J. N. Dancer and A. B. Clark have purchased the business of the Belsier Hardware Co. and the stock is being liquidated and the new owners will take possession as soon as the stock is figured up.

Fred H. Belsier purchased the business of W. J. Knapp in 1908 and has conducted it since that time. The store was established by Woods & Knapp in 1873 and later Woods sold his interest to W. J. Knapp, who conducted the business for many years.

The store has been located on Main street ever since it was established and is one of the best known business locations in Chelsea. The members of the new firm are well known here and are life long residents of this community and both have been engaged in business in Chelsea for a number of years. The Standard wishes the new firm success in their new venture.

Confirmation Services.

Then follows the confirmation proper. The choir will render, Lift up your heads, O ye Gates, by Adams and Faithful unto Death, by Gabriel. In the evening Rev. Schoen's former confirmation classes and others will have a reunion service. Some of the features of this service will be short addresses, instructive papers, class songs, choir numbers, a quatuor and the old familiar confirmation hymn, sung by the congregation, "Stærk uns Mittler."

The following are the members of the class: Carl Louis Bauer, Herbert Fred Sager, Paul Adolph Sager, Roland Fred Wenk, George Gottlieb Zeeb, Esther Agnes Faist, Milda Marie Faist, Rosa Frieda Reule, Clara Emma Wellhoff.

Mrs. B. Keenan.

Word has been received announcing the death on Wednesday, March 24, 1915, of Mrs. B. Keenan, aged 73 years, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. B. B. Rollins, of Big Valley, Illinois, with whom she has made her home for several years. Mrs. Keenan was a resident of Chelsea for many years and is well known to many of the residents of this place. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. H. T. McKone, of Lyndon, Mrs. John Monaghan, of Chicago, and Mrs. B. B. Rollins. The funeral will be held at 9 o'clock Friday morning from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Rev. Father Considine officiating. Interment at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Remanded To Jail.

Baldesano Picciche, of Ypsilanti, with whom Vito Grillo, the slayer of Joseph Gallo, made his home, and who is under arrest at the county jail, was arraigned before Justice John D. Thomas, of Ann Arbor Tuesday morning and charged with aiding and abetting a felon to escape.

In default of $2,000 bail, he was remanded to the county jail. A Detroit attorney called Prosecuting Attorney Lehman by telephone, and notified him that he would be in Ann Arbor to look after Picciche's interests. Sheriff Herman G. Lindenschmitt, assisted by Detroit detectives, is still working strenuously on the case, and the arrest of the guilty man would seem to be only a question of a few days.

Anti-Cigarette Bill.

The Morford anti-cigarette bill, which prohibits the selling or giving of cigarettes, or the "making" of minors, was passed by the house Tuesday morning, 85 to 1, and now goes to the governor for his signature.

The Morford bill was passed by the senate, but the house substituted for it the Hulse bill, prohibiting the manufacture of cigarettes or their sale to anyone, adult or minor, Tuesday morning the house withdrew from its stand and accepted the Morford bill, which fixes a maximum penalty of $50 fine or 30 days in jail for those who sell cigarettes to minors. The maximum penalty for minors caught smoking cigarettes is fixed in the bill at $10 fine or five days in jail.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Happenings in Chelsea Forty Years Ago This Week.

Six inches of snow fell Friday night.

Arthur S. Congdon was appointed street commissioner.

Rev. Hathaway, of Allegan, has been engaged as pastor of the Congregational church.

San Jose Scale.

The following is sent out from the Michigan Agricultural college by L. R. Taft, State Inspector of nurseries and orchards:

The San Jose scale has now become distributed over most of the counties in the southern half of the lower peninsula and has destroyed thousands of trees which the owners had not taken the precaution to spray. On the other hand, where the proper remedies had been thoroughly applied the insects have been held in check and in many cases have been practically exterminated. Where spraying has failed to control them, it is due to using too weak sprays, or from lack of thoroughness in the spraying.

Lime-sulphur solution, either home-made or the commercial brands, is the most effectual remedy for this insect but it must be used at the rate of not less than one part of a 24 per cent commercial solution to nine parts of water; or one part of home-made solution (with the formula 100 lbs. sulphur, 60 lbs. lime and 50 gallons of water) in six parts of water.

Although the application may be made in the fall, or in the spring after freezing weather is over, the best results will be obtained when the treatment is given just as the buds are opening. However, if the trees are badly infested, it is often advisable to spray them in the fall and repeat the application in the spring.

"Scalecide" and some of the other soluble oils are often used with good results but care should be taken not to apply them to peaches, plums and cherries; and upon other fruits a very fine spray, only, should be used. The soluble oils are particularly valuable for fall applications and from the fact that they spread considerably upon the branches, they sometimes give better results than lime-sulphur solution unless pains are taken to cover every part of the trees with the latter solution.

"Soluble sulphur" is sometimes recommended for the San Jose scale. It is not a lime-sulphur preparation but is sulphide of soda, while lime-sulphur is sulphide of lime. We can not recommend this material unless advised by the manufacturers.

Before spraying for the San Jose scale, the trees should be thoroughly pruned, all dead and surplus branches removed and the others headed back. This will not only greatly lessen the labor and material required, but will make it possible to do a much more thorough job of spraying.

When the spring application has been neglected, or has not been thoroughly made, serious injury may result during the summer. Great benefit can be secured by spraying the trees with lime-sulphur solution at the rate of one gallon to 25 gallons of water, when the first brood appears, which will be about the 10th of July, varying somewhat with the season and the latitude. When in the larval (crawling) stage, the insect may be killed with lime-sulphur solution of this strength without doing much harm to the leaves, although care should be exercised to keep the spraying from the foliage of peaches and Japanese plums.

A FEW STRAY EPIGRAMS.

Creative talent is the correct pound. Uncertainty and expectation are among the joys of life.

It is hard to be disappointed in the love of life, it is not a splendid misery.

We all have to depend more or less on people for our happiness or love.

There is much in the eternal fitness of things in a shabby exterior for a shabby character.

When one, in his youth, builds the corner stone of character with the level and the square and is true to the foundation, he will see story by the story of the edifice rise and on it will be written "a man" and when the epitaph is written it will be said, "a good man has died and mankind is the richer for such a life."

We cannot be accused of thinking too much of ourselves. The fact is the majority of us do not respect and reverence ourselves enough. Even in the most secret places we should scorn to do anything that would make us less able to respect ourselves. Socrates, it is said, use to say that there was a man of whom he was terrible afraid and that was Socrates. It would be a good plan if every woman, and we might say every man, I venture to say, in passing a glass mirror or a well polished door handle, to pause and look at themselves in it. It would not be a bad habit if they reason in this way: "If I am handsome I must take care that my character corresponds, if ugly let me be glorious within so that I may compensate for the plainness of my features." In truth let me respect myself.

Much of the attractiveness of a woman depends on the equipment of her vocal organs, physical beauty, a brilliant mind, and elegant manners are not sufficient, to these must be added a winning speech. How often the best of us have been repelled by some person with a harsh, shrill and most unpleasant voice. Well do we remember a young girl invalid, saying of one who was ever so kind and loving, "Oh mama, Mrs. G. is so good but she does tire me so! She is so good, it is wicked to be glad when she is gone!" Poor child it was the discordant voice that was the trouble. The attendant of the sick room should, of all persons, possess a low, sweet rich voice, and this certainly can be obtained by painstaking voice culture. If anyone would properly restrain and quiet themselves and not get into too high a key, they can possibly in a great measure overcome and modulate the voice into a source of pleasure and sweetness.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

WORK IN LOWER HOUSE SHOWS CAPABLE HANDLING BY SPEAKER.

