Excellent Band Concert.

The complimentary concert given by the Holler Eight band Thursday evening through the generosity of Fred H. Lewis, was the finest ever given in Chelsea, and was attended by the largest crowd that has been in town since last fall.

The band consisted of twenty-seven pieces, being augmented by six musicians whom Mr. Lewis brought from Jackson, and the program of high class numbers was rendered without a flaw under the direction of Albert LaFée, who has charge of the organization. For the short time that the band has been in existence the progress they have made, the members show that they are thoroughly capable and will make the band second to none in the state.

The business men of Chelsea have pledged sufficient funds to guarantee the expense of free concerts weekly, and the people of this vicinity are assured of an opportunity to enjoy a series of excellent concerts during the summer months. The first will be given Thursday evening, June 1st. New members are being added to the organization, and are making rapid progress under the direction of Mr. LaFée.

Watch Out for the Game Warden.

Don't break the fish laws, or the game warden will get you. Not only must the fisherman take along a tape measure to ensure not keeping a fish under the regulation length, but an adding machine is an actual necessity in his kit, or he be caught with more of the finny tribe in his possession than the law states is proper and just. Not only the above must be looked after, but a speaking acquaintance with denizens of the deep should be cultivated in order that only the proper species should be retained, in case luck attended the sportsman. A couple of Chelsea fishermen failed to look after the above mentioned details Sunday, and when Deputy Warden Cobb looked over their catch, he found one string with twenty-six fish on it, while the other bunch was the resting place of a couple of black bass who were endeavoring to give an imitation of a blue gill. Justice Doty of Ann Arbor took their pleas of guilty and they each paid the sum of $22.50 fine and costs.

FIRE DEPARTMENT MAKES THREE RUNS

One Alarm Turned in Saturday Morning and Two on Wednesday

—One House Burned.

The fire alarm Saturday morning was the result of a burning chimney on the residence of George Shanahan, west Summit street. Smoke had begun to creep through the shingles and some one thought that the roof was on fire. No damage.

A fire alarm about 1 o'clock Wednesday morning was caused by the burning of a residence just west of the Chelsea Roller Mill. The building was the property of the Wm. Bacon-Holmes Co., and was unoccupied. The building was a mass of flame before the alarm was turned in.

A fire in an old house on North street, the property of Mrs. J. G. Wagner, was the cause of the alarm about 9 o'clock Wednesday night. A few pails of water subdued the flames. The fire department was sent to the Wagner residence on West Middle street. This was the second fire on North street on Wednesday, both in unoccupied houses.

Ann Arbor May Festival.

The Ann Arbor May Festival, to be held May 17, 18, 19 and 20, has assumed unusual proportions. A cast of soloists such as never before has been assembled in Michigan or in this section of the country has been engaged to take part in the annual classic.

As usual it will consist of four evening concerts and two matinees, with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Frederick Stock, conductor, the University Choral Union, and a special children's chorus of several hundred voices under Director Stanley, furnishing the musical background.

Frieda Hempel, the distinguished coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, whose success has been sensational, will be heard in a miscellaneous program at the Wednesday evening concert.

Thursday evening the Choral Union will present a new choral work—"Paradise Lost," by Bossi. Florence Hinkle, America's favorite soprano; Sophie Braslau, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Reinald Werrenrath, whose tour with Geraldine Farrer has attracted so much attention; and Gustaf Holmquist, a bass of wide recognition, will take the solo parts.

At the Friday afternoon concert the Children's Chorus will appear in a sparkling work by Pierre—"The Children at Bethlehem." Florence Hinkle will also appear as soprano soloist. The Children's Chorus has become a prominent feature and their contributions this year are of an unusually important nature.

Friday evening will bring to Ann Arbor for the first time that eminent Irish tenor, John McCormack, who will appear in a program of miscellaneous numbers, especially chosen for the occasion. To hear so eminent an artist under so favorable conditions will mark a memorable occasion.

The fifth concert Saturday afternoon will bring to Ann Arbor Ralph Kinder, well known concert organist and composer. Every organist of note is familiar with his work in both fields, while those interested in this particular instrument are especially happy at his selection. Lovers of good music in general will have an unusual opportunity of hearing the Frieze Memorial Organ in the hands of an exceptional master.

The climax of the Festival will be reached, however, in the last concert Saturday evening, when Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah," one of the most familiar and melodious operas adapted to the concert stage, will be given by an all-star cast composed of Pasquale Amato, baritone, who will take the part of the High Priest; Morgan Kingston, tenor, of the Century Opera Company, will appear in the role of Samson; and Margarete Matzenauer, whose Delilah at the Metropolitan Opera Company has been sensational; and Reinald Werrenrath, who will appear in the role of Abimelech and the Old Hebrew.

With so select a series of offerings unusual interest has been awakened throughout the state and country and musicians and music lovers from all quarters will appear, in large numbers for the occasion.

The sale of tickets has been exceptionally heavy, but there is still a limited number available which will be disposed of on a series basis up to May 6, after which time such tickets as have not been sold for the course, will be offered for the individual concert.

Persons desiring further information or a copy of the illustrated booklet, should address the secretary.

North Sylvan Grange.

The North Sylvan Grange will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ward Friday evening, May 12. The following will be the program:

Song.
Roll Call—Some tribute to mother.
Piano and Violin Duet—Mesdames Lesser and Broesamle.

Is the bringing up of the child left too much to the mother? Mrs. E. A. Ward.

Discussion.
Song—Kenneth Broesamle.
What place should the mother hold in the home?—Wm. Laird.

Discussion.
Solo.

Preparedness Exhibit.

A "preparedness" exhibit containing modern guns, mines and torpedoes, with a detail from the United States navy to explain the workings of the most advance implements of destruction will be one of the new features of the second biennial engineering exhibit of the University of Michigan to be held at Ann Arbor, May 18 and 19.

The departments of chemistry, natural science and architecture will collaborate this year, and a large sum of money is being set to obtain several new features. One of the departments will consist of an automobile show, as a part of the electrical engineering display.

WAYNE COUNTY WILL BE THE GOAT

RAISE OF VALUES WILL MAKE THE COUNTY PAY HALF THE STATE TAXES.

ABNORMAL CONDITIONS CAUSE

Will the Equalization Board Give the Case Fair Consideration? Devoilers Are Alarmed.

Detroit—The valuation of Wayne county, now being ascertained by the state board of assessors, based on highly inflated value due to frenzied real estate speculation and huge production increases, attributed directly and indirectly to war orders, will force Detroit and Wayne county to pay half the taxes of the state, unless the board of equalization can be convinced that the final Wayne county valuation is inflated and does not represent normal increase.

The question, which is beginning to alarm business men, industrial heads and small property owners is that the valuation eventually determined by the equalization board must stand for three years and if the war should suddenly cease, putting an end to the volume of business tractable to war orders or the boom in real estate should slump, the burden would fall on the small taxpayer.

Two years ago Wayne county was assessed at $928,728,000, equalized to $707,900,000 in round numbers, and the state was assessed at $3,324,000,000, equalized to $2,968,000,000, so that Detroit was paying approximately 25 per cent of the state's taxes.

The present situation is peculiar in that nearly all the rest of the state has already been valued by the state board, during normal conditions, and although all counties reported on show a normal and fair increase, it is feared the boost given Wayne county will be far greater proportionately, on account of the unprecedented prosperity of the city, a great deal of which is due to abnormal increase in value of industrial products shown on books of many of the city's largest industries.

Students of conditions declare that an accurate normal increase for Wayne county should be approximately $200,000,000, or a total valuation of about $900,000,000. The board of Commerce has been working on the taxation problem for weeks. They have tabulated startling statistics revealing enormous individual increases of products caused by the war demand. One factory alone, the committee conducting the work declares making war munitions, will be given a value five times its value two years ago. It is shown that scores of companies are affected by the war directly or indirectly. Companies manufacturing metals and alloys, for example, have contracted orders for six and eight months delivery. The cost of the materials for which will exceed the price of the finished product today.

The indirect effect of the war on Detroit and Wayne county industries is seen principally in the enormous increase in cost of raw materials and consequent boost in price to the consumer. Building materials have jumped 20 per cent in the past six months. Structural steel has to be ordered months in advance for delivery at greatly increased prices.

All metals have gone to record heights and most of the raw materials used in Detroit manufacture have followed suit.

LANSING BATTERY PASSES

The Examination Was the Same As That Given to Regular Army.

Lansing—The notification from war department that Battery A, First Field artillery of this city, had qualified under the new rules and regulations of the department and had been placed upon the list of batteries in the militia service, which are to be taken on the same basis as the regular field batteries, is considered a distinct victory for the Michigan National Guard.

The rules were that each officer must qualify and that in addition 17 of the men must pass the inspector's examination. The Lansing battery not only had all of its officers qualified, one of them as an "expert," but had 24 of its men pass the examinations. All will be given certificates from the war department, while they will also be eligible to a national competition which the government expects to stage among those who qualified.

The examination was the same as that given in the regular army, although not nearly so long a time was given the militia for preparation.

THINK BERNSTORFF BACK OF TELEGRAMS

WISCONSIN SENATOR TURNS EVIDENCE OVER TO STATE DEPARTMENTS.

ROBERT EMMET CLUB DOINGS

Many Irishmen Would Like to Know Who Signed Their Names to Telegrams.

