Stolen Buggies.

Herman Fletcher, of Lima, had his buggy badly wrecked by a careless driver whom he met on the territorial road near the home of Misses Mary and Alma Pierce last Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher were in Chelsea where they attended the entertainment course in the Sylvan theatre, and on their return home met a stranger who was driving from the east and before Mr. Fletcher could get out of the road the two buggies came together. The thills, crossbar and dashboard of Mr. Fletcher's buggy were broken.

A short distance west of where the two rigs came together the stranger ran into a telephone pole and broke the buggy in which he was riding. He had stolen a buggy from the barn of Frank Cooper which he was trailing behind and he abandoned both buggies at the roadside. From there the stranger went to the home of Fred Hinderer on the Manchester road, where he stole a buggy that belong to David Bristol. The thief was evidently careful in his movements at the Hinderer barn, as he had to move another buggy to get the one belonging to Bristol, from which he removed the blankets, coats and tie strap, leaving them on the floor. Between the Hinderer home and the residence of G. T. English the man turned around three times and the last time he evidently went south. No clue has been discovered that will lead to the guilty party.

A New Departure.

A new weekly weather forecast designed especially to aid farmers in planning their farm operations and shippers of perishable products to handle their goods with reference to expected weather conditions, will be inaugurated by the United States Weather Bureau this week, and will appear in the Standard each week. In order to have these weekly forecasts reach the farmers and shippers in small towns with the least possible delay, the bureau also has arranged a system whereby the forecast will be taken Tuesday and reach the weekly newspapers, especially in the corn, wheat and cotton districts, by mail on Wednesday morning which will be in time for the greatest number of them to use the information in their editions. In this way it is believed that the forecast for the week commencing Wednesday morning will be in the hands of most of the farmers and shippers in the small towns, through the medium of the weekly newspapers, Wednesday night, Thursday, or Friday thus giving them the benefit of from 6 to 4 days of advance forecast.

Don't Spear Carp.

So many contradictions appear in the game laws of this state that many fishermen are doubtful as to the limitations set by the statutes on spearing in inland streams.

Particularly this is true to the spearing of carp in the Huron river. The law provides that carp may not be speared in the Huron river, but spearing of mullet, grass pike, redsides and suckers is not prohibited. All of these fish, with the addition of carp may be taken with dip-nets.

Farm Barn Burned.

The large, basement barn, about 40x90, on the farm of Mrs. Frank P. Glazier at Cavanaugh Lake was burned to the ground Wednesday afternoon.

The blaze is thought to have started from burning leaves and was discovered about 3 o'clock. The flames had gained considerable headway when discovered. All of the live stock except one calf, and most of the farm tools were saved.

The barn was practically a new building and was probably worth about $2,500. There was an insurance of $800 on the building and $800 on the contents. The silo which stood near the barn escaped any material damage.

S., which is to be held Friday afternoon and evening, May 7th, in Manchester. Mrs. Kate B. Joslyn, of Ypsilanti, is president and urges all Chapters in the county to send as large representation as possible. A six o'clock banquet will be served, followed by the evening program given by representatives from every Chapter in the county.

Fire Drills.

Fire drills in schools, factories and other places where people congregate in large numbers, serve as a means of preventing possible loss of life. Fire drills should be regularly held under the supervision of some specially designated person who has had training in fire fighting or made a special study of that subject and of fire prevention. Drill should be so arranged in schools that at least once a week the entire attendance should participate, and in factories all employees should be required under penalty to present themselves for drill and only under extraordinary circumstance should excuse for not doing so be accepted.

Elected Directors.

The adjourned meeting of the Chelsea Business Men's Association at the Freeman's hall Monday evening was attended by about fifty members. The only business that was transacted was the election of twelve directors, and the vote resulted as follows: H. S. Holmes, O. T. Hoover, R. D. Walker, L. T. Freeman, D. H. Wurster, H. D. Witherell, Howard S. Holmes, L. P. Vogel, J. T. Woods, Paul O. Bacon, H. J. Dancer, A. W. Wilkinson. Sixteen new members were added to the roll of membership at this meeting.

Fred Thrun officiating. They were attended by Miss Lucy Feldkamp and Mr. Ernest Strieter, a brother of the groom. The young couple will reside in Scio, at the home of the bride's father, Jacob Staebler.

When And How We Should Spray.

Everyone who has given the matter any attention, realizes that it is not possible to grow first-class fruit without spraying the trees. If one has not demonstrated to his own satisfaction that it will be a profitable investment, it is only necessary to experiment with a few trees or, better yet, interview any up-to-date grower, since all of them are convinced from experience that spraying pays as an investment and practically insures a crop of fruit if other conditions are favorable.

In order to secure satisfactory results, the proper materials must be used and the work should be done in a thorough manner and at the right intervals. After the new growth has started it is important that the leaves and fruit be covered continuously with substances which will prevent the attack of insects and diseases. For the most part, the dangerous insects are those which eat either the leaves or the fruit and, for all such pests, arsenate of lead should be used at the rate of 2 to 3 pounds of paste, or one-half that amount of the powder in 50 gallons of water.

For the fungous diseases of fruit trees, such as the scab upon apples and pears, the rot and leaf-blight of plums and cherries, and the leaf-curl of the peach, commercial lime-sulphur solution is the remedy preferred. It can be used for apples and pears after the growth has started at the rate of 1 gallon to 35 gallons of water, but 1 gallon to 50 gallons will be sufficient for cherries and plums. Since the spraying for the leaf-curl of the peach must be done before the buds have swollen, the strength may be increased to 1 in 9. When used upon the foliage of peaches and Japanese plums for the prevention of brown-rot and leaf-blight, not more than 1 quart of lime-sulphur should be used for 50 gallons of water, but 2 pounds of flour of sulphur and the same amount of hydrated lime, made into a paste, should be added just before it is used. The labor of spraying is greatly reduced since it is possible to combine the arsenate of lead with the lime-sulphur solution.

The first application should be made as soon as the growth has started and there is anything to spray, which will be about the time the blossom buds have developed so that the individual flowers may be seen. This will be when the flower buds are in "the pink."

The second application should be given within a week after the petals have fallen and the fruit has set; and a third spraying can generally be given to advantage two or three weeks later. Just how many other applications may be made with profit will depend upon the season, the prevalence of the insects and fungi, as well as upon the varieties of the fruit, some of which require more attention than others. In some cases, a fourth application will be needed three weeks after the third; and for winter varieties of apples, and for varieties of plums and peaches that are subject to the attack of the brown-rot, one or more applications in the early part of August should be made.

Michigan History.

The state constitution of 1850 provided that the question of revision of the constitution should be submitted to a vote of the people at the general election of 1866. An overwhelming majority of the voters signified their approval of the convention proposal, and on May 15, 1867, the convention assembled at Lansing. One hundred delegates attended. After a 74-day session, the convention completed its draft of a new constitution.

In many respects the document followed closely the provisions of the constitution of 1850, but, in addition, it contained provisions empowering townships and cities to vote aid to railroads, increasing the salaries of state officials, and permitting further salary increases by a two-third vote of the legislature.

Although the proposed new constitution embraced many features which were admittedly favored by a majority of the voters, these were offset by objectionable provisions, and the constitution was defeated by a decisive vote.

CARS CLAIM TOLL OF FOUR SUNDAY

ACCIDENTS RESULT FATALITY AT KALAMAZOO AND CLAR-ENCEVILLE.

AUTOS STRUCK ON TRACKS

Man and Wife in One Instance and Father and Daughter in Other
Are Victims of Trolley Cars.

Kalamazoo—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pare are dead and their 14-year-old daughter, Marie, frightfully injured as the result of an automobile accident at an early hour Sunday morning.

Frank Barrit, 48, who was in the car, was also badly hurt. William Sharpless, owner and driver of the automobile, escaped without injury. All were returning from a party.

Sharpless started to turn his machine in front of a street car but misjudged the speed of the car. It hit the automobile squarely, hurling it with its occupants with terrific force against a telephone pole.

