Where do Your Apples Go?

The time has passed when good fruit could be produced with little or no attention to the growing. Now fruits are good or bad, the extent of either depending on the methods of culture and care you adopt. To obtain the better grade you must spray systematically and Sherwin-Williams Insecticides will give satisfactory and economical results.

Mrs. Albert E. Forner.

Mrs. Alice R. Forner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Heim, was born in Sylvan, July 25, 1886, and died in the hospital at Rochester, Minnesota, Thursday, May 18, 1916.

Mrs. Forner was taken to Rochester, on Wednesday, May 11, to undergo an operation for goitre. She was united in marriage with Albert E. Forner on February 8, 1910, and they made their home on a farm in Sharon until this spring when they moved to Chelsea.

The remains were brought here Saturday morning.

She is survived by her husband, one son Albert, one daughter Gertrude, her father and mother, one sister Miss Mary Heim, three brothers, Albert and Henry, of Rochester, N. Y., and James, of Sylvan.

The funeral was held from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Monday morning, Rev. Father Considine celebrating the mass. Interment at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Lafayette Grange.

Lafayette Grange will meet with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Atkinson, Thursday, June 1st. The following will be the program:

Lady Macabee Met Here Wednesday.

The Washtenaw County Association of Lady Macabees held their business meeting in Macabee hall Wednesday forenoon. County Commander Ruth Waltrous presiding. Fully two hundred members of the order were present, and all of the Hives in the county were represented, except Manchester. Altogether ten Hives were represented, nine from this county and one from Muskegon.

The degree team of Columbian Hive of Chelsea, exemplified the new ritualistic work of the order on two candidates in a very flattering manner. Whitmore Lake Hive captured the banner for the largest per centage of attendance of membership, and Emory Hive, who had the banner for the last three months surrendered it with a very pleasing original song. The hall was decorated with the colors of the order and white and pink lilacs and tulips, as was also the town hall where the afternoon session was held. The next meeting of the association will be the annual picnic which will be held at Whitmore Lake July 4th.

The afternoon session in the town hall was a public event and was well attended. The program as published in the Standard last week was carried out with one exception. Mrs. Eliza O'Brien, of Ypsilanti, who was to respond to the greetings of the local orders here, was unable to be present, and Carrie Monahan, of Whitmore Lake Hive, delivered the response address.

One of the pleasing features of the afternoon session was a baritone horn solo by Albert LaFée, who was compelled to respond to three encores. The numbers given were: "Day After Day", "Love's Old, Sweet Song", "Sweet Evening Star" by Wagner, and "Traumerei" by Schuman. Miss Nina Belle Wurster was the accompanist.

Evangelistic Meetings.

The Weaver evangelistic campaign continues with increasing interest and power. New faces are seen at each service. Friday night a large delegation from Trenton is coming to attend the service. They have chartered a car which will hold about 60 or 70 people. There will be something doing, so don't fail to be present. Prof. F. F. Leonard, who has been singing the gospel into the hearts of the people so efficiently, and who delighted the audience Sunday night with the song "Unload" will by special request repeat the same. Mr. Weaver will speak on "A Man up the Tree." The theme for Thursday evening will be "Men, Mushrooms and Mollycoddles." Sunday morning subject, "How to Win Souls to Christ." 7:30 p. m., "Five Ways to Hell."

MRS. F. F. LEONARD.

TWENTY EXAMINATIONS AT FREE CLINIC MONDAY

Six Cases of Tuberculosis Were Discovered and Five Suspicious Cases Were Found.

There were a large number who took advantage of the free clinic at the town hall Monday and it was impossible to examine all who presented themselves.

Dr. E. R. Vanderllee had charge of the work, and twenty examinations were made, six cases of tuberculosis were found, and five suspicious cases were discovered, and nine cases were negative.

There will be free clinics at the Y. M. C. A. building at Ann Arbor and also at Manchester Friday.

Next week will be the closing week in the anti-tuberculosis campaign in Washtenaw county. This week free examinations were held in Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Chelsea, Manchester and Milan. Next week there will be some free examinations for special groups, such as inmates of the county institutions and others for whom special arrangements have been made.

But the principal part of the work next week will be the giving of health addresses by various members of the party. Dr. Wm. DeKleine will appear before the common council of Ann Arbor Monday evening, May 29 to give a talk to them on health conditions in that city, and on the same evening another member of the "Health First" party will appear before the common council of Ypsilanti to do the same thing there. Moreover, talks have been arranged for at various other gatherings, and Dr. J. W. Plant, special lecturer of the party, will give a series of health talks in the schools of the county.

Nine of the twelve visiting nurses employed by the State Board of Health for this work will remain in the county during the entire week to visit the homes of all those who have this week been diagnosed by the state doctors as afflicted with tuberculosis. They will instruct the patients on how to get well and will tell the other members of the family how they should go about it to remain free from infection. Literature on the subject will be left at all the homes visited during the week.

Following the survey in this county a similar campaign will be held in Sault and Tuscola counties, after which the "Health First" party will go to the Upper Peninsula to spend some three months in that section of the state.

Cavanaugh Lake Grange Meeting.