FOUR BILLS PASS TUESDAY

Teacher's Retirement Fund Bill Wins Victory in Senate By Being Passed Safely to Third Reading.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing—With Speaker Charles R. Smith at the throttle the house machine is breaking all legislative records this year for ability to keep abreast of the work sent out by the committees. Never before in the history of the oldest member has the house been caught up at this period of the session and within a week when the ways and means committee has sent in its quota of appropriation bills the house will be ready for adjournment at short notice.

Several conditions have contributed to facility of action. Chief among these is the good work being done by the speaker and the chairman of ways and means, Representative D. H. Hinkley of Petoskey. Also there have been fewer bills introduced and the committees have done valiant work weeding out the unnecessary and holding up the superfluous measures.

The speaker has kept a close eye on the order of business and whenever, as was the case at the beginning of the current week, it gave signs of getting beyond control, he called the house back for extra service. It worked morning and afternoon Tuesday and late Monday night and succeeded in wiping the slate clean.

At the request of Senator Roberts the bill was amended in committee of the whole so that teachers in the state normal colleges may come under its provisions. When it comes up on third reading the fight against the measure will be resumed in the senate and if its opponents are unable to strike out the state appropriation they will make another attempt to have a referendum clause attached so that it may be voted upon by the people of the state before it becomes a law.

Senator Barnes' bill requiring all vehicles to carry lights on the highways at night was beaten by a vote of 13 to 13. Senator Ogg moved that vote whereby the measure was beaten and reconsidered and this was done and the bill placed upon the table.

Senator Roberts' bill requiring charitable organizations soliciting public aid to register with the state board of corrections and charities was passed on third reading.

Senator Murtha's bill requiring groceries and meat markets to close on Sundays was amended slightly and passed in committee of the whole. Summer resorts and lumbering camps are exempt from its provisions.

A bill was introduced by Senator Covert authorizing the township of White Lake, Oakland county, to borrow money to pay certain indebtedness to Charles Skarritt, township treasurer of White Lake township. This bill carries a referendum.

It appears that township funds were deposited in a bank which became insolvent and Skarritt reimbursed the township from his personal account. This bill is for the purpose of reimbursing Skarritt.

Senator Roberts introduced an amendment to the indeterminate sentence law so that application for a parcel may be filed by the pardon board any time within thirty days before the expiration of the minimum sentence, and that the pardon board may authorize the parole to take effect at the expiration of the minimum sentence, contingent upon good behavior on the part of the prisoner.

Beginning early and working late Monday evening, the house cleared up sixteen of the seventeen bills ready on its general order. First of these was the bill of Senator Wood, the blue sky measure agreed to by the attorney general of several states.

The William F. Jerome bill, substituted for the health district bill, was killed and the Callahan bill which makes the Callahan annotated statutes evidence in court also was killed after quite a battle.

The Flowers bill licensing chiropractors was passed by the house and the Daigneau measure eliminating fresh fruits and vegetables from the provisions of the net weight law was passed in spite of a fight by Representative Lewis to exempt grapes.

Representative Flowers and several of the lawyer members fought hard for the Callahan measure, but Representative Follett showed up some glaring errors in the old Howell annotation published by Callahan and the decks were all cleared to beat the measure anyway.

Of the five bills introduced, two sent up by Representative Watkins were the only ones of interest. One provides for the elimination of the ten-day delay in committing habitual drunkards and victims of dope to the asylums. This is to relieve the situation in Grand Rapids now where the Detention hospital is crowded by victims of the dope habit.

The other Watkins measure merely makes the registers of probate juvenile court registers in counties of 50,000 or more. This is the rule today in counties of 150,000 or more.

passed by the committee were of minor importance.

In the preliminary skirmish the supporters of the teachers' retirement fund bill won a victory in the senate Tuesday afternoon as the measure stood up under a terrific fire in committee of the whole and was passed safely to third reading.

Whether Senator Verdier can muster 17 votes in favor of the bill when it comes up on third reading is a question. Proponents of the bill succeeded in preventing the enemies of the measure from loading it up with a referendum clause and Senator Woodworth failed in his effort to have the $25,000 appropriation stricken from the measure.

The fight started in committee of the whole when Senator Woodworth offered an amendment eliminating the clause relative to state aid. He declared that it was not so much a question of $25,000 as the principle involved and he declared that the passage of the bill pensioning teachers would bring forth requests from many others for aid from the state.

After Senator Verdier had explained that during the present generation there was little likelihood that the state would be asked to contribute anything to the fund, Senator Fitzgibbon made an eloquent appeal for the passage of the bill. He pointed out that the work that is done in the public schools by the teachers cannot be measured in dollars and cents and he declared that the state of Michigan should willingly make an appropriation of $25,000 for the purpose of permitting school teachers to retire from active work when their days of usefulness in the class rooms are ended.

This legislature has passed bills making appropriations for the suppression of hog cholera and the foot and mouth disease and has not attached a referendum clause to these bills and there is no reason why this bill should carry a referendum, declared Senator Fitzgibbon.

At the request of Senator Roberts the bill was amended in committee of the whole so that teachers in the state normal colleges may come under its provisions. When it comes up on third reading the fight against the measure will be resumed in the senate and if its opponents are unable to strike out the state appropriation they will make another attempt to have a referendum clause attached so that it may be voted upon by the people of the state before it becomes a law.

Senator Barnes' bill requiring all vehicles to carry lights on the highways at night was beaten by a vote of 13 to 13. Senator Ogg moved that vote whereby the measure was beaten and reconsidered and this was done and the bill placed upon the table.

Senator Roberts' bill requiring charitable organizations soliciting public aid to register with the state board of corrections and charities was passed on third reading.

Senator Murtha's bill requiring groceries and meat markets to close on Sundays was amended slightly and passed in committee of the whole. Summer resorts and lumbering camps are exempt from its provisions.

PRZEMYSL FALLS AFTER LONG SIEGE

STRONGEST FORTRESS IN GALICIA TAKEN BY THE RUSSIANS.

WAS INVESTED THREE TIMES

Great Rejoicing in Capitals of Allies When News of Great Victory Over Austrians is Published.

Petrograd—Official announcement was made Monday that Przemysl, the strongest Austrian fortress in Galicia, has fallen.

The capture of Przemysl by the Russians came after three campaigns, the first of which was launched in September. For more than seven months fighting has been in progress near Przemysl or in the district of which it has been the center.

Przemysl surrendered to the Russian troops when its troops had been exhausted by unsuccessful sorties in which the garrison suffered heavy losses.

The fall of the fortress was received in Petrograd with great rejoicing, according to the dispatches. A Te Deum was sung which was attended by the Czar and the Grand Duke Nicholas with a brilliant royal and military staffs. There is nearly as much jubilation in Paris and London. The sentiment has only been exceeded once in this war and that was over the result of the battle of the Marne.

Przemysl was invested three times during the seven months of desperate conflicts that marked the Russians' operations in Galicia. It was twice relieved by the Austrians, but on their third investment the Russians threw about it a cordon of steel that could not be broken.

Przemysl fell with honor, the British press concedes, for it withstood the onslaughts longer than any place during the war, the investment having begun about September 16, something more than six months ago.

The duration of the siege compared with the length of time it took the Germans to capture such strongholds as Liege, Namur and Antwerp, was due to two causes, one being the desire of the Russians to keep the loss of life among the besieging army at a minimum, the other to the lack of great guns, which the Germans had in Belgium.

The investment was not a close one, the garrison having had up until recently a radius of about 12 miles in which to move about, and some detachments told of shooting expeditions indulged in by the officers of the garrison. An aeroplane post was maintained almost up to the last, and it is said that even some scanty food supplies were carried in this way.