Washington—Pointing out that the same organization which on 48 hours' notice caused such a flood of telegrams to members of congress could be used for any other purposes which German interests in this country might desire, Senator Paul O. Husting, of Wisconsin, has laid evidence before the department of justice and the state department which he thinks warrants an investigation.

Senator Husting will discuss this question with President Wilson. The senator believes German propaganda in this country should be scotched once for all, and with no mollicy-coddling.

"I think the administration ought to take a firm stand on this propaganda question," declared Mr. Husting. "The time is now ripe for it. Patience has been exhausted."

"I think the German ambassador ought to be called on the carpet and made to realize that he cannot go on with this propaganda. For it is obvious that the trials of all these societies and organizations which, under a half dozen names are working to bring about results which will help Germany, lead to the embassy, and some of them are rather slimy trails at that."

The co-operation of the Western Union Telegraph company in spreading the propaganda urging the sending of telegrams to members of congress was proved to the satisfaction of Senator Husting in a copy of messages sent by the company to citizens of Wisconsin.

In sending Senator Husting copies of this message, a Republican state senator, always regarded as a "stalwart" in the sense that he opposed progressive and near socialistic measures, declared that if this was the way the Western Union was going to run its business he, for one, favored government ownership of telephone and telegraph lines.

Some of the mystery attached to the form telegrams received by the Michigan delegation in congress from 121 Detroiters, some asking an embargo on shipment of arms to the Allies and others opposition to an alleged endeavor of the president to involve this country in war with Germany, was cleared by a statement from a member of the Robert Emmet club of Detroit that his organization had sent the messages received over the signatures of Detroit Irishmen.

There remains, however, the mystery of who forged the names of many prominent Detroiters, among them Ben Siegel and three county auditors, and the time connection between the German and Irish telegraphic attacks on congress.

Patrick Boyle, Jr., secretary of the Robert Emmet club, an anti-Redmond Irishman who was active in the wire propaganda, refused to say whether the Robert Emmet club has been inspired to its action by the American Embargo conference, which Senator Husting charged with being a pro-German body.

It was learned, however, that a member of the Robert Emmet club had received an appeal from the Embargo conference, asking that he and his friends appeal to their representatives in congress.

Arthur O'Leary, a member of the Robert Emmet club, said that the secretary of the club had sent messages over signatures taken from the membership list of the organization.

THREE MILLION WORTH DAILY

That is the Amount that the Allies Pay U. S. for Explosive Shells.

Washington—Europe's purchasers of war materials in the United States totaled $230,000,000 at the end of the first 20 months of war. Figures assembled in the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce show the heaviest month was March last, when more than $50,000,000 worth of munitions left American ports. April totals have not been completed. Shipments of high explosive shells and shrapnel are crossing the Atlantic now at the rate of $3,000,000 worth daily and vessels are carrying half a million dollars' worth of powder a day. Firearms and cartridges valued at more than $5,000,000 went to Europe during March.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

New York—War risk insurance both in this city and in London stiffened as the result of a report in financial circles that another German commerce raider had slipped through the British patrol. The raider was reported to have escaped during the recent bombardment of British east coast towns by a German battle cruiser squadron.

GOVERNMENT AGREED ON RECRUITING QUESTION

A Bill for Immediate General Military Compulsion for the Duration of the War.

London—Premier Asquith announced to an expectant parliament that the government had at last agreed on the much disputed recruiting question and had decided to introduce a bill for immediate general military compulsion for the duration of the war. The premier claimed that the condition he had all along stipulated as the only justification for such a step, namely, general consent of the nation, now had been obtained, as proved by the speeches delivered in the house of commons last week, when a bill, providing for the extension of military service, was introduced by Walter Hume Long, president of the local government board, and later was withdrawn.

Mr. Asquith added that the ministers agreed that the needful men could not be obtained by the existing machinery, but that they were available and could really be spared from the industries of the nation for the successful prosecution of the war.

Having given interesting details of the nation's success in its prodigious efforts in raising 5,000,000 men for the army and navy the premier expressed confidence that the bill proposed would end, once and for all the protracted controversy, and, in a general statement of the war situation, challenged the house to indicate if the government had lost the country's confidence.

The debate which followed the premier's speech showed that the bill is likely to have a speedy passage, as it met with general approval. A number of Liberal and Labor members, however, said in effect that the bill was not justified. They contended that the government had been gradually driven from point to point by the conscriptionist press and that military necessities had nothing whatever to do with the government's giving way.

THIRTEEN COUNTIES COVERED

State Tuberculosis Survey Examined 5,500 Persons 2,450 Afflicted.

Lansing—It costs the state less than $5 for each examination in the tuberculosis survey that is being conducted by the state board of health. If the present rate of progress is kept up to the end of the campaign, easily more than 20,000 persons will have been examined when the survey closes. And the actual making of examinations is but a small part of the service.

The low cost of the work now being done in the interest of public health in Michigan is the more striking when compared with the annual loss sustained by the people of the state as a result of tuberculosis. The state board of health has prepared a map of Michigan on which is indicated county by county the economic loss through tuberculosis annually, taking the year 1913 as an example. The loss as given on this map totals the enormous sum of $12,659,740. This is what tuberculosis cost the people of the state in a single year through loss of life, loss of wages, doctors' bills and the like.

In the 13 counties so far covered by the state tuberculosis survey at a cost of a little more than $25,000, the economic loss from the disease in a single year was $3,149,910, or 126 times as much as is being expended by the state to combat it.

The figures as compiled by the state board of health show that the people of Michigan are, each year, paying an enormously high tuberculosis tax. The total loss is approximately $4 a year for every man, woman and child. The present survey is costing each person only a little more than a cent and a half a year.

When the free examinations for tuberculosis conducted by the state board of health came to a close in Muskegon county, it was estimated by the "Health First" workers that, nearly 5,500 have so far been examined in 13 counties for this disease. Of this number nearly 2,450 have been diagnosed as being afflicted with the disease.

Paul Langdon, a Hubbardston farmer, 23 years old, was severely scalded when a traction engine he was driving tipped over. His condition is critical.

Amsterdam, via London—A high treason trial in which 16 persons were sentenced to death has just ended at Sarajevo, Bosnia, according to the Frankfurter Zeitung. Among those condemned to death were Vassil Grgic, a former deputy, and Mattia Popvic, a priest. Sixty-eight persons were sentenced to prison from five to 20 years. Fifty-five others were acquitted.

Berne—The Swiss troops on all their frontiers have been instructed to permit no deserters to pass in the future, no matter from which country they come. This step was taken to avoid diplomatic complications.

Winnipeg, Man.—Two great Canadian grain elevators were destroyed by mysterious fires. The Lake of the Woods Milling company, at Medicine Hat, burned with a loss of $500,000, and the 400,000-bushel elevator of the Rice Milling company, at St. Boniface, Man., was destroyed with its contents.

U. S. TROOPS TO REMAIN IN MEXICO

THEY ARE TO CONFINE THEIR OPERATIONS TO A DEFINITE AREA.

CASAS GRANDES TO BE BASE

General Obregon Strongly Opposes U. S. Troops in Mexico—But Yields to General Scott.

El Paso—United States forces will remain for the time being in Mexico, hunting for bandits, but they will confine their operations to a definite area. Casas Grandes will be the base of operations and the activities of the army will be confined to the western part of the state of Chihuahua. Their work will have to do strictly with hunting down bandits, in which they are to receive the co-operation of the Carranza government.

This is said to be the tentative agreement reached by Major-General Hugh L. Scott and General Alvaro Obregon, representing the two governments, in their conference at Hotel Paso del Norte.

General Obregon is said to have opposed strongly any attempt to keep the American troops in Mexico, but after an exchange of telegrams between himself and First Chief Carranza and the advisers of the first chief of Mexico, acquiesced to American insistence that the United States forces remain in Mexico, although protesting that he feared it would not be possible to control the Carranza forces if the American occupation continued for a long period.

Obregon is said to have been insistent upon the retirement of the American forces completely and to have yielded only on strong pressure from Carranza and others in the Carranza government, who, in appreciation of the recognition of the Carranza government by the United States, wish to continue friendship.

FRENCH ARE STILL GAINING

Take Five Hundred Yards of German Trenches in Length.

London—By pushing their counter offensive in the Verdun region the French have made further important gains in the recapture of trenches lost during the German offensive. Official and unofficial statements indicate that the French offensive is increasing in intensity in both infantry and artillery fighting and military observers here would not be surprised if the French attack developed into a great battle over the entire Verdun front.

The French official statement reports the capture on April 29 and April 30 of German trenches near Dead Man hill, east of the Meuse, along a front of about three-fifths of a mile and a depth of from 300 to 600 yards. In a strong attack southwest of Fort Douaumont the French captured a first-line German trench more than 50 yards in length.

Berlin, in its official statement, does not refer to the operations at Dead Man's hill except to state the hand grenade engagements by advanced posts took place northeast of Avocourt but it declares that in the Douaumont sector the French were repulsed after hand-to-hand fighting that lasted several hours.

MANY KILLED IN IRISH REVOLT

It Is Feared That Many Bodies Lie Under Ruins Still Unsearched.

Dublin—At least 500 rebels were killed and 1,500 wounded in the seven days' fighting in the streets of Dublin. It was estimated by soldiers who completed a canvass of the city. This estimate is conservative, officers said. Rebel bodies were found beneath the ruins of the general postoffice, wrecked by British shell fire, in Liberty hall and in a number of other buildings demolished by artillery or burned to the ground. The number of casualties was far in excess of early estimates and many bodies are believed to lie beneath ruins still unsearched. The Dublin hospitals are overflowing with wounded, including many women and children non-combatants. As rapidly as possible persons suffering from slight wounds are discharged to make room for those whose condition is more serious.