The next regular meeting of Cavanaugh Lake Grange will be held on Tuesday evening, May 30th at the home of Miss Ricka Kalmbach. The following program will be given:

Song.
Roll call—About peace.
Select reading—Adah Mensing.
Recitation—Irene Richards.
Our business as home makers—Led by Mary Havens, Louise Schweinfurth.
Recitation—Earl Kalmbach.
Talk—The hope of the nation, the children of today.—Rev. George C. Nothdurft.
Dialogue—Mrs. Holligan's new hat.
Closing song.

Band Concert Next Thursday Evening.

The first of the series of open air band concerts given by the business men of Chelsea will be held Thursday evening, June 1st, at which time the Hollier Eight band will present the following program:

March—"Chelsea Fire Fighters"
Moose March.....Skaggs
Overture from "Martha".....Flotow
Overture—"United We Stand" Hayes
Turkey Wedding—Barn Dance.....
Intermezzo—"Sweet Isabelle". Young
"I'm on My Way to Dublin Bay".....
.....Murphy
"First Regiment March".....Addison

—dollar for dollar, you get the BIGGEST value in a Studebaker

The Studebaker SUPERIORITY in value is so self-evident that all we want any man to do is to make comparisons—to set the Studebaker cars, either one of them, down side by side with any other cars on the market and go over them point for point.

—judge for yourself

Here, for example, is a list of the essentials on which to base comparisons. Go over them in detail—then, judge.

—POWER: a big 3 3/4-inch bore x 5-inch stroke motor that develops FORTY h. p. in the Four and FIFTY h. p. in the SIX.

—ROOM: big, roomy, inviting bodies built for SEVEN passengers' comfort.

—SIZE: 112-inch wheelbase in the Four and 122-inch wheelbase in the Six—enough to insure riding-comfort but not too long a car to drive easily.

—Upholstery of the finest, straight-grain, semi-glazed leather.

—Finish put on with 25 body-finishing operations.

—DIVIDED and adjustable front seats, with completely disappearing seats in tonneau.

—Tank in rear with Stewart Vacuum Feed.

—Overlapping, storm-proof windshield.

—More handily arranged instruments on dash, indirectly lighted.

—The simplest and most reliable Electric lighting and starting systems, proved on nearly 200,000 Studebakers.

—Ample-size, equalized brakes and FULL-floating rear axle with complete Timken bearing equipment.

And what other car offers you as much, dollar for dollar of the price you pay? See

SOME RADICAL LAWS MAY RESULT

AUDITOR GENERAL FULLER IS LOOKING TO THE FUTURE CROP FROM AUTO TAX.

POINTS OUT THINGS TO COME

It Roads Are Not Kept Up to High Standard Damages May Be Obtained By Car Owners.

Lansing.—While the decision of the supreme court fixed the Newel Smith automobile license law firmly upon the state Statute books, there are several men about the capitol who do not agree with the idea of the law and who are fearful of the result.

One of those who does not think highly of the law is Auditor-General O. B. Fuller. He has been against similar laws for years and opposed the present law and its predecessor, which was killed by the supreme court. He is against the very basis of such taxation.

"I look for some radical laws in the interest of the automobile owner in the next session of the legislature," says Mr. Fuller, "as a direct result of the Newel Smith law. The man who owns an automobile, now that he has to give up his money for the good road system of Michigan, is going to be heard from. He is going to ask to dictate to a great extent how that money should be spent and he is entitled to some consideration."

"I predict that in time we will be compelled to settle for roads that are not properly maintained. Watch for some sort of a law which will give the automobile driver and owner some sort of recompense for damages when the road through a township is such that it has damaged his car beyond the usual wear and tear. One of these days the auditor-general will be called upon daily to audit claims against the townships, counties and the state for men who paid to have horses pulled them out of ruts."

"Sounds foolish? I know it does, but do not forget that once the automobile driver is in the seat he is going to ride some. The fact that this tax will produce an enormous amount of money which some say the state or the county, or the township, or the city would not have gotten any other way is going to make that sort of law hard to repeal. Beyond fixing up some errors in the Newel Smith law which have been found necessary—chiefly regarding the distribution of the money—I don't suppose the 1917 legislature will touch the measure."

"What do I think of the law? My answer to that is, who ever heard of taxing a horse according to his weight and his ability to draw a given load over a given road under given conditions?"

MICHIGAN FARMERS ORGANIZE

Four Hundred Gather at M. A. C. and Form Milk Producers' Association.

East Lansing.—Four hundred farmers, representing practically every county in the state, gathered at the Michigan Agricultural college and organized the Michigan Milk Producers' association. The new organization will have as its object the improvement of dairy conditions throughout Michigan and the increasing of the price paid the farmer for his milk.

The meeting was called by the Livingston County Milk Producers' association, who alleged that they were not receiving a price for their milk sufficient to pay for the cost of production. Much time was given to a discussion of the recent victory of dairymen supplying the city of Chicago, a victory that has resulted in an increased price being paid the farmers for their milk.

Rodney B. Swift, of the Northern Illinois Milk Producers' association, was one of the principal speakers. He explained the methods used by the members of his association and urged the Michigan men to take some definite action.

THE MICHIGAN NATIONAL GUARD

THERE ARE NO FUNDS FOR FOUR MORE BATTERIES THAT THE COMPLEMENT REQUIRES.

MUST BE FINANCED LOCALLY

The University of Michigan Corps Can Be Taken in If An Armory Is Furnished For The Purpose.