The Przemysl garrison was estimated at 80,000 men last September and last week it was reported that it had diminished to 50,000. There have been recurrent reports of cholera and other diseases, but these were as vague as many of the premature reports regarding its surrender.

AMERICAN WOMAN THANKED BY PRESIDENT OF FRANCE

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY

Paris—President Poincare, with William G. Sharp, the American ambassador, as his guest, went to Jullily Tuesday to inspect the hospital of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

"I want to express my heartfelt appreciation for what Mrs. Whitney and other Americans are doing in France," said M. Poincare, after he had visited all the wards in the hospital, and chatted with the wounded.

The president expressed great admiration for the enterprising spirit that has enabled the Americans to transform buildings into model hospitals so quickly.

The Austrian Tyrol

MARIA THERESA STRASSE, INNSBRUCK

IN many respects the Austrian Tyrol is the most picturesque corner of Europe, says Thomas O'Hagan in the Detroit Free Press. It has, too, a beauty all its own. Its chief city, Innsbruck, which was known by the name of Innsbrons in the days of Caesar, has a most charming situation. The snow-capped Bavarian Alps stand as sentinels at its very gates. This gives it a royal setting. They are God's watch towers—royal watch towers on the earth.

To many travelers Austria makes greater appeal than Germany. In the first place, there is more variety and individuality in its people. Then the proud Hapsburg line reaches so far back and lights up the pages of history with so much splendor and vicissitude of fortune, that you turn from the new realms of the earth to the history-dowered castles of Austria which was great when Guelph and Gibelline contended on the streets of fair Florence.

There is probably not a prouder people in Europe than the Austrians. But, of course, in the Austrian empire are many races—many tongues. The Hungarian, the Bohemian, the Croatian, the Dalmatian, the Pole, the Galician, the Tyrolean—all these differ one from the other. In the Tyrolean the Teuton and the Latin meet, and it is an excellent blending. When you take, for instance, the Teuton of the north of Germany, his character and temperament are too hard and cold and material to attract. Indeed, you cannot find in the Teuton of the north that warmth and radiation which mark the men and women of the Tyrolean valley. The climate, too, in the Tyrol seems to be a blending of Italy and Norway without the extreme tendencies of either. The strength of the north and the tenderness of the south meet at Innsbruck and unite in a pleasing harmony.

Known to Ancients as Rhaetia. The Tyrol as an ancient realm reaches very far in history. Together with a portion of eastern Switzerland the Tyrol was known to Greek and Roman writers as Rhaetia. Horace speaks of "The Alpine Rhaetia long unmatched in fight." The Romans, who were a most practical people, built a road through the Tyrol as a thoroughfare between Italy and Germany. Perhaps the most dramatic episode or chapter in the history of the Tyrol is that which centers around the name of Andreas Hofer. This chapter of Tyrolean history is known as the Patriotic war of 1809. Andreas Hofer is to the Tyrolese what William Tell is to the Swiss and Bruce and Wallace to every Scotchman.

It is the time of the great Napoleon, when his conquering sword gleams in triumph on every battlefield in Europe. In 1805 the Austrians were defeated at Ulm and a French army under Marshal Ney occupied Innsbruck. Then came the battle of Austerlitz, which shattered the power of Austria and the treaty of Pressburg, by which Tyrol and Vorarlberg were given up to Bavaria. In 1806 the Bavarians took formal possession of this new territory. The Tyrol people rose against their new masters, and the figure that stands out in bold relief in this national rising is Andreas Hofer, an innkeeper of Sandylund, in the Passer valley. He forthwith went to Vienna, interviewed the Archduke John, and returned to his home invested with full power as commander in chief of the national forces. This was in the beginning of April, 1809, and so well did Hofer lead his countrymen who flocked to his standard that before the end of April the Tyrol was again free—except the fortress of Kufstein, still occupied by the Bavarians.

But at this moment Austria gave the command of the troops to Chasteler, who, in a few days, lost all that Hofer and his peasant army had won. On July 6, 1809, Austria, vanquished at Wagram, was forced to sign the armistice of Znaim, and in this convention the Tyrol was ignored. Andreas Hofer, however, refused to abide by this convention, and, hidden away in an impenetrable gorge, he sent from valley to valley his call to arms. A price was placed on the head of the rebel, and as is always the case, a wretch was found to betray Hofer's retreat. Four French officers and a battalion of infantry escorted him as a prisoner to Mantua, where he was tried by court-martial and condemned to death. A platoon of soldiers carried out the death sentence, Hofer refusing either to have his eyes bandaged or to kneel down.

Center of Art and Literature. Innsbruck is a great intellectual center. Its university, founded by the Emperor Leopold I, in 1677, is recognized as very strong in the departments of medicine and philosophy. The Jesuits have charge of the theological and philosophical departments. Here it was that the great historian of the popes, Professor Pastor, lectured for many years before he was invited to take a position in the Vatican Library by Pope Leo XIII. Professor Pastor still resides in Rome.

Innsbruck has been a shrine, too, for artists and literary men through the centuries because of the wealth of art, especially bronze statues, in its churches. Its monuments and triumphal arches greet the eye at every corner. The people of Innsbruck, too, are very fond of the drama and a local stock company puts on during the theatrical season many of Shakespeare's plays, translated into German. As you saunter through the narrow streets of the city you are shown many historic buildings. The Hofkirche, with its many monuments, is regarded as the Tyrolean Westminster abbey. The 28 colossal bronze statues—once torch bearers—surrounding the tomb of the Emperor Maximilian I, all have some real or fanciful connection with the house of Hapsburg. They differ in style and merit, two of them—Arthur of England and Theodor the Goth—being of unusual beauty, and ascribed by many critics to Peter Vischer.

In Duke Frederick street there is an inn, the Goldener Adler (Golden Eagle), the oldest in the city, around which centers a good deal of history, for in years ago this house was patronized by all the potentates and celebrities who passed through Innsbruck. Amongst its inmates have been the Emperor Joseph II, Louis I, king of Bavaria, Andreas Hofer, Heinrich Heine and Goethe. I remember well that in company with several students, I once strolled into the Golden Eagle, thinking that perhaps through a "stein" of good Tyrolean beer I might catch something of the infection of the genius of Goethe—did some of his glorious spirit still abide there—but alas! my trial was in vain, for I came away bearing along with me not even "The Sorrows of Werther."

Let me here bid farewell to the glorious Tyrol and its kindly, genial and really good people. In their vales I still hear their yodels and see their children romping in picturesque costume. In the churches and before the wayside crosses I see beautiful testimony that they are people of God."

To Get Rid of a Cold.
If you find you have caught cold in spite of precautions, nip it in the bud. The time to attack a cold in order to cure it is at its very start. At the first sniffle or the first cough begin to fight it. Drink plenty of fresh water, eat lightly, and get plenty of sleep. Before going to bed take a hot bath and drink a hot lemonade. Then cover up warmly and be sure there is no draft between the windows and the door, but have the window open enough to get plenty of air in the room. This treatment will probably cause you to perspire freely, and you must be careful not to throw off the covers and expose your overheated body to more cold.

If this treatment is taken at the start and carefully adhered to, it will probably drive the cold right out of your system. But if you do not treat it at the very beginning it will have to run its course gradually.

Different Styles.
"What did your wife say when you told her that bread was six cents a loaf?"
"She said that it all kinds of loaf were worth that much I'd have a good income."

REALIZE VALUE OF HONEY

Its Sweetening Qualities Seem Never to Have Been Sufficiently Recognized.

