DECORATION EXERCISES

Held in the Town Hall Monday Afternoon well Attended.

The memorial services for the G. A. R. and W. I. C. were held in the Congregational church Sunday evening and the church was filled to capacity. The subject of the sermon, "God's Plan for America as Seen in His Providence in her History," was handled in a masterly manner by Rev. G. J. Dole. Special musical numbers by the choir and a solo, "The Vacant Chair," by J. H. Boyd materially added to the services.

Monday afternoon the Decoration Day services were held in the town hall, and they were attended by an unusually large crowd. The program was very interesting and instructive. The musical numbers were rendered by the pupils of the Chelsea public and St. Mary's schools and all of them were well executed and reflected great credit to both the pupils and their instructors.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by R. B. Waltrous in an excellent manner. The able address of Rev. G. H. Whitney was listened to in a rapt manner by the assembly.

At the close of the exercises in the hall a line was formed, headed by the marshal of the day, A. N. Morton, the Chelsea band, flower wagons and school children on the north side and autos on the south side of Middle street filled with members of the G. A. R. and W. I. C., who led the line of march to the cemeteries. The graves of the departed soldiers and sailors in Mt. Olivet and Oak Grove cemeteries were decorated with flowers. The exercises of the G. A. R. were carried out at the soldiers' monument.

Without a doubt the exercises on Monday were the finest that have ever been held in Chelsea and the parade was a very handsome one.

Two Accidents.

Two accidents occurred here Monday afternoon to mar the pleasant features of Decoration Day.

The first one occurred at the intersection of Main and Middle streets when Mrs. E. A. Fletcher was run down by an auto driven by Emmett Carpenter of Highland Park. Mrs. Fletcher while crossing the street was struck by the front of the car which was moving at a moderate pace and was stopped within a distance of three feet. At the time of the accident the driver of the machine was looking at the band and procession which was being formed on the streets.

After the accident Mrs. Fletcher was taken to the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Maier, where at last reports she was resting as comfortably as could be expected under the circumstances. Mrs. Fletcher's injuries consist of numerous bruises, a gash over the left eye, the flesh of her left arm badly lacerated from the elbow to the wrist, her spine injured and possibly internal injuries. Mrs. Fletcher had a very narrow escape and will be confined to her home for some time.

The second accident occurred about five o'clock in the afternoon when the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Jewett of Highland Park was bitten on the cheek and lip by a dog owned by Wm. Bacon. The child had been playing with the dog and was crossing the street with the animal when it was attacked by another dog and when the child reached down to pet the dog she was bitten. The wounds are not considered to be of a serious nature.

Patrick Farrell.

Patrick Farrell, for nearly forty years a well known and respected resident of Dexter township, was born in New York city 67 years ago, and died at the U. of M. hospital in Ann Arbor, at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, June 1, 1915.

For the past year Mr. Farrell had made his home in Chelsea and he was taken to the hospital about three months ago. Before settling on a farm in Dexter township, he was engaged in the railroad business for a number of years. He was united in marriage in Saginaw forty-four years ago to Miss Mary Cahill, who died five years ago last fall.

He is survived by four sons, Charles H., of Kalamazoo, John W. and Walter, of Webster, Emmett, of Dexter township, three daughters, Mrs. Edward O'Neil, of Northfield, Mrs. A. C. Hindelang, of Chelsea, Mrs. R. H. Haber, of Flint, and several grandchildren.

The funeral will be held from St. Joseph's church, Dexter village, at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning, Rev. Father Halley celebrating the mass.

The Tuttle & Thomas and Fred Girbach's block were finished so far as the brick work was concerned and the carpenters were at work on the workwork. The street commissioner commenced grading the streets. Several new dwelling were in the course of construction in various parts of the village.

Funds for Tuberculosis.

Michigan is to be taxed $100,000 to provide a fund with which to prosecute a campaign to lessen the ravages of the tuberculosis disease in the state. Ten thousand people died from tuberculosis in Michigan during the past four years. The mortality will be as great during the next four years if a determined persistent fight is not made against it. Eradication depends primarily upon education. The education of the young is the most effective factor in a great movement of this nature. It is evidently up to the schools to act in this direction. Pupils should be taught concerning the nature of the disease, the conditions under which it is spread and how it is contracted. Pure air should be the slogan. This is a part of the crusade that can be understood and taken up by the children. They should be made to feel the importance of the work and that cleanliness, pure air and good wholesome food are the most effective enemies of the disease. $100,000 appropriated by the state and an active campaign in the schools must bring immeasurable results.

APPLE CROP HURT BY HEAVY FROSTS

EATON RAPIDS EXPERT GIVES RESULT OF INVESTIGATION OF TREES.

OTHER FRUITS NOT DAMAGED

In Some Orchards in Low Grounds All Varieties Except Northern Spies Are Practically Destroyed By Weather.

Eaton Rapids.—T. A. Farrand, well known fruit grower of this city and former president of the State Horticultural society, spent nearly all of last week examining orchards in this section to determine the extent of the damage to the fruit crop from the frosts during May. He says that the damage is much greater than had been supposed, and that orchards on low ground have been hit hard. In some of these, he says, nearly all of the varieties excepting Northern Spies are practically destroyed, and that the apple orchards in general will make a poor showing this season.

Mr. Farrand finds that apples have suffered the most of any of the fruits from the frosts and generally unseasonable weather, but that peaches have come through it all in very good shape as have most of the varieties of small fruits.

CARRY SAFE FROM BUILDING

Bold Robbery of Montrose Postoffice Is Attempted Saturday Morning.

Montrose.—One of boldest robberies in many years in Genesee county was attempted at 1 o'clock Saturday morning in Montrose, when three men entered the postoffice and carried the safe out of the front door. The plan was worked well until the burglars made so much noise in taking the safe out of the building they awakened Postmaster A. Z. Hitchcock, who lives next door.

The safe was carried through the main street of the village and to the Montrose elevator, a distance of 10 rods.

Mr. Hitchcock arrived on the spot after the safe had been drilled and loaded with nitroglycerine ready for match. The three men first fired five shots at Mr. Hitchcock and then fled down the railway tracks without their loot.

CABINET AGREES ON NEW POLICY

PRESIDENT WILSON'S STATEMENT TO MEXICANS IS APPROVED.

WOULD SUPPORT COALITION

The United States Government Will Insist on Restoration of Order in Mexico Even if Intervention Is Necessary.

Washington.—President Wilson and his cabinet Tuesday adopted a new policy to be pursued by the United States toward Mexico. It has for its object restoration of order and the relief of millions of non-combatants from the devastations of Mexico's military elements, which have brought about conditions regarded as intolerable.

The president read to the cabinet a statement which was to be communicated to the leaders of all Mexican factions, serving notice that unless they, themselves, compose the situation, some other means will be found by the United States to bring about the establishment of a stable government in the republic. The statement was approved after prolonged discussion.

The specific course the United States will pursue in the event the contending factions fail to agree, is not outlined in the president's statement, but the administration's present purpose is to give moral support to a coalition of the best elements in Mexico, and accord the government thereby created formal recognition.

With such recognition would come an embargo on arms permitting the constituted government to receive munitions of war to the exclusion of all other elements and factions.

That the government's policy, if successful in this course, might require intervention ultimately, has been considered, and the intention to insist on a settlement has not been swayed by the possible necessity of such action.

DE PALMA WINS GREAT RACE

Indianapolis Gasoline Classic Sets New Record for Automobile Speed.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Ralph De Palma Monday drove his Mercedes car 500 miles faster than any vehicle of human construction ever had traveled the same distance before, and by so doing won the fifth Indianapolis motor speedway derby, the gasoline classic of the age.

