A traveling salesman offered me a bargain in Coffee. He said it was a brand his firm was closing out. It had not been a good seller, his firm was going to put in a new line of Coffee, and that we could buy the old brand at several cents less. We told him we was afraid if we bought it we would be closing it out some day at less than we paid for it. We further stated that we would rather stick to

Wright-Glenn Nuptials.

At high noon Wednesday, June 30, 1915, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Wright on Jefferson street, the marriage of their eldest daughter, Miss Ethel Mae, and Mr. Casper W. Glenn of Stockbridge, took place, Rev. Chas. J. Dole officiating.

The wedding march was played by Miss Cora Feldkamp and the ceremony was witnessed by thirty-five of the relatives of the young couple.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine. The couple were attended by the sister of the bride, Miss Clarice, who was gowned in white marquisette over blue silk.

The groom was attended by his brother Ralph, of Stockbridge.

The bride was employed as a clerk in the Chelsea postoffice for some time and for the last year and a half has been a teacher in the high school at Wayne. She is a graduate of the Chelsea high school and the U. of M.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Glenn of Gregory and a grandson of the late Wm. H. Glenn, a former resident of North Lake, and is engaged in the automobile business at Stockbridge.

Following the congratulations a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The wedding fruit cake was made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. D. B. Gregory, of Anahelm, California, and weighed 14 pounds. The Misses Ethel Burkhardt and Cora Feldkamp of this place and Gertrude Rolph, of Wayne, waited on table. After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home to their friends in Stockbridge.

Schneider-Arner Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Anna C. Schneider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Schneider, of Lima, and Dr. F. L. Arner, of Dexter village, took place Wednesday morning, June 30, 1915, at Zion parsonage, Rogers Corners, Rev. E. Thieme officiating.

The bride has been acting as a trained nurse for the last three years. She was a guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Schneider last Friday evening at which she received a number of handsome presents.

Dr. Arner has been a practicing physician in Dexter village for the last five years, during which time he has been a frequent guest of Chelsea friends.

The couple left on a wedding trip to Rochester, N. Y., where they will visit at the home of Dr. Arner's mother. They will be at home to their friends in Dexter village after July 20th.

Leeke-Goodyear Reunion.

The fifth annual Leeke-Goodyear reunion was held at Portage Lake, Jackson county, Thursday, June 24. Seventy-six relatives were present from Jackson, Chelsea, Grass Lake, Stockbridge, Dansville, Munith and Waterloo.

A bountiful dinner was served which all enjoyed, after which the business meeting was called to order by the president, E. A. Croman. After reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and approved, the officers for 1916 were elected as follows: E. A. Croman, president; Orville Gorton, vice president; Mae Frinkle, secretary; Fred Howlett, treasurer. The committees on sports, grounds, refreshments and tables were also elected. The record of the Leeke-Goodyear family were read from 1700. Before they adjourned they voted to meet at Clear Lake the last Thursday in June, 1916.

Celebrated 80th Anniversary.

Robert C. Glenn, a former well known resident of North Lake, celebrated the 80th anniversary of his birth at his home in Bradentown, Florida, on Thursday, June 10. Many of his friends called at his home with tokens of flowers and fruits. He received a shower of of postcards and letters from relatives and friends who reside in this vicinity. Mrs. James Cooke of this place is a daughter, and his two sons, E. C. Glenn, who resides near Pinckney and Fred A. Glenn, of Highland Park, are well known here. Mrs. Lucy Wood, of North Lake, and Mr. Glenn are the only living members of their family, who were pioneer settlers at North Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Glenn have made their home in Bradentown for the last ten years.

A Temperance Address.

Dr. Byron Defendorf addressed the W. C. T. U. meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. Geo. A. Runciman last Friday afternoon, on the subject, "Effects of Alcohol on the Child." He said that, in his experience as a physician he had seen children born epileptic, imbeciles, etc., as a result of alcoholism in the parents. He had also seen many cases of insanity developed as a result of the habit. His personal experiences have shown him the effects even "unto the third and fourth generation."

A Sunday school picnic was announced to be held on Saturday, July 3, 1875, at the lake on the farm of E. A. Nordman in Lima.

Mrs. Albert Congdon and Mrs. Orrin Thatcher were quite badly injured Sunday afternoon when their horse became frightened, near the home of S. J. Chase, and ran away. Both ladies were thrown from the buggy.

Richards-Dorr Wedding.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Richards, three miles north of Francisco village, was the scene of an exceedingly lovely affair Thursday evening, June 24, the occasion being the marriage of their oldest daughter, Isabella Velma, and Rex C. Dorr, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Dorr, of Sharon.

About one hundred and twenty-five relatives and friends assembled to witness the ceremony which took place at 7 o'clock. The bride and groom, attended by Miss Gladys Richards, sister of the bride, and Earl Dorr, brother of the groom, preceded by Rev. Geo. C. Nothdurft, their pastor, entered to the strains of the Bride's Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Linda Kalmbach, and took their places under an arch of ferns, banked by roses, orchids and potted ferns. Rev. Nothdurft read the impressive ring service of the Methodist Episcopal church which bound the couple in holy wedlock, following which he offered a beautiful prayer. After the ceremony and congratulations, an elaborate three-course dinner was served. While the bride and groom were dining they were interrupted by serenaders who demanded recognition in no uncertain tones. So demonstrative were they, that the bride and groom left the table and served the uninformed guests with cake and cigars after which a final salute and three cheers were given when they departed, singing "happy be the bride and groom."

The bride was beautifully gowned in white crepe de chine, a handmade creation fashioned by Miss Alma Kalmbach, cousin of the bride.

Best wishes of a host of relatives and friends are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Dorr who are popular and highly respected. Mrs. Dorr having been a successful teacher in the rural schools of the neighborhood for the past eight years, and Mr. Dorr having faithfully and painstakingly served the patrons of I. F. D. No. 4 out of Grass Lake for the past nine years. The patrons showed their appreciation of Mr. Dorr's unflinching service by presenting a beautiful leather bed davenport. Other beautiful gifts mark the respect and esteem of their relatives and friends.

Pre-nuptial affairs were a shower given by Miss Young, cousin of the bride; one given by Mrs. Maured Hoppe, an aunt, and another by Mrs. George Runciman, of Chelsea, great aunt.

The guests at the tables were attended by eleven cousins of the bride, who rendered elegant service.

Mr. and Mrs. Dorr, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dorr, of Detroit, visited Detroit, Buffalo, Niagara and East Aurora, N. Y., and after a few weeks will be "at home" on East Main street, Grass Lake, in the home recently purchased by Mr. Dorr.

Broke Bone in Accidental Fall.

Miss Mary Smith met with a severe accident at her home on east Middle street last Friday afternoon. She was on her way to the kitchen garden and tripped on a loose board in the sidewalk. The large bone of her right arm was broken just above the wrist joint. This is the second time that Miss Smith has broken the bone in the arm at about the same place and it will probably be several weeks before she fully recovers from the effects of the accident.

Runciman-Marty Wedding.

A very pretty home wedding took place at the home of Mrs. James H. Runciman, on Jefferson street, at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, June 26, 1915, when her youngest daughter, Miss Clara Elizabeth Runciman, was united in marriage with Mr. Benjamin F. Marty, of Detroit, Rev. Chas. J. Dole officiating, the impressive ring ceremony being used.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Minola Kalmbach, was gowned in pink embroidered voil and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bride was given away by her brother, Carlton H. Runciman, of Grosse Ile. Alberta Winans and Elizabeth Runciman acted as flower girls. The wedding march was played by Mrs. H. D. Runciman, of Ann Arbor, and Mrs. C. H. Runciman, of Grosse Ile, sang "O, Promise Me." The groom was attended by his brother, Frederick Marty, of Cleveland.

A wedding dinner was served to twenty-five relatives and friends. The decorations were pink and white. The Misses Esther Schenk, Nina Belle Wurster and Gertrude Storms acted as waiters.

The bride is a graduate of the Chelsea high school, and for the last two years has been a clerk for A. E. Winans & Son. During the last two weeks she has been the guest of honor at a number of social functions given by her friends. The groom was a former employe of the Flanders Manufacturing Co., and both are well known and respected here. The young couple will make their home in Detroit.

Michael Stapish.

Michael Stapish was born in Reidselz, Province of Lorraine, France, February 14, 1834, and died at Mercy hospital, at Jackson, Monday evening, June 28, 1915, aged 81 years, 4 months and 14 days.

His parents moved to this country when he was 13 years of age and settled on a farm near Chelsea. For over 50 years he resided on his farm near Lyndon Center, and about a year ago he moved to Jackson where he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. L. C. Binder. He was united in marriage with Miss Emma French, in 1859. Mrs. Stapish died six years ago last March. Mr. Stapish was a member of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of this place.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. L. C. Binder and Mrs. Kate Stapish, of Jackson, three sons, George a resident of the state of Washington, Frank and Thomas, of Bay City, twelve grandchildren and one great grandchild.

The funeral was held from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, July 1st, Rev. Father Considine celebrating the mass. Interment at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Sold Worthless Stock.

Ann Arbor Times News: W. B. McLaughlin was arrested at Detroit Monday night for Sheriff Herman G. Lindenschmitt, who has held a warrant for the man's arrest for several weeks.

McLaughlin, so it is alleged, disposed of $1,200 worth of valueless stock to Dr. William C. Wylie, of Dexter. Immediately following the transaction, Dr. Wylie learned that the handsomely engraved certificates he had bought, were not worth the paper they were printed on, and what is more he learned, so his attorney, A. J. Sawyer said, that McLaughlin knew he had been selling stock in a fake corporation.

McLaughlin Tuesday morning, refused to make any statement to Prosecuting Attorney Carl A. Lehman. He said he would say anything until after his attorney had arrived and he had had an opportunity to talk matters over with him.

