Mrs. Cook was a daughter of the late Lawyer and Irene Riggs and her entire life had been spent in this vicinity. She was a charter member of Olive Chapter, O. E. S., of this place and until her health failed always took an active interest in the gatherings of the order. She was united in marriage with N. H. Cook October 24, 1878, and for several years they made their home on the Cook farm in Sylvan. Mr. and Mrs. Cook have been residents of Chelsea for the last 14 years. Mrs. Cook has been in failing health for the last two or three years.

She is survived by her husband, one son, Ray R. Cook, of Detroit, one daughter, Miss Mildred J. Cook of this place, one sister, Mrs. George Ward, of Chelsea, one brother, Ernest Riggs, of Oakland, Coles Co., Illinois.

The funeral was held from the home at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. C. J. Dole assisted by Rev. A. W. Fuller officiating. Interment at Vermont cemetery, Sylvan.

Judgment Increased.

Ann Arbor Times News: Judge E. D. Kinne, late on Saturday afternoon, handed down his decision and decree in the suit of Homer C. and May Millen against Nathan S. Potter, et al., the court having heard arguments on the settlement on March 3, and having with held his decision until Saturday.

Under the terms of the decree, the judgment against Potter is increased from $66,666.66 to nearly $80,000, the court allowing interest of $12,500 on the $66,666.66 from June, 1911, until the rendering of the decree.

Moreover, Judge Kinne orders Potter to pay to the Union Bank of Jackson $7,500, so that the bank will give a clear deed to the Michigan Portland Cement company of which, under the ruling of the court, the Millens are the largest stockholders.

This makes the total of the sum which Potter is ordered to pay, nearly $90,000, unquestionably the largest amount ever awarded in the local circuit court.

White Man With Black Liver.

The liver is a blood purifier. It was thought at one time it was the seat of the passions. The trouble with most people is that their liver becomes black because of impurities in the blood due to bad physical states causing biliousness, headache, dizziness and constipation. Dr. King's New Life Pills will clean up the liver, and give you new life. 25c. at your druggist. Adv.

Granted a Parole.

Joseph Saunders, sentenced in the Washtenaw circuit court on December 4, 1911, to serve from one to fifteen years at Jackson, and who, after having served one year and following his parole, was rearrested for breaking the same, has been given another parole by the pardon board.

Saunders followed Joseph Weber, to the D. J. & C. waiting room here and robbed him of a pocketbook, containing $10. At the time of the robbery Saunders was in the employ of the Flanders Manufacturing Co.

He had an accomplice, named Anton Bauler, who made a clean breast of the affair, and was released on suspended sentence.

Besides recommendation for clemency at this time from Judge Kinne and ex-prosecuting attorney Burke, the release of Saunders was urged by Brand Whitlock, former mayor of Toledo and now U. S. minister at Brussels, Belgium, Chief of Police Knapp, of Toledo, and Postmaster Tucker of that city, of which he had been a resident, before becoming a resident of Ann Arbor. Saunders is a married man and was formerly employed in the Toledo postoffice and the fire department of that city. Since Saunders' incarceration, his father died, and the support of his wife and mother devolves upon him now.

The Split Log Drag.

The split log drag has contributed more toward the economic maintenance of our public highways than any implement of modern usage. It does not require special acts of the legislature, bond issues nor expensive educational campaigns to make it available as usually precedes construction work. A drag can be built or purchased for about twenty dollars and is easily operated by any one who can drive a team. We need more split log drags in this state.

St. Patrick's Day Entertainment.

The St. Patrick's Day entertainment and banquet held in St. Mary's hall Tuesday evening was one of the best ever given by the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The hall was packed to its utmost capacity and the ladies of the church were kept busy from six until eight o'clock serving the fine banquet which they had prepared for the occasion. The event was a success both financially and socially.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor DeBever, Dexter, gave a very able address on the "Mission of Ireland," which was highly appreciated. Rev. Father Considine with very appropriate remarks thanked the gathering for their patronage and the congregation for their generous work in connection with banquet and program.

The evening's entertainment closed with the comedy, "Patsy from Dakota," presented by members of St. Agnes' Sodality, and vocal selections by Louis A. Burg and Miss Margaret Burg.

The vocal numbers by Miss Burg and her brother, Louis A., were exceptionally fine and well rendered. The characters in the comedy assumed by the Misses Winifred Staphis and Winifred Eder were the "hits" of the evening and their appearance on the stage created a laugh from start to finish. The entire program both from a musical and dramatic standpoint was extremely well rendered and highly appreciated by the audience.

Boys Home at Albion.

Boys at the Starr Commonwealth Home at Albion, a new school-home, which is solving the bad boy problem are taught the value of good books in a manner which would put many older and more educated people to shame.

These lads scorn the so-called "boys books." They read such publications as the Literary Digest, Success, the Outlook, and their favorite authors are Shakespeare, Scott and Eugene Field.

These boys came from homes in Michigan, which defy description. Some did not come from homes, they came from the gutter and the alley. Many of them had no idea of right and wrong before they went to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Starr, the founders of the Home, whom they almost worship. Mr. and Mrs. Starr are young people. They love boys with the results in service. They are giving their lives to the lads—to make of them citizens, which Michigan will be glad to claim.

If the boys had not had the influence they are now receiving, it is more than likely they would have been inmates of the penitentiary within the next 20 years. The boys admit themselves they were on the road to crime.

Now they are having christian influence, good books, an education, love such as they never knew before, kind motherly and fatherly advice, which will stand them in good stead, when they go out into the world, and they are being taught to become useful citizens.

Saturday Night at the Princess.

A special three-part Imp. feature "The Tenth Commandment" a powerful and vivid drama featuring William Shay, Hobard Henley, William Welsh and playing the leading role, the beautiful and talented actress, Violet Mersereau. A photo-play of intrigue, love, passion and romance with the tenth and last commandment left as its moral. "The Animated Weekly" with war pictures and current events follow the feature.

A series of Bible study motion pictures will be shown at the Princess theatre coovering a period of four evenings. The opening number will be given on Thursday evening, March 25, and will close on Monday evening, March 29. The entertainment is claimed to cover a period of 49,000 years. Each part will require two hours to show with a change each evening. This will be given in addition to the regular show.

Peace Sunday.

Next Sunday will be observed as Peace Sunday in the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart by special order of Pope Benedict XV, and this day will also be observed by every Catholic church in the United States. After high mass the exposition of the blessed sacrament, all day chanting of the Miserere, recitation of the beads, litany of the saints with the prayer for peace composed for the occasion by the Pope, and solemn benediction in the evening will be the order of exercises.

NEGRO ON TRIAL IN SAGINAW COURT

ACCUSED OF MURDERING ROSE FERNIER-LAUNDRY AND BURNING BODY.

MOTHER APPEALS FOR HELP

Charles Kimbrough Who Was Arrested in January Faces Jury and Still Protests That He Is Innocent.

Saginaw.—Charles Kimbrough, the negro charged with the murder of 8-year-old Rose Fernier-Laundry, Jan. 3, was placed on trial Tuesday morning before Circuit Judge Wm. Glover Gage. Attorney Robert J. Curry represents Kimbrough and Prosecutor B. J. Vincent is handling the case for the state.

Mrs. Eliza Reid, mother of Kimbrough, has appealed to the mothers of Saginaw to give financial aid in order that her son can obtain a fair trial, the necessary expenses carried on and witnesses paid. In closing her appeal she says:

"Please remember that though he be colored, he is my boy, and that I, too, have a mother's heart and a mother's love."

Kimbrough was arrested Jan. 5 on the theory that the girl, while running toward home from an errand, was grabbed in the darkness by Kimbrough, carried into the Valley Sweets factory, where he was working, attacked her, and cast her body into the furnace.

Bones found in the ashes were declared by University of Michigan experts to be those of a child.

Kimbrough says he is innocent and asserts he was at the factory only a short time that night.

Auditor General Shows How Much
State Spends For R. R. Fares.

Lansing.—Auditor General Fuller sent a communication to the senate Monday evening in which he gave details asked by a senate resolution as to the amount the state pays in railroad fares for employees who have to travel. The resolution, presented by Senator Woodworth some time ago, aimed to ascertain what it would cost the state in increased fares if passenger rates were raised.

The auditor general's findings were that the state had paid in 1914 the following:

Military mileages, 1c. per mile	$ 4,964.66
Travel outside of state, 1c. per mile	$ 1,260.80
Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Ry., 3c. a mile	$ 7,032.49
Other roads charging 3c. a mile (estimated)	$ 2,500.00
Roads charging 2c. a mile	$ 80,889.95
Total	$96,647.91

Estimated increase in cost to the state, in rates per mile raised to 2 1/2 cents per mile $20,000.00

The report was placed on file for the benefit of the senators when the railroad rate matter comes up later in the session.