Lansing.—The Michigan National Guards needs four more batteries of artillery, needs them badly to make the complement suggested by the United States war department, but the state has no money with which to maintain them, and consequently all batteries that are now supposed to be in process of organization, in the state, independent of the National Guard, will have to arrange for their own expenses.

This in substance is the answer of the state military officers to reports that have been circulated regarding the formation of new batteries of artillery, particularly at the University of Michigan. One report had it that Battery B, of Lansing, had been ordered disbanded by the war department officials and the equipment transferred to the university.

"We need four more batteries of artillery," says Adjutant-General John S. Bersey. "But the state military fund has not the money to maintain them. A battery of artillery costs about $7,000 a year and the state fund is now being used right up to the limit. Until we can get more money, either through an appropriation from the legislature or through action by congress, there is no use of our talking of forming any more batteries."

"But where the people of a city finance the deal themselves and furnish a battery that will stand the government's inspection we can take it into the National Guard. We can do nothing for them unless the battery is financed independently."

Ann Arbor—Professor Hobbs, says only the consent of the Regents of the University and an armory is necessary to form a battery at that institution. He quotes Brigadier General A. L. Mills, U. S. A., who wrote the professor: "It is essential that a battery at the University of Michigan should be incorporated in the state forces prior to reorganization by the federal government. It is also essential that a suitable building should be provided as an armory for the safeguarding of the material and for the instruction of the personnel. This appears to be the principal item of expense to states and the real reason why their quota of field artillery has not been furnished. If the university could provide a building for this purpose, it is probable that the state would be willing to accept the battery. The essential objects to be attained are the provision of armory facilities and the recognition by the university of the value of military training in the curriculum. If you can secure these provisions from the university there should be no difficulty in having the state accept the battery and in having the federal government supply it with equipment and other authorized allowances."

Governor Ferris has issued the customary proclamation urging the observance of Tuesday, May 30th as Decoration and Memorial Day. DODGING THE INCOME TAX Corporations Are Said to Be The Greatest Offenders.

Washington.—Attempted frauds and evasions of the income tax law aggregating $8,380,185 have been frustrated by the treasury department, during the first nine months of the current fiscal year. The $8,380,185 has been added to the incorrect returns, assessed against the delinquent corporations and individuals and will be collected. Whatever additional evasions and omissions may be uncovered in returns yet to be investigated will be similarly treated. More than 80,000 individual and corporation returns have yet to be examined before the total of the amount withheld can be ascertained.

Agents of the internal revenue bureau, working under the direction of Commissioner Osborn, have for months investigated all income tax returns and will continue their work until every one of the returns for the past fiscal year has been checked and verified. The investigation is said to have disclosed that corporations have been greater offenders than individuals. By alleged evasion, omissions and direct attempts to defraud, corporations, whose returns have thus far been examined, are said to have failed to declare their correct taxes to the extent of $5,034,026, while individuals failed by $3,346,159. Of the alleged corporation delinquencies, $4,632,213 was discovered by the bureau's investigators, and the remainder $401,813 discovered in auditing the returns. Revenue agents discovered $3,028,016 of the shortage in individual returns and the remaining $318,143 was found by auditing.

Marketing is perhaps the leading aspect of this new phase of agriculture and the big place that marketing has in the farmer's outlook is doubtless caused by the fact that so much of the high prices which the consumer pays for farm products disappears before it reaches the farmer. Perhaps this is the fault of the middleman or it may be that the farmer himself is not a good marketer, but at any rate this is one of the problems with which farm business is concerned. The profitable selling of "two blades of grass" where only one was sold before has become the big problem in farming and all departments of agricultural study at the State Agricultural College, Lansing, are giving interest and effort to this matter.

Inseparable from good farm management goes the scoring of results known as farm accounting. Where the profit or loss comes from upon the farm, and when and why, is the aspect of farm business of which accounting takes charge. The intensive study of farming which the city man seems to cherish as the ideal type shows up badly when brought to the balances and inventories of the accountant and it is demonstrated that many of the farmer's "blue ribbon" products are his biggest failures.

The higher prices for his products is not the only way in which this most wide spread epidemic has affected the farmer. He is a buyer as well as seller and the doubling in the value of land and horses and other farm necessities in recent years has done much to cripple his gains. Farm business teaches that the farmer must have better means of credit than he has previously enjoyed and the "Hollis Rural Credit" bill now pending in Congress is proof of the farmer's need along this line. Credit facilities specialized to his peculiar needs in the same way that railroads and manufacturers have trust companies and merchants have banks will prove a long needed boon to the farmer. The college has shown a warm interest in supporting this phase of the farmer's business through numerous conferences during the past few years of prominent farmers and bankers to discuss this matter.

The "get together" movement or co-operation has not been overlooked by the college teachers. Business co-operation has indeed always received the approval of the college faculty since one of the oldest co-operative merchant associations within the state has been maintained upon the campus for almost two decades. In recent years the possibilities of using this co-operative principle among farmers has been strongly endorsed. It was at the Michigan Agricultural college that one of the oldest types of farm co-operative undertakings—the cattle breeding associations—had their beginning and more recently the study of all varieties of co-operative work among farmers—selling exchanges, creameries, elevators and credit societies—has been gone into for constructive purposes. It is not the belief of the college that it should actively promote the forming of co-operative concerns—the movement in this direction needs no stimulus—but it can be of service in counseling with new or prospective associations as to their prospects of success, style of organization, by-laws, and other technical details. The disadvantages of the unorganized farmers in dealing with and otherwise well-organized world has long since won the sympathy of thinkers for organization. A marked forward step along all these lines is planned by the college for the coming summer school from June 17th to August 1st at which specialists will present the latest conclusions upon all these subjects.

