroit. The auto displayed neither license tag nor lights, but they had the license tag in the car. Mr. Beutler was driving a young and spirited animal and he had considerable trouble in getting control of it. None of the occupants of either vehicle were injured. The auto party gave Mr. Beutler a check to cover the damage done to his buggy.

A Pleasant Reception.

Mrs. Caroline W. Townsend was given a reception at Macabee hall last Wednesday evening, February 10, by the members of Columbian Hive, L. O. T. M. M., the occasion being in honor of the 70th anniversary of her birth. Mrs. Townsend is the eighth member to receive her old age disability since the organization of Columbian Hive of this place February 1, 1885.

The hall was artistically decorated with palms and the colors of the order, black, red and white. A large company of relatives, friends and Lady Macabees were present, and every one seemed to do their utmost to make the occasion a happy one long to be remembered.

One of the pleasant features of the evening was a piano solo by Miss Gertrude Mapes, a vocal solo by Geo. W. Millsap, reading by Mrs. Lola Dancer, song by Miss Edith Johnson followed by a selection by Mrs. Minerva Mapes. Deputy Great Commander R. Rose Rasey then made a few pleasant remarks, after which Past Commander Eliza Bacon in her pleasing manner in behalf of the ladies of Columbian Hive presented to Mrs. Townsend a very pretty garnet ring as a memento of the occasion. Mrs. Townsend in a very fitting manner expressed her appreciation.

A dainty lunch was served and after a social hour the company dispersed wishing Mrs. Townsend many happy returns of the day.

Small Per Centage.

Out of a total of about 2,000 cases of small pox in Michigan last year only three proved fatal. Of the whole number of cases about 1700 had never been vaccinated. Let a case of small pox appear and people are unnecessarily frightened, but they disregard precautionary methods against typhoid, whooping cough and tuberculosis with impunity, when in reality these latter diseases outnumber all others by thousands in the state when it comes to actual loss of life.

The Liver Regulates The Body. A Slight Liver Needs Care.

Someone has said that people with chronic liver complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimists and see through a "glass darkly." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, headaches, dizziness and constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c at your druggist. Adv.

WILSON LAUDED BY STATE DEMOCRATS

RESOLUTIONS BACKING PRESIDENT ARE WILDLY CHEERED.

GOV. FERRIS MAKES SPEECH

Resolution Indorsing Governor for Vice President is Omitted at the Request of Mr. Ferris Himself.

Lansing—With noise, music, enthusiasm, cheers for President Wilson and Governor Ferris and almost perfect harmony, the Democratic state convention here Tuesday nominated a full ticket for the coming spring elections.

One of the principal addresses of the day was that of Governor Ferris in which he paid a glowing tribute to the president.

The following ticket was named: For justices of the supreme court—Thomas J. Cavanaugh, Paw Paw; Charles M. Wilson, Grand Rapids.

For regents of the University of Michigan—Samuel T. Douglas, Detroit; E. R. Brown, Iron Mountain. For superintendent of public instruction—Frank Jensen, Benton Harbor.

For member state board of education—Paul Van Dis, Greenville.

For member state board of agriculture—Angus M. Smith, Algonac, and John J. Bale, Lakeview.

While the convention, in its resolutions and in a telegram to the president, indorsed Wilson unmistakably, or as Chairman Henderson put it, "One who could not understand the sentiment of the convention must be 'obtuse'."—Nothing was said about booming Ferris for the vice-presidency. This was refrained from at the request of the governor himself who told his closest friends that there was "nothing doing."

WAYNE DELEGATES BARRED

Republican Convention Refuses to Settle Factional Difficulty.

Grand Rapids—The republicans of the state held their convention here Friday afternoon and nominated a ticket without a contest except those for the regency of the University. The ticket is as follows:

For regent of the University of Michigan—Junius E. Beal, Ann Arbor, and Frank B. Leland, Detroit. For supreme court justices—Flavius L. Brooke, Detroit and Aaron V. McAlvey, Manistee.

For member state board of agriculture—W. H. Wallace, Saginaw, and I. Roy Waterbury, Highland.

For member state board of education—F. A. Jeffers, Painesdale.

For superintendent of public instruction—Fred L. Keeler, Lansing. The most unusual and spectacular feature of the convention was the barring of the delegates from Wayne, the largest county in the state. The Detroiters had had a split over the candidacy of Frank B. Leland for regency and two sets of delegates presented credentials to the convention. The convention refused to settle the row and simply barred all of them.

GERMAN NOTE IS DELIVERED MONDAY

WILL STICK TO POSITION UNLESS BRITAIN CHANGES POSITION.

NEUTRAL SHIPS IN DANGER

Warns Vessels to Sail in Daylight Accompanied by War Ships of Own Country to Avoid Perils of Attack.

Washington—The protest of the United States will not cause Germany to alter its plan of warfare against British merchant shipping unless Great Britain herself changes her present purpose of attempting to starve the German nation. This was made clear in a note from the German government delivered at the state department Monday by Ambassador von Bernstorff.

Germany, says a statement issued by the German embassy here Monday night, will be obliged to adhere to her announced principles until Great Britain submits to the recognized rules of warfare established by the Declarations of Paris and London, or until she is compelled to do so by the neutral powers.

This statement by the German embassy, while in the form of a simple announcement, was in reality a paraphrase, if not an exact translation, of the note handed to the state department. The mere statement by the embassy without any reference to the delivery of the note was, of course, simply the observing of diplomatic proprieties, inasmuch as the state department itself did not make the note public.

In this statement from the German embassy also is conveyed the first intimation as to Germany's reply to the inquiry of the United States as to what is to be done to protect neutral shipping. The suggestion is made that neutrals might sail in daylight under convoy of their own warships. Germany frankly reiterates that under any other circumstance the safety of neutral shipping in the war zone around the British Isles will be "seriously threatened." Germany adds a warning of additional danger from mines, declaring that these will be laid in the new war zone to a very considerable extent.

TWELVE DEATHS FROM BURNS

Fatalities During January Were Mostly Among Children.

Lansing—The records of the state fire marshal department show that 12 persons lost their lives by fire and 12 more were seriously burned during January. Ten of the deaths and eight of the seriously burned were children ranging from 2 to 16 years of age. The careless use of kerosene and gasoline was responsible for four deaths and four persons being injured.

Children playing with matches caused four deaths and was the cause of one child being badly burned. Other causes, such as smoking in bed, children playing around hot stoves or left in house alone during parents' absence, caused the other four deaths and was responsible for seven being burned and injured.

The careless use of kerosene and gasoline and benzine stove polish caused a property loss of more than $100,000 during January.

East Lansing—A college education in capsule form will be made available for Michigan farmers at M. A. C. from March 1 to 6, when thousands of state husbandmen will come to East Lansing for the college's annual round-up of state farmers' institutes.

Those who attend the round-up may avail themselves of boiled-down courses in any one or a great number of agricultural subjects. The entire energies of the college, according to Prof. L. R. Taft, who is in charge of arrangements, will be devoted during the sessions to imparting to the farmers all that is up to date and progressive in agriculture.

Every department in the college will conduct a series of exhibits to illustrate the lessons. Another feature, it was announced, will be a woman's congress for the consideration and discussion of problems relating to the rural household.

FIRST WAR SCARE IN OTTAWA

Report of Approaching Aeroplanes Causes Darkening of Canadian Capital.

Ottawa, Ont.—Premier Sir Robert Borden received a telegram from Brockville, stating that at 10 o'clock Sunday night three aeroplanes were seen flying over that place heading in the direction of Ottawa. Brockville is about 60 miles due south of Ottawa. The Brockville message came from the chief of police of that town and stated that three aeroplanes had been observed to cross the St. Lawrence river from a point in New York state near Morristown, and after dropping lightballs had headed north in the direction of Ottawa.

At 11 o'clock the authorities had the street lights of Ottawa turned out, and at the same time the lights on the parliament buildings were obscured by the drawing of window blinds.

For the first night in its history the royal mint was also in darkness. Here the gold of the dominion is minted.

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

The Moose lodge room at Ypsilanti was looted Wednesday night and nearly $60 taken. Entrance was gained by a back stairway and breaking the glass in a door.

Calhoun county is one of the few in the state having a woman for county school commissioner, and Mrs. Emma S. Willits, widow of State Representative George E. Willits, is a candidate for re-nomination without opposition on the democratic ticket.

A movement is on foot to have Saginaw and Bay City business men agree on a site for the proposed food fish hatchery. Saginaw and Bay City representatives and senators have introduced bills in both houses asking for the hatchery for their respective cities. The plan is to have the hatchery located on the river midway between the two cities.

Trustees of the Toledo & Northwestern railroad, the holding company bought, for $8,500, the right of way and franchise of the old Albion-Charlotte railway at the mortgage sale at Albion Thursday. The railroad has never been completed.