Mrs. Pare was so badly hurt that she died in the ambulance. An operation was performed on Pare's skull but he died at noon Sunday from concussion of the brain.

Two Dead at Farmington.

Farmington—Cecil Cogdill, of Clarenceville, and his 4-year-old daughter, Harriett, were killed outright; Glen, his 3-year-old son, sent to Grace hospital suffering severe bruises, and Stuart Cogdill, of Detroit, brother of Cecil, was slightly injured Sunday afternoon when a Detroit-bound inter-urban car struck an automobile in which they were driving.

Stuart Cogdill, a machinist, 755 West Milwaukee avenue, drove out to Clarenceville Sunday to visit his brother and took him and his two children for a drive. Returning, Mr. Cogdill was crossing the track to enter his brother's grounds when the auto was struck by the car. It was reported that the car was a second section and that the party had waited for the first to pass after which they took it for granted that the coast was clear.

NEW PLAN FOR CALIFORNIA

Bill for Non-Partisan State Elections
Passed By Legislature.

Sacramento, Cal.—Non-partisan elections of all state officers is established in bills passed by the senate Friday.

The bills, already passed by the assembly, fulfill the leading legislative recommendation of Governor Johnson. California is said to be the first state to adopt such legislation.

Opponents of the bills say a referendum will be invoked to put the issues of state non-partisanship to a vote of the people.

DAYLIGHT RAID OF FLYERS

German Aeroplanes Drop Bombs On Three English Towns Friday.

London—German aeroplanes Friday dropped bombs on Sittingbourne, 30 miles from London, on Faversham, 41 miles from London, and on Herne Bay, six miles from Canterbury and 50 miles from London. This made the third raid on England in 48 hours. The damage reported is slight, and it is said British airmen drove the raiders away. The raid is described as the first daylight air attack on England and evidently follows the presence at Cuxhaven of Count Zeppelin.

HIS LIBEL SUIT AGAINST ROOSEVELT BEING TRIED

WILLIAM BARNES, JR.

Court House, Syracuse, N. Y.—With the small courtroom crowded to capacity and the corridors crowded with people, mostly women, anxious for admission, the $50,000 libel suit of William Barnes, former New York state republican chairman, against former President Theodore Roosevelt, came to trial at 10:10 a. m. Monday before Justice William S. Andrews in part I. of the supreme court of Onondaga county. Mr. Barnes charges that Col. Roosevelt referred to him in public print as fostering corruption and as being a "boss." The case is the most sensational of its kind for many years.

MANY ARE IDLE IN CHICAGO

Lockout of Carpenters Throws 125,000 Men Out of Work and Stops
Thirty Million Dollars Worth of Building.

Chicago—Lockout of 16,000 union carpenters assumed serious proportions Saturday, tying up operations valued at more than $30,000,000 on 4,000 buildings in Chicago being erected by 1,200 contractors, and throwing out of employment 125,000 wage earners, thousands of whom had no connection with the building industry itself.

The Lumber Dealers' association announced that 5,000 men would be discharged pending settlement of the strikes and lockouts. These men have had no part in the contentions between the Building Construction Employers' association and the union forces which refused to bind themselves to a three-year contract designed to prevent sympathetic strikes and their attendant evils.

The board of arbitration was ordered to meet by Gov. Edward F. Dunne. The board does not have authority to settle labor disputes, but is empowered to investigate and make public the findings.

The contractors, it was announced, have withdrawn their previous offer of a wage increase and if the carpenters returned to work it would be at the old rate of 65 cents an hour.

The carpenters demanded 70 cents. The contractors offered a two and one-half cent increase for the last 18 months of the proposed three-year agreement.

The contractors are pledged and bonded to maintain their stand until every union in the structural trades comes to terms. The terms include an anti-strike agreement covering a period of three years. The union leaders declared that the strike would not end until the demands of the men for an increase in wages had been granted.

TELEGRAPHIC FLASHES

The house committee on insurance Wednesday agreed that no action shall be taken this session on the bill to create an investigating commission to report to the 1917 legislature a plan for the state to engage in various kinds of insurance.

Walter Vanitvel, 21 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Vanitvel, of Waukegan, was instantly killed Wednesday near Loretto, by the overturning of an automobile which he was driving. It is thought the accident was caused by the breaking of the steering gear.

Alger county stays "dry" by two votes. The board of supervisors Monday canvassed last Monday's vote and decided that the "drys" had won by two votes instead of the one that unofficial reports had recorded. The "wets" have filed a petition for a recount in six precincts.

President Wilson Wednesday made the following recess appointments of Michigan postmasters: Joseph Werle, Arcadia; Michael C. Scully, Marquette; John R. Santo, Traverse City.

William E. Watson, well known and well-to-do farmer, near Bancroft, was struck by a Grand Trunk train Wednesday night and died a few hours afterward. He was partially blind and deaf, and did not see or hear the train approaching as he crossed the track on his way home to his farm. He was 73 years old, and leaves three sons, all in business in Bancroft.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

DRYS IN SENATE VOTE TO KILL
STRAIGHT STATEWIDE PRO-HIBITION MEASURE.

DID NOT LIKE AMENDMENTS

Anti-Saloon League Announce That Fight Will Be Made by Placing Question on Ballot by Petition of People.

[By Gurd H. Hayes.]

Lansing—The straight statewide prohibition measure was killed by the "drys" themselves in the senate Friday. The "wets" were taken unaware and when a vote was called to decide the fate of the bill Senator Corliss moved a call of the senate and 31 senators lined up for a vote. Senator Barnes, of Flint, a "dry," leading the roll call, voted "no," and was followed by other "drys" who, disgusted at the action of the "wets" in placing amendments in the bill that meant its defeat, made up their minds to let the legislature go and submit the proposition by the initiative.

When the roll call was completed Senators Fitzgibbon, Gansser, Roberts and Wood were the only ones recorded for the bill, and Gansser and Wood changed their votes to line up with the "drys" before the final vote was announced. This left Senators Roberts and Fitzgibbon as the only senators going on the official record in favor of the bill as amended.

Seeing that the "drys" were bent on killing the bill, several "wet" senators lined up against the bill when their names were called and saved their positions by not having to change their votes.

Immediately following the announcement that the bill was killed Grant Hudson, of the Michigan Anti-Saloon league, announced that within the next 30 days a general call would be issued to all organizations in the state who are fighting the liquor traffic for a big conference to be held in Lansing, when steps will be taken to secure petitions to submit the question of statewide prohibition at the earliest election possible.

The killing of the bill all came about by the action of the "wet" in the senate in amending the bill by changing the time of holding the election, barring medicines containing 20 per cent of alcohol from the state. The latter amendment was the principal objection, several "drys" claiming that patent medicine concerns would contribute so large a campaign fund as to seriously endanger the bill being passed by the people.

Lansing—Rep. James Henry's bill calling for a railway passenger fare investigating commission and introduced at the Thursday afternoon session of the house was a part of the compromise agreement of the railway leaders by which the permanent disposition of the rate question is put up to the next legislature.

In explaining to the house the terms of the agreement, Rep. Henry announced that the various amendments would be given consideration when the bill was under third reading and suggested that certain compromises had been agreed to. When the bill has passed he sent up the commission bill which is aimed to be supplemental to the graded fare measure passed by the senate which will be amended to cover only a period of two years. The bill calls for a commission of five, to be appointed by the governor immediately with the passage of the bill. One of the commission must be an attorney; one a practical railway man; one a business man in either mercantile or manufacturing business and the fourth to be appointed at the discretion of the chief executive.

The usual provisions for expenses to be paid out of the general fund for headquarters, travelling, office force and assistants, calling, swearing and examining of witnesses is made in the bill and the commissions' term of activity is limited to March 1, 1917. It is directed to investigate the railway passenger fare problem, determine the net income from passenger service and determine and recommend to the next legislature a scale of passenger fares that shall be just to the companies and the traveling public.