Dr. Edward Jones, of the University of Michigan will give a series of twenty lectures on the "Marketing of Farm Products." Prof. Alexander Cance of the Massachusetts Agricultural college will also give twenty lectures on "Co-operation." "How to Tell Profits" will be handled by Dean J. E. Bexell of the Oregon Agricultural college, and "Efficiency in Farming" will come in for ten lectures by Prof. R. V. Green of the University of Wisconsin.

Washington.—Reports to the war department from Major-General Funston indicate almost a complete fall down on the part of the National Guard organizations of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico in responding to the call of the president for service with the regular army along the border. Summoned to the colors, May 9, not a single organization from any of the three states has been mustered in. Not even the mobilization preparatory to the mustering of the militia into the federal service has been completed.

An official report from San Antonio states that 116 enlisted men of the Texas National Guard have daily refused to respond to the call and although court-martial proceedings will be instituted to punish them in accordance with the law, officials of the war department declare that beyond the infliction of punishment for failure to respond, there is no means of compelling the guardmen to serve.

At the present rate at which mobilization is going on for these three states, army officers figure it would require between one and two months to mobilize any considerable number of National Guard organizations from various parts of the country.

NEW AGRICULTURAL PROBLEMS SOLVED

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE SUMMER SCHOOL WILL GIVE VALUABLE SERVICE.

FARM BUSINESS IMPORTANT

Every Farmer and Farmer's Son May Acquire Knowledge of Great Value From Experts Who Will Impart It This Summer.

East Lansing.—Farm business is a characteristic product of the new agriculture. Time was when self-subsistence was the beginning and the end of farming, but the railroad, inter-urban and telephone have changed all this and the market must now be listened to by the farmer in the same way as by the manufacturer and the merchant. Within the limits fixed by environment the market determines his crop routine, his type of farming, his relations to the middleman and finally the balance of profit or loss which greets him at the end of the season. This change was brought about in farm business as a distinct side of agriculture.

Marketing is perhaps the leading aspect of this new phase of agriculture and the big place that marketing has in the farmer's outlook is doubtless caused by the fact that so much of the high prices which the consumer pays for farm products disappears before it reaches the farmer. Perhaps this is the fault of the middleman or it may be that the farmer himself is not a good marketer, but at any rate this is one of the problems with which farm business is concerned. THE SLAUGHTER AROUND VERDUN

GERMANS IN VIOLENT ATTACKS ARE REPULSED BY FRENCH TERRIFIC FIRE.

FRENCH GAIN MORE GROUND

Douaumont Was the Scene of a Desperate Struggle the Paris War Office Reports.

London.—The French increased their gains in the Fort Douaumont sector of the Verdun front and their offensive on both sides of the Meuse has grown in violence and scope to such an extent that military experts here declare the battle has entered the stage of a "fight to the finish." In the present situation, these experts say, the Germans must soon take one or more of the forts around Verdun or suffer such a repulse at the hands of the French as will mean a decisive victory for the latter.

At present the Verdun battle is proceeding with increased ferocity on all sides, with the French as much on the offensive as the Germans. The Paris war office communique "took on the character of extreme violence" along the whole front. After an artillery bombardment west of the Meuse the Germans launched an infantry attack, but the assaulting masses were "mowed down" by French artillery and machine guns.

In a second desperate attack the Germans gained a foothold in one French trench, but were soon driven out. Douaumont was the scene of a desperate struggle throughout the entire day, but the French continued to hold all the ground gained in the previous fighting.

The war office report, Paris says the French increased their gains "within Fort Douaumont," and that the Germans now hold only a small angle on the northeastern corner of the fort.

Berlin, on the other hands, says the French have taken some of the Douaumont positions, but that the "fort remains firmly in German hands."

Congressmen Want Portraits in the Directory

WASHINGTON.—The Congressional Record recently contained a petition signed by 65 members of the house recommending that in all future issues of the Congressional directory the photographs of the 435 members of the house accompany their autobiographies in that annual publication.

Furthermore, the house voted informally to include in the Barnhart printing bill an amendment authorizing publication of photographs in the directory.

An amusing debate, participated in by handsome and not so handsome members of the house, preceded the adoption of the amendment. Congressmen Edward of Georgia and Smith of Idaho sponsored the amendment.

Among the reasons advanced why the pictures of members ought to be published in the directory the following were enumerated in the petition: Members would be more quickly acquainted with each other; officials in the departments would easily recognize members and make introductions less necessary; the directory would be more valuable as a public document; the expense would be nominal, only a few hundred dollars each session.

When Congressman Ragsdale suggested moving pictures of members, and Congressman Walsh recommended a plush-covered album for the clerk's desk, Congressman Smith insisted that this was a serious matter, and he did not intend to reply to jocular inquiries. Mr. Walsh said that "it might be wise to have the fingerprints to aid in the identification of members."