He had to do it too, for Darius Resta, at the wheel of a Peugeot, pressed him hard from first to last and at the finish was less than four minutes behind the winner. De Palma's time was 5 hours 33 minutes 55.50 seconds, and average speed of 89.84 miles an hour for the whole distance. Resta finished in 5 hours 37 minutes 34.95 seconds. The best previous record was 6 hours 3 minutes 45.9 seconds made by Rene Thomas in 1914.

TWO DEAD FROM ACCIDENT

Prominent Detroit Men Fall to Recover from Auto Wreck of Last Week.

Saginaw.—Jacob Wiest, of the J. Walter Thompson company, Detroit, one of the five Detroit men injured in the automobile accident near Saginaw Tuesday afternoon of last week, died at 6 o'clock Tuesday night, a little more than eight hours after the death of Fred E. Michelson, Detroit real estate man, who had driven the ill-fated machine.

In each case death was caused by the gas bacillus, the same fatal agent of infection that is slaying thousands in the trenches in France. Local doctors were powerless against it.

Michelson's left thigh had been pierced by a spring and Wiest's left leg had been broken twice, so that the bones protruded. In each case the wounds became infected, probably from the mud through which the men were dragged, and gas formed in the flesh, which later turned green.

GERMAN REPLY TO AMERICAN NOTE ON LUSITANIA

Full Text of Imperial Government's Communication to United States

CLAIM MADE THAT LINER WAS FIGHTING VESSEL

Final Decision On Wilson's Demands Is Withheld Until Consideration Is Given to Alleged Facts Regarding Status of Sunken Ship.

Berlin, May 31.—The following is the text of the German note, sent in reply to the United States protest against the sinking of the Lusitania and attacks on American steamers:

"The undersigned has the honor to submit to Ambassador Gerard the following answer to the communication of May 15 regarding the injury to American interests through German submarine warfare:

"The imperial government has subjected the communication of the American government to a thorough investigation. It entertains also a keen wish to co-operate in a frank and friendly way in clearing up a possible misunderstanding which may have arisen in the relations between the two governments through the events mentioned by the American government.

"Regarding, firstly, the cases of the American steamers Cushing and Guilford. The American embassy has already been informed that the German government has no intention of submitting neutral ships in the war zone, which are guilty of no hostile acts, to attacks by a submarine or submarines or aviators. On the contrary, the German forces have repeatedly been instructed most specifically to avoid attacks on such ships.

"If neutral ships in recent months have suffered through the German submarine warfare owing to mistakes in identification, it is a question only of quite isolated and exceptional cases which can be attributed to the British government's abuse of flags, together with the suspicious or culpable behavior of the masters of the ships.

Has Expressed Regret.

"The German government, in all cases where it has been shown by its investigations that a neutral ship, not itself at fault, was damaged by German submarine or aviators, has expressed regret over the unfortunate accident, and, if justified by conditions, has offered indemnification.

"The cases of the Cushing and the Guilford will be treated on the same principles. An investigation of both cases is in progress, the result of which will presently be communicated to the embassy. The investigation can, if necessary, be supplemented by an international commission of inquiry as provided by Article III. of The Hague agreement of October 18, 1907.

"When sinking the British steamer Falaba, the commander of the German submarine had the intention of allowing the passengers a full opportunity for escape. Only when they did not obey the order to heave-to, but fled and summoned help by rocket signals, did the German commander order the crew and passengers by signals and megaphone to leave the ship within 10 minutes. We actually allowed them 23 minutes' time, and fired the torpedo only when suspicious craft were hastening to the assistance of the Falaba.

"Regarding the loss of life by the sinking of the British passenger steamer Lusitania, the German government has already expressed to the neutral governments concerned its keen regret that citizens of their states lost their lives.

Escaped U. S. Attention.

"On this occasion, the imperial government, however, cannot escape the impression that certain important facts having a direct bearing on the sinking of the Lusitania may have escaped the attention of the American government.

"In the interest of a clear and complete understanding, which is the aim of both governments, the imperial government considers it first necessary to convince itself that the information accessible to both governments about the facts of the case is complete and in accord.

"The government of the United States proceeds on the assumption that the Lusitania could be regarded as an ordinary unarmed merchantman. The imperial government allows itself in this connection to point out that the Lusitania was one of the largest and fastest British merchant ships, built with government funds as an auxiliary cruiser and carried expressly as such in the 'navy list' issued by the British admiralty.

"It is further known to the imperial government, from trustworthy reports from its agents and neutral passengers, that, for a considerable time, practically all the more valuable British merchantmen have been equipped with cannon and ammunition and other weapons, and manned with persons who have been specially trained in serving guns. The Lusitania, too, according to information received here, had cannon aboard, which were mounted and concealed below decks.

Rammed Submarines.

"The imperial government, further, has the honor to direct the particular attention of the American government to the fact that the British admiralty, in a confidential instruction issued in February, 1915, recommended its merchant shipping not only to seek protection under neutral flags and distinguishing marks, but also, while thus disguised, to attack German submarines by ramming. As a special incitation to merchantmen to destroy submarines, the British government also offered high prizes and has already paid such rewards.

"The imperial government, in view of the facts indubitably known to it, is unable to regard British merchantmen in the zone of naval operations specified by the admiralty staff of the German navy as 'undefended.' German commanders consequently are no longer able to observe the customary regulations of the prize law, which they before always followed.

"Finally the imperial government must point out particularly that the Lusitania on its last trip, as on earlier occasions, carried Canadian troops and war material, including no less than 5,400 cases of ammunition intended for the destruction of the brave German soldiers who are fulfilling their duty with self-sacrifice and devotion in the fatherland's service.

"The German government believes that it was acting in justified defense in seeking with all the means of warfare at its disposition to protect the lives of its soldiers by destroying ammunition intended for the enemy.

Company Aware.

"The British shipping company must have been aware of the danger to which the passenger aboard the Lusitania were exposed under these conditions. The company in embarking them, notwithstanding this attempted deliberately to use the lives of American citizens as protection for the ammunition aboard, and acted against the clear provisions of the American law, which expressly prohibits the forwarding of passengers on ships carrying ammunition and provides a penalty therefor. The company, therefore, is wantonly guilty of the death of so many passengers.

"There can be no doubt, according to the definite report of the submarine's commander, which is further confirmed by all other information, that the quick sinking of the Lusitania is primarily attributable to the explosion of the ammunition shipment caused by a torpedo. The Lusitania's passengers would otherwise, in all human probability, have been saved.

"The imperial government considers the above-mentioned facts important enough to recommend them to the attentive examination of the American government.

"The imperial government, while withholding its final decision on the demands advanced in respect with the sinking of the Lusitania, until receipt of an answer from the American government, feels impelled, in conclusion, to recall here and now that it took cognizance with satisfaction of the mediatory proposals submitted by the United States government to Berlin and London as a basis for a modus vivendi for conducting the maritime warfare between Germany and Great Britain. The imperial government by its readiness to enter on a discussion of these proposals then demonstrated its good intentions in ample fashion. The realization of these proposals was defeated, as is known, by the declinatory attitude of the British government.

Washington.—In line with his announced determination to develop the submarine arm of the navy and eliminate its present faults, Secretary Daniels Friday designated Captain A. W. Grant, one of the highest ranking officers of his grade, to command the Atlantic submarine flotilla and exercise general supervision over that branch of the service.

Captain Grant, who now commands the battleship Texas, will assume his new duties next month.

Grand Rapids.—A coroner's jury exonerated Claud Rudy of all blame for the death of George Steinbrecker, who was killed by Rudy's jitney May 15.

Eaton Rapids.—Beecher Stevenson, formerly of this city, and a son of the late Rev. John R. Stevenson of Eaton Rapids, died at his home in Defiance, O.

Plymouth.—Mrs. Jennie Voorhels, mother of Wayne's assistant prosecuting attorney, Paul Voorhels, and a leader in the Michigan W. C. T. U., died. She had been at a Battle Creek sanitarium for some time.