Basket Picnic at Whitmore Lake.

HUERTA SEIZED ON WAY TO MEXICO

FORMER DICTATOR IS TAKEN IN CUSTODY BY UNITED STATES OFFICIALS.

RELEASED ON HEAVY BOND

General Orozco Who Was at Station to Meet His Chief is Also Detained As "Guest of Collector Cobb."

El Paso, Tex.—General Victoriano Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico, and General Pascual Orozco, one of his former principal generals, and himself a powerful leader in Mexico, at one time, spent Sunday as involuntary "guests" of Collector of Customs Z. L. Cobb and colonel George H. Morgan, Fifteenth cavalry, commandant of Fort Bliss.

Charges of conspiring to incite a revolution against a friendly country were later filed against them. Huerta was released Sunday night on $15,000 bond, while Orozco's bail was fixed at $7,500 and he also was released. The railroad tickets of Huerta and his party, though it was announced that they were going to California, only read to El Paso.

United States officials Sunday night learned that quantities of ammunition had been arriving here lately for mysterious consignees, and believe it was to have been used by Huerta and his adherents. The ammunition is said to have been purchased with funds from the east.

Arriving at Newman, New Mexico, 15 miles north of El Paso, on the Rock Island, at 6:30 Sunday morning, General Huerta was asked to become the guest of Collector Cobb as the former Mexican president stepped from the train. General Orozco, who was present to meet General Huerta, received the same invitation. Orozco had arrived at Newman in the darkness of the early morning in a powerful automobile.

The collector of customs, several special agents of the United States state department, several deputy United States marshals and a squadron of cavalry arrived at the place a short time following General Orozco's arrival. The troops formed a cordon about the little station and pump-house on the prairie and, when the former Mexican dictator stepped out of the Pullman car to greet General Orozco, and General Luis Fuentes, son-in-law of General Huerta, he found himself surrounded. Graciously Collector Cobb begged the former Mexican dictator to accompany him to the city, and graciously, after a sweeping glance at the soldiers surrounding the train, General Huerta smiled, bowed and accepted.

It was announced in the federal building that Generals Huerta and Orozco were being detained as "guests of Collector Cobb" but it was admitted that a telegram had been sent to Washington for instructions. It was also admitted to be the belief that it had been the intention of Orozco to take the former provisional president of Mexico across the border, when the move was interrupted by the appearance of the American officials.

JITNEYS HIT BY ORDINANCE

Drastic Action of Grand Rapids Council May Put Them Out of Business.

Grand Rapids—It is believed that fully 300 jitney buses will be put out of business by ordinance that requires owners to furnish heavy liability bonds and pay $60 a year license fee. The new law will take effect immediately.

Petitions for a referendum were turned down by the council Monday night on the grounds that many of the signers were not voters.

Jitney bus owners charge that the council was influenced in its action by a statement from street railway company officials that car service would be curtailed unless rigid laws were enacted to regulate jitneys. They also assert that the terms of the new ordinance are prohibitive in effect. An appeal to the courts is expected.

AMERICAN WOMAN FINDS NO PROSPECT OF PEACE

JANE ADDAMS.

London—The firm sentiment prevails in all the belligerent nations that the war must be pushed to a decisive victory, according to Miss Jane Addams, who just returned to London from a visit to the warring countries on the continent. In every country visited Miss Addams said she found the high authorities willing enough to listen to any peace proposal that might be made, but no indication was given that any movement in that direction would be of avail.

BEAN MAGGOT HURTS CROP

M. A. C. Will Help Farmers Fight Pest Which is Endangering Fields in Eaton County.

East Lansing—Appeals which have come to the Agricultural college from Eaton county for advise as to how best to combat the bean maggot, a pest which has attacked the Eaton county bean crop, show general alarm among farmers in that district. The maggot has already made a considerable number of fields valueless for beans this season and farmers fear that it is present throughout the county.

The maggot is the larva of a fly which deposits eggs in the ground near the beans shortly after they have been planted. The maggot attacks the bean seed and destroys it. If the pest is prevalent in Eaton county, as at present seems likely, farmers will suffer thousands of dollars damage, as the district is one of the principal bean-producing regions in the United States.

Authorities at the college have advised the farmers against reseeded the affected fields with corn, cabbage, turnips, beets, onions or seed potatoes, as the maggot, if given the opportunity, may attack these crops also.

The college intends to dispatch a field agent to the Eaton county district as soon as possible to lend farmers direct aid in controlling the pest.

DEATHS AND BIRTHS IN MAY

Record Shows That Stork Maintains Lead Over the Dark Angel.

Lansing—There were 3,147 deaths reported to the department of state as having occurred during May.

This number corresponds to an annual death rate of 12.2 per 1,000 estimated population. A decrease of 608 deaths is noted as compared with the month preceding.

By ages there were 504 deaths of infants under one year of age; 13 deaths children from one to four years, both inclusive, and 1,028 deaths of elderly persons, 65 years and more.

CITIZENS TO HELP FIRE PREVENTION

COMMITTEE OF FLINT BUSINESS MEN FORMED TO REDUCE HAZARDS.

WILL INSPECT PROPERTIES

Disputes Between Owners and Chief of Fire Department Will Be Settled by Special Board of Arbitration.

Flint—As an out-growth of a movement started some time ago by the Board of Commerce, a city-wide fire prevention committee composed of prominent citizens has been formed to aid the fire department officials in reducing fire hazards in Flint. Periodical inspections of property will be made and property owners will be required to eliminate from their buildings and premises things which tend to cause fires.

It has been arranged to have a board of arbitration to settle disputes between property owners and the chief of the fire department, who acts as deputy state fire marshal, and the electrical and building inspector of the city. The co-operation of property owners is being sought, but it is understood the committee will back to the limit in their enforcement of the laws, the fire department officials.

MAYORS MEET AT ALPENA

Bay City Man Elected President and Battle Creek Gets Next Convention.

Alpena—Mayor F. P. Kelton, of Bay City, was unanimously chosen president of the League of Michigan Municipalities, which closed a three-day convention in Alpena Friday evening. Battle Creek was chosen as the next meeting place.

Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Mayor James W. Marsh, Battle Creek; secretary-treasurer, Charles A. Sink, Ann Arbor; directors, George H. Curtis, Jackson; Louis Hilmer, Plymouth; Mayor J. G. Rueter, Lansing; Charles Retaille, Marquette, and C. L. Groesbeck, Pontiac. Another address was that of Recorder Grant, of Bay City, on public markets. There were also addresses on municipal lighting and water supply by Charles Retaille, of Marquette, and Dr. G. L. Renaud, of Detroit, on eastern standard time.

ELEVEN HURT AT PORT HURON

Automobile Collision Saturday Night Results in Serious Injuries.

Port Huron—Eleven persons were hurt—two, and possibly three, fatally—when an automobile driven by Harry M. Drago, 35, formerly of Detroit, and carrying four of his friends, crashed into the side of Hugh A. Ferguson's machine as the Ferguson party was attempting to cross Pine Grove avenue on Lincoln avenue in the heart of Port Huron's residence district at 10:20 Saturday.

Not a person in either party escaped unhurt. The most seriously injured are Frank Bourbonnais and Charles Ceaderless, both of whom have fractured skulls, and Drago himself, who was pinned under his car and crushed internally. William Kelly and John Rigling, the other passengers in the wrecked car, escaped with cuts and bruises.

Birmingham Man is Drowned. Pontiac—Drowned on Straits lake, in Commerce township, some time Saturday night while on a fishing trip, the body of Alexander Grant, 46, of Birmingham, was found Sunday morning by the two men who went with him from that village Saturday afternoon.

Members of the Central Michigan Holstein Breeders' association held their annual June picnic at the Espenau farm near Lansing Friday. About 400 head addresses by J. Fred Smith of Byron, superintendent of sheep at the State fair; A. B. Niles, president of the association, and others.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

REPORT OF STATE INSURANCE COMMISSIONER SHOWS INCREASE IN FIRES.

FIRE BUGS HARD TO CONVICT

Governor Ferris Appeals to People of State for Aid for Famine Stricken Mexicans.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing—The forty-fifth annual report of the state insurance department, volume one, dealing with the fire and marine business of the state was sent to Governor Ferris by State Insurance Commissioner John T. Winslow Thursday.

The report shows that the percentage of fire losses incurred to premiums received, increased six per cent during 1914 over the figures of 1913, and that the average cost of fire insurance per $100 of coverage dropped from $1.01 in 1913 to $.99 in 1914.

Seven fire and marine insurance companies authorized to transact business in the state suspended operations in Michigan during 1914 while 12 new companies were given certificates of authority, a gain of five companies.

In his report Commissioner Winslow says that a disappointing feature of the fire losses in Michigan during the past year was the per cent of losses incurred to net premiums received during 1914 which was 66, an increase of nearly 6 per cent over that of the previous year, and the highest in the history of the state since 1893, when the per cent was 72. The commissioner refers to the fact that this increase was evident despite the good work done during the year by the state fire marshal's department.

That the authorities of the state are handicapped in their task of prosecuting fire-bugs is shown in the report, which says the fire bug is a menace to society.

Commissioner Winslow in his report to the governor says, relative to fire-bugs and prosecutions. "There seems to be a feeling among men on the juries which try arson cases, that the prosecutions are resorted to in the interest of insurance companies, and the demagogic pleas that are made by attorneys for the defendant's to the effect that the insurance companies are seeking to avoid payment of losses, have their effect, while, as a matter of fact, the prosecution are criminal in their entirety, and have no relation whatever to the insurance involved.

