To Travel With Chapel Car.

Rev. F. I. Blanchard, former pastor of the Baptist church here, has resigned as associate pastor of the First Baptist church, of Pontiac, to go into chapel car work.

Mrs. Blanchard will have the musical work and the work among the women and children, while Rev. Blanchard has the mission work in general. They are to hold revival meetings, organize churches, Sunday schools, raise money, secure meeting houses and pastors, and do whatever else is necessary to establish Christian work in a community.

This not a new work for the Blanchards as they have had nearly three years of state evangelistic work along these lines. Rev. and Mrs. Blanchard will leave on February 1st and their first stopping place will be Butte, Montana. Here they find their car "Emmanuel" awaiting them. This car, carried by the steam railroads, has every modern convenience, both in living quarters and in the church. It carries its own lighting system, and has an independent hot water heating apparatus, is equipped with every safety device required by the Interstate Commerce Commission or by the states, enabling it to travel in any state. In the union, a feature shared by only one other chapel car, "Grace," sent out by the same society.

BURSTING MACHINE

MADE LIVELY TIME

High Speed Machine at Screw Works Let Go Tuesday.

George C. Clark has a badly injured right eye which he received about 9 o'clock Tuesday morning while working at the Chelsea Screw Co.'s plant. The accident was caused by the bursting of the head of the oil separator, which is used to remove the oil from the finished product of the automatic machines. The machine revolves at a very high speed, and was loaded with a thousand pieces, while Mr. Clark's injuries are painful no serious results are anticipated. Twenty-eight panes of glass in the shop windows were broken by flying pieces of the machine.

The boys in the shop say that they thought a shrapnel shell had exploded in their trench.

Theodore F. Covert.

Theodore F. Covert was born in the state of New York, November 10, 1838, and died at his home in Lima township Tuesday, January 18, 1916.

Mr. Covert had been a resident of Lima for about 50 years and was well known to many of the residents in this vicinity. He is survived by one son, two daughters and several grandchildren.

The funeral was held from the home at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Rev. C. J. Dole, pastor of the Chelsea Congregational church officiating. Interment at Lima Center cemetery.

Song by the Grange. Select reading, Mrs. C. E. Foster. Music. How I Make My Cows Pay. Discussion led by Wirt Ives and E. A. Ward. Report of State Grange delegates. Closing song.

Miss Julia Clark.

Miss Julia Clark was born in Dexter township, June 23, 1873, and died at the family home in that township Sunday afternoon, January 16, 1916.

Miss Clark was severely injured in the Steinbach hill wreck on the D. J. & C. electric line three years ago last April, from which she never fully recovered.

The surviving members of the family are four brothers, James and John, of Jackson, William, of Ann Arbor, and Henry T., and two sisters, Misses Mary and Rose, who with their brother, Henry, reside on the homestead.

The funeral was held from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, her pastor, Rev. Father Considine celebrating the mass. Burial at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

School Notes.

Albert Lambert is absent from the eighth grade with the mumps. All of the pupils in the seventh grade returned this week for the first time in two months.

The sixth grade was awarded the pennant offered for the grade selling the most tickets for the play "Hiawatha."

The Jackson Mutuals will play a return game with the Chelsea high school at the town hall, Friday evening, January 21.

The play "Hiawatha," presented at the Princess, under the auspices of the Chelsea public school, was well attended and unusually successful.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell in Pygmalion.

Bernard Shaw's famous play, "Pygmalion," which Mrs. Patrick Campbell brings to Manager McLaren's new Majestic theatre at Jackson Wednesday, January 26th, differs in one way or another from its predecessors, but in quality, of course, is the same—in the nature of the author's gift, in what has given him his place. It is perhaps fair to say that Wells, Galsworthy and Shaw influence the more thoughtful young of America more than any other persons writing in English today and he ranks with them because of his wit. Take Doolittle in "Pygmalion."

"I ask you what am I? I'm one of the undeserving poor; that's what I am. Think of what that means to a man. It means that he's up in the middle class morality all the time. If there's anything going, and I put in for a bit of it, it's always the same story: 'You're undeserving; so you can't have it.' But my needs is as great as the most deserving widow that ever got money of six different charities in one week for the death of the same husband. I don't need less than a deserving man; I need more; I don't eat less hearty than him and I drink a lot more." Acted as well as the part of Doolittle is acted in Mrs. Campbell's company, it gives joy to everyone. It is pleasant to see the established work upset when it is done with such evident enjoyment.

Fall From Tree Fatal.

Owen Fletcher, 27-year-old son of Daniel Fletcher, of Ann Arbor, was instantly killed Sunday.

Fletcher and his two brothers, George and Roland, together with Robert Marsh, went rabbit hunting in the Fred Jedge swamp, about half way between Chelsea and Ann Arbor. Owen was shooting from a tree, and becoming numb with the cold, attempted to change his position, lost his balance and fell, breaking his neck.

Life Long Lima Resident.

John David Luick was born in Lima township, on the farm at present owned by Adolph Schmidt, December 30, 1838, and died at his home just east of Lima Center, Friday morning, January 14, 1916.

Mr. Luick has been a resident of Lima township his entire lifetime and had resided on the farm where he died since April, 1877. About the age of 13 years he was instructed and confirmed by Rev. Mr. Schmidt, a pioneer preacher, in the Scio church. In his younger days he was a carpenter and builder, but for many years he devoted his time to farming. He had a wide acquaintance throughout this county and a host of friends. He was united in marriage with Katherine Laubengayer December 27, 1866, and to this union four children were born, two of whom are living. Mrs. Luick died December 5, 1879.

He is survived by one son, Otto D. Luick, former county treasurer and who resides on the homestead farm, one daughter, Mrs. David E. Beach, six grandchildren, two brothers, Gottlob and Emanuel, of Ann Arbor, and three sisters, Mrs. Mary Laubengayer, of Ann Arbor, Mrs. John Boss, of Dexter and Mrs. Ernest Schilling, of Sebewaing, and a number of nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held from his late home Sunday afternoon, and was attended by a large number of friends. Rev. A. A. Schoen, pastor of St. Paul's church of this place officiating. Mrs. R. Kempf, of Ann Arbor, sang two solos. Two special cars were on the siding near the home and conveyed the remains, accompanied by relatives and friends, to Bethlehem cemetery, near Ann Arbor, where the burial took place.

This is for the girls who want to skate in ease and comfort. It is a "Brownie" costume of wool, and an active skater does not look unlike a Teddy Bear in one. Of course, there may be objections on the part of some young women, but nevertheless it will be worn by those who seek comfort first.

JAPAN DOESN'T STOP BUILDING OF BATTLESHIPS

Impressive Naval Program for Present Year Has Been Adopted.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press)

Tokio, Dec. 30.—One superdreadnought, two cruisers, one destroyer, three submarines and two special service ships constitute the program of naval building for Japan for the coming year. Admiral Kato, minister of marine, explained the naval expansion project before the budget committee of the Diet yesterday in response to an interpellation. The battleship will be about the same type as the Fuso and Yamashiro, which was recently launched, and will carry twelve 14-inch guns and sixteen 6-inch guns. The two cruisers will have a speed of 28 knots. They will probably be in the nature of light scout ships. Their armament has not yet been decided. The submarines will have a displacement of seven hundred tons each, a speed of 18 knots on the surface and 10 knots in the water and carry one gun.

Will Alter Armament.

Admiral Kato expressed the opinion that the war in Europe would not necessitate any considerable alteration in the naval armament of the great powers. He fully recognized, he said, the effectiveness of aircraft and submarines as weapons of offense as demonstrated in the present war but he believed that these facts hardly affected the position of the battleship as an engine of war. If the Kaiser's warships dared not venture from their own sheltered waters it was because of the powerful British squadrons awaiting them outside. The absence of any great naval engagements in Europe must be ascribed to the very great difference between the British and German navies. As for submarines, however, actively they might work their activities were confined within certain limits and they could hardly be expected to place the great battleships hors de combat. The minister said that equipment was now being provided on ships against air attacks. He was confident that the dreadnought remained the basic unit of great navies.

Prefer 14-Inch Guns.

The admiral further said that in deciding the armaments for new battleships the naval authorities preferred the 12 14-inch guns principle to the eight 15-inch of the British and German navies because they deemed the former more advantageous than the latter from the viewpoint of naval tactics. Furthermore the authorities believed that there would occur no change in the shape and size of warships and naval guns in the near future. The minister's remarks brought out the fact that Japan's eventual program includes the establishment of a first line fleet of eight battleships and eight battle cruisers.

Admiral Kato was asked particularly by K. Kobayashi, a member of the committee, as to the comparative strength of the Japanese navy and those of great Britain, Germany and the United States. The member also wanted to know whether the naval authorities were confident of victory in case of war—for instance, in case of war with the United States. He asked what plan the navy had in case the United States attacked Japan with her naval strength twice that of the Japanese navy. To this Admiral Kato replied that figures do not always decide the issue of a battle. He is quoted as having added: "If the American navy invades Japan we have only to encounter it with the best tactics and art of warfare, to the last vessel and last man, meanwhile relying on the dignity of the august emperor and the strong support of a sixty millions nation. This is the decision of our navy in such an eventuality."