F. C. Butler, of Kalamazoo, was Saturday elected president of the Michigan Association of Commercial Secretaries at the business meeting held in Ann Arbor Saturday in connection with the regular extension course given for the association by the University of Michigan.

STATE MOOSERS MEET AT JACKSON

PROHIBITION INDORSED AFTER WARM DEBATE ON FLOOR.

FULL TICKET IS NOMINATED

About Ninety Delegates Are Present—Democrats Criticized for Tariff and Republicans for Fostering Panic.

Jackson—Following a warm debate with Theodore M. Joslin, of Adrian, candidate for United States senator at the 1912 election, leading the opposition, the state convention of the National Progressive party placed the prohibition plank in its state platform and went on record Tuesday as favoring both state and nation-wide prohibition.

This was the only tilt of the convention and the opponents to the prohibition plank were completely snowed under when the vote was taken. The convention voted to indorse both the national and state platforms of two years ago together with the prohibition plank.

Nominations for state offices, which were made with but few contests, follows:

Regents, C. G. Parnall, Jackson, L. L. Tyler, Traverse City. State board of education, W. S. Leavenworth, Olivet.

Justice of the supreme court, A. E. Ewing, Grand Rapids, W. T. Bope, Bad Axe.

State board of agriculture, Joseph Wilson, Washtenaw county, O. C. Hollister, Laingsburg.

Superintendent of public instruction, Garrett Masselink, Big Rapids.

There were about 90 delegates present, 40 of these being from Detroit. H. R. Pattengill was made state chairman. A simplified primary law and a no-partisan scientific tariff commission were indorsed. The resolutions adopted declared that, "the industrial depression of this country is due to three factors, the Democratic tariff, the European war and the deliberate program of attempting to create a panic indulged in by Republican office holders."

BILL PASSES LOWER HOUSE

Ship Purchase Measure Has Majority of 215 to 121.

Washington—The government ship purchase bill, as an amendment to the Week's naval auxiliary bill, was passed by the house at 1:20 o'clock Wednesday morning, by a vote of 215 to 121.

The passage of the bill followed a 14-hour parliamentary struggle, which, until long after midnight, threatened to extend interminably because of a determined filibuster lead by Minority Leader Mann, who yielded only after administration leaders decided to apply a second special rule to bring the fight to an end.

Nineteen Democrats voted against the bill. They were: Bathrick, Borchers, Callaway, Dies, Donohue, Fitzgerald, Gerry, Gordon, Jones, Kindel, Kitchin, Morrison, Moss of Indiana, Page of North Carolina, Sanders, Slayden, Whitacre, White and Witherspoon.

All of the Republicans present voted against the bill and five Progressive joined with the Democratic majority for it, as follows: Bryan, Kelly of Pennsylvania, MacDonald, Lafferty and Murdock.

TELEGRAPHIC FLASHES

Deal, England—The British steamer Wavelet struck a mine off the coast Monday and had to be beached near Deal. Twelve of her crew were drowned when a boat in which they were trying to reach shore capsized. The Wavelet was bound from Pensacola, Fla., for Leith with a cargo of timber.

Turin, Italy—Several avalanches fallen in the mountains in this region. One colossal slide near Col. Di Tenda, a pass of the Maritime Alps in the province of Cuneo, buried a group of workmen. Thus far 16 bodies have been recovered. Soldiers and doctors have been dispatched hurriedly to the rescue.

Panama—A fight between soldiers and native policemen here Saturday night resulted, according to first reports of the conflict, in the deaths of five policemen and three soldiers and the wounding of many of the combatants. A carnival is in progress and many soldiers were on leave to attend the festivity.

Paris—President Poincare Saturday signed a decree authorizing the issue of one billion francs ($200,000,000) national defense bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest at the emission price of 96 francs 50 centimes, and payable at par in 1925.

London—Forty-nine thousand Turkish prisoners, including 527 officers, have passed through Pyatigorsk, in the territory of Terek, Caucasus, en route to the interior since the war with Turkey began, according to the Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

DAIRY TALES

BEST TIME FOR FRESHENING

Several Good Reasons for Having Cows Drop Calves During Months of September and October.

It is generally held by breeders that it is best to have cows freshen in the months of September and October. There are several reasons for having cows calve at this time. First, the cow will produce more milk when she freshens in the fall instead of in the spring; second, the prices for dairy products are higher during the winter months than in summer; third, calves born in the fall may be turned out to pasture to better advantage than those born in the spring; they are older and more capable of protecting themselves from flies. When cows freshen at this season of the year, and it is desired to have them freshen the following year at the same time, it is necessary to carry them for three months before breeding. This is the usual practice among the best dairymen.

We would say that it would be better to begin breeding the animals the first of January if it is desired to have them freshen in the fall, for it is quite possible that it will require more than one breeding.—Hoar's Dairyman.

CLEAN WATER IS NECESSARY

Artificial Pond Erected by Illinois Farmer Proves Quite Adequate for All Needs of Farm.

Good clean water is an essential necessary for the comfort and well-being of the dairy herd. Spring or well water, if good, is possibly the best, but when there is not a sufficient supply a good deep pond does not come amiss.

We have an artificial pond which supplies our needs in this direction, which is ordinarily from twelve to fourteen feet deep, cool and clean.

This pond was made by building a dam across a hollow in the pasture 45 feet wide at the bottom and wide enough at the top so a team could be driven across, says an Illinois writer in Farmers' Review. A wall on the inside of the dam was constructed of two-inch white oak boards to keep the wash from breaking the dam. The outlet is not over the dam, but on the side.

To accomplish this task three teams and four or five men were kept busy for three weeks. After the dam had settled it was built up to the necessary height twice at different intervals.

Here we row with a skiff at leisure, and have a good old-fashioned swim when we so desire. In the winter we have a place to skate, and a most excellent place to get an abundance of ice for the icehouse. Not only this, but the neighborhood at thrashing time has the privilege of securing all the water they wish to use. When the wells go dry there is plenty there to fill the demand. It took a lot of hard labor and backache, but it has given us 12 years or more of service.

JUDGMENT IN BUYING COWS

If Animal Has Characteristic Color Markings for Her Breed She is Always Easily Salable.

When buying cows, don't buy anything that won't sell well again in case you should want to do so. The best demand is for grade cows of the leading breeds, and if a cow of the characteristic color markings for her breed, she is easily salable. Of course, to sell a cow on the strength of her color alone is hardly fair to the buyer. Get them with color combined with production. The chances are, however, that once you have a nice looking cow that is a persistent milker you will not be tempted to part with her, no matter how short of money you may be.

Water Supply for Cows.

In winter the water supply for dairy cows should have close attention. If watered from an outdoor tank the water should have its chill removed before cows are allowed to drink it; if cows are watered in the barn, be sure the watering devices are free from slush that may render the water impure or unwholesome. By all means water cows regularly.

ONLY ONE THING LACKING

City Man Was Right Enough as to Season for Tapping Trees, But He Got No Sugar.

He had toiled and scraped and saved for years, and the other day he bought "that little farm" in the country, relates the Pittsburgh Dispatch. He was not quite settled yet when he talked on his neighbor to say:

"Of course, I never farmed much."

"Of course," replied Uncle Ruba, with a smile.

"So I shall have to ask for advice." "You shall have it."

"You see, I have got five acres of woodland."

"I shouldn't have bought the farm but for that woodland."

"Not?"

"It has been one of our dreams for years past to make our own maple sugar."

"Yes."

"And now that we are here at last I want to ask you if this is the season for tapping the trees?"

"Why, yes, this is the season, all right, but—"

"But what?"

"But you haven't got a durned maple on the farm, and there ain't one within five miles of us!"

Anyhow, He Tried.

The dinner was given by a colored man named Ebenezer White, and the guest of the evening was George Washington Green, chief deacon of the little church that White occasionally attended.

Grace, of course, was eloquently said, and at its conclusion Mr. White began to carve the chicken. Then Deacon Green became facetious.

"Bruder White," he smilingly remarked, "do dat nex'-do' neighbor ob you'n keep chickens?"

"No, sah," came the prompt response of Mr. White, as he deftly plied loose a well-roasted wing; "but he try hard 'nuff to keep 'em!"

KNOW NOW

And Will Never Forget the Experience.

The coffee drinker who has suffered and then been completely relieved by changing from coffee to Postum knows something valuable. There's no doubt about it.

"I learned the truth about coffee in a peculiar way," says a California woman. "My husband who has, for years, been of a bilious temperament decided to leave off coffee and give Postum a trial, and as I did not want the trouble of making two beverages for meals I concluded to try Postum, too. The results have been that while my husband has been greatly benefited, I have myself received even greater benefit."