"The fire-bug is a menace to society, and it is only by teaching the people who are inclined to destroy the property of others or their own property, that they are creating a hazard that might result in loss of life as well as property, which must be punished by severe penalties, that we can ever hope to lessen the number of crimes. We have had a number of cases the past year, where the testimony was absolutely convincing as to the guilt of the parties under arrest, all circumstances coinciding with the theory of their guilt, motive for the crime being shown, and other convincing proof except an eye witness to setting the torch. "We have had cases where it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that a slow fuse was employed to enable the guilty party to get away from the scene of action, and yet, because of the lack of an eye witness to the actual firing with the torch, conviction failed. We have had two cases in this state where the trial judge expressed his opinion that the defendants were guilty, and yet convictions were not obtained; and in one case, the jury was instructed to bring in a verdict of not guilty, notwithstanding the expressed belief of the court that the defendant was guilty. Whether these facts are due to a misapplication of the law, or to inadequate law, I am not in a position to say, but I merely call attention to the fact that we ought to have a more aroused public sentiment in this state, against the fire-bug, if we are to escape the awful consequences of his acts."

With 232 fire and marine insurance companies doing business in Michigan during the past year, the report shows these companies wrote $943,529,166 in net risks, received net premiums of $9,899,077, paid net losses of $6,196,906 and insured net losses of $6,341,294.

Governor Ferris today issued the following appeal to the citizens of Michigan: "Through the Department of State, Washington, D. C., I have received important information concerning the starving people of Mexico. Michigan has responded generously to all calls for food, clothing and money for the sufferers in Belgium and other countries sorely stricken by the great European war. The starving people of Mexico are really our neighbors, and as Governor of Michigan, I feel that the people of Michigan will respond to the call. Beyond a reasonable doubt there is urgent need for food supplies in Mexico.

"The good people of Michigan can reach the starving people of Mexico through the American National Red Cross Organization. I am sure that any one of the Michigan Red Cross officials (B. E. Olds, Lansing, Michigan, Frederick M. Alger, Detroit, Michigan, Clay Hollister, Grand Rapids, Michigan, and Emory W. Clark, Detroit, Michigan) will cheerfully direct food supplies to the Mexican sufferers."

Although the legislature passed a resolution to have the judicate act in the same volume with the other acts. However, he plans to have a number of copies of the judicate act printed in a separate volume so that a person desiring this particular statute will not have to purchase a complete set of the session laws.

The statute requires the publication of the public acts within two months after the close of the session, but owing to the amount of work in connection with the judicate act, the session laws will be out this year later than usual.

Charles S. Pierce, who was given a permanent position as the result of the law passed over the veto of Governor Ferris during the last session of the legislature, is compelled to pay the salary of his stenographer out of his own pocket. Provision was made for additional clerical help while the clerk of the house and secretary of the senate are making a revision of the election laws, but until that time Pierce is required to pay a stenographer or answer a big batch of letters each day without any assistance. Hundreds of inquiries from members of the legislature, county officials and private citizens are being received daily by the clerk concerning bills passed during the last session and the correspondence is heavier now than when the law makers were present.

That the upper peninsula will ere long become the larder from which Michigan will get its mutton, and perhaps its beef, is the confident assertion of W. F. Raven, M. A. C. superintendent of extension work north of the straits. Mr. Raven, just back from several months work among farmers in the northern country, has announced that experiments in sheep raising conducted on a number of upper peninsula farms during the past season were largely successful—so much so that the adaptability of the Lake Superior district to flocks has been proved practically beyond question. "We are satisfied," said Superintendent Raven, "that sheep will thrive in the upper peninsula. The country is ideal for sheep, which can be raised with profit on the cut-over land."

These lands, it might be added, are for the most part at present lying idle, producing not even enough to pay the taxes. The sheep industry, according to Mr. Raven, will in the very near future be marked by great expansion in the northern districts. It has also been demonstrated that the upper peninsula is suited to the raising of beef animals, and much of the work by the M. A. C. extension men the coming year will be devoted to assisting in the development of the beef industry.

UNITED STATES TAKES ISSUE WITH GERMANY ON PROCEDURE.

NO PRIZE COURT DESIRED

Liability for Loss of Ship is Admitted and Only Question Concerns Method of Settlement.

Washington—The contention Germany that it has a right, under the Prussian-American treaty of 1825, to stop the carrying of contraband by American ships "by the destruction of the contraband and the ship carrying it," is flatly rejected in the latest American note to Berlin dealing with the Frye case.

The note, sent to Germany, June 24, and made public Monday night by the United States government by agreement with the German foreign office asks Germany to reconsider her refusal to settle by direct diplomatic negotiations, instead of by prize court proceedings, the claim presented in behalf of the owners and captain of the American schooner William F. Frye, sunk with her cargo of wheat by the commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

In its latest rejoinder to American representations in the Frye case, Germany had again admitted its liability for the loss of the ship, but insisted that the case first be sent through the prize court. Furthermore, Germany in that note sought to assert a right to destroy any American ship carrying contraband if it were not practicable to stop the contraband in any other way, and cited the treaty of 1825 in support of this contention.

This is the contention which has been regarded here as bearing upon Germany's submarine operations. It is believed here that the German government is seeking to have the prize court review the provisions of the treaty of 1825 in the hope of getting a court decision which will strengthen her position in regard to the destruction by submarines of neutral contraband carrying ships.

Investigating in Baraga County. Lansing—Assistant Attorney-General James Green has gone to Baraga county to investigate alleged violations of the law by certain citizens of L'Anse giving liquor to Indians to gain their votes. A representative of the United States Indian service complained to Governor Ferris, and a conference between Attorney-General Fellows and the governor resulted in action being taken to investigate. Green's report will determine whether further steps will be taken by the governor.

Italian Found Dead in Field. Coldwater—The body of Emil Marchine, for several years an interpreter at the Wolverine Portland Cement Co., was found in a field near here by Sheriff Rawlson after a two days' hunt. The body had been penetrated by five bullets, four through the chest and one through the face. Marchine was 28 years old and an Italian, and the officers are of the belief that he was slain by a member of the Italian colony here. No arrests have been made.

Careless Property Owner Liable. Lansing—In connection with that campaign to enforce personal responsibility for preventable fires, Attorney General Fellows has given State Fire Marshal Winslow an opinion holding that under the common law, a property owner on whose premises a fire starts because of negligence is liable for damages to his neighbor if the fire spreads to or damages his neighbor's person or property.

Expect War to Last Three Years. Rome, via Paris—Italian military authorities Sunday asserted that all the arms, ammunition and explosives factories in the kingdom were working day and night to obtain not only what will be necessary for the war this summer and coming autumn, but for the possibility of a continuance of the conflict for three years, including the supplies of arms which it will be necessary to replace.

Florists Present Roses to the United States

WASHINGTON.—The formal presentation to the United States government of more than 400 varieties of roses now growing in the experimental farm of the department of agriculture at Arlington, Va., took place the other day at a gathering of prominent rosarians from all sections of the country. The roses were accepted on behalf of the government by Dr. W. A. Taylor, director of the bureau of plant industry, who represented the secretary of agriculture at the exercises. The formal presentation was made by Wallace Pleson of Cromwell, Conn., president of the National Rose society.

The roses have been growing in the experimental farm for about two years. They were donated by florists, both amateur and professional, living in all sections of the country. The roses are being grown for the purpose of ascertaining the effect of this climate on the different kinds of plants. Similar testing gardens have been established by the National Rose society at Hartford, Conn.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Ithaca, N. Y., and others are now being established on Long Island and at San Francisco.

Two years ago the department of agriculture set aside about two acres of ground in the experimental farm for rose testing. The rose plants were supplied by various rose growers desiring to have different species tested. The testing of rose bushes takes three years. They are examined by experts at frequent intervals during this period and an accurate record kept of their growth and performance.

Silkworms and Their Work In National Museum

A SMALL army of silkworms is busy in the older building of the United States National museum, gorging itself on mulberry leaves, and spinning cocoons from which the silk thread and fabrics are made. The case contains the live silkworms forms the beginning of a series of exhibits showing what silk is, how it is manufactured, and many samples of the various products derived therefrom. This section of the division of textiles takes the visitor on a brief tour of instruction in silk—literally from the worm to the gown. The exhibit includes examples of practically every kind of fabric manufactured from silk in this country and abroad, as well as dyed and printed silks. Each worm winds about itself a cocoon composed of a single thread from 300 to 700 yards in length. The time consumed for spinning is usually from two to five days.

A case of preserved specimens shows the cycle of life of this industrious little animal. The egg of the silk moth is about the size of the head of a small pin, and hatches in about ten days into a tiny worm. It develops into a very respectable worm about three and one-half inches long and one-fourth of an inch in thickness. Upon reaching its maturity, the worm stops feeding, and begins to crawl about in search of a place in which to spin its cocoon.

Within the finished cocoon the silkworm sheds its skin, and passes into the pupa, or chrysalis, stage. If the cocoon is not put through a stoving or stifling process, which kills the chrysalis inside, it will become a grayish-white moth in about two weeks more, and break its way out of one end of the cocoon. Such procedure, however, is allowed only when silk moths are needed for breeding purposes, since in breaking its way out the moth pushes through every layer of the filament, thus making the cocoon useless for reeling, and of value only for spun silk.

In order to reel the cocoons, they are first immersed in boiling water, and brushed, to rid them of the loose outer filaments. The true thread is then unwound almost to the chrysalis, but the inner lining is far too fine to be reeled, and is used with the outer waste in the manufacture of spun silk. A single cocoon strand is too fine for commercial use, and is, therefore, combined with several others to make a single thread of reeled silk. One pound of six-ply reeled silk will reach a distance of about 180 miles.

