Koch-Frey Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Eva Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Koch of Lima, and Wm. E. Frey of Ann Arbor took place Saturday, January 29, 1916, at Zion parsonage, Rogers Corners, Rev. E. Thelme officiating.

The attendants were Miss Eda Koch, twin sister of the bride, and Reuben Frey, brother of the groom. Following the ceremony, supper was served at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple are well known in Lima and Ann Arbor.

After remaining a few days at the bride's home, Mr. and Mrs. Frey went to Ann Arbor, where they will be at home to their friends at 220 South Thayer street. The best wishes of a host of friends go with them.

Rural Route Changes.

The changes in the rural routes that were promised some time ago have been made by the postoffice department, and the order was received by Postmaster Hummel last Friday. The changes are scheduled to take effect February 10th.

Carrier No. 1 has had about one-half mile added to his route, and will have to go north on the road from the Freer corner in Lima and return. This was taken from Carrier No. 2, whose route was one mile longer than the original order from Washington showed.

Carrier No. 3 will go east from the cement works to G. W. Coe's residence and retrace.

Carrier No. 4 will go from Bert West's through Sylvan Center, thence to the railroad and east where he will join the present route just west of E. A. Ward's residence.

These changes do not give but very little relief to the changes made last October, and returns but one patron to the Chelsea office, of the many who were picked up by the nape of the neck and dropped into other offices far away from their trading point.

A Couple of Communications.

Chelsea, Mich., Jan. 30, 1916.
Mr. Wm. Bacon, Village President,
Dear Sir:—I see that you have recently ordered all punch boards, penny machines, etc., removed. Now, Mr. President, this is all right; but while you did this much, why didn't you go further and see that the saloons open and close according to the state law?—that is, open at 7 a. m. and close at 9 p. m.

Kindly bring this up at the next board meeting, and if they can't do anything perhaps Gov. Ferris could.

A GOOD CITIZEN.

Chelsea, Feb. 1, 1916.

To the Citizens of Chelsea:

The above was received by me as president of the Village of Chelsea. I wish to say whoever wrote this is telling a falsehood, because, if he is a "good citizen" he would not be ashamed to sign his name.

We are not under the state law. I cannot change the hours of opening and closing saloons, neither can Governor Ferris. We make our own laws as a Village Corporation. I know there are those "good citizens" who say they want certain things done, but when you ask them to make a complaint they tell you they do not want to make the other fellow sore, but they don't care how many "sore" I make.

I think if our "good citizen" will look around in other villages the size of Chelsea he will say our saloons keep nearer the law than most of the other villages. I am not advocating the saloon, but it must be understood that even the saloon-keeper has rights which we are bound to respect, whether we like it or not.

I was not elected to play detective. If any citizen has any complaint to make, give me the evidence, and if, after investigation, I find your complaint is good I will proceed to prosecute.

I have tried to do my duty as an official. I know I cannot please everybody. I am not "saint." If I were I would not be here to be troubled with these "good citizens" who will not sign their names to their communications.

Yours very respectfully,
WILLIAM BACON,
Pres. of the Village of Chelsea.

"The Birth of a Nation."

David W. Griffith's most extraordinary achievement with his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Majestic, Jackson, February 10, 11, 12, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history—slavery, the war of secession, the surrender at Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of reconstruction, and the reconciliation of the North and the South.

These things, it would have seemed a year ago, were beyond the scope of the motion picture camera. But the master producer has successfully combined, in 12,000 feet of celluloid, a thrilling, consecutive presentation of national greatness with a vital and human love story. According to experts who have viewed the work, Griffith has not only surpassed in many ways the art of the "indoor" theatre, but he has also developed a new art-form far superior to the old-fashioned history or historical novel.

A very eminent public man has nicknamed it "history by lightning."

Eighteen thousand people were employed in taking the historical pictures. One sees Lincoln among his counsellors issuing the call for troops, the battles of the conflict, Sherman's march, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appomattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the South in the throes of change, the carpetbaggers' excesses, and the famous ride of the K. K. K. Parties of war veterans and sons of veterans are coming in great numbers to witness the production. It is difficult for many of them to refrain from shouting the old war-cries or from shuffling the feet to the rhythm of the martial music. Scenes in the latter half of the picture are so skillfully managed, the interest is so tensely maintained, that often the applause is practically continuous for half to three-quarters of an hour.

"Cabira" and "Quo Vadis" marked great steps forward in the screen drama. "The Birth of a Nation" points a still more wonderful development. The epic method of narration has been adopted. Enormous ranges of time and space are covered. All the arts contribute to the spectacular realization of poetry, history and romance. In the 5,000 scenes of the pictures there are said to be 200,000 historical details. Besides the achievement of the picture itself, the exhibition of it employs 100 flesh and blood helpers at each performance.

Theatrical producers and observers are wondering what will be the next evolution. Will the motion picture replace the textbook in the public schools? Will the Walter Scott's and the W. M. Thackeray's of the future do pictures instead of novels? Will the historian be replaced by the camera man, and the still life painter by one who like Griffith can turn out hundreds of Rembrandt, Corot and Turner-like scenes in an evening's entertainment?

Some of these queries seem daring now, even grotesque. Yet in view of what is happening around us, it is hard—nay, impossible—to set any limits to the future achievements of the motion pictures.

POWER COMPANIES AND BOND ISSUES

A REQUEST THAT WILL GET MORE INVESTIGATION THAN CONSTANTINE.

A FLUSHING CASE COMES UP

When the Hearing Was About Closed a Startling Change of Values Was Shown Holding the Grant Up.

Lansing—Before the Hart Milling & Power Co. of Flushing, is authorized a $50,000 bond issue to cover debts incurred during a period of several years, the corporation will have to pay for an appraisal made by Dean Copley, of the University of Michigan. Such was the outcome of a hearing held before the state railroad commission when the Flushing company, represented by its secretary and treasurer, Robert O. Hart, and an attorney, appeared to ask authority from the state commission.

A difference of values of property claimed by the promoters of the company to have been worth $15,000 in 1905 and now claimed to be worth $76,000, an innocent statement filed with the secretary of state back in 1905, all went to place the company on a footing which C. L. Glasgow, railroad commissioner who conducted the hearing, wanted to know more about before a bond issue was authorized.

When statements were taken and the hearing about closed, Commissioner Glasgow produced the statement showing the $15,000 valuation. This took the attorney completely off his guard, and the situation terminated in Glasgow telling them to get an appraisal by a disinterested party. The company stated an appraisal would show the properties worth upwards of $100,000 and are confident they will yet receive the authorization for the $50,000 bond issue.

Since the Constantine matter has been so widely discussed the commission has asked the attorney general for a right to deny a bond issue if the properties are worth what the appraisal shows, yet the commission is convinced the investment will never pay.

Inspector Calkins has returned from Constantine and will report to the commission that the property was worth the amount the appraisal showed, it to be, but that the stream furnishing the water to generate the power was inadequate, hence the failure of the company to make good. If the law is not now broad enough to allow the commission to investigate these matters, the law may be amended to permit such action. A corporation may be formed, a $1,000,000 bond issue authorized on lands worth double that amount, yet inadequate water power facilities would mean a dismal failure for the concern. Commissioner Glasgow says the law should be changed if it does not now allow such investigation. The attorney-general's opinion will clear up this phase of the situation.

DR. ANGELL NEARLY BLIND

Wrote One Hundred Letters in One Day and Is Very Ill.

Ann Arbor—Dr. James B. Angell, president emeritus of University of Michigan, is confined to his bed and is reported to be in a seriously weakened condition as a result of overwork in attempting to answer several hundred congratulatory letters received on his 87th birthday, January 7.

As had been his custom for many years, Dr. Angell conducted his correspondence in longhand, answering 100 letters the day following his birthday. As a result of strain, his eyes gave way. A stronger pair of glasses gave relief for a few hours, but they too failed and "Michigan's grand old man" now is virtually blind.