"When I began to drink Postum I was thin in flesh and very nervous. Now I actually weigh 15 pounds more than I did at that time and I am stronger physically and in my nerves, while husband is free from all his ailments."

"We have learned our little lesson about coffee and we know something about Postum, too, for we have used Postum now steadily for the last three years and we shall continue to do so."

SYNOPSIS.

The 3 of Hearts is the "death-sign" employed by Seneca Trine, an aged and crippled monomaniac, in the private war of vengeance which he wages against Alan Law, son of the man (now dead) who was innocently responsible for the accident which rendered Trine a helpless invalid for life. Alan falls in love with Rose, Trine's daughter, and his love is returned. Judith, Rose's twin and double, but a woman of violent passions and erratic temper, promises her father to compass Alan's death; but under dramatic circumstances, Alan saves her life and so, unwillingly, wins her love. Judith then turns against her father and successfully opposes his efforts to cause Alan to be assassinated by his aides and mercenaries. After many adventures Alan, Rose, Judith and Seneca, Alan's best friend, escape to the mountain country of southern California and there leave Trine helpless and friendless through causing the death (in self-defense) of his two first lieutenants.

CHAPTER LI.

The New Judith.

From sleep as from drugged stupor Judith Trine awakened, struggling back to consciousness like some exhausted diver from the black depths to the star-stricken surface of a night-bound pool.

At first she could by no means recognize her surroundings. This rude chamber of rough plank walls and primitive furnishings; this wide, hard couch she shared with her still slumbering sister, Rose; the view revealed by an open window at the bedside; a fair perspective of tree-clad mountains through which a wide-bosomed canyon rolled down to an emerald plain conveyed nothing to her intelligence.

A formless sense of some epochal change in the habits and mental processes of a young lifetime, added to her confusion.

What, indeed, had become of the wild thing, Judith Trine of yesterday? Surely she had little enough in common with this Judith of today, in whose heart was no more room for envy, hatred, malice or any uncharitableness, so full was it of love which, though it was focused upon the person of one man, none the less embraced all the world—even her sister and successful rival in that one man's affections.

This change had not come upon her without warning. She had been almost insensibly aware of its advent through the gradual softening of that old Judith's hard and vengeful nature in the course of the last few days. But now that the revolution was accomplished, she hardly knew herself—she hardly knew the world, indeed, so differently did she regard it—not without something of the wide-eyed wonderment of a child to find all things so new and strange and beautiful.

And this was the work of Love! Now the chain of memories was quite complete, no link lacking in its continuity. She recalled clearly every incident that had marked the slow growth of this great love she had for Alan Law, from that first day, not yet a month old, when he had escaped the fiery deathtrap she had set for him and repaid her only by risking his life anew to save her from destruction, down to this very morning when the stream from a hydraulic nozzle had swept over the brink of a three hundred-foot precipice a crimson racing automobile containing two desperate men bent upon compassing the death of her beloved.

By that act of sheer self-defense the world was richer for the loss of two black-hearted blackguards, and Alan Law might now be considered safe from further persecution—since there now remained not one soul loyal enough to Seneca Trine to prosecute his private war of vengeance against Alan. And though that aged monomaniac had means whereby he might purchase other scoundrels and corrupt them to his hideous purposes, Judith was determined that he should never again have any opportunity so to do. Though Alan, she knew, would never lift his hand to hinder her father's freedom of action, she, Judith, meant to take such steps as his persecution called for. If there were any aliens capable of discriminating between Trine's apparent sanity and his deep-rooted mania—then surely not many days more should pass into history without witnessing his consignment to an institution for the criminal insane.

She, Judith, would see to that, and then . . .

The woman sighed once more.

Then Rose and Alan would marry and live happily ever after.

But what of Judith?

She made a small gesture of resignation to her destiny. What became of her no longer mattered, so that Alan were made happy in such happiness as he coveted.

And now the thought stirred her sharply that what was to be done must be done quickly, if at all.

And the almost level rays of the declining sun, striking in through the open window, counseled haste if Judith were to accomplish her intention of leaving this place and finding her father again before nightfall.

With the utmost care she rose from the bed, crept to the door of the room now recognized as the quarters of the foreman of the hydraulic mining outfit) and out into the room adjoining.

And there, pulling the door to gently behind her, she paused and for many minutes stood in tensestrung contemplation of the man she loved—Alan Law, asleep in a chair beside a table, his head pillowed on his folded arms.

This was leave-taking between them—and he would never know. Far better so: Judith felt she could not trust herself to say farewell to him without breaking down and confessing the utter wretchedness that threatened to overwhelm her each time she forced herself to face the thought that this parting must be final.

Like a thief she stole across the creaking floor to Alan's side, hesitated, bent her head to his and touched her lips to his cheek—a caress so light that he slept on in ignorance of it.

Then, as she lifted her head and stood erect, bosom convulsed with silent sobs, she looked squarely into the face of Rose.

CHAPTER LII.

The Old Adam.

A long minute elapsed before either woman moved or spoke.

Transfixed beside Alan's chair, steadying herself with a hand upon its back, Judith stared at the figure in the doorway, in a temper at once discomfited and defiant. With this she suffered a phase of incredulity, was scarce able to persuade herself that this was truly Rose who confronted her—Rose whose sweet and gentle nature had ever served as the butt of Judith's contempt and ruthless ridicule.

Here was revolution with a vengeance, when Rose threatened and Judith shrank!

It was as if the women had exchanged natures while they slept.

The countenance that Rose showed her sister was a thundercloud rent by the lurid lightning of her angry eyes. Her pose was tense and alert, like the pose of an animal set to spring. In her hand hung a revolver, the same (Judith's hand sought the holster at her hip and found it empty) that her sister had worn and forgotten to remove when she dropped, half-dead with fatigue, upon the bed.

And slowly, toward the end of that long, mute minute, the girl's grasp tightened upon the grip of the weapon and its muzzle lifted.

Remarking this, a flash of her one-time temper quickened Judith. Of a sudden, with a start, she crossed the floor in a single, noiseless stride, and threw herself before her sister.

"Well!" she demanded hotly. "What are you waiting for? Nobody's stopping you: why don't you shoot?"

The upward movement of the hand was checked: the weapon hung level to Judith's breast—as level and unequivocal as the glance that probed her eyes and the tone of Rose's voice as she demanded:

"What were you doing there?"

"If you must know from me what you already know on the evidence of your eyes—I was bidding good-by to the man I love—kissing him without his knowledge or consent before leaving him to you for good and all!"

"What do you mean?"

"That I'm going away—that I can't stand this situation any longer. Marrophat and Jimmy are dead, my father's helpless—and I mean to see that he remains so. Nothing, then, stands in the way of your marrying Alan but me. And such being the case—and because he's as dear to me as he is to you—I'm going to take myself off and keep out of the way."

"For fear lest he find out that you love him?"

Judith's lip curled. "Do you think him so witless he doesn't know that already?"

"And so you leave him to me out of your charity! Is that it?"

"Any way you like. But if it's so intolerable to you to think that I dare love him and confess it to you—if you begrudge me the humiliation of stooping to kiss a man who doesn't want my kisses—if you are so afraid of losing him while I live and love him—very well, then!"

With a passionate gesture Judith tore open the bosom of her waist, offering her flesh to the muzzle of the revolver.

A cry broke from the lips of Rose that was like the cry of a forlorn child punished with cruelty that passes its understanding. She fell back against the wall. The revolver swept up through the air—but its mark was her own head rather than Judith's bosom.

But before her finger found strength to pull the trigger the man at the table, startled from his sleep by the sound of angry voices, leaped from his chair with a violence that sent it clattering to the floor, and hurried him to the door.

With the utmost care she rose from the bed, crept to the door of the room now recognized as the quarters of the foreman of the hydraulic mining outfit) and out into the room adjoining.

And there, pulling the door to gently behind her, she paused and for many minutes stood in tensestrung contemplation of the man she loved—Alan Law, asleep in a chair beside a table, his head pillowed on his folded arms.

This was leave-taking between them—and he would never know. Far better so: Judith felt she could not trust herself to say farewell to him without breaking down and confessing the utter wretchedness that threatened to overwhelm her each time she forced herself to face the thought that this parting must be final.

Like a thief she stole across the creaking floor to Alan's side, hesitated, bent her head to his and touched her lips to his cheek—a caress so light that he slept on in ignorance of it.

Then, as she lifted her head and stood erect, bosom convulsed with silent sobs, she looked squarely into the face of Rose.

Here was revolution with a vengeance, when Rose threatened and Judith shrank!

Into its holster and turned away.

"Be kind to her, Alan," she said in an uncertain voice. "She didn't understand and—I goded her beyond endurance, I'm afraid. Forgive me—but be kind to her always!"