How Army Prisoners Get Back to the Colors

IN connection with the system of honorable restoration to the colors now in force at the United States disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the branches at Alcatraz, Cal., and Fort Jay, N. Y., an interesting exhibit of the system of military instruction required at these places previous to returning general prisoners to duty with companies of the regular army is on view in the office of Adjutant General McCain at the war department.

It is a representation in sand, on a reduced scale, of an infantry trench, which the members of disciplinary organizations are required to be proficient in constructing. Many of the kinds of revetment now in use are shown—the sandbag, sod, fascine, gabion, hurdle, together with the methods of fastening. All men who desire restoration are put through a regular course on modeling these trenches in sand in a "sand table," as well as instruction in constructing overhead shelter, zigzag approaches, pits, barbed-wire entanglements, etc., in miniature. After the prisoners have become expert at the modeling game they are transferred to the open fields, where they reproduce the work on the normal field scale.

The sand-table work is a very small part of a very thorough three-month course of instruction required to be taken before a man is considered as qualified for restoration to the army. The course includes, also, drills, instruction in target practice, estimating distance and military signaling (flag instruction in target practice, estimating distance and military signaling (flag instruction and semaphore). Many restored men have been promoted to non-commissioned officers. One of the latter is used to give lectures to the non-commissioned officers in his regiment, while the reports as to character from a large per cent of those restored show "excellent."

Naval Observatory Exposes North Pole's Vagaries

THE naval observatory has erected a very curious and interesting machine, whose purpose is to see just how much the North pole falls from grace. This instrument is in charge of Prof. F. E. Ross, who is making the experiments. The object of this new work is to find just what are the variations of the pole. Of course, to a layman it seems strange to hear any reflection cast upon the upright conduct of the North pole, which was supposed to remain always an example of unflinching, steadfast devotion to keeping its position. Yet, as even a Jove may nod, so one must accustom one's self to the sad realization that the pole actually "wobbles."

The instrument is a small house on the observatory grounds. It resembles a water tank standing on end, but is ornamented with scientific paraphernalia.

Contrary to the commonly accepted belief the pole does not keep pointing in the same direction. Its axis is moving about constantly in a spiral and describes a path which varies at least 50 miles from its true station. Its farthest point will gain 30 miles one side and the same rate on the other. It has not yet been known to make any wider swing out of its standard position.

Its variations are in periods extending over seven years. The pole wanders about three and one-half years in swinging outwards, then the same time in retracing its steps. At the present the pole is going on its outward voyage and will take more than a year to complete the trip.

ELIZABETH'S SANE FOURTH

By JANE OSBORN

ELIZABETH PRICE'S father was the chief instigator of the movement for a quiet "Fourth" in Dalesville; so Elizabeth, when the town council passed an ordinance limiting the legal celebration of the day to speeches, parades and fireworks of a quiet and unexciting kind, thought it incumbent on herself to make life as bearable as possible for as many as possible of the small boys of the neighborhood.

She began with her Sunday school class as a nucleus, and invited them to a picnic; and each and every one of them asked permission to bring a small brother or friend. Her own brother, Tom, home for a visit, promised to come for her and help her bring the children home at sunset.

Elizabeth, as soon as the morning parade was over, started out undismayed with some twenty irresponsible boys in her wake.

"Now, boys," she said as she gave each of them a flag, a paper drinking cup and a small box of provisions when they were all settled safely in the open car, "we're going to play soldiers. These are our rations. I'm the general, and I'll appoint the two boys who behave best on the way out captains to help me manage things. You know, soldiers obey, and that's what you must do."

"If we're soldiers, we can fight, can't we?" demanded Peter Dolan, the fierce light of a born warrior shining in his red-brown eyes.

"Jimmy's cat ate my singin' canary. You ought to have seen it—just two bites—" Jimmy's placid round face darkened into a frown. "Probably the canary bothered him," it shrieked, it didn't sing," he vouchsafed. Surreptitiously he kicked Peter.

"Now, get out," exclaimed that hot-headed young man, "or I'll—"

"See here, boys," interrupted Elizabeth, "we're not going to fight, and if you act this way I'll turn around and go home this minute. Remember what I said about the captains."

Then and there, with the tact that makes a successful general, Elizabeth decided that she would appoint Jimmy and Peter, the two most unmanageable of her soldiers, captains.

The first real hitch in Elizabeth's plans came at the fork in the road. Elizabeth started on the path to the right; the two captains, voicing the opinion of the whole army, advocated the path to the left.

"Please, Miss Elizabeth," pleaded Jimmy, "there's a rock out there where the Indians used to build fires for signals. Please let's go."

And in the end Elizabeth found herself mildly following her mutinous army to the spot in the world where she least wished to be. Just a year ago today Robert Willis and she had wandered up the same path. They had stopped to rest on the famous Indian stone, and while they were there Robert had surprised Elizabeth by asking her to be his wife. She had refused him, for she had not trusted herself and had thought that the quick, warm feelings which came to her with his words would leave her. Today she realized her mistake. She had purposely brought the boys to the foot of the valley. But she had meant to walk up the path on the right side to a pretty spot where she knew she could look across the tree tops to the old Indian stone. With dismay she watched her young soldiers scampering up the hillside, and suddenly she heard a whoop of delight from Peter Dolan, the first to reach the Indian stone.

"I'm a silly, sentimental, foolish thing," said Elizabeth, wiping a few drops from her eyes, "and I just deserve every bit of this."

Putting feeling and sentiment aside, Elizabeth hurried on and overtook the boys. Then, standing on the very spot where she and Robert had stood together, she began to give instructions to her small army.

By the time this work was done the boys had lost whatever reserve they had at first felt because of unaccounted-for linn collars and unnecessarily smooth hair and shining boots. Feet aching, chewing gum, candy, marbles and various other boyish treasures had made their appearance. Lunch added to their good spirits. But Elizabeth felt out of key and although usually she would have been happy at the happiness of the children and the success of the picnic, she found herself wishing for sunset. Once in a while she would steal away from the boys playing in the woods, and wander out to the edge of the great boulder.

"Perhaps," she mused to herself, "some silly Indian maiden once stood here watching for her Indian brave, whom she had foolishly sent away, and that's just what the silly girl deserved."

Again her eye rested on a large pine tree spread out in the valley below her. She remembered watching it sway in the breeze a year before, and she idly wondered how many tragedies and comedies it had witnessed in its old life.

The boys, in spite of their general's preoccupation, enjoyed every minute of their "sensible" Fourth. When the sun dipped suddenly below the opposite hillsides, Elizabeth breathed a sigh of relief, but the boys begged for a little more time.

"Yes," said Elizabeth, "we will wait here for my brother who's coming to take us home." "Oh," she exclaimed suddenly, "I told him the other path. Boys, won't you go down the path to the fork in the road and wait there for Mr. Tom? He thinks we are on the other side of the valley. I wish Captain Jimmy and Captain Peter would please go. You don't know him, do you? He's tall and looks a little like me. Just tell him Miss Elizabeth is waiting for him at the Indian stone. We'll have a game of blind man's buff till you come back."

A few minutes later Jimmy and Peter encountered Robert Willis at the fork in the road. Robert had traveled many miles that day in order to keep a melancholy sort of tryst with himself on the old Indian stone. He realized the foolishness of his action, but he had made the trip nevertheless. He had a vague, unacknowledged idea that perhaps some of Elizabeth's sweet presence might have lingered at their last meeting place.

"Hello!" said Jimmy in a conversational tone.

"Oh—" said Robert, suddenly awakened from visions of soft, shining hair blowing in the breeze.

"He's the fellow," whispered Peter—"brown eyes like Miss Elizabeth; tall and all that."

"Miss Elizabeth's waiting on the Indian stone," volunteered Jimmy, and he began to lead the way up the steep path.

Robert staggered and turned white. These rosy, brown-skinned, freckled little faces belonged perhaps to sprites or brownies who were teasing him. He tried to catch one of the boys, who bounced on ahead, thinking Robert was making an attempt at some game of tag.

"I'll get ahead of them," he said, rushing past the boys with a hard set face.

At the top of the path he turned toward the Indian stone, and there in a clearing he saw Elizabeth, blind-folded, surrounded by many dancing, jumping, shouting small boys, or—for a moment Robert's heart stood still—perhaps after all they were sprites, and Elizabeth, for some fault of his, was their captive.

"Here he is, here he is, Miss Elizabeth," the boys shouted, and the next moment Robert threw himself into Elizabeth's outstretched arms.

Five minutes later Tom, tired, warm and a little cross, walked upon the scene.

"I say, Elizabeth," he called through the trees, "this is a nice way to treat an obliging brother. You told me the other path; and if these youngsters hadn't been howling like wild Indians, I'd be on the opposite side of the valley yet looking for you."

Suddenly Tom stopped. He saw Elizabeth, flushed and happy, and by her side Robert Willis, also happy, still holding the veil he had pulled from Elizabeth's bandaged eyes. The boys stood awkwardly about looking at each other.

"Well, of all that—strange happenings," chuckled Tom, taking in the situation. "I say, boys," he said, coming to his sister's rescue, "I'm Miss Elizabeth's brother. Come on; let's go home. I'll lead the way to the trolley."

"Gee," said Jimmy, putting his hands in his pockets and throwing back his head in a superior way. "Aren't girls queer?"

"Well," said Peter, stubbing his toes against pebbles in the path, "may be it's our fault. We caught the wrong man."

HOMEMADE LIME-SULPHUR CONCENTRATE

Preparation of Spray Mixture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The use of homemade lime-sulphur concentrate has been greatly encouraged the past few years by scientific investigations and experiments. A series of experiments carried on in Virginia, Maryland and Michigan were made at lime-sulphur plants operated by orchardists or individuals who supplied the concentrate to orchardists in the immediate territory. The results are published in the United States Department of Agriculture Bulletin No. 197, "Homemade Lime-Sulphur Concentrate."