Few housewives realize the value of honey, yet in sweetening qualities it surpasses sugar. Grapefruit, for instance, is much enhanced by a treatment with honey. Prepare as you would for breakfast when sugar is used, only prepare the night before. Spread the fruit with a thick layer of honey and let stand till morning. It will then be found that the fruit has absorbed the honey.

Apples baked with honey are another delicacy not too well known. In this recipe also the apples are prepared just the same as though for sugar. For six or eight apples take four tablespoonsful of honey. Mix with one cupful of fine bread crumbs and a half teaspoonful each of cinnamon and lemon extract. Fill the apples, which have been peeled and cored, with the mixture and bake in a porcelain-lined baking dish that has been well greased.

For bread pudding make a custard, using one cupful milk and three tablespoonsful honey and a pinch of salt. Bring to the boiling point and add two well-beaten eggs. Take from the fire and stir till cool, then pour over stale bread toasted lightly and dusted lightly with cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven half an hour.

Spice cake can be much improved by using honey instead of sugar. Cream together one scant cupful butter and one and one-half cupfuls honey. Add alternately two well-beaten eggs, one-half cupful milk, three cupfuls flour in which two teaspoonfuls baking powder have been sifted, one cupful each of raisins and currants and one tablespoonful allspice. Bake in a moderate oven until brown.

USING FRUIT THAT IS SOFT

Various Methods by Which It May Be Prepared in Appetizing Way for the Table.

Any fresh fruit that has become soft should be cooked at once with a little sugar added to make a sauce, or it can be made into jelly.

Any left-over canned fruit may be rubbed through a sieve and used for a sauce. It may be put into ice cream or molded into a cornstarch or rice mixture.

Apple parings and cores should be stewed to a pulp and then strained. This will make a jelly which, spread on apple tart, will greatly improve it. It can also be used for flavoring tapioca pudding.

Orange peel and lemon peel may be used for flavoring sauces and stewed fruits. They can be dried and kept in a glass-covered jar until used.

Stale Bread.
Small bits of stale bread may be slowly dried in the oven until crisp and brittle, then ground in a meat chopper or rolled. These bread crumbs should be kept in a covered glass jar, and may be used for frying croquettes, etc.

Larger pieces of stale bread may be eaten with soup in place of crackers or used to make croquettes for soup (croquettes are little squares of bread fried in fat. They are usually served with pea, bean and creamed soups).

Small pieces and broken slices of stale bread may be used for stuffing, for griddle-cakes, bread omelet and puddings.

Tomato Sauce for Baked Eggplant.
One-half can tomatoes, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful butter, one teaspoonful sugar.

Let these cook 20 minutes. Mix one teaspoonful cornstarch with a little water and add to tomatoes.

Cook two minutes. Strain through a sieve. Mix the yolk of one egg in a saucepan with one tablespoonful cold water.

Add tomatoes, stirring constantly. Return a few minutes to the fire. Heat to boiling point, but do not allow to boil. Add a little cream.

Serve at once.

The Housekeeper's Reminder.
March. This is the month—
To have a thorough housecleaning, not forgetting the cellar.
To start the fight against the fly.
To disinfect for moths, roaches, etc., before the breeding time.
To spread fertilizer on the garden if it was not put on the ground in the fall.
To prepare for the planting in the garden.—Woman's Home Companion.

King's Pudding.
Two cupfuls bread crumbs, one-half cupful suet or butter, one-half cupful molasses, one egg, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half cupful sweet milk, one-half teaspoonful cloves, one teaspoonful cinnamon, pinch of salt; boil or steam like a loaf of brown bread two hours; serve with lemon or hard sauce.

Gustard Pie.
Scald one pint milk in double boiler, two eggs well beaten, two-thirds cup sugar, one teaspoonful flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt; beat all together, stir into boiling milk; line a deep plate with crust; pour mixture in hot. This is a plain delicious recipe.

Boric Acid.
Do not fail to keep a box of boric acid in the pantry. It is an antiseptic. Use when washing your pantry shelves, refrigerator and dish mop and towels.

Advance Styles in Spring Neckwear

ALTHOUGH many of the new spring blouses and dresses are made with high collars, there are many of them that show an open throat. Practically every collar is high at the back and sides, but at least half of them are "v" shaped in front, or may be worn either open or closed.

Two styles appear to be in the running for first place for warm weather. They are the collar of lace or sheer embroidery like that shown in the picture, or the high fitted collar of net or organdie which sets close about the neck, worn with a second collar which finishes the bodice at the back and sides and is wired to stand away from the neck and to turn over.

There is almost no end to the number of designs in which these fancy collars are made. Many of them have cuffs to match and are suited to the blouse or coat.

A narrow frill of lace or net about the throat attached to a band of velvet or satin ribbon is worn with waists having round necks. This is becoming to those with long and slender figures who can wear the high closely fitting collars also. But for the short neck and full throat the "v" shaped opening at the front is altogether best. It lengthens the neck in appearance.

A very smart and new collar is made of sheer organdie and is shaped to fit closely about the neck. At the top

The Parasol Veil.

Another novelty of note is the so-called parasol veil. This is a huge circular veil thrown over the hat so that it falls in equal ripples on all sides. A border of ribbon combined with velvet dots renders this creation a striking one.

Still another new idea is featured in a fancy mesh veiling with a sand-colored kid flower applied, so that it would appear over the mouth when the veiling is adjusted. This style is strongly suggestive of the old time vanity veil.

Lemon Instead of Soap.

By taking a lemon and cutting it in two and squeezing the juice into the dishwater no soap is needed. The lemon will cut all grease and in a few days' time the silver, such as knives, forks and spoons, will become bright as new. All dark spots will also disappear from pitchers and cups. Use the lemon over and over again.

Empire Night Dress, Handmade Trimming

THOSE undermuslins in which narrow crocheted edgings or tatting are used with a little sheer embroidery are very effectively made up after the same patterns as those in which handmade cluny lace is used. All these trimmings are equally durable and will outlast almost any of the sheer fabrics which are favored for the body of these garments. If sewed in by hand they will not be difficult to transfer to a second term of service in new material.

In the night dress shown in the picture very narrow hand-made cluny lace is used in an insertion and edging are used with an embroidery insertion about two inches wide. This insertion is a fine Swiss pattern having tiny single blossoms scattered over the sheerest of batiste.

Three strips of this embroidery set together with the lace insertion form the small yoke at the front, which is made up of one short piece across the front and one at each side, extending to the shoulder seam. The yoke is outlined with the insertion, which serves to join it to the material of the gown. The neck is finished with a narrow edging of cluny.

The short, gathered empire sleeves are finished with a band of embroidery joined to them by the cluny insertion and edged with lace like that about the neck.

The short empire waist of the gown is set on to the skirt, which is simply

THE KITCHEN CABINET

'Tis springtime on the eastern hills; Like torrents gush the summer rains; Through winter's moss and dry dead leaves The blades grass revives and lives. Pushes the moldering waste away And glimpes to the April day. —Whittier.

TASTY LEFT-OVER DISHES.

All bits of ham, whether boiled or fried, should be saved for made-over dishes, as the flavor of a tablespoonful of ham will add to many plain dishes, giving them a pleasing flavor.

Ham Timbales.—Cook together a cupful each of stale bread crumbs and milk until of the consistency of smooth paste. Add four tablespoonsful of butter, one cupful of chopped cooked ham, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of pepper, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs and fill buttered timbale molds with the mixture, set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Remove to a hot serving dish and garnish with hard cooked eggs.

A few tablespoonsful of cooked rice, added to different soups will give them the needed garnish.