War Gives Men Who Like To Figure Out Statistics Excellent Opportunity

(Correspondence of the Associated Press)

Paris, Jan. 17.—The prolongation of the war has had the effect of complicating remarkably the work of the statistician. The man who is fond of figuring out what figures circumstances will produce in all sorts of occasions began his calculations on the supposition that all would be over within a few months. After the few months passed he began to figure on a year, and again he had to revise his figures.

The most intricate problem that he has been working on is what will be the total destruction in value of the men killed and men disabled for life. Statisticians working on this problem go back as far as the war of the Crimea in 1861, when Proudhon estimated the value of a man's life at 20,000 francs ($4,000). Since then writers on this subject have for the most part discredited the arbitrary figure and have valued the life or services of a man according to his producing capacity. Foville made the far more moderate estimate of $800 as the average value of the man killed in the war of 1870. Coming down to the present time, Yves Guyot considers that a man's salary or wages represents no more than half of the value of the production to which he contributes, and starting from that basis he figures that during the six months of the war France has lost $3,000,000,000 through the disappearance and disabling of producing men. On the same basis the loss to date would be $9,000,000,000, but other writers contest the soundness of the basis on which these figures are produced. If the workman, on a salary of $2 per day may be considered worth from $7,000 to $10,000, the engineer, who earns $20 a day, may be considered worth $100,000, and if these figures were taken in view of the heavy losses in officers the total would amount, perhaps, to double the statistician's figures.

An officer at the front, taking the legal value of a human being as fixed by law, at $5,000, calculated the cost per square yard of ground reconquered from the enemy in a certain attack at $133,000.

Monsieur Eugene d'Aichthal of the Institute and member of the Society of Statisticians of Paris, refuses to accept the basis of any of the calculations who have figures on these results up to this time, and is of the opinion that in view of the many opportunities for differences of circumstances and faulty bases, no figure worthy of serious consideration will ever be reached.

Case of Turkey. For years England had wielded great influence at the Sublime Porte. Yet it permitted the Germans to gradually gain the ascendancy and at the last moment, when a proper diplomatic effort on the part of England could still have prevented, allowed Germany the victory. This is only half the charge.

Result of Blunder.

When, as a result of this initial blunder, the question of a campaign against the Dardanelles was broached, it was again the foreign office and its diplomatic service that the nation turned for guidance. Downing street is said to have been little informed of the subject. The Dardanelles blunder was committed.

Open charges have been made that at the moment the supreme struggle was on at Constantinople to win or restrain the Turk, England had in its embassy there an ambassador and three secretaries not one of whom knew Turkish, Turk or Turkey. It is said the embassy had had a chief interpreter, who did know Turkish and the Turk. Mr. Fitzmaurice knew as much that he acquired the sobriquet of "The Man Who Knows." When he was on vacation, the Turkish minister at London requested the foreign office not to let him return. The foreign office consented.

Situation Worse.

In Bulgaria the situation has been considered even worse. October 1, the day Bulgarian mobilized, Sir Edward Grey arose in parliament to say that while so far as he knew Bulgaria had no hostile intentions, still if she did have, England would be forced to act.

During the first 14 months English and German diplomats had labored at Sofia to win the support of Bulgaria at the end of that time England's foreign office did not show that it knew Bulgaria was tied hand and foot to Germany. The English press has just pointed out that while Sir Ferdinand was prosecuting supposedly sincere negotiations with the entente he must have been laughing up his sleeve at England's simplicity.

Charged Ministers.

Two months before the Bulgarian mobilization in England changed ministers at Sofia. The one recalled was Sir Max Aitken.

Also exasperating to English public opinion just now is the failure of its diplomacy to secure more of Greece than "benevolent neutrality."

A Story of Today and of All Days

SYNOPSIS.

Alan Wayne is sent away from Red Hill, his home, by his uncle, J. Y., as a moral failure. Clem runs after him in a tangle of short skirts to bid him good-by.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

"It doesn't amount to an appointment. Just a job as assistant to Walton, the engineer the contractors are sending out. We're going to put up a bridge somewhere in Africa."

"That's it. I knew it," said the captain. "Going away. Want any money?"

The question came like solid shot out of a four-pounder. Alan started, colored and smiled, all at the same time.

"No, thanks, sir," he replied. "I've got all I need."

The captain hitched his chair forward, placed his hands on his knees, leaned forward and glared out on the avenue. "The Lansings," he began, like a boy reciting a piece, "are devils for drink, the Waynes for women. Don't you ever let 'em worry you about drink. Nowadays the doctors call us nonalcoholic. In my time it was just plain strong heads for wine. I say, don't worry about drink. There's a safety valve in every Wayne's skull."

"But women, Alan!" The captain sited around his bulging eyes. "You look out for them. As your great-grandfather used to say, 'To women, only perishable goods—sweets, flowers and kisses.' And you take it from me, kisses aren't always the cheapest. They say God made everything—down to little apples and Jersey lightning. But when he made women the devil helped." The captain's nervousness dropped from his as he deliberately drew out his watch and fob. "Good-time he did, too," he added, as a pleasing afterthought. He leaned back in his chair. A complacent look came over his face.

Alan got up to say good-by. The captain arose, too, and clasped the hand Alan held out. "One more thing," he said. "Don't forget there's always a Wayne to back a Wayne for good or bad." There was a suspicion of moisture in his eye as he hurried his guest off.

Back in his room Alan found letters awaiting him. He read them and tore them up—all but one. It was from Clem.

Dear Alan: Nance says you are going very far away. I am sorry. It has been raining here very much. In the hollows all the bridges are under water. I have invented a new game. It is called "Steamboat." I play it on old Dubbs. We go down into the valley and I make him go through the water around the bridges. He puffs just like a steamboat and when he gets out he smokes all over. He is too fat. I hope you will come back very soon.

That evening Clem was thrown into a transport by receiving his first telegram. It read, "You must not play steamboat again. It is dangerous, Alan." She tucked it in her bosom and rushed over to the first to show it to Gerry.

Gerry and Alan were spending the summer at the first, where Mrs. Lansing, Gerry's widowed mother, was still nominally the hostess. They had been married two years, but people still spoke of Alan as Gerry's bride, and in so doing stamped her with her own seal. To strangers they carried the air of a couple about to be married at the national close of a long engagement. No children or thought of children had come to turn the channel of life for Alan. On Gerry marriage sat as an added habit. It was beginning to look as though he and Alan drifted together not because they were carried by the same currents but because they were tied.

Where duller minds would have dubbed Gerry the Ox, Alan had named him the Rock, and Alan was right. Gerry had a dignity beyond mere bulk. He had all the powers of resistance, none of articulation. Where a pinprick would start an ox it took an upheaval to move Gerry. An upheaval was on the way, but Gerry did not know it. It was yet afar off.

To the Lansings marriage had always been one of the regular functions of a regulated life—part of the general scheme of things. Gerry was slowly realizing that his marriage with Alan was far from a mere function, had little to do with a regular life and was foreign to what he had always considered the general scheme of things. Alan had developed, quite naturally, into a social butterfly. Gerry did not picture her as chain lightning playing on a rock, as Alan would have done, but he did, in a vague way, feel that bits of his impassive self were being chipped away.

Red Hill bored Alan and she showed it. The first summer after the marriage they had spent abroad. Now Alan's thoughts and talk turned constantly toward Europe. She even suggested a flying trip for the fall, but Gerry refused to be dragged so far from golf and his club. He stuck doggedly to Red Hill till the leaves began to turn, and then consented to move back to town.

On their last night at the first Mrs. Lansing, who was complacently Aunt Jane to Wayne and Eltons, entertained Red Hill as a whole to dinner. With the arrival of dessert, to Alan's surprise, Nance said, "Port all around, please, Aunt Jane."

Lansings, Wayne and Eltons were heavy drinkers in town, but it was a tradition, as Alan knew; that on Red Hill they dropped it—all but the old captain. It was as though, amid the scenes of their childhood, they became children and just as a Frenchman of the old school will not light a cigarette in the presence of his father, so they would not take a drink for drink's sake on Red Hill.

So Alan looked on interestedly as the old butler set glasses and started the port. When it had gone the round Nance stood up, and with her hands on the table's edge, leaned toward them all. For a Wayne, she was very fair. As they looked at her the color swept over her bare neck. Its wave reached her temples and seemed to stir the clustering tendrils of her hair. Her eyes were grave and bright with moisture. Her lips were tremulous. "We drink to Alan," she said, "today is Alan's birthday."

She sat down. They all raised their glasses. Little Clem had no wine. She put a thin hand on Gerry's arm. "Please, Gerry, please!"

Gerry held down his glass. Clematis dipped in the tip of her little finger, and as they all drank, gravely carried the drop of wine to her lips.

CHAPTER III

As Judge Healey, gray-haired but erect, walked up the avenue his keen glance fell on Gerry Lansing standing across the street before an art dealer's window. Gerry's eyes were fastened on a picture that he had long had in mind for a certain nook in the library of the town house.