Northville.—Mystery surrounding the poisoning of a number of Holstein cows on the H. B. Clark stock farm here has been cleared. The cows, it was learned, loked paint from a lot of old kegs in an excavation.

Escanaba.—Marvin Burnham, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Burnham, of Escanaba, is back from the war zone where he went with a Canadian contingent. He married a "war bride" while training at Salisbury Plains, an Irish girl. After the war, he says, he will rejoin her.

Ann Arbor.—The faculty of the college of engineering of the University of Michigan suspended, for one semester, three students of the junior class of the college of engineering, who were in charge of the pop-pow where beer was served. The university senate has forbidden all "keg parties."

Traverse City.—Fire destroyed the Park hotel at Suttons Bay. A high northeast wind, together with the water system, saved the business section, though brands were carried to the town hall, which was saved with difficulty. Aid was asked from Traverse City and a fire steamer was sent up.

Ann Arbor.—Bankers from Jackson, Hillsdale, Monroe and Lenawee counties, and from all parts of Washtenaw county met here. After an auto drive about the city, they were taken to Hill auditorium, where Earl Moore gave them a complimentary organ recital. In the evening the guests were tendered a banquet at the Elks' temple.

Saginaw.—Hugh Harper, twenty-six years old, while walking on Genesee avenue, was hit by an auto driven by Mrs. Mary Ann Koneczka, who was driving her husband's automobile. She lost control of the machine and it jumped the curbstone, striking Harper. The momentum drove Harper through a heavy plate glass window.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

White House Gardeners Heave Sighs of Relief

WASHINGTON.—Some of the gardeners connected with the propagating gardens, near the old bureau of engraving and printing building, have been heaving sighs of relief over the semi-official news at the White House which has had to do with the president's plans for the summer, the understanding being that President Wilson is likely to remain at the White House for most of the heated term, although the woman members of his family are expected to go to the summer White House at Cornish, N. H.

From the propagating gardens are supplied the flowers for the White House tables, corridors and decorations of that character for friends of the family. This is in between seasons with gardeners, when they plan to get ready for next year. This is particularly true of roses. Not knowing whether the president and the members of his family have intended to remain at the White House for a part of the summer, and unaware of whether a large quantity of cut flowers would be needed for the White House throughout the summer, the gardeners had not dared to take up their established plants.

The White House depends very largely upon the propagating gardens for cut flowers, and when there was once a discussion of taking away from the Mount Vernon grounds the propagating greenhouses, near the bureau of engraving and printing, President Roosevelt put a stop to the plan for the time being by demanding to know:

"Where am I going to get my roses?"

Washingtonians who were frequent dinner guests at the White House in former administrations have always been grateful to Mrs. Roosevelt for doing away with the superfluity of flowers at formal dinners and other functions there. It was the custom, one woman was recalling the other day, to bank all the mantels, mural tables, and even the window-niches and other spaces that could be filled in, with masses of cut flowers and tropical plants. Mrs. Roosevelt inaugurated a more simple style of table decoration and of having vases set here and there with graceful clusters of them.

Postage Stamps Shown in the National Museum

ONE of the finest museum collections of postage stamps in the world is owned by the United States government. The public is now, for the first time, given the privilege of viewing these stamps in tabulated and orderly form. Their arrangement in brand new mahogany cases of most modern construction has been completed by Joseph B. Leavy, the government philatelist, and they now form a permanent exhibit of the division of history of the national museum.

This $200,000 collection is installed in the southwest corner of the old building of the museum in the finest equipment of its kind in the world.

The foreign countries are arranged in alphabetical order, and where there are colonies or possessions they are displayed in alphabetical order directly after the mother country in geographical sequence.

This collection is by no means complete; even from the United States issues a few of the stamps are missing. But even so, the history of the growth of the United States post office is practically reviewed as one examines the collection. The oldest specimens are those of the city issues of 1845—the first postmasters provisionals in this country. These were issued five years after the birth of stamps in Great Britain. The dates bring the fact startlingly to mind that postage stamps have only been in use a little more than fifty years. The first government issues came out in 1847.

One of the gems of the collection is the display of 30-cent stamps of 1869 with inverted medallions. The 30-cent stamp is the rarest square of paper in the entire collection and is worth $1,500.

Dr. Carroll Fox Is Uncle Sam's Expert on Fleas

DR. CARROLL FOX of the United States public health service knows practically all there is to know about fleas. He has a full understanding of fleas' habits and characteristics and is almost able to catch the flea point of view. A flea is not always the rump, careless individual he appears to be. Many fleas are temperamental wicks—a great deal more wicked than an elephant for example, even though considerably smaller than an elephant in stature. A flea will move into a community that has never given it the slightest motive for revenge and begin to plot against it, spreading disease by means of germs that it carries about on its person—germs even smaller than itself. That is one of the wicked caprices of many an innocent appearing flea. It is because of these sinister traits that Doctor Fox of the health service has found it advisable to make fleas a life work. A person who knows just what line of germs a given flea carries in stock is naturally able to tell just how far it should go in shunning the society of that particular flea. The whole proposition is simply a matter of daily routine with Fox. He has little if any more regard for the average flea, personally, than you or I have. He is a serious-minded scientist.

Now, being a serious minded scientist, Fox is not given to cracking jokes—particularly not about fleas. Yet, a while ago when Fox made the acquaintance of an entirely new genus of fleas, he gave the genus a name that is not untinged with a certain suggestion of humor. The flea was discovered in the dark interior of Africa. Fox has named it the Rooseveltiella.

Somebody asked him how he happened to pick the name of Rooseveltiella for the new brand of flea.

"Well," Fox replied, in substance, "Theodore Roosevelt did a lot of valuable work in the same locality where the flea was discovered and it seemed rather fitting that it should be named after him."

Moving Picture Machines Bought for the Army

THE war department, through the office of Quartermaster General Aleshrie, has let a contract for 66 moving picture machines for the use of the army. This means the war department has set out on a new plan whereby Uncle Sam will endeavor to furnish amusement and instruction for his soldiers.

A moving picture machine will be sent to the captain of each post and each locality where troops are stationed.

Not only will each garrison have the use of a machine, but machines will be provided for troops in the field, in the large field camps, and at places like Texas City and Galveston, where large bodies are assembled for possible use in Mexico.

Army officers are convinced the moving picture machine will be well worth the money in that it will provide amusement, entertainment, and also instruction for soldiers. It will tend to make the soldiers better satisfied and to reduce desertions. Also it will tend to keep soldiers in camp at night.

There is a constantly increasing demand on the part of medical officers of the army for films which may be used in moving picture machines as an aid in lectures at army posts and camps in emphasizing the necessity of the enforcement of sanitary measures and of personal habits which shall be conducive to individual health. Sometime ago an effort was made at Fort Totten to develop a film which would illustrate the protective value of typhoid immunization, but the results were not entirely successful, and those who had arranged for the pictorial development of a demonstration were not satisfied with the results of their labor.

ADVANTAGE OF SPRAYING IN ORCHARDS

Making Iron Sulphate and Filling Sprayer Tank.

When it costs less than ten cents a tree to spray an apple orchard, the wonder is that more are not sprayed; particularly the wonder grows when it is a proved fact that the crop is increased from 50 to 300 per cent by intelligent spraying.

The cost of spraying is not easy to ascertain, or to make a general average, because of the varying conditions his first meal; but if the poison has not reached the inside of the little cup, the worm will go on destroying the apple.

If the sprayer waits until the little lobes close over the calyx cup, naturally the poison cannot get inside, and this is the point of the whole matter. It is necessary to spray before the cup closes.

It has been demonstrated over and over again that where perfect spraying was done from 92 to 95 per cent of all the first brood of the codling-moth were killed. Also, this kind of spraying destroys some of the remaining ones afterward, thus practically preventing a second brood.