This bill together with the amendment proposed for the Taylor measure limiting its relief to a period of two years makes any action the present legislature may take, merely a temporary relief pending the determination of the question whether the railways are entitled to charge added passenger fares.

Even the compromise idea does not meet with the approval of the opponents of the bill to increase railway passenger fares. Messrs. Wiley and Symonds who are fighting the bill, have said this is best compared to the giving of medicine before the physician is called to diagnose the case. They oppose this just as fervently as they have fought against the proposal to give either a flat, graded or temporary boost in rates.

After toying with the pet bill of the labor interests of the state for more than an hour Wednesday afternoon, the house of representatives mercifully ended its agonies and delivered the death blow by a decisive vote to strike out all after the enacting clause. Chief among the bills sought by labor was the measure of Senator Deland amending the compensation law. To be sure it was but a ghost of its former self after weathering rough passage through the senate and the committees, but what was left, the working men of the state wanted and wanted badly. But the domination of the employer was supreme in the house and the remnants of the appeal of labor was ruthlessly cast aside.

Originally the bill called for many sweeping changes but one by one had been whittled off until it represented three basic amendments to the existing law: commutation in cases of employment by sub-contractors; three months instead of three weeks medical or hospital care and compensation based on earning capacity rather than limited to the wages paid at the time of the accident.

When the bill came up in committee of the whole it seems for a moment it was to escape unscathed. Indeed the chairman had announced it passed before Rep. Robertson of Saginaw hopped up and fired the first broadside. He said the measure was not needed; that more time should be had to try out the present law and cited several arguments against the bill. Rep. W. J. Jerome of Hillsdale rushed to the defense of the measure, cited what had been cut from the bill by the committee and asserted that the employers of the state had no objection to it as it stood.

Rep. Sheridan Ford of Detroit followed the Hillsdale preacher-member with an eloquent appeal for the bill and for the working men. Then Rep. Empson took up the employers' side of the battle and one of the prettiest parliamentary skirmishes of the session developed.

Rep. Newell Smith's bill designed to bring all county officers with the exception of probate and circuit judges under the two-term limit now applicable to county treasurers and sheriffs was killed in committee of the whole Thursday afternoon, even the author exemplifying little regard for its success.

There was considerable discussion before a motion was made by Rep. Flowers to strike out all after the enacting clause. Rep. Smith, author of the measure, then spoke in a facetious vein and concluded by supporting the proposal to kill his own bill. It was killed with a whoop.

The fireman's furlough bill calling for one day off in every four and an annual furlough of fifteen days, which failed, of passage three weeks ago and was tabled, but taken from the table at the instance of Rep. William Martz and passed by the almost unanimous vote of eighty-two to seven. The speech of Rep. Sheridan Ford largely was responsible for the change of sentiment. He made a most effective and stirring appeal for the firemen. This was Senator Covert's bill and it now is awaiting the signature of the governor to become a law.

Rep. Lewis' anti-ambulance chaser bill was passed by the house without a ripple of opposition but his angler's license bill ran the gamut of a lot of amendments and some spirited opposition, but succeeded in passage to the order of third reading.

Senator Verdie's bill for the registration, regulating and licensing of architects was also killed by the house committee of the whole.

Lansing—Tuesday proved a banner day for the reconsideration of supposed defunct measures. Three bills supposed killed, were resurrected and either passed or placed on the order of third reading. Chief among these was what has been popularly termed the "long distance voting" measure which provides for balloting by mail by absent travelling men, members of the legislature and persons in educational institutions and the military service.

This bill came up on general order in the regular course of events and in spite of a fight made for it by Rep. Warner, was re-referred to the committee. It was argued it was unworkable and impracticable. The friends of the measure insisted the people in voting to amend the constitution to provide for mail balloting expressed their desire for such a bill, but this argument failed until a record vote was obtained when the report of the committee of the whole up for confirmation. The idea of going on record as opposing what the people had given a majority of 15,000 for did not appeal to those who were bold enough on a viva voce vote and the report of the committee was turned down and the bill resurrected and automatically placed on the order of third reading.

Rep. Whitely also figured in the resurrecting bee when he dug the state board of health bill providing that the secretary of that board should be a medical man of ten years experience and appointed by the governor only on recommendation of the board of the table and obtained its passage with fifty-eight favorable votes.

Objection had been made to this bill on the ground that it was a partisan politics bill and when it was up before, was defeated by a narrow margin. While the house was in the business of Finnegizing Tuesday, Whitely trotted it out under a resolute and pushed it through before the opponents who fought the bill before were fully aware what was under way.

CONFIRM REPORT OF VILLA'S ROUT

U. S. CONSULAR AGENTS ADVISE THAT HE SUFFERED WORST
DEFEAT OF CAREER.

LOSES SIX THOUSAND MEN

It Is Believed That the Victorious
Obregon May Occupy Mexico
City With Little Difficulty.

Washington—Suffering the worst defeat of his life, forced to shoot his own officers to stem the tide of retreat, General Villa is at Aguascalientes, where he retreated from the blow at the hands of General Obregon at Celaya that demoralized his hitherto invincible fighting force.

Part of his army is at Aguascalientes and part of it has fled north, according to dispatches Monday from United States consular agents.

At the head of 20,000 men, flushed with victory, Obregon is reported to be pressing the Villa troops as they retreat northward.

Villa's losses in the six days fighting ending Saturday were estimated at 6,000 killed and wounded.

Fourteen troop trains carrying the defeated chieftain and his battered army arrived Monday at Aguascalientes, 125 miles north of the battleground around Celaya and Irapuata.

From the border, too, came confirmation of the reported withdrawal southward of Villa forces which have been besieging Matamoros.

Officials here would not be surprised in view of all the developments of the past few days, if Villa had difficulty in maintaining his line of communication to the American border. The loyalty of some of his garrisons is said to be questioned. It also is said that with Zapata cut off from communication with the north, occupation of Mexico City might be accomplished by Obregon with little difficulty.

ASK NEW TRIAL FOR NEGRO

Attorney for Kimbrough Claims to Have Evidence Clearing Child.

Saginaw—Developments that are considered of importance occurred in the Charles Kimbrough case Saturday. Affidavits have been secured that, it is believed, will clear the Negro of the charge of slaying and burning the body of Rose Laundry, 8 years old, in a candy factory for which he was recently sent to Marquette prison for life. Attorney Robert J. Curry has secured an affidavit of a man in Saginaw county, who knew the Negro, that he was in Harry's picture theatre at 6:30 o'clock the night of January 3 and saw Kimbrough watching the pictures. Kimbrough has repeatedly stated he was at this picture show, but because he had been in Saginaw a short time he couldn't tell any one who was at the same show.

This would provide a clear alibi for the Negro, as the girl did not leave her home to go to the McCray restaurant until about 6:30 o'clock. Curry, on this information, will ask a new trial.

FRANK LOSES LAST APPEAL

U. S. Supreme Court Refuses to Release Condemned Factory Superintendent.

Washington—Leo M. Frank, the Brooklyn man under death sentence for the killing of Mary Phagan, an Atlanta factory girl, lost another step in his fight for life in the supreme court of the United States Monday. In a decision, to which Justices Holmes and Hughes dissented, the court dismissed Frank's appeal from the federal court of Georgia, which refused to release him in a writ of habeas corpus.

Seemingly no other avenue of escape from the death penalty is open to Frank through the courts. Only the state pardon officials can relieve him.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRE

Wilbur Evans lost both legs and Frank Smith was internally injured when they jumped from a moving Michigan Central train at Battle Creek. Both will live. They reside in Lansing.

The Hague, via London—A submarine sank the Dutch steamer Katwyk, which went down Thursday near the North Hinder lightship, according to a report of the examination of the vessel's captain and crew published by the department of marine.

London—The American steamers Llama and Muskegon, from American ports laden with oil and detained at Kirkwall since April 6 and April 7 respectively, have been released and are now on their way to Copenhagen.