Attending physicians say Dr. Angell may recover his sight and his illness is reported by them as not critical at this time.

U. S. REFUSES TO ARBITRATE

HAS COMPLETELY SHUT OFF LUSITANIA SETTLEMENT.

SITUATION TERMED GRAVE

"Vital Interests and National Honor" of the United States Being Involved.

Washington—The United States has completely shut off any hope of a settlement of the Lusitania case with Germany through the machinery of international arbitration.

The fact, obtained from an official source, indicates the extent to which Secretary Lansing has gone in his demand for an unconditional disavowal by Germany. The refusal to arbitrate, it was learned, was based on the ground that the "vital interests and national honor" of the United States being involved, the matter was one that could not be submitted to arbitration.

It was the second time such a proposal had been turned down and it was rejected finally at the last conference that the secretary of state had with Ambassador von Bernstorff. The first proposition was made soon after the Lusitania was sunk. At that time it was rejected on the ground that the United States had no assurance that pending an arbitral decision by The Hague court, to which Germany proposed to submit the dispute, Germany would not continue sinking merchant vessels without warning.

Subsequently, however, Germany informed the United States that she had rescinded her former orders to submarine commanders and that henceforth the rules of international law requiring due warning and care for the safety of passengers and crews would be strictly followed.

MOTHER INSTANTLY KILLED

Daughter Has Fractured Skull in Motor Hold-up.

Buffalo—Two persons were murdered, another probably fatally injured and a fourth severely beaten up in an automobile hold-up on the Orchard Park road near this city. Several hours elapsed before the city and county authorities were informed of the crime, and the assailants made good their escape.

The victims, prominent Buffalo residents, and members of the same family were:

Mrs. Nancy C. Teiper, aged 65, shot in head and instantly killed.

Frederick C. Teiper, son, aged 24, beaten to death with blunt instrument.

Grace C. Teiper, daughter, aged 20, skull fractured, will die.

Edward E. Teiper, son, aged 26, beaten on head and left senseless on road.

The family was returning from Orchard Park and had stopped the car a short distance south of the Terminal railroad crossing. There the party was set upon by the hold-up men. Mrs. Teiper was killed by the first of four shots fired. The men then clubbed the others, and after robbing them of money and jewelry, fled.

Of the 65 factories producing the big 1914 total, 15 were in Michigan, 13 in Colorado; 12 in California, 7 in Utah, 4 in Idaho, 3 in Wisconsin, 3 in Ohio, 2 in Nebraska and 1 each in Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Montana and Kansas.

P. M. CANNOT RAISE FARE

Court Upholds Two-Cent Fare Rate and Prevents a Raise.

Detroit—The Pere Marquette railroad cannot charge more than two cents a mile passenger fare in Michigan, according to a decision filed in the United States court Monday morning by Federal Judges Denison, Knapman and Sessions.

The decision denies the motion of Beekman Winthrop, Frederick Winthrop and Charles Cox, individuals, and the Farmers' Trust & Loan Co., for a temporary injunction restraining Grant Fellows, attorney general for the state, and the railroad commission from enforcing the two-cent fare law.

Some years ago when the Pere Marquette was earning more than the prescribed $1,200 per mile, the fare rate was reduced by the railroad commission from three to two cents. The petitioners contended that the road does not earn $1,200 a mile now and the fare should be increased to three cents.

The decision is regarded as important, as it may have a serious bearing on the reorganization of the road. It may also have a bearing on the decision in regard to the Ann Arbor railroad, which is seeking to restrain the state from enforcing the law requiring two-cent fares.

Berlin—"A German squadron, dropped a large number of incendiary bombs on and near the Liverpool and Birkenhead docks, harbor and factories; also on the Manchester iron works and Black blast furnaces, and on the Nottingham and Sheffield factories and blast furnaces, and finally on a large number of industrial establishments on the Fumbar and near Great Yarmouth (Norfolk).

"At all these places a powerful effect was observed from heavy explosions and most serious fires. On the Humber one battery was silenced.

"The airships were heavily fired upon from all points but were not hit. All the airships, in spite of the enemy's efforts, returned in safety."

GERMANS BRING IN LINER

Appam Given Up for Lost Arrives at U. S. Port.

Norfolk, Va.—Given up for lost days ago, the British passenger liner Appam, plying in the West African trade, sailed like an apparition in Hampton Roads flying the German naval ensign and with her ship's company under guard of a German prize crew.

She brought word of a mysterious German commerce raider, the Moewe, which now roams the seas, and had on board the crews of seven British merchantmen and admiralty transports captured by the Moewe before she seized the Appam and started her across the Atlantic for an American port with Lieutenant Hans Berge, of the German naval reserve, and 22 men in charge.

20,000 ACRES UNDER WATER

Seventy-five Convicts Are Surrounded By Water.

Little Rock—Fourche river dam, 10 miles from Little Rock, has collapsed and 20,000 acres of the finest land in the state are under water.

Hundreds of Negroes have fled for safety. County Judge Joe Asher wired the war department at Washington for permission to use government dredgeboats for relief.

Fourche land is a strip of land between the Arkansas and Fourche rivers, 10 miles long and four miles wide. About 75 convicts on the Pulaski county convict farm are surrounded by water.

All the convicts on the state farm at Cummins, Ark., will be removed to Little Rock on a special train.

DAILY THE DAIRY

NEGLECT VALUE OF RECORDS

Cow Bought at Low Price Not Always Best Investment—Best to Keep Track of Food and Milk.

Is the cheaper-priced dairy cow necessarily the better investment? The question is well answered in the following instance: A man wishing a cow for dairy purposes called upon a dairyman who kept milk records as well as cost accounts. The buyer confined his attention to two cows. One of these would cost him $75, the other $175. The former was in good condition, but the dairy characteristics were not as fully developed as they might have been; the latter was the

Charting the Arctic Archipelago

AFTER a cruise of more than 4,000 miles through the Arctic archipelago, during which he placed on the map many new islands, bays and promontories, Capt. Joseph E. Bernier has returned to warmer climes.

During eleven years of Arctic exploration this hardy skipper has charted over 500,000 square miles of islands in the great northern archipelago and has discovered many records of Arctic expeditions, including documents left by ill-fated mariners, and pieces of wreckage, grim reminders of craft that went down in the Arctic seas, writes C. H. Dorr in the New York Sun.

Captain Bernier has left a record of his own work in various places, to guide future explorers. If Vilhjalmur Stefansson, leader of the Canadian Arctic expedition, now in the polar regions, happens to reach Winter Harbor, Melville island, he will find there a substantial cache built several years ago by Captain Bernier, and well stocked with provisions, enough to last him a year or more. Captain Bernier established many of these caches or life-saving stations in the polar regions, for he knows by experience the needs of Arctic explorers.

Relics of Former Explorers. On his last voyage Captain Bernier started from Pond's inlet, Baffin's island, with the exploring ship Guide and a crew of ten men and an equipment including forty dogs and sledges. While voyaging through Arctic seas two of his crew found parts of the hull of one of the vessels of Sir Edward Belcher from regions to the westward, and comparison showed that these specimens were of the same type as the diatoms brought from Cape Wadum, in Asia.

"The finding of these diatoms proved that a passage existed from the Pacific to the Atlantic, but did not indicate the time it took to pass through from sea to sea. Later an American harpoon was found by an English whaler in the Atlantic Arctic sea, which proved also that there was a passage by which a whale could go through.

"Then later on wreckage of the Jeannette and some part of the clothing of two members of the Jeannette's crew came ashore on the west coast of Greenland at Julianehaab. This proved to me that if the Jeannette had not been lost she would have drifted into the Atlantic ocean in about four years and a half. It also proved that there is a passage from ocean to ocean.

"When the Fram was caught in the ice she drifted into the Atlantic ocean from the Pacific, which also proved my theory of a free passage. When Admiral Melville and President Bryant of the Philadelphia Geographical society placed casks in Bering strait and set them adrift they demonstrated the time it took to pass from ocean to ocean.