Yeggmen at Imlay City.

Imlay City.—Yeggmen broken into the postoffice Friday night and blew off the outer door of the safe, but evidently were frightened away before they got into the inner compartment. They got a few cents in cash and a small supply of stamps, but left a portion of their tools.

Though several persons heard the explosion, including the man who lived above the office, no one investigated, and the robbery was not discovered until the office was opened at the usual hour Saturday morning.

LONDON CLAIMS DRESDEN IS SUNK

ELUSIVE GERMAN RAIDER IS CAUGHT AFTER LONG
CHASE.

SOLE SURVIVOR OF FLEET

Admiralty Reports That Three British
Cruisers Found Lone Ship
Off Chile On Sunday.

London.—The admiralty announced Monday evening that the German cruiser Dresden, long sought by British warships, had been sunk off the Juan Fernandez island, 400 miles west of Valparaiso, Chile, on Sunday.

Thus the sole survivor of the fleet that routed Admiral Craddock and was in turn routed by Sturdee was destroyed and on all the waters of the world, save of Germany itself, there now remains at liberty but two of the Kaiser's war vessels—the Karlsruhe and the Kron Prinz Wilhelm. And of these only the Karlsruhe was built to fight, the other being a converted merchantman.

Three British cruisers comprised the squadron that finally caught the elusive German raider after a chase that has lasted up and down the west coast of South America, in the straits of Magellan and on the Pacific since December 8, when the vessel got away from Admiral Sturdee's fleet.

Once caught there was no escape, for her speed had vanished in months of cruising and her guns were no match for those of her pursuers. The Glasgow alone could have sunk her and with the powerful Kent, carrying 14 6-inch guns on hand, the argument was short and decisive.

This is the first time in the present war that a German warship has struck her colors. The Gneisenau, the Scharnhorst, Leipzig, Emden, the Nürnberg and the Bluecher went down fighting.

HIGHER RATES ARE HELD UP

New Freight Schedule On Live Stock Is Objected To.

Lansing.—On the petition of the Michigan Livestock Dealers' association and several individual shippers of stock, the state railroad commission Friday suspended completely a new schedule of rates for livestock which the railroads had planned to put into effect next Monday.

The complainants aver that the new rates would be so high as to be almost confiscatory. Tariffs have been filed with the commission for some time, but the petitions against them filed Friday constitute the first objection on record.

The proposed rates show an average increase on livestock freight of about 20 per cent to Detroit and Bay City, the only two cities inside the state that have cattle markets, but the increase is also shown to points outside the state.

The railroads opposed by the dealers' association are the New York Central (including the Lake Shore), Grand Trunk, the Pere Marquette, Michigan Central and Ann Arbor, while individual parties file petitions against the Detroit & Mackinaw and the Pontiac, Oxford & Northern.

BLAZE AT JACKSON PRISON

Entire City Fire Department Called Out Monday Night.

Jackson.—Fire, which started shortly before 11 o'clock Monday night in the Jackson prison brick plant, called out every engine in the city and badly damaged the prison property.

One of the night men discovered the fire and notified the guard room officials. The prison fire department was called, but was unable to check the flames and an alarm was turned in to the city department. A general alarm followed immediately.

AMERICA'S GREATEST FLYER KILLED AT SAN FRANCISCO

LINCOLN BEACHEY.

San Francisco.—Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, was killed late Sunday when his aeroplane collapsed and plunged into San Francisco bay from a height of 3,700 feet, while he was making an exhibition flight at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Beachey was completing his second flight of the day when the accident occurred in full view of thousands of spectators. Having previously electrified the crowd with a series of aerial somersaults, the aviator sought to add an additional thrill by making one of the sensational perpendicular drops which usually featured his flights.

The fatal fall was attributed to the fact that Beachey entrusted his life, for the first time in several years, to a monoplane.

MONEY TO FIGHT PLAGUE

House Committee Agrees to Allow Extra $10,000 to Board of Health for Campaign Against Tuberculosis.

Lansing.—The state board of health is to have $10,000 additional added to its regular appropriation this session, which Secretary Burkart says will be used to fight tuberculosis for the state board of health is $15,000. The house committee has reported out favorably a bill carrying a $25,000 appropriation, and this additional amount will be expended in a fight against the white plague.

"I wish the amount could have been larger, so that we could have proven to the people that the money would be well expended," said Dr. Burkart. "However, I think that by careful figuring we can show $50,000 results with the $10,000 we will devote to fighting the disease."

This amount that will be expended fighting tuberculosis and the appropriations given the two sanatoriums will assist materially in lending state aid to what private individuals will do during the next two years.

The house committee on public health has favorably reported the state board of health's bill providing that, while power shall remain with the governor to appoint the secretary of the board, who shall also be the administrative officer of the department, the board shall designate who shall be appointed. The bill has already passed the senate. The board, before leaving the bill introduced, asked the present secretary, Dr. Burkart, if this arrangement would be agreeable to him. The doctor assured them that it would be. The understanding is that the board, as soon as the bill becomes a law, will designate Dr. Burkart for secretary for a full term of six years, and that Gov. Ferris will appoint him.

On request of a number of citizens, of Port Huron, a department of labor representative is investigating the re-establishment of a ferry line between North Port Huron and Point Edward.

The house Friday morning passed the senate bill to appropriate the funds needed to reimburse the general fund for money expended on the state insane asylums, Michigan Home and Training school and Eloise hospital. The tax provided to meet these disbursements totals $1,215,970.77 for 1915 and $1,301,724.01 for 1916.

COST THIRTEEN MILLIONS

World's Largest Fighting Machine
Afloat in Three Thousand Tons Heavier Than Nearest Rival.

Newport News, Va.—When the new super-dreadnaught Pennsylvania slipped from the ways into the historic waters of Hampton Roads here Tuesday, she took her place, in the lead of the navies of the world, as the mightiest fighting machine afloat. She was christened by Miss Elizabeth Kolb, of Germantown, Pennsylvania.

In size and gun power the Pennsylvania is greater even than the Queen Elizabeth of the British navy, which led the recent terrific assault of the Allies on the forts of the Dardanelles. While the British monster carries larger guns, her main battery is only two-thirds the size of that of the Pennsylvania in number, and the American battleship is 3,000 tons greater in size.

The main battery of the Pennsylvania will consist of 12 14-inch rifles, set in four turrets, three guns to a turret, the plan of big gun arrangement adopted in the sister ships which preceded her, the Nevada and Oklahoma. Her tonnage measurement is 31,400 against 27,500 for the Nevada and Oklahoma and the Queen Elizabeth. The latter, however, carries eight 15-inch rifles, set two to a turret, while the Nevada and Oklahoma have 10 14-inch rifles each in two three-gun and two two-gun turrets. In all these ships, including the Pennsylvania, the turrets are all on the center line to concentrate their fire on either broadside.

When completed the Pennsylvania will have cost the government more than $13,000,000. She will be ready for commission, under contract, by February 28, 1916. Her keel was laid October 27, 1913.

DAYTON REGISTER MEN WIN

Patterson and Twenty-Six Others Are Given New Trial.

Cincinnati.—Holding that the evidence on one count was insufficient and that neither of the other two counts should have been considered by the district court which tried the case, the United States court of appeals for the sixth circuit Saturday overruled the decision of the lower court which convicted John H. Patterson and 26 other officials or former officials of the National Cash Register company of Dayton, Ohio, of being guilty of violating the criminal section of the Sherman anti-trust act, and remanded the case back to the lower court for a new trial.

Grand Trunk Loses Third Suit.

Corunna.—The third damage case growing out of the fire that in the summer of 1913 swept a large portion of the business section of Perry and caused damage approximating $200,000 was decided late Saturday when a circuit court jury returned a verdict of $4,571.96 for Hiram and James Stoddard in their suit against the Grand Trunk Western Railway company.

Both cases previously tried resulted in verdict for the plaintiffs, who allege that sparks from a Grand Trunk locomotive started the fire.

Stoddard brothers lost a store and a stock of general merchandise.

Count Witte Is Dead.

London.—Count Sergius Julovich Witte, Russia's first prime minister, died Friday night, says a Petrograd dispatch to Reuter's Telegram company. Death was due to influenza, after sickness of a week.

Count Witte, who was born June 29, 1849, at Tiflis, was one of the Russian plenipotentiaries at Portsmouth, N. H., in the negotiations for peace with Japan in 1905. He afterward was made a count and appointed president of the new ministry, but retired in 1906 and held no important post after that time.

Gibraltar of the North Sea

CLIFFS OF HELIGOLAND

TWENTY-FIVE years ago Great Britain traded a patch of 130 acres to Germany for the island of Zanzibar. It is probable that King George's government today would be willing to give several fathoms to get back that bit of land. Lord Salisbury made the trade and it was thought at the time to be very advantageous to the English, but that small piece of the earth's surface was the island of Heligoland and so far in this great war it has capably protected the coast of Germany from attacks by the British fleet. An "L" shaped island in the North sea, 26 miles from the mouths of the Elbe, and Weser rivers, Heligoland has come to be known as the Gibraltar of the North sea, and the name is not misapplied.