In order to get the poison into the little calyx cup it is necessary to inject it with considerable force, because the stamens bars are thick and tolerably stout, and form a solid roof over the cup.

If the spray is put on as a mist, it lodges on the outside, and if thrown up into the air to come down in falling drops, it will strike this little roof and roll off. Here's where the spray nozzle comes in. This instrument sends a driving spray of fine drops five or six feet before it breaks up into a mist, and the nozzle must be held within a foot or two of the blossom in order that the spray can penetrate to the very bottom of the cup.

To do this thoroughly, it is necessary to point the nozzle straight into every blossom on the tree, and to do in the orchard sprayed. An orchardist, who is supplied with all the modern machinery, and who has a large number of trees, can naturally spray his trees at a smaller cost per tree than the man who is handicapped by lack of equipment in a smaller orchard.

The effectiveness of spraying is the great thing. If it is well done, the results will be certain, but if poorly done, they will be uncertain. It will not do to spray half the buds, or three-quarters, or even nine-tenths, and leave any portion unsprayed, if perfect success is to be attained.

The codling moth, which probably does more harm to apple orchards than any other insect, is hard to reach, and the greatest care must be taken to apply the spray at exactly the right time to put him out of business.

This insect varies somewhat in its work, and it may be that for two or three seasons in succession damages from it will not be large, but this period of relief may be succeeded by one in which the damage caused by this insect is tremendous.

The whole secret of successful spraying is to get the poison in the place where the worms will naturally go to eat it. If that is done, the career of the worm is ended, but if the poison is applied to other parts of the tree, and the favorite hiding places of the worm are not sprayed, it will go on eating its way into the heart of the apple, and the work of spraying will be lost.

If we examine a young apple when it is first forming it will be seen that there is a little hollow called the calyx cup. This is covered over by the circle of stamens, and this, in turn, will be covered over soon after the little apple forms by the five little green lobes, which gradually close and form the perfect roof over the cup beneath.

The codling-moth lays its eggs on the leaves surrounding the clusters of little apples. The worms do not hatch out until several weeks after the little apple forms, but as soon as they are out they hustle for a hiding place, and they find this in the blossom end of the apple.

They crawl down between the little lobes through the stamens, to the very bottom of the calyx cup, and there, secure from molestation, they proceed to eat their way into the tender seeds.

Now it follows that if the sprayer has done a good job and injected the poison down to the bottom of the cup, Mr. O. Moth will meet his death with

DAIRY FACTS

PURE-BRED SIRES ARE BEST

Selection of Herd Bull is of Greatest Importance—Avoid Contagious Abortion and Tuberculosis.

Farmers everywhere are beginning to appreciate the need for pure-bred sires. In dairying the selection of the herd bull is of the greatest importance because he is at least half the herd from the breeding point of view. His influence on the characteristics of every calf born in the herd is as great as that of the dam of the calf. If he is a pure-bred animal used on grade cows, his influence will be more than half because his transmitting powers in bred characteristics will be stronger.

No bull whose dam and paternal grand-dam were not capable of producing 300 pounds of butterfat in 365 days should be used for breeding purposes if good results are expected. It would be much better if this premium were set at 350. The prudent dairyman will select a calf from a cow which produced 400 pounds or more of butterfat.

If the use of bulls from dams and paternal grand-dams producing less than 300 pounds of fat were prohibited by state law it would be a long step in advance. Much damage has been done by unscrupulous and ignorant breeders, who have sold, for breeding purposes and at low prices, pure-bred male calves from cows which did not pay for their keep, but had a long line of pure-bred ancestry. In getting bulls from other herds be sure that they are healthy. It is especially important to avoid contagious abortion and tuberculosis. Satisfactory young bulls of breeding age cannot always be purchased easily, and therefore it is always best to have a young bull growing up to take the place of the older herd bull.

DAIRY NOTES

The tubercular cow is a menace to public health.

If you expect a cow to produce regularly she must be fed regularly.

Kindness and regularity in handling dairy animals yield profitable returns.

The cream separator is one of the necessities of the all 'round dairy farm.

If you are manufacturing butter the best way to sell it is to the special customer.

If we cannot get the best cows there are, let's get the best we can and then work for better.

The yield and character of a dairy cow's milk is directly influenced by the character of her surroundings.

Begin this week to dig that pit all. You will be so pleased with results that you will dig another one next year.

The man who considers foot-and-mouth disease lightly is the very one we would expect to light his pipe in a powder factory.

It is not advisable to milk cows before calving except very heavy milkers whose udders become so distended as to cause suffering.

In handling hops on the dairy farm the shorter the tanning period the greater the profits. Remember this and feed accordingly.

An important point to inquire about in buying a cow is the milking record of the sire's dam and you must know what she eats and what she yields. Either alone is not sufficient.

FOR THOSE FOND OF ORANGES

Recipes That Will Appeal Particularly to Lovers of Healthful and Appetizing Fruit.

Oranges are so healthful they should be introduced as often as possible; try these recipes:

Orange Delight—Soak half a box of gelatin, or one envelope of powdered gelatin, in one gill of cold water fifteen minutes, now add three gills of boiling water, stir until dissolved; put into it half a pint of granulated sugar, three gills of sour orange juice and the strained juice of one lemon, stand in cool place; harden in the refrigerator.

Place a couple of rounds of sliced orange in each individual dish, cover with the jelly, then a layer of soft custard or whipped cream as a mask. Serve ice cold with lady fingers.

Orange Icing—Put one running-over tablespoonful of strained orange juice in a bowl, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and one teaspoonful of sherry wine or brandy, with the grated yellow rind of one small sour orange; let it stand for 20 minutes, then stir in half a teaspoonful of confectioner's sugar, then the slightly beaten yolk of one egg; stir, now add sufficient confectioner's sugar to make it the consistency to spread easily over the cake; it should not run; spread evenly, then put in a cool, dry place to stiffen.

This icing will be rich and creamy, never becoming "rocky," like so many people make. If cake is rubbed on the edge with sugar the icing seldom runs off the sides.

HINTS FOR THE ECONOMICAL

How Dressmakers' Bills May Be Saved and Garments Kept at Their Proper Freshness.

A cake of magnesia and a clothes brush are a frugal woman's best friends. After brushing a dusty gown rub both sides of any soiled spots with the magnesia, which comes in cakes for that purpose, hang it away for a day or two and then brush again. The spots will be found to have disappeared. Care taken with dainty clothing is the secret of dressing well on limited means. The late Mme. Modjeska had a wonderful collection of laces which were worn instead of being kept for show alone. They were cleaned with magnesia, liberally sprinkled through the meshes, the whole wrapped in tissue paper to remain until the chalk absorbed all the dirt.

Do you cover your own buttons? It means a saving and gives variety to a costume. It can be done by crochet stitches or by needlework as well as by bits of fancy silk, too insignificant for any other use. I have heard objections on the score that the result was not as satisfactory as professional work, but the answer to that is the injunction to do all work neat. Slipshod methods are to be condemned everywhere, although I grant that time is wasted in the inside finish of frocks. Even expensive dressmakers have taken a hint from Paris and concentrated on externals.

In Muffins.

This recipe was introduced to a certain household by a servant from Hungary. In Hungary, she explained, she used salt pork, but she found bacon better than pork.

She sifts a cupful and a half of flour with a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder, a teaspoonful of sugar and a half teaspoonful of salt. Then she adds a beaten egg, a teaspoonful of melted butter and half a cupful of sweet milk. After beating smooth she adds half a cupful of bacon. The bacon is first fried or broiled until crisp and then chopped and measured. The muffins are baked in hot muffin pans until done and they are eaten without butter. The bits of bacon throughout the muffins give sufficient flavor of the sort butter would supply.

Auburn Molasses Cookies.

