Husband Should Foot Bills.

Ann Arbor Times News: Judge E. D. Kinne is determined that the circuit court shall not be used as a collection agency by divorcees who remarry. Several cases which have come before the judge, and in which a woman sought to have her former husband coerced into paying alimony to her, after she had married another, using the threat of contempt proceedings as a means toward enforcing collection, have caused him to take a determined stand in this matter.

Hereafter Judge Kinne will not look with favor upon decrees that provide alimony in cases where there are no children, unless the decree stipulates that the alimony is to cease when the divorcee remarries.

Judge Kinne today made an order in the case of Miranda Hubbard against Henry W. Hubbard, who under the terms of the divorce decree which his wife obtained on July 22, 1913, was held to pay her $16 a month alimony.

Mrs. Hubbard has since married a man named Burnett. The order signed by Judge Kinne today reduces the alimony which her former husband must pay for the support of Doris E. Hubbard, a minor child from the first union, to $5 a month.

"Let" Canfield's Glad Rags.

Ann Arbor Times News: Spring came yesterday, despite the interruptions of showers and the debut of thunderstorms.

Spring was ushered in when Deputy Sheriff Lester Canfield wended his way toward the jail, attired in a red waistcoat of the same hue as that of a redbreasted robin. To heighten the veridical effect, the deputy sported a green alpine chapeau, spotless white tie, walking stick and meerschaum pipe.

Because of his Beau Brummel tendencies, Sheriff Lindenschmidt has appointed Deputy Canfield to represent him officially at all glad rag affairs and society functions.

Forty Years Ago

Happenings in Chelsea Forty Years Ago This Week.

Married, on April 14, 1875, by Rev. L. J. Whitcomb, Mr. J. Franklin McMillen and Miss Francis J. Stocking.

The first term of school ended Friday, but on account of losing time during the smallpox scare there was no vacation.

The jail must have been a popular place in those days, as the council had laid a new sidewalk from Main street to that edifice.

Michael McNamara has purchased the photograph gallery, taken off the wheels, turned it around and will start a tin shop therein.

Mrs. Frederica Walz.

Mrs. Frederica Walz, widow of the late Jacob Walz of Francisco, died Friday night, April 8, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Limpert, 422 Hill street, Ann Arbor, at the age of 77 years. Mrs. Walz has been in poor health for the past year, during which time she had made her home in that city with her daughter, but had resided in Francisco for 58 years prior to that, in fact ever since her 18th year, when she came to this country from Germany.

Mrs. Walz was a highly respected member of her home community, and was a faithful member of St. John's church and the Ladies' Aid Society in Francisco. She leaves, besides a large circle of friends fortunate in knowing her, two daughters and five sons: Mrs. John Soell, Mrs. Charles Limpert, Jacob, Fred, Albert, George and Louis Walz.

Short funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at her daughter's residence, 422 Hill street, after which the remains were taken to Francisco, where the funeral was held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, at the old homestead, and at 10:30 at St. John's church, Rev. A. A. Schoen of Chelsea, her pastor, officiating at all the services, assisted by a son-in-law and a grandson of the deceased.

E. G. Hoag Will Move.

Ann Arbor Times News: Wadhams & Co. have leased for a term of a number of years the store now occupied by E. G. Hoag, South Main and Washington streets, and will take immediate possession, beginning to remove their stock tonight.

E. G. Hoag will continue for the present to occupy the second floor of the building. The stock which is now housed in the ground floor, will be moved to 117 East Washington street, the store made vacant by the removal some time ago of the public library branch, formerly located there.

Mr. Hoag has purchased the Bijou theatre building, 209-211 East Washington street, where he will eventually, following the necessary alterations, house his entire business. Mr. Hoag said today that the second floor of his present location would be occupied by him until about June 1, when he thought the Bijou building would be in shape to move into.

Princess Theatre Saturday Night.

"In Self Defense" a two-part modern drama with Hobart Hurley and Violet Mercereau. What should Detective Noble have done when his sweetheart assumed the guilt of a murderer in a confession to him? Can you imagine a more puzzling situation? Here was a girl, whom he believed to be everything that was good, assuring him that she was the victim he was hunting down. And to him, it looked as if she spoke the truth. "In Self Defense" is a detective drama taken out of the conventional setting of the city and planted up in pines and fresh water lakes. The beautiful atmosphere, the splendid acting of the Imp players combine with a tale of love, passion and deadly fighting to make a drama of surpassing interest. The conviction, that the Universal is giving the public superior, better plays than all others, will be conveyed to you when you have seen "In Self Defense."

"Cupid's Victory" a laughing sensation with "Universal Ike jr." "The Animated Weekly" No. 140. Four reels of film, a continuous performance. Doors open at 7:00. First show starts at 7:15. Adv.

Business Men's Meeting.

A meeting of the Chelsea Business Men's Association was held in the offices of A. W. Wilkinson Wednesday evening. The meeting was called to order by Vice President H. S. Holmes, who on motion appointed a nominating committee of five to present names to be voted on at the next meeting for members of the board of directors. No other business being presented the meeting was adjourned until 8 o'clock Monday evening, April 19th, at the Firemen's Hall. It is hoped that there will be a good attendance at this meeting.

Elected Superintendent.

The school board at the meeting Tuesday evening voted to elect W. L. Walling superintendent of the Chelsea schools. Mr. Walling has been superintendent of the Saline schools for eight years, and has been highly recommended by educators as an excellent man for the position. Mr. Walling is a graduate of the Normal College and has been granted the degree of A. B. by the University of Michigan. At this meeting an invitation was extended to all of the grade teachers to remain another year.

The Apple Tree Tent Caterpillar.

Although it seldom does much harm in well-cared for orchards the tent caterpillar frequently strips the leaves from trees in orchards that are neglected and, in some parts of the state, becomes a very noticeable feature in the landscape during the month of June since its gray, webby nests may literally cover the apple trees and also the wild cherry trees which are so numerous in the northern and western parts of the state.

The eggs are laid in oval masses upon the smaller twigs during the late summer and fall and the worms hatch as the new growth is starting in the spring. The larvae (caterpillars) collect in a crotch up on the branches and soon begin the spinning of a silken web which is enlarged as the worms increase in size until it may extend along the branches for two feet; and when the number of "nests" on a tree is sufficiently large, they may envelop all of the branches. The caterpillars begin feeding on the leaves and when there are several nests on a tree the foliage may be completely stripped.

Especially upon young trees it is a simple matter to remove and destroy the egg clusters which will result in reducing the injury, but although much good can be done toward exterminating this insect by adding arsenate of lead to the lime-sulphur solution when spraying for the San Jose scale in the early spring, the principal reliance should be upon the applications made just before and after the blossoming of the trees. By the use of 14 to 14 gallons of commercial lime-sulphur solution and 3 pounds of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water there will be no difficulty in destroying every caterpillar upon the trees. They will be very small and easily killed at the time the blossoms are "in the pink." They will be clustered in the forks of the trees and many of them will be blown to the ground and killed if a high pressure is used. If any of them escape they will be destroyed when the trees are sprayed after the blossoms have fallen and the fruit has set. If these suggestions are followed, it will be possible to control the apple tree tent caterpillar without any extra expense for labor or material.

When spraying has been neglected and nothing has been done to control the insects it will often be worth while to destroy them even after the nests have become quite large and the worms are half-grown. When upon small trees or upon the upper branches of large trees, the nests with the worms inside can be quickly scraped from the branches with a gloved hand and either crushed under foot or thrown into a pail containing a pint of kerosene and two gallons of water. The use of torches for destroying the worms and their nests often result in burning the branches and doing more harm than would be caused by the insects. A swab dipped in kerosene emulsion and fastened to the end of a pole may be used in removing the nests from the higher parts of a tree.

