THE NOMINEES

The Republicans and Democrats of Sylvan Held Caucuses Saturday.

There was a large attendance at the republican caucus at the town hall Saturday afternoon. The gathering was called to order by Jacob Hummel, who was elected permanent chairman. O. T. Hoover was elected secretary, and J. W. VanRiper and James L. Gilbert were appointed tellers. The officers were sworn in by Hon. John Kalmbach. There was but one nomination for supervisor, and the clerk was instructed to cast the vote of the caucus for J. W. VanRiper.

The names of Fred G. Broesamle and Paul O. Bacon were presented for the nomination of clerk, and the ballot resulted in a vote of 60 for Bacon and 56 for Broesamle.

Theodore H. Bahnmler was the unanimous choice for treasurer, as also was John E. Walz for highway commissioner.

The names of Harry H. Avery and Jacob Hummel were presented for justice of the peace and the ballot resulted in a vote of 43 for Avery and 38 for Hummel.

William E. Stocking was the only one who wanted the nomination for justice to fill vacancy.

For member board of review, Philip M. Broesamle was the unanimous choice of the caucus.

The names of John H. Smith and George Heydlauff were presented for the nomination for overseer of the highways, and the ensuing ballot resulted in a vote of 50 for Smith and 21 for Heydlauff.

For constables the names of Howard Brooks, Hector E. Cooper, Roy Dillon, Roy Evans and Frank Leach were presented, and the first four were made the nominees.

The chairman named John Kalmbach, Dr. J. T. Woods and Wm. Bacon as the township committee for the coming year.

The democrats of Sylvan held their caucus in the town hall at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. James Taylor called the caucus to order. H. D. Withersell was made the chairman. J. E. McKune was appointed secretary and Manfred Hoppe and J. E. Kuesch tellers. The oath of office was administered by Warren C. Boyd.

There was a fair attendance and the following ticket was nominated by acclamation:

Supervisor—Conrad Lehman.

Clerk—Elmer E. Smith.

Treasurer—William Schatz.

Highway Commissioner—Charles H. Young.

Justice of the Peace, full term—George A. Runciman.

Justice of the Peace, fill vacancy—Frank H. Brooks.

Member Board of Review—Fred W. Notten.

Overseer of Highways—Earl Notten.

Constables—Edward H. Chandler, John Welch, Jr., Harry Savage, Chas. W. Hiebert.

The following were named by the chairman as the township committee: James Taylor, C. Lehman, J. Edward McKune.

Mrs. John A. Messner.

Mrs. John Messner died at the family home on Jefferson street, Friday afternoon, March 26, 1915, aged 74 years, 3 months and 28 days.

Anna Christina Kegreiss was born in Wuertemberg, Germany, November 28, 1840. When she was but an infant her mother died, and her father 13 years later. She came with her three sisters to America at the age of 14 years, living first in Ann Arbor.

She was married in Marshall to John Andros Messner, July 4, 1863, and to this union were born six children, one dying in infancy. Since her marriage she has lived at Marshall, at the farm home in Freedom, and about 17 years ago became a resident of Chelsea.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, Henry of Lyndon, and Charles of Lima, three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Bahnmler of Lima; Mrs. Fred Wellhoff of Sylvan, and Mrs. Gerhardt Lesser of Dexter township, and 12 grandchildren. Also two sisters, Mrs. Charles Nuneman and Mrs. Dora Ehmman of Marshall.

The funeral was held Monday at 1 o'clock, from the home and from St. Paul's church at 1:30. Rev. A. A. Schoen officiating. Interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

George A. BeGole.

George A. BeGole, who for the last 23 years has been connected with the Kempf bank was born in Sylvan, June 21, 1890, and died at his home corner of Summit and Congdon streets, Chelsea, at 12:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, March 28, 1915, aged 55 years, 9 months and 7 days.

Mr. BeGole was a son of William A. and Elizabeth Kanouse BeGole, well known pioneer residents of this vicinity, and most of his life has been spent in this vicinity. He has during his lifetime filled a number of the offices in Sylvan township, served in various capacities as a member of the common council, member of the school board, and has served as president of the electric light and water works commission. He was educated in the Chelsea Union Schools and the Goldsmith commercial school of Detroit, and after he had completed his education he was a salesman in the general store of H. S. Holmes for ten months and from there he accepted an office position in Detroit.

His father died July 7, 1890, and his mother October 9, 1890, and upon her death he returned and took charge of the farm which he conducted for some time. Afterwards he entered into partnership with A. N. Morton and conducted a clothing store in the Hatch & Durand building. When the firm retired from business Mr. BeGole accepted a position in Jackson as a bookkeeper for a short time. He assumed a clerical position in the banking office of R. Kempf & Brother 23 years ago last February and has been connected with the bank since that time. When the bank was organized under the state banking laws in 1898 he was chosen assistant cashier and in 1906 was elected cashier. He has filled the position of secretary of the board of directors of the Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank since its organization. Mr. BeGole was a charter member of Chelsea Castle No. 194, K. of P., and filled the office of Chancellor Commander for 12 years; a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Maccabees, the Brotherhood of the Congregational church and a member of the State Bankers' Association. He was married to Miss J. Dora Sargent, February 21, 1881, and to this union were born two sons and one daughter. June 27, 1908, he was united in marriage with Miss Nellie Potts, of Decatur.

The death of Mr. BeGole came as a great shock to his relatives, business associates and friends and the floral tributes were unusually large and handsome. W. A. BeGole, of Ann Arbor, his oldest son, is confined to his home by illness and was unable to attend the funeral services.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, W. A. BeGole of Ann Arbor, LaMont BeGole of Detroit, one daughter, Mrs. Zoe Weeks, of Detroit, one grandchild, one half brother, Davis BeGole, a resident of Oklahoma, and one sister, Mrs. Dora BeGole, of Marshall. The funeral was held from the Congregational church at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. C. J. Dole officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Those present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Willard BeGole, of Marshall; Mrs. C. E. Criffeld, of Decatur; Miss Dorothy Criffeld, of Albion; Fred Potts, of Dowagiac; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Weeks, LaMonte BeGole, J. R. Kempf, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Chandler, James Baker, James Murray, of Detroit; Mrs. W. A. BeGole, E. G. Hoag, J. P. Foster, of Ann Arbor; Walter Weeks, of New York; Walter and Fred Kanouse, of Saline.

Lima Nominations.

The democrats at their caucus last Saturday afternoon placed the following in nomination for the township officers: Supervisor, Fred C. Halst; clerk, David E. Beach; treasurer, Eugene Frey; highway commissioner, George E. Halst; justice of the peace, Emanuel J. Feldkamp; member board review, John Lucht.

The republicans held their caucus in the town hall last Saturday afternoon and placed the following ticket in nomination: Supervisor, Alvin D. Baldwin; clerk, Frank E. Storms; treasurer, William G. Luick; highway commissioner, Wallace W. Patterson; justice of the peace, John Finkbeiner; member board review Samuel W. Tucker.

THE RAILROADS ARE NEEEDY

SO COMMISSIONER CUNNINGHAM THINKS AND STANDS PAT ON HIS INTERVIEW.

PUZZLED THE COMMITTEE

The So-called "Slush Fund" Inquiry Develops Little at Present That Is Startling.

Lansing—Railroad Commissioner Charles S. Cunningham, of Detroit, was the star witness in the rate scandal investigation which is being conducted by the joint committee of the senate and house, and his very frankness apparently made him an enigma to the board of inquiry.

Commissioner Cunningham, who is under fire because a Lansing newspaper printed a full-page advertisement, paid for by the companies, in which the commissioner stanchly upheld the railroads' appeal for higher rates, declared himself responsible for the text of the advertisement in virtually every particular. He expected only that portion in which he is quoted as saying that he made the statement as a state official. But he insisted that when he gave it he did not know the interview was to be used as advertising. This statement was substantiated by the testimony of every witness who was present when the interview was given.

Commissioner Cunningham did not budge an inch from his opinion as advertised when the committee grilled him, and he insisted that he believed the railroads were entitled to the increase asked; that the railroads' figures as submitted were correct, and that a refusal by the legislature to grant the raise in fares would be unfortunate for the state and its people.