It was the second anniversary of his wedding, and though it was already late in the afternoon Gerry had not yet chosen his gift for Alan. He turned from the picture with a last long look and a shrug and passed on to a palatial jeweler's farther up the street.

For many years Judge Healey had been foster-father to Red Hill in general and to Gerry in particular. With almost womanly intuition he read what was in Gerry's mind before the picture and acting on impulse the judge crossed the street and bought it. While the judge was still in the picture-shop Gerry came out of the jeweler's and started briskly for home. He had purchased a pendant of brilliant, extravagant for his purse but yet saved to good taste by a simple originality in design.

He waited until the dinner hour and then slipped his gift into Alan's hand as they walked down the stairs together. She stopped beneath the bell light. "I can't wait, dear, I simply can't," she snapped open the case. "Oh!" she gasped. "How dear! How perfectly dear! You old sweetheart!" She threw her arms around his neck and kissed him twice. Then she flew away to the drawing room in search of Mrs. Lansing and the judge, the sole guests to the little anniversary dinner. Gerry straightened his tie and followed.

Alan's tongue was rippling—her whole body was rippling—with excitement and pleasure. She dangled her treasure before their eyes. She laid it against her warm neck and ran to a mirror. The light in her eyes matched the light in the stones. The judge took the jewel and laid it in the palm of his strong hand. It looked in danger of being crushed. "A beautiful thing, Gerry," he said, "and well chosen. Some poet-jeweler dreamed that twining design and set the stones while the dew was still on the grass."

After dinner the four gathered in the library, but they were hardly seated when Alan sprang up. Her glance had followed Gerry's startled gaze. He was staring at the coveted picture he had been looking at in the gallery that afternoon. It hung in the niche in which his thoughts had placed it. Alan took her stand before it. She glanced inquiringly at the others. Mrs. Lansing nodded at the judge. Alan turned back to the picture and gravity stole into her face. Then she faced the judge with a smile.

"We live," she said, "in a Philistine age, don't we? But I've never let any Philistinism drive pictures from their right place in the heart. Pictures in art galleries—" she shrugged her pretty shoulders—"I have not been trained up to them. To me, they are mounted butterflies in a museum, cut flowers crowded at the florist's. But this picture and that nook—they have waited for each other. You see the picture nesting down for a long rest and it seems a small thing and then it catches your eye and holds it and you see that it is a little door that opens on a wide world. It has slipped into the room and become a part of life."

A strange stillness followed on Alan's words. To the judge and to Gerry it was as though the picture had opened a window to her mind. Then she closed the window. "Come, Gerry," she said, turning. "Make your bow to the judge and Alan."

Gerry was excited, though he did not show it. "You have dressed my thoughts in words I can't equal," he said and strolled out on to the little veranda at the back of the house. He wanted to be alone for a moment and think over this flash of light that had followed a dark day. For the first time in a long while Alan had revealed herself. He did not begrudge the judge his triumph. He knew instinctively that coming from him instead of from the judge the picture would not have struck that intimate spark.

The next day Gerry gave his consent to Alan's plan for a flying trip abroad, but with a reservation. The reservation was that she should join some party and leave him behind.

Judge Healey heard of this arrangement only when it was on the point of being put into effect. In fact he was only just in time at the steamer to wave good-by to Alan. Leaning over the rail, with her high collar, moist red lips and big excited eyes making play under a golden crown of hair and over a huge armful of roses, Alan presented a picture not easily forgotten.

The judge turned to Gerry. "She ought not to be going without you, my boy."

"Oh, it's all right," said Gerry lightly. "She's well chaperoned. It's a big party, you know."

But during the weeks that followed the judge saw it was not all right. Gerry had less and less time for golf and more and more for whiskeys and sodas. The judge was troubled and felt a sort of relief when from far away Alan Wayne dropped into his affairs and gave him something else to think about.

When Angus McDale of McDale and McDale called without appointment the judge knew at once that he was going to hear something about Alan.

"Lucky to find you in," puffed McDale. "It isn't business exactly or I'd have phoned. I was just passing by."

"Well, what is it?" asked the judge, offering his visitor a fresh cigar.

"It's this. That boy, Alan Wayne—sort of protégé of yours, isn't he?"

"Yes—in a way—yes," said the judge slowly, frowning. "What has Alan done now?"

"It's like this," said McDale. "Six months ago we sent Mr. Wayne out on contract as assistant to Walton. Walton no sooner got on the ground than he fell sick. He put Wayne in charge and then he died. Now this is the point. Mr. Wayne seems to have promoted himself to Walton's pay. He had the cheek to draw his own as well. He won't be here for weeks but his accounts came in today. I want to

"Been one! From all accounts!" exclaimed Alan, a puzzled frown on his face. "Just what do you mean?"

They started walking. "I mean that even in Africa one can't hide from Piccadilly. In Piccadilly you are already known. Not as Mr. Alan Wayne, a New York social satellite, but as a whirlwind in shirt sleeves. Ten Percent Wayne, in short." She looked at him with teasing archness. She could see that he was worried.

"Satellite is rather rough," remarked Alan. "I never was that."

"All bachelors are satellites in the nature of things—satellites to other men's wives."

"Have you a vacancy?" said Alan. They both knew they were embarking upon a dangerous game, but Alan played it often. No pretty woman takes her European degree without ample occasion for practice and Alan had been through the European mill. She threw out her daintily shod feet as she walked. She was full of life. She felt like skipping. The light of battle danced merrily in her eyes. She made no other reply.

"I met lots of people we both know," she said, at last.

"Which one of them passed on the news that I had taken to the ways of a wild beast?"

"Oh, that was the Honorable Percy. I only caught a few words. He was telling about a man known as Ten Percent Wayne and the only time he'd ever seen the shirt-sleeved policy work with natives. When I learned it you and I linked up with you at once and screamed and he turned to me and said, 'You know Mr. Wayne?' But just then Lady Merle signaled the retreat, and when the men came out somebody else snatched Collingford before I got a chance."

"Oh, Collingford," said Alan. "I remember." He frowned and was silent.

"Alan," said Alan after a moment. "Let me warn you. I see a new tendency in you but before it goes any further than a tendency let me tell you that a thoughtful man is a most awful bore. When I caught sight of you I thought, 'What a delightful little party' but if you're going to be peevish there are others."

Alan glanced at her. "Alan," he said, mimicking her tone. "I see in you the makings of an altogether charming woman. I'm not speaking of your painstaking veneer—I suppose you need that in your walk of life—but what's under it. There may be others as you say. Pretty women have been taken to wearing men for bangles. But don't you make a mistake. I'm not a bangle. I've just come from the unclothed world of real things. To me a man is just a man and, what's more, a woman is just a woman."

"How un-American," said Alan.

"It's pre-American," said Alan.

Alex was thoughtful in her turn. Alan caught her by the arm and turned her toward the west. A yawl was just

"Yes, it was," said McDale bluntly. "Most satisfactory. But there was a funny thing there too. They wrote that while they did not approve of Mr. Wayne's time-saving methods, the finished work had their absolute acceptance."

The judge was silent for a moment. "You want my advice?"

"Yes, not for our own sake but for Wayne's."

"Well," said the judge, "I'm going to give it to you for your sake. When you stumble across a boy than can out-ten per cent off the working and time estimates of an old hand like Walton, you bind him to you with a long contract at any salary he wants. And just one thing more: when Alan Wayne steals a cent from you or fifty thousand dollars you come to me and I'll pay it."

McDale's eyes narrowed and he puffed nervously at his cigar. He got up to take his leave. "Judge," he said, "your head is on right and your heart's in the right place, as well. I begin to see that widow business. Wayne sized us up for a hard-headed firm when it comes to paying out what we don't have to and we are. It wasn't law, but he was right. Walton's work was done just as if he'd been alive. Even a Scotchman can see that. You needn't worry. A man that you'll back for fifty thousand is good enough for McDale & McDale."

CHAPTER IV

It was Alan that discovered Alan as the Electric steamed slowly down the Solent. He was already comfortably established in his chair with a small pile of fiction beside him.

She paused before she approached him. Alan had always interested her. Alan had thought of him heretofore as a modern exquisite subject to atavistic fits that, in times past, had led him into more than one barbarous escapade. Now in London she had by chance heard things of him that forced her to readjustment of her estimate. In six months Alan had turned himself into a mystery.

"Well," she said, coming up behind him, "how are you?"

Alan turned his head slowly and then threw off his rugs and sprang to his feet.

"The sky is clear," he said, "where did you drop from?" His eyes measured her. She was ravishing in a fur toque and coat which had yet to receive their baptism of import duty.

"Oh," said Alan, "my presence is humdrum. Just the usual returning from six weeks abroad. But you! You come from the haunts of wild beasts and from all accounts you have been one."

"Been one! From all accounts!" exclaimed Alan, a puzzled frown on his face. "Just what do you mean?"

They started walking. "I mean that even in Africa one can't hide from Piccadilly. In Piccadilly you are already known. Not as Mr. Alan Wayne, a New York social satellite, but as a whirlwind in shirt sleeves. Ten Percent Wayne, in short." She looked at him with teasing archness. She could see that he was worried.