Ham Cream Toast.—Melt four tablespoonsful of butter in a saucepan, add the same amount of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, two cupfuls of scalded milk. Bring to the boiling point and add one-half teaspoonful of salt. Cut stale bread in thin slices, remove crusts and toast on both sides, cut in halves crosswise, butter and dip in the sauce. Add a half cupful of cold boiled ham, chopped, to the sauce and pour over the toast.

Pea and Chicken Soup.—Drain a can of peas and pour over two quarts of cold water. Add two slices of onion and three cupfuls of chicken stock; let simmer 30 minutes. Melt two tablespoonsful of butter, add two of flour and when well mixed, pour on the hot mixture, again repeat and put through a strainer. Add a cupful of milk, a few sprigs of mint, seasoning of salt and pepper, and one-third of a cupful of cooked macaroni, rice or vermicelli. Remove the mint before serving.

Chicken Gumbo.—Chop and brown in butter one onion. Put into a kettle with four quarts of chicken stock, one-half a can of okra, two teaspoonfuls of salt, some pepper and half a chopped green pepper. Simmer all together an hour and serve hot.

Hark! the hours are softly calling Bidding spring arise, To listen to the raindrops falling From the cloudy skies, To listen to earth's weary voices, Louder every day, Bidding her no longer linger On her charmed way But hasten to her task of beauty Scarcely yet begun. —Adelaide Proctor.

SOME EVERYDAY DISHES.

When a loaf of bread is stale it may be freshened by dipping quickly in water then put into a paper bag and placed in a hot oven, turn to get an even heat all over and when hot it will be much like new bread. Rolls and biscuits may be warmed in the same way. Doughnuts that have become dry and hard may also be freshened and will be most palatable treated in this way.

Browned Onions.—Butter a baking dish and place the required number of medium sized onions, peeled, in the dish, pour over them a cupful of beef broth, add some left-over bits of cooked sausage, or raw chopped ham or bacon; sprinkle a little sugar on the top of each onion and on this a small piece of butter. Cover with buttered paper and bake for two hours in a moderate oven until the onions are tender. Serve from the baking dish or as a garnish to pork chops.

Meat Balls.—Take four cupfuls of chopped meat. To this add two cupfuls of bread crumbs and four tablespoonsful of flour. Moisten with soup stock or the liquor from the stew until it is about the consistency of croquette mixture. Take half the chopped meat, add to it two level tablespoonsful of strong horseradish, half a teaspoonful of cloves, pepper and salt to taste. Mold into meat balls, cover with flour and fry in hot fat. The rest of the meat may be used for a loaf, adding a bit of celery salt, chopped onion, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and salt to taste with a grating of nutmeg and a pinch of cloves. Form in a loaf and bake forty minutes. This may be served with mashed potato baked with it for a garnish.

A Delicate Mint.
Stranger (visiting the museum)—I see by the notice that accepting tips is strictly forbidden.
Attendant—Surely, sir, surely! (Confidently) But aren't you alone? —Flegende Blaetter (Munich).

Indians on the Increase.
Since 1860 the Indian population of the country has increased materially. There are now 300,000 members of various tribes, compared with 254,300 in 1860. They own lands valued roughly at $500,000,000.

Custom dictates that, as compared with Christmas, the Easter gift shall be but a trifle—yet it shall convey the true spirit of the season—the spirit of goodwill and friendship and kindness. And when to these it adds the personal touch, it conveys sentiment without sentimentality. Between friends—a photograph.

JESUS ON TRIAL FOR LIFE.

PONTIUS PILATE is here represented as presenting Jesus to the heartless rabble at Jerusalem with the words, "Ecce Homo," Behold the man! Jesus had been shamefully used: spat upon, scourged, and jeeringly crowned with a wreath of thorns, but still unsatisfied they cry, "Crucify him! crucify him!" (From the Photo-Drama of Creation.)

PARROT & CO.

HAROLD MACGRATH

Author of 'The Carpet from Bagdad', 'The Place of Honeymoons, etc.'

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a caged parrot, the trio known up and down the Irrawaddy as Parrot & Co., are bound for Rangoon to catch a draft for 20,000 rupees. Elsa Chetwood, rich American girl, is introduced to Warrington and asks the parrot to introduce her. He tells her that Warrington has been a syndicate and sold his all claims for 250,000. Warrington puts Rajah, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and they pass two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is gossip. In Rangoon Warrington banks his draft, pays old debts, and overhauls and interferes in a row over cards.

CHAPTER VI.

In the Next Room.

"Craig?" Warrington whispered the word, as if he feared the world might hear the deadly menace in his voice. For murder leaped up in his heart as flame leaps up in pine kindling.

The weak young man got to his knees, then to his feet. He steadied himself by clutching the back of a chair. With one hand he felt of his throat tenderly.

"He tried to kill me, the blackguard," he croaked.

"Craig, it is you! For ten years I've never thought of you without murder in my heart. Nowell Craig, and here, right here I can put my hands upon you! Oh, this old world is small." Warrington laughed. It was a high, thin sound.

The young man looked from his enemy to his deliverer, and back again. What new row was this? Never before had he seen the blackguard with that look in his dark, handsome, predatory face. It typified fear. And who was this big, blond chap whose fingers were working so convulsively?

"Craig," said the young man, "you get out of here, and if you ever come bothering me, I'll shoot you. Hear me?"

This direful threat did not seem to stir the sense of hearing in either of the two men. Suddenly the blond man caught the door and swung it wide.

"Craig, a week ago I'd have throttled you without the least compunction. Today I can't touch you. But get out of here as fast as you can. You might have gone feet foremost. Go! Out of Rangoon, too. I may change my mind."

The man called Craig walked out, squaring his shoulders with a touch of bravado that did not impress even the plucked pigeon. Warrington stood listening until he heard the hall door close sharply.

"Thanks," said the bewildered youth. Warrington whirled upon him savagely. "Thanks? Don't thank me, you weak-kneed fool!"

"Oh, I say, now!" the other protested.

"Be silent! If you owe that scoundrel anything, refuse to pay it. He never won a penny in his life without cheating. Keep out of his way; keep out of the way of all men who prefer to deal only two hands." And with this advice Warrington stepped out into the hallway and shut the door rudely.

"Pay the pursuer and get a box of cigars," Warrington directed James. "Never mind about the wine. I shan't want it now."

James went out upon the errands immediately.

Warrington dropped down in the creaky rocking-chair, the only one in the boarding house. He stared at the worn and faded carpet. How dignified everything looked! What a sordid rut he had been content to live in! Chance, to throw this man across his path when he had almost forgotten him; forgotten that he had sworn to break the man's neck over his knees! In the very next room! And he had permitted him to go unharmed simply because his mind was full of a girl he would never see again after tomorrow. What was the rascal doing over here? What had caused him to forsake the easy pluckings of Broadway in exchange for a dog's life on packet boats, in a squalid boarding house like this one, and in dismal billiard halls? Wire tapper, racing tout, stool pigeon, a cheater at cards, blackmail and traf-ficker in baser things; in the next room, and he had let him go unharmed. Ten years ago and thirteen thousand miles away. In the next room. He laughed unpleasantly. Chivalric fool, silly Don Quixote, sentimental dreamer, to have made a hash of his life in this manner!

never confess that there had been awkward moments when, being an excellent runner, she had blithely taken to her heels.

In her cool, white drill, her wide, white pith helmet, she presented a charming picture. The exercise had given her cheeks a bit of color, and her eyes sparkled and flashed like raindrops. This morning she had taken Martha along merely to still her protests.

"It's all right so long as we keep to the main streets," said the harried Martha, "but I do not like the idea of roaming about in the native quarters. This is not like Europe. The hotel manager said we ought to have a man."