While this insect has been very troublesome for several years, the number of parasites is rapidly increasing and they will undoubtedly be able to keep the tent caterpillars in subjection after one or two years.

Announcement.

Mrs. Geo. A. BeGole wishes to announce that she will continue the Fire Insurance Agency of the late Geo. A. BeGole. She will aim to keep the business up to its high standard of efficiency, and hopes to not only retain all of the present risks, but to extend the business as well.—Adv.

Card of Thanks.

The children of the late Mrs. Frederica Walz extend their thanks to the friends and relatives for their many acts of kindness and sympathy in their recent bereavement. They are especially appreciative of the very beautiful floral tributes. They also desire to thank Rev. A. A. Schoen and St. Paul's choir, of Chelsea, for their services.

POWER LINES ARE CUT BY FARMERS

QUARREL IN LAPEER COUNTY RESULTS IN DRASTIC MOVE.

THREE TOWNS IN DARKNESS

Farmers Claim That Proximity of High Tension Wires to Phone Lines Impaired Service of Latter.

Lapeer—The villages of Hadley, Mc-tamora and Hunter's Creek, in La-peer county, were in darkness Tues-day night and four miles of high ten-sion feed wires of the Schlegel Elec-tric company, of Lapeer, lay by the road with the poles which carried them uprooted as the climax of a long drawn out quarrel between the elec-tric company and farmers living along the wire lines.

Long ago protests were made to the electric company that the prox-imity of its feed wires to the tele- phone wires made it impossible to use the phones. The company was asked to move the feed wires to the other side of the road. After the case went into court, the Schlegel company offered a settlement, which the farmers, allege, was ignored.

Monday the farmers held a meeting of protest and put the matter up to the Schlegel company but received no satisfaction. Tuesday, while the power was shut off, squads of farm-ers went out and cut down the pow-er line.

LAW TO SUPPRESS FAKERS

Both Houses Pass Measure to Require License of Solicitors For Char-itable Purposes.

Lansing—The house Monday night passed a bill which the senate passed last week, the purpose of which is to suppress fake charitable organiza-tion and institutions. It provides that all organizations, institutions and as-sociations formed for charitable pur-poses and which publicly solicit and receive donations, must file with the state board of charities and correc-tions a statement giving full informa-tion as to what charitable work they are doing, as well as the names of the principal officers and the solici-tors. When the statement satisfies the board that the charity is a worthy one and that donations are not di-verted from the purposes for which the aid is given, the board will issue an annual license. Soliciting without such a license will render the offend-er liable to a fine of $100 to $500 or six months in the county jail. Local organizations and institutions may, however, solicit funds in the county where they are located without a license.

Heath, manager of the elevator company, who was in New York to have his leg amputated to check the ravages of cancer from which he has suffered for some time, has abandoned his intention to ob-tain medical treatment and has re-turned to help straighten out the finan-cial tangle that has resulted in the temporary closing of the bank.

HUERTA ARRIVES IN THIS COUNTRY

AGED EX-DICTATOR OF MEXICO REACHES NEW YORK ON MONDAY.

PURPOSE OF TRIP PLEASURE

Declares That Business Here is Of Personal Nature And That He Has No Intention Of Visit-ing Mexico.

New York—General Victoriano Huerta former president of Mexico, arrived Monday afternoon from Bar-celona on the Antonio Lopez, and be-yond a statement to the effect that his trip here was purely for pleasure and personal business his questioners could elicit nothing from him, save that he had no intention of visiting Havana and none of visiting Mexico. Dressed very simply in a plain black suit, he seemed in robust health and excellent spirits.

During the voyage the ex-dictator spent most of his time with his two companions Jose C. Delgado, his pri-vate secretary, and Abraham E. Rat-ner, a friend. Mr. Ratner, who lived for 27 years in Mexico City, was also reported to be General Huerta's finan-cial agent before his downfall.

The immigration authorities treat-ed General Huerta exactly as the other passengers. In reply to the offi-cers' questions he said, interpreted by Mr. Ratner, that he proposes to stay a month in New York, that his family is in Europe, that the object of his visit with pleasure, combined with a little private and family business. He added that the exact time of his stay depended upon the progress of his affairs and that it is possible that he may return to Spain when the An-tonio Lopez next leaves New York.

Mr. Ratner, who acted as his inter-preter, was anxious to make clear certain points as to his life in Spain. It was absolutely untrue, he said, that the Spanish government had even re-motely suggested that he leave the country. Questioned as to the possi-bility of a visit to President Wilson at the White House, Mr. Ratner refused to speak.

The crime for which she will suffer attracted wide atten-tion. Mrs. Frances Bomholt, the vic-tim, had been the friend and benefac-tress of Mrs. Becker. She was found murdered in her home and Mrs. Becker made a confession which she after-wards repudiated.

Hook Worm in Michigan Cattle.

East Lansing—The hook worm has made its way into Michigan, for in diagnosing the illness of a cattle herd in the southern part of Ingham county, M. A. C. bacteriologists found the ani-mals to be infected with the parasite which has caused so much trouble in the south. Seven cows in the Ingham county herd succumbed to the infec-tion, though the worms were aided in their work by a nodular disease. The hook worm cases were the first in cat-tle which have been reported in Mich-igan up to this time, though it is said the parasites have previously been found in certain Michigan sheep herds.

In all, 116 men, 89 of whom had pleaded guilty, were sentenced.

Ell H. Redman, elected judge of the circuit court of Vigo county by 10 votes, and Sheriff Dennis Shea, were sentenced to five years in the penitentiary and fined $1,000 each.

Harry S. Montgomery, president of the board of public works, Thomas C. Smith, city judge, George Ehren-hardt, member of board of public works, and Edward R. Driscoll, sec-etary of the Vigo county Democratic central committee, were sentenced to three years each in the penitentiary and fined $500.

GERMANS TO PAY FOR FRYE

American Vessel Sung by Cruiser on High Seas Is Case for Prize Court.

Washington—Germany's intention to compensate the owners of the Ameri-can ship William P. Frye, sunk on the high seas with her cargo of wheat by the commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, has been formally communi-cated to the United States govern-ment.

Ambassador Gerard cabled a note handed him by the Berlin foreign of-fice in reply to the recent American communication submitting a claim for an indemnity of $228,059.54 on behalf of the Frye's owners. The foreign office upholds without qualification the legality under international law of the raider's action in sinking the Frye, and bases the liability of the Ger-man government to pay indemnity solely upon the old Prussian-American treaty of 1799 and 1828, which pro-vide that contraband belonging to the subjects or citizens of either party cannot be confiscated by the other and may be detained or used only in consideration of payment of the full value.

In view of this stipulation, the note says, of course, the American owners must be compensated for their loss. It is pointed out, however, that the case of necessity must go into a prize court, that questions of ownership, cargo, destination, etc., may be for-mally established.

Three Hurt in Kazoo Fire.

Kalamazoo—As the Johnson saloon closed Tuesday at 10 o'clock, the base-ment of the building was discovered in flames. An unidentified man was found in the stairway overcome by smoke.

Richard Heath, a fireman, was badly burned and out about the face. He was also blinded by exploding bottles of whiskey. An old man broke a leg when jumping and was taken to Bor-gess hospital unconscious.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Instead of messing things all up at the postoffice by blowing open the safe, robbers went to Postmaster Snow's house at Standish, stole his keys and opened the safe. They left the keys on the floor of the office when they departed, unseed and un-heard, with $352.

Blazing brands from the burning stock barns of the I. E. Higenritz & Sons' nursery ignited the steeple of historic St. Mary's Catholic church at Monroe, causing considerable damage. The barns, with those of William Han-son and Charles H. Higenritz, were destroyed. The total loss is $4,000, partially covered by insurance.

Dr. W. H. Hale, formerly of Jack-son, is now Gen. Francisco Villa's per-sonal physician at Columbia, Mexico.