Three members of the investigating committee in particular—Senator Fred Woodworth and Representatives Newell Smith and William H. Moore—quizzed Mr. Cunningham to the point of boredom, and wandered so far from the point at issue as to cause spectators to yawn openly. At the request of Chairman James Murtha, the investigation was adjourned after Mr. Cunningham's testimony was taken.

SLAYS HIMSELF WITH RAZOR

Contractor Attempts to Kill Family in Fit of Insanity.

Ann Arbor—Fred J. Helber, a prominent contractor here, cut his throat with a razor early Friday morning after he had been foiled in an attempt to kill his wife and two children.

Helber is believed to have suddenly gone insane for he had been despondent for weeks following a nervous breakdown over the loss of a suit for six feet of land.

The suit involved only a few hundred dollars and was against Emilie Meehlic, a local undertaker.

Births and Deaths for February.

Lansing—There were 3,176 deaths reported to the department of state as having occurred during February. This number corresponds to an annual death rate of 13.6 per 1,000 estimated population. A decrease of 61 deaths is noted as compared with the month preceding.

Important causes of death were as follows: Tuberculosis of lungs, 183; other tuberculosis, 27; pneumonia, 333; cancer, 169; violence, 157.

There were 5,711 births reported to the department during the month of February. This number corresponds to an annual birth rate of 24.4 per 1,000 estimated population. A decrease of 193 births is noted as compared with the month immediately preceding.

BANKER SHOT BY BANDIT

JOSEPH G. LORKOWSKI, MANAGER AND CASHIER, NOT EXPECTED TO LIVE.

ROBBED CLUBBED BY CASHIER

Adam Janiezowski, the Assailant, Said He Was Starving, Was Knocked Unconscious By Noj.

Detroit—While the full flow of the business life of the Polish community in the vicinity of Chene street and Medbury avenue swept by unaware, a drama was enacted Monday afternoon in the branch of the Federal State bank at that corner, the manager and cashier, Joseph G. Lorkowski, of 1298 Chene street, being shot down by a bandit, who a few moments later was knocked unconscious and captured by Leonard Noj, the assistant cashier.

"I was starving," was the explanation given by the robber, Adam Janiezowski, 21 years old, to the police at Grace hospital as doctors worked over his wounded head, closing up wounds inflicted by Noj with the bandit's own gun. "I had to have the money and that was the only way I could see to get it."

A few feet away, in an adjoining room of the hospital, Lorkowski lay on an operating table, while surgeons probed for a bullet from the bandit's revolver which had pierced the stomach and intestines. Lorkowski, the physicians say, has only a slight chance to recover.

Later, when the prisoner was brought before Lorkowski in the hospital for identification, the wounded bank manager said, "I forgive you freely, for I know I am going to die."

DEMAND TAKING OF TRENT

Mass Meeting in Rome Cheers Warlike Sentiments of Speakers.

Rome, via Paris—A large mass meeting was held here Sunday by Italians who favor the taking of Trent, Trieste and Dalmatia. Forces of troops were present to prevent disorders.

A resolution was unanimously passed requesting the government to obtain "by arms, the frontiers of Italy." After the meeting the crowd attempted to reach the Austrian embassy, but was charged by the troops and dispersed. Several arrests were made.

Among those in attendance were senators, deputies and aldermen, and the representatives of more than 6,000 clubs and associations. Several orators made addresses, among them Signor Barsellai, a native of Trieste, who has been deputy for Rome for 25 years.

He was greeted enthusiastically when he said the moment had arrived to take Trent, the key to the north and the door to the Adriatic.

AGED PREMIER OF JAPAN WINS VICTORY AT POLLS

COUNT OKUMA.

Washington—Returns from Thursday's elections in Japan, cabled to the Japanese embassy here Sunday, show that the government party, which favors increase of military strength, will have a large majority in the new house of representatives.

In support of the government there will be 231 members out of a total of 381 in the new house.

The elections held Thursday followed an exciting campaign in the course of which the premier of the cabinet, Count Okuma, made a whirlwind tour of the country in a special train, while wives of a number of candidates made personal visits and appeals to the voters.

NEGRO IS FOUND GUILTY

Charles Kimbrough Is Convicted Of Killing Eight-Year-Old Girl and Sentenced for Life.

Saginaw, Mich.—Charles Kimbrough, negro, was Friday convicted on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the death of 8-year-old Rose Fernier-Laundry. The jury, after being out all night, reached a verdict Friday morning.

The theory of the prosecution is that the girl was attacked by the negro and her body burned in a furnace at a factory near her home, where Kimbrough was employed as a janitor.

Kimbrough was immediately sentenced to the Marquette prison for life. He showed no emotion when the verdict was rendered or when sentence was announced.

Kimbrough put up a remarkable front throughout the case, including his trial, never once weakening or showing the slightest sign of remorse. He went on the stand and told the story of his movements that night, asserting he left the factory before the girl went to the store, and was in a moving picture show two miles from the scene when the crime was committed.

Kimbrough was convicted largely on the testimony of Prof. R. E. McCotter, anatomical chemist of the University of Michigan, who analyzed fragments of bone taken from the furnace and discovered them to be the bones of a child of about the age of the Fernier girl. The Fernier girl disappeared while on the way to a store, a short distance from her home, to buy groceries. Suspicion attached to the negro, whose place of employment she passed on the way home. His arrest followed the searching of the ashes by the police. Kimbrough has served time and has been convicted of several offenses.

Wilson and Taft Officiate

Washington—Laying the cornerstone here Saturday of the $300,000 home of the American Red Cross, erected as a memorial to the heroic women of the Civil War, President Wilson and former President Taft knelt side by side and spread the mortar in which the block will rest.

Members of the cabinet and supreme court, officers of the army and navy, and Red Cross officials attended the ceremony, at which President Wilson and Mr. Taft were the principal figures.

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

The union revival meetings held in a big tabernacle at Howell and which have just closed were the largest of the kind that ever struck that section. They were in charge of Rr. Henry W. Bromley, of Wilmet, Ky. There were 567 converts, a large per cent of whom were men. The financial offerings amounted to more than $2,500.

Clay C. Clark, Ann Arbor railroad agent at Boone who disappeared early last week and who is alleged to have taken $300 of the company's money, was arrested Saturday at Elsie.

Members of the Grocers and Butchers' association of Port Huron have decided to adopt a credit rating system rather than to abolish entirely the credit system. A committee of three has been appointed to compile a list of all customers of grocery stores and meat markets that are "good," and also a list of the "dead-beats."

VILLA AND THE MEXICAN UPLIFT

IS FIGHTING TO GIVE THE POOR PEOPLE A CHANCE TO LIVE.

VILLANEVER WENT TO SCHOOL

Has Done Everything for the American People Living in Mexico; All He Asks They Obey the Law.

Monterey, Mex.—"Panchito" Villa, the man whose list of applied names ranges from "bandit" and "murderer" to the "George Washington of Mexico," is also a prohibitionist. He neither drinks nor smokes.

General Paul Madero arranged for an interview with General Villa in the latter's private car here in the railroad yards. General Madero introduced me, and interpreted.

"I never talk about plans," replied General Villa. "I never say what I am going to do. My fight is simply the fight of the poor people for a chance to live. We want conditions under which children can be educated and brought up to be intelligent citizens."

"I know I am not educated, but education is not everything. Education and civilization takes away from men a few things which books and learning fail to put into them. I don't think that it is a little education that is bad, but rather it is too much education that is of harm. Too much education usually makes for the exploitation of too much ignorance. One extreme takes advantage of the other."

"The Americans have no fight with the Mexican people. We are all human beings just trying to live. It is the interests of capital that are here in Mexico that are trying to stir up the trouble between two people who have nothing against one another. In case of intervention it is not the men behind the interests that will come here to catch bullets but poor people who have no fight with us Mexicans."

"I have done all that I could for the Americans in Mexico. I have given them special trains and guards and free use of the telegraph and all the accommodations in my power during times when they felt they were in danger. I will continue to do so. All that is asked of the foreigners in Mexico is that they obey the laws and don't try to take everything out of the country without leaving something behind."