To one cupful of lard and butter mixed and melted allow two cupfuls of molasses, two teaspoonfuls of soda dissolved first in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Then beaten into the molasses until it foams two eggs, a pinch of salt, a tablespoonful of ginger and a teaspoonful of cinnamon. Add flour to mix very soft and let the dough stand for an hour before rolling out. Cut into cookies a quarter of an inch thick and bake in a rather hot oven until a rich brown.

Pigeon Fricassee.

Cut eight pigeons into small pieces and put in a stewpan, with one pint of water and the same of claret. Season with salt, pepper, mace and onion, a bunch of herbs, a piece of butter in flour; cover close and let stew until there is just enough for sauce; then take out the onion and herbs, beat up the yolks of three eggs, push the meat to one side and stir them into the gravy. Keep stirring until sauce is thick, then put the meat in a dish and pour over it.

Baked Oysters.

Put a round of toasted bread into a small baking cup or dish. Spread with butter and fill the cup with oysters. Season with salt, pepper and butter. Fill as many cups as required, place them in baking pan in the oven, cover with a pan and bake about ten minutes.

A Tea Hint.

If a lump of sugar is put in the teapot when making tea it will prevent its spilling the table cover if spilled.

Mrs. Hubb—And yours in New York are so straight.

"But aren't straight streets an advantage?"

"Why, no. Now in Boston one can walk and walk; and get some place, but in New York you can walk and walk and get nowhere."

More Words Followed.

"I'm a woman of my word," said Mrs. Prebbscomb, with an air of finality.

"Indeed you are, my dear," said Mr. Prebbscomb.

"When I go out I don't come home and tell an improbable yarn about where I've been."

"No, you don't, my dear," replied Mr. Prebbscomb mildly, "but that may be due to the fact that I have never had sufficient courage to ask you where you have been."

Poets are born and so, for that matter, are all of the other unusual men.

CLEAR-HEADED.

Head Bookkeeper Must Be Reliable.

The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee and tea did for him:

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago, and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way:

"I had an attack of pneumonia, which left me with dyspepsia, or neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, and we liked it so much that we will never change back; for I am a well man today and have used no medicine.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co's branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee drinking days I was subject to nervousness and the 'blues' in addition to my sick spells. These have left me since I began using Postum and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

DREW TRIBUTE FROM TWIN

Great Humorist, Asked for His Conception of a Gentleman, Named His Coachman.

Once, upon being asked to give his conception of a gentleman, Mark Twain, after a moment's deep thought, paid the following tribute to one who after many years of faithful service had just died—the great humorist's coachman, Patrick McAleer.

"He was never old—Patrick. He came to us 36 years ago. He was my coachman on the morning that I drove my young bride to our new home. He was a young Irishman, slender, tall, lithe, honest, truthful, and he never changed in all his life. He really was with us but 25 years, for he did not go with us to Europe, but he never regarded that as separation. As the children grew up he was their guide. He was all honor, honesty and affection. He was with us in New Hampshire last summer, and his hair was just as black, his eyes were just as blue, his form just as straight and his heart just as good as on the day we first met. In all the long years Patrick never made a mistake. He never needed an order; he never received a command. He knew. I have been asked for my idea of an ideal gentleman, and I give it to you—Patrick McAleer."

Topic for Letter Writing.
Who of us, on sitting down to write a letter, when many things have been in thought to write, has not felt a sudden dearth of topics? Why not keep marked envelopes and cards for regular correspondents? While busy about your household, you think of something you wish to write. Make a note of it on a card and slip it into its special envelope. Then when you sit down to write the letter you save time and thought, and your letters are far more satisfactory to your friends.

French Cabinet Changes.
The appointment of M. Delcasse as French minister of war makes the fifty-ninth change in that post during the past forty-three years—that is to say, since the establishment of the third republic. As, however, several statesmen have filled the post more than once, it has had only 33 different occupants under the republic.

Kidney Troubles Attack Chelsea Men and Women, Old and Young.
Kidney ills seize young and old. Often come with little warning. Children suffer in their early years—Can't control the kidney secretions. Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain. Women worry, can't do daily work. Men have lame and aching backs. If you have any form of kidney ills You must reach the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys—Have brought relief to Chelsea people. Chelsea testimony proves it. Mrs. William Taylor, Chelsea, says: Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my home with beneficial results. One of my family had kidney trouble and suffered greatly from a weak and lame back. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Fenn's drug store gave relief. Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Taylor recommends. Card of Thanks.

As Decoration Day committee we wish to thank the citizens of our village and community for the kind treatment we received from them, also those who were generous in furnishing us with automobiles to take us to and from the cemetery, the ladies of the parochial school, the one lone teacher of the public school, who assisted and furnished the music for us in the hall, and helped decorate the graves of our dead. We are prone to ask where were the members of the school board, also teachers who are supposed to teach among other things patriotism and love of country. It looked as if that had been taught only in the lower grades as the scholars from those departments were the only ones to take any interest in the day in which the subject is brought to the attention of the people. We understand that the subject of athletics and the nude in that department seems to have more importance in the eyes and needs than anything else, and they make the day desecration, instead of Decoration Day. Our Boy Scouts were not in evidence, even though a few of their friends died for their country, and they must have thought some comrade or friend would attend to the matter, or it had been so long since they gave up their life the matter had vanished from their memory. Fifty years ago the people were so thankful to the Almighty God for the part of the men and boys who were spared to come home, that they turned out en masse and not only welcomed them but honored them enough to lay aside the affairs of every day business to make a memorial day one of serious thoughts, instead of frivolity and sport. I would suggest that the school board hire a ten acre lot and put a high board fence around it if the art of nudity has to be taught in school and thus keep the boys off the streets while in that condition.

Judging from recent fires there seems to be a considerable number of large manufacturing plants whose owners are surprised to learn that sprinklers won't put out a fire unless the water supply is turned on.

When turning in an alarm of fire over the telephone don't get excited, but give slowly and distinctly the location of the fire and do not hang up the receiver until you are sure the person at the other end of the wire has the information you wish to convey.

He saw her walk bravely the length of the dining-room, out into the office. What a misfortune! Argument was out of the question. Elsa was not a child, to be reasoned with. She was a woman, and she had come to a woman's understanding of her heart. To place before her the true angles of the case, the heartless banishment from the world she knew, the regret which would be hers later, no matter how much she loved the man. . . . He pushed back his chair, leaving his coffee untasted.

He possessed the deep understanding of the kindly heart, and his one thought was Elsa's future happiness. Could he save her from the day when she would learn Romance had come from within? No. All he could do was to help find the man.

He sent five cablegrams to Saigon, to the consulate, to the principal hotels—the most difficult composition he had ever attacked. But because he had forgotten to send the sixth to meet the packet boat, against the possibility of Warrington changing his mind and not landing, his labor was thrown to the winds.

Meantime Elsa stopped at the office desk. "I left a note for Mr. Warrington who has gone to Saigon. I see it in his key box. Will you please return it to me?"

The clerk did not hesitate an instant. He gravely returned the note to her, marveling at her paleness. Elsa crushed the note in her hand and moved toward the stairs, wondering if she could reach her room before she broke down utterly. He had gone. He had gone without knowing that he wanted in life was for the taking. In her room she opened the note and through blurred vision read what she had so happily inscribed the night before. "Paul—I love you. Come to me. Elsa." She had written it, unashamed.

She flung herself upon the bed, and there Martha found her.

"Elsa, child, what is it?" Martha cried, kneeling beside the bed. "Child, what has happened?"

Elsa sat up, seized Martha by the shoulders and stared into the faithful eyes. "Well, I love this man Warrington and he loves me. But he has gone. Can't you see? Don't you understand? Have you been as blind as I? He is Paul Ellison, Arthur's brother, his twin brother. And they obliterated him. It is Arthur who is the ghost, Martha, the phantom. Ah, I have caused you a good deal of worry, and I am going to cause you yet more. I am going to Saigon; up and down the world, east and west, until I find him. Shall I go alone, or will you go with me?"