The longest continuous session of the federal court ever held in Grand Rapids will end April 13, when Judge Sessions will go to Marquette for the opening of court in the northern dis-trict of Michigan. During the present session of court Judge Sessions has appeared on the bench every day since January 20, exclusive of Sundays. He heard arguments on Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays and frequently on Saturday afternoons.

SENATE APPROVES STATE WIDE BILL

FAVORS SUBMISSION OF PROHIBITION QUESTION AT NEXT FALL ELECTION.

VICTORY FOR SEN. STRAIGHT

Several Amendments Adopted But None Seriously Affecting the General Purpose of the Proposed Measure.

Lansing—The Straight state-wide prohibition bill, practically unchanged, passed the senate in committee of the whole Tuesday afternoon.

Sundry amendments, nearly all of which came from sponsors of the measure, were tacked on, while all but two of those brought forward by its opponents were beaten.

Senator Murtha, after two hours' work, succeeded in having written into the bill the present saloonkeeper liability law, but applying under "dry" regime to the druggist.

Among other amendments offered were two by Senator Wood, making the druggist who sells liquor under the new law pay a license to the county of $500 a year.

This was beaten, and Wood tried to make the license fee $250, but failed. Then one was offered giving the law until May, 1918, to take effect, but this was defeated.

The Murtha amendment to apply the saloonkeepers' liability law to the druggist under state-wide prohibition was adopted by a vote of 17 to 14. Under this the druggist who sells liquor to any person who, intoxicated afterward, is injured or killed, will be liable for damages.

Senator Murtha objected to the section permitting the sale of liquor for sacramental purposes, alleging that it was too broad.

Senator Gansser wanted the ballots for the election marked so that every-body will know just what he is vot-ing for. It was finally agreed that they should read, "A vote for or against the state-wide prohibition bill, act No. of the legislature of 1915."

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta-ble Compound.

Richmond, Pa.—"When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so ex-tremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vege-table Compound."—Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

PARROT & CO

HAROLD MACGRATH

Author of 'The Carpet from Bagdad', 'The Place of Honeymoons, etc.'

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a caged parrot, the trio known as Parrot & Co., are bound for Singapore to cash a draft for $50,000 rupees. Chetwood, rich American girl tourist, sees Warrington and asks the parrot to introduce her. He tells her that Warrington has beaten a syndicate and sold his claims for $20,000. Warrington, who has been in Singapore for two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is something in Warrington's eyes, and she is a professional gambler, and I warned him not to try any of his tricks on board. It soured him.

CHAPTER X—Continued.

Warrington turned the key, and a deluge of cold water struck Craig full in the chest. He tried to sit up, but was knocked flat. Then he rolled over on the deck, choking and sputtering. He crawled on his hands and knees until he reached the chair-rail, which he clutched desperately, drawing himself up. The pitiless stream never swerved. It smacked against the flat of his back like the impact of a hand.

"For God's sake stop it!" cried Craig, half-strangled.

"Will you go below?"

"Yes, yes! Turn it away!" sobber enough by now.

Warrington switched off the key, his face humorless, though there was a sparkle of grim humor in his sleep-hungry eyes. Craig leaned against the deckhouse, shaking and panting.

"I would I could get at your soul as easily," Warrington threw aside the hose, and the Lascars sprang upon it, not knowing what the big blond sahib might do next.

Craig turned, venom on his tongue. He spoke a phrase. In an instant, cold with fury, Warrington had him by the throat.

"You low base cur!" he said, shaking the man until he resembled a manikin on wires. "Had you been sober last night, I'd have thrown you into the sea. Honorless dog! You wrote to Miss Chetwood. You insulted her, too. If you wish to die, speak to her again."

Craig struggled fiercely to free himself. He wasn't sure, by the look of the other man's eyes, that he wasn't going to be killed then and there. There was something cave-mannish and cruel in the way Warrington worked the man, shaking him from side to side and forcing him along the deck. Suddenly he released his hold, adding a buffet on the side of the head that sent Craig reeling and sobbing into the companionway.

"Here, I say, what's the row?" Warrington looked over his shoulder. The call had come from the first officer.

"A case of drunkenness," coolly.

"But I say, we can't have brawling on deck, sir. You ought to know that. If the man's conduct was out of order, you should have brought your complaint before the captain or me. We really can't have any rowing, sir."

Warrington replied gravely: "Expediency was quite necessary."

"What's this?" The officer espied the soaked bedding. "Who turned the hose here?"

"I did," answered Warrington.

"I shall have to report that to the captain, sir. It's against the rules aboard this steamship for passengers to touch anything of that sort." The officer turned and began violently to abuse the bewildered Lascars.

Warrington entered the companionway, and a moment later he heard the water hiss along the deck. He was not in the least sorry for what he had done; still, he regretted the act. Craig was a beast, and there was no knowing what he might do or say. Still dressed, he flung himself into his bunk, and immediately fell into a heavy dreamless sleep that endured until luncheon.

Shortly after luncheon he was summoned to the captain's cabin. Warrington presented himself, mildly curious. The captain nodded to a stool.

"Sit down, Mr. Warrington. Will you have a cheroot?"

"Yes, thanks."

A crackle of matches followed.

"This fellow Craig has complained about his treatment by you this morning. I fancy you were rather rough with him."

"Perhaps. He was very drunk and abusive, and he needed cold water more than anything else. I once knew the man."

"I see with reasonable eyes, if that is what you mean. The people I know, mine own people, understand Elsa Chetwood."

So her name was Elsa? He repeated it over and over in his mind.

She continued her exposition. "There are but few, gently born. They are generous and broadminded. They could not be mine own people otherwise. They are all I care about. I shun mediocrity as I would the plague. I refuse to permit it to touch me, either with words or with deeds. The good opinion of those I love is dear to me; as for the rest of the world!" She snapped her fingers to illustrate how little she cared.

"I am a man under a cloud, to be avoided."

"Perhaps that cloud has a silver lining," with a gentle smile. "I do not believe you did anything wrong, premeditatedly. All of us, one time or another, surrender to wild impulse. Perhaps in the future there awaits for me such a moment. I cannot recollect the name of Warrington in a cause celebre," thoughtfully.

He could only gaze at her dumbly. "My name is not Warrington," finding his voice. God in heaven, what would happen when she found out what his name was? "But my first name is Paul."

"Paul? I have had my suspicions that your name was not Warrington. But tell me nothing more. What good would it do? I did not read that man's letter. I merely noted your name and his. You doubtless knew him somewhere in the past."

"Might there not be danger in your kindness to me?"

"In what way?"

"A man under a cloud is often reckless and desperate. There is always an invisible demon calling out to him: 'What's the use of being good? You are the first woman of your station who has treated me as a human being; I do not say as an equal. It's a heady wine for an abstemious man. Don't you realize that you are a beautiful woman?'"

She looked up into his eyes quickly, but she saw nothing there indicating flattery, only a somber gravity.

"I should be silly to deny it. I know that had I been a trump, the colonel would not have snubbed me. I wonder why it is that in life beauty in a woman is always looked upon with suspicion?"

"Envy provokes that."

She resumed her inclination against the rail again. "After Singapore it is probable that we shall not meet again. I admit, in my world, I could not walk upon this free and easy ground. I should have to ask about your antecedents, what you have done, all about you, in fact. Then, we should sit in judgment."

"And condemn me, off-hand. That would be perfectly right."

"But I might be one of the dissenting judges."

"That is because you are one woman in a thousand."

"No; I simply have a mind of my own, and often prefer to be guided by it. I am not a sheep."

Silence. The lap-lap of the water, the long slow rise and fall, and the darting flying-fish apparently claimed their attention.