"About peace, I can say only that I hope it will be soon. I prefer not to say what I will do and let what I do speak for itself."

U. S. TO GUARD BROWNSVILLE

Three Batteries of Artillery to Proceed to the Border.

Washington—The war department ordered three batteries of artillery to proceed from Fort Sam Houston, at San Antonio, Tex., to Brownsville, for duty in protecting the American city from danger growing out of the artillery battle between Villistas and Carranzistas across the river.

At the same time one regiment of infantry was ordered held in readiness at Texas City, Tex., fully equipped and ready to proceed to Brownsville at a moment's notice.

This action by the war department followed a dispatch from Major-General Funston, in command of the United States forces on the Mexican border, in which he said the situation was serious and that the use of United States troops might be necessary. Fifteen minutes earlier, Secretary of State Bryan had announced the receipt of assurances from both Villistas and Carranzistas that their fighting would not be permitted to endanger Americans on this side of the border.

A dispatch to the state department says when the Villa forces retired at Matamoros, they left 200 dead and 179 wounded and 600 horses on the field after a fight that lasted four hours and a half. The Carranza losses were given as eight killed and 36 wounded.

DAIRY FACTS

LOW TEMPERATURE IS BEST

Churn Should Not Contain More Than Two-Thirds of Its Capacity to Insure Good Butter.

When ready to churn care should be taken not to put too much cream in the churn. The churn should not contain more than two-thirds of its capacity. Much weak and short-bodied butter is caused by overloading the churn and churning at the wrong temperature. Often due to an uneven temperature of the wash water used during the working process. A good bodied butter is usually inspired by a low temperature, but a high temperature is almost sure to cause a weak bodied product.

Sometimes butter is difficult to "gather," especially when a combined churn is being used. The grain of the butter seems to be worn out by the mass of partly gathered butter pounding and pouring over the inside portions of the churn and by the worker, and when the butter is finally worked it is brittle and weak bodied.

Do not have the temperature of the wash vary very much from that of the butter, but if the butter comes at so high a temperature as to make it soft, the wash water must be cold enough to harden the butter, so that it will bear working without overworking or destroying the grain of the butter and giving it a salty appearance.

PAIL AND STOOL COMBINED

Device Recently Invented Acts as Receptacle for Milk and Good Seat for the Milker.

In the dairy where the herd is of any considerable proportions the matter of getting around among the animals at milking time is one of some magnitude and anything of the nature of an innovation, which will facilitate this operation and at the same time make for cleaner milk, will get a welcome. A combined stool for the milker and receptacle for the milk has been recently invented with this object. A can somewhat larger than a bucket is supported on four legs and reinforced for the purpose of supporting the weight which it is called upon to do. The top is covered and the lid acts as a seat for the operator.

Pail and Seat Combined.

Introduced near the top is a funnel arrangement having an outlet spout and an inlet opening. As the milk is drawn from the cow it flows into the can through this funnel extension. This apparatus relieves the dairyman of the necessity of carrying both the stool and milk can, as he must do under ordinary circumstances and at the same time the milk passing so directly from the source of supply to the can, the possibilities of contamination are greatly reduced.

AVERAGE PRODUCT OF A COW

Two Hundred and Forty Pounds of Butterfat Should Be Produced in Year From Animal.

A good dairy animal should produce 240 pounds of butterfat a year. If she produces a milk testing five per cent fat her production of milk must be 5,000 pounds. If the milk is four per cent it is equivalent to 6,000 pounds and if three per cent to 8,000 pounds.

If the cow is dry six weeks out of the year her daily average of butterfat will be about three-fourths of a pound.

If the herd can be made to average this amount daily it is an excellent record to maintain. There are herds that will average more than this, but they are few and far between.

Dairy vs. Poultry. The cows will return money, or its equivalent, each day in the year, and in a way it will be less worry than to get it from poultry. A cow isn't as easy to stop in her milk flow as a hen is to stop in her egg flow, nor is she as hard to get back to the normal. The money invested is much greater, so this offset that to some extent.

Worthy of Patience. It requires lots of patience with some heifers, but if they are promising, they are worth it.

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a caged parrot, the bird known as Parrot & Co., are bound for Rangoon to cash a draft for $50,000 rupees. The Chetwood, rich American girl tourist, sees Warrington and asks the parrot to introduce her. He tells her that Warrington has beaten a syndicate and sold his oil claims for $250,000. Warrington puts Rajah, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and they pass two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is gossip in Rangoon. Warrington banks his draft, says old debts and overhauls and enters in a row over cards, finds that the row is caused by an enemy, Newell, and threatens to shoot him unless he leaves town. Elsa is annoyed by Craig and stabs him with a hatpin. Warrington bids Elsa good-by.

That there was real danger in her interest in Warrington did not occur to her. The fact that she was now willing to marry Arthur, without analyzing the causes that had brought her to this decision, should have warned her that she was dimly afraid of the stranger. Her glance fell upon the mandarin's ring. She twisted it round undecidedly. Should she wear it or put it away? The question remained suspended. She saw Craig coming aboard, and she hid her face behind her magazine. Upon second thought she let the magazine fall. She was quite confident that that chapter was closed. Craig might be a scoundrel, but he was no fool.

A sharp blast from the tender's whistle drew her attention to the gangplank. The last man to come aboard was Warrington. He immediately sought James; and they stood together chatting until the tender drew up alongside the steamer of the British-India line. The two men shook hands finally. Warrington added a friendly pat on the Eurasian's shoulder. No one would have suspected that the white man and his dark companion had been "shipmates," in good times and in bad, for nearly a decade. Elsa, watching them from her secure nook, admired the lack of effusiveness. The dignity of the parting told her of the depth of feeling.

An hour later they were heading for the delta. Elsa amused herself by casting bits of bread to the gulls. Always they caught it on the wing, no matter in what direction she threw it. Sometimes one would wing up to her very hand for charity. Its coral feet stretched out to meet the quick back-play of the wings, its cry shallow and plaintive and world-lonely.

Suddenly she became aware of a presence at her side.

A voice said: "It was not quite fair of you."

"What wasn't?" without turning her head. She brushed her hands free of the crumbs.

"You should have let me know that you were going to sail on this boat."

"Why?" started at her insight.

"Because you are a little afraid of me." She faced him, without a smile either on her lips or in her eyes. Aren't you?"

"Yes. I am afraid of all things I do not quite understand."

"There is not the least need in the world, Mr. Warrington. I am quite harmless. My claws have been clipped. I am engaged to be married, and am going home to decide the day."

"He's a lucky man." He was astonished at his calm, for the blow went deep.

"Lucky? That is in the future. What a lonely thing a gull is!"

"What a lonely thing a lonely man is!" he added. Poor fool! To have dreamed so fair a dream for a single moment! He tried to believe that he was glad that she had told him about the other man. The least this information could do would be to give him better control of himself. He had not been out in the open long enough entirely to master his feelings.

"Men ought not to be lonely," she said. "There's the excitement of work, of mingling with crowds, of going when and where one pleases. Woman's lot is wondering and waiting at home. When I marry I suppose that I shall learn the truth of that."

Perhaps it was because he had been away from them so long and had lost track of the moods of the feminine mind; but surely it could not be possible that there was real happiness in this young woman's heart. Its evidence was lacking in her voice, in her face, in her gestures. He thought it over with a sigh. He felt sorry for the man; for it was not possible that a girl like this one would go through life without experiencing that flash of insanity that is called the grand passion.

He loved her. He could lean against her, and his shoulder lightly touching hers, and calmly say to himself that he loved her. He could calmly permit her to pass out of his life as a cloud passes down the sea-rim. He hadn't enough, but this evil must befall him. Love! He spread out his hands unconsciously.

"What does that mean?" she asked, smiling now. "An invasion?"

There was but one vacant chair; and as she saw Warrington nowhere, Elsa assumed that this must be his reservation. She was rather glad that he would be beyond conversational radius. She liked to talk to the strange and lonely man, but she preferred to be alone with him when she did so.