Somewhat, blindly, she stumbled out of the cabin into the open, possessed by a thought whose temptation was stronger than her powers of resistance. What Rose had failed to accomplish might now serve to resolve Judith's problem. . . . None, she told herself, bitterly, would seek to hinder her. But she meant to arrange the matter that none should see or suspect and be moved to interfere.

Round the shoulder of the mountain, on the road along the edge of the cliff, she was sure of freedom from observation.

And yet, such is the inconsistency of the human animal, the instinct for self-preservation was stronger than her purpose: when a touring car swung round the mountain and shot toward her, she checked herself hastily and jumped aside in ample time to escape being run down.

The next instant the machine was lurching to a halt and the sonorous accents of Seneca Trine were saluting her:

"Judith! You here! What the devil! Where've you been? Where are Marrophat and Jimmy?"

Digging the nails of her fingers painfully into her palms, she breathed deep, fighting down hysteria, reasserting her self-control in so short a space of time that her father failed to appreciate that there was anything uncommon in the mind of the girl.

"Where?" he demanded angrily as she approached the car, "where, I want to know, are Marrophat and Jimmy? Haven't you seen or heard anything of them? They left me at six o'clock this morning, to go after—"

"Dead!" the girl interrupted, sententious, eyeing him strangely.

"I don't believe it!" the old man screamed, aghast. "I won't believe it. You're lying to me, you jade! You're lying!"

"I am not," she broke in coldly. "I am telling you the plain truth. . . . They followed us all morning in that red racer, firing at us all the while. Finally they caught up with us here, and then they turned away.

When he came to, he found Barcus helping him to his feet; a heavy seven-passenger touring car halted in the roadway indicated the manner in which his friend had arrived on the scene of the accident.

When damages were assessed it was found that none of the party had suffered seriously but the chauffeur and Seneca Trine himself. The former had only his wound to show however, while Trine lay still and senseless at a very considerable distance from the wrecked automobile.

Nothing but a barely perceptible respiration and intermittently fluttering pulse persuaded them that the flame of life was not extinct in that poor, old, pain-racked body.

CHAPTER LIII.

The Last Trump.

Toward the evening of the third day following the motor spill, Judith sat in the deeply recessed window of a bedroom on the second floor of a hotel situated in the heart of California's orange-growing lands.

Behind her Seneca Trine sat, apparently asleep, in a wheeled invalid chair.

There was no occupant of the room.

Though he had lain nearly two days in coma, her father's subsequent progress toward recovery of his normal state had been rapid. Now, according to a council of surgeons and physicians who had been summoned to deliberate on his case, he was in a fair way to round out the average span of a sound man's lifetime. He had apparently suffered nothing in consequence of his accident more serious than prolonged unconsciousness. For the last twenty-four hours he had been in full possession of his faculties and (for some reason impossible to Judith to fathom) uncommonly cheerful.

From this circumstance she drew a certain sense of mystified anxiety. Twice in the course of the morning she had caught his eye following her with a gleam of sardonic exultancy, as though he nursed some secret of extraordinary potentialities.

And yet (she argued) it was quite impossible that he should have some fathomless scheme brewing for the assassination of Alan. Not a soul had had any sort of communication with him since his recovery but the attending surgeon, a man of unimpeachable character, and herself, Judith. Under such circumstances he simply could not have set a new conspiracy afoot.

And yet . . . She was oppressed by a great uneasiness.

Perhaps (she reasoned) the weather was responsible for this feeling. In some measure at least. The day had been unconsciously hot, a day without a breath of air. Now, as it drew toward its close, its heat seemed to become more and more oppressive even as its light was darkened by a portentous phenomenon—a vast pall of inky cloud shouldering up over the mountains to the music of distant rumblings.

Nor was this all; a considerable degree of restlessness was surely pardonable in one who, from her window, watched a carriage-drive populous with vehicles (for the most part motor cars) bringing to the hotel gayly dressed men and women, the guests invited to the wedding of Rose Trine and Alan Law.

Within another ten minutes the man Judith loved with all her body and soul would be the husband of her sister.

She had told herself she was resigned; but she was not, and she would never be. Her heart was breaking in her bosom as she sat there, watching, waiting, listening to the ever heavier detonations of the approaching thunderstorm and to the jubilant pealing of a great organ down below.

The had told herself that, though resigned, she could not bear to witness the ceremony. Now as the moment drew near when the marriage would be a thing finished, fixed, irrevocable, she found herself unable to endure the strain alone.

Slowly, against her will, she rose and stole across the floor to her father's chair.

His breathing was slow and regular; beyond doubt he slept; unquestionably there was no reason why she should not leave him for ten minutes; even though he waked it could not harm him to await her return at the end of that scant period.

Like a guilty thing, on feet as noiseless as any sneak thief's, she crept from the room, closed the door silently, ran down the hall and descended by a back way, a little-used staircase, to the lower hall, approaching the scene of the marriage.

Constructed in imitation of an old Spanish mission chapel, it contained one of the finest organs in the world; at this close range its deep-throated tones vied with the warnings of the storm. Judith, lurking in a passageway whose open door revealed the altar steps and chancel, was shaken to the very marrow of her being by the majestic reverberations of the music.

Since they had regained contact with civilization in a section of the country where the Law estate had vast holdings of land, the chapel was thronged with men and women who had known Alan's father and wished to honor his son.

Above stairs, in the room Judith had quitted, Seneca Trine opened both eyes wide and laughed a silent laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind.

With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years.

This, then, was the secret he had hugged to his embittered bosom, a secret unsuspected even by the attending surgeon; that through the motor accident three days ago he had regained the use of limbs that had been stricken motionless—strangely enough, by a motor car—nearly two decades since.

Slowly but surely moving to the bureau in the room, he opened one of its drawers and took out something he had, without her knowledge, seen Judith put away there while she thought he slept.

Then, with this hidden in the pocket of his dressing gown he steered a straight if very deliberate course to the door, let himself out, and like a materialized specter of the man he once had been, navigated the corridor to the head of the broad central staircase and step by step, clinging with both hands, negotiated its descent.

The lobby of the hotel was deserted. As the ceremony approached its end and every guest and servant in the house was crowding the doorway to the chapel. None opposed the progress of this ghastly vision in dressing gown and slippers feet, chuckling insanely to himself as he tottered through the empty halls and corridors, finding an almost supernatural strength to sustain him till he found himself face to face with his chosen enemy and victim.

The first that blocked his way into the chapel, a bellboy of the hotel, looked round at the first touch of the claw-like hand upon his shoulder and shrank back with a cry of terror—a cry that was echoed from half a dozen throats within another instant.

As it from the path of some grisly specter, the throng pressed back and cleared a way for Seneca Trine, father of the bride.

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with Rose while the minister invoked a blessing upon the union that had been but that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the insane, was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel, looked round, it was to see the aged maniac standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to bear upon Alan's head.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land.

A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations, accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling

Taking the seat next to the chauffeur, he gave the word to drive on; and they slipped away from the location of the mining camp, saluted by cheers from the miners.

Half an hour passed without a word spoken by any member of the party. Each was deep in his or her own especial preoccupation: Alan turning over plans for an early wedding; Rose hugging the contentment regained through her lover's protestations; Judith lost in profoundest melancholy; Trine nursing his rage, working himself up into a silent fury whose consequences were to be more far-reaching than even he dreamed in his wildest moments.

Its first development, for all that, was desperate enough.

The aged monomaniac occupied the right-hand corner of the rear seat. Thus his one able hand was next to Judith, in close juxtaposition to the revolver in the holster on her hip.

Without the least warning his left hand closed upon the weapon, withdrew it and leveled it at the back of Alan's head.

As he pulled the trigger Judith lunged herself bodily upon the arm.

Even so, the bullet found a goal, though in another than the intended victim. The muscular forearm of the chauffeur received it.

With a shriek of pain the man released the wheel and grasped his arm.

Before Alan could move to prevent the disaster the car, running without a guiding hand, careened off a low embankment to the left and shot full-tilt into a shallow ditch on the right, shelling its passengers like peas from a broken pod.

Alan catapulted a good twenty feet through the air and alighted with such force that he lay stunned for several moments.

When he came to, he found Barcus helping him to his feet; a heavy seven-passenger touring car halted in the roadway indicated the manner in which his friend had arrived on the scene of the accident.

When damages were assessed it was found that none of the party had suffered seriously but the chauffeur and Seneca Trine himself. The former had only his wound to show however, while Trine lay still and senseless at a very considerable distance from the wrecked automobile.

Nothing but a barely perceptible respiration and intermittently fluttering pulse persuaded them that the flame of life was not extinct in that poor, old, pain-racked body.

CHAPTER LIII.

The Last Trump.

Toward the evening of the third day following the motor spill, Judith sat in the deeply recessed window of a bedroom on the second floor of a hotel situated in the heart of California's orange-growing lands.

Behind her Seneca Trine sat, apparently asleep, in a wheeled invalid chair.