In ancient times Heligoland, then more than five times its present size, was sacred to the Goddess Hertha, and was known as Fosetisland, from the Frisian Goddess Foseta who had a temple on the island. From the middle of the tenth century it was an independent republic, but came into the possession of the dukes of Schleswig in the fourteenth century, and was captured by Denmark in the beginning of the eighteenth century. The latter country ceded the island to Great Britain in 1814, and Germany came into possession of it in 1890.

In times of peace, Heligoland has a population of about three thousand Frisians who are supported chiefly by fishing, by serving as pilots and by catering to the wants of strangers who go there for the sea bathing.

Germany's Good Trade.
At the time of the trade with Germany Lord Salisbury's diplomacy was praised as a clever coup and the Kaiser, just then taking his place in world politics, was laughed at for a submarine base at Heligoland to guard it.

Made Into a Mighty Stronghold.

Since 1890 the island has been practically reconstructed. It is fortified against the sea and warlike fleets alike with great granite buttresses 16 feet thick and 240 feet high on all sides. Even the fissures in its cliffs have been filled up and bound together with thousands of tons of ferroconcrete. The Krupp guns on it are estimated to have cost $10,000,000. It has a 48 fathom roadstead which can hold the entire German fleet in safety and 100 miles nearer England than in any other of its home stations.

Heligoland magazines contain millions of rounds of every class of ammunition. Mines, torpedoes, aerial bombs and submarines are here in abundance. Its garrison is provisioned for a siege of years.

The island is connected with Germany by submarine cable. Its waters for miles around are heavily mined. It was near Heligoland early in the war that the first naval disaster overtook the British when the cruiser Amphion was sunk by a mine placed by the steamer Koenigsluise.

It saved the German fleet from destruction when Admiral Beatty turned back after sinking the Bluecher, refusing to risk his battle cruisers among the mines and submarines surrounding Heligoland.

WHIPPING OUT BEES' NEST

Old-Time Fun of Which Boys of the Present Age Seem to Know Nothing.

What has become of the old-fashioned boy who, on a summer morning, armed himself with a shingle paddle and a bunch of iron weeds and, big "dummkopf." England had been in possession of the island since the Napoleonic wars, but had never realized its strategic importance.

THE HARBOR

The island in 1890 was simply a triangular slab of red marl and sandstone, scarcely three miles in circumference, arising abruptly 200 feet out of the sea. It was visibly crumbling away. The great storms from the north were battering it to pieces, and, as one authority wrote at the time, "In a few generations, or at the most a few centuries more, Heligoland will be only a flat, desolate sand dune like those of the surrounding sea."

Instead of crumbling away the island of Heligoland today is buttressed on every side with ferroconcrete. Breakwaters have been constructed, a naval harbor built, and from armored casemates and sunken batteries the immense Krupp guns can sweep the sea for over ten miles in all directions. It has taken millions of dollars to accomplish this, but Germany has cheerfully expended $1,250,000 annually in protecting the island itself from its natural enemy, the sea, and in converting it into one of the strongest fortresses in the world.

In fact, Heligoland today forms practically the nucleus around which the whole naval program of the German empire revolves.

At the time of the purchase the Kiel canal was nearing completion and the great navy yards and naval stations of the empire were being built at Wilhelmshaven, Bremerhaven, Kiel and Cuxhaven.

The work of reconstruction was immediately begun by the Germans and today the island is the one great German menace to England's control of the North sea. Here are gathered the Kaiser's main torpedo boat and submarine fleets with which Germany expects to maintain its war zone around the British Isles. It is also the key and guard of Germany's main artery of commerce—the way to Hamburg. This great seaport, almost world dominating in times of peace, is impregnable with the great dirigible station and in company with other boys similarly equipped, went forth in search of bumble bee nests? He roamed the rippling meadow seas in quest of the buzzing pirate with a golden doublet, and on sighting him followed him in a straight course to the hidden lair. Such assaults they were, such spirited advances, such ignoble retreats and utter routs! And such laughter—and such pain!

Once, though not at Aleppo, a grim pirate in black corselet followed a small boy on rapid wing for half a mile, digging him at every bound, and finally, looping the loop, sailed up the leg of his cottonmade pants.

There was ample room in the rear half way up for egress, but the pirate showed no quarter, and, going on up, attained a position of vantage between the shoulder blades. Here he began to dig, and as he dug the boy began to shed useless raiment. At the edge of town he wore the remains of a hickory straw hat and a hurt look. However, he gathered up his scattered raiment and returned to the fray.

Then, too, there was the fat boy with the tight pants, and the boy with the shaven head, who, after taking refuge on top of a wagon shed, had to be hauled home. But why recount? Those were days of noble adventure, and every sunrise brought the call to some glorious hazard; every sunset saw some valorous deed accomplished. Boys in these decadent days don't even know what bumble-bee honey tastes like.—New York Evening Post.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

REP. PETERMAN HAS PREPARED BILL TO AMEND PRIMARY LAW.

NEW IDEAS ARE EMBODIED

Proposed Measure Would Require Successful Candidate to Receive Twenty-Five Per Cent of Votes.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing—Little progress has been made thus far by the legislature in amending the primary law. According to Senator Corliss, chairman of the senate committee on elections, his committee is waiting for a bill which is being prepared by Senator Wood before any of the measures now before the committee are acted upon. Senator Kelley introduced a bill several weeks ago which restores the enrollment feature stricken out when the James bill was passed two years ago.

Over in the house, however, a bill is being drafted by Representative Petermann of Calumet which not only restores the enrollment feature, but contains a few new ideas as well. Under the terms of the proposed Petermann bill a candidate at the primary must receive at least twenty-five per cent of his party vote in order to have his name printed upon the ballot at the general election.

For instance, if Petermann's bill should pass and there should be four candidates for the nomination for governor on the republican ticket at the next primary and 200,000 voters should vote at the primary, the leading candidates would have to receive at least 50,000 votes. In the event that no candidate receives twenty-five per cent of his party vote at the primary, Petermann's bill provides that a convention shall be held at which a candidate shall be nominated. There is also a clause in the bill making it impossible for a candidate who has been defeated for a nomination at a primary, to become a candidate of another party at the succeeding election.

At the request of Attorney General Fellows, Senator Taylor of Kalamazoo introduced a bill which provides that all appeals from decision of the state railroad commission shall be taken to the Ingham county circuit court. Heretofore, when the railroad commission has been made defendant in court proceedings in other circuits it has often been necessary to transport the books and records of the department to some distant point in the state and the passage of the bill will be a great convenience to both the state railroad commission and the attorney general's department.

Senator Taylor also introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor for any person other than employees to trespass on the tracks and rights of way of railroad companies. Senator Verder introduced by request a bill making an appropriation of $250 to defray the expenses of one of the justices of the supreme court to the annual conference of judges to be held in Washington for the purpose of prescribing forms and rules, and regulating pleading, procedure and practice on the common law side of the federal courts.

Senator George Barnes of Flint put in a bill requiring that all sleighs sold in this state after the act shall take effect, be four feet and six inches in width. Barnes says that there is a similar law in effect in Wisconsin. According to Barnes the narrow sleighs used in winter make depressions in the road which result in overturned carriages in the spring. The passage of the bill would not effect any sleighs now in use in Michigan.

In committee of the whole the senate agreed to Senator Woodworth's bill increasing the salaries of certain employees in the office of the state treasurer and favorable consideration was given Senator Fitzgibbon providing for the appointment of an assistant to State Sanitary Engineer Rich of the state board of health.

Lansing—Seventy Republicans in the house Thursday afternoon closed ranks behind Senator Sam Odell's bill to transfer the appointment of the state game warden from the governor to the public domain commission, and showed it through with a whoop.

Representative William H. Moore, of LeRoy, leader of the minority in the house, attacked the measure bitterly, in an eloquent speech, which indubitably won Republican votes to his cause. He deplored the appearance of partisan legislation in this session of the legislature, a feature which happily was absent in the sessions of 1912 and 1913, he said. He condemned the measure as unjust, and charged that several Republicans in the house had come to him and said:

"I hate this bill; I detest it; it is wrong—but I have to vote for it." Mr. Moore hinted that several attempts at deals had been made by Republicans who had gone to see the governor—that the proposition had been made that if the governor would promise not to appoint certain persons the bill would be killed. He mentioned no names.

The speaker also touched upon the Ross bill, introduced Wednesday to provide that the state dairy and food commissioner shall be appointed by the state board of agriculture and that his offices shall be transferred to the Michigan Agricultural college.