Havre—The Belgian government has received through the French minister a declaration, under which France, Great Britain and Russia guarantee the integrity of the Belgian Congo.

Wellington, N. Z.—One of Michigan's wealthiest citizens, and Saginaw's philanthropist, protested to the board of review against the valuation of $1,000,000 placed on his personal property. The assessment last year was reduced to $800,000. No action was taken.

Berlin—Emperor William has conferred the military order pour le merite on First Lieut. Buddecke, a German aviator in the Turkish service. The lieutenant distinguished himself in bringing down several hostile aeroplanes.

THE RASPBERRY

By OLIVE KENNETH.

When Blair Tuttle's sister Maud came home from finishing school she unquestionably had been thoroughly "finished."

Maud had always been content to wear hats that came from Mrs. Crindle's, but since she had brought home two hats from Madam Rose's in New York she hadn't any use for Crindle's.

"Isn't that the most impossible hat you ever saw," she said one day when she was passing Mrs. Crindle's with that big, good-hearted brother of hers, who was now in the graduating class at Truxdale, captain of the football team and one of the most popular men.

"It looks just like a raspberry sundae and it is quite as insipid and absurd."

Blair was more attentive to Maud's little tirade than she had expected. "You ought to know, I suppose," agreed Blair. "Now, I'll tell you why I am interested. You know our senior play. Of course, no one is supposed to know what it is about, but I have got to get your help. For some reason, I am in charge of the costumes. I have got to see that the fellows get the right sort of thing to wear for

American Flag Under Lions That Look British

WASHINGTON.—Four bronze lions, said to be exact copies of those on the Trafalgar square Lord Nelson monument in London, couchant on flags presumed to be the American colors, form a group on the Grant monument in the Botanic garden, which is attracting much comment at present because of the un-American idea the lions convey by reason of their position over the flags. Although the group has been in position for some time, this peculiar feature has apparently escaped notice until recently. The additions just being made attracted closer attention, however, from the casual observer.

The figures of the lions which have given rise to comment form the centerpiece of the monument. This section, therefore, is the most conspicuous. The center is raised, and on this elevated base is the large tablet on which the inscription is to be placed. Around this base, at each of the four corners, is a crouching lion, under whose body is stretched a flag, which, by the American eagle forming the head and by the fact that it is a monument to an American hero, might be taken to be the American standard.

The fact that the lions are copies of the British lions on the Trafalgar square monument in England and the sight of the flag stretched under their bodies has caused many tourists and other observers to wonder just what the motif of the group is intended to express.

To an artist perhaps the proud attitude of the crouching figures might convey an air of heroic protection, but to the ordinary mind this same proud appearance might mean haughty possession, and it is this latter impression, probably, which has caused the inquiries to be raised.

Commerce Department Talks of Volcano Foundry

A PROPOSED novel co-operation with nature in a manufacturing enterprise, whereby the great volcano of Kilauea of the island of Hawaii would be made to serve as a gigantic foundry for casting sewer pipe and bricks, is arousing interest among officials of the United States department of commerce. This interest is not only in the scheme as a general commercial feature affecting production and freight movements in territory comprising the United States. Every effort is being made by the territorial government to foster other industries than the dominant ones of sugar production and pineapple canning in order to solve pressing economic problems, and a suggestion has been made by the governor of the islands that congress authorize the federal department of commerce to co-operate in the work.

The possibilities of casting sewer pipe from the molten lava of the volcano have been studied by a retired pipe manufacturer from the United States who recently visited the islands, and he has even suggested details of the procedure by which buckets of exceedingly refractory material on an endless chain would bring the molten lava from the bed of the crater to its rim, where the pipes would be cast. Buckets capable of resisting 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit easily can be provided, it is declared, while the temperature of the lava has been found from scientific observations to be about 1,800 degrees. At such a high degree of heat the lava, it is believed, would remain liquid during the short time necessary to transport it to the molds.

Though the plan is so out of the ordinary that it sounds almost visionary to the layman, it is explained to the commerce department by its agents in Hawaii that Kilauea presents one of the best opportunities known anywhere in the world for industrial utilization of the earth's natural heat, since the lake of molten material is accessible and relatively quiescent, and workshops may therefore be erected and manufacturing operations carried on close to the rim of the crater.

Senator Reed's Secretary Bests the Constable

DON HUNT of Kansas City, secretary to Senator Reed, is the hero of District of Columbia motorists by reason of his victory over Maryland constables who arrested him Sunday for driving his "flivver" into the state without a Maryland license. Hunt's machine was adorned with Washington and Missouri tags, but the Maryland officials held that this was not sufficient. They escorted Hunt to a justice of the peace, who promptly assessed a fine of $5. Hunt demanded to be shown the section under which he had been penalized. It was produced with the result that Hunt pointed out to the J. P. that as a nonresident he was entitled to drive through Maryland seven times without a license.

"I am willing to take oath that this is my second invasion of Maryland," said Hunt. The J. P. perused the law and reluctantly handed back the fine. Under a recent decision of the Supreme court of the United States residents of Washington are required to have both Virginia and Maryland licenses in addition to the District tax if they desire to tour the neighboring commonwealths. Hunt, however, has convinced the Marylanders that this ruling does not apply to Missourians unless they exceed the tourist limitations.

Col. Harts Training His Watchmen to Be Camels

COL. W. W. HARTS, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, who is an advocate of preparedness, is putting his "watchman's brigade" at the state, war and navy building through a course of training for service in northern Mexico or any other old waterless waste where they may be needed.

As one of the features of the course, the colonel has removed all the watercoolers from the corridors.

And as the watchmen must now walk through miles of corridors and up and down long flights of stairs to get water, the result is twofold: Most of the men are developing a remarkable endurance against thirst, while others—those who must have water—are developing the muscles they would have to use on long marches and mountain climbing. In a sense, also, the "brigade" is getting practice in the use of firearms. Ever so often in the week, usually after the departments are closed for the day, the colonel gets his assistant to turn in a fire alarm in some remote corner of the building.

Thereupon thirty-odd watchmen in brass buttons and blue coats go tearing through corridors and bounding up stairways carrying fire extinguishers.

These hand grenades are aimed at the imaginary fire by that section of the "brigade" which, for purposes of military training, may be regarded as the machine-gun platoon, while those assigned to the heavier artillery handle the heavy hose lines.

Monday afternoon, however, is the time when the colonel takes greatest pride in his brigade. Promptly at 3:30 o'clock, the members of the "brigade" line up on the lot back of the state, war, and navy building, and are inspected.

The colonel, with his assistant acting as adjutant, walks slowly along the line in front of the men, and then along the line in back of the men, inspecting the hang of their clothes and the erectness of their carriage.

Established Styles in Summer Coats

A pleasing coat of taffeta, as plain as the mode allows, is pictured above. Its lines flare from the shoulders and underarms down with generous fullness at the back and sides and a little less at the front. Its flaring is managed in the cutting, and the fabric must be wide to accomplish it. There are plain, roomy sleeves finished with cuffs with velvet ribbon bordering them. A wider band of velvet borders the smart collar, and three widths of ribbon adorn the bottom of the coat, with the widest band placed just above the hem. There are pockets at each side of modest proportions as compared to those which some designers feature both on coats and dresses.

A coat of this kind made in one of the changeable taffetas in dark colors (blue and black, purple and black, blue and green, are examples) and finished with black velvet ribbon, or made in a solid dark color, will owe its wearer nothing at the end of the summer and fall seasons. It is as practical as it is pretty, and is usually made in black.

There are many much ruffled and ruffled and plaited coats in taffeta, very generous in their proportions and further amplified with attached capes. One wonders where all the taffeta used is coming from, for it is away in the lead as a popular material for afternoon frocks and suits, petticoats, jackets, and bathing suits. Then it is much used in bands on dresses made of both heavier and lighter goods. It is shown in many patterns. There are plain colors, and plain colors with sprigs of flowers over the surface. There are checks and stripes, plaids and cross-bars, besides innumerable changeable effects. Its crispness and body, with its light weight, make it an ideal material for our present fashions. In the very light changeable colors it makes the daintiest of morning or negligee coats.

Several of the foremost costumers are using taffeta in ruchings, and fraying the edges. These are used wherever platings and ruchings may be used, which is about everywhere. The coat in the picture might be trimmed with them instead of with velvet bands. By making a fuller sleeve and adding a shoulder cape, which may be detachable, it may be made to speak the last word in taffeta coats.

Hats Must Suit Occasions

You may have almost any kind of hat you will, without uneasiness as to its good style, if it is well made and has trimming of some kind. Everything is decorated, from sports hats to evening hats, and millinery is abloom with flowers and other trimmings, in greater profusion than for many years past.

Even the average woman refuses to be satisfied with one or two hats with which to face the summer season. Besides a hat for street or traveling, and a dress hat, she must have a motor hat and a sports hat, or she may make a sports hat do more than double duty. Milliners say that women have grown very discriminating and insist upon millinery made to suit the several occasions that take up the days of the good old summertime.

Those for sports and those for motor wear are to be had in good styles at comparatively low prices. Street hats and dress hats have advanced in price as a natural consequence of more trimming and additional work in making them.