In the many tests made of lime-sulphur concentrate, the bulletin tells the varying degree of density and the percentage of sludge or sediment which resulted from the employment of different formulas. Orchardists have found it difficult to obtain a consistently uniform density of concentrated lime-sulphur solution even though the same formula be employed and the work be accomplished as nearly as possible in an identical manner for the different batches. However, this is of little importance, since it is easy to test the density of the concentrate and, provided it is too dense, make dilutions in conformity with the purpose for which it is to be used. A Baume hydrometer for measuring the density of liquids heavier than water is set into the solution and by reading the graduated scale on the stem of the hydrometer the density can be easily ascertained. In the experiments the 50-100-50 Mixture registered a wide range, 25 to 31 degrees. In the highly concentrated solution described below the reading should average 33 to 34 degrees after the lime has been filtered out.

The 50-100-50 formula, which means 50 pounds of lime, 100 pounds of sulphur and water to make 50 gallons of the concentrated solution is recommended. A good grade of fresh limestone, containing not less than 90 per cent of calcium oxide is necessary for the best results. However, hydrated lime is sometimes used, but it is necessary to use a good grade and at least 20 per cent more of this form of lime as it contains a large amount of moisture.

Making Concentrated Lime-Sulphur on Small Scale.

One of the homemade cooking plants consisted of a 12-horse-power boiler from which steam was conducted into two 50-gallon barrels. No coils were used in the bottoms of the barrels, the steam being emitted through the open end of a straight pipe extending within a few inches of the bottom of the barrel. Small batches of the 50-100-50 formula, amounting to 25 gallons of the finished product, were cooked at a time. About twenty gallons of water were put into the barrel, the steam turned on, and the water brought to the boiling point. The lime was then put in and after it had begun to slake the sulphur was added. The mixture was stirred thoroughly throughout the time of cooking, which lasted an hour. It was allowed to settle about twelve hours, and then the clear solution was siphoned off. The sludge or sediment was put into a cider press and the clear solution pressed out, using tenounce canvas cloth for filter. In these experiments commercial ground sulphur and a good grade of lime was used.

A highly concentrated lime-sulphur solution may be made by using the lime and sulphur at the ratio of one to two, as is usually recommended, but with reduced quantities of water. The formula used in some commercial lime-sulphur manufacturing plants is as follows: Fresh stone lime 80 pounds, commercial ground sulphur 160 pounds, and water to make the finished product measure 50 gallons.

While there is about 50 per cent in volume of sediment after allowing this solution to settle for 24 hours, there is only about 5 to 10 per cent in volume of insoluble materials.

Relative Costs.

Commercial ground sulphur was bought in car lots for about $1.50 per 100 pounds, and lime at about 60 cents per barrel. At these prices the highly concentrated solution can be made at the following cost per barrel:

80 pounds lime at 60 cents per barrel ..... $3.00
160 pounds sulphur at $1.50 per hundredweight ..... 2.40
Labor and fuel, estimated ..... .70

Total cost per barrel of 50 gallons ..... $6.10

This does not include interest and wear on outfit, and cost of containers

FEEDING SILAGE IN SUMMER

Practice Found to Be Cheaper Than Turning Cows Into Pasture—Make-Up of Dairy Cow.

Dean Mumford of the Missouri College of Agriculture makes the statement that cows can be maintained more cheaply on silage than they can be carried through the summer on blue-grass pasture, where the land costs about one hundred dollars per acre and is suitable for growing corn. He says that there is very little pasture land where a cow and a calf can be pastured on less than one and one-half acres, but it is entirely possible to get twelve and one-half to twenty tons of silage from one acre. A cow and her calf can be carried through the summer on two pounds of clover hay and thirty-five pounds of silage per day as well or better than on blue-grass pasture. Thus he declares that you can carry a cow and her calf six months on less than a half acre of silage.

The good dairy cow has a broad forehead, indicating intelligence and a kindly disposition. She has a short, thick neck, not at all beefy, in which veins are plainly manifest. She is narrow through the front shoulders and thick-chested, indicating good lung capacity.

She has a large, well-rounded stomach, showing capacity for storage of food and water, from which milk is to be manufactured. She has broad hips and a good width through the flanks, giving plenty of room for lacteal organs. There is also a gentle incline from her shoulders to her rump. The udder is large and soft, hanging down well between her hind legs and extending forward and backward in a well-balanced proportion. Her legs are short and her hair is a glossy color.

DIFFERENT COW-FEED RULES

No Two Cows With Big Records Ever Received Same Rations—Proper Balance Is Most Desired.

(By WALTER B. LEUTZ.)

To a great extent each cow is a law unto herself so far as the most desirable grain for her to receive is concerned, and it is as difficult to give instructions for feeding a cow for high production as it is to give exact instructions for driving a two-minute race horse.

So far as we know no two cows that have made large records and have been developed by different men ever received the same ration, and we doubt if any two developed by the same man have ever received exactly the same feed. The success of a feeder depends upon his ability to maintain a proper balance between the feeds that are rich in carbohydrates and those that are rich in protein. Other conditions also have to have very careful attention, so it is absolutely impossible to lay down any fixed rules for feeding.

The secret of success is to a large extent the ability to see trouble before you are into it, and thus be able to avoid bad results. Good horse sense and love for the work count for more than anything else.

METHOD FOR COOLING CREAM

Task Should Be Performed at Once After Separation—Good Plan to Place Can in Cold Water.

(By PROF. C. LARSEN.)

Cool the cream at once after separation. This can be done by placing the cream can in a tank of fresh, cold water. A good plan is to have the water used for stock run through this milk cooler before it reaches the general stock water tank. This method cools the cream during all seasons, and in addition it prevents freezing during the winter. Do not put the can cover on tightly. A loose cover allows the animal odor to pass off, and at the same time prevents the dust from getting into the cream.

Never allow freshly skimmed warm cream to be mixed with the previously skimmed cold cream until the former has been well cooled. The warm cream causes the germs to develop, and they sour and spoil the cream.

Keep Milk in Proper Place.

Do not leave the open pails standing around the cow stable while you milk the next cow. Take the milk where it will be free from contamination.

CULLING OUT THE NONLAYING HENS

Excellent Detector Made of Piece of Felt Saturated With Colored Spindle Oil.

On our ranch in the San Joaquin Valley, Cal., we keep about 1,200 laying hens. To weed out the unproductive members of the flock we placed a piece of felt saturated with glycerin or spindle oil colored with a dye at the entrance to each nest, where the hen would strike it. The productive, nest-visiting hens bore marks on heads, tails or backs attesting their egg-laying activities. The uncolored hens were speedily segregated and, failing to show color after a second color test, were sent to an early death, says a writer in Technical World.

We used one color for a week, then changed to another for the second week, and so on, in order to continue the tests for a month or more. It made our hens' plumage resemble Joseph's coat of many colors, but we were seeking egg-producing results, not beauty, and our scheme amply repaid us.

Economy in Feed Cutter.

A feed cutter is a genuine economy. The coarse feed that the stock don't eat isn't wasted if it goes into the manure pile and the manure is properly cared for. But a great many times it would save buying feed if the coarse stuff was cut up so the stock would eat it. And any man who has forced manure that is full of long corn stalks knows that it would save a lot of his energy if the stalks were cut in short lengths.

THIRD INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

In her apartment at the Leland Ella, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartments and through hypnotism and the use of electro-telepathic appliances discovers her connection with the crime, recovers the diamonds and arrests the murderer, MacDougal, Lenora's husband, though nearly trapped to his death in a tough tenement house while engaged in the work. Lenora becomes one of Quest's assistants. The detective is called in to investigate the theft of the skeleton of an ape of Lord Ashleigh. MacDougal escapes while on his way to prison. A string of diamonds is mysteriously stolen from Mrs. Rheinholdt during a reception.

THE POCKET WIRELESS.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mr. Sanford Quest sat in his favorite chair, his cigar inclined toward the left-hand corner of his mouth, his attention riveted upon a small instrument which he was supporting upon his knee. He glanced across the room to where Lenora was bending over her desk.

"We've done it this time, young woman," he declared triumphantly. "It's all O. K., working like a little peach."

Lenora rose and came toward him. "Is that the pocket wireless?"

He nodded. "I've had Morrison out at Harlem all the morning to test it," he told her. "I've sent him at least half a dozen messages from this easy chair, and got the replies. How are you getting on with the code?"

"Not so badly for a stupid person," Lenora replied.

Laura, who had been busy with some papers at the farther end of the room, came over and joined them.

"Say, it's a dandy little affair, that, Mr. Quest," she exclaimed. "I had a try with it, a day or so ago. Jim spoke to me from Fifth avenue."

"We've got it tuned to a shade now," Quest declared. "Equipped with this simple little device, you can speak to me from anywhere up to ten or a dozen miles."

Quest rose to his feet and moved restlessly about the room.

"Say, girls," he confessed, "this is the first time in my life I have been in a fix like this. Two cases on hand and nothing doing with either of them. Criminologist, indeed! Whose box is this?"

Quest had paused suddenly in front of an oak sideboard which stood against the wall. Occupying a position upon it of some prominence was a small black box, whose presence there seemed to him unfamiliar.

Laura came over to his side and looked at it also in puzzled fashion.

"Never saw it before in my life," she answered.

Quest grunted. "H'm! No one else has been in the room, and it hasn't been empty for more than ten minutes," he remarked. "Well, let's see what's inside, anyway."

He lifted off the lid. There was nothing in the interior but a sheet of paper folded up. Quest smoothed it out with his hand. They all leaned over and read the following words, written in an obviously disguised hand:

You have embarked on a new study—anthropology. What characteristic strikes you most forcibly in connection with it? Cunning! The necklace might be where the skeleton is. Why not begin at the beginning?