The Odell bill was one of five passed by the house on third reading Tuesday afternoon. The first bill considered was Representative Culver's amendment to clarify the present law relative to the qualifications of electors voting on educational questions.

Senator Planché's bill to require plans for all school buildings to be approved by the state superintendent of public instruction was passed. The bill also provides that the state superintendent of public instruction may condemn school buildings in certain instances. An amendment to permit school boards to bring action against the superintendent of public instruction in courts of chancery for such condemnation, was adopted.

In 1911 the legislature passed an act framed with a view to putting trading stamp companies out of business in Michigan. A majority of the companies doing business of this nature in Michigan are foreign corporations, as one or two of the Michigan companies dissolved following the passage of the act in 1911.

However, similar laws have been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of at least twenty other states, and as foreign corporations are doing a thriving business in trading stamp privileges in Michigan at the present time, Senator Odell, who voted for the passage of the bill four years ago, is of the opinion that any existing legal barrier should be removed, and he has introduced a bill to repeal the law on the statute books at the present time, which has never been enforced.

Numerous complaints have been made that it is impossible for a person interested in hunting or fishing to interpret the game laws, as there are so many different acts covering a multitude of subjects. Senator Walter seeks to remedy this difficulty by the introduction of a bill calling upon the state game, fish and forestry warden to revise, consolidate and classify all the existing acts relative to the protection of fish, wild animals and wild birds.

Senator DeLand, of Jackson, introduced, by request, a bill to permit minors to become members of building and loan associations and to exempt these organizations from the payment of a state franchise fee.

If a bill introduced by Senator Taylor becomes a law, municipal heat, light and power plants will be exempt from all taxation. Taylor's bill is in the nature of an amendment of Act 206 of the Public Acts of 1893. Senator Covert put in a bill to detach Lapeer county from the sixth judicial circuit and providing for a new judicial circuit in Lapeer county. It is said that there is too much work for one judge in the district as it now stands, and if the Covert bill passes Oakland and Lapeer counties will be in separate judicial circuits. W. R. Brown, of Lapeer, is one of the sponsors of the bill to divide the judicial circuit.

Senator Barnes offered an amendment to the present law which provides that where public utilities permit a week to elapse before meeting their payroll that there shall be a penalty of ten per cent. per day. Barnes wants this amended so that the penalty will be but one per cent. of the total payroll per week.

Under the present law, should a public utility company whose payroll is $400 per week, have some difficulty in raising money for the payroll, and the men should be deprived of their wages for a week, $40 per week would be added daily after the first week.

Wednesday night there was a public hearing on the bill introduced in the upper house by Senator Straight to give foreign corporations an opportunity to write liquor bonds, and Frank D. Eaman, of Detroit, and James Lynch, of Pontiac, appeared in behalf of the bonding company. Eaman explained that he was a member of the legal firm retained as counsel for the Michigan Bonding company, while Lynch said that he was not on the payroll, but approved of a surety bond for saloons in preference to a personal bond.

Representatives of a number of other bonding companies appeared before the committee and declared that it was not their intention to engage in the business of underwriting saloon bonds, even though the legislature paved the way. The representatives of the outside bonding companies declared that there was an understanding between them and the Michigan Bonding company whereby they refrained from writing saloon bonds if the bonding company kept its hands off other classes of bonds.

Attorney Eaman denied any participation in politics by the officers or directors of the Michigan Bonding & Security company as an organization. He said that he defied anyone to prove that there had been any attempts to dictate any political nominations or appointments. Senator Foster, a member of the senate committee on liquor traffic, asked whether the bonding company had interfered in any way in legislative elections. At first Eaman could not recall such a case, but Senator Foster recalled the letter sent out by Archie Bunting, one of the attorneys for the company, in which he urged the election of Rep. Ashley, of Detroit, as speaker of the house of representatives. Eaman then declared that this letter was not sanctioned by the bonding company, but was purely a personal matter with Bunting.

LONELY MR. HODGE

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The next day after Miss Lumpkin's Selected School for Girls opened for the fall term, Robina Judd, the newest girl of all, walked about the spacious grounds with her roommate.

"Let us go through this cunning game and see what is on the other side!" suggested Robina, when they had come to the end of the evergreen path.

Grace Barney glanced up at the forbidding stone wall and shook her sunny head.

"Out of bounds, Robina," she said regretfully. "Besides, it's private property—a perfect ogle of an old man lives there all alone. I asked Miss Lumpkin about him and she sighed and called him 'poor, lonely Mr. Hodge—only, you see, Robina, he happens to be rich.'"

"Here comes Miss Gerald," said Robina—"isn't she a dear?" "My favorite teacher! She has only been here three days and yet I love her better than any of the others. Sweet and sad and lovely—she looks as though she might have suffered, Robina!"

The thought of lonely Mr. Hodge wandering about his perfectly kept grounds haunted the careless moments of Robina Judd. "Some day I shall go in," she threatened to her roommate.

"You will have to prove it by bringing me one of those weirdly colored Japanese chrysanthemums from his garden," Grace replied.

"Wait and see!" retorted Robina, and that very afternoon came opportunity.

Most of the girls had gone for a long walk in the woods, but Robina, who had slightly twisted her ankle in the gymnasium that morning preferred to hobble around the garden.

Finally she came to the door in the wall—the high wall beyond which lived lonely Mr. Hodge.

"The time and the place—and I hope the man!" giggled Robina, as she turned the knob of the little green door. It creaked dully, opened, and in the distance she could see the melon walls of a red brick house bathed in the afternoon sunshine.

A gardener was working somewhere—there was the clicking sound of a hoe against stones.

"It's jolly here," commented Robina, and she rounded a little summer house and came upon the gardener, who was vigorously stirring up the soil in the bed of gorgeous chrysanthemums.

He turned a pair of surprised blue eyes upon her—twinkling blue eyes, set in a sunburned face, close-shaven and square-jawed.

"Well!" he exclaimed. "Well!" gasped Robina, for she had nothing else to say. Then, with sudden inspiration, she added, "The chrysanthemums are lovely!"

"Think so? Then you must have some," he decided promptly, and, taking a knife from his pocket, he proceeded to cut a huge bunch of white and yellow and crimson chrysanthemums.

"You—you wouldn't mind giving me just one of the variegated ones?" hesitated Robina.

"Sure!" he smiled down at her.

"I hope Mr. Hodge doesn't mind my coming in here," went on Robina, with a glance at the house. "You see, I belong to the school next door, and we girls know about Mr. Hodge; and we have felt sorry about his being so lonely, and I said that I was coming in some day to see him, and Grace dared me to come. I'm afraid I must go now."

"So you are sorry for Mr. Hodge?" laughed the gardener. "Why?"

"Because he lives here alone—and because some of the girls say that he has been disappointed—oh, I should not talk to you so!" Robina suddenly remembered the proprieties. She thought the gardener's blue eyes clouded, but he was still smiling.

"Wouldn't it add to the romance of the occasion to discover that I am Mr. Hodge?" asked the gardener calmly.

"Oh! oh!" moaned Robina. "How the girls will laugh at me!"

"Don't you believe that!" he grinned cheerfully. "They'll be eaten up with envy at your romantic adventure."

"Robina!"

The clear sweet call came from the other side of the high wall.

"Who is that?" asked Mr. Hodge, looking very pale.

"It is Miss Gerald—our drawing teacher—she is looking for me—good-by—and thank you!"

Just as Robina reached the door it opened and Pauline Gerald stood there. Robina rushed past her into the school grounds, but Pauline paused within the grounds of Mr. Hodge, looking with glad, bewildered eyes at the man who stood there with outstretched hands.

"Pauline!" he was saying. "When I bought this old place I never dreamed that you—why, Pauline, darling, you would not look that way unless you loved me!"

"And when I peeked through the gate," said Robina to her schoolmates, "she was in his arms—and—" She paused dramatically.

"And—" breathed her companions tensely.

"They were kissing each other—and so I guess it's all right!" ended Robina, who had brought this romance to pass.

DAIRY FACTS

DEVELOPMENT OF THE UDDER

Great Deal Can Be Done to Correct Faulty Udder by Method of Milking—Some Good Ideas.

When it comes to the show ring a great deal depends upon the symmetry of the udder and its general development. For simple dairying also a cow with a well-balanced udder is better liked than one with an udder large behind and small in front. With a fault like this a great deal can often be done by the method of milking.

The quickest and best way to develop the fore part of the udder seems to be by keeping on milking the two front teats longer than the hind teats when the cow is being dried. The development of a quarter largely depends upon the amount it is used, and when the hind teats are not used, the rear part of the udder naturally shrinks in size, while the front quarters, being used, retain their size and a better balance is made between front and rear. This is done very naturally at the end of the lactation period and by milking two weeks longer in front than behind quite a change can be made in the shape of the udder when the cow freshens again.