When I learned it you and I linked up with you at once and screamed and he turned to me and said, 'You know Mr. Wayne?' But just then Lady Merle signaled the retreat, and when the men came out somebody else snatched Collingford before I got a chance."

When I caught sight of you I thought, 'What a delightful little party' but if you're going to be peevish there are others."

I'm not speaking of your painstaking veneer—I suppose you need that in your walk of life—but what's under it. There may be others as you say. Pretty women have been taken to wearing men for bangles. But don't you make a mistake. I'm not a bangle. I've just come from the unclothed world of real things. To me a man is just a man and, what's more, a woman is just a woman."

"How un-American," said Alan.

"It's pre-American," said Alan.

Alex was thoughtful in her turn. Alan caught her by the arm and turned her toward the west. A yawl was just crossing the disk of the disappearing sun. Alan felt a thrill at his touch. "It's a sweet little picture, isn't it?" she said. "But you mustn't touch me, Alan. It can't be good for us."

"So you feel it too," said Alan, and took his hand from her arm.

During the voyage they were much together, not in dark corners but wagging their battle in the open—two swimmers that fought each other, forgetting to fight the tide that was bearing them out to sea. Alan was not a philosopher to snatch an unrequited kiss. To him a kiss was the seal on surrender. But to Alan the game was its own goal. As she had always played it, nobody had ever really won anything. However, it did not take her long to appreciate that in Alan she had an opponent who was constantly getting under her guard and making her feel things—things that were alarming in themselves like the jump of one's heart into the throat or the intoxication that goes with hot, racing blood.

Alan's power over women was in voice and words. If he had beenidious it would have been the same. With his tongue he carried Alan away and gave her that sense of isolation which lulls a woman into laxity. One night as they sat side by side, a single great rug across their knees, Alan laid his hand under cover on hers. A quiver went through Alan's body. Her closed hand stirred nervously but she did not really draw it away. "Alan," she said. "I've told you not to. Please don't. It's common—this sort of thing."

Alan tightened his grip. "You say it's common," he said, "because you've never thought it out. Lightning was common till somebody thought it out. I sit beside you without touching you and we are in two worlds. I grip your hand—like this—and the abyss between us is closed. While I hold you nothing can come between."

Alan's hand opened and settled into his. For a while they sat silent, then Alan recovered himself. "After all," she said, "we're not on a desert island but on a ship with eyes in every corner."

Alan leaned toward her. "But if we were, Alan! If we were on a desert island—you and I—"

For a moment Alan looked into his burning eyes. She felt that there was fire in her own eyes, too—a fire she could not altogether control. She disengaged herself and sprang up. Alan rose slowly and stood beside her. He did not look at her parted lips and hot cheeks; he had suddenly become languid. "That's it," he drawled, "eyes in every corner. I wonder how many morals would stand without other people's eyes to prop them up?"

WISE AND HUMANE PROVISION

Uncle Sam, From This Time On, Will Look After the "Bankers" Hitherto Neglected.

Those who brave the dangers of storm, fog and icebergs of that elevated submarine plateau east of Cape Cod, where the "bankers" seek the cod, are to be looked after by Uncle Sam. The men of the big fishing fleet which pull off from the New England coast from Gloucester, Boston, Newburyport and Portsmouth lead existences which are dangerous to bodily health and even to life itself.

The fishing craft which seek the cod, hake, halibut and other deep-sea ground fish on the Georges have meager facilities for men who become disabled, and the usual program has been that when a man got sick he had to stay sick and take his chances of recovery, being out of reach of physicians, says the New York Press, editorially. In a single season many boats and lives are lost, with numbers more of men injured.

The national government has placed the coast guard cutter Androscoquin at the disposal of fishermen that may become sick or disabled, and the United States public health bureau has fitted out the boat with hospital appliances and fittings. A very thoughtful and attentive looker after the welfare and safety of Americans is Uncle Sam becoming in many different ways and directions.

Burglar Had Paid His Visit. Some time ago Brown said to Smith, "I envy you. You come in contact with all kinds of men. You actually know and talk to burglars and other criminals. All I know about them is what I read or imagine about them. Now, the next time you meet a good burglar I want you to send him to me. Give him a card to me and tell him I will pay his car fare and expenses. I want to talk to him and see how criminals differ from other men."

Smith promised to send along the next good specimen of a burglar that came his way and forgot all about the matter until some weeks later he received this letter from Brown: "Your friend came, but I had not expected him professionally. If you will tell him to bring back the family plate and Mrs. Brown's jewels, you and I will resume social relations."

Good Game to Play on a Train. Here is an interesting game to play when we are traveling by train. While the train stops at a station, all the players look about and take as much notice of things as possible. Then, a few minutes after the train has left the station, we take turns at naming objects which we saw there. Of course, at first this is easy, and we can go round and round again, each player naming one object which no other player has mentioned. But as the game goes on it becomes harder and harder to recall something seen which hasn't already been named. The one who is last able to mention an object wins the game. Besides being good sport, it trains in observation.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

"It costs more to live than it did years ago," said the man who complains. "Yes," answered the man who enjoys modern conveniences, "but it's worth more."

THOUGHT FOR THE INVALID.

Invalid cooking is a most important and interesting subject, and one which demands a knowledge of dietetics as well as taste, tact and patience.

First and foremost in dealing with an invalid we must remember that he is out of balance mentally as well as physically. In the days of convalescence, when life is beginning to be worth while, the small things of every day will interest and little things will irritate, which would never be noticed in health.

It is not necessary to mention that the tray should be as immaculate in its appointments, no matter how simple, as are all other things about an invalid. Where laundry needs to be considered, there are any number of pretty paper napkins which can be bought in different designs and colors. For a child the bright colors will be a source of entertainment. In case of infectious diseases paper napkins are quite a necessity. The small paper cups, too, may be used for a tiny custard or bit of dessert.

A flower or two on the tray will be most welcome. The tiny vases which hold a small bunch of violets or a single rose are well adapted for use on a tray.

Set the tray as carefully as a place is laid at the table, and in the same order. A small pot of steaming tea which may be poured by the invalid is an item to be remembered.

Never ask a patient what he would like to eat or drink. Let his food be a surprise, as it will taste better.

Do not watch every mouthful he eats, for some people do not enjoy the sensation. Do not serve fried foods to a sick person, nor food in any large quantity. It is much better for them to want more than be surfeited at the sight of too much. Twice baked bread should be served with the broths and beef juices.

Sponge cake is the only desirable kind to serve. Cocoa is better than chocolate, unless the patient needs the fat, and is able to take care of it.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

For a company cake the following recipe is especially fine: Take the whites of six eggs, the yolks of five, one cupful each of sugar and flour, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, the juice and rind of a large orange. Beat the whites very stiff and add half of the sugar, beat the yolks and add the other half, beat five minutes, add the orange to the yolks and when well mixed add the whites, then fold in the flour that has been sifted with the cream of tartar. Bake slowly 40 minutes. If using a gas oven, light the oven just as the cake is put in.

Chocolate Caramel Cake.—Take two ounces of chocolate, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, a quarter of a cupful of butter, two cupfuls of flour, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix as usual and bake in layers. For the filling cook together a cupful and a half of sugar, half a cupful of sweet milk, a tablespoonful of butter; cook until it hairs. Cool, add vanilla.

Date Torte.—A cupful each of chopped dates, nuts and sugar, a tablespoonful of flour, and a teaspoonful of baking powder with two well-beaten eggs. Bake and serve with whipped cream.

Almond Tartlets.—Line patty tins with rich paste. Blanch and chop a third of a pound of almonds, add two tablespoonfuls of rolled cracker crumbs, stirred, three eggs, beaten, a third of a cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of milk, salt and vanilla to taste. Fill the shells and bake.

Date Bars.—Take a cupful of dates, chopped fine, beat two eggs, separating the yolks from the whites, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar to the yolks, then add six level tablespoonfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder with a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, add the chopped dates and a cupful of walnut meats chopped, then fold in the whites and bake in a slow oven in a sheet. Cut when cold in pieces the size of a wafer.

Silk in History. The credit of making the first silk is given to Si-Ling, wife of Hoang-Ti, emperor of China, 2600 B. C. Among the Greeks Aristotle—384-322 B. C.—is the first who mentions it. It was not until A. D. 530, however, that it began to be cultivated in Europe, the first eggs being then brought from India by some monks.

Doesn't Follow. A common error is in regarding a man who has made a success in one thing as an authority on everything.

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

Three Forms of Anthrax.

Anthrax may occur in human beings in three forms—external, intestinal or pulmonary. The external form is caused by an abrasion of the skin coming in contact with a hide or other object infected with the disease. Intestinal anthrax may be caused by the eating of food containing the bacilli, and the pulmonary variety by breathing infected air.

This latter disease has long been known as "wool sorters' disease" in England, where great quantities of sheep pelts are sorted and graded. The disease has also long been well known in the wool and hide trades in this country, and especially on the sheep ranges of the southwest.

The Reason. Mrs. Jones—I haven't heard you speak of going to the mountains next summer; but then your lungs are not weak this year.