There was no occupant of the room.

Though he had lain nearly two days in coma, her father's subsequent progress toward recovery of his normal state had been rapid. Now, according to a council of surgeons and physicians who had been summoned to deliberate on his case, he was in a fair way to round out the average span of a sound man's lifetime. He had apparently suffered nothing in consequence of his accident more serious than prolonged unconsciousness. For the last twenty-four hours he had been in full possession of his faculties and (for some reason impossible to Judith to fathom) uncommonly cheerful.

From this circumstance she drew a certain sense of mystified anxiety. Twice in the course of the morning she had caught his eye following her with a gleam of sardonic exultancy, as though he nursed some secret of extraordinary potentialities.

And yet (she argued) it was quite impossible that he should have some fathomless scheme brewing for the assassination of Alan. Not a soul had had any sort of communication with him since his recovery but the attending surgeon, a man of unimpeachable character, and herself, Judith. Under such circumstances he simply could not have set a new conspiracy afoot.

And yet . . . She was oppressed by a great uneasiness.

Perhaps (she reasoned) the weather was responsible for this feeling. In some measure at least. The day had been unconsciously hot, a day without a breath of air. Now, as it drew toward its close, its heat seemed to become more and more oppressive even as its light was darkened by a portentous phenomenon—a vast pall of inky cloud shouldering up over the mountains to the music of distant rumblings.

Nor was this all; a considerable degree of restlessness was surely pardonable in one who, from her window, watched a carriage-drive populous with vehicles (for the most part motor cars) bringing to the hotel gayly dressed men and women, the guests invited to the wedding of Rose Trine and Alan Law.

Within another ten minutes the man Judith loved with all her body and soul would be the husband of her sister.

She had told herself she was resigned; but she was not, and she would never be. Her heart was breaking in her bosom as she sat there, watching, waiting, listening to the ever heavier detonations of the approaching thunderstorm and to the jubilant pealing of a great organ down below.

The had told herself that, though resigned, she could not bear to witness the ceremony. Now as the moment drew near when the marriage would be a thing finished, fixed, irrevocable, she found herself unable to endure the strain alone.

Slowly, against her will, she rose and stole across the floor to her father's chair.

His breathing was slow and regular; beyond doubt he slept; unquestionably there was no reason why she should not leave him for ten minutes; even though he waked it could not harm him to await her return at the end of that scant period.

Like a guilty thing, on feet as noiseless as any sneak thief's, she crept from the room, closed the door silently, ran down the hall and descended by a back way, a little-used staircase, to the lower hall, approaching the scene of the marriage.

Constructed in imitation of an old Spanish mission chapel, it contained one of the finest organs in the world; at this close range its deep-throated tones vied with the warnings of the storm. Judith, lurking in a passageway whose open door revealed the altar steps and chancel, was shaken to the very marrow of her being by the majestic reverberations of the music.

Since they had regained contact with civilization in a section of the country where the Law estate had vast holdings of land, the chapel was thronged with men and women who had known Alan's father and wished to honor his son.

Above stairs, in the room Judith had quitted, Seneca Trine opened both eyes wide and laughed a silent laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind.

With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years.

This, then, was the secret he had hugged to his embittered bosom, a secret unsuspected even by the attending surgeon; that through the motor accident three days ago he had regained the use of limbs that had been stricken motionless—strangely enough, by a motor car—nearly two decades since.

Slowly but surely moving to the bureau in the room, he opened one of its drawers and took out something he had, without her knowledge, seen Judith put away there while she thought he slept.

Then, with this hidden in the pocket of his dressing gown he steered a straight if very deliberate course to the door, let himself out, and like a materialized specter of the man he once had been, navigated the corridor to the head of the broad central staircase and step by step, clinging with both hands, negotiated its descent.

The lobby of the hotel was deserted. As the ceremony approached its end and every guest and servant in the house was crowding the doorway to the chapel. None opposed the progress of this ghastly vision in dressing gown and slippers feet, chuckling insanely to himself as he tottered through the empty halls and corridors, finding an almost supernatural strength to sustain him till he found himself face to face with his chosen enemy and victim.

The first that blocked his way into the chapel, a bellboy of the hotel, looked round at the first touch of the claw-like hand upon his shoulder and shrank back with a cry of terror—a cry that was echoed from half a dozen throats within another instant.

As it from the path of some grisly specter, the throng pressed back and cleared a way for Seneca Trine, father of the bride.

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with Rose while the minister invoked a blessing upon the union that had been but that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the insane, was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel, looked round, it was to see the aged maniac standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to bear upon Alan's head.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land.

A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations, accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling brilliance slashed through the window like a flaming sword and smote the pistol in the hand of Seneca Trine, discharging the weapon even as it struck him dead.

As he fell the bolt swerved and struck two others down—Alan Law and the woman who had just been made his wife.

Wm. Eisenbier moved his family Wednesday to their new home at North Lake which he recently purchased of Stevenson brothers.

REFLECTIONS.

The students at the U. of M. are wearing crepe these days. The reason is because Maubetsch, the German bullet, and Splawa, who could kick a football so far that it could not be put into play the same day it was kicked, have had a slight misunderstanding, or rather no understanding, with some of their studies.

o o o

A Detroit boy became so mad because his mother washed his face that he held his breath until he died. We've seen some kids going about the streets here whose mothers must fear something of that sort.

o o o

Aren't some of those Detroit society ladies the vain things? At least one is led to believe so when the number who answered that Detroit artist's advertisement for models is made known.

o o o

Congressman Beakes sent out his first installment of free seeds Tuesday, and between that and the fine weather that day, the amateur gardener has had the itch to get out in the open with his spade and rake. At the same time the old hens out in the coop commenced to sharpen up their claws and get ready for the open season for gardens.

P. S.—Roller skates are out.
P. S. to P. S.—So are the marbles.

County Owns Auto.

Washtenaw county now has an automobile of its own. Pursuant to a resolution, passed by the board of supervisors, County Clerk George Beckwith, Probate Judge William H. Murray and Registrar of Deeds William A. Seery, who were empowered to act, have bought a five-passenger touring car, costing $550.
The car has been turned over to Sheriff Herman G. Lindenschmitt, and is now being used by him and the sheriff's force to apprehend prisoners and take them to the county jail.
The board of supervisors, after scanning the expense to which the county was put during the past few years for automobile hire, decided that money could be saved by the purchase of a machine.

Nurse For Washtenaw.

Washtenaw county is assured of a visiting nurse for at least a few months, as a result of the work of The King's Daughters in selling the Red Cross Christmas seals.

The returns from the sale of seals in the rural schools are not yet in. The work of the visiting nurse with regard to the anti-tuberculosis campaign will be to detect walking cases of the disease, as well as those in the more advanced stages. When a survey of the county has been made with particular reference to this menace, active measures can be taken intelligently to check the further progress of the scourge.

MANCHESTER—Dr. E. M. Conklin, for many years a prominent physician of Manchester, passed away Friday afternoon after many months of illness from tuberculosis. Mrs. Conklin survives him. Mrs. L. S. ## Princess Theatre.

Saturday, February 20—The two part Victor drama "Emmeshed by Fate." We have yet to find the person who can find keener employment than the witnessing of a real, live, up-to-date melodrama. We know this because of the great demand made for them. And we also know that no one is complying with that demand more satisfactorily than the Universal. Take this play "Emmeshed by Fate" written by B. Morganthau and produced by Edward Warren; it has about as strong a "kick" in it as one could possibly wish for. Its first appeal—based upon a rattling good love story—as to the sentiments, or emotions. Second, the action unfolds in a series of brilliant situations, and unconventional complications, culminating in a sensational climax that leaves one a-quiver. The technique adopted in the writing and staging of the play could not be improved upon in its ability to keep you guessing, your every nerve straining with expectancy. "The Animated Weekly" with its current events and "The Cure" a licker comedy with a laugh in every foot of film completes the bill.

Thursday, February 25—The Wolverine Feature Film Co. presents "Lay Down Your Arms" a stupendous film dramatization of the world famous war novel by the late Baroness Bertha von Suttner in four parts, a photo-play of timely interest, depicting the horrors of war and its terrible effects. A photo-play feature that abounds in thrills, gigantic, startling battle scenes; a pathetic story superbly acted; a picture with a purpose—being the most powerful argument for universal peace ever advanced.

A FEW STRAY EPIGRAMS.

Is it possible that John D., jr., has not the mental caliber to understand the complication of the situation?

Billy Sunday thinks New Yorkers are really impressionable. He thinks he would not hesitate to make an attack on that so-called wicked city.

Work should be judged by its character, not by the sex of the workers.

No exciting evil, but what is founded on ignorance.

Schools will fall short of the mark, until every child, forms the habit of reading good books.