Tokio—The cabinet Friday fixed November 10 as the date for coronation of Emperor Yoshihito. The ceremony was to have taken place last November, but a postponement followed the death of the dowager empress. The diet already has appropriated $2,000,000 for the ceremony.

HIS TOWER MAIDEN

By CONSTANCE MORTON.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Strange to relate Deane Barlow had never been in love—not until that April evening when he had returned to the room at Mrs. Pilling's boarding house and had discovered his Tower Lady.

The "tower" was the narrow, interesting wing of a fashionable private hotel around the corner, and at one of its lace-draped windows he had discovered a girl's lovely, wistful face sometimes looking out at the sunset clouds piling in the west and just visible through a rift in the buildings, sometimes, and more often, bent thoughtfully downward as if she read a book.

Deane grew to love her hair of pale gold and her eyes of some mysterious color that distance would not reveal. He worshipped her from afar, for he knew that there was a wide social barrier raised between the occupant of that luxurious suite and a poor young law clerk.

At night the curtains of the "tower" were drawn and his lady had washed. Twenty-four hours must elapse before he might glimpse her face again. It was only in the afternoon that he saw her; never at other times or on Sundays.

At the dinner table that night there was much animation among the boarders. Miss Brown, who operated the telephone switchboard in the hotel around the corner, had revealed the fact that there was to be a wedding in the Pallisade the next day—at least one of the guests was to be married; had they not all seen the beautiful Miss Gladys Elmhurst?

"A blonde, isn't she?" asked Ada Wasson eagerly.

Miss Brown nodded her head.

Mr. Pilling, who carved the roast, looked up from under his shaggy eyebrows.

"Who's she going to marry?" he asked gruffly.

"Bradbury Kohler—he's got oceans of money."

Deane Barlow winced.

Bradbury Kohler was one of his employers—a big, jovial, red-faced young man. So Bradbury was going to marry Deane's Tower Lady! No wonder the tower window was darkened; the prospective bride would have no

Saturday Night at the Princess.
President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, was the first of the American film manufacturers to declare his position, and that of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, with respect to the attitude to be maintained towards the combatants in the European war. "Be Neutral" was President Wilson's admonition to the people of the United States. President Laemmle, realizing the absolute necessity for this, not only in its broadest sense, but also with respect to exhibitors and film manufacturers, immediately had issued a film play with its title, "Be Neutral." The soundness of Mr. Laemmle's stand and the great good which the film accomplished was recognized by every one interested in film plays. But the Universal campaign in this direction was not to stop here. "Let Us Have Peace," a two-reel Rex drama, produced and acted by the eminent screen star, Ben Wilson, comes as a splendid encore to the former film. With the human-interest element running through every scene, with a climax that is at once touching and yet humorous, a lesson of vital importance is strongly impressed upon the spectator.

"Let Us Have Peace" will perform a two-fold mission—it will amuse and entertain, the primary object of every film play, and at the same time it will point out to the vast public just why every one should refrain from taking sides in the present European crisis. In other words, we get this fact from the play: that every person in this great nation, no matter what his nationality, is just human—that every one has a fair amount of faults and a fair amount of virtues, that it behooves none of us to despise our neighbor just because of his nationality.

"At Mexico's Mercy" a Victor drama with J. Warren Kerrigan and Vera Sisson. A timely play dealing with an American boy and girl in the southern republic. Jack Kerrigan as the hero, resents an insult to his flag, and before his sweetheart's eyes, administers punishment. There is dash and vigor to the story. Animated Weekly No. 141. A continuous performance. Doors open at 7:00. First show starts at 7:15 p. m. Adv.

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a caged parrot, the bird known up and down the Irrawaddy as Parrot & Co., are bound for Rangoon. Elsa Chetwood, rich American girl tourist, sees Warrington and asks the parrot to introduce her. He tells her that Warrington has beaten a syndicate and sold his oil claims for $20,000. Warrington puts Rajah, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and they pass two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is gossip. In Rangoon, Warrington interferes in a row over cards caused by an enemy. Newell Craig, and threatens to shoot him unless he leaves town. Elsa is annoyed by Craig and stabs him with a hatpin. Warrington bids Elsa good-by. Warrington discovers Elsa on the Singapore steamer. Elsa tells him of her engagement. He avoids Elsa, who thinks he may be ill and makes inquiries regarding the misinterpretation of her concern. Craig is aboard and is warned by Warrington. Warrington comes to avoid Elsa. Craig stirs up evil gossip. Elsa tells Warrington of the hatpin incident and he hunts up Craig on murder bent, only to find him strangled out drunk on deck. Warrington turns the hose on Craig. He tells Elsa that he is a man under a cloud and to be avoided, but Elsa refuses. She gets the cut direct from society passengers.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

For years Martha had discharged her duties, if mechanically yet with a sense of pleasure and serenity. At this moment she was as one pushed unexpectedly to the brink of a precipice, over which the slightest misstep would topple her. The world was out of joint.

"I wish we had gone to Italy," she remarked finally.

"It would not have served my purpose in the least. I should have been dancing and playing bridge and going to operas. I should have had no time for thinking."

"Thinking!" Martha elevated her brows with an air that implied that she greatly doubted this statement.

"Yes, thinking. It is not necessary that I should mope and shut myself up in a cell, Martha, in order to think. I have finally come to the end of my doubts, if that will gratify you. From now on you may rely upon one thing, to a certainty."

Martha hesitated to put the question.

"I am not going to marry Arthur. He is charming, graceful, accomplished; but I want a man. I should not be happy with him. I can twist him too easily around my finger. I admit that he exercises over me a certain indefinable fascination; but when he is out of sight it amounts to the sum of all this doddering and doubting. It is probable that I shall make an admirable old maid. Wisdom has its disadvantages. I might be very happy with Arthur, were I not so wise." She smiled again at the reflection in the mirror. "Now, let us go and astonish the natives."

There was a mild flutter of eyelids as she sat down beside Warrington and began to chatter to him in Italian. He made a brave show of following her, but became hopelessly lost after a few minutes. Elsa spoke fluently; twelve years had elapsed since his last visit to Italy. He admitted his confusion, and thereafter it was only occasionally that she brought the tongue into the conversation. This diversion, which she employed mainly to annoy her neighbors, was, in truth, the very worst thing she could have done. They no longer conjectured; they assumed.

Warrington was too strongly dazzled by her beauty tonight to be mentally keen or to be observing as was his habit. He never spoke to his neighbor; under whose eyes for none but Elsa, under whose spell he knew that he would remain while he lived. He was nothing to her; he readily understood. She was restless and lonely, and he amused her. So be it. He believed that there could not be an unhappier, more unfortunate man than himself. To have been betrayed by the one he had loved, second to but one, and to have this knowledge thrust upon him after all these years, was evil enough; but the nadir of his misfortunes had been reached by the appearance of this unreadable young woman.

"You are not listening to a word I am saying!"

"I beg your pardon! But I warned you that my Italian was rusty." He pulled himself together.

"But I have been rattling away in English!"

"And I have been wool-gathering."

"Not at all complimentary to me."

"It is because I am very unhappy; it is because Tantalus and I are brothers."

"I wish I could make you forget."

"On the contrary, the sight of you makes memory all the keener."

He had never spoken like that before. It rather subdued her, made her regret that she had surrendered to a vanity that was without aim or direction. Farthest from her thought was conquest of the man. She did not wish to hurt him. She was not a coquette. After dinner he did not suggest the usual promenade. Instead, he excused himself and went below.

They arrived at P. nung early Monday morning. Elsa decided that Warrington should take her and Martha on a promenade, conducted tour of the pretty town. As they left for shore he produced a small beautiful blue feather; he gave it to Elsa with the compliments of Rajah; and she stuck it in the pugose of her helmet.

"This is not from the dove of peace."

"Its arch-enemy, rather," he laughed.

"I wish I had the ability to get as furious as that bird. It might do me a world of good."

"And how long is it since you were here?"

"Four years," he answered without enthusiasm. He would not have come ashore at all but for the fact that Elsa had ordered the expedition.