Mrs. Smith—No, and they're not likely to be, unless my husband's business greatly improves.

To Cure a Cold in One Day. Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE Tablets. Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature is on each box. 50c.

ACCURATE MEASUREMENTS OF APPLES

Using Tape Measure on an Apple.

(By J. SHAW.)

When one wishes to do exact work in the study of pomology it will increase accuracy to make liberal use of exact measurements, for the novice, especially if he be a student in systematic pomology, it will improve the soundness of his judgment in descriptions tion, and therefore add to the value of his course of instruction. It can not always be undertaken, however, as it takes time.

Many measurements of the tree characters may be made without difficulty. The height and spread of the tree may be ascertained by direct measurements if the tree is small, or by any of the usual methods of forestry work where the tree is large. The length and diameter of the shoots and buds are easily measured, also the length and breadth of the leaf blade. The size of the serratures is most conveniently measured by counting the number per half inch or per centimeter.

An apple fruit seems rather an awkward body to measure accurately; nevertheless, by the adoption of certain fixed rules much can be accomplished. The instruments needed may be a simple ruler, preferably of cellulose.

Measuring Basin Width.

laid, but a pair of calipers is often useful. The unit of measure may be the millimeter or the inch. In itself the former is much to be preferred, but the latter is more commonly used among American pomologists, and doubtless to them conveys a more definite meaning.

The most common and useful measurements are the cross and axial diameters.

The former should always be taken at right angles to the axis, and the latter, parallel with it, and for the sake of a uniform practice it is best to secure the greatest diameter in each case. Calipers are necessary for exact work, but close approximations may be secured by placing the apple between two parallel surfaces, such as stiff cardboard or a pane of glass and a smooth table top. Of course, if the apple may be cut longitudinally the diameter may be quickly ascertained with a ruler.

The depth and breadth of the cavity and basin may be measured without cutting the fruit. The rule should be whittled to a dull point about two millimeters broad, and the depth ascertained by sighting across the base or apex of the apple, as the case may be.

In measuring the breadth the distance between the points of contact of the rule and surface of the fruit is taken. In both cases it is best to take the measure in the deepest and broadest part of the cavity or basin.

There are several characters in the interior of the apple that lend themselves readily to exact measurement. The length and breadth of the tube and of the core may be easily measured on cutting the apple longitudinally through the axis; also the length and breadth of the cells, making sure that the cut is made so as to split the cell exactly. The seeds are readily measured, giving their length, breadth and possibly thickness. The axis length from the insertion of the stem to the pistil point is easily measured.

Extensive Tests Have Been Made by Entomologists of Agricultural Department.

The effectiveness of different contact poisons both alone and in combination with other substances in killing the green apple aphid has been made the subject of extensive field and laboratory tests by the entomologists of the United States department of agriculture as reported in Department Bulletin 278. Extensive experiments were made with 40 per cent nicotine sulphate, kerosene emulsion, anthracene emulsion, naphtha soap, both alone and in combinations.

In certain cases in order to provide a stomach poison in combination with an aphidicide, arsenate of lead was used in connection with the nicotine sulphate, and both arsenate of lead and arsenate of calcium were used with kerosene emulsion without lessening the killing action of the nicotine sulphate on aphides.

It was found, however, that where arsenates are combined with kerosene emulsion they should not be mixed and allowed to stand for over a day or so, since there is a slight breaking down of the soap.

According to the results of these experiments a 10 per cent kerosene emulsion should prove effective against the green apple aphid. The kerosene emulsion made either with 66 per cent stock, 10 per cent, or with naphtha soap and cold water, seemed to kill all the green apple aphids.

The 40 per cent nicotine solution, with a dilution up to 1 to 2,000 combined with soap, were likewise effective aphidicides.

Some states have cooperative producing and distributing organizations patterned after those of Sweden and Canada, but Indiana has not up to the present time undertaken anything of this sort.

DAIRY FACTS

YELLOW CREAM AND BUTTER

Experiments Show Popular Belief That Color Indicates Richness in Quality Mistaken.

The belief that a bright yellow color in milk means richness in quality is not true. Experiments conducted at the college of agriculture of the University of Missouri show that the change from the white cream and butter in winter to yellow cream and butter in spring and summer does not indicate an increased fat percentage. The very highest colored milk that a cow can give may have the lowest fat percentage. Such a condition is found in the so-called colostrum milk, the first milk that a cow gives after giving birth to a calf.

The explanation of the wide difference between the results of the experiments and the popular belief in regard to the relation of color to richness lies in the cause of the natural yellow color of cream and butter. It was found that cows were not able to produce the yellow coloring matter for their cream and butter. The coloring matter must be derived from the feed. The yellow coloring matter of milk was found to be identical with a yellow coloring matter that is widely distributed in plants and fresh grass. This coloring matter is called carotin. It takes its name from the carrot, where it is very abundant, and where it was first discovered by scientists more than one hundred years ago.

The difference in the color of cream and butter in winter and spring was found to be due to the fact that the winter feeds contain little or no carotin. No marked increase in the fat percentage accompanies the increase in color when foods rich in carotin are fed. It has been shown that the average cow gives a higher per cent of fat in its milk during the winter than in the spring and summer.

BUTTERMILK GOOD FOR CALF

Feeding Value Is Practically Same as That of Skim Milk—Some Danger of Tuberculosis.

Calves can be successfully raised with buttermilk instead of skim milk, says one farmer. The feeding value of buttermilk is practically the same as that of skim milk. There is some risk of contracting contagious diseases such as tuberculosis in feeding factory buttermilk, unless the buttermilk is from pasteurized cream. For this reason skim milk is more desirable. Buttermilk should always be fed as fresh as possible so that the degree of acidity is the same.

Buttermilk may be substituted for skim milk when the calf is three weeks old. The substitution should occupy a period of a week or ten days, so that the calf is at least a month old by the time the diet consists wholly of buttermilk.

Other feeds should be used with buttermilk just the same as with skim milk. Equal parts of ground corn and either oats or bran with alfalfa or clover hay has given the best results. Calves will usually begin to nibble a little clover hay when two weeks old. They may be taught to eat grain at the same time by placing a little in the bottom of the milk bucket after feeding.

MILK MACHINE WORKS QUICK

Task of Milking Cow May Be Accomplished Rapidly and Economically—No Danger of Injury.

The Scientific American illustrates and describes a milking machine, invented by A. Truchot of Choteau, Mont., as follows:

By means of this device the milking of a cow may be accomplished rapidly and economically and with no danger of injuring the animal. The apparatus is of light weight, and is adjustable so as to permit the movement of the animal during the milking operation. The milking operation closely simulates that of manual operation.

Cost of Keeping Cow. The annual cost of keeping a cow is close to $65, if a man values his labor at 15 cents an hour. It takes a good milker to pay her way, one that produces anyway 5,000 pounds of milk a year separating out 200 pounds of butterfat.

Ventilation Is Essential. Ventilation is absolutely essential for the health of the cows, but is one of the hardest problems to solve in most barns.

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish, clog, you suffer from backache, headache, dizziness, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce, of the Buffalo Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. ## WHY "ANURIC" IS AN INSURANCE AGAINST SUDDEN DEATH!

Sufferers from Backache, Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish, clog, you suffer from backache, headache, dizziness, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce, of the Buffalo Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Send him 10 cents for sample package of his new discovery—“Anuric.” Write him your symptoms and send a sample of urine for test.

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now. Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

No Wonder They Laughed. A man in telling about a wonderful parrot hanging in a cage from a window of a house which he often passed, said:

"It cries 'Stop thief,' so naturally every time I hear it I always stop."

He couldn't understand why his friends began to laugh.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR. To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any drug store can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and remove dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv.

An irresistible impulse is one we learn to follow.

Extensive Tests Have Been Made by Entomologists of Agricultural Department.

The effectiveness of different contact poisons both alone and in combination with other substances in killing the green apple aphid has been made the subject of extensive field and laboratory tests by the entomologists of the United States department of agriculture as reported in Department Bulletin 278. Extensive experiments were made with 40 per cent nicotine sulphate, kerosene emulsion, anthracene emulsion, naphtha soap, both alone and in combinations.

In certain cases in order to provide a stomach poison in combination with an aphidicide, arsenate of lead was used in connection with the nicotine sulphate, and both arsenate of lead and arsenate of calcium were used with kerosene emulsion without lessening the killing action of the nicotine sulphate on aphides.

It was found, however, that where arsenates are combined with kerosene emulsion they should not be mixed and allowed to stand for over a day or so, since there is a slight breaking down of the soap.

According to the results of these experiments a 10 per cent kerosene emulsion should prove effective against the green apple aphid. The kerosene emulsion made either with 66 per cent stock, 10 per cent, or with naphtha soap and cold water, seemed to kill all the green apple aphids.

The 40 per cent nicotine solution, with a dilution up to 1 to 2,000 combined with soap, were likewise effective aphidicides.

Some states have cooperative producing and distributing organizations patterned after those of Sweden and Canada, but Indiana has not up to the present time undertaken anything of this sort.

Doughnuts That will remain moist.