Whatever we really are, let us be that in all fearlessness. Whatever we are not, let us cease striving to seem to be.

It is use filling your pocket full of money if you have got a hole in the corner.

Before great victories can be enjoyed great battles must be fought.

It is easy to make sacrifices for those we love; but for our enemy we have to struggle and overcome self. Such victory is noble.

Let our ears ever be open to the cry of pity, so that if we ever have reason to cry ourselves we may be heard.

To be an all around man now-a-days one needs to be a man of the world. By that I do not mean that he is to be familiar with the wickedness and sinfulness of the world and be a mixer. But to be able to be consistent, a professional man must keep his finger on the pulse of the public generally, and by its throbbings knows just how to take it and thereby be able to administer curative doses in proper quantities and at just such times as will effect the ailment of the body politic. For instance: The journalist is apt to take a too journalistic view. He sits in his sanctum and looks out upon the world, from its windows. They are often very high; a clear distinct view of what passes on the earth below is hid. Sometimes the glass in the windows are discolored, perhaps the eye is jaundiced. Whether that is so or not all things are judged from a professional standard. The more successful he is, the more likely he is warped by the influences about him: The lawyer looks upon mankind, as his little book; the rules of court are to him the rules of conduct; he measures the obligations of men to each other by their conformity to the written law; he is inclined to the belief that a thing is permissible if it is not legally wrong. The minister—and he would not be a minister if he did not—hold the ecclesiastical standards high, and is to good, to engage in the affairs of state and brushes aside everything that would seem like contact with its worldly nature. The physician is liable to be fully bound up in the physical welfare of his patients and thinks more about powders and pills and the power of mind over matter than who is to govern Mexico or whether a municipal commission form of government is best. The teacher builds a fortress about him in the curriculum of study until what should be breadth grows into narrowness. Therefore to be many sided the journalist, minister, lawyer, physician, teacher need to be something more—each is to be a man of the world in the correct sense of the word, and if they don't agree with this criticism the writer asks their pardon.

When peace comes it may bear the label "Made in America."

Rural Life Conference.

The common house fly brings to us the germs that produce typhoid fever, dysentery and other dangerous diseases; from uncooked fruits and vegetables we get dysentery, typhoid fever, cholera and other parasitic diseases; mosquitoes convey to us the germs of malaria; from decomposed meat and fish we get ptomaine poisoning; and from our fellow man we contract a large number of diseases. In the cities there are many agencies combating disease. But what about the country?

The Michigan Agricultural College, realizing that hygiene is rapidly becoming an important phase of rural life has made provisions for teaching this subject in the courses that are to be taught at the Rural Life Conferences during the summer. A bulletin from the college explains the summer courses in detail.

The farmers' institute which was held in the town hall Wednesday was one of the best ever held here. There was a large attendance and an excellent program was carried out. A wreck occurred here on the south track of the Michigan Central at about 6:30 this morning. A broken wheel of a car of an east bound freight train caused the trouble. The car left the track at East street and the train came to a stop at the curve near Oak Grove cemetery. The switch point was broken and will have to be replaced with a new one. A wrecking crew was brought here from Jackson and all the east bound trains were held here for about three hours.

The musical drama "In the Valley of the Mohawk," which was given by the pupils of St. Mary's school last Sunday evening was attended by a large audience. ## NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Many Wonders in Washington's Botanical Garden

WASHINGTON.—Washington has a botanical garden of plant rarities and plant curiosities. It occupies a patch of land, entirely inadequate, the plant experts say, on Pennsylvania avenue almost directly in front of the capitol. Representative James L. Slayden of Texas has introduced a bill for the removal of the garden to Rock Creek park and the transfer of its control to the department of agriculture.

Visitors to Washington always are interested in the botanical garden. Curiousities and wonders, too, make the place of sharp interest not only to botanists, but to laymen.

The Hottentot ordeal tree will interest students of savage jurisprudence to whom Superintendent

Hess will show the little nuts growing on the tree and explain that the Hottentots made persons accused of crime eat them as a test of their innocence.

As the nuts are deadly poison and the accused usually died, the trial, it will be seen, was exceedingly simple.

Bridal couples usually are shown the "mother-in-law plant," so named, it is said, because if a person breaks off a leaf and touches it to the tongue, speech is lost for nine days. One of the employees once experimented by stuffing a leaf in his mouth, whereupon the tongue so swelled that it protruded from the mouth and closed it. The man was rushed to a hospital but the plant made good its dread reputation by keeping him ill for the appointed nine days.

One of the greatest curiosities in the great greenhouse is a creeping fig, a little plant with leaves about the size of a dime and a stem no larger than one's little finger. This stem, coming up out of a bed beside a huge granite block upon which rests a large tub of earth, forced its way under the block, lifting several hundred pounds to make room for itself, and came out on the other side. It then wandered all over the block, carpeting it completely with its tiny leaves of green.

The lace or lattice leaf plant of Madagascar lives in the water and looks like a piece of beautiful "drawn work" that some careless visitor had accidentally dropped there.

"Made in America" Gets Impetus in Washington

"MADE in America" is receiving a big impetus and those who have given magic association to the words "foreign" or "imported" are in a fair way to change their point of view.

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the vice-president, and Mrs. P. R. McCumber, wife of the senator from North Dakota, with Mrs. Ollie James of Kentucky and other leaders of official Washington, have all declared that the importance which has heretofore been attached to foreign manufactured goods has been largely psychological, and that not all of their popularity has foundation in fact, and that they intend to do their utmost to relieve the masses of the American people of that silly prejudice which has grown so strongly on them.

Among the Washingtonians who joined this movement are Miss Julia Marlowe, the actress; Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, Mrs. Thomas K. McLaughlin, Mrs. George Howard, Mrs. Edward Mitchell, Mrs. Reynolds Hitt, Mrs. Robert Roosevelt, Mrs. Mark Hanna, Mrs. D. A. Blodgett, Mrs. J. B. Alshire and Mrs. William L. Marshall.

The National Made in U. S. A. league, which has its headquarters in Washington, does not compel its members to sign a pledge, or to limit themselves to any action more definite than preference of American products, if they come within the taste, or the means of the individual purchaser.

"To my mind," stated one of the honorary patronesses. "It is exactly similar to the purchase in your home town agitation which is so common in many of our thrifty rural centers. When it covers the whole United States, it is larger in aspect, but in principle virtually the same. It is a good thing to encourage American business and to furnish employment for all."

Parcel Post Ice Boxes for Perishable Commodities

ALTHOUGH there is now no obstacle to the construction by the post office department of cold storage facilities to take care of perishable parcel post shipments, according to decision of controller of the treasury, it was declared that there are to be no radical steps taken to equip post offices with either elaborate cold storage plants or ice boxes.

Postmaster Praeger at Washington did not wait for a decision as to whether the department had authority to build cold storage plants. He just took materials from his building, used his own forces and has constructed one at the post office near the Union station, where perishable products which cannot be delivered immediately are stored until they can be delivered.

The question of cold storage first came up at Denver. At that place there is a railroad running out of the mountain city approximately 256 miles in length, over which there are only two trains a day, one of which leaves about eight o'clock in the morning. It runs over a desert country, where it is difficult to keep the perishable products, in view of the fact that in order to catch the trains it is necessary to mail the parcel post matter at the Denver post office in the evening. The perishable shipments total about one ton a day.

It is probable that where conditions require it ice boxes will now be installed, although it is declared to be the desire of the department to educate that part of the public which uses the parcel post for shipping perishable products to ship them at a time when it will not be necessary to have them lie over at any point, and it is the purpose of the department to make deliveries of such shipments as they arrive at the office of destination.

Sees Fortune in the Black Mud of Anacostia Flats

JOHN Martin hammers a typewriter in the press room of the Municipal building and draws a pay from an afternoon newspaper in the daytime; at night he dreams of a fortune in pedigreed corn and potatoes from the black mud of the Anacostia "flats," between the army war college and the government hospital for the insane.

Last summer a fishing expedition took him to the south shore of the eastern branch of the Potomac, where the government has built up acre after acre with mud dredged from the channels of the branch. Congress has been worrying for a long time over the best means of producing revenue from these flats, and when the district commissioners were asked to pass on the question of leasing these acres of river mud for five years Martin got the tip and, having some money laid by, decided to go into agriculture.

Having leased the land for five years, he consulted the agricultural department and was advised to plant corn because there was so much acid in the soil. Martin chartered a negro and two mules and some farm machinery and started ploughing his land in the fall, and the department told him where to buy his corn. An expert said: "You buy 30 bushels of very aristocratic, high-toned seed corn and raise a crop of it. Allowing 13 acres for failure, you've still got 100 acres for the good corn, which ought to average around one hundred and fifty bushels to the acre. This will make 75 bushels of shelled corn to the acre, and with such corn finding a ready market at $2 a bushel you ought to clean up about fifteen thousand dollars gross on your first crop. Your second crop, of potatoes, should get you about twenty thousand dollars gross."