"Now the last link in my theory is illustrated by the wreck of the Karluk, Stefansson's ship, which was caught in the ice off Point Barrow. It was not a good place to start, but she drifted in a short time to latitude 73 north, and would have completed her voyage to the Atlantic in about four years, be-

EFFECTIVE CONTROL OF SAN JOSE SCALE

San Jose Scale—Blossom End of Pear Showing Scale, With Larvae and Adult Lady Beetles Feeding on Them—A, Adult Beetle; B, Larva; C, Pupa. (All Enlarged.)

(By LEONARD HASEMAN, University of Missouri, College of Agriculture.)

The most effective and economical method we have at present for the control of the San Jose scale in the orchard is to spray with one of the best scale-destroying washes in the fall or early spring. There are a number of washes which are entirely effective when properly applied. These may be grouped in two main divisions—oil and lime-sulphur washes.

In some respects the oil washes have advantages over the lime-sulphur, while in other respects the latter has marked advantages. The oil washes are applied more easily, spread more evenly and creep down into cracks and crevices, where it is difficult to force the lime-sulphur wash. It takes less of an oil wash to cover the same surface and the average fruit grower is likely to spray more thoroughly with the oil washes, especially if he does not "retouch" trees sprayed with lime-sulphur. An oil wash, if used at proper strength, is more quickly fatal, which often enables it to destroy the scale before dashing rains come and wash it off. Among the disadvantages attending the use of oil washes may be mentioned the price of material, in case prepared commercial brands are used, and the greater danger of injuring the trees by successive applications.

The lime-sulphur wash is the old standard scale wash. It has been in use since the early introduction of the dary value as a fungicide, its uninjurious effects upon trees, and the thoroughness with which it can be applied if one goes to the trouble of "touching up" patches that are missed by the first application. The principal factors which make this wash out of favor with many fruit growers are the trouble accompanying its preparation by external heat and its caustic properties, which make it disagreeable to use. But with a little experience and care, one can prepare and apply it without suffering the least inconvenience.

The destruction of the scale by thorough fumigation is more certain than either dipping or spraying, since a gas is more penetrating than a liquid, but unfortunately the scope of its applicability is much limited. Where infested stock can be enclosed in a tight box, or rooms in which the deadly gas is generated, it can be completely freed of the scale. The practice of fumigating finds its greatest usefulness in the nursery, where infested stock can, with little extra labor and a slight expense, be carefully fumigated, which, if properly done, will not injure the stock and yet destroys every scale present. Fumigation is also used with success in young orchards where the trees can be covered with a tent or box made of heavy cloth, well saturated with oil, which makes it practically airtight. Orchards of large bearing trees have been successfully fumigated, but the expense of treating rapidly increases with the size of the trees, and it should not be undertaken by the average fruit grower in the orchard. He will get better results from fall or spring spraying and run less risk of injuring his trees.

scale into California and when properly prepared and carefully applied is extremely effective in controlling the scale. Points in favor of the lime-sulphur wash are the cheapness with which it can be prepared, its second-

WATCH FOR BORERS IN APPLE ORCHARD

Examination of Trees Should Be Made Twice Each Year—Use a Sharp Pointed Wire.

Apple trees should be examined for borers at least once or twice each year. In the spring and early fall are the times to look for borers. Probably in the early fall is the better time if one search a year is to be made. The presence of the borer is discovered by the brown castings they make. These are found at the base of the tree. An incision is made with the knife and a sharp pointed wire with a slight hook is inserted and the borer is drawn out. If the hole does not run straight it may be necessary to soak a wad of cotton in carbon bisulphide and insert this in the hole and then seal the opening with moist dirt. The seal of the carbon bisulphide will kill the insect.

The beetles can be prevented from laying their eggs in the tree by painting with pure white paint. The seed oil paint made pretty dirt should be cleaned away of about three inches so the surface can be painted below the foot above ground. After painting the dirt should be replaced.

Best for Sweet Pickles. Sweet Russet is one of the best crop apples for sweet pickles. It is not like it to eat out of hand. It is a good keeper, however, and should be planted only for home use.

WINTER HARBORS OF THE CODLING MOTH

Much Good Can Be Accomplished by Destroying Larvae in Packing Sheds and Cellars.

Not only are the hibernating larvae of the codling moth to be found in the orchards right now, but there are also other places where they occur plentifully. One of the most common wintering harbors is the packing shed or cellar where apples were boxed throughout the season. Wormy apples are, of course, taken into the packing sheds along with the good fruit and multitudes of the worms leave the apples and hide wherever a suitable place may be found. Cracks between boards, nail holes, knot holes, boxes and rubbish of all kinds in the shed are favorable places for hibernation.

In one packing shed examined a while ago there were a number of boards with old nail holes in them and nearly every one of them contained one or more larvae which had made their cocoons within and were comfortably located for the winter.

Much good can be accomplished by destroying the larvae in the packing sheds and cellars. In some cases it might be possible to screen sheds or caves so that the moths could not get out to lay their eggs upon trees in the spring.

While this search for hibernating worms is necessarily tedious, it is doubtful if people in those sections where it is necessary to spray from three to six times to keep down the codling moth can afford to neglect it.

Two in the Dark

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

"I'd like to see you in the library, old man," said Munson, the host, to his guest, Fremantle.

Alfred Fremantle looked rather vaguely at Munson. The middle-aged financier's voice was a little unreal; the man was flushed, not with wine so much as with good living. Munson had the best cook in Maitland, and gave the best dinners.

The house party was such as Munson loved to give. A round half-dozen of financial magnates had sat at his table. At their head Edith Munson had watched over the affairs of the table. She was a beautiful woman, even at thirty-five, and much admired. Fremantle was the only nonfinancial guest present. He was rich in his own right, and a famous traveler. He was an old friend of Edith's, too; before her marriage there had been some talk about them. Fremantle had often wondered whether Munson knew.

Munson paused irritably in the passage. Voices came from the billiard room.

"All show, old man," one of his guests was saying. "Just to keep up the pretense of affection between them. Everybody knows how he's neglected her."

"I wonder whether she knows about that dancer."

"She'll know soon," answered the other.

"Do you mean to say she's going to sue?"

"So they say. Of course there's another reason."

"Fremantle?"

"He's been her shadow while Jim Munson was away."

Munson overheard the whole conversation, and his projected talk with Fremantle, which had been only vague in his mind, suddenly assumed the aspect of the irrevocable. He must end all this. He had certainly neglected Edith. But how was it known? And did they know that it was because of his suspicions of her, his assurance that her love had failed him? And that dancer, Lois Ferrand! He shrugged his shoulders contemptuously. He had met her just twice, at bachelor parties, and the smooth-faced, rapid little chat had affected him no more than a floating feather. He must end all this! A wave of blood surged into his heavy face.

"I'm ready, Munson!"

Fremantle, immaculate in his evening clothes, was standing in front of him. Munson felt taken at a disadvantage. He frowned, then said blandly:

"Come into the library. I won't keep you long, Fremantle."

It was not until he stood facing the other man beside the big fireplace that he knew Fremantle had sensed the purpose of the invitation. Munson stood with his back to the door; Fremantle watched him with a dawning answer upon his lips.

"Now!" said Munson briskly, "what have you to say for yourself?"

"Is anything necessary, Munson?" asked the other.

"You came here as my guest," began Munson, bitterly. Then he checked himself. "No. Nothing is necessary," he answered. "But you did not know the type of man you were dealing with. You have made Mrs. Munson's name common gossip."

"That's a lie, Munson. It is yourself," answered Fremantle furiously. "Let me pass."

"You are not going to pass," said Munson. "At least, one of us is not going to leave this room."

"Horrible, eh?"

"Oh, like a gentleman, of course," said Fremantle.