The note was unsigned, but in the spot where a signature might have been there was a rough pen drawing of two hands, with fingers extended, talon fashion, menacingly, as though poised to strike at some unseen enemy. Quest, after their first moment of stupefaction, whistled softly.

"The hands!" he muttered.

"What hands?" Lenora asked.

"The hands that gripped Mrs. Rheinholdt by the throat," he reminded them. "Don't you remember? Hands without arms?"

There was another brief, almost stupefied silence. Then Laura broke into speech.

"What I want to know is," she demanded, "who brought the thing here?"

"A most daring exploit, anyway," Quest declared. "If we could answer your question, Laura, we could solve the whole riddle. We are up against something, and no mistake."

"The hand which placed that box there," Quest continued slowly, "is capable of even more wonderful things. We must be cautious. Hello!"

The door had opened. The professor stood upon the threshold.

"I trust that I have done right in coming up," he inquired.

"Quite right, professor," Quest assured him. "They know well enough downstairs that I am always at home by you. Come in."

"I am so anxious to learn," the professor continued eagerly, "whether there is any news of my skeleton."

"Not yet, professor, I am sorry to say," Quest replied. "Come in and shut the door."

"There is a young lady here," he said, "who caught me up upon the landing. She, too, I believe, wishes to see you."

He threw open the door and stood on one side. A young woman came a little hesitatingly into the room. Her hair was plainly brushed back, and she wore the severe dress of the Salvation Army.

"What to see me, young lady?" Quest asked.

"She held out a book. "My name is Miss Quigg," she said. "I want to ask you for a subscription to our funds."

Quest frowned a little. "Very well, Miss Quigg, you shall have a donation. I am busy today, but call at the same hour tomorrow and my secretary shall have a check ready for you."

The girl smiled her gratitude. The professor laid his hand upon her arm as she passed.

"Young lady," he observed, "you seem very much in earnest about your work."

"It is only the people in earnest, sir," she answered, "who can do any good in the world. My work is worth being in earnest about."

"You compel my admiration. My most respectful admiration. May I, too, be permitted?"

He drew out a pocketbook and passed over toward her a little wad of notes.

"It is so kind of you," she murmured. "We never have any hesitation in accepting money. May I know your name?"

"It is not necessary," the professor answered. "You can enter me," he added, as he held open the door for her, "as a friend—or would you prefer a pseudonym?"

"A pseudonym, if you please," she begged. "We have so many who send us sums of money as friends. Anything will do."

The professor glanced around the room.

"What pseudonym shall I adopt?" he ruminated. "Shall I say that an oak sideboard gives you five hundred dollars or a Chippendale sofa? Or," he added, his eyes resting for a moment upon the little box, "a black box?"

The two girls from the other side of the table started. Even Quest swung suddenly around. The professor, as though pleased with his fancy, nodded as his fingers played with the lid.

"Yes, that will do very nicely," he decided. "Put me down—'Black Box,' five hundred dollars."

The girl took out her book and began to write. The professor, with a little farewell bow, crossed the room toward Quest. Lenora moved toward the door.

"Let me see you out," she said to the girl pleasantly.

Lenora opened the door. Both girls started. Only a few feet away Craig was standing, his head a little thrust forward. For a moment the quiet self-respect of his manner seemed to have deserted him. He seemed at a loss for words.

"What do you want?" Lenora demanded.

"I was waiting for my master," Craig explained.

"Why not downstairs?" Lenora asked suspiciously. "You did not come up with him."

"I am driving the professor in his automobile," Craig explained. "It occurred to me that if he were going to be long here I should have time to go and order another tire. It is of no consequence, though. I will go down and wait in the car."

Lenora stood at the top of the stairs and watched him disappear. Then she went thoughtfully back to her work. The professor and Quest were talking at the farther end of the room.

"I was in hopes, in great hopes," the professor admitted, "that you might have heard something. I promised to call at Mrs. Rheinholdt's this afternoon."

Quest shook his head.

"There is nothing to report at present, Mr. Ashleigh," he announced.

"Dear me," the professor murmured, "this is very disappointing. Is there no clue, Mr. Quest—no clue at all?"

"Not a ghost of one," Quest acknowledged. "I am as far off solving the mystery of the disappearance of your skeleton and Mrs. Rheinholdt's necklace as I have ever been."

The professor took a courteous leave of them all and departed. Lenora crossed the room to where Quest was seated.

"Mr. Quest," she asked, "do you believe in inspiration?"

"I attribute a large amount of my success," Quest replied, "to my profound belief in it."

"Then let me tell you," Lenora continued, "that I have one, and a very strong one. Do you know that when I went to the door a few minutes ago the professor's servant, Craig, was there, listening?"

"Inspector French has had his men watching Craig ever since the night of the robbery," quietly remarked Quest. "What's that? Answer the telephone, Lenora."

Lenora obeyed.

"It's Inspector French," she announced. "He wants to speak to you."

Quest nodded and held out his hand for the receiver.

"Hello, French!" he exclaimed. "Anything fresh?"

"Nothing much," was the answer. "One of my men, though, who has been up Mayton avenue way, brought in something I found rather interesting this morning. I want you to come round and see it."

"Go right ahead and tell me about it," Quest invited.

"You know we've been shadowing Craig," the inspector continued. "Not much luck up till now. Fellow seems never to leave his master's side. We have had a couple of men up there, though, and one of them brought in a curious-looking object he picked up just outside the back of the professor's grounds."

"What is the thing?" Quest asked.

"Well, I want you to see whether you agree with me," French went on. "If you can't come round, I'll come to you."

"No necessity," Quest replied. "We've got over little difficulties of that sort. Laura, just tack on the photoleuse," he added, holding the receiver away for a moment. "One moment, French. There that's right," he added, as Laura, with deft fingers arranged what seemed to be a sensitized mirror to the instrument.

"Now, French, hold up the article just in front of the receiver. There, that's right. Hold it steady. I've got the focus of it now. Say, French, where did you say that was found?"

"Just outside the professor's back gate," French grunted. "But you're not kidding me—"

"It's a finger from the professor's skeleton you've got there," Quest interrupted.

Quest hung up the receiver. Then he turned toward his two assistants.

"Another finger from the professor's skeleton," he announced, "has been found just outside his grounds. What do you suppose that means?"

"Craig," Lenora declared confidently.

"Craig on your life," Laura echoed. "Say, Mr. Quest, I've got an idea," Quest nodded.

"Go right ahead with it."

"Didn't the butler at Mrs. Rheinholdt's say that Craig belonged to a servant's club up town? I know the place well. Let me go and see if I can't join and pick up a little information about the man. He must have a night out sometimes. Let's find out who he does? How's that?"

"Capital!" Quest agreed. "Get along, Laura. And you, Lenora," he added, "put on your hat. We'll take a ride towards Mayton avenue."

CHAPTER IX.

The exact spot where the bones of the missing skeleton was discovered, was easily located. It was about twenty yards from a gate which led into the back part of the professor's grounds. Quest wasted very little time before arriving at a decision.

"The discovery of the bones so near the professor's home," he decided, "cannot be coincidence only. We will waste no time out here, Lenora. We will search the grounds. Come on."

It was hard to know which way to turn. Every path was choked with tangled weeds and bushes. They wandered about aimlessly for nearly half an hour. Then Quest came to a sudden standstill. Lenora gripped his arm. They had both heard the same sound—a queer, crooning cry, half plaintive, half angry.

"What's that?" he exclaimed. Lenora still clung to his arm.

"I hate this place," she whispered. "It terrifies me. What are we looking for, Mr. Quest?"

"Can't say that I know exactly," the latter answered, "but I guess we'll find out where that cry came from. Sounded to me uncommonly like a human effort."

They had made their way up as

far as the hedge, which they skirted for a few yards until they found an opening. Then Quest gave vent to a little exclamation. Immediately in front of them was a small hut, built apparently of sticks and bamboos, with a stronger framework behind. The sloping roof was grass-grown and entwined with rushes. The only apology for a window was a queer little hole set quite close to the roof.

There was a rude-looking door, but Quest, on trying it, found it locked. They walked around the place, but found no other opening. All the time from inside they could hear queer suffling sounds. Lenora's cheeks grew paler.

"Must we stay?" she murmured. "I don't think I want to see what's inside. Mr. Quest! Mr. Quest!"

She clung to his arm. They were opposite the little aperture which served as a window, and at that moment it suddenly framed the face of a creature, human in features, diabolical in expression.

"Say, that's some face!" he remarked. "I'd hate to spook it!" Even as he spoke it disappeared.

"We've got to get inside there, Lenora," he announced, stepping forward.

She followed him silently. A few turns of the wrist and the door yielded. Keeping Lenora a little behind him, Quest gazed around eagerly. Exactly in front of him, clad only in a loin cloth, with hunched-up shoulders, a necklace around its neck, with blazing eyes and ugly, gleaming teeth, crouched some unrecognizable creature, human, yet inhuman, a monkey, and yet a man. There were a couple of monkeys swinging by their tails from a bar, and a leopard chained to a staple in the ground, walking round and round in the far corner, snapping and snarling every time he glanced towards the newcomers.

The creature in front of him stretched out a hairy hand towards a club, and gripped it. Quest drew a long breath. His eyes were set hard.

"Drop that club," he ordered.

The creature suddenly sprang up. The club was waved around his head.

"Drop it," Quest repeated firmly. "You will sit down in your corner. You will sleep."

The club slipped from the hairy fingers. The tense frame, which had been already crouched for the spring, was suddenly relaxed. The knees trembled.

"Back to that corner," Quest ordered, pointing.