In ordinary times the fore part of the udder can be developed somewhat by milking the front teats out about half, then milking out the hind teats entirely and returning to the front teats again to finish milking, but the most effective method for developing the front of the udder to give it a better balance with the hind part is to keep milking the front teats about ten days or two weeks after stopping milking the rear teats.

KEEPING UP THE MILK YIELD

Almost impossible to Bring Cow Back to Her Normal Flow After It Has Once Declined.

Butterfat is scarce. The price is high, and is going higher. It will pay to produce more butterfat, but it cannot be done by feeding the cows fall grass, cornstalks and timothy hay, writes P. M. Brandt in an exchange. It is important that the milk yield never be allowed to decline. It is almost impossible to bring a cow back to her normal flow after it has been permitted to decline.

It is important that fall feeding be commenced now before the milk flow is cut down by short grass and scant feed. Those who are fortunate enough to own a silo should give each cow about twenty-five pounds of silage a day. Every cow should have all the clover, alfalfa or cowpea hay she will clean up. This amount will be about ten pounds a day if the silage is fed. If silage is not fed, more hay should be given. It is well to remember that cowpea hay is one of the cheapest of dairy feeds.

Cows giving over a gallon of milk a day should be fed grain. A good grain mixture is corn chop mixed with bran or cottonseed meal. Corn and cob meal may be substituted for the chop. A pound of this mixture should be given each day for every three pounds of milk produced.

The best of cows will not produce milk unless fed liberally on the right kind of food.

FEED NECESSARY FOR COWS

Lack of Sufficient Nutritious Food Often the Cause of Shrinkage in the Cow's Milk Flow.

(By T. L. HAECKER, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

It sometimes happens that farmers are in possession of extra good cows, but not realizing the amount of feed required by cows giving a large yield, they are soon allowed to shrink in milk because the feed given does not provide sufficient nutriment. While cows in good condition can, for a time, give more milk than the feed provides, by drawing upon the fat stored in the body, yet if the cows lose in body weight, there will soon follow an abnormal shrinkage in milk flow, and also a decrease in the quality of milk yielded.

Keep Cream Cool. Keep the cream cool. It should be as near 50 degrees F. as possible, if it is desirable to keep it sweet and check bacteria action.

Keeping the Cow Busy. Don't expect a cow to put in all her time feeding. Give her credit for working when she is chewing her cud.

A Gallon of Gasoline.
A single gallon of gasoline will do wonders almost anywhere, but nowhere has it been applied to better purpose than on the farm. Here are some of its stunts. It will milk 300 cows, bale four tons of hay, mix 35 yards of cement, move a ton truck 14 miles, plow three-fifths of an acre of land and make enough electricity to keep eight lights going in a farmhouse for 20 hours. Good-by to boyhood memories of turning the grindstone.—Wall Street Journal.

Neglect Opportunity.
The maple trees of the nation produce 47,000,000 pounds of maple sugar annually—about half a pound for each person. And the demand for the product, it is estimated, is ten times greater than the supply. Despite this fact, statistics show that less than half of the trees available for the purpose are utilized. This means that a good many farmers throughout the country are neglecting to take advantage of an important source of income.

Yes, if He Is.
"A man that has a powerful good opinion of himself," said Uncle Eben, "ought to get three cheers if he's honestly tryin' to deserve it."

How She Considered It.
He—So you are going to consider my proposal?
She—I do consider it—a joke.

Letter Carriers' Meeting.

S. P. Foster was in Detroit Saturday attending a meeting of committee on arrangement for the convention of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association which meets in Detroit August 10 to 14. He says that from point of interest to the carriers it is to be the greatest convention of the association since its organization. About 1000 delegates are expected to be in attendance representing every state in the union. The headquarters are to be at the Tuller hotel.

Got Five Days.

Peter Boes, who has been working in the woods of northern Michigan during the past winter, landed here the first of this week and was gathered in by Marshal Cooper Tuesday afternoon. He was taken before Justice Witherell Wednesday morning on the charge of drunk and disorderly conduct and was given a sentence of five days in the county jail at Ann Arbor.

St. Patrick Party.

"St. Patrick's day in the mornin'" was observed with appropriate program in the G. A. R. hall Wednesday evening by the W. R. C. The program consisted of a sketch of the life of St. Patrick, Irish songs, witticisms and jokes. The hall was packed to its capacity and the audience was most appreciative, after the conclusion of the program a light lunch was served at which all indulged in a little "tany." This was one of a series of programs or entertainments given by the W. R. C. each one being distinctly different and very much enjoyed by all who happened to be present. This will probably be the last social event given by the W. R. C. for this season and they wish to thank all who have helped to make these gatherings a success, also for the generous response toward the fund for the payment of the piano.

A Few Facts.

Spontaneous combustion which originates in oily rages, etc., causes many fires.

Fire waste in the United States is more destructive than wars, floods or tornadoes.

Flying sparks cause about one-third of the fires reported to the State Fire Marshal's bureau.

About two million dollars worth of property is destroyed each year by the careless use of matches.

Twenty million dollars has been estimated as the loss caused by fires in the United States each year, which occurred because rubbish was allowed to accumulate in houses or business places.

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a caged parrot, the trio known up and down the Irrawaddy as Parrot & Co., travel along the road to a draft for 300,000 rupees. Elsa Chetwood, rich American girl tourist, sees Warrington come aboard the boat at the landing, and, amazed at his likeness to her fiancé, Arthur Ellison, asks the parrot to introduce her. He tells her that Warrington has beaten a syndicate and sold his oil claims for $20,000. Warrington puts Elsa, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and warns her against acquaintance with unknown adventurers—himself, in fact. They pass two golden days together on the river.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

Warrington rushed ashore to find the dry-goods shop. His social redemption was on the way, if vanity went for anything. It was stirring and tingling with life again. With the money advanced by the pursuer he bought shirts and collars and ties, and as he possessed no watch, returned barely in time to dress for dinner. He was not at all disturbed to learn that the inquisitive German, the colonel and his fidgety charges, had decided to proceed to Rangoon by rail. Indeed, there was a bit of exultation in his manner as he observed the vacant chairs. Paradise for two whole days. And he proposed to make the most of it. Now his mind was as clear of evil as a forest spring. He simply wanted to play; wanted to give rein to the lighter emotions so long pent up in his lonely heart.

The pursuer, used to these sudden changes and desertions in his passenger lists, gave the situation no thought. But Elsa saw a mild danger, all the more alluring because it hung nebulously. What harm could there be in having a little fling? He was so amazingly like outwardly, so astonishingly unlike inwardly, that the situation had for her a subtle fascination against which she was in no wise inclined to fight. She was not wholly ignorant of her power. She could bend the man if she tried. Should she try?

They were like two children, setting out to play a game with fire.

She thought of Arthur. Had he gone the length of his thirty-five years without his peccadilloes? Scarcely. She understood the general run of men well enough to accept this fact. Whom ever she married she was never going to worry him with questions regarding his bachelor life. Nor did she propose to be questioned about her own past. Besides, she hadn't married Arthur yet; she had only promised to. And such promises were sometimes sensibly broken. These thoughts flashed through her mind, disconnectedly, while she talked and laughed.

It never occurred to her to have Martha moved up from the foot of the table. Once or twice she stole a glance at the woman who had in the olden days dandled her on her knees. The glance was a mixture of guilt and mischief, like a child's. But the glance had not the power to attract Martha's eyes. Martha felt the glances as surely as if she had lifted her eyes to meet them. She held her peace. She had not been brought along as Elsa's guardian. Elsa was not self-willed but strong-willed, and Martha realized that any interference would result in estrangement. In fact, Martha beheld in Warrington a real menace. The extraordinary resemblance would naturally appeal to Elsa, with what results she could only imagine. Later she asked Elsa if she had told Warrington of the remarkable resemblance.

"Mercy no! And what is more, I do not want him to know. Men are vain as a rule, and I should not like to hurt his vanity by telling him that I sought his acquaintance simply because he might easily have been Arthur Ellison's twin brother."

"The man you are engaged to marry."

"Well, Martha?"

"I beg your pardon, Elsa; but the stranger terrifies me. He is something uncanny."

"Nonsense! You've been reading tales about yogi."

"It is a terrible country."

"It is the East, Martha, the East. Here a man may wear a dress suit and a bowler without offending anyone."

"And a woman may talk to anyone she pleases."

"You have been with me twenty years," began Elsa coldly.

"And love you better than the whole world! And I wish I could guard you always from harm and evil. Those horrid old Englishwomen."

"Oh, so there's been gossip already? You know my views regarding gossip. So long as I know that I am doing no wrong, ladies may gossip their heads off. I'm not a kitten."

"You are twenty-five; and yet you're only a child."