There was no inclination to explore the shops; so they hired a landau and rode about town, climbed up to the quaint temple in the hills, and made a tour of the botanical gardens.

"Isn't it delicious!" murmured Elsa, taking in deep breaths of the warm spice-laden air. Since her visit to the wonderful gardens at Kandy in Ceylon she had found a new interest in plants and trees.

She thoroughly enjoyed the few hours on land, even to the powwow Warrington had with the unscrupulous driver, who, at the journey's end, substituted one price for another, despite his original bargain.

As they waited for the tender that was to convey them back to the ship, Elsa observed a powerful middle-aged man, gray-haired, hawk-faced, steel-eyed, watching her companion intently. Then his boring gaze traveled over her, from her canvas shoes to her helmet. There was something so baldly appraising in the look that a flush of anger surged into her cheeks. The man turned and said something to his companion, who shrugged and smiled. Impatiently Elsa tugged at Warrington's sleeve.

"Who is that man over there by the railing?" she asked in a very low voice.

"He looks as if he knew you."

"Knew me?" Warrington echoed. The moment he had been dreading had come. Someone who knew him! He turned his head slowly, and Elsa, who had not dropped her hand, could feel the muscles of his arm stiffen under the sleeve. He had the stronger eye defiantly. Elsa spoke fluently; twelve years had elapsed since his last visit to Italy. He admitted his confusion, and thereafter it was only occasionally that she brought the tongue into the conversation. This diversion, which she employed mainly to annoy her neighbors, was, in truth, the very worst thing she could have done. They no longer conjectured; they assumed.

Then His Boring Gaze Traveled Over Her.

For the second time since that night on the Irrawaddy, Elsa recorded a disagreeable sensation. It proved to be transitory, but at the time it served to establish a stronger doubt in regard to her independence, so justifiably leading her too far away from the stepping-off place. The unspoken words in those hateful eyes! The man knew Warrington, knew him perhaps as a malefactor, and judged his associates accordingly. She thus readily saw the place she occupied in the man's estimation. She experienced a shiver of dread as she observed that he stepped on board the tender. She even heard him call back to his friend to expect him in from Singapore during the second week in March. But the dread went away, and pride and anger grew instead. All the way back to the ship she held her chin in the air, and from time to time her nostrils dilated. That look! If she had been nearer she was certain that she would have struck him across the face.

"There will be no one up in the bow," said Warrington. "Will you go up there with me?"

After a moment's hesitation, she nodded. A moment after she felt the old familiar throb under her feet, and the ship moved slowly out of the bay.

"Do you know that that man came aboard?"

"I know it." The wide half-circle of coconut palms grew denser and lower as they drew away. "This is the story,"

It's got to be told. I should have avoided it if it had been possible. He is the owner of the plantation. Oh, I rather expected something like this. It's my run of luck. I was just recovering from the fever. God knows how he found out, but he did. It was during the rains. He told me to get out that night. Didn't care whether I died on the road or not. I should have but for my boy James. The man sent along with us a poor discarded woman, of whom he had grown tired. She died when we reached town. I had hardly any money. He refused to pay me for the last two months, about fifty pounds. There was no redress for me. There was no possible way I could get back at him. Miss Chetwood. I took money that did not belong to me. I went over gaming tables. Craig. I ran away. Craig knows and this man Mallow knows. Can you not see the wisdom of giving me a wide berth?"

"Oh, I am sorry!" she cried.

"Thanks. But you see; I am an out-cast. Tonight, not a soul on board will be in ignorance of who I am and what I have done. Trust Craig and Mallow for that. Thursday we shall be in Singapore. You must not speak to me again. Give them to understand that you have found me out, that I imposed on your kindness."

"That I will not do."

"Act as you please. There are empty chairs at the second-class table, among the natives. And now, good-by. The happiest hours in ten long years are due to you." He took off his helmet and stepped aside for her to pass. She held out her hand, but he shook his head. "Don't make it harder for me."

"Mr. Warrington, I am not a child!"

"To me you have been the angel of kindness; and the light in your face I shall always see. Please go now."

"Very well." A new and unaccountable pain filled her throat and forced her to carry her head high. "I can find my way back to the other deck."

CHAPTER XII.

The Game of Gossip.

During the concluding days of the voyage Elsa had her meals served on deck. She kept Martha with her continually, promenaded only early in the morning and at night while the other passengers were at dinner. This left a clear deck. She walked quickly, her arm in Martha's, literally propelling her along, never spoke unless spoken to, and then answered in monosyllables. Her thoughts flew to a thousand and one things, futilely and vainly, in the endeavor to shut out the portrait of the broken man. What was he doing, of what was he thinking, where would he go and what would he do? She hated night, which no longer offering sleep, provided nothing in lieu of it, and compelled her to remain in the stuffy cabin. She was afraid.

Early Wednesday morning she passed Craig and Mallow; but the two had wit enough to step aside for her and to speak only with their eyes. She filled Craig with unadulterated fear. Mallow dragged along the gambler whenever he found a chance to see Elsa at close range.

"There's a woman, Gad! that beach-comber has taste."

"I tell you to look out for her," Craig warned again. "I know what I'm talking about."

Mallow whistled. "Oho! You probably acted the fool. Drinking?"

Craig nodded affirmatively.

"Thought so. Even a Yokohama barmaid will fight shy of a boozier. I'm going to meet her when we get to Singapore, or my name's not Mallow."

Craig laughed with malice. "I hope you will. It will take some of the brag out of you. Say, let's go aft and hunt up the chap. I understand he's taken up quarters in the second cabin."

"Doesn't want to run into me. All right; come on. We'll stir him up a little and have some fun."

They found Warrington up in the stern, sitting on the deck, surrounded by squatting Lascars, some Chinamen and a solitary white man, the chief engineer's assistant. The center of interest was Rajah, who was performing his tricks. Among these was one that the bird rarely could be made to perform, the threading of beads. He despised this act, as it entailed the putting of a blunt needle in his beak. He flung it aside each time Warrington handed it to him. But ever his master patiently returned it. At length, recognizing that the affair might be prolonged indefinitely, Rajah put two beads on the thread and tossed it aside. The Lascars jabbered, the Chinamen grinned, and the chief engineer's assistant swore approvingly. The parrot shrilled and waddled back to his cage.

"Fine business for a whole man!"

Warrington looked up to meet the cynical eyes of Mallow. He took out his cutty and fired it. Otherwise he did not move nor let his gaze swerve. Mallow, towering above him, could scarcely resist the temptation to stir his enemy with the toe of his boot. His hatred for Warrington was not wholly due to his brutal treatment of him. Mallow always took pleasure in dominating those under him by fear. Warrington had done his work well. He had always recognized Mallow as his employer, but in no other capacity; he had never offered to smoke a pipe with him, or to take a hand at cards or split a bottle. It had not been done offensively; but in this attitude Mallow had recognized his manager's disapproval of him, an inner consciousness of superiority in birth and education. He had with supreme satisfaction ordered him off the plantation that memorable night. Weak as the man had been in body, there had been no indication of weakness in spirit.

Occasionally Warrington read the desire in the other's eyes. "I shouldn't do it Mallow," he said. "I shouldn't. Nothing would please me better than to have a good excuse to chuck you over the rail. Upon a time you had the best of me. I was a sick man then. I'm in tolerable good health at present."

"You crow, I could break you like a pipe stem," Mallow rammed his hands into his coat pockets, scowling contemptuously. He weighed fully twenty pounds more than Warrington.

Crow! Warrington shrugged. In the East crow is a rough synonym for thief. "You're at liberty to return to your diggings forward with that impression," he replied coolly. "When we get to Singapore," rising slowly to his height until his eyes were level with Mallow's, "when we get to Singapore, I'm going to ask you for that fifty pounds, earned in honest labor."

In the East Crow Is a Rough Synonym for Thief!

"And if I decline to pay?" truculently.

"We'll talk that over when we reach port. Now," roughly, "get out. There won't be any baiting done today, thank you."