"He is looking out for his commission. Heavens! what is the matter with everybody? One would think, the way people put themselves out to warn you, that murder and robbery were daily occurrences in Asia. I've been here four months, and the only disagreeable moment I have known was caused by a white man."

"Because we have been lucky so far. It's no sign that we shall continue so." And Martha shut her lips grimly. Her worry was not confined to this particular phase of Elsa's imperious moods; it was general. There was that blond man with the parrot. She would never feel at ease until they were out of Yokohama, homeward bound.

"I feel like a child this morning," said Elsa. "I want to run and play and shout."

"All the more reason why you should have a guardian. . . Look, Elsa!" Martha caught the girl by the arm. "There's that man we left at Mandalay coming toward us. Shall we go into this shop?"

"No, thank you. There is no reason why I should hide in a butcher shop simply to avoid meeting the man. We'll walk straight past him. If he speaks we'll ignore him."

"I wish we were in a civilized country."

"This man is supposed to be civilized. Don't let him catch your eye. Go on; don't lag."

Craig stepped in front of them, smiling as he raised his helmet. "This is an unexpected pleasure."

Elsa, looking coldly beyond him, attempted to pass.

"Surely you remember me?"

"I remember an insolent cad," replied Elsa, her eyes beginning to burn dangerously. "Will you stand aside?"

He threw a swift glance about. He saw with satisfaction that none but natives was in evidence.

Elsa's glance roved, too, with a little chill of despair. In stories Warrington would have appeared about this time and soundly thrashed this impudent scoundrel. She realized that she must settle this affair alone. She was not a soldier's daughter for nothing.

"Stand aside!"

"I despise men," she volunteered. "I am beginning to believe that few of them are worth a thought. Those who aren't fools are knaves."

"Are you sure of your judgment in regard to this man Warrington? How can you tell that he is any different from that man Craig?"

"He is different, that is all. This afternoon he will come to tea. I shall want you to be with us. Remember, not a word of this disgraceful affair."

"Ah, Elsa, I am afraid; I am more afraid of Warrington than of a man of Craig's type."

"We are always quarreling, Martha; and it doesn't do either of us any good. When you oppose me I find that that is the very thing I want to do. You haven't any diplomacy."

Warrington's appearance that afternoon astonished Elsa. She had naturally expected some change, but scarcely such elegance. He was, without question, one of the handsomest men she had ever met. He was handsomer than Arthur because he was more manly in type. What a mystery he was! She greeted him cordially, without restraint; but for all that, a little shiver stirred the tendrils of hair at the nape of her neck.

"The most famous man in Rangoon today," she said, smiling.

"So you have read that tommy-rot in the newspaper?"

They sat on her private balcony, under an awning. Rain was threatening. Martha laid aside her knitting and did her utmost to give her smile of welcome an air of graciousness.

"I shouldn't call it tommy-rot," Elsa declared. "It was not chance. It was pluck and foresight. Men who possess those two attributes get about everything worth having."

"There are exceptions," studying the ferrule of his cane.

"Is there really anything you want now and can't have?"

Martha looked at her charge in dread and wonder.

"There is the moon," he answered. "I have always wanted that. But there it hangs, just as far out of reach as ever."

Elsa's curiosity today was keenly alive. She wanted to ask a thousand questions, but the ease with which the man wore his new clothes, used his voice and eyes and hands, convinced her more than ever that the subtlest questions she might devise would not stir him into any confession. That he had once been a gentleman of her own class, and more, something of an exquisite, there remained no doubt in her mind. What had he done? What in the world had he done?

On his part he regretted the presence of Martha; for, so strongly had this girl worked upon his imagination that he had called with the deliberate intention of telling her everything. But he could not open the gates of his heart before a third person, one he intuitively knew was antagonistic.

Conversation went afield; pictures and music and the polished capitals of the world; the latest books and plays. The information in regard to these Elsa supplied him. They discussed also the problems of the day as frankly as if they had been in an occasional drawing-room. Martha's tea was bitter. She liked Arthur, who was always charming, who never surprised or astonished anybody, or shocked them with unexpected phases of character; and each time she looked at Warrington, Arthur seemed to recede. And when the time came for the guest to take his leave, Martha regretted to find that the major part of her antagonism was gone.

"I wish to thank you, Miss Chetwood, for your kindness to a very lonely man. It isn't probable that I shall see you again. I sail next Thursday for Singapore." He reached into a pocket. "I wonder if you would consider it an impertinence if I offered you this old trinket?" He held out the mandarin's ring.

"What a beauty!" she exclaimed.

"Yes, I give my boy a regular sum for spending money. I find it the best way."

"How much?"

"Fifty cents a week. It seems plenty, doesn't it? He's sixteen."

"Why, yes, I suppose it's plenty. You give it to him every Monday, don't you?"

"No, I deposit it for him every Sunday."—Cleveland Plaza Daily.

"Of course I'll accept it. It is very kind of you. I am inordinately fond of such things. Thank you. How easily it slips over my finger!"

"Chinamen have very slender fingers," he explained. "Good-by. Those characters say 'Good-luck and prosperity.'"

No expressed desire of wishing to meet again; just an ordinary everyday farewell; and she liked him all the better for his apparent lack of sentiment.

"Good-by," she said. She winced, for his hand was rough-palmed and strong. A little later she saw him pass down the street. He never turned and looked back.

"And why," asked Martha, "did you not tell the man that we sail on the same ship?"

"You're a simpleton, Martha," Elsa turned the ring round and round on her finger. "If I had told him, he would have canceled his sailing and taken another boat."

CHAPTER VII.

Confidences.

That night Martha wrote a letter. During the writing of it she jumped at every sound; a footstep in the hall, the shutting of a door, a voice calling in the street. And yet, Martha was guilty of performing only what she considered to be her bounden duty.

Dutchy and Little Doc

By FRANK FILSON

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman)

Nearly all the boys liked the little doc when he came to Sapphires. He wasn't much of a man to look at, but his big head was chock full of learning, and he was as affable and friendly as anyone. The only man who didn't take to the doc was Dutchy, the bully of the camp.

Dutchy was sullen enough and minded of his own business in general, but when he had two or three drinks in him he would start out to find trouble. He generally found it, and, being the kind who picks upon a smaller man by preference, he usually gave better than he got.

The doc was a young fellow, and pretty Miss Lida, old man Pearce's daughter, who had been East to school, seemed to like him well enough. It made most of the boys rather sore to see a pretty, clever girl like that take up with such a little runt. However, that was her business and nobody thought any the less of the little doc for succeeding where so many of the rest had failed. Besides, there was an epidemic of typhoid that fall, and everybody was pretty much scared.

Nobody knew who was going to be the next victim, and the doc was working with might and main to shut off the spread of the disease.

However, he found time to sit for a half hour on Miss Lida's stoop occasionally, and fan himself with a palm leaf. The boys who used to go there and weren't invited so much now used to grit their teeth and go around a block so as to avoid seeing him. But still, it wasn't a case for a personal grudge.

At least, except with Dutchy, who, being naturally a boor, and never having succeeded in making any impression on Miss Lida's heart, set out to be ugly. He used to scowl at the little doc when he met him. But on a certain night Dutchy, having had more than was good for him, felt in the mood for trouble.

Jim Moffat and Phil Duggan, who were seeing him back, at the request of the town marshal, tried to pull him past the stoop, but Dutchy shook them away and stood facing the little doc, who was fanning himself at Miss Lida's side.

"If you're a man you'll come down from behind a woman's skirts and talk face to face!" screamed Dutchy. The little doc came down. Miss Lida let out a cry, but there wasn't anything to be done, for Dutchy was a big man and he could have smashed Phil and Jim with a blow of his fist, to say nothing of the little doc.

The doc came up to Dutchy and looked keenly into his eyes.