She began as of old to study carefully the faces of the diners and to speculate as to their characters and occupations. Her negligent observation roved from the pompous captain down to the dark picturesque face of the man Craig. Upon him her glance, a mixture of contempt and curiosity, rested. If he behaved himself and made no attempt to speak to her, she was willing to declare a truce. In Rangoon the man had been drunk, but on the Irrawaddy boat he had been sober enough. Craig kept his eyes directed upon his food and did not offer her even a furtive glance.

He was not in a happy state of mind. He had taken passage the last moment to avoid meeting again the one man he feared. For ten years this man had been reckoned among the lost. Many believed him dead, and Craig had wished it rather than believed. And then, to meet him face to face in that sordid boarding house had shaken the cool nerve of the gambler. He was worried and bewildered. He had practically sent this man to ruin. What would be the reprisal? He reached for a mango-stein and ate the white pulpy contents, but without the customary relish. The phrase kept running through his head: What would be the reprisal? For men of his ilk never struck without expecting to be struck back. Something must be done. Should he seek him and boldly ask what he intended to do? Certainly he could not do much on board here, except to denounce him to the officers as a professional gambler. And Paul would scarcely do that since he, Craig, had a better shot in his gun. He could tell who Paul was and what he had done. Bodily harm was what he really feared.

He had seen Elsa, but he had worked out that problem easily. She was sure to say nothing so long as he let her be; and with the episode of the hatpin still fresh in his memory, he assuredly would keep his distance. He had made a mistake, and was not likely to repeat it.

But Paul! He finished his dessert and went off to the stuffy little smoke-room, and struggled with a Burma cheroot. Paul was a smoker, and

Martha's eyes had a hopeless look in them as she asked: "Elsa, what is the matter?"

"I don't know, Martha. I believe I should like to lose my temper utterly. I'm irritable because I do not know my own mind. I hate the stuffy stateroom, the food, the captain. Nothing seems to disturb his conceit. Tonight we sleep on deck, the starboard side. At five o'clock we have to get up and go inside again so they can 'holy-stone' the deck. And I am always soundest asleep at that time. Doubtless, I shall be irritable all day tomorrow."

"Sleep up here on deck? But the men?"

"They sleep on the port side," Elsa laughed maliciously. "Don't worry. Nobody minds."

"I hate the East," declared Martha vindictively. "Everything is so slack. It just brings out the shiftlessness in everybody."

"Perhaps that is what ails me; I am growing shiftless. When I came on board I decided to marry Arthur, and have done with the pother. Now I am at the same place as when I left home. I don't want to marry anybody. Have you noticed that fellow Craig?"

"What will you do if he speaks?"

"I have half a dozen good hatpins left," dryly.

"I hate to hear you talk like that."

"It's the East. . . . There goes that hateful gong again. Soup, chicken, curry, rice and piceallili. I am going to live on plantains and mango-steens. I'm glad we had sense enough to order that distilled water. Come; we'll go down as we are to dinner, and watch the ridiculous captain and his fan-bearer. The punka will at least give us a breath of fresh air. There doesn't seem to be any on deck. One regrets Darjeeling."

Martha followed her young mistress into the dining-saloon; she was anxious and upset. Where would this mood end? With a glance of relief she found Warrington's chair still vacant.

The saloon had an air of freshness tonight. All the men were in drill or pongee, and so receptive is the imagination that the picture robbed the room of half its heat. To and fro the punka flapped; the pulleys creaked and the ropes scraped above the sound of knives and forks and spoons.

Elsa ate a little besides fruit. She spoke scarcely a word to Martha, and none to those around her. Thus, she missed the frown of the colonel and the lifted brows of the spinsters, and the curious glances of the tourists. The passenger list had not yet come from the ship's press, so Elsa's name was practically unknown. But in some unaccountable manner it had become known that she had been making inquiries in regard to the gentleman in cabin 78, who had thus far remained away from the table. Ship life is a dull life, and gossip is about the only thing that makes it possible to live through the day. It was quite easy to couple this unknown aloof young woman and the invisible man, and then to wait for results. It would have amused Elsa had she known the interest she had already created if not inspired. Her beauty and her apparent indifference to her surroundings were particularly adapted to the romantic mood of her fellow-travelers. Her own mind was so broad and generous, so high and detached, that so sordid a thing as "an affair" never entered her thoughts.

As she refused course after course, a single phrase drummed incessantly through her tired brain. She was not going to marry Arthur; never, never in this world. She did not love him, and this was to be final. She would cable him from Singapore.

That night Craig found it insupportable in the cabin below; so he ordered his steward to bring up his bedding. He had lain down for half an hour, grown restless, and had begun to walk the deck in his bath slippers. He had noted the still white figure forward, where the cross-rail marks the waist. As he approached, Craig discovered his man. He hesitated only a moment; then he touched Warrington's arm.

Handling of Striped Materials

It seems that everything is woven in stripes this year, and the frock of gingham for the half-grown schoolgirl may show them as well managed as they are in the visiting gown made for her mother. The handling of striped fabrics is not a particularly simple matter, but when well done the results are something to be proud of.

A good model for a dress of striped material is shown in the picture. It is in every way commendable for the girl of from nine to fourteen years and merits the attention of those who must provide clothes that shall be attractive for girls of the awkward age. One of the strongest points in favor of striped fabrics for children's wear lies in the fact that they allow simplicity and variety at the same time. By the simple expedient of changing the direction of the stripes the trimming is provided of the same material as the frock.

The model shown is so good that it should be followed exactly as it is, by the copyists who use it. The bodice is cut with long shoulders and large arm's-eye, and the simplest of neck openings. In it the stripes run up and down and the slight fullness gathered in at the waist line gives them the right direction. They slant toward the middle of the belt at the back and front. At each side a band of the material, having the stripes running horizontally, makes a neat decorative feature and adds to the shapeliness of the waist. In the elbow-length sleeves the stripes run lengthwise.

The neck and sleeves are finished with an embroidered edging in a simple, well-made design. Pearl buttons, two at each side, and simulated buttonholes of narrow braid, are effective little touches on the front of the waist.

The skirt is moderately full with panel at the front and plaits at the sides and back. Above the three-inch hem a band of the material, with the stripes running horizontally, gives the skirt a neat finish and a desirable flare at the same time.

The belt may be of patent leather or suede or of some heavy fabric. Altogether, this dress follows many good points in the modes of spring for grownups and at the same time contrives to be prettily childish and very practical. It is meant to be developed in wash fabrics and is easy to launder.

New Combination Garment

A new combination has appeared among undermuslins and has proved a great success in the spring displays. It has appealed to the senses of utility, economy and daintiness, which women exercise when outfitting themselves with summer underwear. This garment is called the "envelope chemise" and is engagingly pretty as well as practical.

To cut the new combination, one has only to vary the lower part of a chemise pattern by sloping the side seams outward to provide for a flare at the bottom. Also the back breadth is cut longer than the front breadth and with a tab at the center of the lower edge. This tab is more or less narrow and is provided with buttonholes which fasten over small, flat pearl buttons sewed to the bottom edge of the front breadth.

This arrangement divides the skirt of the chemise, making it as easy to walk in as muslin or silk pants and giving the appearance of a short under petticoat.

The envelope chemise is developed in nainsook or other thin cotton fabrics and in wash silk or crepe de chine. It is trimmed with the usual lingerie laces. The corset cover, pants and short skirt may be dispensed with when this chemise is adopted, since it takes the place of each of them.

In the picture two developments of this new garment are shown, one with lace sleeves and lace trimmings and the other made with small hand-run tucks at the front, a narrow handmade edging about the bottom and top and finishing the arm's-eye. Any needlewoman can make this chemise and it is a very simple matter to launder it. It is cool for summer wear, for it dispenses with at least one piece of underwear.

Smart Outing Costumes.

For smart country club costumes in Norfolk style there is a new silk material called khaki-kool, which comes in various crisp weaves resembling shantung and rajah pongees and in smart shades of sand, putty, dreadnaught gray and in pearl and oyster white. These costumes are very simple and very smartly tailored with belted coats above wide circular skirts. The natural shade of the khaki-kool is sometimes matched by natural silk stockings; stockings to match the dark and light gray shades are also carefully selected for wear with black pumps or boots. This khaki-kool has a virtue of springing up, however it is crushed, and will, without doubt, be fancied also for summer motor coats.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

I come, I come, ye have called me long
I come o'er the mountains with light
and song:
Ye trace my step o'er the waking
earth.
By the winds which tell of the violet's
birth,
By the primrose stars in the shadowy
grass,
By the green leaves opening as I pass
—Mrs. Hemans.