Public Health Service Monkey Causes Trouble

BECAUSE an innocent, but bewhiskered, monkey belonging to the public health service was locked in a room while a citizen of Washington was looking up the animal's antecedents, the United States may be sued for damages. The room was the property of a man living near the hygienic laboratory, and although the monkey was the occupant thereof for only an hour, what he did to the apartment was plenty. He made gay with a pair of trousers, smashed a large banquet lamp and tore off 12 square yards of wall paper.

The trouble started when the monkey left the laboratory without permission. For several weeks he had been confined in a cage in the building and, in company with a horse, many guinea pigs and several chickens, had submitted to a number of experiments at the hands of surgeons. One of the uses to which he was put was the testing of serums, but he did not like the hypodermic. Watching his chance, one day he left the cage when one of the helpers forgot to lock the door, and within a few minutes was skipping over the roofs.

The first thing the surgeons knew about the monkey's escape was a call from a nearby retail merchant, who inquired whether a reward had been offered for the animal's return. "I will give you your monkey for $2," he said, "and that is cheap, too, for I had a terrible time catching him."

"But we have no fund for that purpose," replied the doctor in charge of the laboratory. "I think myself it is worth $2 to catch a live monkey. I wouldn't do it for $10." The man wanted to get rid of the monkey, so he led one of the attendants to his house.

When the door was opened to the room where the monkey was confined it was found to be a wreck. "Oh, my new trousers," cried the man who caught the runaway. "Just look at them; they cost me $9 last week."

"Perhaps you had better keep the monkey for the damage he has done," suggested the man from the laboratory.

"Not on your life," cried the owner of the trousers. "If he stays in my house two hours longer there will be nothing left. Take him away, and I will sue the United States for what I have lost."

Mystery of the Missing Reindeer Is Unsolved

WHO ate the reindeer?" is the question that is agitating the department of the interior. It is a deep, dark mystery. Herbert Meyer, private secretary to the secretary of the interior, affects to believe that the matter is one of no moment. But when he is pressed into discussion of the subject his face wears the expression seen upon the face of the cat after its justly celebrated interview with the canary. But he is the one member of the secretary's immediate official family who has produced an alibi for himself. Private secretaries, in the very nature of their work, are experts in alibis.

The story of the missing reindeer starts with the beginning of the winter's social activities in Washington.

For the first time in several years official Washington determined to resume the old practice of having cabinet dinners. That is, each cabinet officer in turn was to give a dinner to the president and Mrs. Wilson.

Bright young men about the department concluded that there was a chance to pull a clever stunt and incidentally advertise the resources of Alaska. Stephen T. Mather, a young millionaire who puts in some 14 hours a day at work as assistant to the secretary, put the idea into effect. He got William T. Loop, who is in charge of the Alaska school and reindeer service, to import a shipment of reindeer meat from Alaska via Seattle, and it was put in cold storage awaiting Secretary Lane's cabinet dinner.

The secretary was called West unexpectedly, and it was necessary to postpone the feast. Therefore the cold-storage warehouse had the custody of the precious meat for some time.

When the dinner date approached someone thought to check up on the meat. A delegation visited the butcher shop where it had been stored. Mother Hubbard's sensations on discovering the bareness of her cupboard had nothing on the sensations of the delegation. The meat, so the butcher said, had been withdrawn by order of the secretary. The secretary, when this was reported to him, was mystified, but since several have authority to do things in his name he concluded to remain mystified. Inquiries might prove embarrassing.

So it was that President Wilson had something else to eat when he tucked his legs under Secretary Lane's table. Alaska reindeer did not appear on the menu.

Even the President Couldn't Resist This Show

THE boy in a man remains even if the man becomes president of the United States. This was demonstrated the day President Wilson went to congress to advise the lawmakers that he had sent the ultimate note on the submarine to Germany. Plainly cognizant of the seriousness of the step he had taken the president left the White House in his automobile for the mile drive up Pennsylvania avenue to the capitol. Passing one of the local newspaper offices was a crowd of thousands stretched completely across the wide thoroughfare, stopping the presidential party, bent upon an errand of the greatest concern to the entire nation. The great crush pushed the president and the secret service men until they followed the upward gaze of the sea or faces and saw suspended in midair a man struggling to release himself from a straight jacket.

It was a well-known juggler performing one of his outdoor advertisements. The police forced a passageway for the White House car, which moved ahead slowly, the president all the while peering through the window at the side, then the rear, apparently as much absorbed in the man's antics as any boyboy. He seemed disappointed when the way was cleared for the continuance of his journey before the juggler had extricated himself.

WITH THE "BOYS" IN SOLDIERS' HOME

Veterans Reminiscent of the Glories and Hardships That Were Theirs During the Great Civil Conflict.

SEATED on the benches in the sun were a bunch of "the boys"—a part of the 5,000 living at the National Old Soldiers' home at Dayton, O.; comrades of the 11,000 sleeping beneath the row upon row of marble slabs, all precisely alike, just beyond the barracks.