"Ha, the furor Teutonicus, I see!" he said to himself, as though summing up the condition of a patient. And then, while Dutchy was still showering him with insults, he caught hold of his hand and felt his pulse, quite in a professional way.

"You'd best go home to bed, Dutchy," said the little doc.

Dutchy stared at the doc in speechless anger for a few moments. Then he shot out his big fist and caught the doc on the mouth, knocking him down and cutting his lip open.

the little doc didn't call on her for a day or two, and next time he dropped in Jim Moffat was there, having apparently been restored to favor. And though Miss Lida was friendly enough with the little doc, anyone could have seen that things weren't quite the same.

For however small a man may be, it is expected that he will do something when he gets a hit across the mouth. Instead of picking himself up and smiling, as the doc had done, and Miss Lida was certainly placed in an uncomfortable position, for no girl likes going with a coward.

Three days after the episode Dutchy's friend Hinkman came running into the doc's office.

"Dutchy's got the fever, doc," he said. "You don't remember what he did to you, doc? He's scared out of his wits, doc, and thinks he's going to die."

"All right," answered the doc. He got up and went round to the shack, in which Dutchy lay upon his bed, tossing and muttering deliriously. It was the last case in Sapphires, but it was the worst. The doc had pulled the rest through without a single disaster, but this seemed hopeless from the first.

During the next three weeks the doc put in nearly all his time with Dutchy. He told Hinkman to call him any hour of the night when Dutchy seemed worse. He persuaded Miss Lida to lend her aid and between them at last they got Dutchy out of the valley of the shadow.

It was an awful time, said Hinkman. Dutchy dimly recognized the doc and thought he was trying to poison him. Sometimes he fought so hard that it was all they could do to keep him from jumping out of the window. The little doc showed a good deal of strength, Hinkman reported, in such encounters.

Finally Dutchy, out of danger, and weighing about one-third as much as he had done, lay on the bed, conscious, and looking up at the doc with a sort of dumb dog gratitude expression.

"Doc," he had the grace to say, "I'm sorry."

"That's all right, Dutchy," the little doc answered, smiling.

The days passed, and evidently the doc had succeeded in squaring himself with Miss Lida, for they sat together on the stoop every afternoon now. And there was not a man in camp but vowed the doc was a white man, and that he would give his life rather than let anyone say the opposite, or lay a finger on the doc again.

Well, Dutchy went North to convalesce, and at last the day came when he stood before the doc, who was still sitting on Miss Lida's porch—being now engaged—and spoke up much less sheepishly, but still sort of ashamed.

"Doc, I've come back and I want to thank you," he began.

"That's all right, Dutchy," answered the doc. "Are you ready now?"

"Ready? For what?" asked Dutchy. "Why, for your thrashing," answered the doc, as if surprised, and he went down. "Put 'em up, Dutchy," he said. "You see, I couldn't strike a sick man, and I knew by your look and your pulse that you were getting ready for a siege with typhoid. But now I'm going to lick you."

Which he certainly did. When it was over Dutchy's face couldn't have been recognized by his own mother. But then we found out that the doc had been the featherweight champion at Princeton.

"Now come along to the surgery, and I'll sew up your wounds. No charge," said the little doc.

Dutchy was the sort that couldn't rest until he got even. He threw the shoe after the wedding and struck the doc behind the ear. That settled all scores.

Proof That Little Dorothy Had Inherited the Politeness Advocated by Her Mother.

Dorothy's mother is a suffragette of advanced type. Dorothy is a dear little girl in a primary grade, but somewhat inclined to copy her elders. One day her teacher received a note from the secretary of the school board, but waited until after class to read it. Dorothy returned for some books and caught tears in the teacher's eyes (the latter had been denied an increase in salary upon which she had based large hopes), and said:

"Why are you crying?"

The teacher laughed and said, "The naughty old school board isn't nice to me!"

Dorothy took hold of the teacher's hand with both hers and said very seriously, "Don't you cry any more. When we get the vote we women will correct such things!"—The Sunday Magazine.

A Misreading.

Dr. Fritz Metzler of the University of Heidelberg said to a heckler in the course of a neutrality lecture in Denver:

"My good friend, you misread me. Purposely you misread me, my good friend. You are as bad as the wife who was disgruntled."

"To this wife who was disgruntled a young bride said, over their afternoon coffee and coffee cakes:

"I am so sad. Gustave is away on a business trip. This is the first time since our marriage that I have been left alone."

"Oh, well, don't worry," sneered the other, "it won't be the last."

"Do you admire the classics?" inquired the student.

"Well," replied the theatergoer, "I don't care much for it in literature, but it's all right in dancing."

MAKE MONEY IN HOME STRAWBERRY PATCH

A New Jersey Home Strawberry Patch.

(By ANNA GALIGHER.)
The strawberry will stand a good deal of ill treatment, but it will not produce good crops under the above conditions.
Any good soil which will bring corn or potatoes will do for strawberries, but if you want berries the size of hen's eggs put the plants in the richest soil you can find and cultivate the same as other garden crops.
If the soil is not rich enough without being fertilized, use well-rotted stable manure. Fresh manure will not do, except as a top dressing; after the plants are well started, spread it between the rows.
I know a man who makes a business of growing strawberries for market whose berries are planted on thin, clay soil.
No fertilizer of any kind is used, and his largest berries are about the size of Gregg raspberries, as a rule. About half the berries are not worth picking.
I believe that spring is the proper time to set strawberry plants.
But if one can procure good, strong plants in the fall, and have them taken up with a quantity of soil adhering to the roots, they will bear a good many berries the following season, but not a full crop.
If transplanted in the fall, without any soil clinging to the roots, the plants should not be allowed to bear fruit the following season.
This is important, because when all of the roots are dislodged it takes a long time for the plant to recover from the shocks and form new roots.
None of the old ever take a firm hold in the ground unless new feeders start, and while the strawberry grows or hibernates all winter, the growth is less rapid when the ground is cold than it is in the spring and summer.
A great many people believe fall, or rather late summer, is the proper time to set strawberry plants.
They take up the plants, or send their order to some nursery man, as the case may be, and handle the plants just as they would in the spring. Now this is all wrong.
Last fall, while we were taking up strawberry plants, with the aid of a dibble and spade, and carefully placing them in boxes and baskets to be transferred to a new location, one of our neighbors came in for plants, which he had previously engaged.
He insisted that all the soil be shaken off the plants. He "wanted strawberry plants, not real estate."
A short time ago, while talking with this man, we had occasion to inquire how his strawberries turned out.
"Oh, we had a few," said he, "but they are nothing like yours. They are not what I expected. In fact, the berries were scarcely worth the picking." I wanted to say, "I told you so," but as he is the sort of man who "knows it all," I said nothing.

No doubt he believes his failure was due to "something in the soil," but, as we experimented a little ourselves, we are fully convinced that it was all in the handling of the plants.
The last week in October is about the right time to transplant, or rather transfer strawberries.
The weather has begun to get cool by that time and the plants are large and strong. We set out 200 extra fine strawberry plants last spring and allowed the runners to form plants until the ground was all but covered. These surplus plants are the ones we will lift this fall.
See that the soil is in good condition to receive the plants. Plow or spade it as deep as the soil will permit.
If a crop of potatoes has just been removed from the ground, it should not need much stirring.
Place the plants in rows about four feet apart and ten inches apart in the rows. Rows may be either single or double, as preferred.
If the weather is dry a little water should be poured around the roots before filling in the soil.
After the plants have gotten a start, hoe or run the cultivator between the rows to loosen the surface before the covering is put on. It is a good plan to cover before hard freezing begins.
Don't cover too deep, because if the air is excluded the plants will smother. Clean straw, free from chaff, makes the best covering.
Anything which holds moisture is apt to cause the plants to rot if there is very much rain.