Every housewife who bakes her own bread knows that if a little potato is added to the sponge, the bread will not dry out as quickly. In this recipe potato is utilized to make doughnuts that will remain moist and fresh for several days.

K C will be found to have distinct advantages over any other Baking Powder for doughnuts. K C is a double acting baking powder with which a large batch of doughnuts may be mixed and fried a few at a time. The last will be as light and nice as the first.

K C Potato Doughnuts By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, of Baking School fame.

3 cups flour; 2 eggs; 1 cup sugar; 1 level teaspoonful K C Baking Powder; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; 1/2 teaspoonful mace; 1 cup cold mashed potato; 1 cup milk, or more if needed.

Sift three times, the flour, salt, spice and baking powder. Beat eggs with rotary beater, then still using rotary beater, gradually add sugar, then work in the mashed potato with a spoon and alternately add milk and flour mixture. Make a soft dough, roll into a sheet, cut into rounds, pinch a hole in the center with the finger and fry in deep fat. Fat for frying should not be hot enough to brown the doughnut until it has risen. When the doughnut is dropped into the fat it sinks to the bottom. As soon as it comes up it should be turned and turned a number of times while cooking. This recipe is excellent as they do not take fat in frying and will stay moist for days.

Pays Tribute to Richard N. Hall.

Tribute was paid Sunday to the memory of Richard N. Hall, of Ann Arbor, who was killed Christmas eve, while engaged in Red Cross service in the Vosges. Memorial services were held at St. Andrew's Episcopal church at Ann Arbor.

The shot-riddled cover of the ambulance which young Hall was driving, and the flag of France which had draped his body occupied conspicuous places beside the lily-bedecked chancel and altar. A small American flag and the cross of war were pinned in the center of the French banner.

The words of tribute paid by the surgeon-in-chief at the funeral services for Hall in Alsace, were quoted by Dr. Tatlock at Sunday's ceremonies.

A slate blackboard has been put across the west end, giving more blackboard space, and also making it more convenient for use. The school house has been painted on the inside and the floors oiled. The teacher is Miss Norma Turnbull, of Chelsea.

FOR THE PUBLIC SERVICE

The Standard of Service

THIS great railroad system is owned by 30,000 stockholders. It is operated by their chosen officers for the public service.

It gives employment to 150,000 workers, to whom it pays $118,780,000 annually in wages. For supplies bought from the public it pays out in addition $96,429,454. For taxes alone, $14,293,000 and in interest and dividends on stocks, bonds and other securities held by the public it distributes $43,784,000, making a total annual disbursement in which the public has a direct interest of $273,286,454.

These railroad lines and their owners, the communities they reach, the millions they serve, and the workers they employ, all have the closest mutual interests.

The more these mutual interests are understood and furthered, the greater the degree of service rendered. To be a faithful, efficient, punctual and dependable public servant, to make every branch of its service the best possible, is the ideal and standard of the

"GRIP" HELD MANY IN STRONG GRASP

FOUR HUNDRED AND TWENTY-ONE PERSON DIED IN DECEMBER OF PNEUMONIA.

CANCER TOOK TWO HUNDRED

The Causes of Death Classified Show Pneumonia Ranked First—Births Outnumbered Deaths Two to One.

Lansing—The prevalence of the "grip" in Michigan during December, which physicians stated in many cases culminated in pneumonia, is shown by the mortality report issued by the vital statistics department of the secretary of state. It proves that 421 persons died from pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia during December, which is a record far exceeding any December in recent years.

Two hundred and thirty-nine deaths resulted from tuberculosis which is also an increase over the deaths occurring from this disease the corresponding month a year ago.

Reports to the state department show 3,061 deaths in the state during December, of which number 500 were infants under one year of age; 177 children aged one to four years; 1,272 elderly persons, aged 65 years and over.

Pneumonia ranking first in the death rate, with tuberculosis second, left cancer a close third with 196 deaths. Violence, under which accidents, etc., are classed, resulted in 174 deaths. Two deaths resulted from pellagra, while chickenpox, smallpox and poliomyelitis contributed one each.

Births outnumbered deaths nearly two to one, the reports showing 6,150 births for the month, an increase of 226 over November.

This gives a death rate of 14 per 1,000 estimated population for the state as compared to a birth rate of 23.3.

THOUSANDS PAID FAMILIES

890 Men on Parole Make Good Out of 544 Placed on Probation.

Detroit—Five hundred and forty-four men and boys were placed on probation during 1915, all but 30 coming from the recorder's courts. Of these only 19, or a little more than 3 per cent, were rearrested for crimes committed while on probation.

The men on parole from the courts, that is, men who were found guilty or pleaded guilty to various offenses, but who were not sent to prisons, earned $191,914.12 during the year. Of this amount, $52,753.80 was paid toward the support of their families. In addition to the money turned over to their earnings, $18,033.09 went to their victims in the form of restitution.

There were 818 investigations during the year. Two hundred and thirty-eight men were discharged "with improvement" and 13 without. Three hundred and thirty-one passed from probation and 16 were extended on probation. Six hundred and thirty-eight were on probation January 1, 1916, an increase of 213 over the year before.

DIFFERENCE PAID BY STATE

Substitute Judges to Get Paid Salaries of Districts.

Lansing—In an opinion to Auditor-General Fuller, Attorney-General Fellows says that under the presiding judge act, passed at the last session of the legislature, a judge sent from a district where the salary is $3,500 per year into a circuit where a higher salary is paid, is entitled to the additional compensation paid in the district where he is temporarily holding court, and the difference is to be paid by the state.

CARRANZA GAVE SAFETY PLEDGE

MEXICAN OFFICERS TOLD SLAIN MEN THAT NO MILITARY GUARD WAS NEEDED.

GENERAL PASSPORT GIVEN

Government Agents Believe That General Villa Directed the Massacre of Americans.

Washington—Facts accumulated at the state department concerning the massacre of the 17 Americans and one Canadian near Santa Ysabel by Villa's bandits, completely disprove the original statements from the department and the White House, tending to show that the Americans went into the bandit-infested district regardless of warnings.

These facts, summed up in a lengthy report from Collector of Customs Cobb at El Paso and a brief dispatch from American Consul Edwards at Juarez, show: That Consul Edwards, acting on what he declares to have been instructions from Washington, applied for and obtained from the Carranza authorities assurances of protection for the properties of the Cusi Mining company, near Santa Ysabel, to which the Americans were proceeding when slain. C. R. Watson, manager of the company who was among those slain, obtained from the Mexican immigration authorities at Juarez a general passport covering all members of the party and from the Carranza governor of Chihuahua a personal passport for himself. The Carranza authorities at Chihuahua assured Watson that it was perfectly safe for him to resume operations at the mines as they had sent a garrison of 1,000 soldiers to guard the properties at Cusi.

At the state department there was a complete lack of unanimity among officials as to the accuracy of Consul Edwards' statement that he had received instructions to get protection for the Cusi Mining company's mining properties. According to Secretary Lansing, such instructions, as far as he has been able to ascertain, were never sent. Other officials said just as positively that they were sent, but were intended only to cover the properties of the company and were not sent for the purpose of getting assurances that Americans returning to these properties would be specially protected.

The First Bellicent to Withdraw From the War.

London—Surrounded on the north, east and west by Austro-Hungarian armies and with all lines of retreat cut off, except into Albania, where hostile tribesmen must be faced, Montenegro has asked Austria-Hungary for peace, and her request has been granted. The unconditional laying down of arms by Montenegro was made the basis of the opening of peace negotiations, and Montenegro accepted these terms imposed by the dual monarchy.

This announcement was made to the Hungarian parliament by Premier Tisza, and it met with an ovation on the part of the members of the cabinet. Thus comes the first withdrawal of any belligerent from either of the alliances that have been fighting each other since August, 1914.

The National Guard bill of Senator Cummings, provides for a peace strength of 400,000, which would be doubled in war time. Three-year enlistments, three times the camp maneuver and rifle practice now required, no obligation to perform police duty after 1920 and conversion of six army posts into federal schools for reserve officers, are their principal features.

Admiral Frank Fletcher, commanding the Atlantic fleet, does not consider the United States navy as at present constituted an efficient weapon for defense. Admiral Fletcher, it is learned, declares that the enlisted personnel of the navy is far too small; that there is a lamentable scarcity of highly trained officers, hardly a ship in the navy having sufficient complement, and sets forth in specific detail radical technical cruisers, the report declares, would permit almost any enemy to land an army.

During the six months ending December 31, the value of exports passing through the port of Port Huron was $22,821,377, with imports valued at $62,038.29. These figures are a big increase over the same period a year ago, because of the amount of war supplies passing through here for the allies.

CARFERRY HELD FAST IN ICE

PERE MARQUETTE NO. 19 STRANDED AND 17 MEN OUT OF 40 LANDED.

WITHIN 300 FEET OF SHORE

The Steamer Has Nineteen Loaded and Eight Empty Cars—There Were No Passengers Aboard.

Ludington—Braving one of the fiercest storms of the winter, the crew of the Ludington coastguard tossed for four hours over mountainous seas in a blinding snow storm and landed safely on shore 17 of the crew of 40 of the stranded car ferry Pere Marquette No. 19.