"The boys"—yes. The fifty or more between "be hanged!" James D. Newberry, being wheeled about in a chair, was "Jim" again back in Kentucky, just "goin' on twenty," and letting his folks, who were "rebs," get mad at him if they wanted to; Peter Buolt, his eighty-three-year-old shrunk body wrapped tight in an army overcoat, was a dashing young Frenchman enlisting at Toledo; and Israel Wirtz, with a crippled right ankle from a wound at Peach Tree creek, and hobbling on crutches, was once more seventeen and the best foot racer around Palestine, O.

"There were fin girls in those days," mused John Lynch, pulling at his gray goatee, "and I'll never forget the one that I took buggy riding the moonlight night before us boys left New York state. I was living in a little town on the Hudson river and was captain of a boat, the Bella, if I wasn't but nineteen years old. I had come down the river with a load of lumber, and on getting back in town I got hold of a New York newspaper. In it I read of the battle of Bull Run. Coming up on Main street I found all the boys were talking about it. There were 13 of us in the gang and they said they would go if I would. That night we all took our sweethearts for a buggy ride and then had refreshments at Miss Duffy's ice cream parlor. We boys—merchants' and farmers' sons, not a one of us over twenty—were all combing our hair like General McClellan. Gad, those girls! I can see them now in their crinolines, and they all backed us to the limit about leaving."

Captured in "Wilderness."

"Well, it was along about this time of the year—early in May—that we boys who had chummed together up in New York state were pressing through the woods in the battle of the Wilderness. The trees were so thick that we couldn't see into them 30 feet. The commander of our division was to blame. He let himself be outflanked. All at once I heard firing behind us and I knew we had gone too far. I hadn't any more than looked around than I heard a 'Johnny' say: 'Put that gun up, Yank. Put it up or I'll blow it out of you!'

"The fellows who had cornered us were boys just like ourselves except that they had on butternut uniforms.

Why, when we rode with them on top of box cars, on the way to Andersonville, I had a knife they wanted. They could have taken it away from me, but they insisted on giving me $300 in confederate greenbacks for it. Afterward I gave the $300 for a watermelon, and we ate it—red, white, green, and all.

Took His Sombrero.

"Course we didn't know we were going to a place like Andersonville when those 'Johnnies' told us to hold up our hands, but there were a dozen of them to our one and we didn't argue. They took us back of their lines that night and corralled us on a beautiful meadow and we slept fine. I was wearing a sombrero that my brother had sent me from a Fifth avenue shop, and one of the guards came up and grabbed it. It made me so mad that I told him I could lick him, but he just laughed. I had to go bareheaded until the next day, when I picked an old cavalry cap out of the ditch. Wore that cap all through Andersonville with the sun beating down. You know what Andersonville was."

"I'll never forget that little curly-headed Ninlan Fox. Saw him lying in the bushes there in the wilderness."

They came onto a rail fence and tried to pull it down. When they found they couldn't tear the fence down they started to climb over it. Then we poured canister into 'em. We mowed 'em down like grass. But I tell you at first there at Gettysburg I thought they were goin' to get us. They hadn't stopped for anything, and their yell was enough to make your heart freeze. Did you ever hear the rebel yell? It sounded just like a lot of women yellin', but when we saw 'em waver and fall back—then we yelled.

"It was the liveliest Fourth of July I ever saw. It was 'load and fire' as quick as we could. I was a corporal in charge of a gun and there were twenty men lost in our battery. Goin' down the Baltimore pike after the fight and after the rain the gutters was runnin' with blood. When Mary heard about Gettysburg and knew I was in it she was pretty anxious, I guess.

DAIRY

VARIATIONS IN CREAM TEST

Common Cause of Dissatisfaction on Part of Seller—Use of Tester Is Urged by Expert.

(By C. H. ECKLES, Missouri College of Agriculture.)

One of the most common causes of dissatisfaction on the part of the man who sells cream on the butterfat basis, rises from variations in the test. This is especially true if each can is tested separately and the best way for the seller to convince himself that the tester is neither careless nor dishonest is to secure a little outfit for himself. A well-made, accurate and satisfactory tester can now be bought for five dollars and its use will not only satisfy the seller that he is getting honest treatment but will enable him to detect the boarders in his herd. The general interest in this subject is compelling the Missouri agricultural experiment station to reprint a circular for general distribution, but a little discussion of the principal causes of variation in this broader form may avoid the necessity for so wide a distribution of that circular.

Speed of Separator.—A change in the speed of the separator immediately causes a change in the tests of the cream, the higher the speed the greater the amount of skim milk thrown out and so the higher the test of the cream secured. Putting it in another way, a low speed results in a larger quantity of thinner cream.

Rate of Inflow.—The use of the float does not always insure a uniform flow of milk into the separator, because the faucet may not always be opened equally wide and the flow will be more rapid when the tank is full than when it is nearly empty. Anything which makes the inflow more rapid will increase the proportion of skim milk which goes through, and lower the test of the cream secured.

Flushing the Bowl.—The amount of water used in flushing may easily be varied a pint or more and this without any other cause or variation may change the test by two, three, or even four or five per cent.

Variations in the Milk Itself.—The milk of an entire herd may rise or fall in its test from day to day because of excitement or change in the weather. If the milk of a herd, whose average test is four per cent, is ordinarily so separated that the cream tests 40 per cent fat, the test will suddenly rise to 42.5 per cent if the milk of the herd is suddenly raised to 4.25 per cent without any change in method of separating.