Slowly and dejectedly, the ape-man crept to where he had been ordered and sat there with dull, non-comprehending stare. It was a new force, this, a note of which he had felt—the Superman raising the voice of authority. Quest touched his forehead and found it damp. The strain of those few seconds had been intolerable.

"I don't think these other animals will hurt," he said. "Let's have a look around the place."

The search took only a few moments. The monkeys ran and jumped around them, gibbering as though with pleasure. The leopard watched them always with a snarl and an evil light in his eyes.

They found nothing unusual until they came to the distant corner, where a huge piano box lay on its side with the opening turned to the wall.

"This is where the brute sleeps, I suppose," Quest remarked. "We'll turn it around, anyway."

They dragged it a few feet away from the wall, so that the opening faced them. Then Lenora gave a little cry and Quest stood suddenly still.

"The skeleton!" Lenora shrieked. "It's the skeleton!"

It was a skeleton so old that the bones had turned a dull gray. Quest glanced towards the hands.

"Little fingers both missing," he muttered.

"Remember the message!" she exclaimed. Where the skeleton is, the necklace may be also."

Quest nodded shortly.

"We'll search."

They turned over everything in the place fruitlessly. There was no sign of the necklace.

"You get outside, Lenora," Quest directed. "I'll just bring this beast round again and then we'll tackle the professor."

Quest turned towards the creature, which crouched still huddled up in its corner.

"Look at me," he ordered. The creature obeyed. Once more its frame seemed to grow more virile and natural.

The door was suddenly thrown open.

"You need sleep no longer," Quest said. "Wake up and be yourself."

The effect of these words was instantaneous. Almost as he spoke, the creature crouched for a spring. There was wild hatred in its close-set eyes, the snarl of something fendlike in its contorted mouth. Quest slipped quickly through the door.

"Anyone may have that for a pet!" he remarked grimly. "Come, Lenora, there's a word or two to be said to the professor. There's something here will need a little explanation."

He lit a cigar as they struggled back along the path. Presently they reached the untidy-looking avenue, and a few minutes later arrived at the house.

Quest searched in vain for a bell. They walked round the piazza. There were no signs of any human life. They came back to the front door. Quest tried the handle and found it open. They passed into the hall.

"Hospital sort of place, anyway," he remarked. "We'll go in and wait, Lenora."

They found their way to the study, which seemed to be the only habitable room. Lenora glanced around at its strange contents with an expression almost of awe.

A small motor car passed the window, driven by Craig. The professor entered the room. He gazed from Quest to Lenora at first in blank surprise. Then he held out his hands.

"You have good news for me, my friends!" he exclaimed. "I am sure of it. How unfortunate that I was not at home to receive you! Tell me—don't keep me in suspense, if you please—you have discovered my skeleton?"

"We have found the skeleton," Quest announced.

For a single moment the newcomer stood as though turned to stone.

"My skeleton!" he murmured. "Mr. Quest, I knew it. You are the greatest man alive. Now tell me quickly—I want to know everything, but this first of all. Where did you find the skeleton? Who was the thief?"

"We found the skeleton, professor," Quest replied, "within a hundred yards of this house."

The professor's mouth was wide open. He looked like a bewildered child. It was several seconds before he spoke.

"Within a hundred yards of this house? Then it wasn't stolen by one of my rivals?"

"I should say not," Quest admitted. "Where? exactly did you find it?" the professor insisted.

"I found it in a hut," Quest said, "hidden in a piano box. I found there, also, a creature—a human being, I must call him—in a state of captivity."

"Hidden in a piano box?" the professor repeated wonderingly. "Why, you mean in Hartoo's sleeping box, then?"

"If Mr. Hartoo is the gentleman who tried to club me, you are right," Quest admitted. "Mr. Ashleigh, before we go any further I must ask you for an explanation as to the presence of that person in your grounds?"

The professor hesitated for a moment. Then he slowly crossed the room, opened the drawer of a small escritoire, and drew out a letter.

"You have heard of Sir William Ramsmore, the president of the Royal Society?" he asked.

Quest nodded.

"This letter is from him," the professor continued. "You had better read it."

The criminologist read it aloud. Lenora looked over his shoulder:

To Prof. Edgar Ashleigh, New York.
My Dear Professor: Your communication gratifies and amazes me. I can say no more. It fell to your lot to discover the skeleton of the anthropoid, a marvelous thing, in its way, and needing only one thing to form the greatest discovery since the dark ages. Now you tell me that in the person of Hartoo, the last of the Inyamo race of South America, you have found that corollary. You have supplied the missing link. You are in a position to give to the world a definite and logical explanation of the evolution of man. Let me give you one word of warning, professor, before I write you a greater length on the matter. Anthropologists are afflicted more, even than any other race of scientific men, with jealousy. Guard your secret well, lest the honor of this discovery should be stolen from you. WILLIAM RAMSMORE.

The professor nodded deliberately as Quest finished the letter.

"Now, perhaps you can understand," he said, "why it was necessary to keep Hartoo absolutely hidden. In a month's time my papers will be ready. Then I shall electrify the world. I shall write not a new page but a new volume across the history of science. I shall—"

The door was suddenly thrown open.

Craig sprang in, no longer the self-contained, perfect man-servant, but with the face of some wild creature. His shout was one almost of agony.

"The hut, professor! The hut is on fire!" he cried.

His appearance on the threshold was like a flash. They heard his flying feet down the hall, and without a moment's hesitation they all followed. The professor led the way down a narrow and concealed path, but when they reached the little clearing in which the hut was situated, they were unable to approach any nearer. The place was a whirlwind of flame. The smell of kerosene was almost overpowering. The wild yell of the leopard rose above the strange, half-human gibbering of the monkeys and the hoarse, bass calling of another voice, at the sound of which Lenora and even Quest shuddered. Then, as they came, breathless, to a standstill, they saw a strange thing. One side of the hut fell in, and almost immediately the leopard with a mighty spring, leaped from the place and ran howling into the undergrowth. The monkeys followed but they came straight for the professor, wringing their hands. They fawned at his feet as though trying to show him their scorched bodies. Then for a single moment they saw the form of the ape-man as he struggled to follow the others. His strength failed him, however. He fell backwards into the burning chasm.

The professor bade them farewell, an hour later, on the steps of the house. He seemed suddenly to have aged.

"You have done your best, Mr. Quest," he said, "but fate has been too strong. Remember this, though. It is quite true that the cunning of Hartoo may have made it possible for him to have stolen the skeleton and to have brought it back to its hiding-place, but it was jealousy—cruel, brutal, foul jealousy which smeared the walls of that hut with kerosene and set light to it. The work of a lifetime, my dreams of scientific immortality, have vanished in those flames."

He turned slowly away from them and re-entered the house. Quest and Lenora made their way down the avenue and entered the automobile which was waiting for them, almost in silence. The latter glanced toward his companion, as they drove off.

"Say, this has been a bit tough for you," he remarked. "I'll have to call somewhere and get you a glass of wine."

She tried to smile but her strength was almost gone. They drove to a restaurant and sat there for some little time. Lenora soon recovered her color. She even had courage to speak of the events of the afternoon when they re-entered the automobile.

"Mr. Quest," Lenora murmured, "who do you suppose burned the hut down?"

"If I don't say Craig, I suppose you will," he remarked. "I wonder whether Laura's had any luck."

They were greeted, as they entered Quest's room, by a familiar little ticking. Quest smiled with pleasure.

"It's the pocket wireless," he declared. "Let me take down the message."

He spelled it out to Lenora, who stood by his side:

Have joined Servants' club disguised as your butler. Craig frequent visitor here ten years ago, comes now occasionally. Thursday evenings most likely time. Shall wait here on chance of seeing him.

"Good girl, that," Quest remarked. "She's a rare sticker, too."

He turned away from the instrument and was crossing the room toward his cigar cabinet. Suddenly he stopped. He looked intently towards the sideboard.

"What is it?" Lenora asked. He did not answer. She followed the direction of his gaze. Exactly in the same spot as before reposed another but somewhat larger black box, of the same shape and material as the previous one.

"Say, who put that there?" he demanded.

Lenora shook her head.

"I locked the door when we went out," she assured him.

Quest took the box into his hands and removed the lid. It seemed half full of cotton-wool. On the top were a few lines of writing and beneath them the signature of the parted hands. He read the form out slowly:

Drop all investigation. The hands that return these jewels command it.

Quest raised the cotton-wool. Beneath lay Mrs. Rheinholdt's necklace. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Stranger, if thou hast learned a truth which needs
No school of long experience that the world
Is full of guilt and misery, and hast seen
Enough of all its sorrows, crimes and cares
To tire thee of it, enter this wild wood
And view the haunts of nature.

SOME JULY DESSERTS.

During the hot weather when work seems harder and play so inviting, is the time to serve simple desserts or fresh fruit and use the extra time in enjoying an hour's rest under the trees or on a shady vine-covered porch. Much of the work of the housewife may be prepared here, vegetables and fruits picked over, mending done and various other things which each will discover is so much pleasanter done in the open air.

Desserts which may be prepared when the evening meal is preparing or early in the day before breakfast which will be cold and attractive and save time during the heat of the day.

Custards of various kinds and flavors are most wholesome desserts, they may be combined with any number of different foods. When one lives on a farm where milk, cream, eggs and butter is in abundance the dessert problem will solve itself. It is the city dweller who needs to economize on those foods which are so lavishly abundant in the country, which makes her long for a larger income to buy plenty of cream, eggs and butter.

The various jellies and gelatins are delicious combined with fruit and served with whipped cream, but the average farmer working in the open, enjoys a hearty dessert especially if the dinner is not abundantly substantial. With a hearty dinner even a hard working man in the open is better to have a light dessert to finish a heavy meal in hot weather.