In the picture two dress hats and a sports hat are shown. At the left a model for midsummer has a crown of hemp with a wide brim of lace hair braided edged with plain hair braid. Set about the crown, where it joins the brim, is a wreath of pansies and leaves. The blossoms are scattered works, are safe and commodious. Port Said is rated as the largest coal station in the world, and it is one of the world's important depots for all manner of maritime supplies. The population of the city is about 50,000, including representatives of every race and individuals representing all races at once.

Port Soudan Also is New. Another interesting city of the near East is Port Soudan, which was built to contract under a capable military administration and designed to meet all the requirements of a great future trade brought about by the development of the primitive Central African machinery, together with administration and storage buildings, were constructed according to generous specifications.

The new port was a successful venture from the start, doing a business of more than $2,000,000 in the first year of its existence. By the outbreak of the war it was handling the amount in value of its first year's work. Raw cotton, ivory, sesame, durra, skins, gum and senna, the Soudan's leading products, constituted the new port's exports, and its imports were mostly provisions, manufactures and timber.

SUEZ CANAL and PORT SAID

PORT SAID, situated at the northern entrance to the Suez canal, has, by force of many circumstances, become one of the most important outposts of the vast British empire, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. It is the British storehouse in the Levantine world; it is a British arsenal and troop station of rank; it is the base for defense of the all-important route to India and for offense against the Mediterranean and Red sea flanks of the Turks.

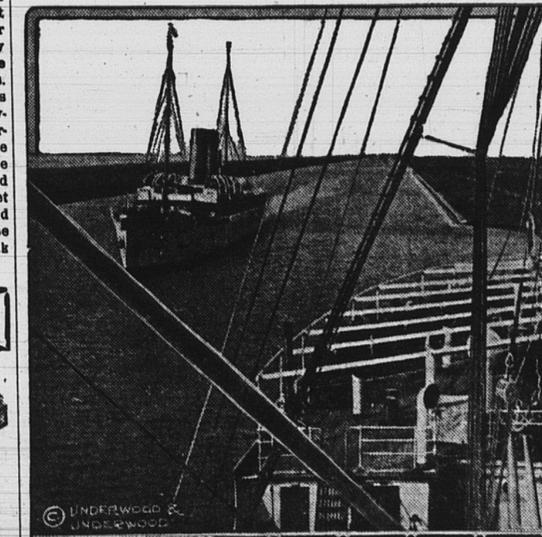

A pioneer city in the ancient East; one entirely the product of modern times, without traditions, customs, or properties; a heterogeneous, undefinable city of sweaty toil, gigantic business, of all races and of all the outcasts, Port Said has been a highly interesting phenomenon since its birth. It early earned a world-wide reputation for wickedness, beside which the modest fame of the western mining camp seems to merge into the mild and conventional. The most undesirable elements in the eastern and Levantine nations met, mingled and made life one excitement after another at Port Said. And the damp of the climate, the incessant clatter of shipping, the drear scenery, the never-ending cooling operations and the often fierce heat have combined to give the town a renown of a most unenviable sort.

Not So Wicked in Later Years. The English, however, have steadily dampened the arduous excesses of the busy, modern Babel; and, with the extensive harbor improvements of 1903-1909, with the addition of a large cotton export to the town's activities, and with the building of a standard-gauge railroad to Cairo, a better class of people have sought new interests in Port Said. Thus, with the increasing of the port's commercial possibilities and the coming of the merchants, the place has been considerably raised in the social scale and lowered in the scale of lurid interest.

The port city was founded in 1859, and its site was determined by the needs of the great canal. It lies on a low, narrow, desolate strip of sand that separates the Mediterranean from Lake Menzaleh. It is on the western side of the canal. The harbors of the port, improved by splendid modern

On a Barren, Hot Plain. Mecca, the holy city of the Mohammedan world, lies a little to the north across the Red sea from Port Soudan. The port is 700 miles by boat south of Suez, the southern terminus of the great canal, and 495 miles by rail northeast of Khartoum. It is situated in an arid plain, backed by a fringe of hills and barren save for mimosa thorns. The climate is very hot and damp, full of fever-danger for the European, and this has proved the greatest drawback for the city.

Soudan was planned in 1905. Its laying out and equipping went forward steadily until 1909, by which time the government had spent more than $4,500,000 on the town and harbor works. Commodious docks, outfitted with electric cranes and other up-to-date harbor separated from $3 for the privilege of seeing a fat bull bled to death, were some of the manifold activities of the place. The only person supposed to have a legitimate place of business in the town was a Chinaman, who conducted a laundry, and he was restored to the esteem of his fellow citizens when it was discovered that the laundry merely was a mask for an opium joint.

Difference of Opinion. "Pa, mother says you are 'one of the boys'." "Er—yes, son. She means I'm still youthful." "That's funny, pa." "Why?" "Grandma says it's because you are full of the 'old Adam'."

Tame Wild Silkworms. A great supply of cheap raw silk is predicted on the announcement that the wild silkworm of Africa has been successfully tamed.

WICKEDEST SPOT IN AMERICA

Last Stand for Gamblers, Gunmen and Desperadoes is Tia Juana, in Mexico.

Many visitors to the recent exhibitions in California who stopped in San Diego also took a look at Tia Juana, Mexico, a little group of one-story shacks, canvas walls and scenery fronted, that lay spraddled out in the broiling hot sun just far enough from the line to escape the legal restrictions of California and the United States government.

Tia Juana probably was—and is—the wickedest spot on the American continent, a sort of a last stand of the "gunmen," sure-thing gamblers, "honk-a-tonk" keepers and just plain desperadoes, who have been run out of all other sections of the West. Opium smuggling, gun running, conducting saloons with "win proof" gambling houses attached, hippodrome bull fights, in which the tourist was

PROTECTION OF MILK SUPPLY

Dependable Means of Determining Healthy Cows Afforded by Means of Tubercular Tests.

The increasing interest in the protection of the milk supply for the consuming public is one of the encouraging features of live stock improvement, and equally so as a sanitary means of improved health among our people. It has demanded some nerve and resolution on the part of sanitary officials in all parts of the country. It has become a risky proposition now for a health officer to lend his assistance to any dishonesty in the matter of covering up a diseased or unhealthy animal.

The guarding of the milk supply for the innocent purchaser and user is certainly a noble work for anyone in authority. The tubercular tests applied to cows in many of the dairies furnishing milk to city and townspeople have proved to be a very dependable means of determining the health of the animal as to this particular ailment.

There is but a very small per cent of the cattle on farms and ranges that are affected by this disease, except by coming in contact with the disease distributed through the dairy cow from diseased districts. The wearing of the tag in the ear is the trademark that all cow buyers should observe, if they are especially skeptical as to a cow's lung power and general tubercular standing. It is well to be on the safe side and insist on the tuberculin test.

LIABLE TO BECOME CHOKED

Trouble is Likely to Occur When Animals Attempt to Devour Vegetables Without Mastication.

(By H. S. EAKINS, Colorado Station.) Of all animals on the farm, cattle are, perhaps, the most liable to become choked. Choking is most liable to result from attempting to swallow without mastication, carrots, turnips, potatoes, apples or sugar beets. Cattle frequently choke on chewing leather, boot heels, old rags and all sorts of unseemly things which could not be digested if swallowed, and the practice indicates a depraved appetite.

In such cases, if the services of a veterinarian cannot be secured the owner will have to do the best he can alone, and the things that are usually done first should not be done at all. Attempting to pour water down the throat usually results in most of it going into the lungs, and the result is death of the animal, that might otherwise have been saved.

A case of turnip choke, came under observation recently. A sharp-pointed broomstick was thrust down into the throat in an effort to push the turnip downward, and the animal died from the injury. Less heroic efforts will usually relieve the animal. Whatever is attempted to relieve the suffering animal, do not try the drench or the broomhandle.

SANITARY DAIRY MILK PAILS

Old-Fashioned Habit of Using Open Bucket Has Been Discarded—Quality Now Counts.

A time-honored practice is to use an open pail and bring it into the house peppered with an unpleasant assortment of stable dirt and refuse. That may have been good enough for grandfather but you can't get away with it in these days of sanitation. Instead you use a closed pail, milking through a strainer packed with an absorbent cotton filter. Sure! They cost a little money, but so does anything worth while. For the fellows who believe in "Quality" such an investment will pay more than 10 per cent interest if a trifle of good salesmanship is used to dispose of the superior output.

BETTER FEEDING OF CATTLE

Best Method of Treating Manure is to Scatter It Over Fields in Winter or Summer.

The better feeding of live stock, the more valuable is the manure; and the more manure is worth, the more need is there for the proper handling of it. The best method of treating manure is to haul it out as soon as made and scatter it over the field, whether the reason be winter or summer.

Twenty-five Chelsea business men went to Ann Arbor Tuesday afternoon to meet State Highway Commissioner Rogers, who is endeavoring to locate the route through Sylvan and Lima townships for the lake to lake highway. There were advocates of two routes present, one party favoring the territorial road, the other pulling for the road to pass through Dexter, and buying a portion of the old Boland right of way, and thus avoiding two grade crossings on the Michigan Central. Nothing definite was arrived at and the whole matter is up in the air.