Cream Screw.—The test is, of course, readily controlled by means of the cream screw, but as it is seldom changed in this way, on the average farm, there should be no trouble because of variation from this source.

Feed of the Cow.—Variations in cream tests are practically never caused by changes in the feed of the cow as every well-informed cream seller is now aware.

Mistakes and Dishonesty.—Mistakes are most likely to result from carelessness in taking samples, as they must be very carefully and skillfully taken if they are to tell the truth and result in a fair payment, but actual dishonesty is probably much rarer than many sellers believe. A clever thief would manipulate the reported test in such a way as not to arouse the suspicion that an honest report sometimes brings up in the mind of the man who does not consider all the possible hidden causes of variation.

SHORTAGE OF GOOD BUTTER

No Danger of Oversupply in the Big Markets in Spite of Large Production of Last Year.

There is one thing of which there is no danger of an oversupply, and that is butter. There is a shortage of good butter in the big markets at the present time, in spite of the large production of the last year.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Ability is often buried deep in content and indifference. A blow in the face has more than once stirred a good-natured, easy-going gasser into a realization of his real strength.—Herbert Kaufman.

GOOD THINGS.

A delicious roast which resembles venison may be prepared with a leg of mutton. Cut all the skin and every particle of fat from the meat and lard the leg with salt pork, using a larding needle. Put the meat into a kettle with a pint of water and a cupful of vinegar, a few peppercorns, one-fourth of a lemon, two onions, a carrot and a bay leaf. Let the meat soak in this three days, turning the meat twice daily. Drain and put the meat into a roasting pan with the vegetables and a cupful of the sauce; let it cook an hour and a half, basting it occasionally and adding more sauce if needed. Serve the meat with the sauce thickened with flour and sour cream; strain the sauce and serve in a sauceboat.

Beef Heart Chop Suey.—Boil the heart and chop in small pieces. Take two minced onions, one pint of tomatoes, two tablespoonfuls of chopped suet, and a quarter of a package of macaroni, previously cooked. Mix all together, put in a baking dish, add a cupful of boiling water and bake an hour.

Nut Loaf.—Take a cupful of chopped walnut meats, mix with a half cupful of bread crumbs and the same amount of uncooked, cooked rice, a tablespoonful of minced parsley, a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of red pepper, two eggs beaten, and three tablespoonfuls of butter melted. Mix well and mold in a pan until firm. Unmold and bake in a small dripping pan, basting with melted butter. Bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Cranberry Salad.—Take a half cupful each of chopped celery, apples and cranberries, with a teaspoonful of salt. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Pickled Tongues.—Let simmer for twenty minutes three pounds of salt, one pound of brown sugar, three ounces of salt-peter and seven quarts of water; skim while boiling and when quite cold pour over the tongues, which must be completely covered with the brine.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT.

What housewife does not enjoy putting dainty new dishes before her family, remembering, too, that the attractive way in which they are served is a large part of their popularity.

A delicious salad dressing for fruit is made by using two tablespoonfuls of honey, three tablespoonfuls of olive oil, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a dash of salt. Use as soon as blended. Especially fine on pineapple.

Sage Rarebit.—Cut fine a half pound of rich sage cheese, add two tablespoonfuls of flour; to two egg yolks, slightly beaten, add one and a half cupfuls of milk, a fourth of a teaspoonful each of paprika and salt and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Cook over hot water until smooth, stirring often. Serve on buttered toast or crackers. When this mixture is cold it makes a nice sandwich filling.

Fresh Strawberry Bavarian Cream.—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in water to cover, put a half cupful of sugar in a saucepan with a half cupful of water, add a half a box of stemmed berries and heat to the boiling point, but do not mash; turn in the gelatin and when thickened like egg white add a pint of cream whipped, folding it in carefully. Let stand to become stiff and serve with a garnish of berries.

Strawberry Dumplings.—Take two and a half cupfuls of berries, a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter, two cupfuls of boiling water, and let simmer a few minutes. Mix together a cupful of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and three fourths of a cupful of rich milk. Drop the batter in eight portions into the boiling sirup; cover tightly and cook twenty minutes without lifting the lid. Serve hot with the sauce and whipped cream if desired. Raspberry dumplings are prepared in the same way.

Fruit Sauce.—Take a third of a cupful of raspberry jam, or strawberry if preferred, add two tablespoonfuls of thick sweet cream, whipped, and serve on the pudding.

SNOBBERY IN THE CAPITAL

Residents of Washington Said to Have a Prejudice Against Those Who Are "In Trade."

In the American Magazine a member of the house of representatives was unusually frank in giving his opinion of Washington society. Among other things he said:

"One evening my little boy came in and mentioned that the boy next-door had refused to play with him, stating as his reason:

"You folks are just renters, and don't own your own home like we do."

"It was a trivial matter, of course, but it reminded me that we were living in a hotbed of snobbery. The youngster next door had not thought up that himself. He had got it from some of his elders. I wondered if, in the event that we came to our own home, my boy would have absorbed so much of the snobbish atmosphere that he would brush by some other boy and tell him he was nothing but a renter. I can give you another line on the snobbery that prevails in the capital of our democratic nation when I tell you that two of the leading clubs in and about Washington bar from membership all persons who are 'in trade.' A man may be highly educated, a well-bred and accomplished gentleman, but if he owns an establishment where anything is bought and sold across a counter he cannot be a member of a certain one of the best clubs, because, as I once heard an Englishman express it, 'the fellow works for a living.'"