"Coekalorem!" jeered Mallow. Craig touched his sleeve, but he threw off the hand roughly. He was one of the best rough and tumble fighters in the Straits settlements. "You thieving beach-comber, I don't want to mess up the deck with you, but I'll cut your comb for you when we get to port."

Warrington laughed insolently and picked up the parrot cage. "I'll bring the comb. In fact, I always carry it." Not a word to Craig, not a glance in his direction. Warrington stepped to the companionway and went below.

Craig could not resist grinning at Mallow's discomfiture. "Wouldn't break, eh?"

"Shut your mouth! The sneaking dock-walloper, I'll take the starch out of him when we land! Always had that high and mighty air. Wants folks to think he's a gentleman."

"He was once," said Craig. "No use giving you advice; but he's not a healthy individual to bait. I'm no kitten when it comes to scarping; but I haven't any desire to mix things with him." The fury of the man who had given him the ducking was still vivid. He had been handled as a terrier handles a rat.

"I tell you he's yellow. And with a hundred thousand in his clothes, he'll be yellower still."

A hundred thousand. Craig frowned and gazed out to sea. He had forgotten all about the windfall. "Let's go and have a peg," he suggested surlily.

Immediately upon obtaining her rooms at Raffles hotel in Singapore (and leaving Martha there to await the arrival of the luggage, an imposing collection of trunks and boxes and kitbags), Elsa went down to the American consulate, which had its offices in the rear of the hotel. She walked through the outer office and stood silently at the consul general's elbow, waiting for him to look up. She was dressed in white, and in the pugose of her helmet was the one touch of color, Rajah's blue feather. The consul general turned his head. His kindly face had the settled expression of indulgent inquiry. The expression changed swiftly into one of delight.

"Elsa Chetwood!" he cried, seizing her hands. "Well, well! I am glad to see you. Good gracious what a beautiful woman you've turned out to be! Sit down, sit down!" He pushed her into a chair. "Well, well! When I saw you last you were nineteen."

"What a frightful memory you have! And I was going to my first ball. You used the same adjective."

"Is there a better one? I'll use it if there is. You've arrived just in time. I am giving a little dinner to the consuls and their wives tonight. You see, I've an old friend from India in town today, and I've asked him, too. Your appearance evens up matters."

"Oh; then I'm just a filler-in!"

"Heavens, no! You're the most important person of the lot, though Colonel Knowlton!"

"Colonel Knowlton!" exclaimed Elsa.

"That's so, by George! Stupid of me. You came down on the same boat. Fine! You know each other."

Fish Fatten on Alga.

The unusual size of some game fish caught in irrigation ditches in Washington led to the belief that they had fattened themselves by eating alga and an investigation proved the theory correct.

"Hello"—challengingly.

"Hello yourself"—suspiciously.

Thus two young men of Irvington, meeting, almost collided at a hedge and tree-environed corner of the country village.

"New tennis racket?" projected the first speaker, Albion Merkle, after a critical stare at the paper-enveloped parcel the other carried and clearly outlined as to shape.

"Oh, yes," was carelessly nodded, with a free swing of the article in question. "Yours a golf club?"

"That's it," acquiesced Merkle, casually. "See here, aren't we working at cross purposes?"

"What do you mean?" questioned Ned Dallas.

"Nellie—Miss Warren. Oh, come now, Dallas; you're thinking of a game at tennis with that charming young lady."

"I am going to her home this afternoon, yes."

"So am I," coolly asserted Merkle. "You see, it comes to a problem of precedent. I'm the oldest. I've known her longest, and her venerable father pleasantly told me that my company was acceptable."

"Why!" flared out Dallas, "he said exactly that same thing to me."

"Yes, he is a liberal minded old fossil and wants to give his lovely daughter a chance. Here's three of us, and the best man wins."

"Three?" questioned Dallas.

"I'm including Roy Elston."

"You needn't. His cake is dough."

"How do you know?"

"Old Warren told me so. That is, he entertains a suspicion that Elston is a fighter. Those scars on his face make the old fellow suspect he was a prize fighter once. You know Mr. Warren is almost Quakerish in his dislike for fighting."

"Hm!" muttered Merkle. "Then it's between you and I. See here, we both want to see the charming Nellie this afternoon. I'll toss you to see who goes."

"Done!" acquiesced Dallas.

The shrewd eyes of his companion twinkled cunningly as he thrust his hand into his pocket. He fumbled two coins there.

"One guess," he said. "Heads or tails?"

"Heads."

"Throw."

Merkle smiled to himself as he fingered those ready coins under cover. He produced one. Dallas tossed.

"Lost," announced Merkle cheerily as it came down "tails."

As the precious twain—who had risked their chances if it ever came to the ears of Nellie Warren that her company had been bargained for as if she were a prize package—went their way, just behind the hedge there arose in view a smiling, bright-faced young fellow.

It was Roy Elston, to whom the would-be lovers had alluded. His face was, indeed, scarred on one side. He was athletic. There was too much manhood in the clear open countenance, however, to suggest the bruiser.

"So, Mr. Warren has taken an antipathy to me?" mused Roy. "I must disabuse the impression," and going home he wrote to a certain General Revere, as follows:

"Dear Old Friend:

"Mr. Robert Warren, whose daughter I know, and who seems to be an old acquaintance of yours, has formed a prejudice against me. Won't you write him assuring him as to my intentions as a peaceable, respectable individual?"

Then Roy took a photograph from his pocket, smiled upon it, pressed it to his lips and murmured softly:

"Dear, sweet Nellie!"

For Roy in his quiet earnest way had weeks since outstripped Albion and Ned in the estimation of Miss Warren. In fact, there was a clear understanding between them. Mr. Warren treated Roy with rather scant courtesy, but Roy hoped to soon remove this unfounded prejudice.

That evening Roy called at the Warren home. Its dignified proprietor bestowed a rather cool nod upon him, as he passed him walking in the garden with his daughter. Then, the lovers once alone, Nellie indignantly told her favored suitor some things he had not heard of.

It seems that there was no danger of Roy fearing his rivals, at least for some time to come. Both were laid up at home, badly battered and disgraced.

"The idea of tossing a penny to see which should call upon me first!" fluttered Nellie. "The idea of it!"

"Why, where did you hear of that?" voiced the discreet and astonished Roy.

"It is all over town," and Nellie gave the facts of the case. It seemed that Merkle after leaving Dallas had boasted of his two trick coins, loaded to come up heads or tails, as he chose. Of this the duped Dallas had heard. He sought out his rival. Result: a fist fight bitter and to a finish, and neither would be presentable for some time to come.

Some girl friends had come to spend a week with Nellie and a grand program for outing and pleasure had been formulated. In their beds the wounded rivals groaned and writhed as they heard of the great doings of the happy group, where modest unpretentious Roy Elston was the prized chivalier of the occasion.

Mr. Warren did not welcome his daughter's suitor with any warmth at any time. In fact, his chilliness was constantly on the increase.

He had acted several times as though inclined to call Roy to an interview, probably to ask him to discontinue his attentions to his daughter.

This rather depressed Roy, and one afternoon as he and Nellie sat resting on a bench after a game at tennis, he rather covertly watched Mr. Warren, who was pacing up and down a near path in a manifest state of uneasiness or excitement.

"It's coming," murmured Roy apprehensively, as Mr. Warren after a thoughtful pause advanced directly towards the spot where he and Nellie sat.

"Ahem!" observed her father. "Young man, I hope to be considered a fair-dealing and truthful individual."

"I have never heard that disputed," averred Roy promptly, wondering what his unusual and mystifying declaration might preface.

"Just so—just so," floundered Mr. Warren. "Well, as you know I am a man of peace. I don't see how I got the impression, perhaps the influence of an idle remark, but somehow I fancied you were of a belligerent disposition."

"Why, papa!" piped in the indignant Nellie—"he is a—perfect dove!"

"At all events I was unjustly prejudiced," went on Mr. Warren, "and I wish to make amends. I have just received a letter from an old friend of mine who knows you very well."