GOOD THINGS TO TRY.

When a little plain loaf cake seems too stale to serve as cake, steam it, cut it in cubes and serve with the following sauce:
Orange Sauce.—Mix together a cupful of sugar and two table-spoonfuls of flour, add a cupful of boiling water and cook until smooth, then add two table-spoonfuls of butter, the grated rind and juice of a good-sized orange.

Camp Pudding.—Put a pint of stale bread and a pint of milk into a saucepan, soak half an hour, add a half cupful of sugar, one egg, well beaten; a grating of nutmeg, a half teaspoonful of maple flavoring, and bake until the pudding is set in the center. Serve with hot maple sirup.

Cream pea sauce to serve with fish, makes of the plain boiled fish quite an elegant dish. Make a rich cream sauce and add to it peas which have been cooked and put through a ricer. Season well and pour around the fish.

Supper or Luncheon Dish.—A tasty and filling dish which may be served for a hot dish either for noon or night is the following: Arrange slices of bread, well buttered, in a baking dish, cutting the slices in narrow strips, having them, extend an inch above the sides of the dish; also line the dish at the bottom. Beat two eggs lightly, add a cupful of thin cream or rich milk, one tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of red pepper and a pinch of mustard and a half pound of mild cheese, either grated or cut in small pieces. Bake a half hour in a moderate oven.

Banana Pie.—Make a rich crust and bake it in a deep pie plate. Cool and fill with sliced bananas, add a table-spoonful of lemon juice and sugar to sweeten, cover with a thick layer of sweetened whipped cream, flavored with a few drops of vanilla.

Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.
Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones.
—Percles.

MORE GOOD THINGS.

An ice cream scoop is an inexpensive utensil to have in the home and will make the serving of frozen dishes easier and more uniform, as well as more attractive.

A most fetching dish is made in this wise: Cut a peeled banana through in halves, lengthwise, then in halves crosswise. Put two of these quarters on opposite sides of a sherbet cup, sprinkle with a bit of preserved pineapple, add a ball of vanilla ice cream and sprinkle with a pineapple sirup and a few pecans. One may put up their own pineapple and a quart can will serve to garnish many dishes.

Banana Salad.—Put a banana sliced in quarters in a salad dish, add a table-spoonful of lemon jelly, a table-spoonful of chopped heart of celery and a spoonful of mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with strips of red peppers.

A delicious change for serving poached eggs is this: Take a can of tomato soup, when hot drop in the required number of eggs to poach in the soup; have ready some slices of buttered toast, place the eggs on the toast and pour over the soup and serve. Garnish with toast points.

When cooking ham add a cupful of cider after the ham has been browned in a hot frying pan, then simmer for a few minutes. Spread with a table-spoonful of butter which has been mixed with a table-spoonful of finely minced parsley. When cider is not obtainable, apple jelly with water is a fair substitute. Serve with the sauce poured around the meat.

Wagoner, Roland Kothe.

Choral Union Series.

The last number on the Pre-Festival series of concerts in Hill Auditorium, Ann Arbor, will be given on the evening of Thursday, April 8, at which time Madame Olive Fremstad, the distinguished Wagnerian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will appear in vocal recital.

Madame Fremstad comes as a substitute for Leo Slezak, who was scheduled to give a recital early in March, but who, on account of the war in Europe, was unable to keep his appointments in America. Madame Fremstad has been in the limelight for a dozen years and has won a place in the very forefront of operatic and concert song-birds. Her success in New York has been tremendous and when it became known a year ago that she was to devote the present season to concert work, the ovation which she was given in New York became historic.

Madame Fremstad is just now entering the plenitude of her powers and her fame grows steadily from season to season. Her voice is, beyond all question, one of the greatest the world has known. At once powerful, sweet, clear and brilliant, it offers a combination of vocal qualities so rare and productive of such beauty in performance that no set phrases of appreciation and praise can do justice to it.

Patrons of Ann Arbor's May Festivals will recall with great deal of pleasure her appearance at one of the last festivals held in University Hall when she was the star of the season. At that time University Hall was packed to the doors and so great was the demand for tickets that many had to be refused admission.

Change Made In Decree.

Times News: Judge E. D. Kinne, Tuesday, on application of Potter & DeLand and Wilson & Cobb, attorneys and counsel, respectively, of Nathan S. Potter, of Jackson, made certain changes in the decree handed down in favor of Homer C. and May Millen.

Judge Kinne said he was very glad that Attorneys Potter and Wilson who appeared in court had filed their motion for a rehearing, for it gave him an opportunity to correct certain things which had crept into the decree, without his attention having been called to same. Judge Kinne said he had not had the least thought of embodying in the decree interest at the rate of five percent from June 10, 1911, and that he could not enter into question whether the stock under controversy was par or more. He said he would strike from the decree the clause by which, in the event of Nathan Potter not turning over stock of the par value of $661,666.66, judgment against him for that amount was to be entered. Moreover, he considered the time of 30 days for compliance with the order to turn over the stock, as too short and suggested 60 days. In addition, Judge Kinne said that, after mature consideration, he would also change that clause in the decree by which Mr. Potter is called upon to perform certain things in connection with a contract he has with a Jackson bank. Judge Kinne said he had no right to ask Mr. Potter to change his original contract with the bank.

As modified, Judge Kinne's decree means, in effect that the Millen's are to have $66,666.66 worth of stock, without any additional interest and without making the decree enforce a money payment for the value of the stock as an alternative.

The weather man fooled us when he promised "fair and warmer" for the probabilities for last Sunday. The fact is that it was cloudy nearly the entire day, with raw, blustering winds and snow and near rain. If the weather man springs any such gag on us next Sunday, it will be showing wisdom on his part to remain in hiding.

The marriage of Miss Jennie Alice Stedman and Mr. Emory D. Chipman of Lima, took place Thursday evening, March 18, 1915, at the M. E. parsonage in Ann Arbor, Rev. H. L. Rotzel officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Chipman have returned from a short trip and are at home to their friends at their residence just south of the village limits in Lima.

Sources of supply for "dope fiends" will be curtailed even more than under the federal law, known as the Harrison drug act, if a bill now before the Michigan legislature is enacted this spring. Its purpose is further to cut down the opportunities now offered for users of heroin, cocaine, morphine and other prohibited drugs to purchase the stuff.

To give to school superintendents, grade principals, critic teachers and other administrative school officers a somewhat detailed knowledge of the newer ideals and methods in the administration of elementary school work, a short term educational institute was held at Ann Arbor this week. The institute was arranged through the co-operation of the department of public instruction and the regents of the university. Superintendent Hendry of the Chelsea schools was in attendance at the sessions of the institute.

Supt. F. Hendry has declined reelection for the ensuing year. He has been offered the superintendency of the Allegan city schools and also those of Royal Oak. He has accepted the latter position, receiving a three year contract at a substantial increase over the salary he is now receiving. Mr. Hendry has been superintendent of the Chelsea schools for six years, and during his administration has placed the schools on a high level. The many friends of Mr. Hendry and his family, while regretting their removal, will be pleased to learn of his advancement.

The pupils of St. Mary's school are having a vacation this week.

Judge E. D. Kinne, in circuit court Tuesday, ruled that trial of the divorce suit brought by Fred G. Wolff, of Chelsea, against his wife, Mrs. Bertha Wolff, must await such time when Wolff shall have complied with the court's order to pay his wife $2 weekly alimony and counsel fee.

Mrs. Kate J. Taylor, formerly of this place, and a sister of Thomas Wilkinson, died at her home in St. Louis Wednesday evening, March 31, 1915. Her body will be brought here for burial and the funeral services will be held at the Methodist church on Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

At the coming spring election the electors of the townships of Sylvan, Lyndon and Freedom will vote upon the proposition of adopting Chapter twenty-five of the highway laws. If adopted the townships will be divided into four sections and the taxpayers will have an opportunity to work out their road tax if they choose to do so. Lima adopted this law at the election last spring.