It was a spectacular rescue. With ice banks lining the shore and the surf breaking in angry billows, the coastguard, drenched to the skin, worked in the bitter cold until nearly exhausted.

On board the car ferry 40 men hovered about the galley stove for 14 hours, to keep from freezing, after the big steam pipe broke due to the steamers' heavy pounding. The broken pipe left the boat without power or heat and shut off wireless communication.

Although No. 19 lay within 300 feet of shore at almost identically the same spot where car ferry Pere Marquette No. 17 stranded in January, 1908, the captain of the coastguard elected to use the surfboat instead of the breeches buoy. With the greatest difficulty the surfboat was launched while the crew were showered with icy water. They had made two trips landing 17 of the car ferry's crew when darkness fell. To remove more in the dark seemed perilous and the work of rescue was abandoned.

The car ferry is in no danger of going to pieces, but the remaining members of the crew will suffer great discomfort through another night. There is nothing they can do, the car ferry being firmly imbedded in the sand. After stranding her weather deadlights were broken in by the seas which flooded the engine room. The steamer has 19 loaded and eight empty cars aboard which will have to be jettisoned before the ferry is released. The damage is estimated at $75,000. There were no passengers aboard the stranded boat.

The passengers who did not land at Falmouth will remain on board in accordance with official instructions.

SALTS IF BACKACHE OR KIDNEYS TROUBLE YOU

Eat Less Meat If Your Kidneys Aren't Acting Right or If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

"Play Ball, Never Mind the Shells." The German artillery were doing their best to erase a small town from the map, says a war correspondent. Every few minutes there would be a deafening crash and the remains of a house would soar skywards enveloped in a cloud of smoke.

In a field in the outskirts of the town some Canadian soldiers, relieved from the trenches for a few days, were indulging in their favorite game of baseball. The pitcher had just pitched the ball and the batsman had hit an easy catch to one of the fielders when a huge shell landed in the adjoining field. The fielder's attention was fixed on the shell, which burst with a deafening crash, and he missed the catch.

"For the love of Mike," roared the pitcher, "if you are going to play baseball, play baseball, and quit watching the shells."

Mother Explains. "My dear," said Mr. Hemandhaw, "I hope you are not planning to buy a lot of new furniture." "I am not," replied Mrs. Hemandhaw, "and I don't know what gives you the idea."

"This shopping list gives me the idea." "What shopping list?" "On this paper, which I just picked up off the floor, is written: 'Washstand, parlor chairs, dining-room table, writing desk, refrigerator, taboret, piano stool, pedestal, step-ladder, cedar chest, music cabinet and garbage can.' 'Oh, that is just a record I was keeping of the things the baby has fallen from this week.'—Judge.

No Time to Spare. "Now that the football season is over and it's rather too early for baseball, I guess our boy at college will be able to do a little studying," said Mrs. Dubwaite. "I'm afraid not," answered Mr. Dubwaite. "He writes me that his social duties have been badly neglected."

On the Road to Teheran

WHERE THE RAILWAY CROSSES THE EUPHRATES

RUSSIA'S new route, a railway route into Persia, has become of vast importance to the warring nations. This new line, planned and constructed just prior to the war, when Russia's interest reached out beyond southern Transcaucasia into the northern parts of the weakening and wildly-governed territories of the shah, is described in a bulletin of the National Geographic society. As roads in Transcaucasia are built upon the Spanish principle of keeping people off of them, this line of track has a most important bearing upon the maintenance of order at the boundary.

There are two routes from Europe to Teheran. One through Russia to Baku, the oil city on the Caspian, thence by steamer to Resht, and, finally, by road to the Persian capital, a road built and kept up by Russia. This route is the older route. The second way, made possible by railway construction through southern Transcaucasia, is the product of recent Russian labors. The traveler by this route sets out from Tiflis, the capital of the Caucasus, takes a train south over Alexanderopol and Erivan, thence to Nakhichevan, the first city founded by Noah after abandoning the ark upon neighboring Ararat, and, passing down the valley of the Araxes, where the Armenians place Eden, he passes the international boundary at Djulf. From here the traveler goes by another Russian road to Tabriz.

Not Pleasant Traveling. Conditions of travel upon the Nakhichevan railway are very discouraging to people inexperienced in Russian branch lines. The trains seldom arrive or leave anywhere according to schedule, and their progress is delib-

Persian border, the country becomes desolate. Stations are few, and for the most part are mere wooden sheds or disused freight cars. Gaping Tartar and Persian throngs lounge before them to see the occasional trains pass. At all stations one sees the frontier-guarding Cossacks and the blue-clothed Russian police. At each station the train of peace-time stopped at least half an hour, and often longer. From Ulukhanli, the interior end of this last lap of the border railway, to Djulf is a distance of about 145 miles. Tabriz Old and Monotonous. Tabriz is a city whose age and birthplace are unknown; for, like Moses, it was found in the bulrushes of the Dark Ages, a thing of some maturity then but of uncertain antecedents. It is the commercial center of Azarbaijan, and it is the most important window of Persia toward the west. One tradition ascribes its founding to Zobeidah, the wife of Harun al Rashid, the caliph of the Arabian Nights. This date is probably much too late a one, as those who know Tabriz count a thousand years but a fraction of the city's life.

It is a monotonous expanse of flat-roof, single-story houses, strewn haphazardly over the plain. The buildings are dull in appearance and constructed of clay and mud plaster, the outer walls windowless and almost unadorned. Unpainted, heavy wooden doors, studded with nails, form the entrance ways; and, within, the houses face upon their exclusive brick and plaster courts. In the distance a fringe of mountains, here and there rising in majestic cones, relieves the tedium of the dull-colored, heavy-featured city.

As in the earliest times, so today erate in the extreme. The way lies through a country intensely hot during a great part of the year, and the cars used on the line are constructed after the most advantageous manner for catching and retaining all possible heat. Moreover, the fares are cheap and the way is patronized heavily by swarms of Asiatics, malodorous and neighborly.

The trains, in pre-war days, had a way of leaving important stations between three and six o'clock in the morning. The wayside stations were miserable shanties, where wild confusion reigned. Buying tickets at the small hovels which housed the ticket offices meant the business of a free-for-all fight in the midst of a jostling crew of excited Orientals. Moreover, one must go with the crowd on this line to the Persian border, because no first-class carriages are operated thereon. Among other drawbacks, one soon has the knowledge forced upon him that his fellow-passengers are verminous.

The cars are dirty. They are old, uncomfortable, and ill-ventilated. The seats are narrow and covered with white canvas, the covering usually turned brown and yellow with accumulations of evidence from the hands and clothing of the railway's patrons. The third-class cars resemble the American box-car, only they are much smaller. Both the second-class and the third-class cars are generally packed as tightly as space will permit.

Much of the scenery along the way is very beautiful. The way through the Araxes valley, wide at first and farther on, narrowing between ridging mountains, lies in the beginning through an inviting country of vineyard and orchard. Farther toward the walls surround Tabriz, without which gardens, vineyards and orchards thrive. This region has long been famous for its fruits and vegetables, though they are not grown in abundance. Within the city's walls there is a mysterious labyrinth of streets, narrow, winding passages, side alleys and blind paths. The streets in most cases are unpaved, and the snow and the slush of winter, and the dust and dirt of summer, are allowed to collect and freely remain upon them. In some cases cobblestones have been laid, but mostly this pavement serves only to add to the misery of the way. People make their way about the city at night carrying huge cylindrical lanterns made of thin muslin.

There is one interesting architectural monument in this northern Persian city, and that is the Ark or Citadel, which dominates the town. It is a massive structure, built of red brick artistically set, and its battlements rise more than 100 feet in height, while its walls are fully 20 feet in thickness. It is a solemn pile and a gloomy one.

There are 318 mosques in Tabriz among them the wonderful blue mosque, known as Masjid-i Rabud. This specimen of Mohammedan architecture is falling to decay, though it still claims a full meed of admiration from the visiting Westerner.

The bazaars of Tabriz are well known in the East. They are of the characteristic Oriental type, consisting of many miles of narrow archways, where light and air are excluded, and smells and darkness religiously kept in. The shops are situated in alcoves along the ways, while crowds of purchasers on donkeys and on foot block all the passages.

Gathered Smiles

ECCENTRICITIES OF GENIUS.

"And whose little boy are you?" asked the benevolent but near-sighted professor of a small boy he noticed walking along at his side.

"Why, I'm your little boy, father. Don't you know me?"

"Well, well! So you are!" exclaimed the professor, peering into the child's face. "And what are you doing so far from home?"

"You told me to come along with you and carry something home to mother."

"Dear me! So I did. And—hum—what was it now your mother wanted?"

'Twas Ever Thus.

Bridegroom (in parlor car)—Darling, you seem sad. Is it possible that you already regret the step you have taken?

Bride—No, dearest; it isn't that. I am only worried, that's all.

Bridegroom—Worried! Why, my angel, what can you have to worry about?

Bride—I've been trying to remember something we might have forgotten, and I can't.