Hat for a Formal Occasion

THERE is never a time when a hat, moderately broad of brim and with a crown which is so conservative as to escape attention, is out of style. A shape of this kind with a covering of velvet and a facing of crepe or satin, trimmed with plumes, is about the most reliable of all millinery. It has no eccentricities that catch the attention, but its grace and elegance and general becomingness make it always pleasing.

The hat shown in the illustration is a superb piece of millinery made of velvet over a frame whose brim droops, in the gentlest of curving lines, just a little at the back and front. The facing of crepe georgette, is a creamy white. Besides the beauty of rich material, that of exquisite workmanship adds its charm to the fine color-contrast of black and white and the pleasing lines of the shape. Very handsome ostrich feathers, are used for the trimming. Such a composition results in a hat dignified and beautiful, which will harmonize with any color in the costume. Its wearer may face any formal occasion undismayed and very secure in the knowledge that her millinery is quite equal to the strict requirements of the current mode.

Blouses of Chiffon for Dressy Wear

STANDING at the pinnacle of popularity, the pretty blouse of flowered chiffon hardly has a rival among blouses designed for dressy wear. It is not as fragile as it looks, but it is fragile enough, at that. The waists are usually made of chiffon having a light-colored ground over which rather large flowers are scattered in many beautiful colorings and shadings.

Besides these flowered patterns there are others, showing Persian designs in wonderful colors, and also some novelties rather difficult to describe. In any case the chiffon is draped over a foundation of plain chiffon, very thin silk, plain or figured net, or thin lace.

By way of decoration the waists are more or less elaborated with garnishings of lace, small brilliant buttons, and especially with tiny flat bows made of satin folds or narrow velvet ribbon.

Destined for a less brief reign in favor are the plain blouses of crepe de chine made with sloping shoulders and long sleeves set into a regulation armhole. Narrow cuffs in bands of fine flat lace, or dainty collars and cuffs of organdie finish these elegant blouses. They are shown in light pink, maize, blue and sand color. Often a little vestee is worn with collar of pleated lace standing at the back, finished with a narrow band of black velvet ribbon which supports and holds the collar in place and ties in a bow at one side. Of course, the throat looks very white by contrast and the little touch of black adds tone to the waist.

Waists of this kind are very practical, standing the washings that are necessary to keep them immaculate, quite as well as waists of fine cotton fabrics.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Filet Lace Lamp Shades.

Have you seen the new filet lace lamp shades?

They are beautiful. They are run with colored threads and edged with fringe of the same colors.

One for a large lamp is made of white filet run with various dull shades of blue. There is a pattern of griffins and somewhat conventionalized rose trees in pots and the edge is finished with shaded blue fringe. The shade is mounted over yellow silk, and the effect of the light shining through the yellow and then the blue is delightful. The shade costs about fifteen dollars.

India Rubber as Eraser.

India rubber, it is believed, was used for the first time as an eraser in 1770. It was, however, many years later, before it was put in general use. Prior to this, pieces of bread were used for erasing purposes.

AND HE WASN'T HER HUBBY

Irate Father, in Quest of Son, Dragged into Neighbor's Home by Angry Woman Late at Night.

A local business man who believes his son always should be in bed by nine o'clock returned home the other night after eleven and learned that the boy was still out at play. Irate, the father stalked across the street to the home of his son's chum. The house was dark, but the father rang the bell.

Suddenly the door was opened and the woman of the household, in gown and nightcap, reached a strong arm through the opening and pulled the man within, saying angrily, "Drunk again, I suppose. Come in here before the neighbors see you."

The father, breathless from this reception, recovered sufficiently to understand that the strong, night-capped woman thought she had captured her alcoholic spouse. The father started to explain:

"But, madam, you've made a mistake, I'm—"

"Mistake, nothing," hotly retorted the strong woman. "You come upstairs and get into bed. The idea of coming home—"

The unwilling guest managed to strike a match and the strong woman saw a face that was not her husband's. The overzealous hostess fled up the stairs in a flutter of nightgown.—Boston Globe.

Had a Good Position.

There is often fun at the baseball grounds outside of the game, especially among the boys who try to see the game without being admitted.

One youngster who was fortunate enough to find a knothole in the fence was heard to shout to another who was munching away on a juicy apple:

"Say, I'll quit this hole if you'll give me a couple of them."

"Go on!" was the reply. "You can't see through the ginks on t'other side o' the fence."

"Orl right, sonny," was the rejoinder, "keep 'em. But that's where you missed it, for there's a sawed off guy in front of this hole, and there ain't nobody in front of him, see?"

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

WASHINGTON

God wills no man a slave. The man most meek, Who saw him face to face on Horeb's peak, Had slain a tyrant for a bondman's wrong, And met his Lord with sinless soul and strong, But when, years after, overfraught with care, His feet once trod doubt's pathway to despair, For that one treason lapse, the guiding hand That led so far now barred the promised land, God makes no man a slave, no doubter free; Abiding faith alone wins liberty.

No angel led our Chieftain's steps aright; No pilot cloud by day, no flame by night; No plague nor portent spake to foe or friend; No doubt assailed him, faithful to the end.

Weaklings there were, as in the tribes of old, Who craved for fleshpots, worshiped calves of gold, Mumbled that right would harder be than wrong, And freedom's narrow road so steep and long; But he who ne'er on Sinai's summit trod, Still walked the highest heights and spake with God; Saw with anointed eyes no promised land By petty bounds or pettier cycles spanned, Its people curbed and broken to the ring, Packed with a caste and saddled with a king— But freedom's heritage and training school, Where men unrul'd should learn to wisely rule, Till sun and moon should see at Ajalon King's heads in dust and freemen's feet thereon.

His work well done, the leader stepped aside, Spurning a crown with more than kingly pride, Content to endure the higher crown of worth, While time endures, First Citizen of earth.

—James Jeffrey Roche.

WORDS THAT BURN

Washington's Address to Troops at Long Island a Marvel of Eloquence.

From an address delivered before the battle of Long Island, 1776.

THE time is now near at hand which must probably determine whether Americans are to be freemen or slaves; whether they are to have any property they can call their own; whether their houses and farms are to be pillaged and destroyed, and themselves consigned to a state of wretchedness from which no human efforts will deliver them. The fate of unborn millions will now depend, under God, on the courage and conduct of this army. Our cruel and unrelenting enemy leaves us only the choice of a brave resistance, or the most abject submission. We have, therefore, to resolve to conquer or to die.

Our own, our country's honor, calls upon us for a vigorous and manly exertion; and if we now shamefully fall, we shall become infamous to the whole world. Let us, then, rely on the goodness of our cause, and the aid of the supreme being, in whose hands victory is, to animate and encourage us to great and noble actions. The eyes of all our countrymen are now upon us; and we shall have their blessings and praises, if happily we are the instruments of saving them from the tyranny meditated against them. Let us, therefore, animate and encourage each other, and show the whole world that a freeman, contending for liberty on his own ground, is superior to any slavish mercenary on earth.

Liberty, property, life and honor are all at stake. Upon your courage and conduct rest the hopes of our bleeding and insulted country. Our wives, children and parents expect safety from us only; and they have every reason to believe that heaven will crown with success so just a cause. The enemy will endeavor to intimidate by show and appearance; but remember they have been repulsed on various occasions by a few brave Americans. Their cause is bad—their men are conscious of it; and, if opposed with firmness and coolness on their first onset, with our advantage of works, and knowledge of the ground, the victory is most assuredly ours.

SOLD RELICS OF WASHINGTON

Two Authenticated Pistols and a Medicine Chest of His Auctioned in New York.

Two pistols which George Washington carried through the Revolution, a medicine chest which belonged to him and "Light Horse Harry" Lee's flag were sold at auction at New York during the past year. There are no Washington pistols in Mount Vernon or in the National museum at Washington.

The genuineness of the offerings was attested by a documentary record of their sale in 1804, in Alexandria, Va., at the disposal of the effects of Washington's secretary, Bartholomew Dandridge, to whom the general presented the weapons. Their presence in 1893 at the partition of the Marsteller estate is attested. Col. Philip G. Marsteller, one of Washington's pallbearers, bought them at the Dandridge sale for $263.

The pistols are of the flintlock type. They were made by Hawkins of London and bear the gunmaker's guild proof mark "G. P." Silver hands across the butts are engraved "General George Washington."

The medicine chest is of mahogany and walnut, about one foot square, with brass handles. Lee's flag is about two feet square. It had fallen apart from age, but the pieces were saved and are held in place by thin netting.