Superstitious persons were trembling Thursday and Friday evenings, while they gazed with awe upon the streak of light which stretched across the sky from northwest to southeast. Others had visions of a mammoth searchlight throwing its beams into the heavens. Others connected the phenomena with northern lights, which had been extremely bright for several nights. The claim of the latter is sustained by Prof. Wm. J. Hussey, astronomer, of the University of Michigan, who says the light was an extremely brilliant streamer of the aurora borealis.

The Michigan Central railway is confronted with a strike that affects every section on the main line and all of the extra track crews. The strike took place at midnight Sunday. The section foremen ask for an advance of $5.00 per month, annual passes for themselves and family, 15 days vacation with full pay for that period and nine hours as a day's work on Saturdays. The section foremen are receiving $75.00 per month at present. The striking trackmen ask for an advance in their pay. Both Chelsea section crews have been idle since Monday morning.

BREVITIES

YPSILANTI—Rev. E. M. Mulock, formerly pastor of an Ypsilanti Presbyterian church, has been added to the sociological department of the Ford Motor Co.

YPSILANTI—The marriage of Irving Beach was made public here Thursday. Beach has now married his sixth wife. He was married Saturday, April 22, in Bowling Green, O., to Miss Ida Greenfield of that place. When he obtained his last divorce in this county Judge Kinne forbid him to marry within two years. Beach however evaded the law by going to Ohio.

TECUMSEH—A fish aquarium in a local store window contains the only sea monster ever seen here. The specimen has so far survived the name siren-lactetina. Although caught in Red pond, near here, is said to be a native of south Atlantic waters, where it is known as a mud eel. Despite this common name, it is said to be, and looks, poisonous. It is about 15 inches long and resembles a young alligator minus the armor.

MILAN—Z. R. Miller, alleged to have passed a bogus check for $270 on a Milan banker Thursday, was arrested while stuck on top of a five foot wire fence, while trying to evade a crowd of pursuers, and taken to the county jail at Ann Arbor. When arraigned before Justice Doty, Miller waived examination and was bound over to the May term of the circuit court. He cannot give bail.

GRASS LAKE—The Home Telephone Company, of Grass Lake, managed by N. F. Wing, has petitioned the state commission to advance rates on farmers in that company to $1.50 per month, $1.25 if paid in advance. Members of the Brooklyn Switchboard Association who are inclined to be slow with their little old $1.25 for six months would get a complete cure by residence on the Wing or Bell lines a few months.—News.

A foot of gas heats a gallon of water; this means TEN gallons of HOT WATER costs a cent and no trouble. Call the Gas Company's representative. Telephone 135.—Adv.

CHAPTER XXXIV

It was ten o'clock on a morning in early autumn when Gerry finally got free of the freighter and took the ferry for the other side of the river. He had left all his baggage to be delivered at the house later. The morning was clear but sultry. In the city the apathy of summer days had settled down. People glanced at Gerry's heavy tweeds and antiquated hat but they did not smile, for Gerry himself was such a sight as makes men forget clothes. The tan of his lean face, the swing of his big, unpadded shoulders, his clear eyes, carried the thoughts of passers-by away from clothes and city things. They seemed to catch a breath of spicy winds from the worn garments that clung to the stranger's virile body and in his eyes they saw a mirage of far-away places.

As Gerry reached his own house, he was outwardly calm, even deliberate, but inwardly he was fighting down a turmoil of emotions. What was he to find in Alix? Had he anything to give in exchange? Had he too much? He climbed the steps slowly. His hand trembled as he reached out to raise the heavy bronze knocker. Before his fingers could seize it, the door swung softly inward. Old John bowed before him. For a moment Gerry stood dazed. The naturalness of that open door, of the old butler, of the cool shadows in the old familiar hall, struck straight at his heart with the shrewd poignancy of simple things. Old John raised a smiling face to greet him but down one wrinkled cheek crawled a surprised tear.

"Why Was He Waiting?"

Gerry held out his hand. "How do you do, John?"
"I am very well today, sir," said John. "Mrs. Gerry is in the library. She told me to telephone to the club and if you were there to say she wished to see you."
Gerry was puzzled. Why should Alix think he would go to the club? He strode to the library door. The door was closed. Somebody said, "Come in." The words were so low he hardly heard them. He opened the door, stepped inside and closed it behind him.

Alix, dressed in a filmy blue and white housegown, stood in the middle of the room. With one hand upraised, the other outstretched, she seemed to be poised, equally ready for advance or flight. Her eyes passed swiftly over Gerry's face, swept searching down to his feet and back again to his face. For weeks she had been wondering. Terrible things had come to her mind. Alan and Gerry with his heartless note, had conspired to mystify, to terrify her. All the joy she had looked forward to in Gerry's home-coming had turned into a bitter pain. She had not known on the hill how she was suffering. Only Kemp had seemed to understand a little and had brought his drop of comfort to her.

As her eyes searched Gerry the sense of impending calamity left her. He was well, well as she had never seen him before. Except for that he seemed almost weirdly familiar, as though only a good night's sleep lay between him and the morning of three years ago when he had bullied her until she had fought back and overwhelmed him.

A hundred little differences went to make up this solitary change. The flush of too many drinks had given way to a deep healthy glow, the eyes were deep and grave instead of deep and vacant, the broad shoulders that had taken to hanging were braced in unconscious strength. Every line in the body that she had seen start on the road to grossness had been wiped down. The body was no longer a mere abode for a lingering spirit. It had become a mechanism, tuned to expression in action. It was not the body of a time-server. Alan's sole word of comfort came back to her. "I never thought the old Rock would ever loom so big." What force had done this thing to Gerry? She felt a pang, half envy, half remorse. If she had been wise, less than that, if she had been merely sage, could she not have saved Gerry to himself and spared her faith the test of the three long years lost out of their youth?

Gerry stood erect by the door, one hand still holding the knob. Why was he waiting? Alix' raised hand went slowly out to him in welcome but he did not move. She smiled at him but his eyes remained steadfast and grave. A lump rose in Alix' throat and then, as pride came to her aid, a flare of color showed in her cheeks. Her lips opened. What could she say to hurt him enough, to say him back for this added, unjust rebuff? She knew so little about this new Gerry. How could she wound him?

And then he spoke. "Will you please sit down? There are things I must tell you."

Gerry had blundered on magic words. There is no moment so emotionally tense that a true woman will not drop the immediate issue to sit down and listen to the untold things she has wanted to hear. Alix was a true woman. The flare died out of her cheeks. She sank into a chair beside the dully shining mahogany table and with a nod of her golden head mentioned Gerry to a seat opposite her. She watched the easy swing of his body as he moved across the room. Gerry's mind was in sore conflict, but a body in perfect health has a way of taking care of itself.

Gerry sat down and gripped the edge of the table with outstretched hands. He looked steadily into Alix' eyes. The moment he had foreseen had come. Alix sat in judgment. She planted her bare elbows on the table, laid one hand, palm down on the other and on them both rested her cheek. Her head with its heavy crown of hair was thus to one side but also tilted slightly forward. That slight forward tilt gave strength to the pose and intensity. A curious, measuring look came into Alix' eyes. She was silent and she was waiting.

Gerry dropped his eyes to the table and began to talk. "The things I have got to tell you," he said, "begin with that day—our last day. I went out and walked for hours and realized that I had been rough and unjust and to blame. I came over to the avenue and was standing looking at some flowers when you passed. I saw you in the plate-glass of the window. I turned around to make sure. I recognized your trunk. I followed you to the station. I saw Alan signal to you. I saw you get into the train."

Gerry stopped. His premise was finished and he found that he had no tongue to tell the things he had thought—the long argument of the soul. He realized that all that must be left out. He must confine himself to mere physical facts, let them troop up in the order in which they had come upon him and file naked before Alix. She must dress them as she saw fit, as her sympathies and her justice directed. He would give her but the ground-work, plain simple words such as he could command, telling the events that had come upon him and how he had met them.

Of the trip out he had nothing to say but of Pernambuco he told her in detail. Somehow it seemed the least he could do for the filthy and beautiful city that had given him an unquestioning asylum. He told her of the quay, the Lingueta, with its line of tall, stained houses, its vast plane trees and its cobbled esplanade, the stage where the city's life was in perpetual review. His words came slowly but they left nothing out. Unconsciously he created an atmosphere. A light of interest burned in Alix' eyes. She saw the changing scene. It charmed her to "restfulness as it had Gerry.

She smelt the stacks of pineapples, the heaped-up mangoes, the frying fish, and through his eyes she saw the blue skies dotted with white, still clouds and glimpsed the secret, high-walled gardens with their flaring hibiscus, trailing fuchsias, fantastic garden cockscombs and dark-dotted mango and jack trees. She sat with Gerry and, later, on the long slim coasting craft she listened with him to the creak of straining masts and stays and to the lap of hurrying waters. She followed him up the San Francisco, felt his impulse with Penedo, took the little stern-wheeler and learned the fascination of a river with endless, undiscovered turns. They came to Piranhas. Here she felt herself on familiar ground. Letters from the consul's envoy had made this place hers. Unconsciously she nodded as Gerry described the tiers of houses, the twisted, climbing streets, the miserable little inn.

Gerry told of the happy days of penderous canoeing and of the unvarying strings of fish. He lingered over those days. Thus far he had brought Alix with him. He felt it. Now he came to the morning when he must leave her behind. He told her of the glorious break of that day, of the sun fighting through swirling mists. She saw him standing striped on the sandspit. She saw the canoe nosing heavily against the shore and his pajamas tossed carelessly across a thwart. She knew that she had come to the moment of revelation. She breathed softly lest she should lose a word for Gerry was speaking very low. Then he showed her Margarita, Margarita as he had first seen her, kissing and kissed by dawn.