Fortified Sentiment.

"Is your wife disappointed because she didn't get the vote?"

"I don't think so. The defeat of woman suffrage has merely strengthened her conviction that men are political failures and serves to prolong the interest of the campaign."—Washington Star.

Different.

"They say marriage is a lottery," remarked the morose young man.

"It isn't," replied Miss Cayenne. "In a lottery you can go on buying tickets."

UNPREPARED.

Toucher—Have you a little ready money?

T. Wadd—What I have come to me so slowly that I hardly think it's ready to go.

A Painful Poem.

In haste she tried to drive a nail,
But the next time she will linger;
Then perhaps she'll miss the one
That's growing on her finger.

Sees the End.

Excited Lady—Why don't you interfere to stop that dog-fight?
Bystander—I was just a-goin' to, mum; but you kin calm y'r fears now, My dog is on top at last, mum.

Naturally So.

Thoughtless Maiden—You naval officers are very fond of your ships, aren't you?
Young Officer—Well, I must confess, we are attached to them.

Still at It.

"What's become of the old-fashioned man who put the worship of Mammon and the Demon Rum in the same category?"

"I heard him make a speech only yesterday."

"Yes?"

"He was flaying a distinguished apostle of preparedness."

Endless Procession.

"Here's a man says the devil is smarter than all of humanity put together."

"A veritable Goliath, eh?"

"Just so."

"Well, men are certainly brave. Plenty of young fellows are willing to tackle him single handed."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Expensive Toy.

"Get any speed out of that car?" asked the inquisitive friend.

"Sure," answered the discouraged motorist; "but for the most part it's the kind you can't see."

"What do you mean?"

"I was referring to the rapidity with which it is running me into debt."

Evasive.

"What do you think of the pretty nurse who sold a kiss to aid the war fund at $200?"

"I think every woman who thinks anything of herself ought to set her face against such an act."

A Frequent One.

"Did you ever realize on that investment of yours?"

"Oh, yes."

"What did you realize?"

"What a fool I was ever to go into it."

NOT YET.

"I didn't think you'd refuse me after saying so often that you'd share your last dollar with me."

"And I will; but I'm not down to my last dollar yet."

Impacts.

How oft our fond intentions flit
And lead us to a slump;
How oft we try to make a hit
And only get a bump!

Easily Settled.

The great magazine editor had just addressed a strong editorial to infants.

"But, sir," his assistant timidly pointed out, "some infants can't read."

"I thought of that," vouchsafed the great man. "Their mothers can read it to them."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Mere Detail.

"Let me see," said the judge. "I know you. Are not you the man who was married in a cage of man-eating lions?"

"Yes, your honor," replied the culprit. "I'm the man."

"Exciting, wasn't it?" continued the justice.

"Well," said the man judicially, "it was then; it wouldn't be now."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Unkind.

"I understand he inherited a fortune?"

"Yes, he was his rich uncle's only heir."

"I thought so."

"What do you mean?"

"Nobody who had more than one heir to choose from would have picked him out to leave all his money to."

Ailing Husband.

Young Wife—I am so worried about Jack. He had an attack of vertigo last night and fell over the hall rack!

Old Wife—Sad, sad! Another case of 'didn't know it was loaded.'"

A Breach.

Binks—Young Mr. Flighhigh is certainly a man of promise.

Jinks—So I hear. I understand Miss Butterfly is suing him for fifty thousand.—Judge.

His Advantage.

"A glove dealer ought invariably to please his customers."

"Why necessarily?"

"Hasn't he always stock to please them on hand?"

Hardly Synonymous.

Omar—I say, old chap, can you let me have ten dollars for a day?

Parker—No, but I can let you have a dollar for ten days. Same thing, you know.

GETTING EVEN.

"My brother made ugly faces at your brother yesterday and he didn't darst fight. He pretended he didn't notice 'em."

"He didn't, neither. He thought they was natural."

Work.

No man can leap into success
Within a single minute;
Each victory has more or less
Of work behind of in it.

Skill Recognized.

"What wonderful performers there are in that orchestra!" exclaimed Mrs. Curox.

"Wonderful isn't the word," replied Mr. Curox. "They're almost superhuman. Why, they sound to me as if they could take a tune and play it backward as easily as they could forward."

Spring Wash Dresses for Children

Early in January the new things for spring in children's wear are presented by their designers, and the home sewing is soon under way. Fabrics and styles are at hand for the consideration of the home dressmaker, and she may anticipate the spring and earn leisure in summer by getting much of the spring sewing out of the way in the middle of winter.

There are many pretty new models in frocks for little girls, including school and play dresses and those for afternoon and little party frocks, that it is more of a pleasure than a task to make. A gingham dress, for every day, and a linen suit for dress-up, designed for the girl of ten years, are shown in the picture given here, and they are well worth while copying exactly as they are.

The gingham dress is a small plaid pattern, with tan and soft darker colorings crossed with very narrow bars in black. It is cut with a novel yoke which drops at each side of the front and slopes down to the waist line at the sides. The shape is the same at the back.

The skirt portion is plaited into the yoke at the back and sides and partly across the front. But at the center the fullness is taken up by shirrings. The neck is cut round, with a shallow "V" opening at the front and finished with a small sailor collar of plain tan linen. The edges of the collar and the cuffs that match it are finished with buttonhole stitching in heavy linen floss. Deep blue and black are the colors used for the stitching, and they repeat the blue and black of the fabric.

A girdle of narrow black velvet ribbon is worn with the frock, slipped through narrow straps of the gingham, which are sewed to the dress below the waist line. The girdle is fastened under a small bow at the back and is simply slipped out when the dress is laundered.

The white linen frock has a plaited skirt with a panel at the front and shallow plaits at each side. It is set on to a plain waist of organdie, cut with round neck finished with a narrow band. It fastens down the front with small crocheted buttons. The short linen jacket is scalloped and embroidered by hand about the edges, and the sailor collar and narrow turned-back cuffs are made to match it. The girdle is of black velvet, fastening at the back under a small flat bow.

Colored linens as well as white are used for this model, but white is the most satisfactory in the long run.

New Neckwear.

One of the unusual new stocks is made with the outside cut deep enough to turn down quite on the shoulders. It could be made of batiste or linen, silk or any material approved, so it is "kept soft." The turnover part naturally turns away at the throat from the stock proper and it wrinkles a bit, which is part of its charm.

A new igniter for gas stoves that produces sparks by friction is operated like a pair of shears.

In the Realm of Ribbons

A fascinating vanity bag and one of the new "vanity" corsage bouquets are the latest of those pretty conceits that are made of ribbons. They are always alluring and more full of delight than ever when they combine a little usefulness with much beauty. This both of the trifles pictured contrive to do.

The small round bag is made of lavender satin ribbon with a mirror used for the bottom, having the glass side out. The ribbon forms a frame for it, shirred about the edge. At the top the bag is edged with gold lace, and gold lace braid is festooned about it under a second festoon of small ribbon flowers. It is closed with lavender silk cords, which end in small disks made of the cord.

The "vanity" corsage is a bunch of deep purple violets simulated in narrow satin ribbon, with a lifelike orchid of silk embedded in them. In the heart of the orchid is hidden a tiny box of compact powder and a powder puff. This bit of artifice is disclosed, to the delight of everyone, when the wearer of the bouquet improves her complexion by looking to the flower for aid.

The stems of the flowers are tied with dark green satin ribbon. One loop of it forms a small bag which carries a little mirror, furnishing my lady with all the necessary first aids to the complexion.

Julia Botwin

Variegated Colors.

The fashion of vivid colors on the head has launched a mass of variegated velvet hats to be worn with somber tailored suits on the street, and in a more subdued form with afternoon gowns. The velvet in these turbans is very supple and silky and is pulled up and out into irregular folds. Right in this manipulation rests the skill of the milliner and the resultant beauty of the hat. Ornamentation is allowed, but it must be gently done. A spray of cut steel fashioned in some fragile form can be used on the crown to hold flowers, and butterflies that have appeared on the flat-back velvet sailors are not used on the turbans. There are silverettes, but they do not cause sorrow or annoyance from the onlooker because it is realized that they are old ones.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at your druggist or from the store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—Adv.

Brutal Frankness.

"I came within an ace of having a fight with a pacifist this morning."

"You surprise me. Evidently he was not sincere."

"Oh, yes. That was the trouble. We were both sincere. I told him exactly what I thought of a pacifist and he proceeded to tell me exactly what he thought of an apostle of preparedness."

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged, with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again. Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Of a Kind.

"I wish Evelyn hadn't gone rowing with that young De Swift. He is a fool in a boat."

"Rock-the-boat idiot?"

"No. Not that kind. He is one of the sort that proposes."

SAVED MINISTER'S LIFE.

Rev. W. H. Warner, Frederick, Md., writes: "My trouble was Sciatica. My back was affected and took the form of Lumbago. I also had Neuralgia, cramps in my muscles, pressure or sharp pain on the top of my head and nervous dizzy spells. I had other symptoms showing that my Kidneys were at fault, so I took Dodd's Kidney Pills. They were the means of saving my life."