"Perhaps you mean General Revere?" intimated Roy deftly.

"Exactly, and—and I wish to apologize for my mistaken opinion of you," broke out Mr. Warren, impetuously.

Roy gladly and eagerly clasped the extended hand of the man who held his fate in his power.

"And, by the way," pronounced Mr. Warren, "I think Nellie will be interested in reading the general's letter."

With glowing eyes Nellie perused the epistle that had come in answer to the request of her lover. It explained those tell-tale scars. It related a deed heroic in the collapse of a small terrace building, where Roy had risked his life, but had saved some twenty imperiled women and children.

Mr. Warren watched her face for a moment, remembered that he was once young himself, and discreetly retired.

Nellie sprang to her feet, her whole being breathing out soulfulness. She threw her arm around Roy's neck.

"Oh, you brave, modest hero!" she cried adoringly.

Napoleon at Waterloo.

The rumors that Napoleon was drugged or intoxicated at Waterloo are absolutely without foundation. He was a temperate man in all ways, a man of judgment and lightning-like deductions. He was in no sense a man dominated by passion. It is, however, true that at Waterloo he was showing the effects of age, ill health, and too strenuous labor. He had been in the saddle for 18 hours, and was somewhat sluggish, but he still gave his commands. Yet it is true that he did not command his army with the clear and brilliant judgment of his more youthful period.

Mr. F. C. Case of Welcome Lake, Pa., writes: "I suffered with Backache and Kidney Trouble. My head ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing. I felt heavy and sleepy after meals, was always nervous and tired, had a bitter taste in my mouth, was dizzy, had floating specks before my eyes, was always thirsty, had a dragging sensation across my loins, difficulty in collecting my thoughts, and was troubled with shortness of breath. "Is there no way out of it?"

"Does he hold out any hope?"

Quite Correct.

"What reason have you for asserting that Love isn't blind?"

MONEY TO BURN.

"Economy has its pains as well as its pleasures," says a Washington preacher. "If the experience of an old dandy of my acquaintance in Virginia counts for anything.

"One spring, for some reason, old Mose was going round town with the face of dissatisfaction. When questioned, he poured forth a voluble tale of woe in these terms:

"Marse Tom, he come to me last fall an' he say, 'Mose, dey's gwine to be a hard winter, so you be keeful, an' save yo' wages fast an' tight."

"An' I believe Marse Tom, yassub. I believe him, an' I save, an' save, an' when de winter come it ain't got no hardships, an' dere I was wid all dat money just thrown on my hands!"

Care Free.

"You seem to be enjoying this banquet."

"Yes; I am."

"I saw you at several affairs in November and December and you were an apprehensive look."

"It's this way. I'm trying to stretch my overcoat through this winter. But winter is coming to a close and I don't care much if the old coat is stolen now."

An Early Publicity Artist.

"Where's your lantern?"

"I don't need it any more," replied Diogenes.

"Aren't you looking for an honest man?"

"No. I've got all the advertising I need out of that idea. I'm going ahead now and prepare my lecture."

Stimulating Interest.

The Rector—Don't you think you could interest your woman's club in the Bible?

Mrs. Wayupp (absently)—I've tried, rector, but it's no use. It would help wonderfully, though, if you could get the author to come here and give a few readings.—Puck.

THE DIFFERENCE.

"In the winter I go out to play poker and my wife stays home for bridge."

"And in the summer you stay home for poker and your wife goes away for bridge."

Extreme Compliment.

Has baby an angelic smile? The family shout, "Well, rather!" And then they shout in solemn style, "It looks just like his father."

Saving Hobo.

"I'll give you something to eat if you'll chop wood for it."

"Yes lady; only it will be cheaper to feed me in advance. Choppin' wood gives me a terrible appetite."

Lurid Scene.

"Her father said she was playing too much bridge and threw her cards into the fire."

"What did she do?"

"What could she do? The girl stood by the burning deck." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

His Fate.

"Dubworth seems to be the sort of man who likes to hear himself talk!"

"Quite so. And I fear that his whole life long, in that particular at least, he will be hopelessly in the minority."

An Irreverence.

Our legislature passed some laws Unthought of by our dads; A lot of 'em's N. G. because They're nothin' only fads.

Too Old to Learn.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity," quoted the confirmed quoter.

"I believe it," retorted the dissatisfied one, "but somehow or other I don't seem to be able to cultivate a taste for it."

More Than That.

"I do not claim to be perfect, my dear," said Mr. Taukaway. "I will admit I have my peccadilloes."

"Peck!" snorted his aggrieved spouse. "Peck! You've got a bushel of 'em."

Literally So.

"When they called Connecticut the Nutmeg state."

"Well, what of it?"

"Oh, nothing; I was only going to say it must have been a grate occasion."

As Modified.

The usual crowd of loafers were seated around the stove in the village grocery.

"Tell you what," began one of the bewhiskered bunch, "I never lied to my wife in my life."

At this point he was interrupted by a unanimous laugh that was loud and long.

"—that I didn't get caught at it," continued the speaker after the laughter had subsided.

Whereupon silence reigned supreme for nearly twenty seconds.

THE REASON.

He—What made the bridesmaid look so happy?

She—They had each refused the bridegroom.

Preference in Fowl.

The Dove of Peace for praise Doth vainly beg.

We crave the goose that lays The golden egg.

Harking Back.

"Would you convict a man on circumstantial evidence?"

"No I wouldn't, although when I was a small boy I was frequently convicted on that sort of evidence."

"You mean?"

"Wet hair—swimming pool—hickory limb."

Not Enough Cards, Maybe.

"Will nothing improve my game?" asked the impossible bridge player, in despairing tones.

"Nothing, I fear," answered her teacher.

"You think I have my limitations, then?"

"Yes," answered the diplomatic teacher, "but I'm sure that's because a deck of cards also has its limitations."

The Real Thing.

"You talk about neutrality among nations. Bah!"

"Why the scornful attitude?"

"You haven't seen any real neutrality until you see the way a married man acts when his wife and her mother are having a quarrel."

Exasperating.

"The phrase 'He hates himself' is intended for sarcasm when applied to an egotist, I believe."

"Quite right, but it's the unvarnished truth when applied to a man who starts to tell a funny story and forgets how it ends."

A Trade Mixture.

"There is one very unbusinesslike trait about persons who love to retail gossip."

"What is that?"

"They generally do it wholesale."

A TOILET SECRET.

Harold—Put your head on my shoulder and let me lean my head on your pompadour. It's such a lovely pompadour.

Beatrice—All right, but be just a little careful. There's a wire mattress in it, but I'm not quite sure how strong it is.

Bearing Up Well.

"Just think! The Gadsdeys are compelled to go West this year instead of touring Europe, as their custom is."

"Going to see something of their own country at last, eh?"

"Yes, that's it. But they're cheerful enough. They have decided to call it a pleasure trip."

Not Unusual.

"Dubkins tells me that his brain is not working well today."

"I don't see any cause for remark when a man's condition is normal."

DAIRY FACTS

BEST TEMPERATURE FOR COW

Hoard's Dairyman Expresses Opinion That About Fifty Degrees Fahrenheit Is Right.

In response to a query as to about the right temperature for a dairy barn Hoard's Dairyman makes the following reply:

We are not prepared to say what is considered the right temperature to keep the barn for dairy cows. It is our opinion that it is not well to have the barn colder than 50 degrees Fahrenheit. In very severe weather the temperature in the Hoard's Dairyman barns falls to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. While the milk flow seems to be about the same under these conditions, yet the cattle seem to show signs of not being as comfortable as when the barn is at 60 degrees. It may be that if they were accustomed to a temperature of 50 degrees or lower they would do fully as well.

It may be said that cattle under official and semi-official test, where they are invariably fed a large amount of feed, may be kept at a much lower temperature than 50 degrees Fahrenheit and seem to appreciate it. It should be remembered, however, that the feeding at this period is far beyond the amount the animal can handle to the best advantage, and she would not be capable of eating so much year after year. In other words, she is full of fuel.