Washington the Man. Washington occupies a unique place, not only in the history of the United States, but in the history of the world. No man of such recent years enjoys such a splendid perspective. America views him, not as a man but as a demigod. He looms vast, a hero with the awesome, inspiring splendor that invests the deities of Greek mythology. And yet Washington the man is very real to us.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted? Thrice he armed that has his quarrel just; And he but naked, though locked up in steel, Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.—Shakespeare.

DISHES WE ALL LIKE.

The following dishes will give pleasing variety to the bill of fare and the chili may be made of the cheaper cuts of beef.

Chili Con Carne.—Slice one large onion and fry it in drippings until yellow, then add two pounds of beef which has been cut in inch cubes, rolled in flour and well seasoned; add one can of tomatoes, two large green peppers, chopped, and a few dashes of red peppers; season with salt, cover with boiling water and simmer until tender. Add half cupful of cooked kidney beans to the stew and put another half cupful through a sieve and add to it, to thicken it. Serve very hot.

Mexican Tamales.—Prepare fricassee chicken by cutting the fowl into section, dredging with flour and browning in hot drippings. Make a sauce of a quart of tomato, tabasco sauce, or minced red pepper and stew the chicken in this mixture. Make a thin cornmeal mush by using chicken stock with cornmeal. Carefully strip the husks from green ears of sugar corn, spread each husk with a layer of the mush. In the center pack two or three pieces of the chicken and pepper sauce. Tie the husks together with strips of corn husks and cook in a steamer for two or three hours.

Russian Perok.—Boil a small head of cabbage in salted water until tender, then cut in pieces; mix with diced hard-cooked egg, one for each cupful of cabbage. While hot, add salt, pepper, and enough cream to moisten the whole. Bake in a pie plate between two layers of rich pastry.

Chop Suey.—Let a cupful of dried beans sprout and use these sprouts with two pounds of lean pork; cut in small cubes, which have been dredged in flour and browned in hot fat; add one minced onion, two small bunches of celery, and with the seasonings, cover with boiling water and simmer until tender. Just before serving add a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce.

It must be somewhere written that the virtues of the mothers shall occasionally be visited on the children as well as the sins of the fathers.—Dickens.

GOOD DISHES WORTH TRYING.

Always save any left over cream of wheat or cooked breakfast food of oatmeal or the like. Mold in small bread tins and slice and fry for a hot luncheon or supper dish.

For those who have never eaten young squirrels broiled a toothsome sensation is still due. Clean and wash the squirrels, wipe dry and broil over a clear bright fire. When a golden brown season well, cover generously with butter and serve hot. This dish is for those hunters who have no conscience about taking the life of the joyous little squirrel.

Cabbage Salad.—Put one-half cupful of vinegar and one tablespoonful of butter to heat in a double boiler. Beat the yolk of one egg, one tablespoonful of flour, one of sugar and two of sour cream, cook smooth in the vinegar. Just as it thickens, stir in the well beaten white of an egg and pour over shredded well salted cabbage.

Apple Dumplings.—Make a rich baking powder biscuit crust, roll out and cut in squares large enough to wrap a well core and peeled apple. Fill the apple with chopped peanuts, sugar and bits of butter. Pinch each square and bake in a hot oven. A most delicious crust may be made by using peanut butter in place of other shortening in the making of the dumplings.

Almond Salad.—Blanch and shred a half cupful of almonds, add six olives, stoned and chopped, a half cupful of celery and a half cupful of boiled dressing or sufficient French dressing to season well. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Creamed Chestnuts.—This is a delicious dish where chestnuts are reasonable in price. Boil until tender a cupful or two of chestnuts. Serve in well seasoned rich, white sauce. An egg may be added to the sauce to make it richer or cream used instead of milk. Serve as a vegetable.

Corn Bread.—One pint of white cornmeal, one quart of sour milk, four eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, one half teaspoonful of salt. Mix well and bake in muffin pans.

Nellie Maxwell.

Did He Get a Boy? It was a baker's shop. From the perforated grating beneath floated a delicious aroma of cake, to the great enjoyment of a number of small boys who were looking in the window. Presently the proprietor appeared with a load of steaming hot cakes fresh from the oven, and began to dress the window with artistic piles. Having finished, he went away, but reappeared a few moments later with a card in his hand, which he hung in the window, bearing the words, "Boy Wanted!"—London Chronicle.

THE MISANTHROPHE

By ETHEL WARD MESERVEY.

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

"Vapid, profitless, almost unendurable," was the way Ralph Burt described life as it presented itself to his distorted view.

Then he became very much ashamed of the misanthropic utterance. He glanced about his lonely but elegant home, he looked into a mirror and noted the unusual glow of health upon his cheeks, he realized that he had not a real care in the world. Outside the birds were singing, the flowers blooming, all radiant nature breathing purity, peace and promise. The sun shone at its brightest. Its rays glorified the redolent garden. Beyond it lay a sportsman's paradise—stables, kennels, garage and hangar. It represented the latest facilities for pleasure.

"Yes, with all this, I may well be ashamed of myself for finding nothing worth living for!" murmured Burt, self-reproachfully.

Burt went out to the spot where the hangar was located. With the assistance of his hired man the superb biplane he operated was wheeled out.

He had become quite an expert aviator and enjoyed his air trips greatly. Under his expert direction the machine struck an upward lateral course, a thing of life and beauty. He enjoyed the rare exhibition of pure air and bird-like speed immensely.

Ten miles accomplished, Burt volplaned to a meadow stretch to adjust a trivial defect in the control mechanism. He had just got in trim to resume his cloud work, when a shout down the highway attracted his attention.

With both interest and indignation the amateur aviator observed a lad of about fourteen running towards him as if for his life.

Struggling behind him, but in hot pursuit, were three men. They were shouting and gesticulating. One carried a cane, which he waved menacingly. A second had picked up a lot of stones. These he hurled with varied aim after the running boy.

"You young rascal!" roared the man in advance. "Drop it, I tell you, or I'll have you jailed!"

But the little fellow never heeded the threatening cries and actions of his pursuers. He forged straight ahead, momentarily nearing the spot where Burt stood.

"This way! This way!" shouted Burt, as the boy came nearer. "Climb under the fence."

"Oh! oh!" yelled the lad just at that moment. A frantic pain.

"Brace up!" cried Burt, leaning over and lifting the lad clear of the entangling wires. "Now, then, who are those men?"

"Villains! They'll kill me—and you, too. Oh, they're coming!"

They were, indeed, but Burt was going. He lifted the helpless lad in his arms bodily, and made a run for the biplane.

"Don't get frightened," he ordered, placing his charge in the seat behind the pilot post and hurriedly strapping him in.

"Quick, mister! oh, quick as you can!" insisted his passenger, with a terrified glance at the fence.

The three pursuers had arrived. One tried to jump the fence and his feet tripped and he fell with a thud. A second attempted to crawl under the lower wire and his clothing had become entangled.

"Don't you interfere with that boy or you'll be liable to the law!" he shouted at Burt.

The latter paid no attention to the threat. He sprang to the pilot seat. Chug-chug—whirr! and the biplane went aloft like an arrow.

The dismayed and chagrined men below vainly vented their wrath on the rescuer who had baffled them. The little fellow sat spellbound with delight at the rare sensation of an air flight he had never dreamed of. For the first time in his life Ralph Burt had found his mind invested with real human interest. It elevated him. An actor in an exciting and unusual circumstance, he was eager to learn what lay behind the strange incident of the hour.

Soon he knew all about it, for when the biplane landed on home ground he took his passenger into his library and questioned him.

It came out that he and his sister, Eleanor, were practically prisoners in the power of one of his three pursuers, Giles Warden. Fearing foul play, the sister had that day given him the will of her dead father, with the injunction to place it in the hands of some lawyer for safety and action. Hence the pursuit.

"Righting a wrong—quite heroic!" commented Burt's lawyer, when he was made aware of the facts in the case. "Why, your new experience has made you look like a new man. I'll soon have this affair straightened out."

It was with a good deal of surprise that Ralph met "Sister Eleanor" a week later. He had supposed her to be a little girl. Instead, confusedly, he listened to the ardent thanks of a beautiful young lady.

"You have saved Miss Morley from captivity and the loss of her fortune," advised the lawyer. "She may continue to need a friend."

Day by day Ralph Burt's heart warmed to new impulses. There came a final presaging lasting contentment. It was when Eleanor became something more than a friend—his wife.

Silas Finch in 1832, who was the first

Look Out for Them.

From different parts of the country come stories of a swindle successfully worked on farmers who thought they were going to get cheap groceries.
Two smooth strangers went through the communities taking orders for a Chicago house, pretending to sell a cheaply that every farmer visited took from $10 to $60 worth, and other things besides. Because of the low prices the sugar and flour had to be "paid in advance." It is alleged that in one community the swindlers picked up some $3,000 and no groceries delivered.—Brighton Argus.