Deputy Sheriffs Clarence Jay and David Thomas were asked to resign by Sheriff Herman Lindenschmidt, following an investigation of charges made by Esther McGlade, a young woman prisoner, awaiting trial at the county jail. According to a statement given out Wednesday night by Mr. Lindenschmidt these charges were brought to his attention by Mrs. Elizabeth Bodmer, a county official. Investigations, he said, refuted the most sensational part of the girl's accusations, but convinced him that the deputies had been guilty of disobeying his orders. Deputies Jay and Thomas deny they are guilty of any wrongdoing.

These are welcome heralds at the Easter-tide.

BROUGHT THE JOY
OF EASTER TIME

When the Spirit of Youth Came
to the Girl Who Had the Foolish Thought That
She Was Tired.

EASTER time lay over the land—a time of radiance and music, of birds and flowers. Hearts beat happily in tune to the joy of an awakening
spring, and the golden lily-hearts were reflected in every smile.

It was Easter time, the time of youth and brightness and resurrection
—hardly the time for Weariness to visit the girl; but with head bent toward her he was leaning over her chair, talking softly, persuasively in his ear.

"You're tired," he told her as his old feet (for Weariness is as old as the world itself) beat a tattoo on the worn floor. "You're bored; you want something new."

"I'm tired," murmured the girl gazing dreamily into space—for she did not see Weariness standing before her
—"I'm bored. I want something different from this work-a-day world."

Weariness sat down in the chair
and prepared for a comfortable chat.
He had made a good beginning and
he meant to improve his time.

"You dislike everybody, even the strangers on the street," he prompted
with a thin-lipped, disagreeable smile.
"I dislike everybody that I know,"
said the girl with a defiant stamp of her foot. "I dislike everybody with not one exception."

"You're doing well," he commented
with a chuckle. "I'm proud of you,
girl. You're tired—you're bored. You dislike everybody with no exception.
Perhaps nobody likes you."

"Nobody loves me," echoed the girl;
"not a soul. If I were starving nobody would help me! If I were freezing nobody would help me!"

"Unpopular girl," said Weariness happily, looking across the room at the bright hair and pretty features of his companion. "To look at you no one would imagine it. Your eyes are blue and your hair isn't gray—it's young hair. Isn't it sad that your life should be so tragic?"

"It is sad," again the girl stamped
her foot. "It's more than sad; it's terrible. I guess you'd think so too, if you were me." And she started to cry, head on folded arms, shoulders
shaking convulsively. "I'm tired," she sobbed.

Outside the sun glowed over a world of flowers and springtime. Inside, the same sun, grown dusty, fell on the crying girl and the cynical, world-old
figure seated before her.

The door opened softly and a breath
of air—cool, bracing air—stole in.
The girl, head in arm, did not notice
it. But Weariness raised his eyes to the opening door and sniffed at the freshness of the breeze. And as he gazed a figure came in with brisk,
quick step—the figure of a young man, lithe, and handsome, and smiling. A white flannel bound his crisp black hair to his head, and a pair of white-winged sandals clung to his feet.

Weariness raised himself from his chair and gazed at the newcomer.
Then he turned his eyes away and yawned.

"You're not wanted here," he said.
"Young man. She's discouraged, and tired, and bored. She doesn't want you."

"She does want me," said the boyish
one, "but she doesn't realize it. I am the Spirit of Happiness and Sunshine and Love. Every young person needs me, whether they know it or not. Of course she wants me."

Weariness yawned again and brushed his hand carelessly over his eyes.

"Who are you?" he asked crossly.
The young man drew himself up
proudly, and stood before the bent
form with the radiance of sunlight
shining out of his eyes.

"I," he said, "am Youth!" And he turned swiftly and went over to the crying girl and touched her on the shoulder.

"Friend," he told her, "my friend, I am here with you."

The girl raised her face and looked with tear-stained swollen eyes past the radiant figure. (She did not see him
but she heard his voice.)

"Who are you?" she whispered. "I did not know that I had a friend."

"You haven't," Weariness snapped
from his stand by the chair. "Nobody loves you—you hate everybody."

"I am Youth," answered the young man pleasantly, ignoring the interruption. "And I am not your only friend.
The whole world loves you."

The girl was staring past Youth to Weariness—staring with a hopelessness in her eyes.

"He's right," she whispered. "I hate everybody."

Youth started forward impetuously
and laid his hand on her arm.

"You don't—you can't," he protested. "Think of your school chums,
think of your teachers, think of your church. Do you hate the little laughing babies that play in the sunlight of the park? Do you hate the little lame newsboy with his smile and his crutches? Think of your family—your mother."

The girl wiped her eyes with a fluffy
bit of lace handkerchief, and looked down sheepishly. "I forgot them," she murmured. But Youth was talking again.

"You say that nobody loves you?"
he asked her. "You dare to say that?
How about your Sunday school class,
and your pastor, and all of the people that you love? Don't you think that they return your affection?"

The girl was smiling now. A watery,
nearly happy little smile.

"I didn't think," she cried softly.
Then her face clouded. "But I'm tired
to death. I'm bored," she added.

"Oh," said Youth tenderly, "you're wrong, little girl. Why, you're hardly more than a child yet. Your life has just begun. You aren't tired—I can see a pathway standing before you, clear-cut against the horizon line. I see milestones against that pathway, white, shining milestones. And they are marked 'Happiness' and 'Duty' and 'Achievement' and 'Love.' Yet you say that you are tired and bored."

The girl started up from her seat,
and spoke impulsively, all her tired-
ness swept away.

"Forgive me," she begged, "for talking so. I didn't mean a word of it.
I won't talk that way again. I'm going on—smiling—down my pathway."

Then the Young Man sprang forward and taking her face between his hands he kissed her softly.

"Go," he said, "my friend. Life lies before you, and you have the kiss of Youth on your brow."

Then Weariness slunk away.

HER EASTER
JOY

MISS AMY CARTER
leaped back in the dull
shadows of the boarding-house parlor and
watched the girl at the piano.

The girl had a true
but quite untrained
voice, and she sang in commonplace, soulless
fashion the air of a four-part sacred song.

"Wasn't it shivery and grand where
the bass took up the tune?"
The girl's hands came down on the keys with a crash. She had not dreamed that Miss Amy had come into the room. Most of the boarders did not come down stairs until the tea bell had rung. Miss Amy was almost as startled as the girl. She had been in the house five weeks and never exchanged a word with anyone save the landlady.

"Were you at St. Augustine's this afternoon?" inquired the girl, swinging around on the piano stool.

"Oh, yes," replied Miss Amy, simply.
"I've been there every Sunday since I heard you sang there in the choir."

"I'm sure it is awfully kind of you to say so. I don't do much, you know,
just one of the chorus, but it's $1.50
per, and you meet real nice people,
too. I'd have joined the Musical league, too, only you've got to report
for every rehearsal or lose your tickets for the last concert."

Miss Amy sat like one entranced.
Here was a girl who did not simply buy admission tickets and listen to others. She was in it, in the world of music, from which Miss Amy had always been excluded by the iron key,
marked "Duty."

"How—how do you manage to get into a choir—or a league or anything
of that sort?"

The girl felt flattered as she looked into Miss Amy's kindling face.

"Oh, they're always looking for good
sight readers with fresh, clear voices in the big choirs. Sometimes you get paid, sometimes you don't. I didn't get anything last year. But the easiest way get in is to take lessons from the choirmaster—private lessons."

Then Mr. Weston
will put you in
the choir to jolly
you along, whether you can sing
or not. You're
new to New York,
and you wouldn't believe the grief."

The clang of
the dinner bell
drowned the latter part of the
sentence, and the girl rose abruptly.
Miss Amy followed her down to the dining room, but scarcely knew what was spread before them. What mattered food or drink or sordid landladies or gossiping boarders, when she had found the key to her paradise
at last? Perhaps it was grief—perhaps the girl spoke thoughtlessly.

The next morning very early Miss Amy went shopping. She told the milliner she wanted a brown hat to match
her suit. "No, not a toque like she had
on; something younger," and she described quite accurately the hat which the girl had worn to church the afternoon before.

"I'll wear this," she said, "and you can send the old one home."