He did not stir from his position as Munson, going to the wall, swung open a cabinet and brought out two pistols. Each had a curious arrangement fixed to the muzzle. Fremantle looked at them curiously.

"You mean it, Munson? May I ask what purpose these contrivances serve? To catch the bullet?"

"Silencers," said Munson briefly. He threw open the French windows. "The winner steps out upon the lawn and gets away. You will have no difficulty. I have arranged my affairs. There is a train in twenty minutes. One shot apiece, at a yard's distance, in a darkened room."

"You seem to have thought it all out," said Fremantle, sneering still. "But before you begin, you may as well know—"

"Are you ready?" demanded Munson. He saw his enemy's face whiten. He was surprised at his own resolution. Fremantle let the muzzle of his weapon drop irresolutely, but Munson held his own covering the other.

"I shall switch off the light," he continued. "We will wait until the clock begins to chime the hour. Then we will fire together."

"You may as well listen to reason," suggested Fremantle.

Munson's hand went out and snapped the switch. The room was in complete darkness. The two men faced each other, but each could see nothing. Neither could hear the other breathe. Munson wondered if his pistol still covered his enemy.

There was a minute still, and out of the darkness came the voice of Fremantle.

"You may as well listen, Munson," he said. "It won't prevent your shooting. Mrs. Munson knew that you had ceased to care for her. She did all in her power to win your love. At last I discovered what the trouble was. You know, we were like brother and sister in the old days."

Munson set his teeth and strained his ears for the chime. His pistol did not waver in his hand.

"I suggested the scheme, Munson. I told her that you were not a bad sort of man, that if you realized what you might lose you would feel differently. I designed to make you jealous; but I did not mean anyone else to see. That's all."

"You lying hound!" snarled Munson. And at that instant he heard the quaver of the clock as it prepared to chime, and pressed the trigger.

There came no echo to the muffled thud of the discharge. For a fearful instant he hesitated. Had he killed Fremantle? He strained his ears, but could hear nothing save the clock striking.

"Have you fired?" he demanded as the chimes subsided.

There was no response. Nervously he stretched out his hand and switched on the light. Fremantle stood quite still, watching him, his pistol drooping in his hand.

"If that's all, Munson—" he began. Munson dashed his pistol down and burst into tears from the reaction.

"You've had your triumph, curse you!" he whimpered. "My life's yours. Why didn't you shoot? Why didn't you? I'm going—"

He stepped out through the windows. He was going away. Fremantle had won; he had refused to shoot when he could have killed him. Doubtless he meant to make the most of his triumph, and life meant more to him under the circumstances than it would if he were a murderer and a fugitive.

At the edge of the lawn Munson hesitated and looked back. Fremantle was still in the library. He stood beneath the light of the electric bulb. He had wrapped a handkerchief about his hand and laid the pistol away. As Munson watched him he saw the door open and his wife appear upon the threshold.

Munson had never spied upon his wife, but at the sight of her a madness rose in his brain. Fremantle would tell her of his triumph. A love scene was imminent. Why should he not kill them both?

He acted upon the thought. He crept toward the window again, halting in the shadow of a tall cypress outside. As he did so he saw the pistol that Fremantle had laid down. It lay hidden from his wife's view, but plain in Munson's sight, behind a pile of books upon the library table. And Munson remembered that it had not been discharged.

His hand went out toward it, but was arrested by his wife's words.

"Where's Jim?" she asked.

"I think he has stepped outside," said Fremantle, unconcernedly.

Edith Munson hesitated, looked at Fremantle. Then she put her hands to her face and began to sob softly.

"I can't bear it any longer. He doesn't care for me. You can't win love by any such trick as that. He is tired of me, Harry."

"No," said Fremantle, bravely. "It was a misunderstanding on both sides."

She looked up quickly. "You have been talking with him!" she cried.

"How do you know that? How do you know?"

Fremantle stood before her. "Edith," he said, "tell me one thing: Do you love your husband?"

"With all my heart and soul," she answered.

The fingers of the man outside, which were groping for the pistol, fell as if palsied to his side. He shrank back from the window as Fremantle came out. Fremantle turned, and their eyes met.

"Harry!" Jim Munson began.

"Go to her," said Fremantle, seeing that he had overheard.

"Harry, I wronged you. Will you forgive? A man doesn't often have such a friend, and to wrong him—"

Their hands met. "Go to her," Fremantle answered, and strode swiftly across the lawn in the direction of the railroad station.

"You mean it, Munson? May I ask

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box. Sick headache, biliousness, distress, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

Paul Armstrong often told how a lawyer acquaintance of his, who lives at Seattle, was retained to defend a colored man accused of abducting with the funds of a colored debating society. The outlook for the defendant was rather black. At the trial the attorney for the defense arose, as soon as the charge had been read, and said:

"Your honor, I move that the indictment be dismissed."

"I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee."

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know, I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum."

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew steady, I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced. Now the old nervousness is gone and I am well once more."

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

Belcher's squadron. These relics of Arctic disaster were discovered on the north end of Bylott's island, in the Arctic sea.

Captain Bernier believes that these relics were part of the Pioneer or the Intrepid of Sir Edward Belcher's squadron. Three vessels in the Belcher squadron were not accounted for, the Pioneer, the Intrepid and the Assistant. The Pioneer was abandoned in the Arctic and all on board were lost.

Another relic of the Arctic found by Captain Bernier's crew is a spear from Sir John Franklin's expedition, which drifted in on the tide in Erebus bay, North Devon island, the bay being named after the Franklin ship Erebus. It is a wooden spear with iron point and the name Erebus stamped upon it. The spear from the Franklin expedition was probably lost overboard in a storm and drifted, swept on by ice and tide, to Erebus bay. The wreck of the Erebus was found on O'Reilly island, south of Victoria strait, by Eskimos years ago.

For fifteen days Captain Bernier and members of his Arctic expedition on board the Guide were caught in the ice of Melville bay, in latitude 75. After battling with huge masses of ice drifting down from the north for two weeks the Guide managed to get free from the ice packs and make her way into the open sea.

An interesting theory of a route to the pole for a vessel is advanced by Captain Bernier, and is based upon deductions made from his discoveries of relics of marine disasters in the Arctic and study of the polar tides. He believes that, starting from a certain point in the Arctic, a ship well equipped can make the voyage from ocean to ocean and to the Pole.

Thinks Ship Can Reach Pole.

Capt. George De Long was a pioneer in the field of Arctic exploration, said Captain Bernier the other day while in New York, and his first expedition aroused my interest in voyages in the North Pole regions.

"I followed De Long's expedition with keen interest, and I realized that he was undertaking a voyage almost certain to lead to destruction. But his experience pointed out a route leading into the northland, and other explorers have doubtless profited by his example. When Doctor Nansen proposed a trip to the Arctic he planned his voyage along the lines of Doctor Long's trip to the polar seas."

"Diatoms found on the east coast of Greenland are similar to those brought back by that great explorer Nordencause she was drifting faster than the Jeannette."

On his last voyage the captain secured numerous interesting pictures of Eskimo life in the Arctic; the midnight sun, fishing in the far North, seal hunting and norwhal hunting over the ice.

HAVE NEW ENAMEL PROCESS

Mixture Can Be Applied Cold, With out Injury to the Most Delicate Objects.

There are many small objects whose beauty is much enhanced by the application of a coat of enamel, but which are not capable of being fired. A process of enameling these in the cold, so simple as to be quite practicable for amateurs, is described in La Nature as follows: To a solution of sodium silicate, boiled in a closed vessel, there is added about 5 per cent of sulphate of lime. This causes a precipitation to take place, the ulterior effect of which is to prevent efflorescences which would injure the looks of the enamel. The solution, after being once decanted, assumes the consistency of a paste which is heated to about 75 deg. Cent. to apply to the objects to be enamelled. A second decantation takes place in the vitreous layer, and this then takes on an unalterable translucence. It may be tinted any desired shade, either in the mass or superficially, the colors being fixed by tannates of gelatin and alum.—Scientific American.