But Warrington saw nothing save the danger, the danger to himself and to her. At any moment he might fling his arms around her, without his having the power to resist. She called to him as nothing in the world had called before. But she trusted him, and because of this he resolutely throttled the recurring desires. She was right. He had scorned what she had termed as woman's instinct. She had read him with a degree of accuracy. In the eyes of God he was a good man, a dependable man; but he was not impossibly good. He was human enough to want her, human enough to appreciate the danger in which she stood of him.

"Tell me about the man who looks like me." His gaze roved out to sea, to the white islands of vapor low-lying in the east. "In what respect does he resemble me?"

"His hair is yellow, his eyes are blue, and he smiles the same way you do."

He felt the lump rise and swell in his throat.

"If you stood before a mirror you would see him. But there the resemblance ends."

"Is he a man who does things?" a note of strained curiosity in his tones. Ten years!

"In what way do you mean?"

"Does he work in the world, does he invent, build, finance?"

Mayhap her eyes deceived her, but the tan on his face seemed less brown than yellow.

"No; Mr. Ellison is a collector of paintings, of rugs, of rare books and china. He's a bit detached, as dreamers usually are. He has written a book of exquisite verses. . . . You are smiling," she broke off suddenly, her eyes filling with cold lights.

"A thousand pardons! The thought was going through my head how unlike we are in deed. I can hardly tell one master from another, all old books look alike to me, and the same with china. I know something about rugs; but I couldn't write a jingle if it was to save me from hanging."

"Do you invent, build, finance?" A bit of a gulf had opened up between them. Elsa might not be prepared to marry Arthur, but she certainly would not tolerate a covert sneer in regard to his accomplishments.

Quietly and with dignity he answered: "I have built bridges in my time over which trains are passing at this moment. I have fought torpedoes, and floods, and hurricanes, and myself, and I have done a man's work. I had a ture, they said. But here I am, a subject of your pity."

She instantly relented. "But you are young. You can begin again."

"Not in the sense you mean."

"And yet, you tell me you are going back home."

"Like a thief in the night," bitterly.

CHAPTER XI.

The Blue Feather.

Elsa toyed with her emeralds, apparently searching for some flaw. Like a thief in the night was a phrase that rang unpleasantly in her ears. Her remarkable interest in the man was neither to be denied nor ignored. To receive the cut direct from a man whose pomposity and mental density had excited her wit and amusement, surprised her even if it did not hurt. It had rudely awakened her to the fact that her independence might be leading her into a labyrinth.

Something new had been born in her. All her life she had gone about calmly and aloofly, her head in the clouds, her feet on mountain tops. She had never done anything to arouse discussion in other women. Perhaps such a situation had never confronted her until lately. She had always looked forth upon life through the lenses of mild cynicism. So long as she was rich she might, with impunity, be as indiscreet as she pleased. Her money would plead forgiveness and toleration. . . . Elsa shrugged. But shrugs do not dismiss problems. She could have laughed. To have come all this way to solve a riddle, only to find a second more confusing than the first!

Like a thief in the night. She did not care to know what he had done, not half so much as to learn what he had been. Peculations of some order; of this she was reasonably sure. So why seek for details, when these might be sorid?

Singapore would see the end, and she would become her normal self again.

She clasped the necklace around her lovely throat. She was dressing for dinner, really dressing. An impish mood filled her with the irrefragable desire to shine in all her splendor to-night. Covertly she would watch the eyes of mediocrity widen. Hitherto they had seen her in the simple white of travel. Tonight they should behold the woman who had been notable among the beauties in Paris, Vienna, Rome, London; who had not married a duke simply because his title could not have added to the security of her position, socially or financially.

Into the little mirror above the wash stand she peered, with smiling and approving eyes. Never had she looked better. There was unusual color in her cheeks and the clarity of her eyes spoke illuminatingly of superb health. The tan on her face was not made noticeable in contrast by her shoulders and arms, old ivory in tint and as smooth and glossy as ancient Carrara.

"You lovely creature!" murmured Martha, touching an arm with her lips. "You are foolish to dress like this." She finished the hooking of Elsa's waist.

"And why?"

"In the first place there's nobody worth the trouble; and nobody but a duchess or a . . ." Martha paused embarrassedly.

"Or a what? An improper person?" Elsa laughed. "My dear Martha, your comparisons are faulty. I know big two duchesses in this wide world who are not dowdies, and one of them is an American. An improper person is generally the most proper, outside her peculiar environments. Can't you suggest something else?"

Martha searched but found no suitable reply. She believed that she saw more clearly into the future than Elsa. Someone would talk, and in that strange inscrutable fashion scandal has of reaching the ends of the earth, the story would eventually arrive home; and there, for all the professions of friendship, it would find admittance. No door is latched when scandal knocks. Martha readily appreciated that it was all harmless, to be expressed by a single word, whim. But Martha herself never acted upon impulse; she first questioned what the world would say. So she turned the

HAD A REASON.

We have just heard about a Lake-wood lady who advertised for a girl to do general housework and got a jewel of a personal reply. The young woman who answered the ad was strong, capable, intelligent, neat and possessed of training for the position.

"You'll do!" cried the lady of the house, happily. "Now let's see your references."

"Ay ent got no references, mum," confessed Hilda. "Ay ban tore 'em up."

"What? Tore them up? Why, you must have been mad!"

"Ay was, ven ay saw 'em. Dot's vy ay ban tore 'em up!"

The Final Precaution. "You treated the accusations with silent contempt, of course?" "I did."

"And then with naughty indifference?" "Yes."

"Then you laughed them to scorn?" "Certainly."

"And finally repelled them with just indignation?" "Exactly."

"Then, you'd better see a good criminal lawyer next."

Modified. "I'm a glutton for work?" boasted the man. But his wife overheard him and asked him to split some wood.

"Er—I mean an epicure!" the man hastened to correct himself.—Puck.

Dangerous Proceeding. "Where is that fellow Gum you had around here?" "I fired him."

"I should think you would have been afraid he would kick."

BUT NOT CALLING MAYHAP.

Big Sister—Fred says if I don't keep you out of the room when he calls he will stop calling.

Willie—Well, sis, dey's others, you know.

Premature Joy. He popped; the maiden answered, "Yes!" With joy he thought he'd smother; but she'd not finished: "Yes—terday I said 'Yes' to another."

Old Enough for It. "Sir, I wish to inform you I am an active worker in an anticosmetic movement."

"Well, aunty, I must say you look the part."

Their Attribute. "There is a trio of English authors who certainly ought to be full of animal magnetism."

"Who are they?" "Lamb, Hogg and Bacon."

Effect of Variety. "Why is it, do you suppose, that the course of true love never runs smooth?"

"For the same reason, I guess, that life is not always a grand sweet song. If we didn't get a few bumps occasionally we wouldn't appreciate a level stretch in the road."

A Suffering Case. "Those detectives have just arrested an osteopath as a felon."

"That must have been a painful duty."

"Why painful?" "Didn't it give them a bone felon on their hands?"

Shame on You, Paw. Little Lemuel—Say, paw, what's the good of war, anyway? Paw—Well, son, it takes a lot of brass bands to the front.

Homely Girl. "Glasses improve Maud's looks a good deal."

"Naturally; they conceal part of her face."

The Objection. Motorist—The streets would be simply ideal for us if it were not for one thing.

Friend—What is it? Motorist—People will persist in walking on them.

One Mitigation. She—When women vote, I suppose the electioneering ones will, like the English beauty, be offering kisses for votes.

He—Then I hope they'll be repeating.

DAIRY

EXCELLENT RATION FOR COW

If Farmers Would Depend More on Silage and Less on Pasture Herds Could Be Doubled.

A good ration for cows giving milk is silage twice a day, corn fodder once a day and all the bean forage they will clean up, with about one pound grain or concentrate to every three pounds milk the cow gives. If the beans were pulled before becoming too ripe and secured without much rain falling on them, the forage makes good feed. Roots are valuable to increase the flow of milk.