"What does that signify? That I am too young to manage my own affairs? That I must set my clock at others' orders? Good so! Putting her arms around the older woman. "Don't worry about Elsa Chetwood. Her life is her own, but she will never misuse it."

"Oh, if you were only married and settled down!"

"You mean if I were happily married and settled down. There you have it. I'm in search of happiness. That's the Valley of Diamonds. When I find that, Martha, you may fold your hands in peace."

"Grant it may be soon! I hate the East!"

"And I have just begun to love it."

CHAPTER V.

Back to Life.

The two days between Promer and Rangoon were distinctly memorable for the subtle changes wrought in the man and woman. Those graces of mind and manner which had once been the man's began to find expression. Physically, his voice became soft and mellow; his hands became full of emphasis; his body grew less and less clumsy, more and more leonine. The blunt speech, the irritability in argument, the stupid pauses, the painful study of cunning phrases, the suspicion and reticence that figuratively encrust the hearts of shy and lonely men, these vanished under her warm if careless glances.

If the crust of barbarism is thick that of civilization is thin enough. As Warrington went forward Elsa stopped and gradually went back, not far, but far enough to cause her to throw down the bars of reserve, to cease to guard her impulses against the invasion of interest and fascination. She faced the truth squarely. The man fascinated her. He was like a portrait with following eyes. She spoke familiarly of her affairs (always omitting Arthur); she talked of her travels, of the famous people she had met, of the wonderful pageants she had witnessed. It was not her fault that, with the exception of Martha, who didn't count, they two were the only passengers. This condition of affairs was directly chargeable to fate; and before the boat reached Rangoon, Elsa was quite willing to let fate shift and set the scenes how it would.

The phase that escaped her entirely was this, that had he not progressed she would have retained her old pose, the old poise of which she was never again to be mistress. It is the old tale—sympathy to lift up another first steps down. And never had her sympathy gone out so quickly to any mortal. Elsa had a horror of loneliness, and this man seemed to be the living presentment of the word. What struggles, and how simply he recounted them! What things he had seen, what adventures had befallen him, what romance and mystery! She wondered if there had been a woman in his life and if she had been the cause of his downfall. Every day of the past ten years lay open for her to admire or condemn, but beyond these ten years there was a Chinese wall, over which she might not look. Only once had she provoked the silent negative nod of his head. He was strong. Not the smallest corner of the veil was she permitted to turn aside. She walked fither and thither along the scarps and bastions of the barrier, but never found the breach.

"Will you come and dine with me tonight?" she asked, as they left the boat.

"No, Miss Innocence."

"That's silly. There isn't a soul I know here."

"But," gravely he replied, "there are many here who know me."

"Which infers that my invitation is unwise?"

"Absolutely unwise. Frankly, I ought not to be seen with you."

"Why? Unless, indeed, you have not told me the truth. Where's the harm?"

"For myself, none. On the boat it did not matter so much. It was a situation which neither of us could foresee nor prevent. I have told you that people here look askance at me because they know nothing about me, save that I came from the States. And they are wise. I should be a cad if I accepted your invitation to dinner."

"Then I am not to see you again?"

The smile would have lured him across three continents. "Tomorrow I promise to call and have tea with you, much against my better judgment."

"Oh, if you don't want to come."

"Don't want to come!"

Something in his eyes caused Elsa to speak hurriedly. "Good-by until tomorrow."

She gave him her hand for a moment, stepped into the carriage, which already held Martha and the luggage, and then drove off to the Strand hotel.

He stood with his helmet in his hand. A fine, warm rain was falling, but he was not conscious of it. It seemed incredible that time should produce such a change within the space of seventy hours, a little more, a little less. As she turned and waved a friendly hand he knew that the desolation which had been his for ten years was nothing as compared to that which now fell upon his heart. She was as unattainable as the north star; and nothing, time nor circumstance, could bridge that incalculable distance. His heart hurt him. He must see her no more after the morrow. Enchantment and happiness were two words which fate had ruthlessly scratched from his book of days.

Mr. Hooghly had already started off toward the town, the kit bag and the valise slung across his shoulders, the parrot cage bobbing at his side. He knew where to go; an obscure lodging for men in the heart of the business section, known in jest by the derelicts as the Stranded.

Warrington, becoming suddenly aware that his pose, if prolonged, would become ridiculous, put on his helmet and proceeded to the Bank of Burma. Today was Wednesday; Thursday week he would sail for Singapore and close the chapter. Before banking hours were over his financial affairs were put in order, and he walked forth with two letters of credit and enough banknotes and gold to carry him around the world if he so planned. Next he visited a pawnshop and laid down a dozen mutilated tickets, receiving in return a handsome watch, emerald cuff buttons, some stickpins, some pearls and a beautiful old ruby ring, a gift of the young maharajah of Udaipur. The ancient Chinaman smiled. "This was a rare occasion. Men generally went out of his dark and dingy shop and nevermore returned."

"Much money. Can do now?" affably. "Can do," replied Warrington, slipping the treasures into a pocket. What a struggle it had been to hold them! Somehow or other he had always been able to meet the interest, though, often to accomplish this feat he had been forced to go without tobacco for weeks.

There is a vein of superstition in all of us, don't you know. Warrington was as certain of the fact as he was of the rising and the setting of the sun, that if he lost these heirlooms he never could go back to the old, familiar world, the world in which he had moved and lived and known happiness. Never again would he part with them. A hundred thousand dollars, almost; with his simple wants, he was now a rich man.

"Buy ling?" asked the Chinaman. He rolled a mandarin's ring carelessly across the showcase. "Gold; all heavy; velly old, velly good ling." "What does it say?" asked Warrington, pointing to the characters.

"Good luck and piospelity; velly good signs."

It was an unusually beautiful ring, unusual in that it had no setting of jade. Warrington offered three sovereigns for it. The Chinaman smiled and put the ring away. Warrington laughed and laid down five pieces of gold. The Chinaman swept them up in his lean, dry hands. And Warrington departed, wondering if she would accept such a token.

By four o'clock he arrived at the Chinese tailors in the Suley Pagoda road. He ordered a suit of pongee, to be done at noon the following day. He added to this orders for four other suits, to be finished within a week. Then he went to the shoemaker, to the hatter, to the haberdasher. All this business because he wanted her to realize what he had been and yet could be. Thus vanity sometimes works out a man's salvation. And it marked the end of Warrington's recidivism.

When he reached his lodging house he sought the Burmese landlady. She greeted him with a smile and a stiff little shake of the hand. He owed her money, but that was nothing. Had he not sent her drunken European sailorman husband about his business? Had he not freed her from a tyranny of fists and curses? It had not affected her in the least to learn that her sailorman had been negligently married all the way from Yokohama to Colombo. She was free of him.

Warrington spread out a five-pound note and laid ten sovereigns upon it. "There we are," he said genially; "all paid up to date."

"You go 'way?" the smile leaving her pretty moon-face. "You like?" with a gesture which indicated the parlor and its contents. "Be boss? Half an hour?"

He shook his head soberly. She picked up the money and jingled it in her hand.

"Good-by!" softly.

"Oh, I'm not going until next Thursday."

The smile returned to her face, and her body bent in a kind of kotow. He was so big, and his beard glistened like the gold leaf on the Shwe Dagon pagoda. She understood. The white to the white and the brown to the brown; it was the law.

Warrington went up to his room. He was welcomed by a screech from the parrot and a dignified salaam from James, who was trimming the wick of the oil lamp. For the last year and a half this room had served as headquarters. Many a financial puzzle had been pieced together within these dull, drab walls; many a dream had gone up to the ceiling, only to sink and dissipate like smoke. There were no pictures on the walls, no photographs. In one corner, on the floor, was a stack of dilapidated books. These were mostly old novels and tomes dealing with geological and mathematical matters; laughter and tears and adventure, sandwiched in between the dry positiveness of straight lines and squares and circles and numerals without end; D'Artagnan hobnobbing with Euclid; Warrington was an educated man, but he was in no sense a scholar.

James applied a match to the wick, and the general poverty of the room was instantly made manifest.

"Well, old sober-top, suppose we square up and part like good friends?"

"I am always the sahib's good friend."

"Right as rain!" Warrington emptied his pockets upon the table; silver and gold and paper. "Eh? That's the stuff. Without it the world's not worth a tinker's dam. Count out seventy pounds, James."

Calmly James took sovereign after sovereign until he had withdrawn the "Good God!" He murmured.

required sum. "Gold is heavy, sahib," he commented. "You go back home?"

"Yes. Something like home. I am going to Paris, where good people go when they die. I am going to drink vintage wines, eat truffles and mushrooms and caviar and kiss the pretty girls in Maxim's. I've been in prison for ten years. I am free, free!" Warrington flung out his arms. "Good-by, jungles, deserts, hell heat and thirsty winds! Good-by, crusts and rags and hunger! I am going to live!"