Then Martha did what ever after endeared her to the heart of the stricken girl—she mothered her. "Elsa, my baby! Of course I shall go with you, always. For you could not love any man if he was not worthy."

Then followed the strangest quest doubtless ever made by a woman. From Singapore to Saigon, up to Bangkok, down to Hongkong again; to Batavia, over to Hongkong, Shanghai, Peking, Manila, Hongkong again, then Yokohama. Patient and hopeful, Elsa followed her bewildering trail. She left behind her many puzzled hotel managers and booking agents; for it was not usual for a beautiful young woman to go about the world, inquiring for a blond man with a parrot. Sometimes she was only a day late. Many cablegrams she sent, but upon her arrival in each port she found that these had not been called for. Over these heart-breaking disappointments she uttered no complaint. The world was big and wide; be it never so big and wide, Elsa knew that some day she would find him.

In the daytime there was the quest; but at the nights, the interminable hours of inaction, the spaces of time in which she could only lie back and think. Up and down the coasts, across islands, over seas, the journey took her, until one day in July she found herself upon the pillared veranda of the house in which her mother had been born.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Two Brothers.

From port to port, sometimes not stepping off the boat at all, moody, restless and irritable, Warrington wended his way home. There was nothing surprising in the fact that he never inquired for mail. Who was there to write? Besides, he sought only the obscure hotels, where he was not likely to meet any of his erstwhile fellow passengers. The mockery and uselessness of his home-going became more and more apparent as the days slipped by. Often he longed to fly back to the jungles, to James, and leave matters as they were. Here and there, along the way, he had tried a bit of luxury; but the years of economy and frugality had robbed him of the ability to enjoy it. He was going home . . . to what? Surely there would be no welcome for him at his journey's end. He would return after the manner of prodigals in general, not scriptural, to find that he was not wanted. Of his own free will he had gone out of their lives.

He fought grimly against the thought of Elsa; but he was not strong enough to vanquish the longings from his heart and mind. Always when alone she was in fancy with him, now smiling amusedly into his face, now peering down at the phosphorescence seething alongside, now standing with her chin uplifted, her eyes half shut, letting the strong winds strike her full in the face. Many a "good-night" he sent over the seas. An incident; that would be all.

His first day in New York left him with nothing more than a feeling of foreboding and oppression. The expected exhilaration of returning to the city of his birth did not materialize. So used to open spaces was he, to distances and the circle of horizons, that he knew he no longer belonged to the city with its Himalayan gorges and canyons, whose torrents were human beings and whose glaciers were the hearts of these. A great loneliness bore down on him. For months he had been drawing familiar pictures, and to find none of these was like coming home to an empty house. The old life was indeed gone; there were no threads to resume. A hotel stood where his club had been; the house in which he had spent his youth was no more. He wanted to leave the city; and the desire was with difficulty overcome.

Early the second morning he started downtown to the offices of the Andes Construction company. He was extraordinarily nervous. Cold sweat continually moistened his palms. Change, change, everywhere change; Trinity was like an old friend. When the taxi cab driver threw off the power and indicated with a jerk of his head a granite shaft that soared up into the blue, Warrington asked: "What place is this?"

"The Andes building, sir. The construction company occupies the top floor."

"Very good," replied Warrington, paying and discharging the man.

From a reliquary of the Dutch, an affair of red brick, four stories high, this monolith had sprung. With a sigh Warrington entered the cavernous doorway and stepped into an "express elevator." When the car arrived at the twenty-second story, Warrington was alone. He paused before the door of the vice-president. He recalled the "old man," thin-lipped, blue-eyed, erup-

Warrington twisted the key. Work, rehabilitation.

"Could you trust me?" he asked quietly.

"With anything I have in the world. Understand, Paul, there's no philandering string to this offer. You're pulled through a devil of a hole. You're a man. I should not be holding down this chair if I couldn't tell a man at a glance. We were together two months in Peru. I'm familiar with your work. Do you want to know whose portrait that is up there? Well, it's General Chetwood's, the founder of this concern, the silent partner. The man who knew kings and potentates and told 'em that they needed bridges in their back yards. This building belongs to his daughter. She converted her stock into granite. About a month ago I received a letter from her. It directly concerned you. It seems she learned through the consul general at Singapore that you had worked with us. She's like her father, a mighty keen judge of human nature. Frankly, this offer comes through her advice. To satisfy yourself, you can give us a surety bond for fifty thousand. It's not obligatory, however."

Elsa Chetwood. She had her father's eyes, and it was this which had drawn his gaze to the portrait. Chetwood; and Arthur had not known any more than he had. What irony! Ten years wasted . . . for nothing!

Warrington laughed aloud. A weakness seized him, like that of a man long gone hungry.

"Buck up, Paul," warned the good Samaritan. "All this kind of knocks the wind out of you. I know. But what I've offered you is in good faith. Will you take it?"

"Yes," simply.

"That's the way to talk. Supposing you go out to lunch with me? We'll talk it over like old times."

"No. I haven't seen . . ."

"To be sure! I forgot. Do you know where they live, your mother and brother?"

"No. I expected to ask you."

The vice-president scribbled down the address. "I believe you'll find them both there, though Arthur, I understand, is almost as great a traveler as you are. Of course you want to see them. Of poor beggar! The southwestern will pull you almost up to the door. After the reunion, you hike back here, and we'll get down to the meat of the business."

"John," said Warrington, huskily, "you're a man."

"Oh, piffle! It's not all John. The old man left word that if you ever turned up again to hang on to you. You were valuable. And there's Miss Chetwood. If you want to thank anybody, thank her." Warrington missed the searching glance, which was not without its touch of envy. "You'd better be off. Hustle back as soon as you can." Elmore offered his hand now. "Gad! but you haven't lost any of your old grip."

"I'm a bit dazed. The last six months have loosened up my nerves."

"I'd sound hollow if I tried to say what I feel. I'll be back a week from today."

"I'll look for you."

As the door closed behind Warrington, the young millionaire sat down, acclimating to a cubby hole in his desk. He presently took out a letter postmarked Yokohama. He turned it about in his hands, musingly. Without reading it (for he knew its contents well), he thrust it back into the cubby hole. Women were out of his sphere. He could build a bridge within a dollar of the bid; but he knew nothing about women beyond the fact that they were always desirable.

A few monosyllables, a sentence or two, and then, good day. The average man would have recounted every incident of note during those ten years. He did not admire Warrington any the less for his reticence. It took a strong man to hold himself together under all these blows from the big end of fortune's horn.

Paul was a born engineer; Arthur had entered the office as a makeshift. Paul had taken eight thousand one day, and decamped. Arthur had refunded the sum, and disappeared. Elmore could not understand, nor could his father. Perhaps some of the truth would now come to light. Somehow, Paul, with his blond beard and blonder head, his bright eyes, his tan, his big shoulders, somehow Paul was out of date. He did not belong to the times.

And Elsa had met him over there; practically ordered (though she had no authority) that he should be given a start anew; that, moreover, she would go his bond to any amount. Funny old world! Well, he was glad. Paul was a man, a big man, and that was the sort needed in the foreign bridge building. He rolled down the top of his desk and left the building. He was in no mood for work.

The evening of the third day found Warrington in the baggage car, feeding a dilapidated feather-molting bird, who was in a most scandalous temper. Rajah scattered the seeds about, spurned the banana-tip, tilted the water cup and swashbuckled generally. By and by, above the clack-clack of wheels and rails, came a crooning song. The baggage man looked up from his waybook and lowered his pipe. He saw the little green bird pause and begin to keep time with its head. It was the Urdu lullaby James used to sing. It never failed to quiet the little parrot. Warrington went back to his Pullman, where the porter greeted him with the information that the next stop would be his. Ten minutes later he stepped from the train, a small kitbag in one hand and the parrot cage in the other.