If we would depend more on silage and less on pasture, our dairy herds might easily be doubled and the farm enriched accordingly. Many farmers have been slow to awaken to the fact that dairying brings excellent returns. Many unprofitable crops are still raised where the land might better be growing feed for live stock.

Permanent pasture is a waste unless the land cannot be plowed. Every acre should be made to raise feed for stock to the limit of its capacity, and this should be fed right on the farm, returning the fertility to the soil.

PAIL OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

Where Clean Milk Is Produced Small-Top Receptacle Is Necessary to Exclude Bacteria.

The United States department of agriculture has this to say about milking:

"In modern dairies where clean milk is produced the small-top milk pail is a necessity, as such a pail presents only a small opening into which dust and dirt may fall from the air or from the cow's body. It has been found by experience that the use of the small-top pail greatly reduces the number of bacteria in milk from average dairies. Many types of milk pails are for sale, but any tinner can convert an ordinary pail into a small-top pail by the addition of a hood, as shown herewith.

Milkers should be allowed to milk only with dry hands. The practice of wetting the hands with milk is a filthy habit and is liable to cause the cow's teats to chap in the winter time. Milking should be done quickly and thoroughly, with no violent jerking of the teats. After each cow is milked the pail of milk should be removed immediately to the milk house.

The milker should remember always that he is handling a human food which is very easily contaminated. Soap, clean water and towels must be readily accessible. The hands should be washed after milking each cow.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR COWS

No Harmful Effects if Fed in Moderate Amounts Along With Variety of Other Feeds.

(By E. G. WOODWARD, Nebraska Experiment Station.)

A Nebraska subscriber writes: "Is the feeding of cottonseed meal harmful to dairy cows if fed lightly?"

If cottonseed meal is fed in moderate amounts along with a variety of other feeds, there are no harmful effects.

Ordinarily a cow should not be fed more than two pounds daily of cottonseed meal. As a usual thing it will not take this amount to properly balance a ration made up of common dairy feeds.

At present prices cottonseed meal is a very cheap source of protein and should undoubtedly be used much more extensively by Nebraska dairy-men than it now is.

MUD HOLES IN COW PASTURE

Clean Shore Is Blessing to Fly-Pestered Animals—Many Annoyances Are Avoided.

A cow pasture mud hole is a veritable nuisance. To get away from the flies the cows will wade in the mud until their legs and even their udders become completely plastered. Then added to the annoyance of stamping and kicking at flies at milking time we have the added annoyance of being obliged to milk cows with chapped teats.

A clean lake shore or river or brook in the pasture is a blessing indeed to the fly-pestered cows, but the mud hole should either be drained or fenced out of the pasture. Foul in the foot with cattle, and grease heel with horses, is the result of tramping back and forth from mud holes to dusty grounds.

One Mitigation. She—When women vote, I suppose the electioneering ones will, like the English beauty, be offering kisses for votes.

He—Then I hope they'll be repeating.

NEWS and GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON

No Lady Blacksmiths Wanted on Washington Job

WASHINGTON.—The National museum wants a blacksmith and specifies that this blacksmith must be a male blacksmith. No woman blacksmiths, no matter how brawny, need apply. The National museum wants that male blacksmith, and has announced it to the world through the medium of the United States civil service commission, which will have to pass on the points of the candidates.

For fear that a whole slew of woman blacksmiths will descend on the National museum, the civil service announcement is headed in large, aggressive letters, "Blacksmith (Male)" and then goes on to say: "The United States civil service commission announces an open competitive examination for blacksmith, for men only." Therefore, the dainty young blacksmithess who knows how to grab the off hind foot of a recalcitrant mule, slap it into her lap and then hammer a hot shoe into place on a hoof that would sink a dreadnaught, need not apply for the museum job. Not that she wouldn't be entitled to a place in the museum—for she would—but they just don't want her over there. It's a rank discrimination against the fairest and most tender of our budding young girl blacksmiths, but the hardened old scientists at the government's big aggregation of George Washington's uniforms and pterodactylic bones don't want any female blacksmiths roughing up the iron to make it look red hot. Not a bit of it. They want a man.

National Capital Quite Happy Without Congress

TO many minds the national capital without congress may seem like "Hamlet" without the melancholy Dane, but it is not; au contraire, as they say in diplomatic circles, the government goes ahead without appearing to miss the legislators. Of course, President Wilson has not said that he "is glad to get congress off his hands," but some folks suspect—some folks suspect. So official Washington has been as reconciled to the departure of congress as "big business," that bugaboo of imaginative minds, popularly is supposed to be.

First and foremost, the various executive departments do not live in constant dread of legislation that may turn them topsy-turvy. Criticism on the floor of congress of blindness to the civil service, or other alleged sins of commission or omission, is not to be feared, and in other ways the minds of the department heads and their aids are greatly lightened. Moreover, the heads of the departments no longer are besieged daily, not to say nightly also, by regiments of statesmen in search of jobs for impetunate constituents. Of course, there is no "closed season" for office seekers, but the pressure is greatly relieved when the statesmen lie them home and get out of reach of the post office department, the department of agriculture and other happy hunting grounds for the self-sacrificing hordes which are willing to serve Uncle Sam—for a consideration. Beyond this, the pension bureau is relieved of daily calls from congressmen, in person and over the phone. The army and navy no longer are imperturbed for honorable discharges for men who had been discharged from the service for every crime in the calendar, from cowardice to grand larceny—of which the former is considered the greater offense. And so it runs on through each executive department; peace prevails within their precincts and opportunity is afforded to perform the real work for which they were created.

Many Jobless View Rock Pile, but Few Tackle It

EVERY once in so often a great philanthropy, carefully planned in advance out of pure altruistic motives, curls up and dies in an unaccountable fashion. Such an occasion is this—involving two District commissioners, a social problem and a rock pile located at South Capitol and M streets.

In an effort to solve the question of unemployment the commissioners decided to allow 30 men—husky men, armed with their own hammers—to break up the rock pile. It was possible, said the commissioners, for a forward-looking, earnest man to earn about a dollar a day. Among the first to arrive was a large colored man, whose unalterable determination to become a puglist at the expense of his wife, had led to an intermittent acquaintance with Occoquan. He studied the pile from various angles. He patted the concrete with his hand. Then he sighed. All of the concrete was equally hard. "Ah! he go back to jail," he said, in a low, sorrowful voice; "de rock ain't no ha'der dan dis—and you gets fed free."

One man worked furiously—so furiously that they went to him and questioned him. "You seem interested in your work," they said. "Not me," he puffed, taking another terrific slam at the concrete, "I'm getting myself in condition so I can beat up the guy that tipped me off about this job." So the rock pile remains, a silent and sinister monument. And with it remains the problem of finding work for the unemployed, or perhaps the commissioners have demonstrated there is little or no real unemployment in Washington.

Secretary Daniels Acts as First Aid to Cupid

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY DANIELS has received numerous congratulations as to the result of his assuming the role of first aid to Cupid through reinstating Joseph E. Austin as a member of the service. Austin an ensign, was dismissed from the service because he married the girl of his choice while his ship was in Honolulu harbor several years ago. At that time the naval regulations forbade the marriage of junior officers because it was felt their salary was not enough for two to live on.

Mrs. Austin, resenting the suggestion that she was a handicap to her husband, interested Secretary Daniels, and he persuaded congress to pass a law, reinstating Austin. Then, when criticized, he declared if he was in love with a girl and that girl would marry him, he would wed her no matter what the cost. Elaborating his views in his home, the secretary said: "When we follow the lodestar of love we cannot go far wrong. In every walk of life the married man is far more efficient than the single one. The latter has no distinct purpose in life. But the married man has. There are the wife and the babies to think of. And he must of necessity be more steady than the man who cares only for himself. "Ever since I have been in public life I have advocated marriage. It is the greatest stealer in life. And I want to say here that no matter what others may think, I do not believe that men should be refused the right to obey the dictates of love by red tape regulations."