Ice cream is nourishing, wholesome and always liked, so when in doubt make ice cream.

Sponge Pudding With Roxbury Sauce.—An ordinary sponge cake served with this pudding is very good or the sauce may be served with a sponge pudding. Beat the white of an egg until stiff, and gradually three-fourths of a cupful of powdered sugar; then add the yolk of an egg, beaten thick, three-fourths of a cupful of cream, beaten stiff, a few grains of salt and flavoring to taste.

SAVORY SUMMER DISHES.

We all enjoy a new combination, especially if it be attractive in appearance. The garnishing and serving of many dishes is the main and important detail.

Savory Tomatoes.—Plunge six small, even-sized tomatoes into boiling water for a few minutes to loosen the skin. Remove the skins and place the tomatoes in a greased pudding dish. Take a cupful of cooked macaroni which has been cut in inch lengths, place over the tomatoes and cover with a rich white sauce, sprinkle with grated cheese and cover with a few tablespoonsful of buttered crumbs. Put into the oven and cook until the tomatoes are tender.

Asparagus in place of the tomatoes may be used and, if it is cooked, the dish need only be heated to be served.

Stuffed Mutton.—Buy four pounds of the breast of mutton, wipe carefully and put into a saucepan and cover with boiling water. Put into the stew one turnip, one carrot and two onions. Grate half of each vegetable and cut the rest in slices. Simmer for one hour. Prepare a stuffing of bread crumbs, sage, butter, one chopped onion, and bind with egg and milk. Take out the bone from the mutton, place in the stuffing, roll and tie and put into a baking pan with some halved, par-boiled potatoes and bake a half hour.

Buttered Apples.—Cut rounds of bread about an inch larger than the apples. Pare and core one-half dozen apples. Place the bread in a baking dish, butter it well and put the apples on the bread. Fill the cavities of the apples with butter and sugar, add a little canned fruit juice or water and bake in a gentle heat until the apples are done. Serve with a spoonful of jam on top of each apple.

Baked Mutton Chops.—Pound and trim the chops, roll each in beaten egg and crumbs, then put into a dripping pan and set in the oven; as the chops brown, baste them every five minutes; season and thicken the gravy with flour, add a few tablespoonsful of tomato catchup and serve.

The Irony of Life.

One of the saddest phases of all human experience is the way a man, just about the time he succeeds in getting his brain developed to the point where he might accomplish something with it, finds that he has to devote all his attention to his teeth, stomach and legs to keep going at all.—Ohio State Journal.

Worth Knowing.

Turpentine mixed with stove polish prevents rust and gives a brighter gloss than the use of water.

Appropriate Gowns for the Evening

There are evening gowns and evening gowns. Some of them are naively simple, made of taffeta that glimmers in light colors, or of vapory lace over net or chiffon. Less simple but quite as charming are those of taffeta veiled with lace or net, and they make up a large part of the whole number. Their contemplation entices one to follow up the line until those splendid ones are found in white lace and tulle or crepe de chine. The shimmer of satin and the sparkle of paillettes are called upon with every other enticement in material and decoration to achieve the distinction that is required.

Always among any collection there are examples of black in which tulle or lace is brightened with jet. Sometimes it is black over white, or a color, but more often it is all black, as in the gown of tulle shown in the picture. In this model there is no end to the fullness of the skirt, with its eccentric inverted plating of tulle extending half way up at the front, back and sides and about the bottom.

There is an under petticoat of satin messaline and a small bodice which should appear under the drapery of tulle, but has been omitted to show plainly the management of the fabric in the bodice. This and the angel sleeves are edged with little jet beads. The sleeves are weighted with a bit of jet embroidery at the pointed ends, and the toilette is completed with a splendid grille of jet beads with cabochons and hanging fringe.

Paquin has shown a gown in cerise tulle made up with black. The bodice is wholly of the cerise, and the full flaring underskirt also. The long overdrapery is of black embroidered with blue roses in quaint set rows of graduated sizes. Chiffon roses like them in color confine the sleeves to the arm at the top. The overdrapery reaches to the bottom of the skirt but does not extend across the front. It opens in a panel that widens toward the bottom.

As beautiful as it can be, and less perishable than fragile tulle, the evening dress of crepe de chine and lace, enlivened with the shimmer of paillettes in iridescent colors will match in charm any other assembling of materials.

Iron Crepe de Chine Dry.
Of course you know that white crepe de chine will wash, but perhaps you do not know the very best way to do it.

Wash the material in cold water, with white soap. Rinse it very thoroughly; and here is the great secret of success—iron it without dampening, after it is completely dry.

New Bodices Made of Lace Flouncing

There is no telling where the usefulness of the new shadow laces will end. Besides their prominence in gowns and blouses they have been exploited in the realm of millinery and by those who make all the sheer and dainty things for boudoir wear and the undermunds of today.

These laces are not imitation of handmade designs, but something quite apart. They mark an era in which their designers are adapting patterns to the weaving of cotton into lace by machinery. The precision and efficiency of machinery are factors to be considered, and they enable the designers to achieve the airiest fabrics ever woven, in patterns incredibly intricate and fascinating.

In the good old days of yore only kings and queens or others of princely fortune could wear laces, but now everyone may own these beautiful stuffs, because the price is so moderate.

A pretty bolero and a dainty blouse are shown in the picture. Lace flouncing is used for the bolero, which is to be worn over a corset cover of lace or net or one of thin wash silk. The lace is filled across the front into the shoulder seams, and these and all other seams are finished with feather-stitching done in heavy embroidery silk. An edging finishes the fronts, also the collar and sleeves, and is set on with feather-stitching. The collar is stayed with fine wire supports to stand up—more or less—at the back of the neck.

An allover pattern is used for the dainty blouse at the right of the picture, although flouncings are woven in all-over patterns with narrow edgings included, which will serve the same purpose. This simple blouse is cut

SHOULD COOL OFF GRADUALLY

Mistake to Turn the Horse on Perspiring Team, is the Assertion of Veterinarian.

"In the hot weather there are always a number of fools who think they are kind to their horses when they turn a horse on them and drench them with cold water to thoroughly cool them off," said a veterinarian as he stopped a driver from throwing water over his perspiring team. "If the horse is overheated," he continued, "the shock of such a bath on the region where the kidneys are situated is enough to kill it, and even if it does no apparent harm the horse will succumb much more readily to the heat afterward. After a horse has been working in the broiling sun it should be cooled off as gradually as possible. The first thing to do is to take a sponge and wash out its mouth. This removes the saliva, which is poisonous, and refreshes the animal greatly, before it can be allowed to have a drink. After this the horse should have its four legs bathed—the hind ones as far as its haunches, the front ones up to the chest. Then it is safe to wet its head, neck and the part of its neck immediately behind the neck. Care should be taken, however, to keep the region of the kidneys perfectly dry. This habit of driving a team up before a fire engine house and playing a hose indiscriminately over their bodies is accountable for the death of many good horses every summer.

Wrong Diagnosis.

One of the prominent clubs of this city gave a contract for the decoration of their building in honor of the visit of the fleet, and the decorator conceived the idea that the word "welcome" spelled out in signal flags would be an appropriate and beautiful design for the front wall, over the entrance. He asked a naval officer for directions, and, following the code which said officer wrote out for him, a very interesting result was obtained. Judge of the surprise of the contractor when an army officer, happening by, asked: "Do you know what you have written?"

"Why, welcome," stammered the decorator.

"Not by a long shot!" said the army officer. "You have up there, 'To be with the army.'"—Life.

From a Sinner's Diary.

A sinner can't lose. Some of his ships are always coming in. I know a man who would spare no pains or expense doctoring an enlarged or otherwise out-of-tune liver. Yet he treats aching, aspiring, longing, loving hearts with scowls and sneers and sharp discouragements.

I know a woman who is for letting you have what you want when you want it, who favors vacations before you have to go on the stretcher.

Love—something that makes you want to surround and be surrounded by.

There's never a time when 'tis safe for a doctor to eat onions.

So take your pick—die off and be mourned, or live on and be cursed.—Lynette Fremire in Judge.

WOMEN CAN HARDLY BELIEVE

How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Saturday at the Princess.

"The Japanese Mask," a three reel feature at the Princess, Saturday night, July 3. Picking up a grotesque Japanese mask, Lieutenant Scala explains to his chum, Lieutenant Lombard, a native superstition that anyone who is looked at through its slant eyes will meet a tragic death. The latter is upset when Scala looks at him through the mask. Both men love the same girl, Lenore, but she prefers Lombard. He loses at cards and borrows from a money-lender to pay the debt. Scala endorses the note which his friend offers, but when it falls due he repudiates his signature, and Lombard is imprisoned for forgery. Later he escapes from prison and unearths a hidden treasure. Planning revenge, Lombard learns that Scala is married and living extravagantly on money made by selling military secrets to foreign powers. He denounces his former friend, and catching up the mask gazes at his betrayer through its tragic eyes. Crazed with fear, Scala kills himself to escape the impending disgrace, and then Lombard learns that the wife of his former friend is Lenore and realizes the reason for his betrayal. This drama offers a decided thrill, the story being replete with tense situations. It will prove exceptionally interesting to all. "Max Braves the Briny" a breezy farce comedy with Max Linder, one of the funniest and wisest known comedians in motion pictures today. You will smile, you will laugh, you will roar when you see Max. IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW. What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Chelsea Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back. Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

Read what a Chelsea citizen says: Mrs. Charles Grant, 904 S. Main St. Chelsea, says: "I suffered greatly from dull, nagging backaches and distressing pains over my kidneys. My kidneys were sluggish and didn't act regularly. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Penn's Drug Store, strengthened my back, relieved the aches and pains and corrected the annoyance from the kidneys. My back has not troubled me since."