Teaches History of City.

New Orleans has adopted the New Orleans book as a textbook in the public schools. This book contains a succinct history of the city from its earliest days, a review and summary of its industries, and commerce, a study of its people, their institutions, government and organization; in fact, it presents in a compact and convenient form facts which "every citizen should know and most of the city's visitors inquire about."

Prudence.

"Have you studied the question thoroughly?"

"What question?" asked Senator Sorghum.

"The one on which you are about to make a speech."

"No. I carefully avoided studious consideration of the matter. In case my remarks do not prove agreeable to my constituents, I want them to sound as if I spoke impulsively."

ANN ARBOR—Holding that Gustave A. Schenk has ownership of his lands from the center of the earth to the sky above, Judge E. D. Kinne Saturday morning ruled that the city of Ann Arbor cannot deprive him of water without paying damages. At the same time Judge Kinne refused to enjoin the city from pumping water from its Steere farm wells, as prayed for in the injunction suit filed by Mr. Schenk, who owns land adjoining the city property. About a year ago the city began pumping water from a test well on its property south of the city in an effort to determine whether there was a sufficient supply of water there to make it worth while establishing a plant to furnish the city water supply. Schenk and other farmers in the neighborhood claimed that the pumping caused their wells to go dry, and Mr. Schenk applied for an injunction. Judge Kinne ruled that the city cannot be enjoined from pumping water but that it is liable for damages if such action deprives neighboring lands of a water supply. He fixed the damage to Mr. Schenk at $100. The case will be carried to the supreme court.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from any store that handles drugs which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—Adv.

Nice Enough, But—

A twelve-year-old boy, who had reigned supreme over parents and household all through his dozen years, was surprised one morning to hear the cry of a little baby brother.

"Isn't it nice, Tommy," said the jubilant father, "that we have another baby?"

"Yes, it is nice, father," said Tommy, as he saw the end of his reign; "but what bothers me is, was it necessary?"

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

PROVEN SWAMP-ROOT AIDS WEAK KIDNEYS

The symptoms of kidney and bladder troubles are often very distressing and leave the system in a run-down condition. The kidneys seem to suffer most, as almost every victim complains of lame back and urinary troubles which should not be neglected, as these danger signals often lead to dangerous kidney troubles.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root which soon heals and strengthens the kidneys is a splendid kidney, liver and bladder remedy, and, being an herbal compound, has a gentle healing effect on the kidneys, which is almost immediately noticed in most cases by those who use it.

A trial will convince anyone who may be in need of it. Better get a bottle from your nearest drug store, and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

SYNOPSIS.

Alan Wayne is sent away from Red Hill, his home, by his uncle, J. Y., as a moral failure. Clem runs after him in a tangle of short skirts to bid him good-by. Captain Wayne tells Alan of the falling of the Wayne. Clem drinks Alan's health on his birthday. Judge Healey buys a picture for Alan. The judge defends Alan in his business with his employers, Alan and Alan most at sea, homeward bound, and start a flirtation which becomes serious. At home, Nance Sterling asks Alan to go away from Alan. Alan is taken to task by Gerry, her husband, for her conduct with Alan and defies him. Gerry, as he thinks, sees Alan and Alan eloping, drops everything, and goes to Pernambuco. Alan leaves Alan on the train.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

"That's right," said Alix as she followed his lead to a cab. She got in and then shook hands with her escort. He looked at the dollar bill her grasp left behind.

"That wasn't called for, Miss. It was enough for me to have saved ye from a fall."

"You didn't save me," said Alix with a bewildering smile. "I saved myself."

Alix was tired and hungry when she got back home but excitement kept her up. She felt that she stood on the threshold of new effort and a new life. After all, she thought, it was she that had made her dear old Gerry into a time-server. She could have made him into anything else if she had tried. She longed to tell him so. Perhaps he would catch her and crush her in his arms as Alan had done. She laughed at herself for wanting him to. She rang for the butler. "Where's your master, John?"

"I don't know, ma'am. Mr. Gerry hasn't come back since he went out this morning." To John, Mr. Lansing was a person who had been dead for some time. His present overlord was Mr. and Mrs. Gerry and Mrs. Lansing when she was in town.

"Telephone to the club and if he is there tell him I want to see him," said Alix and turned to her welcome tea. The sandwiches seemed unusually small to her ravenous appetite.

Gerry was not at the club. Alix dressed resplendently for dinner. Never had she dressed for any other man with the care that she dressed for Gerry that night. But Gerry did not come. At half-past nine Alix ordered the table cleared. "I'll not dine tonight," she said to John. "When your master comes, show him in here." She sat on in the library listening for Gerry's step in the hall.

From time to time John came into the room to replenish the fire. On one of these occasions Alix told him he might go to bed but an hour later he returned and stood in the door. Alix looked very small, curled up in a great leather chair by the fire.

"It's after one o'clock, ma'am," said John. "Mr. Gerry won't be coming in tonight." Alix made no answer. John held his ground. "It's time for you to go to bed, ma'am. Shall I call the maid?"

Alix was exhausted but it was long before she fell asleep. She cried softly. She wanted to be comforted. She had dressed so beautifully—she had been so beautiful—and Gerry had not come home. As she cried, her disappointment grew into a great trouble.

She awoke early from a feverish sleep. Immediately a sense of weight assailed her. She rang and learned that Gerry had not yet come home. Then his words of yesterday suddenly came to her. "If I dropped out of the world today—" Alix stared wide-eyed at the ceiling. Why had she remembered those words? She lay for a long time thinking. Her breakfast was brought to her but she did not touch it. It was almost noon in the cloudy Sunday morning when she roused herself from apathy. She sprang from the bed. She summoned Judge Healey with a note and Mrs. Lansing with a telegram. The telegram was carefully worded. "Please come and stay for a while. Gerry is away."

The judge found Alix radiating the freshness of a beautiful woman careful of her person, but it was the freshness of a pale flower. Alix was grave and her gravity had a sweetness that made the judge's heart bound. He felt an awakening in her that he had long watched for. She told him all the story of the day before in a steady monotone that omitted nothing and gave the facts only their own weight.

When she finished the judge patted her hand. "You would make a splendid witness, my dear," he said. "Now, what you want is for me to find Gerry and bring him back, isn't it? Are you sure Gerry knew nothing of your—er—excursion to the station?"

Alix shook her head. "From the time he left my room and the house he has not been back."

"Has he been to the club?"

Alix colored faintly. "I see," said the judge quickly. "I'll ask there. I'll go now." He went off and all that day he sought in vain for a trace of Gerry. He went to all his haunts in the city—he had telephoned to those outside. At night he returned to the floor but it was Mrs. Lansing that received him in the library.

The judge was tired and his buoyancy had deserted him. He told her of his failure. Mrs. Lansing was thoughtful but not greatly troubled.

"Gerry," she said, "has a level head. He can take care of himself." She went to tell Alix that there was no news. When she came back the judge turned to her. "Well," he asked, "what did she say?"

"Nothing, except that she wanted to know if you had tried the bank."

The judge struck his fist into his left hand. "Never thought of it," he said. "That child has a head!" He went to the telephone. From the president of the bank he traced the manager, from the manager, the cashier. Yes, Gerry had been at the bank on Saturday. The cashier remembered it because Mr. Lansing had drawn a certain account in full. He would not say how much.

"There," said the judge with a sigh of relief, "that's something. It takes a steady nerve to draw a bank account in full. You must take the news upstairs. I'm off. I'll follow up the clue tomorrow."

Mrs. Lansing and Alix had never given themselves to each other. There had been no warfare between them but equally there had never been understanding. To Mrs. Lansing's inherent calm, Alix's scintillation had been repellent and Alix before Gerry's mother had felt much the same restraint as before Gerry's old butler.