"The sahib has fever," observed the unimaginative Eurasian.

"That's the word; fever. I am burning up. Here; go to the Strand and get a bottle of champagne, and bring some ice. Buy a box of the best cigars, and hurry back. Then put this junk in the trunk. And d—n the smell of kerosene!"

James raised his hand warningly. From the adjoining room came the sound of a quarrel.

"Rupees one hundred and forty, and I want it now, you sneak!"

"But I told you I couldn't square up until the first of the month."

"You had no business to play poker, then, if you knew you couldn't settle."

"Who asked me to play?" shrielled the other. "You did. Well, I haven't got the money."

"You miserable little wretch! The ring is worth a hundred and forty."

"You'll never get your dirty fingers inside of that."

"Oh, I shan't, eh?"

Warrington heard a scuffling, which was presently followed by a low, choking sob. He rushed fearlessly into the other room. Pinned to the wall was a young man with a weak, pale face. The other man presented nothing more than the back of his broad, muscular shoulders. The disparity in weight and height was sufficient to rouse Warrington's sense of fair play. Besides, he was in a rough mood himself.

"Here, that'll do," he cried, seizing the heavier man by the collar. "It isn't worth while to kill a man for a handful of rupees. Let go, you fool!" He used his strength. The man and his victim swung in a half-circle and crashed to the floor.

With a snarl and an oath the gambler sprang to his feet and started toward Warrington. He stopped short. "Good God!" he murmured; and retreated until he touched the footboard of the bed.

World's Debt to Humorists.

Cervantes, the great Spaniard whose epic humor has made the lean figure of a half-crazed knight a synonym for laughter and tears throughout the world, the genius who gave the world in Sancho Panza a comic figure so intensely human that it deserves to rank with Shakespeare's immortal creation of Sir John Falstaff, he, too, had a sermon to preach against silly romanticism and the foolish tales of chivalrous adventures.

Go through the list. The humorist who wrote with the mere idea of affording diversion and with no thought of a deeper message is the one whose work soon grows obsolete. The great artists feel the obligation of their genius. They hold a great instrument in their hands, they use it for nobler ends and their work lives after them.

That Thousand Years

BY HENRY HOLT

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

"This war," said Uncle Zeke, wagging his head solemnly, "is the beginning of the thousand years in which Satan's to rule. I've looked it up in Revelations, and I'm sure I've got it right. Why, the figures correspond exactly. 'Times and times and half a time,' it says."

And he went on to explain the meaning of the mysterious prediction which has baffled all the students of the Scriptures. As Uncle Zeke had a comfortable fortune, we listened respectfully.

"So you see, Henry," he continued, addressing my husband, "if the Holy Book speaks the truth, which I believe with all my heart, the world, as we know it, is coming to an end in three weeks' time at half-past seven in the morning of Wednesday. Seems to me it ought to end on a Saturday night, but that's what the Book says and it ain't for me to reason why. So, as I was about to say, I won't need my money after Tuesday night, except enough to pay the milkman when he comes at seven the next morning, and I'm going to divide all I have between you and Nephew James and Niece Jenny."

Henry and I had a considerable argument after we got home. Of course we realized that, like many old men at his time of life, Uncle Zeke was falling. But we knew that if James Carnigan got hold of the third part of Uncle Zeke's money, and Jenny Myers of the second third, wild horses wouldn't drag it from them when Uncle Zeke woke up and found the world hadn't ended as he expected it to.

"The World, as We Know It, Is Coming to an End in Three Weeks."

"What we've got to do, Henry," I said, "is to stop Uncle Zeke giving his money away, or, if we can't do that, to get him to give it all to us, so that we can give it back to him. He won't last long, anyway, and maybe he'll leave us everything as a reward for our honesty."

Henry thought that was best, and when I met Cousin Jenny on the street that morning the way she looked at me showed me that she was after Uncle Zeke's money. She had a new coat, which made me think she'd been buying it because she felt sure of Uncle Zeke's fortune. And the first words she said confirmed my suspicions.

"Have you heard Uncle Zeke thinks the millennium is coming?" she asked. "I have," I answered, "and likewise that he's going to divide up his money among his nephew and two nieces."

"It's a shame," says Cousin Jennie hotly. "Why, what'll he do when he wakes up and finds it was all a delusion?"

"He'll have just one-third as much money as he had before," I answered. "Well, you spoke the truth there," snapped Cousin Jenny tartly, and walked off in the rudest way.

When Henry came home for lunch he told me that James had been into the store and was trying to get him not to take Uncle Zeke's money. So then I knew that Cousin James had something in his mind too.

"Well, my dear," said Henry to me, "the best thing we can do is to go to Uncle Zeke and try to persuade him to let us take care of his money for him in case he's made a mistake."

Which he did, and I never saw Uncle Zeke so angry in my life.

the very sidewalk we walk on will be made of gold. And the house-fronts will be of rubies and diamonds. 'It's all there,' he says, slapping the Good Book.

He was so emphatic that we couldn't argue with him any more, and reluctantly Henry agreed to accept the third of his capital, which came to seven thousand dollars. He had drawn everything out of the bank and sold out his holdings at a loss, and I tell you it made me gape to see Henry coolly pocketing seven thousand dollars in bills. Cousin James and Cousin Jennie had already had theirs.

"The poor old fellow will have an income of just six dollars a week when we hand this back to him," said Henry to me, as we walked homeward. We put the money in the stocking in the chimney, and after that there was nothing to do but wait. Three weeks went by, and then we all got invitations to be at Uncle Zeke's house on Tuesday night at ten.

When we got there we found James and Jenny waiting in a sort of grim silence in the parlor, with Uncle Zeke holding out to them about Revelations.

"I've made a mistake, children," he says to us. "I wasn't allowing for the difference between American and oriental time. The millennium will begin exactly at three minutes before midnight tonight."

And he showed us a chart of the sky with which he had figured out his theory.

There was a dollar and nine cents on the table for the milkman, which Uncle Zeke had set there because he said that, though gold and silver wouldn't be anything but dross, it was a man's duty to pay his debts.

"Suppose the millennium doesn't come?" suggested Cousin James, about eleven o'clock. His words relieved me, because I had been getting a queer sort of creepy feeling, sitting there and waiting for the end of the world. I thought Uncle Zeke would get mad, but to my surprise he looked quite mornful.

"Children," he says, "I don't mind telling you now that I've had no doubts all along. That was what made me seem so sure. I wanted to show my faith, but somehow I've mistrusted whether it wouldn't be in nine hundred years more instead of tonight. You see, there's a passage in Daniel which seems open to two meanings. But anyway," he says, "it'll either be tonight or in exactly nine hundred years, if you add on another 'times.' I tell you, when it was five minutes before midnight I felt all shivery. And the hand went round to the three."

"It's coming now!" says Uncle Zeke. But it didn't come, and when midnight struck Uncle Zeke banged down his hand on the table.

"Gabriel can't be late," he says, like a disillusioned man. "It won't be for nine hundred years to come, and—and I'm a pauper."

"No you ain't Uncle Zeke," yells Henry, and shoves the seven thousand dollars under his nose.

And, would you believe it?—what did Cousin James and Cousin Jenny do but pull out seven thousand apiece and push it onto the table!

"Why, Jenny!" I cried, "I thought you and James were trying to work up uncle into giving each of you everything, and I wanted to save it from you."

"Same here!" says Cousin James, staring at me.

But Jenny and I were kissing each other so hard that I only saw out of the tail of my eye how Uncle Zeke grabbed the bills and stowed them away.

Yes, human nature isn't so bad as some folks claim.

SEATED ACCORDING TO RANK

Strict Rules Regulated the Positions of the Spectators in the Old Roman Theaters.

When Rome was in her glory and the theater most popular, distinctions between spectators long remained unknown. When distinctions were made the best seats were not assigned to the priests, for the drama had no such religious significance for the Romans as it had for the Greeks, but were set apart for the more aristocratic portion of the community. The orchestra was by law set apart for the senators; later, perhaps after 67 B. C., the first fourteen rows back of the orchestra were, by the law of Roscius Otho, reserved at Rome for the knights, says Art and Archeology. Similar arrangements obtained in Roman theaters outside of Rome, though in a provincial town like Pompeii as many as fourteen rows of seats can hardly have been necessary for the knights. Augustus regulated the whole matter afresh. He confirmed the special privileges already granted to senators and to knights; he relegated the lowest classes to the highest seats and made the women sit apart, likewise in the uppermost places. It is possible that he was sponsor also for the more exact regulations laid down concerning places of honor for magistrates, priests, etc. The seats of highest honor were those on the tribuna. Here the editor and the emperor sat on the right side; on the other tribuna the vestal virgins had their places, and with them the empress.