Infant Mortality in China.
There is a high infant mortality in China. The English authorities in Hongkong have endeavored to keep statistics, and the results indicate that only 72 Chinese children in a 1,000 survive the first year.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

The worry cow would have lived till now
If she'd only saved her breath,
But she feared her hay wouldn't last all day,
So she choked herself to death.

Leftover Potatoes.

Cold potatoes are so attractive in hundreds of dishes that it would seem as if we might break away from the fried variety.

Creamed potatoes with finely chopped cheese served in a baking dish covered with buttered crumbs is a dish which is nutritious and good to look at.

Diced potatoes mixed with a few chopped olives, celery and nuts or meat are dainty and tasty served in green peppers and baked.

The shepherd's pie is another way of using leftover mashed potato. Fill a small bread pan with nicely seasoned chopped meat and cover the top with mashed potato, brush with an egg and bake. Another way, using more potato, line the dish with the potato an inch thick, bottom and sides, then fill in the meat and cover with potato. If the dish is well greased it will turn out in a fine loaf, which may be garnished with parsley and served cut in slices.

Potato and Nut Croquettes.—Take two cupsful of cold mashed potato, one-fourth of a cupful of bread crumbs, one-fourth of a cup of cream, one-half cupful of nut meats and the yolk of an egg. Cook together the crumbs and cream, then add egg and blend with the nuts and potatoes, season and form into croquettes; fry as usual.

Potato Puree.—Take a cupful of mashed potato, a quart of milk, a tablespoonful of chopped onion, or the onion may be scraped, a teaspoonful of celery, two teaspoonfuls of salt, cayenne pepper to taste, two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter. Add the milk to the potato and stir until smooth. The milk should be scalded with the onion and celery; strain this mixture into a double boiler and add two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, cooked together; season with salt and pepper. If the potato has been previously seasoned it will need less salt. Reheat and serve very hot. One may use more mashed potato if a thicker puree is desired and less of flour. If celery salt is used in place of celery less salt will be needed.

FOOD WITHOUT COOKING.

All fads in feeding must be taken with a grain of salt. The old story told of the Irishman who protested against the "animal food" prescribed by his physician because as he explained after he had tried it for a few days, the bran wasn't so bad, but he couldn't manage the hay and oats. Of course in foods with no cooking, "animal foods," such as fresh meats, are eliminated. Persons who make experiments are apt to be over enthusiastic because of successful results in a short time. One needs to give any sort of a bill of fare a trial of six months or a year before the real benefits are noticed. It would seem that this method would solve the everlasting problem of what to have for dinner, providing one didn't die of the monotony of it.

The following menu, varied little, has been found to be perfectly sufficient for a man doing office work. For breakfast an orange or grapefruit, and egg beaten and added to a glass of milk. Half a dozen prunes, as many walnuts and a small bowl of ground wheat. The wheat, ground, as it comes from the thrasher.

For dinner, a salad of celery, lettuce or water cress. An egg beaten in a glass of milk, a small bowl of wheat, a piece of fresh cheese, an apple or two and butter used on the wheat.

For luncheon or supper, half a dozen nuts, three or four figs, a glass of milk and an apple.

The bill of fare may be varied by a variety of nuts, fruits and vegetables of cheese. These foods, with a quart of milk a day will be found sufficient well to state that this food is to be carefully masticated. One should sleep in a room with plenty of fresh air and have exercise daily in the fresh air as well as a daily cold sponge or plunge with vigorous rubbing. It will be found after using this diet for months at a time one may partake of a hearty meal, eating everything from appetizer to dessert with no ill effects.

Turkish Royal Households.
There is no sultana of Turkey. It has not for centuries been the custom of the sultans of Turkey to contract regular marriages. The sultan designates from the inmates of the harem a number—nowadays very limited—of women who are called "Kadin," or full wives; this title is only given, however, after a child has been born to the sultan. All children born in the harem, whether their mothers are free or slaves, are legitimate and of equal lineage.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin drinking phosphate hot water. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your druggist or storekeeper a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish tinge which is not unpleasant. Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.—Advt.

Timid.
"Why don't you get a porous plaster for that lame back of yours. It cured you the last time."
"I know it did. That was six months ago, and I haven't had the nerve to take the plaster off yet."

Many School Children Are Sickly.
Children who are delicate, feverish and cross will get immediate relief from Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children. They cleanse the stomach, act on the liver, and are recommended for constipated children. A pleasant remedy for worms. Used by mothers for 15 years. All Druggists, Sec. Sample FREE. Address, Mother Gray Co., Le Roy, N. Y.

Placing the Blame.
"O-o-o-h! Bo-o-o-h-o-o!"
As the childish wall rang through the house the anxious mother sprang to her feet. Rushing into the hall, she met her little daughter coming in from the garden, and carrying a broken doll by the leg.

"What's the matter, darling?" she asked, tenderly.
"Oh-o-h, mo-o-o-ther," howled the child, "Willie's broken my do-oll!"
"The naughty boy! How ever did he do it?"
"I—I hit him on the head w-ir-ir!" was the slow response.

Great Russian Fighter.
More than any other member of the royal family, the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholavitch has devoted himself to the profession of soldiering.

As a youth of twenty-one in the war of 1877-1878 with Turkey, he went with his father, who bore the same name, to the Danube and the Balkans, where the elder Nicholas was commander in chief of the Russian forces in European Turkey.

He was then a junior officer in the hussar regiment and was on the staff of General Radetzky. He took part in the campaigns of Plevna, Lovcha and the Shipka pass, received the cross of St. George for valor and established the foundation of his present high reputation as a horseman and expert on cavalry matters.

EXPERIMENTS Teach Things of Value.

Where one has never made the experiment of leaving off coffee and drinking Postum, it is still easy to learn something about it by reading the experiences of others.

Drinking Postum is a pleasant way out of coffee troubles. A Penn. man says:
"My wife was a victim of nervousness, weak stomach and loss of appetite for years; and although we resorted to numerous methods for relief, one of which was a change from coffee to tea, it was all to no purpose."

"We knew coffee was causing the trouble but could not find anything to take its place until we tried Postum. Within two weeks after she quit coffee and began using Postum almost all of her troubles had disappeared as if by magic. It was truly wonderful. Her nervousness was gone, stomach trouble relieved, appetite improved and, above all, a night's rest was complete and refreshing."

"This sounds like an exaggeration, as it all happened so quickly. Each day there was improvement, for the Postum was undoubtedly strengthening her. Every particle of this good work is due to drinking Postum in place of coffee."—Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled, 15c and 25c pkgs. Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly, 30c and 50c tins.

Both forms are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup. "There's a Reason" for Postum.—sold by Grocers

CHAPTER XXXIII—Continued.

In those days when once more his thoughts demanded to be seen in their relation to Alix, that steady voice within him was his only comfort. The food at Fazenda Flores had swept away all that his hands had done, but the things that Fazenda Flores had done for him could not be swept away by any material force. They stood and feared nothing—except Alix.

Wherever his mind turned, it came back to Alix and found in her an impasse. Alix assumed more and more the portentous attributes of one unattached, sitting in judgment over his acts. His memory of her frailty, of her flowerlike detachment from the bones—the skeleton—of life, her artificiality, made her seem ludicrously incongruous in the role of judge. He could not picture her, much less estimate the sentence she would pass. His thoughts led him daily up to that impasse and left him. Then came the doubt and the question—why should he lead himself bodily to the impasse at all?

He was still fighting this point when he reached Barbados but there an incident befell which brought a new light to his mind and then a new peace to his soul.

He had gone ashore at Bridgetown simply because his whole body, perfectly attuned by three years of long hours of toil, was crying out for more exercise than the narrow decks of the freighter could afford.

When the little group of passengers reached shore, with the exception of Gerry and an old returning Barbadian, they all turned in the same direction as if by a common impulse.

The Barbadian glanced at Gerry and jerked his head at the disappearing group. "Men of the world in the big sense," he said.
"What do you mean?" asked Gerry.
"Son," said the old Barbadian, who was very tanned and whose kindly eyes blinked through thick glasses, "when a chap tells you he's a man of the world you ask him if he ever had a drink at the Ice house. You don't have to say 'in Bridgetown.' Ever have a drink at the Ice house? Just like that; and if he says, 'No,' you know he meant he was a 'town' rounder when he said he was a man of the world."

Gerry smiled and fell naturally in step with the Barbadian as he moved slowly on.
"Yes," said the old man. "It's a sure test. The man that hasn't crooked his elbow at the big, round deal table in that old, ramshackle drink-house can't say he's really traveled. Long-lost brothers and friends have met there, and when men that roam the high seas want news of some pal that's disappeared down the highway of the world they drop in at the old Ice house and ask what road he took. It's halfway house to all the seven seas."

"Have you lost anyone?" asked Gerry.
"No, I'm not thirsty for a drink just now," said the Barbadian with a smile. "And you?"

"Nor I," said Gerry, laughing. "I'm out to stretch my legs."

"You can't do that here," replied the old man. "You don't know our sun. Come with me." He hailed a ramshackle victrola.

Gerry hesitated. "You must have a home you want to go to and friends to see. Don't worry about me. I'll be careful about the sun."