PRACTICE OF CREAM GRADING

Better Material Is Secured for Creameries and Insures Better Product for the Consumer.

(By R. McCANN, State Dairy Inspector of Colorado.)

The old system of spoiling good cream with bad by mixing the two is a practice to be relegated to the past. Consumers, manufacturers and producers alike should demand and expect that progress or a lead be made in products and manufactures of their respective community and state.

While cream grading is a comparatively new measure in many of our bordering states, it has apparently proved beyond doubt its value in many respects, the foremost of which are: Securing a better material for creameries; placing an incentive and reward for the production of good cream by difference in price received for first-grade cream over that for second-grade, and insuring a better product for the consumer, thereby increasing consumption and demand for products manufactured.

CUT UP LONG CORN STALKS

Much Waste May Be Avoided and Cows Will Eat Them Up Clean—Bit of Grain Is Relieved.

Don't try to make your cows eat long corn stalks. They will surely waste a lot of good feed. Cut the stalks and they will eat them all up clean. Let them lie in a box or even in the alleyway for a day or two after they have been cut and they will heat and soften up a good deal. If too dry a little water poured over the pile will help to moisten them up. A bit of grain sprinkled over each ration will make its licking good.

Bad-Acting Heifers.

Heifers are not included, as very often they will be gentle as anyone desires, after the second calf. It may be, as some say, a bad cow is simply a heifer grown up, that has been ruined while being broken. However, if they persist in tricks after the second calf, best to let them go and try a new cow.

Cow Pays for Attention.

A good cow, no matter what breed, is worth all the care and kindness the owner can give her, and all the good feed she can use. No doubt there are very many cows that would give a much better showing if they received the necessary attention.

Dairy Cow of Future.

Remember that the heifer is the dairy cow of the future. Feed her accordingly.

Cows Properly Cared For.

Five cows properly cared for and fully fed will return much more than ten half fed.

EXPLAINING SONGS OF BIRDS

Beautiful Notes of the Nightingale, for Instance, Are Inspired by Paternal Love.

It is generally assumed that a bird sings because he is happy, but science goes deeper for an explanation of the why and wherefore of the bird's song. Nature's optimistic joy in constructive progress is expressed in the singing of the male birds who charm their mates to further their wooing, and continue after eggs are laid to encourage the fulfillment of hatching.

The song stops when the little birds come out of the shell. The nightingale, for weeks during the period of nest-building and hatching, charms his mate and human ears near him with the beautiful music of his love song. But as soon as the little nightingales come from the eggs the song changes to a sort of guttural croak, implying anxiety and sense of responsibility.

If the nest and contents were destroyed the nightingale would at once resume his beautiful song to inspire his mate to help him build another nest and start all over again the loving work of being fruitful and multiplying.

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—MRS. S. T. RICHMOND, 84 Progress Avenue, Providence, R. I.

From Mrs. Maria Irwin, Peru, N. Y.

PERU, N. Y.—"Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was very irregular and had much pain. I had lost three children, and felt worn out all the time. This splendid medicine helped me as nothing else had done, and I am thankful every day that I took it."—MRS. MARIA IRWIN, R.F.D. 1, Peru, N. Y.

From Mrs. Jane D. Duncan, W. Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—MRS. JANE D. DUNCAN, Forest Avenue, West Quincy, Mass.

PINCKNEY—Two miles of state road will be built by Putman township this year, one mile commencing at the Base line on the Dexter road and running north and the other mile commencing at the Sprouts school and running north.—Dispatch.

ADDISON—Monday was the second time in about ten years (if the writer's memory is correct) that a funeral was held from the Methodist church. To those who fully realize what this means, there is food for reflection; to those who do not comprehend, it means nothing.—Courier.

MANCHESTER—Carl Wuerthner is making arrangements to go with the Maccabees to San Francisco next month. He will, of course, be accompanied by his wife. Their route is via Kansas City and the Santa Fe, visiting the Grand Canyon and Los Angeles enroute.—Enterprise.

TECUMSEH—John B. Smith went to Saline Tuesday, where he arrested one J. C. Russell, a cistern cleaner, who had jumped his board bill at the Barrett house. Mr. Russell was taken before Judge Hosmer, who gave him his choice of a fine and costs or 20 days. He took the 20 days.—Herald.

ALBION—A woman preacher spent quite a time preaching at the corner of Center and Superior streets Saturday evening. The same woman was seen wandering in the country Sunday, and Deputy McCarty was sent for and brought her home. She has two children and is apparently crazed over religion.—Leader.

BRIGHTON—The executors of the G. J. Baetcke estate paid another ten per cent dividend the fore part of the week. This makes a total of 85 per cent that the bank has paid. Those depositors who sold their claims for fifty cents on the dollar or less are now wishing they hadn't. It is not unlikely that another ten per cent may be paid yet.—Argus.

ADDISON—Hillsdale county towns have arranged a schedule of baseball games for the coming summer, a league having been formed among them. Reading, Hillsdale, North Adams, Litchfield, are in Division, No. 1, Prattville, Montgomery, Waldron and Camden in Division, No. 2. Each team is to play two games with each of the other teams in its division.—Courier.

ANN ARBOR—The eleventh annual meeting of the Michigan State Nurses' association, and the second annual of the Michigan State League of Nursing, will be held in Ann Arbor May 4, 5 and 6. These meetings will be held in Sarah Caswell Angel hall, of the Barbour gymnasium building and will be open to the public. Very attractive programs have been arranged for these meetings.

BLISSFIELD—J. M. Ford this week received a carload of Redwood timber from California that is attracting some little attention. The lumber is from the celebrated Humboldt county Redwood timber lands where mammoth trees are grown. A board 10 feet long and 6 feet wide is among the lot and a number of people have visited Mr. Ford's yard to see the curiosity. The freight on the carload from California was about $300.—Advance.

I also suffered from rheumatic pains in my back and was stiff and sore. Mornings I felt all tired out, and I was dizzy and nervous. I tried different medicines, but was not helped until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They relieved me of the trouble from my back and kidneys."

SHARON NEWS.

Mrs. Fred Lehman spent Saturday in Jackson.

Mrs. William Heselschwerdt entertained the Women's Home Missionary Society in a pleasant manner Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. B. P. O'Neill entertained the Norvell Arbor of Gleaners Saturday. There was a good attendance considering the busy season and all enjoyed a pleasant social time.

The community was saddened to hear of the death of John Brustle, sr., of Manchester, last Thursday. The deceased was a highly respected resident of this place for many years. Some years ago, he with his wife (who preceded him in death two years ago) moved to Manchester. Since her death he had lived with his daughter, Mrs. Jacob Schabbe. Besides her he leaves to mourn two other daughters, Mrs. John Wurster, of Saline, and Mrs. Jacob Lehman, of Chelsea, three sons, Fred, of Ypsilanti, Martin and John of this place, twenty-one grand children, one great grandchild and a host of friends. The deceased was seventy-eight years of age. The funeral was held Sunday in Immanuel's church in Manchester, Rev. J. Wulfsman officiating. The large concourse of people and the number and beauty of the floral tributes show the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Paul Zeigler, second son of Christian Zeigler, was born in Spaulding county, Ohio, in 1898. He came to Sharon with his parents about six years ago and since that time has won many friends by his genial disposition. He was confirmed four years ago by Rev. Oscar Laubengayer. He was a sophomore in the Grass Lake high school. Last Thursday while standing behind the bat he was struck in the temple by a baseball bat and the blow resulted fatally. He was taken to the Jackson city hospital, but before relief could be given him, death claimed her own. To us it seems strange that the bright, young life should thus suddenly be cut off but He, who holds things in the hollow of His hand, "does all things well." The funeral was held in St. Paul's church Rev. G. E. Eisen officiating, assisted by Rev. Geo. C. Nothdurft of Salem German M. E. church. Prof. Dorr, of Grass Lake and almost the entire high school attended in a body. The funeral was largely attended. He leaves a father, mother, one sister and five brothers.