Next she went to the nearest drug store and studied the directory. "Weston, Albert, singing teacher, 121 West
—street."

As she left the drug store she spied
a florist's window, and she stopped for a bouquet of violets. Then again
she hesitated. The crisis of this, her new life, was at hand. She allowed three cars to pass, and then, with firmly compressed lips she signaled for a hansom. At the boarding-house everyone said that in New York one must keep up appearances. Perhaps
if he thought she could afford to ride
in hansom he could overlook her social deficiencies.

Albert Weston, worn by his struggles with an indifferent pupil, was standing at the window of his studio
when the hansom drew up before the building and the brown, wrenlike figure stepped cautiously from the vehicle and shot a questioning glance up
the brownstone front.

"I'm glad I took the hansom," commented Miss Amy as she mounted the steps. This was life! An absurd thrill swept over her and brought a delicate
and most becoming blush to her face.

Mr. Weston studied her curiously, hands deep in his pockets, when she asked almost timidly the privilege of studying with him. Prices, hours, everything seemed secondary to the fear that he might not accept her as a pupil. He tried her voice, paced the room a few moments and then said
gravely:

"Yes, I will take you as a pupil, but
I want to be quite frank with you.
You will never be a great singer. You have a sweet, harmless, drawing-room
voice, out I don't want you to go into the work with any idea of being a grand opera singer in time. You have begun too late—too late for that."

Again the delicate flush mounted to her face.

"I understand all that—it is just for my own pleasure. I—I could not study sooner. It is just for the joy of being able to sing for myself."

He stopped short in his nervous
walk and looked at her. Such simplicity, such humility, such lack of ambition, almost staggered him.

"Perhaps some time—when my voice
is a little stronger—you might, that is,
if it would be quite right, you might let me join your choir at St. Augustine's?"

"First vacancy there is," he assented heartily. "What our congregation
likes is a number of sweet, correct
voices. By the time someone gets tired of rehearsals or marries or moves away, I'll have your voice placed and
be glad to take you on."

And so commenced the musical career of Miss Amy Carter, aged thirty-
one, residence a second-class boarding house; occupation, spending a small inheritance which had come to her suddenly after a life of narrow
drudgery and un-
relieved sacrifice.

At first her lessons opened and closed with almost monosylla-
bic conversation,
but in time the
musician relived
beneath the heart
which for years
had almost
starved for music.

It had been
born in her, she thought, but there had been work to do, so heavy that her hands had grown too rough and stiff to play the old-fashioned organ.
There were two invalids to nurse
when the village choir would have been glad of her services. And so she counted her love as dead and buried until the inheritance had come,
and then—

"Well," she said, with a whimsical smile. "I thought I'd come to New York and hear the best music while the money lasted. I would have a taste of real life—what I have heard
people call the joy of living."

Weston smiled to himself. She called this seeing life! And indeed
these days she was quite in a flutter of excitement all the time. Weston had tickets he could not use for this concert and that. Matinees came just when he had pupils, and it was a shame to waste the tickets. He was tremendously diverted by this delicate,
flowerlike woman, who felt that she
was indulging in a mad orgy of music.
He learned to look forward with keen interest to her comments on the concerts she attended. Self played so small a part in her enjoyment. It was always not how she felt, but how the music affected the audience. And gradually he discovered that she had a decided gift of criticism, which was developing under the course of reading
he prescribed for her.

Something he knew, too, that his
pupil of thirty-one had not discovered.
Under the magic of indulging the one great longing of her lifetime she was cheating old Father Time, turning pages back and not forward. The faint color was always in her cheeks
these days, and the voice, rising in her birdlike throat, was fresh as a girl's,
lilting like a lark's in flowered meadows.

And watching her development, the tired man began to wonder what had come over him. He saw his work in a new light. The weight of drudgery slipped from his shoulders. The sense of wasted effort yielded to the infectious happiness of his buoyant pupil.

And so dawned Easter morning over St. Augustine's. Outside the doors the mob of sightseers swayed while the regular parishioners claimed first
right to pews. Then came the hush of strangers, the organist took his place, Mr. Weston raised his hand and the band of white-robed men and women filed into the choir loft. Out to the waiting multitude rolled the waves of a richly balanced harmonies.
A hundred voices, admirably selected, thought the congregation, and
yet to the man who had trained them
there came but a single voice. Her face was uplifted, her eyes dewy and tender, as with futile clearness the wonderful words reached him above
the heads of the
other singers:

"The strife is o'er,
the battle done;
The victory of
life is won;
The song of triumph has begun.
Alleluia. Alleluia. Alleluia.

To the man it
came not as a
pean of triumph
but a message of peace—and she had shown him
the way!

He wanted to tell her now—this minute! The service stretched ahead of him imterminably.

"Alleluia. Alleluia."

His glance caught and held hers. A startled expression flashed over her face. He was answered.

Old Beliefs of Easter.

The stories of the Easter hare,
which children believe is an old tale,
doubtless originating in Germany. In certain sections of France children
are taught to believe that the cathedral bells lay the Easter eggs. That belief has been transplanted to some of the old French settlements of America.

FIRING MISS WANDLE

By GEORGE MUNSON.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)
Miss Wandle might have been thirty-six, and she had been with Rothstein for twelve years. She started in
as an ordinary stenographer, and it was solely her ability and industry
that put her the post of Rothstein's
private secretary, although everyone
could see that Rothstein thought a good deal of her. After I came the firm was turned into a corporation.
Rothstein was president, owning a majority of the stock, and Joe Barnes
treasurer. Clifford was secretary.
Bob Syce was general manager.

Things went on all right until old
Rothstein began to suffer from heart trouble. Then Miss Wandle was always at his home—he was a widower, too—taking notes for him. She would come back and tell Clifford, Syce and Barnes what they were to do. It was that set their backs up. They hadn't had anything against Miss Wandle previously, but they didn't like the old man's orders coming through her.

Miss Wandle was a business woman in the strictest sense. At first the fellows had tried to get gay with her.
She never encouraged anything of that sort. She was cold, keen, calculating business from start to finish,
without as much room for sentiment
as you could insert a fountain pen into. At last, that was the way I sized her up.

About the cabal against her; you know what wretched, truckling kind
of creatures some of us underpaid
clerks are. We knew that Syce, Clifford, Barnes & Co. were "laying for" Miss Wandle. But because we were in mortal terror of losing our jobs,
none of us dared do anything to bring down their displeasure on our heads.

When old Rothstein was taken with one of his bad spells and ordered
south for three months, the cabal
thought it would be time to cut loose
and show Miss Wandle that she didn't amount to anything in particular
about the office.

I would look up from the books
and see the three through the open door of Syce's office, smoking and putting their heads together and glancing in Miss Wandle's direction. And I knew something was brewing.

She came in at nine-thirty and Clifford, who had the big desk in the main office, called her over to him as soon as she had removed her hat.

"Miss Wandle," he said, in an ugly sneering voice loud enough to be heard all over the office, "will you be so good as to look at the clock and tell me what time it is?"

"It is half-past nine," answered
Miss Wandle quietly, though not another woman in the office would have stood for that line of talk.

"Will you remember in future, Miss Wandle," said Clifford, "that our office hours begin at nine? That is the time I come down and that is the time
Mr. Syce and Mr. Barnes come down.
We're not important enough to take an extra half hour, and I guess you aren't."

Miss Wandle nodded and went away
as coolly as though it had been she who was calling down Jim Clifford.

After that the trio set to work to force Miss Wandle's resignation by petty persecutions. I guess they thought the old man was done for.

Miss Wandle always came down
scrupulously at nine after that, so they tried other ways. They found fault with her work. They didn't like her having knowledge of details
of the business of which they themselves were ignorant. It was Bob Syce, however, who hit on the star
trick. He made her take stenographic notes for old Perkins, the head of the stock department.

Everybody expected that she would resign then, but it didn't faze her a particle. They kept her at that just long enough to muddle up the business, and then they recalled her. The next idea that came was to the credit of Joe Barnes. It was masterly.

We were making out the vacation
schedule, and Miss Wandle had put down her own name for the two weeks
beginning with the first of June. It was a little early for vacations, but still, people did go away in June.
Barnes happened to see the list and he called Miss Wandle over to his desk.