Taffeta Afternoon Gown, Novel Trimming

The very good-looking afternoon gown shown here has several novel and original features to recommend it to those who are looking for something new in style. It is interesting from the facts that it is an American model, that it is easy to make, and that it is in line with the new models. The bodice is cut in three pieces and has long shoulders and a high neck. It fastens on a diagonal line running from the middle of the neck at the front to the left side of the belt. It is set into a narrow belt, (which is slightly wrinkled over a foundation) made of the taffeta. Small acorn shaped buttons made over molds are covered with the silk. A row of these, set close together, follows the line of the fastening, beginning at the swell of the bust and terminating at the belt. This row of buttons is balanced by a second row set at the right side of the waist. The skirt is plain, consisting of three widths of taffeta gathered in at the belt and into a wide band at the bottom. This band is edged with a silk cord of the same color as the taffeta. The side seams of the bodice and skirt are outlined with the small silk-covered buttons extending from the arm's-eye to the border of the new models. The sleeves are plain and long, finished with a narrow band of silk, piped with white. A similar band encircles the neck and supports a double frill of net. An odd and unexpected feature is introduced in the large white buttons with dark rims that are sewed to the front of the belt. They repeat the color of the dress with its pipings of white at neck and wristbands, and therefore seem to belong in the scheme. But they are not essential to the finish of the gown; they are used solely for the sake of the novelty, they furnish.

Attractive Blouses Easy to Make

Blouses that will stand any amount of wear and are sheer and dainty looking, are made of voile. Others a little less durable but equally dainty, are made of sheer batiste. Two new voile blouses made up with strong venetian lace and further decorated with embroidery are shown here. Cluny laces and hand-crochet laces are even a little stronger than venetian, but rather less fashionable. The third blouse is of batiste decorated with very fine tucks and venetian lace. These blouses are machine made and all the seams are hemstitched by machinery. When the waists are to be home-made the seams may be managed by setting turned-under edges together with tiny beading or the narrowest laces, or with needlework. The first blouse in the picture is among the few designed this season with three-quarter sleeves. It is very plain, with "V" shaped neck finished with hemstitched hem. It fastens with small crochet buttons and is decorated with venetian insertion about an inch wide and small sprays of embroidery. The collar is a wide plain turnover across the back. One of the prettiest models is shown, made of voile, in the next picture. Its seams are hemstitched and the neck is "V" shaped, but supports a wide turnover collar of the voile. Lace insertion is let in both the back and front of the blouse, and the front is further decorated with small embroidered sprays. Crochet buttons and buttonholes manage the fastening. The sleeves are long and shaped into the wrists, where they are trimmed with a band of insertion. Ties of narrow black ribbon help support the collar, which must be wired if it is worn high. The waist of batiste is very simply made with groups of thin tucks at the back and each side of the front. The sleeves are full and set into straight deep cuffs that turn back and are edged with lace. The high collar is made in the same way. Lace edging is used for joining the yoke to the front of the blouse. In all these models the lower edge is hemmed and gathered on an elastic band. JULIA BOTTOMLEY. Don't Forget the Apron. In replenishing your wardrobe don't forget to have at least one gown which can boast of an apron. For instance, on an afternoon gown of green soft taffeta attach a pointed apron of the material, and at the proper places have two little pockets. Have a two-inch-wide belt at the top of the apron—this is to serve as a girdle of the dress—and let it run off into space in the form of apron strings, which are to be tied in a pert bow. A very quaint dance frock is made of figured voile. Around the neck and the puffed sleeves are ruffles of cream net. A flimsy little apron of net and lace is tucked beneath the closely fitted basque, which extends in a point over the skirt. Collarless Blouses. Paris sanctions collarless daytime bodices; also makes an occasional model low and round or shallow and oval or shallow and pointed, and finished in very simple fashion with frill or ruche or flat collar or little inside fichu of net. And the small square is well liked, either with or without a standing collar at the back.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

The apples and nuts we may treasure, And grain fields that ripen to gold, But springtime is teeming with hope and our dreaming Is freighted with pleasures untold. The snow is a mantle of crystal Where diamonds in icicles shine And memory treasures the long winter pleasures But spring is the season divine.

SOME COMMON DISHES.

For a homely pudding which is well liked try:

Brown Betty.—Slice six large apples after peeling and coring, one heaping cupful of bread crumbs, one-half cupful of chopped suet, one tablespoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, salt to taste and one-half spoonful of grated nutmeg. Chop the suet, sprinkle the sugar and crumbs in layers with the chopped apple, add the butter to a few of the crumbs to finish the top and bake with the addition of a little fruit juice or water. Serve hot with hard sauce.

Irish Stew.—Take a pound of the neck of mutton, a pint of potatoes, cut in small pieces, four onions, a bunch of herbs, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, pepper and salt, one tablespoonful of flour. Put the butter into a saucepan with the mutton, cut in small pieces. Add the onions, cut in quarters, with the herbs and parsley. Cover with water. Lay the potatoes over the meat, sprinkle with salt and pepper and boil. Then add flour and let simmer for two hours. Serve on a hot platter with the vegetables around the meat. Remove the herbs before serving.

Potato Croquettes.—Take a quart of mashed potato, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, salt, pepper and red pepper to taste. Mash the potatoes by putting them through a ricer, melt the butter and add with the seasonings, then the well-beaten eggs. Mix and divide into ten or more pieces and form into croquettes; brush with egg yolk, toss in crumbs and fry in smoking hot fat.

Ladies' Cabbage.—Chop a small head of cabbage quite fine. Throw into boiling salted water and cook in an open kettle half an hour. Drain and add two tablespoonfuls of butter mixed with one of flour, add a cupful of rich milk, salt and paprika and simmer ten minutes.

Alas! how easily things go wrong! A sigh too deep or a kiss too long, And then comes a mist and a weeping rain And life is never the same again. —George Macdonald.

SOUR CREAM DISHES.

Among the women in the dairy districts the question is asked every day: "How can we use the small amounts of left-over sour cream that are always accumulating from the cream cans?" Here is the answer: Salad dressings of various kinds are improved by the addition of cream. It may be whipped and added to a boiled dressing and make it a most rich and tasty dressing. Simply adding sour cream with sugar and salt to sliced cucumbers or cabbage, with a dash of salt and pepper, you have a most appetizing salad ready to eat.

Sour cream used as a white sauce in place of milk to serve with fish is another dish not half appreciated or known.

Sour-Cream Biscuit.—There is no more enjoyable hot biscuit than the one enriched by sour cream. To each cupful of sour cream add a half teaspoonful of soda, using two or three tablespoonfuls of shortening, according to the richness of the cream.

Drop Cookies.—Take a half cupful of butter, soften it, add to one cupful of sugar, beat well, add a beaten egg, two cupfuls of flour, a fourth of a teaspoonful of soda and three and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a half cupful of sour cream, mix well, and drop by spoonfuls on a buttered sheet. Sprinkle with granulated sugar and bake in a moderate oven.

Gingerbread.—Beat a quarter of a cupful of sugar, add a cupful of molasses, two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of sour cream and three cupfuls of flour. A teaspoonful of soda and a tablespoonful of ginger. Beat well and bake in a large dripping pan.

Sour cream griddle cakes, gems and spice cake, sour cream, one cupful, with the same of sugar and nutmeats cooked together until thick makes the most delicious cake filling one can imagine.

The "Restful Lunch." A custom observed by many employers is that of serving the seamstress in the middle of the afternoon with tea or coffee and crackers or sandwiches or, in the summer, with a cool drink. This attention as well as the "restful lunch" is sure to be appreciated. In bad weather or even on pleasant days if the family carriage or the motor is at the door or is not being used, it is easy to have the coachman or chauffeur take the tired seamstress to the nearest subway or elevated station or home as the case may be.