GROUND GRAIN BEST FOR YOUNG SWINE
Most Satisfactory Gains Made When Fed in Slop—Give Plenty of Pure Water.
There is no way that grain will go further or make more satisfactory gains when fed to pigs than in the ground and made in a slop. It should be finely ground for this purpose and should be soaked at least six hours before feeding.
Do not make this slop so thin that the pigs must drink twice what they need to get a reasonable feed of the meal and don't make it so thick that it won't run readily the whole length of the trough.
Feed them as much of this slop as they need and then let them have access to plenty of pure water and they will drink no more than is good for them.

BENEFITS OF WISCONSIN ALFALFA ORDER

(By H. L. RUSSELL.)
The organization of the alfalfa order of the experiment association of the state of Wisconsin, which now numbers over seven hundred members, has stimulated special interest in its culture, but there are yet many farmers who hesitate to try this crop because they are not familiar with its culture. The plant is doing exceedingly well in Wisconsin and is being rapidly introduced, the present acreage being estimated at over 30,000 acres.
Through the co-operative buying of selected seed, over 50,000 pounds of alfalfa seed (valued at over $9,000) were purchased and distributed to members at a very material saving in price, and a much higher grade secured than would have been possible had it been purchased by individual farmers.
By means of this organization, it has been possible to secure widespread co-operation of the members in making practical trials, throughout the entire state. In 240 trials where it was grown for the first time, successful results were reported in 88 per cent of cases. In the majority of cases where failure occurred, the soil had not been inoculated. Greater success was attained where alfalfa was grown without a nurse crop, although light seedings of grain (not exceeding one bushel per acre) were used quite widely. Reports on winter killing show, that where properly established, it stood as well as clover. As a result of tests of different rates of seeding, carried on not only at the Madison station and the branch stations, but also in co-operation with members of the alfalfa order throughout the state, the agronomy department has found that, as a rule, it is inadvisable to sow less than fifteen pounds of seed per acre on land well prepared and inoculated, and not less than twenty pounds on new land that is first used for this crop.

CONVENIENCE OF MILK CANS
"Shotgun" Can is Easily Covered, Set in Water and Not Difficult to Handle.
Milk and cream from even a few cows can be much more conveniently handled in regular milk cans than in the shallow pans and wide-mouthed buckets commonly used.
These cans may be bought in various sizes. For handling cream and skim milk where separators are used, or even where cream is set to sour for butter making, the "shotgun can," is very convenient. It can be easily covered and set in water and is convenient to handle.
Where even a few cows are kept, a separate room for handling the milk should be provided to relieve the oftentimes overcrowded kitchen. Well houses frequently have a room which, with the addition of a concrete floor, shelves and windows, makes a very convenient milk room.

EFFICIENT RATIONS FOR COW

Where Silage is Not Obtainable Mixture of Alfalfa, Corn and Gluten Meal is Good.
A ration of 12 pounds alfalfa, 35 pounds corn silage, four pounds ground corn and three pounds bran proved most efficient for a 1,200-pound cow producing 30 pounds milk daily at the Nebraska station.
Where silage is not available, the next best combination is 15 pounds alfalfa, six pounds ground corn, eight pounds corn stover and two pounds gluten meal.
Where neither silage nor alfalfa are at hand, feed 12 pounds millet hay, 12 pounds sorghum hay, two pounds ground corn and three pounds oil meal.

KEEPING DAIRY COWS CLEAN

Plank of Plank, Arranged in Sloping Manner, Will Cure Animal of Stepping into Gutter.
Some cows have a disagreeable habit of backing into the gutter and getting their feet full of manure. A piece of plank set about an inch below the top of the gutter next to the cow and sloped to the bottom of the gutter in the rear will remedy this trouble. On stepping on this sloping plank, the cow will slip backwards, causing her to step up. She will forget the habit in a few days, and then the device is no longer necessary.
The plank should not be longer than the length of one stall so it can be removed for cleaning the gutter.

DAIRY

MANAGING THE DAIRY BULL

Allowing Animal to Run With Cows is Not Good Practice—Plenty of Exercise is Urged.

(By G. W. BARNES, Arizona Experiment Station.)

The practice of permitting a bull to run with the dairy cows cannot possibly be recommended. Especially is this true during the breeding season, and with the dairyman who is milking a large number of cows and has a constant demand for milk, it means practically the entire time. A bull kept in a small paddock where he gets plenty of exercise, pure water and food rich in bone and muscle-forming material such as alfalfa, oats and wheat bran, will be more vigorous and give better service than a bull permitted to run with the cows. It is very essential that the bull should have plenty of exercise, which he cannot get if confined in a stall. Where it is impossible for the owner to fence securely about one acre for the bull, he can very easily provide the necessary exercise, by stretching a strong wire between two substantial posts and fastening the bull by chain from the ring in his nose to a ring which slips loosely over the wire. This makes a secure fastening and one which experience has proved practicable.

When kept in this way the bull is also more easily managed. A dairy bull makes a dangerous pet, and should never be so far trusted as to be in a position where he can get the advantage of his attendant. Those unfortunate accidents which have sometimes occurred have usually been due to overconfidence on the part of the attendant.

Cheered Too Soon.
During William Jennings Bryan's first presidential campaign—in 1896, was it not?—a section hand in Lincoln, for years a great Bryan rooster, begged for the privilege of accompanying "the Commoner" on one of his trips. At one stop Bryan got up to speak and declared the cause was growing.

"Hurrah for tomorrow!"

The caller had evidently imbibed rather freely that day.
He took a long look at the teller, smiled a smirking, quizzical smile, then reached into his vest pocket and extracted a fat cigar.
"Shey, old feller," he mumbled, thrusting the cigar between the window bars, "have one on me. Anybody that's as baldheaded as you deserves a treat!"

Some Michigan people know what to do when they get a cut or a bruise. Others are panic-stricken over external hurts which could be healed by a simple liniment, as in the case of Mr. L. H. ENDORSED AT HOME.
Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Chelsea Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Chelsea adds one more to the many cases of home endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

C. H. Stephenson, painter, 548 N. Main St., Chelsea, says: "The secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and contained sediment. I had soreness and lameness across my back. Hearing that Doan's Kidney Pills had done for others, I tried them and they helped right away. The lameness and soreness in my back soon left and my kidneys became normal."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Stephenson had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

Distressing Bronchial Coughs "Hang On" and Weaken.

Foley's Honey and Tar easily raises the phlegm and heals the raw inflamed surfaces.

That tight feeling over your chest, and distressing bronchial cough are usually worse at night, and you lose the sleep you sorely need to keep up your strength.

Foley's Honey and Tar eases that tight feeling and leaves a healing coating as it slides down the throat. The itching, rasping cough and hoarseness disappear, and the phlegm is raised easily and copiously.

There is more healing in one bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Consumed than in a like quantity of any other cough and cold medicine. It heals to the last drop.

W. J. BELLMAN, Clarkburg, Ky., writes: "My boy, 15 years old, had bronchial trouble ever since he was a baby. We feared he would go into consumption. I heard of a similar case where Foley's Honey and Tar Consumed effected a cure, and bought a bottle. My son commenced to improve after the first few doses, and the first bottle stopped his stubborn cough. Foley's Honey and Tar has given better satisfaction than any medicine I ever used. I think this wonderful medicine has saved the boy's life."

You save money when you buy Foley's Honey and Tar Consumed, because just a few doses stop the cough and cold, one bottle has a long time, and the last dose is as good as the first. Get genuine bottles.