"Miss Wandle," he said in his silkiest manner, "I see you have scheduled your vacation to begin on the first of June."

"Mr. Rothstein understood that I was going to take my vacation on the first of June, Mr. Barnes, and I feel that I have his sanction."

Barnes got red in the face.

"Miss Wandle," he said, "you seem to think you run this office. It is necessary for me to convince you of your mistake. You will take your vacation when I—with a thump of his flat—give you permission, or you may draw your salary to date and walk
out of this office."

Miss Wandle smiled. "I shall do
neither, Mr. Barnes," she answered.

For a moment Barnes was staggered. Then he thrust his ugly face close against the woman's—he showed his breeding pretty well then. "Perhaps you own this office?" he remarked.

"I certainly hope to after the fifth
of June," replied Miss Wandle calmly.
"You see, I am going down to Florida to be married to Mr. Rothstein and he is going to give me his share of the stock as a wedding gift."

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Yields To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.: "I suffered for four years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and is day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

CARE NEEDED IN OPERATION OF PRUNING

Correct Pruning Results in Fine Trees Like This Baldwin Apple in Bloom.

(By W. M. KELLY.)

Pruning apple trees may be done any time from late fall until spring. Care should be exercised in pruning to give the trees an open head.

This does not imply that all small side limbs should be removed, leaving a lot of whipticks, but that such of the largest limbs that are parallel and close together, or those that cross, should be cut out. Half of the difficulty of pruning is avoided if one decides to allow the tree to take its natural turn rather than to shape it to some particular model.

Too many fruit growers think that pruning a tree shortens its life. There is little reason for such a belief other than the general statement that it is unnatural to prune a tree. However, nature prunes more heavily than men at all seasons and in the rudest manner.

By this it should not be understood that care is not necessary in the mechanical operation of pruning. It is important that large limbs be removed with great care and the wounds painted to prevent the entrance of fungi which will induce decay.

Avoid all crotches that will have a tendency to split down or break when the trees become loaded with heavy fruits, or sleet and ice. If bad crotches cannot be avoided they should be strengthened with iron bolts to prevent them from breaking and ruining the tree.

INJURIOUS WORK OF A SHOT-HOLE BORER

At Left, Openings in the Bark Through Which Insects Escape—At Right, Burrows as They Appear When the Bark Is Removed.

(By W. O'KANE.)

The first evidence that usually comes to the orchardist indicating the presence of the shot-hole borer in his trees is the dying back of limbs; or the weakening or death of whole trees. As the tree is examined, it is found that the bark is peppered with tiny, round holes, each one not more than the twentieth of an inch in diameter. It is from this characteristic sign that the pest gets its name.

Sometimes the numerous tiny holes are seen in the bark of apparently healthy trees, and in such cases there may be little drops of gum at each hole. This is especially true where peach, plum or cherry are attacked, because of the propensity of these trees to bleed when injured. But if, as is often the case, the tree is weakened or dying when examined, there will be no gum and each hole will be clean cut.

Each of the little round holes represents the point at which an adult beetle cut its way out from the sapwood, where it has been going through part of its life cycle as a small grub. By removing a piece of the peppered bark the characteristic burrows of the grubs will be revealed. It will be found then that there is a short main channel usually an inch or so long, and running more or less in the same direction as the grain of the wood. From each side of this a number of small channels lead off at right angles, gradually enlarging and diverging, and finally wandering about, to end suddenly in a round cell.

The beetles begin cutting their way out fairly early in the spring and soon afterward the females are at work making the brood chambers and laying eggs. In the South there may be four generations in the course of the summer; in the North, probably only three. The last generation remains within the burrows until the following spring.

This makes clear the principal means for fighting these pests—to watch sharply for evidences of their work, and at once cut out and burn the limbs or branches attacked. If an entire tree is infested and dying, it should at once come out and be burned. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the burning of such trees and limbs. If a limb or branch is cut down and is left lying on the ground, the damage may readily be increased. Burn every part of a tree infested with the shot-hole borer and keep the orchard clear of rubbish.

MUCH ADVANTAGE IN FEEDING OF ROOTS

They Push Ewes Easily and Naturally to Strong and Healthy Flow of Milk.

The use of roots is productive of great good to the ewe flock. They are succulent and start a natural milk flow, whereas grain naturally goes more to producing flesh and fat.

There is no danger of the ewe consuming too many roots. They push her easily and naturally to a strong flow of milk that has very healthy properties.

Ewes highly fed on grain often give milk that is injurious to their lambs. Of this there is no danger when roots are substituted in large part for the grain.

The shepherd who can readily grow roots has a distinct advantage over the one who relies upon dry hay and the one who wintering his ewe flock. Most grain for wintering sheep, the ones that our fall shows, come from root-growing regions.

TRUE FOUNDATION OF THE DAIRY COW

Breed Is Simply Care, Food and Environment—Coax Young Calf to Drink.

The feeding of the mother who must nourish and build up the frame and give constitutional vigor to the young calf, is the true foundation of a dairy cow, yet the average dairyman feeds his pregnant cows the refuse of the farm.

Nature's rigid statutes have proved that breed is simply care, food and environment, followed through successive generations, aided by careful selection, until an improved type is produced.

Coaxing a calf to drink is easier than pushing its head into a pail and holding it there. When we wet the fingers and coax its head into the pail, it will soon drink of its own accord.

More milk to the acre and not more milk to the cow should be the aim of the successful dairy farmer. A cross-bred cow is a mistake.

Don't Forget!

An eminent physician lays down these simple rules for better health:

- 1.—Drink lots of water.
- 2.—Eat slowly.
- 3.—Chew your food well.
- 4.—Have plenty of chewing gum on hand. Use it shortly after meals and chew until the "full" feeling disappears.

Europe Loses Sweet Tooth. The girls they left behind them when the British Tommy, his French colleague and his German enemy went off to the war suffered a good deal more than has been supposed up to this time.

The candy export figures from this country prove it. Europe curtailed the bean supply of the United States when Austria's exports were stopped. Now America has retaliated by reducing the quantity of candy sent to the old world.

The first five months of the war caused a decrease of $153,823 in value of candy exports from the United States, as compared with the same period of the year before. The value of the total exports of candy for the calendar year was $1,185,894.

Moving Pictures. Hicks—Did you go to the moving pictures last night?

Wicks—No! My wife made me stay at home and rehang all the pictures in the parlor.

Official Denial

No War Tax on Homestead Land in Canada. The report that a war tax is to be placed on Homestead lands in Western Canada having been given considerable circulation in the United States, this is to advise all enquirers that no such tax has been placed, nor is there any intention to place a war tax of any nature on such lands. (Signed) W. D. Scott, Sup. of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, March 15th, 1915.

JACKSON MAN EATS A SQUARE MEAL

A. W. Hobbs Ends Stomach Suffering Quickly With Wonderful Remedy.

A. W. Hobbs of 1801 East Main Street, Jackson, Mich., after about fifteen years of suffering from derangements of the stomach and digestive tract, took May's Wonderful Remedy. He got the surprise of his life—and swift relief.

Mr. Hobbs has told his own story in a letter, part of which is given here.

"After taking three doses of your stomach remedy I am in perfect condition. I have not felt so well for fifteen years."

"I can eat anything now and it does not distress me. I hope those affected as I was will proceed to get your remedy at once."

May's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.—Adv.

LOW ROUND TRIP FARES TO CALIFORNIA'S EXPOSITIONS AND THE PACIFIC COAST

Low round trip fares are now in effect via the Seaside Highway of the Northern Pacific Ry. to California's Expositions via the North Pacific Coast.

These tickets permit liberal stop-overs and enable the tourist to include both Expositions as well as a stop-over at Yellowstone National Park via Gardiner Gateway.

If you will advise when you will plan your western trip, I will be pleased to quote rates, send a copy of our handsome Expositions folder as well as Yellowstone National Park and travel literature, and assist you in any way possible in planning your 1915 vacation trip. Canada is Calling You to her Rich Wheat Lands

She extends to Americans a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help to feed the world by tilling some of her soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think what you can make with wheat around $1 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not common among young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to