The Bill Climbed.
"I suppose you climbed the Alps when you were abroad?"
"No, just ran up a bill, that was all."

The house also placed the mark of its disapproval on the resolution of Senator Fitzgibbon who proposed a change in the constitution to permit the raising the salary of judges during their term of office. It was claimed this carried no increase of salary, but several pointed out on the floor that it paved the way for an increase and the vote was 40 to 45, where 68 were needed.

The grange bill fixing a standard of galvanized wire fencing, was tabled for the session. Rep. Evans who fathered the measure, stated that the attorney general had given an opinion to the effect that manufacturers outside the state would not be bound by its provisions and since he did not desire to put any unfair obstacles in the way of home industries, suggested that the bill be referred to "the committee on lumber and salt or any other old committee." The house took him at his word and tabled the bill.

Among the measures passed by the house was the Marvon bill amending the bill giving state aid for the building of armories. This provides that the state will meet any local appropriation up to $15,000 for an armory. It effects Owosso and Grand Rapids at present, but is a state-wide measure in its application. The bill was given immediate effect.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

MANY SUPPOSEDLY DEAD BILLS ARE RESURRECTED IN THE HOUSE TUESDAY.

VOTING BY MAIL FAVORED

House Holds Long Session Monday Evening and Wipes Slate Clean on Third Reading, Passing Many Bills.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing—Tuesday proved a banner day for the reconsideration of supposed defunct measures. Three bills supposed killed were resurrected and either passed or placed on the order of third reading. Chief among these was what has been popularly termed the "long distance voting" measure which provides for balloting by mail by absent travelling men, members of the legislature and persons in educational institutions and the military service.

This bill came up on general order in the regular course of events and in spite of a fight made for it by Rep. Warner, was re-referred to the committee. It was argued it was unworkable and impracticable. The friends of the measure insisted the people in voting to amend the constitution to provide for mail balloting expressed their desire for such a bill, but this argument failed until a record vote was obtained when the report of the committee of the whole up for confirmation. The idea of going on record as opposing what the people had given a majority of 15,000 for did not appeal to those who were bold enough on a viva voce vote and the report of the committee was turned down and the bill resurrected and automatically placed on the order of third reading.

The fireman's furlough bill calling for one day off in every four and an annual furlough of fifteen days, which failed of passage three weeks ago and was tabled, but taken from the table at the instance of Rep. William Martz and passed by the almost unanimous vote of eighty-two to seven. The speech of Rep. Shridan Ford largely was responsible for the change of sentiment. He made a most effective and stirring appeal for the firemen. This was Senator Covert's bill and it now is awaiting the signature of the governor to become a law.

Rep. Whitley also figured in the resurrecting bee when he dug the state board of health bill providing that the secretary of that board should be a medical man of ten years experience and appointed by the governor only on recommendation of the board of the table and obtained its passage with fifty-eight favorable votes.

Objection had been made to this bill on the ground that it was a partisan politics bill and when it was up before, was defeated by a narrow margin. While the house was in the business of Finneganizing Tuesday, Whitley trotted it out under a resolution and pushed it through before the opponents who fought the bill before were fully aware what was under way.

In a session beginning at 8:30 p. m. and finishing close to midnight Monday, the house of representatives wiped the slate clean on the order of third reading, passing the majority of the twenty-six bills ready for consideration, but putting the quietus on three or four.

The Penney bill providing that perch weighing less than seven ounces shall not be taken in nets and limiting the length of nets set within a radius of a mile of any stream outlet on the shores of the great lakes was killed. Rep. Oakley of Bay City and Rep. McMillan of Charlevoix were the chief exponents. At their suggestion the bill was re-referred to the committee.

The house also placed the mark of its disapproval on the resolution of Senator Fitzgibbon who proposed a change in the constitution to permit the raising the salary of judges during their term of office. It was claimed this carried no increase of salary, but several pointed out on the floor that it paved the way for an increase and the vote was 40 to 45, where 68 were needed.

The bill was given immediate effect.

posal to permit the legislature to repeal local bills enacted prior to the adoption of the present constitution was passed. The Keen bill to create the office of county correction officer in counties having a population of less than 100,000 and to abolish the offices of county agent and county truant officer was passed.

Rep. Lewis' bill providing for the incorporation of rural telephone companies not in business for profit and eliminating such companies from the regulation of the railway commission was passed after some discussion and the Clark bill to compel the care of rural cemeteries and establish an annual cemetery day also gained favorable consideration. The Detroit school board reorganization bill was passed and given immediate effect and the Jerome bill permitting tuition charges of $30 for pupils living outside the districts. The Mathews bill establishing a closed season on bluegills was passed and the McMillan amendment to the highway bill providing for reward on a certain type screened gravel roads.

The rest of the measures passed were appropriation bills. In some cases these were rushed through with the roll calls attached and all were given immediate effect.

In spite of the fact that new bills of any but the most important character cannot hope to get consideration before adjournment, fifteen new legislative proposals were introduced in the house.

Lansing—The "sliding scale" bill, to increase passenger fares for Michigan railroads, Friday morning passed the senate, 24 to 6.

Opponents of the bill, led by Senator Henry Straight, made a determined stand to block its passage, but every amendment offered was decisively defeated.

The senators voted as follows: Yeas—Corliss, Covert, Fitzgibbon, Foster, Gansser, Hanley, Hilsendegen, Hofma, Kelley, McPhillips, Murtha, Odell, Ogg, Paul, Plank, Powell, Roberts, Scott, Smith, Taylor, Tripp, Verdier, Walter, Williams.

Nays—Damon, DeLand, Groger Morford Straight and Woodworth. Senators Barnes and Wood were absent.

Senator Straight offered an amendment to provide that all railroads charging 2 cents a mile should issue mileage books transferable and good for 500 miles at 1-1/2 cent a mile; roads charging 2-1/2 cents should issue such books at 2 cents a mile, and roads charging 3 cents, at 2-1/2 cents a mile. The amendment received four votes.

Senator Straight introduced another amendment to require all the railroads benefited by the increase to use all such benefits for the improvement of the lines or for the purchase of new equipment. This received three votes. Senator Straight put a direct query to Senator Walter Taylor, chairman of the state railroad committee, as to why the Pere Marquette, appraised at $66,000,000, was paying taxes on a valuation of only $25,000,000.

Senator Taylor referred the question to the state board of tax commissioners. In defense of the joint railroad committee of the senate and house, he said, the committee had based its report supporting the fare increase on the most reliable information it could get.

Senator Fred Woodworth attacked the railroad figures, charging that past legislatures had been deceived.

Senator Damon, whose amendment providing for a two-year limit on the relief was defeated Thursday, offered the same amendment again Friday. He read a telegram from Grant H. Sloucum, of the Gleeners, in which the author said 60,000 farmers were standing behind Damon on the two-year relief measure, pending an investigation of conditions. The amendment received 11 votes. Senator Damon called for a roll call vote on the amendment. It received 13 votes, and he gave it up.

Senator Kelley, a member of the legislature of 1907, which passed the two-cent fare law, spoke in support of the rate bill. The most effective argument of the session was made by Chairman Taylor, of the railroad committee, in support of the bill.

It is admitted by the railroad men that the job of getting the rate bill through the house will be more difficult than it has been in the senate. The swing of a handful of votes will decide the bill's fate.

Senator Foster's bill giving the Michigan Agricultural College a tax of one-fifth of a mile was passed by the senate and was ordered to take immediate effect. By unanimous vote the senate favored the Walter bill requiring the state game warden to make a bi-annual compilation of all laws relating to fish and game. The Fitzgibbon bill relative to the appointment of a dental surgeon encountered no opposition.