"Boy," said the Barbadian. "I've got a home and I'm going to see it, but there's no reason why you shouldn't come along. As for friends—the ones I left here won't get up to meet anyone till the last trump sounds. Come along. You are the only company and I'm the only host in our party."

They climbed into the rickety cab and the Barbadian gave directions to the driver. The driver answered in the soft guttural of the West Indian black. Slowly they crawled through the crooked streets of the town. Gerry leaned back and gazed at the freakish buildings. They were all of frame-work. Some swelled at the top, and Gerry wondered why they did not topple over; some swelled at the bottom and he wondered why these did not cave in.

The Barbadian watched his face. "Funny town, eh?"
Gerry nodded.

Presently they found themselves on a country road. It was so smooth that the weighted carriage pushed the old horses along at an unwonted pace. Little houses—hundreds of them—that looked like big hiccups lined the road. Suddenly the carriage came to a halt. One of the little houses was trying to straddle the road. From around it came screams and cries. "Now, then, yo' Gladys, when ah say 'beft,' yo' beft."

The driver poured out an angry torrent of words that tried their best to be harsh and failed. From around the obstructing house came an old darky. When his eyes fell on the Barbadian he rushed forward. "Lor, Misteh Malcolm, when did yo' get back?"

Just now, Charles," said the Barbadian. "What's the matter here?"

The darky's eyes rolled. "Mastah, Misteh Malcolm? Why, that ole Cunnel Stewart he's jes' so natcherly parsimonious that he requires me to pay rent fo' havin' ma house on his lan', so I says to ole mammy, we'll jes' move this here residence on to a gentleman's lan', and Misteh Malcolm me'n mammy 'n the chile are jes' a-movin' it on to yo' old cane fiel'."

The Barbadian laughed a little dryly and shrugged his shoulders. The driver got down, protesting, and helped the family carry the house across the road. Then the cab went on and soon turned up an avenue under a fiery canopy of acacia flamboyante.

As they progressed, thick, twining growths, spangled with brilliant blooms, walled in the avenue. The air grew cool but heavy with scents and the full-flavored spice of a tropical garden under a blazing sun.

The air made Gerry dreamy. He woke with a start when the Barbadian said to the cabman, "This will do. You needn't drive in. Wait here."

The cab stopped. Just ahead was the ruin of a great gate. The two pillars still stood, but they were almost entirely hidden by vines. To one of them clung the rusted vestige of a gate. Beyond the pillars there was a winding way. Once it had been a road continuation of the avenue, now it was but a tunnel through the densely crowded foliage. Along the center of the tunnel was a narrow path. Even it was overgrown. The Barbadian led Gerry down the path.

They came out under a grove of mighty trees whose dense shade had kept down the undergrowth, and beyond the trees Gerry saw a vast, irregular mound of vines, with which mingled giant geraniums, climbing fuchsias, honeysuckle and rose. Then he spied a broad flight of marble steps; at one end of them an old moss-grown urn, at the other, its fallen, broken counterpart. Above the mound rose the roof of a house; through the vines, as the two drew nearer, appeared shuttered windows and a door, veiled with creepers.

The Barbadian went up the steps and tore the creepers away from the door. Then he drew from his pocket an enormous key. With a rasp the lock turned and the door opened, letting a bar of light into a wide, cool hall.

"Have You Lost Anyone?" Asked Gerry.

Gerry followed the Barbadian through the hall to a broad veranda at the back of the house. A large living room faced on to the veranda. The Barbadian entered it, opened the French door-windows and, dusting off two lounge chairs, invited Gerry to sit down.

Gerry looked around curiously. The living room was comfortably furnished. There were one or two excellent rugs on the waxed floor; a great couch, set into a bow-window; lace curtains, creamy with age; a wonderfully carved escritoire in rosewood; a sideboard, round table and chairs of mahogany that was almost as dull and black as ebony. Over all lay a coat of dust.

The Barbadian walked to the round table and with his finger wrote in the dust, then he sat down in a worn and comfortable chair, a companion to Gerry's. He fell into so deep a reverie that Gerry thought he was asleep.

Gerry got up and walked around the room. His eye fell on the table. He saw what the Barbadian had written; simply the date of the day. But above the freshly written date showed another, faded over with dust, and above that another almost obliterated. Gerry leaned over the table. He could see that a long succession of dates had been written into the thick-laid dust. Beginning with the fresh numerals staring up at him they reached back and back through the years till they faded away into a dim past.

Gerry tiptoed out on to the veranda. Before him was a ruined lawn; in its center a cracked, dry, marble fountain. Off to one side was a giant plane tree. From one of its limbs hung two frayed ropes. Against its trunk leaned a weather-beaten swing-bench. Under the ropes, a wisp of path still showed, beaten hard in a bygone day by the feet of children. Beyond the lawn stretched wide hummocky cane fields. They were abandoned save for little patches of cane here and there, bunched up against little hen-coop houses.

"Got a home, boy?"
Gerry turned and found the Barbadian standing beside him. "A home!" he answered, his thoughts flying to Red Hill. "I should think I have and it's a li—"

The Barbadian nodded slowly. "I know," he said, "you were going to say it's a live one. Well, as to that, don't you make a mistake. This home is alive too—just exactly as alive as I am, for I'm the last of the Barbados Malcolms."

"Home," he went on, "isn't altogether a matter of cash, comfort and cool drinks. Sometimes it's just a gathering place for memories."

"There was a time when we whites stood fifteen to one over the blacks on this island. Now the tables are turned. A chap that only takes a drink every time he sees a white man would have to go to a mass meeting to get drunk."

"Lately they've been sending out scientific commissions from England to sit like coroners on this mound in the sea. They say they're going to bring the corpse back to life. I've been offered a big price for this old place but I'm not selling."

Gerry looked at the Barbadian's rather shabby clothes. "Why don't you sell if you don't want to work the place? It's worth money. I know enough to tell you that."

The Barbadian rested one hand high on the thick trunk of a wistaria. A slow smile drew the corners of his mouth. "Worth money?" he echoed. "My boy, not every man kills the thing that he loves best. This is my home. You read those dates written in dust and still you thought my home was dead. But it isn't dead. I haven't killed the thing that I love best. You can get cash, comfort and cool drinks almost anywhere, but I have remembered that memories travel only beaten paths."

Even as Gerry picked his way back to the waiting cab he felt Red Hill reaching out for him, drawing him. And during the long, slow drive to the quay he learned that he had passed the crossroads that had given so long a pause to his troubled soul. The Barbadian had opened his eyes. Doubt left him. There was but one road—the road back—and it was open. He wrote his cable to Alix with a firm hand.

The freighter reached quarantine after a quiet voyage twelve hours ahead of time and just at sundown. A tug hurried down the bay to tell them their berth was not ready. The freighter was forced to anchor at the mouth of the narrows. Gerry watched the lights spring out from the shadowy shores. They beckoned him to familiar scenes. Staten Island had been to his boyhood an undiscovered land and the scene of his first wanderings. Bayshore he knew through constant passing by. In the sky beyond it hung the glow of the summer city; here and there pierced with the brighter flame of some grotesque monstrosity.

Up the bay the dark waters forked into two bands that lost themselves in a sea and sky of twinkling lights. He could just determine the sweeping arch of Brooklyn bridge and the presence of more than one new Tower of Babel that broke the ever-changing skyline of his native city and made him feel, by that much, forgotten and an alien. But from all the myriad lesser lights his eyes turned gratefully to the high-held torch of Liberty. Beneath it, the familiar, tilted diadem, the shadowy folds draping the up-standing pose, the strength and steadfastness and the Titanic grandeur of the statue, carried their message to him as never before. It became to him what his creator had conceived, an emblem, and the myriad

In Leap Year

By GEORGE COBB

There were two predominating features, dread and timidity, in the thoughts and actions of Ralph Burton as the leap year came in and he was made the target of organized menace and rally on the part of those who fancied they could play upon his weaknesses.

"You're a selected victim, Burton!" declared more than one of the little town club of which he was a member.

"Oh, he'll never escape through the month!" insisted others. "You'd better keep away from the trap of social functions."

"I rarely favor them," observed Burton gravely.

"And have a bodyguard," was the further advice. "I understand that the girls' clubs laid out a regular program, with dates and victims. Not an unmarried man in the town will escape."

"Yes, and a well-fixed individual like Burton will be the especial object of persecution!"

Ralph Burton smiled, but it was not a natural smile. Nature had awarded him a shrinking, self-deprecating element, and he had never battled it.

"Er—That is strange."

one of those disappointed, for in intelligence and fortune Burton was a most eligible party.

The "boys" at the club were fond of jokes and the arrival of the month with 29 days in it favored their wicked designs.

"Now, then, you want to rush the program hot and heavy!" was the decision of Ned Walton, a tireless mischief maker and therefore the plot to give Burton a period of misery was set in motion.

"A young lady called twice, sir," was the announcement of his landlady, two evenings later, when Burton came home from the office.

He colored and fidgeted. Visits from young ladies comprised a proceeding to which Burton was an utter stranger.

"Er—that is strange. Leave any name? Ah, perhaps my sister from Smithville."

"Oh, no, sir—I know her," disclosed the landlady. "She was veiled. Your visitor was young and graceful, and acted very anxious to see you. It struck me she was quite mysterious. And when she left I noticed she joined two other ladies in the street."

"Witnesses!" gasped Burton to himself. "If all the crowd tell about the outlandish exercise of the leap-year privilege by the female sex this year is true, I fear I am going to be the object of some annoyance."