He had come prepared for mistake on the part of the natives. The single smart cabman lifted his hat, jumped down from the box, and opened the door. Warrington entered without speaking. The door closed, and the coupe rolled away briskly. He was perfectly sure of his destination. The cabman had mistaken him for Arthur. It would be better so. There would be no after complications when he departed on the morrow. As the coupe took a turn, he looked out of the window. They were entering a driveway, lined on each side of which were chestnuts. Indeed the house was set in the center of a grove of these splendid trees.

Warrington went up the broad veranda steps and pulled the old-fashioned bell cord. He was rather amazed at his utter lack of agitation. He was as calm as if he were making a call upon a casual acquaintance. His mother and brother, whom he had not seen in ten years! The great oak door drew in, and he entered unceremoniously.

"Why, Marse A'thuh, I d'n't see y' go out!" exclaimed the old negro servant.

"I am not Arthur; I am his brother Paul. Which door?"

Pop-eyed, the old negro pointed to a door down the hall. Then he leaned against the banister and caught desperately at the spindles. For the voice was not Arthur's.

Warrington opened the door, closed it gently and stood with his back to it. At a desk in the middle of the room sat a man, busy with books. He raised his head.

"Arthur, don't you know me?"

"Paul?"

"What? You worked four years with this company and don't recollect that portrait?"

"Frankly, I never noticed it before."

Warrington placed the certified check on the desk. "With interest," he said.

The vice-president cracked it, ran his fingers over his smooth chin, folded the check and extended it toward the astonished wanderer.

"We don't want that, Paul. What we wanted was to get you back. There was no other way. Your brother made up the loss the day after you went away. There was no scandal. Only a few of us in the office knew. Never got to the newspapers."

It was impossible for Warrington to digest this astounding information at once. His mind could only repeat the phrases: No scandal, only a few of us in the office knew, never got to the newspapers. For ten years he had hidden himself in wildernesses, avoided hotels, read no American newspapers, never called for mail. Oh, monumental fool!

"And I could have come home almost at once!" he said aloud, addressing the crumpled check in his hand rather than the man in the swivel chair.

"Yes. I have often wondered where you were, what you were doing. You and your brother were upper-classmen. I never knew Arthur very well; but you and I were chummy, after a fashion. Arthur was a little too bookish for my style. Didn't we use to call you Old Galahad? You were always walloping the bullies and taking the weaker chaps under your wing. To me, you were the last man in the world for this business. Moreover, I never could understand, nor could father, how you got it, for you were not an office man. Women and cards, I suppose. Father said that you had the making of a great engineer. Fierce place, this old town," waving his hand toward the myriad sparkling roofs and towers and spires. "Have to be strong and hard-headed to survive it. Built anything since you've been away?"

"In Cashmir." To have thrown away a decade!

"Glad you kept your hand in. I dare say you've seen a lot of life." To the young man there was an extremely awkward interval.

"Yes; I've seen life," duly.

"Orient, mostly, I suppose. Your letter about the strike in oil was mighty interesting. Heap of money over there, if they'd only let us smart chaps in to dig it up. Now, old man, I want you to wipe the slate clear of these ten years. We'll call it a bad dream. What are your plans for the future?"

"Plans?" Warrington looked up blankly. He realized that he had made no plans for the future.

"Yes. What do you intend to do? A man like you wasn't made for idleness. Look here, Paul; I'm not going to beat about the bush. We've got a whopping big contract from the Chinese government, and we need a man to take charge, a man who knows and understands something of the yellow people. How about a salary of ten thousand a year for two years, to begin in October?"

Warrington twisted the check. Work, rehabilitation.

"Could you trust me?" he asked quietly.

"With anything I have in the world. Understand, Paul, there's no philandering string to this offer. You're pulled through a devil of a hole. You're a man. It was only a nice friendly kind of a "sing-song" at the hydro, but just because it was free expectations ran high, and the critics were in full force. The young man who rose to sing "The Maiden Fair With Golden Hair" had the best intentions in the world, but somehow he was not up to what is called "concert pitch." Indeed, he was very much below it, and after making two or three attempts he had to capitulate and resume his seat at the back. Then the benevolent-looking chairman rose.

"Ladies and gentlemen, there is not a word to be said against the young gentleman. He did his best, and what can man do more? He deserves our thanks for his willingness to come forward. But I do think that the person who asked him to sing should be shot."

Fixing the Crime.

It was only a nice friendly kind of a "sing-song" at the hydro, but just because it was free expectations ran high, and the critics were in full force. The young man who rose to sing "The Maiden Fair With Golden Hair" had the best intentions in the world, but somehow he was not up to what is called "concert pitch." Indeed, he was very much below it, and after making two or three attempts he had to capitulate and resume his seat at the back. Then the benevolent-looking chairman rose.

"Ladies and gentlemen, there is not a word to be said against the young gentleman. He did his best, and what can man do more? He deserves our thanks for his willingness to come forward. But I do think that the person who asked him to sing should be shot."

Chetwood. If you want to thank anybody, thank her." Warrington missed the searching glance, which was not without its touch of envy. "You'd better be off. Hustle back as soon as you can." Elmore offered his hand now. "Gad! but you haven't lost any of your old grip."

"I'm a bit dazed. The last six months have loosened up my nerves."

"I'd sound hollow if I tried to say what I feel. I'll be back a week from today."

"I'll look for you."

As the door closed behind Warrington, the young millionaire sat down, acclimating to a cubby hole in his desk. He presently took out a letter postmarked Yokohama. He turned it about in his hands, musingly. Without reading it (for he knew its contents well), he thrust it back into the cubby hole. Women were out of his sphere. He could build a bridge within a dollar of the bid; but he knew nothing about women beyond the fact that they were always desirable.

A few monosyllables, a sentence or two, and then, good day. The average man would have recounted every incident of note during those ten years. He did not admire Warrington any the less for his reticence. It took a strong man to hold himself together under all these blows from the big end of fortune's horn.

Paul was a born engineer; Arthur had entered the office as a makeshift. Paul had taken eight thousand one day, and decamped. Arthur had refunded the sum, and disappeared. Elmore could not understand, nor could his father. Perhaps some of the truth would now come to light. Somehow, Paul, with his blond beard and blonder head, his bright eyes, his tan, his big shoulders, somehow Paul was out of date. He did not belong to the times.

And Elsa had met him over there; practically ordered (though she had no authority) that he should be given a start anew; that, moreover, she would go his bond to any amount. Funny old world! Well, he was glad. Paul was a man, a big man, and that was the sort needed in the foreign bridge building. He rolled down the top of his desk and left the building. He was in no mood for work.

The evening of the third day found Warrington in the baggage car, feeding a dilapidated feather-molting bird, who was in a most scandalous temper. Rajah scattered the seeds about, spurned the banana-tip, tilted the water cup and swashbuckled generally. By and by, above the clack-clack of wheels and rails, came a crooning song. The baggage man looked up from his waybook and lowered his pipe. He saw the little green bird pause and begin to keep time with its head. It was the Urdu lullaby James used to sing. It never failed to quiet the little parrot. Warrington went back to his Pullman, where the porter greeted him with the information that the next stop would be his. Ten minutes later he stepped from the train, a small kitbag in one hand and the parrot cage in the other.

Appropriate for Summer Gayeties

The dignified and picturesque costume of black taffeta and chantilly lace, worn with a poke bonnet shape of lisenet braid, was designed for an older woman than the model on which it is pictured. But the design is one of those that appeal to the matron of elegant and reserved taste even if youth still smiles from her eyes.