In committee of the whole the senate agreed to a lengthy amendment to the state highway law introduced in the house by Representative Evans. Senator Murtha's bill requiring employers to report all accidents to the state labor department was also passed in committee of the whole. After considerable debate the senate agreed to Representative Rice's bill to license insurance rating bureaus. Senators Barnes and Tripp made futile attempts to have the bill killed in committee of the whole.

By an overwhelming vote Thursday afternoon the house put the mark of its disapproval on the proposal to amend the constitution to provide for the passage of local acts. The Palmer resolution calling for the submission to the people of this proposition was defeated on third reading.

SOUND ESSENTIALS FOR A FRUIT GARDEN

Japanese "Botan" Plum.

(By L. M. BENNINGTON.)
Don't expect good fruit and plenty of it unless you feed the trees and bushes accordingly.

Large seeded grapes should be discarded. Ashes and bone are first rate fertilizers.

Bury all bones about the roots of vines and trees. Strawberries may be grown the first two years under the grapevines.

Make the soil rich before setting out the vines and plants. If a large crop is wanted, give additional dressings of fertilizers, ashes and bone dust.

Top-dress the orchard and fruit garden, but keep weedy manure out of the strawberry patch. Give the blackberries a corner of cool land and cultivate for two years. After that only cut back the tops and thin out the old canes.

Trees in the fruit garden should be headed low for reasons of convenience and for other reasons affecting the welfare of the trees. Only dwarf varieties should be planted here.

For the fruit garden, the advice not to trim is as bad as not to cultivate. It is the business of the tree to reproduce itself, and the more limb, the more seed in the fruit.

Mulching hill land that washes is better, in many instances, than plowing. Plowing is but mulching by throwing one portion of soil over another. Mulch with litter, boards, boughs, or even rocks, where they are plentiful during the hot weather.

The farm table may be supplied with fresh fruits from rhubarb time, on until late grapes, outside, to be followed by the fall and winter orchard fruits and the surplus of the gardens preserved in various ways. Now is the time to plan your next year's work.

Plum trees should not be pruned until late winter, or in the spring before the sap starts.

A patch of ground, even so small as the eighth of an acre, planted with the different kinds of berries, including currants and grapes, and given good attention and cultivation will supply the average family with all the small fruit that can be used, and enough for winter besides. A few dwarf peaches, peaches, plums and cherries will vary the product in an agreeable way.

The common wild choke-cherry bears a dark red fruit in large clusters, which is much liked by some; is an abundant bearer and a small tree. In spring it yields numerous fragrant white flowers, and is worth growing for ornament if for no other purpose.

For a yard fence, try the hardy orange, Citrus trifoliata; plant in single rows, 18 inches apart. The bush is of dwarf, compact habit, making one of the most ornamental hedges, covered in spring with thousands of sweet-smelling orange blossoms, and in the fall with a lot of little sour oranges. It does not throw up sprouts.

Make a map of your fruit garden as well as of your orchard, drawing it on stiff cardboard, or smoothly dressed board, making every tree, bush or vine, every row of small fruit, giving the names of the varieties.

This will be found of especial value in case you wish to replace with the same variety any which may have died, or having found it particularly satisfactory may wish for more.

MAKE BIG EFFORT TO RENEW WOODLOT

When Second Crop Has Been Cut Stumps Have Lost Vitality—Plant Seedlings.

(By H. R. FLINT, Minnesota College of Forestry.)

Special effort should be made to secure the reproduction of the trees removed from the farm woodlot during the cutting season just passed. In many cases sprouts are counted on for this reproduction and for certain purposes such as fuel, posts and shelter, they can be relied upon to furnish the desired material. When this second crop is cut in its turn, however, the old stumps have lost most, if not all of their vitality and unless some vigorous seedlings have grown up in the meantime, the value of the woodlot is greatly impaired. Since it requires many years to build up a woodlot which has been allowed to run out, it is a wise plan to insure the production of some good healthy seedling trees each year by planting some seed of desirable species in the openings created by the winter's cutting.

During early life the sprouts, because of the advantage of a previously established root system, will outstrip the little seedlings and may deprive them of the requisite amount of light for good growth. Therefore, in the first thinning or cutting of the sprouts some special consideration should be shown the young seedlings.

The method of planting the seeds will depend upon the species used. Walnut, hickory and all of the oaks can be planted about two inches deep in a hole made with a dibble or spud. The smaller seeds such as red and white elm, maple and ash may be planted by removing the coarser litter from a small spot and putting on a few seeds, covering them very lightly with fine soil and a little litter.

In many cases it is better to raise or buy seedlings of the species having small seeds and transplant them in the desired location.

Ventilation is Necessary.
Ventilate the cow barn or you may expect to have weakened and tubercular cows.

SHEEP GREAT HELP FOR THE ORCHARDS

Of High Value in Fertilizing Soil When Given Suitable Supplementary Feed.

The greatest value of sheep in an orchard is found probably in their being used as a means of fertilizing orchards that are bearing.

If put in somewhat early in the spring and fed a suitable supplementary food with the grass which the orchard may furnish, it will be found that the sheep will thus convey fertility to the land, and they will do so in a marked degree if fed on rich kinds of food.

Such food may consist very largely of wheat bran which is in itself a very valuable fertilizer.

It may be wise to encourage the sheep to eat freely, to add a little grain in the form of oats.

A little old cake will also improve the food. The droppings thus left in the orchard will tend very much to its enrichment.

The outcome will be that where this system is persevered in during considerable portions of the season the orchard will thus be provided with a liberal application of fertility.

GOOD SUGGESTIONS FOR ORCHARD WORK

Nice Thing to Have Store of Apples for Winter Use—Care for the Fruit Trees.

The short apple crop has its advantages. Next year we and the buying public will appreciate them more. It is a fine thing to have a store of apples for winter use. They are fine food in various forms at all seasons of the year. They are food of which we never tire.

Care for fruit trees just the same as if there had been a large crop this year. Other fruitful years are coming and the trees will need to be in condition to give high yields.

The reasons for Certain-teed Roofing

Every buyer needs the proper assurance, when he pays for the best quality, that a second or third quality will not be delivered. The market is flooded with too many brands. Some manufacturers with poor facilities too often meet competition by cutting quality. Some wholesalers buy any old quality, put their labels on it, and say it is the best. Our Certain-teed label is backed by the written guarantee of the world's largest manufacturer of asphalt roofings. It gives each buyer the assurance wanted, and our unequalled facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell it at a very reasonable price.

These are the reasons for Certain-teed Roofing

We invite every one interested to come to our mills and see how we make the goods. We know that our Certain-teed Roofing is the best quality that we can make. It's the best quality that can be made to last and remain waterproof on the roof. It is made with that one purpose in view. We also make cheap grade, poor quality roofings to meet the demand for very temporary roofs, but the Certain-teed label goes only on our best quality, longest life product. It is the grade which carries our Company name and endorsement and guarantee—1-ply 5 years, 2-ply 10 years, 3-ply 15 years.

If you want the right quality and want to be sure you are getting what you pay for, insist on the Certain-teed label. The price is reasonable. No one can tell the quality of a piece of roofing by looking at it. The man is not living who can take three kinds of roofing of different qualities and tell with any degree of accuracy the length of time each one will last on the roof. He cannot tell their relative values by looking at them. Why take the chance of guessing, when you can get the safest guarantee on the best quality goods at a reasonable price.

Canadian Wheat to Feed the World

The war's fearful devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and there is an unusual demand for Canadian wheat. Canada's invitation to every industrious American is therefore especially attractive. She wants farmers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves while helping her to raise immense wheat crops.

You can get a Homestead of 160 acres FREE and other lands can be bought at remarkably low prices. Think of the money you can make with wheat at its present high prices, where for some time it is liable to continue. During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre—many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax.

Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada, but there is an extra demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. The Government this year is urging farmers to put extra acreage into grain.