For three days Burton did not go home to dinner. For three evenings he went without a light in his room and barricaded the doors. His "veiled lady visitor" did not appear again, however. He began to feel relieved, when a letter reached him.

Its pages were delicately scented and the handwriting was exquisitely dainty. Its sentiments were burning, professing "the ardent admiration of a longing soul seeking a life ideal, and finding it in him. It promised further epistles, it suggested that he wear a pink carnation in his coat the next day, in order that his correspondent might know that her continued attentions might not be distasteful to him.

That especial morning Burton buttoned up his coat tightly and reached his office by unrequited byways. He stayed away from the club, he had serious thoughts of taking a vacation. When one day a bouquet was delivered, he decided that affairs had reached the limit. He was so disturbed he decided to take a day off.

Burton made for the outskirts, craving for a day's solitude in the woods.

As he passed a certain louse he gave one startled glance behind him and quickened his pace. His blushing glance had caught sight of a faded lady of uncertain age waving her hand at him and calling his name. He feigned not to hear. He saw her throw a light wrap over her shoulders. He saw her run out of the front door.

"Gracious!" gasped Burton. "I do believe she is going to follow me. Yes, she is, and leap year—say! she may be the one who sent me those flowers."

In desperation Burton edged off the street. A row of bushes protected him. How was he to know that Miss Celia Dempster was simply seeking from him a contribution to the town relief fund for the poor?

Then as he glided through the open doorway of a great barn and realized where he was, Burton flushed to the roots of his hair. Why! he had invaded the precincts of the Morton home, and Ruth Morton was a very dear name to him, although he had never told anyone so—no one, not even Ruth herself, who would have been pleased to learn the fact.

Twice he had been Ruth's escort to a town entertainment. Then he had been too bashful to call. Often he had thought of her. Now he dodged back farther into the barn. Ruth, four of her little sisters and brother accompanying her, were making straight for his retreat.

"Why, Mr. Burton!" exclaimed Ruth, and she looked really pleased, though flustered, as she came upon him—"is this your long-looked-for call?"

"Er—why, yes," declared Burton in stumbling tones, feeling that he was acting like a dunce. "That is, I—well, I'm taking a day off and you see, sort of putting in the time—"

"Which you can do to decided advantage to us," chirped the sprightly Ruth. "Myself and this brood have about ten bushels of apples to pare and cut for evaporation. You shall string. Will it please you?"

"Please me? It will be delightful!" declared Burton.

"Then come, sir, you must be aproned like the rest of us!"

What a thrill pervaded his sensitive being as Ruth tied a big kitchen apron around him! What a novelty to be seated amid the gaily chattering group, doing his share of the work!

Then there was a grand lunch, then a ramble in the orchard. Mrs. Morton insisted upon his staying to tea, and then there was moonlight, and a feverishly delicious critical moment at the garden gate, his own face close-closer to the charming one of Ruth.

What ever possessed him? What put new courage into his timid soul? What irradiated his being as, after blurring out all the story of his fears and his hopes, he found in Ruth a truly loyal sympathizer.

Love, love, love!—it drove him, bold as a lion, to the club that evening. His fellow members stared. There was a new Burton revealed. He bore his head high. There was a happy smile on his face.

"Got you yet—the leap-year pirates?" questioned one of the group who had driven Burton into paradise.

"Oh, yes," answered Burton, and there was a cheer and joy in his tones. "One of the fair ladies has. Only she didn't ask me. Tell it to the world that I am the happiest man it holds! I'm going to marry!"

"Miss Dempster?"

"Not on your life! But charming, lovely, incomparable Ruth Morton!"

THE ORIGIN OF SURNAMES Those Most Familiar Were Taken Originally From the Occupations of the Holders.

Once upon a time given names were the only names in use. One was Tom, Dick or Harry, and that was all there was about it. Our present surnames arose from the nicknames.

Thus Tom the Taylor became in time Tom Taylor, and his descendants used Taylor as the family name. The most familiar of our surnames were taken from the occupations of our forefathers, as Smiths, Bakers, Brewers, etc. Many men, moving to new towns, had the name of the place from which they had come fastened upon them. Others took names like Pope, King and Bishop, from playing those parts in plays. Hogg and Bacon are simple. Purcell developed from pourceul, meaning little pig. Gait and Grice are old dialect words of the same meaning. Tod meant fox, Fitchie was polecat, and so the keen student of language traces the beginnings of our names in the old dialects. Some of the nicknames were originally distinctly complimentary, as Seely for silly, Cameron for crooked nose and Kennedy for ugly head. Grace developed from gras or fat—Ameri can Boy.

A Foe to Fire. "Our childhood ambitions are seldom realized."

"Too true."

"Life with me is just the reverse of what I thought it would be."

"How so?"

"I thought I was going to set the world on fire, and now I make my living selling life insurance."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Difficult Dict. "You Americans are becoming a race of dyspeptics," remarked the observant visitor. "You are too impatient."

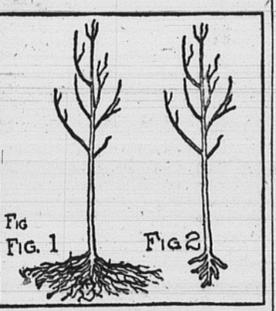

"Maybe that isn't it," replied the quiet citizen. "Maybe it's all due to the habit we've got into of swallowing our indignation."

MANY ORCHARDISTS OPPOSED TO PRUNING

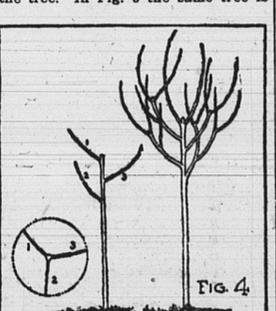

Apple Tree Girdled by Mice Below the Surface of the Ground.

Always when trees are dug in the nursery the roots are largely destroyed or injured. It is therefore necessary to trim them back to uninjured wood and also to cut back the top so as to balance the loss of root surface. Unless this is done the trees are sure to suffer and perhaps die. The figures shown herewith from a farmer's bulletin show how both root system and top are managed so as to get best results. In Fig. 1 the dotted line shows where the roots may have been injured in digging. In this case and also in Fig. 2 the untrimmed top is seen.

Figure 2 shows how the root system will look after the injured portions have been cut off. From this it is evident that the amount of top is far too great for the amount of root left on the tree. In Fig. 3 the same tree is shown after it has been pruned and replanted. In the circle may be seen the position which the three limbs occupy, as seen from above. It will be observed that they are practically equidistant from each other.

In Fig. 4 is seen a five-branched tree at the close of its first season's growth. The limbs were pruned back as indicated by the forking branches which spring from the tips of the previous season's growth. Fig. 5 shows how Fig. 3 would look at the close of its first season; also where the pruning should be done either that autumn

PEACH-LEAF CURL IS READILY CONTROLLED

Thorough Application of Lime-Sulphur Before Buds Swell Is Recommended.

According to observations made by the New Jersey station, peach leaf curl can readily be controlled by a thorough application of concentrated lime-sulphur before the buds swell in the spring.

Bordeaux mixture, applied early in the spring before the buds start, also will control leaf-curl, but the lime-and-sulphur mixture is advisable because it will control San Jose scale as well.

In using lime-sulphur it is essential to use a solution that has been properly prepared and diluted with water to a strength of not less than 1.03 specific gravity. The spray material should then be thoroughly applied so that every bud and small twig receives its coating. Any portion of the tree that is not covered with the spray material is likely to become infected. The object of the early spring application is to kill the spores of the leaf-curl fungus before they germinate. In other words, spraying for leaf-curl must be preventive as no cure is possible after the disease is established.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio. "I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 173 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely. It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How Bad Backs Have Been Made Strong—Kidney Ills Corrected.

All over Chelsea you hear it. Doan's Kidney Pills are keeping up the good work. Chelsea people are telling about it—telling of bad backs made sound again. You can believe the testimony of your own townspeople. They tell it for the benefit of you who are suffering. If your back aches, if you feel lame, sore and miserable, if the kidneys act too frequently, or passages are painful, scanty and off color, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy has helped so many of your friends and neighbors. Follow this Chelsea citizen's advice and give Doan's a chance to do the same for you.

C. Lehman, 420 Garfield St., Chelsea, says: "I was bothered by weak kidneys and backache. Constant lameness across my back annoyed me and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. At night I was restless and got up in the morning all tired out. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they put a stop to the trouble. My kidneys became normal and the lameness left my back."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Lehman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Do it with gas—heat water when the furnace goes out with a GAS WATER HEATER. Call the Gas Company's representative. Telephone 135.—Adv.

Here's Speedy Relief from Kidney Troubles

"Foley Kidney Pills have done me a heap of good." A. T. Bartlett, Brookton, Mass.

Some days it seems as if you can no longer bear the pain and misery you suffer from kidney and bladder trouble. The ache across your back grows worse with every move you make, and with every step you take. It not only robs you of all your strength and energy, but it affects the other important organs of the body as well. Nervousness, headache, disordered stomach, liver trouble, bad eyesight, are only some of the conditions that follow kidney trouble.

Foley Kidney Pills help the sick weak kidneys to regain their normal healthy state and activity. When they are again able to do their work effectively, your system is no longer choked and blocked with poisonous waste matter. Your symptoms clear up, your weariness, pain, misery and weakness go away. Foley Kidney Pills can do you also "a heap of good."