There had been strength in Mrs. Lansing's calm. She had been waiting and now the waiting was over. Alix had given herself tearful and almost wordless into arms that were more than ready and had then poured out her heart in a broken tale that would have confounded any court of justice but which between women was clearer than logic.

At the end Mrs. Lansing said nothing. Instead she petted Alix, carried her off to bed and kept her there for three days. In her waking hours Alix added spasmodic bits to her confession—sage reflections after the event, dreamy "I wonder" that speculated in the past and in the measure of her emotions.

Mrs. Lansing sat and listened and sewed. Her soft brown hair just touched with gray, her calm face with its half-hidden strength, her steady eyes, turned now on Alix, now on her work, brought peace into the room and held it there in spite of the disquieting lack of news of Gerry.

When she spoke at last it was to say half-shyly, "You are stronger than I had thought. I believe every woman at the actual moment of surrender feels an impulse of shame and fear. During that moment desire lets go of her. It's the last chance that fate holds out. The women who fail to take the chance—it seems to me they fall through weakness of spirit and not of flesh."

"More women are ruined by circumstance than by desire. Women decide to burn their bridges behind them and then they think they've burned them. All the circumstances were against you. There wasn't a loophole in the net. Fate gave you your moment and you tore your way out."

On the fourth day Alix got up but on the fifth she stayed in bed. Mrs. Lansing found her pale and frightened. She had been crying.

"Alix," she whispered, kneeling beside the bed, "what is it?"

Alix told her amid sobs. "Oh, my dear," said Mrs. Lansing, throwing her arms around her, "don't cry. Don't worry. The strength will come with the need. In the end you'll be glad. So will Gerry. So will all of us."

"It isn't that," said Alix, faintly. "Oh, it isn't that. I'm just thinking and thinking how terrible it would have been if I had run away—really run away. I keep imagining how awful it would have been. It is nightmare."

"Call it nightmare if you like, sweetheart, but just remember that you are awake."

"Yes," said Alix softly. "I am awake now. I want to watch the Hill come to life and dress up for the summer. It will amuse me. It's long since I have watched for the first buds and the first swallows. I won't mind the melting snow and the mud. It's so long since I've seen clean country mud. I want to smell it."

"You don't know how bleak the Hill can be before the spring comes," objected Mrs. Lansing.

"Will it be any bleaker with me there than when you were alone?" asked Alix.

Mrs. Lansing came over to her and kissed her. "No, dear," she said.

CHAPTER VIII

In the squalid Hotel d'Europe Gerry occupied a large room that overlooked the quay. Even if there had been a better hotel in town he would not have moved.

He was not lonely. He wandered interested through all the straggling city. When he was too lazy to go to the city he sat in the precarious balcony of his room and watched the city come to him.

Almost a month had passed since he landed on his Lethian shore, and it had served him well. The world seemed to have time-servers in small regard. He began to think of his mother. He strolled over to the cable station. The offices were undergoing repairs. The ground floor was unfurnished save for a table and one chair. In the chair sat a chocolate-colored employee with a long bamboo on the floor beside him. Gerry's curiosity was aroused. He went in and wrote his message to his mother—just a few words telling her he was all right. The chocolate gentleman folded the message, slipped it into the slit end of the bamboo and stuck it up through a hole in the ceiling to the floor above. Gerry smiled and then laughed at the gravity with which his smile was received. The man looked at him in astonishment. These English were all mad and discourteous. What was there to laugh at in a man at work?

Gerry went out and rambled over the city. Night came on. He was restless. He wished he had not sent the message. It was forming itself into a link. He dined badly at a restaurant and then wandered back to the quay. Arriving steamers were posted on a blackboard under a street lamp. The mail from New York was due tomorrow. The consul's papers would be full of the latest New York society scandal—his scandal. He went to his room and sat on the balcony watching the varied craft preparing to drift out on the tide. Suddenly he got up and went down to the quay.

A long, raking craft was taking on its meager provisions. Gerry engaged its captain in a pantomime parley. The boat was bound for Penedo to take on cotton. Gerry decided to go to Penedo. Two of the crew went back with him to get his baggage. The hotel was closed. Gerry was the only guest and he had his key. He had paid his weekly bill that day, so there was no need to wake up anyone. In half an hour he and his belongings were stowed on the deck of the Josephina and she was drifting slowly down to the bar.

Four days later they were off the mouth of the San Francisco. They doubled in and tacked their way up to Penedo. There was no life in Penedo. It was desolate and lonely compared with the Hotel d'Europe and the lively quay; so when a funny little stern-wheeler started up the river on its weekly trip to Piranhas, Gerry went with it.

Piranhas was a town of mud plastered against a barren cliff. It made no pretense to being alive. Here a dead man could live in peace with his surroundings. From fifteen miles up the river came the rumble of the mighty Paulo Alfonso falls, singing a perpetual requiem. Gerry established himself in a hotel of an inn that even in this far retreat did not dare call itself hotel.

The only industry in Piranhas was the washing of clothes and the women did that. Fish were caught in great quantities but fishing was not an industry. Here man fished only when he was hungry.

Gerry chartered a ponderous canoe. At first he had a man to paddle him up and down and sometimes across the wide half-mile of water. But before long he learned to handle the thing himself. The heavy work soon trimmed his splendid muscles into shape. He supplied the hostelry with a variety of fish.

One morning he awoke earlier than usual. The wave of life was running high in his veins. He sprang up and, still in his pajamas, hurried out for his morning swim. The break of day was gloriously chilly. A cool breeze, hurrying up from the sea, was steadily banking up the mist that hung over the river. Gerry sprang into his canoe and pushed off. He drove its heavy length up stream, not in the teeth of the current, for no man could do that, but skirting the shore, seizing on the help of every eddy and keeping an eye out for the green swirling mound that meant a pinnacle of rock just short of the surface. He went farther up the river than ever before. His muscles were keyed to the struggle. He passed the last jutting bend that the boatmen on the river could master and found himself in a bay protected by a spit of sand, rock-tipped and foam-tossed where it reached the river's channel. From this point the river was a chaos of jagged rocks that fought the mighty tide hurled from the falls still miles above.

Gerry ran the canoe upon the shore and stripped. He stepped on to the spit of sand. In that moment just to live was enough. A sharp cry broke on his astonished ears.

Almost at the end of the tongue of sand stood a girl. Her hair was blowing around her slim shoulders. Over one of them she gazed, startled, at Gerry. He drew back horribly confused and mumbling apologies that she could not have understood even if she could have heard them. Then she plunged with a clean long dive into the river. But before she plunged she laughed. Gerry heard the laugh. With an answering cry he hurled himself into the water and swam as he had never swum before.

The girl had farther to go across the little bay, but she could beat Gerry swimming and she did. Only she failed to use her head and, when she found bottom, started to wade. Wading is slow work in water waist high. Gerry stuck to his long powerful stroke. As the girl reached the bank the strong fingers of his right hand closed on her bare ankle.

CHAPTER IX

Gerry's cablegram to his mother was forwarded to Red Hill on the very day that the judge had gone to tell them that no trace could be found of the missing man. The judge was more down-hearted than ever over Gerry's disappearance and when he found the two women radiating happiness and excitement his heart sank lower still.

"I haven't any good news," he said ruefully before he was alighted.

"Tease him," said Alix in a low tone to Mrs. Lansing.

But Mrs. Lansing had found new lines in the judge's tired face and she whispered back, "I can't." She put the cablegram in the judge's hand.

"What's this?" he said and read it. Then he gave a war-whoop, caught Alix around the waist and kissed her.

The first were gay that night—gay with the joy of happy people happily planning. In a month, say at the most, two months, Gerry could be here. Spring would have come. The Hill would be decked out in full regalia of leaf and blossom. It would be in full commission to meet him. They looked at Alix and Alix seemed to look at herself. He would come into his own as never before.