A wide chantilly lace vells the underskirt in three scant flounces, the luster of taffeta proving the best of backgrounds for the fine net and intricate pattern in the lace. A short panel of the silk at the front and back of the bodice is extended into a crushed girdle about the figure, fastening at the right side under flat buttons of cut jet. But the details of this particular combination are not so important as the suggestion it carries for the use of lace and taffeta in combination for black gowns. There are many good styles which may be

Coiffures for Youthful Faces

There is a number of pretty and simple styles in coiffures that are to be recommended to youthful wearers, and to everyone else to whom the plainer arrangements of the hair are becoming. The hair in nearly all of them is unwaved, but it has a natural ripple so much the better for the coiffure.

Most demure, and a favorite with artists, the coiffure in which the single parting divides the hair over the middle of the forehead is among the wide rivals that have come along with wide skirts and poke bonnets. In this coiffure the ears are covered and the back hair arranged low and close to the head. This is modified, when the hair is straight, by pinning it in waves or undulations about the face, with small invisible wire pins, and wearing a plain band of velvet ribbon about the head to help keep the hair in place. Sometimes the back hair is arranged in a small "chignon" at the base of the crown.

Rather boyish-looking is a hairdress in which the hair is combed straight down about the forehead and bound

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Look pleasant, even if you do not feel so. Keep your temper; no one else has any use for it.—Lewis James.

Don't consider yourself the axle of the world; you are only a spoke in the wheel.

A FEW INVITING DISHES.

A dessert which is both attractive and wholesome is the following: Wash and remove the stones from a half pound of dates; cut them in strips and arrange in serving dishes. When ready to serve sprinkle generously with pecans and heap a spoonful of whipped cream on each. No sugar will be needed as to the dates are sufficiently sweet.

When making rhubarb or any juicy pie, beat an egg and stir into it a little flour; add this to the pie and the juice will not boil over and be wasted in the oven.

Ginger Puffs.—Beat to a cream a fourth of a cupful of softened butter, gradually beating half a cupful of sugar, one beaten egg, half a cupful of molasses, and half a cupful of warm water, two cupfuls of sifted flour, teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of ginger and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; lastly a half cupful of raisins chopped. Bake in well-buttered gem pans.

Chop Suey.—Heat a half cupful of butter in a kettle, saute pound chicken; cut into small pieces; remove to a platter and brown a pound of lean pork in the same way. Return the chicken to the kettle; add a cupful of chopped onion; a can of mushrooms, also the liquor; a cupful and a half of water and a cupful of blanched peanuts finely broken or chopped; add salt and pepper to taste and cook for half an hour. Veal may be used in place of the chicken. Rice should be served with the suey.

Tomato and Cucumber Salad.—Cut cucumber in tiny cubes; prepare tomato cups, using the pulp to mix with the cucumber; add half as much finely diced onion as cucumber; mix well, season with salt and paprika and fill the cups. Place a spoonful of mayonnaise on top of each. The vegetable may be dressed with French dressing, first to season, then the boiled dressing or mayonnaise is used as a garnish.

Circumstances are beyond the control of men; but his conduct is in his own power.—Disraeli.

Set your pride in its proper place and never be ashamed of any honest calling.—Jean Ingelow.

FISH AND EGG DISHES.

At this season when fish and eggs are at their best a few unusual ways of serving them will no doubt be welcome.

Fish Chowder.—Any fresh fish may be used for this dish. Cut the fish in small pieces; for a pound of fish use a half pound of salt pork, cut the pork in dice and fry brown in a deep saucepan, then add three sliced onions, a half dozen potatoes, the fish, boned as well as possible, cover with boiling water and simmer until the vegetables are done, when the fish will also be cooked. Add a quart of milk and a half-dozen milk crackers, previously scalded so they will not soak up the soup.

Japanese Eggs.—Take three cupfuls of cooked rice, place in a covered baking dish and make a depression in the center and five around the edges; into each drop an egg, season well and pour over a cup of rich milk. Put into the oven well covered and bake fifteen minutes.

Egg Relish.—Try out two slices of salt pork cut in cubes; in this brown a cupful of bread cut in cubes; add an equal amount of cold potatoes, cut in dice, and when brown add two eggs slightly beaten; heat slowly, stirring until the egg is cooked; season with salt and pepper. This is good for a breakfast, supper or luncheon dish.

Creamed Salmon in Peppers.—Cut the tops from four sweet peppers, to form cups, take out the seeds, and boil in salted water five minutes. Drain and remove all the white portion. Pick over the salmon, removing all skin and bones, and heat it in a half-cupful of thick, white sauce; fill the peppers with this mixture, set in a dish with a little hot water and bake until the peppers are perfectly tender. Sprinkle over the tops of the peppers buttered crumbs and when brown, serve.

He Explained It.

Wife—John, I saw in the paper that a nautical mile is nearly a seventh more than a land mile. Why is that, I wonder?

Husband—Well—or you know, my dear, that things swell in the water.

His Experience.

"And so they were married!" exclaimed the romantic maid. "Well, that's the way all love matches end, I suppose."

"Yes," rejoined the grass widow, "They don't burn long."

"MASON AND DIXON'S LINE"

Popular Misapprehension as to Meaning of Term and Just What the Phrase Implied.

Very incorrect is the general belief that Mason and Dixon's line, as originally laid off, divided the slave-holding states from the free states. On the contrary, it ran for one-third of its whole length between Maryland and Delaware, both of which were slave-holding states at the time. The line was run purely to settle a boundary dispute between Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware.

All the same, the actual Mason and Dixon's line was as much synonymy for trouble and dissension in its day as was the figure of speech to which in after years it gave rise. And the phrase will hold bitter meaning to some until (in that looked-for day of charity to all men) shall be fulfilled Dr. John Wyeth's recent prophecy that "When the people of the South and the North get together they will forget there was ever a Mason and Dixon's line."—Southern Woman's Magazine.

Famous Feats of Archery.

In the days when the buffalo was found in vast herds on the western plains there were Indians who, while riding at a gallop, could send an arrow through a buffalo's body. Remarkable as this archery was, it did not equal that reached by the archers of ancient times. It is of record that the MacReas of Gairloch, Scotland, were such skilled archers that they could hit a man at the distance of 500 yards. In 1794 the Turkish ambassador at London shot an arrow in a field near that capital 415 yards against the wind. The secretary of the illuminating Engineering society said that such heat penetrated two inches or more, while convection heat was excited principally on the surface.

This is why electric light baths and sun baths are so stimulating to the organs of elimination, especially the skin and kidneys, and so beneficial in so many diseases.

Unfair Advantage.

"Don't you ever let me catch you kissing my daughter again, sir!" thundered the irate father.

"You won't, sir," answered the quaking youth. "You wouldn't have caught me this time if you hadn't been wearing rubber heels."

And a good many prayers ought to be blue pencilled.

Before starting on the right track, be sure you are headed the right way.

This is to the credit of human nature: It is not on record that anyone ever resolved to be meaner next year.

Madam, Allow Me To Introduce the New Post Toasties

You may have eaten "corn flakes" but you have never tasted any that equal the New Post Toasties.

These new flakes, madam, are crisp and flakey, and have a substance and toasty flavour, a snap and zest that make them distinctive.

Dainty to be sure in their sweetness, the New Post Toasties have a body and firmness that don't mush down when cream or milk is added; and a true ripe-corn flavour that makes one feel that here, at last, is something really new and good to eat.

New Post Toasties—selected Indian corn, prepared for the table as it was never prepared before.

Your grocer has them now.

REPAIRING

When placing a new leather on a

RED JACKET
SO-EASY-TO-FIXthe valves are easily removed through the base of the pump as the illustrations show.
The cost is little more than the price of the repair.
You can do it. The only tool needed is a monkey wrench.Compare this with the time, trouble and expense of removing ordinary pumps from the well, to make the same repair. You see it's not the cost of the leather but the cost of putting it on.