KIDNEYS CLOG UP FROM EATING TOO MUCH MEAT

Take Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative sues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in uric acid, to no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a "sk child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Suitable Trimmings for Lingerie

EVEN the least expensive of the new undermuslins have been designed with trimmings of narrow, dainty laces and medallions that appear fine enough for handwork. Big, showy patterns prove less attractive to the shopper than more quiet and unobtrusive ones.
The pretty combination which is shown in the illustration given here is an inexpensive, but well-made garment. The bodice is laid in a few narrow tucks at the front and back. At the top a row of insertion is joined to a narrow lace edging by means of a fine beading. The insertion terminates at the shoulders, but the beading and edging extend all around the top and form the strap over the shoulders. This makes opportunity for a narrow ribbon or cro-

Embroidered Cape-Collar and One of Lace

TO be worn with the attractive blouses of crepe de chine, which are such an important factor in spring apparel, many collars have been designed. They are to serve the double purpose of protecting the neck of the blouse and providing quickly adjusted decorative touches. There is a great demand for them, and therefore an endless variety in designs.
The collars in the picture are adjusted to the same blouse. The blouse is of sand-colored crepe worn with a suspender dress of brown broadcloth and plain except for small sprays of embroidery at each side of the front in silk of the same color as the blouse. The lace collar is merely a frill of cream-colored net-top lace, narrowed at the front and stitched into a band. Small covered wires support it about the neck at the sides and back.

The second collar is a novel design made of fine embroidered batiste. It is a high turnover, open at the front and lengthened at the back into a little capelike portion. This is shaped into three panels which terminate at the bottom in three embroidered scallops.
By means of these accessories one may change the neck-dress, freshen up the toilette and get a more or less dressy effect according to the collar chosen.

BEST COLORS FOR THE ROOM

Matter Worthy of the Most Careful Attention, as So Much Depends Upon It.

Pale colors are appropriate for small rooms and for furniture which is light and delicate, while dark colors should be used in large, "architectural" rooms and with furniture which is heavy in build.

The vitality of a color is denoted by its intensity, or its relation to the neutral-gray. Intense colors should be used with restraint, for brilliant coloring is pleasing only in small areas, just as "the flash of diamonds is more tolerable on account of their insignificant size." The ceiling, walls and floor of a room are the background or setting for its furnishings, and should always be neutralized. At the same time, their colors should be kept fresh and clear. Another thing to be remembered is that the lighter the cel-

GOOD THINGS FOR GUESTS.

A delicious little hot dish to prepare for a friend is:

Tomato Rarebit.
—Put a table-spoonful of butter into a saucepan and when bubbling hot add a table-spoonful of flour; when smooth, add a cupful of tomato puree (strained tomato). Cook for a few minutes until smooth, then add a half cupful of grated cheese, and when melted, a half cupful of milk, mixed with a beaten egg. Season well and serve on salted wafers.

Salted Sandwiches.—Blanch two ounces of almonds and cut in shreds lengthwise. Sauté in a table-spoonful of butter until brown. Mix two table-spoonfuls of cucumber pickles chopped, one table-spoonful of Worcestershire sauce and one of chutney, with a few grains of salt. Add to the almonds and cook three minutes, stirring constantly. Mash a cream cheese and season with salt and paprika. Spread unsweetened crackers with the cheese and nuts.

Pineapple Sponge.—Beat the yolks of three eggs and add the grated rind of one lemon with the juice, a half cupful of sugar and a few grains of salt. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until the mixture begins to thicken. Remove from the heat and add two-thirds of a cupful of pineapple and one and a half table-spoonfuls of gelatin, which has been soaked fifteen minutes in three table-spoonfuls of cold water. Set the pan in iced water and when the mixture begins to thicken add one-half cupful of heavy cream beaten stiff and the whites of three eggs beaten stiff. Turn into a fancy mold which has been dipped in cold water and chill thoroughly. Garnish with pineapple and candied cherries.

SOME WHOLESOME SOUPS.

A dish of hot soup is especially gratifying on a cold night or for the beginning of a meal. One should have on hand a few canned soups which may be quickly served when the need arises. Such soups are more expensive than the average housewife feels she can use often, but it is wise to have such a reserve.

The following is a dish which will delight the eye as well as the palate and one which may be used on state occasions for company:

Take two cans of clams or two quarts of fresh ones if you are fortunate enough to procure them. Add enough water to make four cupfuls of liquid. Cook three table-spoonfuls of butter until brown; add three and a half table-spoonfuls of flour and stir until smooth. Pour on gradually the clam water and simmer 20 minutes. Season with salt and paprika, and just before serving add a cupful of rich milk or thin cream.

Vegetable Soup.—Wash and scrape a small carrot, cut it in quarters lengthwise and then in thin slices. Wash and pare and cut a turnip in the same sized pieces. Prepare two good-sized potatoes (there should be a cupful and a half of diced potatoes) and a half cupful of celery. Peel and slice one-half onion. Mix all the vegetables except the potatoes and cook in four table-spoonfuls of hot fat, stirring constantly. Add the potatoes; cover and cook two minutes; then add one quart of fresh boiling water and simmer an hour. Beat with a spoon to make smooth and serve with a bit of parsley butter on top of each soup dish. Season well before faking up.

Cream of Tomato Soup.—Cook a half can of tomatoes with four cloves, a slice of onion and two table-spoonfuls of chopped green pepper, which has been cooked five minutes in a table-spoonful of butter and a table-spoonful of sugar. Season with salt and red pepper. Strain after cooking 15 minutes and add a fourth of a table-spoonful of soda, then pour over a quart of rich milk. Blend with four table-spoonfuls each of flour and butter, cooked together.

A Message To Women

Those of Middle Age Especially.

When you have found no remedy for the horrors that oppress you during change of life, when through the long hours of the day it seems as though your back would break, when your head aches constantly, you are nervous, depressed and suffer from those dreadful bearing down pains, don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the safest and surest remedy, and has carried hundreds of women safely through this critical period.

Read what these three women say:

From Mrs. Hornung, Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—"I am writing to let you know how much your medicine has done for me. I failed terribly during the last winter and summer and every one remarked about my appearance. I suffered from a female trouble and always had pains in my back, no appetite and at times was very weak.
"I was visiting at a friend's house one day and she thought I needed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and have gained eight pounds, have a good appetite and am feeling better every day. Everybody is asking me what I am doing and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You may publish this letter if you wish and I hope others who have the same complaint will see it and get health from your medicine as I did."—Mrs. A. HORNUNG, 91 Stanton St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Made Me Well and Strong.

MACEDON, N. Y.—"I was all run down and very thin in flesh, nervous, no appetite, could not sleep and was weak, and felt badly all the time. The doctors said I had poor blood and what I had was turning to water. I took different medicines which did not help me, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong, and I am recommending it to my friends."—Mrs. FRED CHACE, R. No. 2, Macedon, N. Y.

The Change of Life.

BELTSVILLE, Md.—"By the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I have successfully passed through a most trying time, the Change of Life. I suffered with a weakness, and had to stay in bed three days at a time. Lydia E. Some Forms of Rheumatism Curable.

Rheumatism is a disease characterized by pains in the joints and in the muscles. The most common forms are: acute and chronic rheumatism, rheumatic headaches, sciatic rheumatism and lumbago. All of these types can be helped absolutely by applying some good liniment that penetrates. An application of Sloan's Liniment two or three times a day to the affected part will give instant relief. Sloan's Liniment is good for pain, and especially rheumatic pain, because it penetrates to the seat of the trouble, soothes the afflicted part and draws the pain. "Sloan's Liniment is all medicine." Get a 25c bottle now. Keep it handy in case of emergency. Adv.Yes—Many Peoplehave told us the same story—distress

Chelsea have enjoyed an abundance of good music for the past few weeks.
This has been made possible through the installation of a $100 victrola, the gift of the Junto Literary Society of the high school. The pupils are also indebted to Holmes & Walker for a gift of $10 which has been used to purchase the present stock of educational records.In the school rooms of more than 500 cities these machines are now in daily use, giving to the children the wealth of the music of the world.
Thinking people everywhere have lately come to realize the strongly educational value of music. Music, when properly taught, stands for as much mental development as any other subject in our curriculum. No city that studies music, with the exception of literature, is so highly cultural when opportunity is given to use the real music in a really cultural way.The victrola is proving a real missionary to the school children. The world's great artists are brought to their very door. Without these concrete illustrations, music cannot so easily be made vital. We can neither teach nor study musical appreciation without real music to appreciate. It is now possible to take the world's great music into each school room and use it, not only for entertainment, but for actual analytical study.
Now our boys and girls may know the music of the world as well as its poetry, its literature, its history, and its greater dignity when the present supply of records can be supplemented.Mrs. Campbell of Ann Arbor will present her pupils in a recital in the high school auditorium, Thursday,