The judge undertook the cabling. He cabled Gerry and the message was reported undelivered. Then he cabled the American consul. There followed a long series of messages; first quick and hopeful, then lagging but not doubtful, then a wearying series of doubts, ending with the inevitable blow. Gerry had been traced to the San Francisco river. The envoy sent on his track by the judge's orders had reached Piranhas to find the little town in apathetic wonder over the discovery of Gerry's canoe stranded three miles down the river. The paddle was still in the canoe and a suit of pyjamas. No further trace of Gerry had been found. His body had not been recovered. The people said it was not unusual. He had undoubtedly been attacked by tiger fish. In that case his bones would have been stripped of flesh. It was impossible to drag the great river.

The judge hid in his heart the harrowing details. To Mrs. Lansing he told the central fact. She was struck dumb with grief and then she thought of Alix. Almost hastily they decided that it was not a time to tell Alix and during long months they put her off with false news of the search. They carried it farther and farther into the wilds of the subcontinent. The country was so vast, there was no telling when the messenger would finally come up with Gerry.

Alix bore the strain with wonderful patience. The truth was that her thoughts were not on Gerry. Something greater than Gerry was claiming all her faith—all her strength of body and soul. She did not talk. She was innermost self with a woman who dedicates her body to pain and sacrifice. Alix was not afraid. In those days the spirit of the race—her race of pioneers—shone from her steady eyes and even but courage in those about her.

Only when the ordeal was over and an heir to the house of Lansing had raised his lusty voice in apparent rage at having been born to so small a kingdom, did the frail Alix of other days come back. As she lay, pale and thin, but with the glorious light of supreme achievement in her eyes, Mrs. Lansing wept on her knees beside the bed and sobbed, "Oh, Alix, I love you so, I love you so!"

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Alix smiled. Slowly she reached one hand over and placed it in Mrs. Lansing's. "You are crying because you are a granny now," she said, softly, playfully.

Then came the day when Alix was strong—strong enough. Mrs. Lansing told her in a choked voice what they knew and what everyone believed. She cried softly in Alix's arms.

"Poor mother!" said Alix, her lips against the wet cheek. "How strong you've been! How you hid it from me! What a burden to carry in your heart, and smile. But listen, dear mummy. You are all wrong. Perhaps I would not have known it if you had told me—then—but I know it now. Gerry is not dead. There is no river that can drown Gerry."

Alix clung to her belief. So strong was her faith that Mrs. Lansing became infected, but the judge held out against them. "My heart is with you," he said, at the end of months, "but my head won't turn. A naked man even in South America would have caused remark. Why shouldn't he have come back for his clothes, for his money? After all, he wasn't a fugitive from justice. He was a man wandering over the earth in pursuit of a mere whim and a whim doesn't last forever."

Alix interrupted him. "Judge, I have never been angry with you. We all owe you too much. But if you ever say 'was' about Gerry again—" She stopped and bit her lip but her eyes spoke for her.

"My dear girl," said the judge and only his color showed that he was hurt, "don't be angry with me. It shall be as you say. I've only been trying to save you from years of weary waiting. If you have the courage to wait for sorrow, I shall wait too."

Alix kissed him. "There," she said, "I'm sorry I was rough."

"You're rough!" laughed the judge. Then he jumped up. "I'm forgetting my duties. I have a guest of my very own at Maple House and I must go to him."

A few weeks before, Hon. Percy Collingford had looked up the judge. It was as much a pleasure to the young man as a duty he owed to his father, whose friend—the judge had been for many years.

Collingford was no stranger to America but he knew far more about dodging arroyos in New Mexico on a cow pony than he did about dodging the open trenches and debris of Fifth Avenue on the trail of a tea-party. He was an Englishman, a younger son with enough money to put him above the remittance class, and he was possessed of far more intelligence than he had been born with, for, from his youth up, he had sought out experience in many places. He came back from the Klondike with more money than he needed for his passage but only a few kindred spirits knew that he had made it hammering the piano in The Fallen Star of Hope. He had the English gentleman's common creed: ride straight, shoot straight, tub often and talk the king's English. That creed fulfilled, nothing else seemed to worry him.

He was dining with the judge at the club one night when the name of Wayne—Alan Wayne—floated over occasionally from a neighboring table. Later as they sat over their coffee and cigars Collingford said abruptly, "I know a chap named Wayne."

"So?" said the judge.

"Heard those people mention Alan Wayne," explained Collingford. "I wonder if it was the same one—Ten Percent Wayne of Africa."

"That's the one," said the judge and watched Collingford's face.

"Hum," said Collingford. "When I saw Wayne he was in shirt sleeves and a battered sun helmet. There are some men that won't shake hands with him, but I'm not one of them."

It was then that the judge decided to take Collingford to Maple House for over Sunday.

CHAPTER X

Gerry Lansing was sitting alone in the shade of a bush, his knees gathered in his arms and his head bowed down. Great quivering sighs that were almost sobs were shaking his strong body. In one terrific swirl of generations, tossed him high and dropped him, broken. Between the moment when he had plunged from the sundrop and the moment when he and the girl had stood on the river bank and laughed together to see the canoe, worked adrift by the eddy, swirl out into the river and away, a moment had passed. In that laughing moment he had stood primal man in the world. With the drops of water from the river he had flicked off the bonds it had taken centuries to forge. And now his truant conscience returned to stand dismayed.

The girl, dressed in a homespun cotton robe belted at the waist, came back down a half-hidden path, shyly at first and then with awe to see him weeping. She tossed him a cotton jumper and trousers and then drew back and waited for him in the path. He rose slowly to his feet, dressed and followed the girl.

She led him along the path through the brush and out into a little valley made up of abandoned cane and rice bottoms. In the center was a slight elevation, too low to be called a hill, and on it was an old plantation house, white stucco once, now sadly weathered, streaked, its tiles green-black with the moss of years.

EAGER FOR A SETTLEMENT

Man on Trial Charged With Consuming Moonshine Whisky Got Tired of Law's Delay.

The case had been dragging on for nearly an hour, which was twice as long as it should have lasted in this court. A sunbrowned "cracker" from Decatur had been arrested on a trivial charge, but the two officers on the case could not agree as to whether the defendant had been caught drinking moonshine or not.

Suddenly the prisoner raised his hand, and motioned to Judge Broyles.

"What have you to say, Peter Cooper?" the judge inquired.

A GLASS OF SALTS WILL END KIDNEY-BACKACHE

Says Drugs Excite Kidneys and Recommends Only Salts, Particularly If Bladder Bothers You.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as the kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uric acid accumulates, and the person dies and the cause is often given as heart disease or disease of brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send 10 cents for a large trial package of "Anuric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce. Also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urination, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, it's time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms and get his

Chic Blouse of Wash Fabrics

The better grades in cotton voiles, marisettes, organdie and other sheer stuffs have proved themselves surprisingly durable and are like crepe de chine and crepe georgette in this respect. They look as fragile as flower petals but wear as stanchly as Scotch madras or any other of the dependable weaves that are relied upon for the practical everyday blouse.

They are all in the running now that the time is here for making up blouses for the oncoming season.

With the trend of the public's taste constantly turned toward thin and sheer fabrics for all purposes, and the demand for things washable, cotton voile is likely to stand near the head of the list as a material wanted for spring blouses. It is shown in many patterns employing color, in figures of stripes, on a white ground. These are either woven or printed in, with increasing demand developing for the woven-in designs.

In blouses, as in dresses, there is a fancy for combining materials of two different kinds in one garment. By means of hemstitching, bands of colored organdie are stitched to the collar or cuffs to form a border, in white blouses, and a little embroidery, like the bands in color, provides a relief to the plain body of white. Voiles, with colored dots in graduated sizes, and scalloped edges, finished with buttonhole stitching, are among the prettiest of spring offerings. The dots are in rose color, maize, blue, and lavender, and occasionally a light brown or green makes the choice more varied.

The chic tailored blouse pictured here is made of voile with dotted stripes in a deep tan shade on a white ground. Between these are narrower stripes of white satin dots. The back extends over the shoulders, forming a shallow yoke at the front, and all seams are set together with a narrow piping in white. The fronts are cut to form a narrow panel in white down the center, with a double row of pearl buttons as a decorative feature. In this blouse snap fasteners and a fly make it possible to dispense with buttonholes if desired.

The sleeves are finished with deep cuffs of the voile. A removable collar and cuffs of white hemstitched organdie are the final touches in a design that betrays careful planning. It is a model that may be copied easily in any of the spring wash fabrics.

Black Corduroy Coats.

Black corduroy is said to be coming in for the shorter sport coats. They should be worn with white skirts.

Skirts of checked wool velours have belts and pocket flaps cut in one.

Fashions of the Hour in Bags

Bags of embossed leather in oriental colorings and figures made their entry in the arena of fashions just before the holidays. They made an instant success, sharing the favor given to novelties in silk bags, and nothing more beautiful is likely to replace them for some time.

They are called Tokyo bags and are made in various colored leathers having Chinese or Japanese figures wrought in many rich and harmonious colors on a solid ground. They follow the mode in the matters of size and shape, as set forth by plain leather bags, and are beautifully lined with plain or moire silk. After these concessions to western needs their allegiance returns to the Orient in the matter of handles. Anything less beautiful than the strands of silver beads and the ivory and silver knobs would be too tame to harmonize with them, and their handles are an indispensable fascination.

Fashions of the hour in handbags make them a delight to the eye and a pleasure to the hand. There is a place for everything in them, and everything in its place, as in a watch or a kodak. Compartments for the card case, the note-book, the coin purse and a place for the

MORE ABOUT SOUPS.

A nice hot dish of soup is most sustaining and soothing on a cold night.

Sheep's Tail Soup (Armenian).—Cut in small pieces, eight sheep's tails. Soak in cold water for an hour, then par-boil, drain and fry in butter. Cover with mutton stock and add a bunch of parsley, two leeks, two cloves, an onion and a stalk of celery tied in a muslin bag. Cover and boil until the meat is tender. Add three quarts of mutton stock, simmer for an hour and remove the muslin bag. Season with curry powder and thicken with the yolks of four eggs, beaten smooth in a cupful of cream. Serve with boiled rice on a separate dish.

Puree of Parsnip Soup.—Fry in butter one quart of tender parsnips, cut in dice. Cover with beef stock and cook until tender, press through a sieve and return to the fire. Add enough beef stock to make the desired quantity of soup and thicken with a tablespoonful each of flour and butter. Reheat, season and serve hot.

Italian Chestnut Soup.—Shell and blanch 50 large chestnuts, cover with veal stock, add two tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, salt, pepper, and nutmeg to season, and simmer for two hours or more. Press through a sieve, measure the quantity of soup and add half as much boiling milk. Thicken with the yolk of an egg beaten with a little cold milk and serve with croutons.

Mock Turtle Soup.—Clean a calf's head thoroughly, split the head, take out the eyes and cover with salted water, bring to a boil, cook for half an hour, take out the head, remove the bones, peel the tongue and cut up the rest of the meat in small pieces, strain the liquor and return it to the pot with the meat, adding more water if necessary. Chop fine one small onion and a head of celery and add to the soup.

Season with pepper, salt, cloves and cinnamon to taste. Just before serving add half a lemon, sliced.

HOUSEWIFE'S HELPS.

Put cheese that is wanted to keep in a stone jar and cover thickly with salt; it will not mold or become dry with this treatment.

When the metal tip comes off from shoe string, wind the end firmly with waxed thread, then sew it in and you will have as good a tip as ever.

For successful pie making use old tin plates when baking custard, pumpkin or one-crust pie. If a new tin is bought, brown it well in the oven before using it. A custard pie must be baked crisp and brown on the bottom to be palatable, and thick, heavy pans make a soggy crust.

Polish mirrors with alcohol, then rub with whiting and polish. The finish will be much superior to any other treatment. This is good for windows.

Brush silk with a piece of velvet or velveteen. Never use a brush on silk.

A worn-out fancy waist may be made into a pretty little afternoon apron, by carefully cutting out the front. If there are embroidered sleeves, pockets may be made of them.

To Cure Car Sickness.—There are any number of remedies, like the eating of raisins, dry crackers, etc., but here comes one called infallible, given by a sleeping car porter. Eat several slices of raw potato, plentifully sprinkled with salt. Salted crackers would probably have the same result and be more digestible.

When cleaning any garment of gloves, mix gasoline with flour; rub this paste well into the soiled spots and brush well after the gasoline is evaporated. Peroxide will take out fruit stains, even of long standing. One application put on when they are on the line is usually sufficient. This need not be washed out as it does not injure the fabric.

Velvet covers to coat-hangers, are much better than silk, as the garment does not slip off so easily.

A small piece of butter dropped into the boiling sirup before it is added to the egg white insures a creamy frosting. A teaspoonful of cream will answer the same purpose.

Industrial Training and Crime.

It is a fact that a very large percentage of the inmates of prisons are industrially untrained, and unable to earn a living income honestly. In that fact is the cause of much crime, in the remedying of that condition is to be found the cure for it in a large number of cases.—From the Star of Hope, published by Sing Sing Prison.

NEW TREATMENT FOR SWOLLEN VEINS

Swollen veins are dangerous and often burst. Sufferers are advised to get a two-ounce, original bottle of Emerald Oil (full strength) at any pharmacist and start to reduce the veins and bunched at once.

Physicians recommend Emerald Oil: It is used in hospital practice and a small bottle will last a long time, because it is very concentrated. Apply night and morning with the soft brush as directed until the swelling is reduced to normal.

It is so marvelously powerful that swollen glands, and even goitre disappear when used steadily.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine—Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. MAYNIE ASBACH, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCASLAND, 509 Howe St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were 'bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. R. M. Oseow, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Proof Is Here the Same As Everywhere.

For those who seek relief from kidney backache, weak kidneys, bladder ills, Doan's Kidney Pills offer hope of relief and the proof is here in Chelsea, the same as everywhere. Chelsea people have used Doan's and Chelsea people recommend Doan's, the kidney remedy used in America for fifty years. Why suffer? Why run the risk of dangerous kidney ills—fatal Bright's disease. Here's Chelsea proof of merit. Investigate it.

John Kelly, W. Middle St., Chelsea, says: "Hard work started my kidney trouble. The kidney secretions became irregular and too frequent in passage. I also suffered from rheumatic pains in my back and was stiff and sore. Mornings I felt all tired out, and was dizzy and nervous. I tried different medicines, but was not helped until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They relieved me of the trouble from my back and kidneys."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Kelly had. Foster-McIlburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

JACKSON—The case of Luther Pope, struck by an automobile and sustaining a broken back, is considered a most unusual one by hospital authorities. It is said Mr. Pope stands a chance to recover despite the broken back and fractured jaw. His condition, however, will remain critical for many months. Even the slightest accident would prove fatal. He will probably have to use a wheel chair for many months but has a fighting chance for ultimate recovery.—Patriot.

Stop the Grippe when It's Still a Cold

Grippe, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, all start from common colds. Head them off by using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound.

"A dose in time will save nine." A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound taken when you feel a cold coming on will save you a world of annoyance and possible distress.

Dry hacking coughs must never be neglected. They irritate the throat and chest terribly. The use of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will have a loosening soothing effect, relieving irritation and permitting sleep.

Here's a typical instance of the relief and help that comes through the use of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound:

"My little girl had a severe cold a short time ago," says Mrs. D. Gilke, almost continuously. I tried lots of treat her, but she did not get any better. My sister recommended me and I decided to get some for my child. The first dose I gave her and after using only one fifty cent bottle the cough left her and her throat and lungs were entirely free from inflammation. Since that time I always keep a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound in my house in case of emergency, as I know it is a sure cure for coughs and colds. It was the means of saving my little girl and I recommended it highly."