"That reminds me that Washington more than any other city abounds in signs which say, 'Tradesmen to Rear Entrance.' Everybody seems to have a horror of coming into personal contact with persons whose living is provided by the work they do."

BURNED BY ACID

Many a Michigan mother has probably used this 88-year-old liniment on some member of the family. May be it did not happen to be some not so hard hard case like that of A. M. Millard, of Cortland, N. Y., who was almost burned to death by sulphuric acid, and who said this simple liniment "not only cured him, but removed the scars." Perhaps your mother used this same Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh just to cure a lame back, or to heal a wound, or a sore, or a burn, or to fix up any other external ill.

ANCIENTS HAD SHORTHAND

The System Used by Old Romans and Hebrews Was Not Based on Phonetics Like Ours.

We are told in a recent story, that not only the Romans, but the ancient Hebrews, possessed fine systems of shorthand, and that public men took stenographers with them wherever they went. This is not true in any strict sense, the New York Mail states. The ancient Romans and Hebrews had systems of shorthand, but not all shorthand. Their shorthand consisted of abbreviations, the use of letters for words, the introduction of arbitrary systems, and that kind of things. No system of phonetic shorthand, such as we have at the present day, in which a fluent character represents a certain sound, and in accordance with which the sounds of human speech can be transcribed as they are uttered, was known to the ancients. The shorthand system invented by Ciro, the secretary of Cicero, is well known; it has no phonetic basis. Two amanuenses were necessary to keep up with a speaker, and there are even tales that Caesar kept six amanuenses going at once. It is certainly a long jump from that to the handy girl of today, whose swift pencil easily keeps up with a man's utterances.

Few people at the present day have any just or correct understanding of phonetics. The average person confuses the names of a letter of the alphabet with the sound which it is supposed to represent, fails to distinguish between diphthongs like long "i" and the simple vowel sounds, and in many ways betrays the fact that he is quite without a phonetic sense. The teaching of stenography has spread a knowledge of phonetics, and in the long run must produce a much more general realization of the ridiculousness and wastefulness of our present system of spelling the English language.

ALPINE GRANDEUR AMAZING

Nature Has Wrought Great Changes to Uplift Their Magnificent Peaks—Volcanic Work.

Nothing in the world's history is more impressive than the story of the Alps. Ten or twelve million years ago, possibly far more, a long unseen line of weakness, a crack or fissure in the earth's crust, stretched away from France eastward hundreds of miles. On this line followed huge volcanic outbursts.

Next ensued a vast slow subsidence, which went on through geologic epochs until where Mont Blanc now rears its summit 15,780 feet was a sea fringing an old continent. Large rivers emptied into it. Deposits of mud, sand, gravel were laid one on another as the sinking went on until the layers became 50,000 feet, or nearly ten miles, thick.

Then at last commenced a great uplifting; the struggling subterranean forces raised a huge load. For ages this went on until the rocks, crumbled, crushed, contorted, rose above the waters and continued to rise, forming lines of mountain chains and making Switzerland a tableland.

Every hour since then rain and snow, river, glacier and avalanche have been sculpturing into peaks and carving into lakes and valleys that vast platform with its recent sedimentary covering and primeval granite core.

The result is a land of unequalled grandeur.

Robin's Peculiar Affection.

A robin which Edward Beltrando, a Red Lion (Pa.) shoemaker, saved from a cat has developed such an affection for its rescuer that when other robins in the vicinity migrated it remained behind.

Although the bird was never caught it does not stray far from the shoemaker's shop, coming there at intervals during the day and sleeping in the shop every night.—New York World.

City Men Better Developed.

City men are better developed than country men, according to the report of a German army surgeon, who bases his statement on the result of the examination of 10,000 soldiers. He says the farmers were inferior in carriage and in development of bone and muscle, and that he found among them more cases of curvature of the spine, flat-foot and varicose veins than among the city men.

Economy Urged.

"Economy" has become a word of unusual interest in the last year, though naturally to a less extent in the United States than in Europe. Our training has not fitted us to appreciate its dignity and cultural worth in both theory and practice.—American Cookery Magazine.

Shipping Industry Worried.

Lake Superior shipping interests declare that they will never be able to move the 65,000,000 tons of iron ore at which the demands of next year's steel contracts have been estimated. The big Minnesota mines are at the height of their prosperity along with the rest of the steel industry.

Take Places of Soldiers.

Berlin has five schools where women are taught the art of conducting a street car through the crowded thoroughfares. Each week between 300 and 400 women conductors are graduated to take the places of men called to the front.

AID FOR CRIPPLED

Artificial Limbs Brought to State of Perfection.

Ingenious Construction of Arm Enables Wearer to Perform Almost All the Tasks Possible to the Normal Man.

To those unfortunates who have been deprived of their hands and arms through accident or otherwise, it would appear that aid in the form of artificial limbs is about to be realized. At least, the artificial limbs invented by an American who, some twelve years ago, lost his arm while operating a milling machine in a Pittsburgh shop and devised the improved artificial limb during his convalescence—emulate the natural ones to such a striking degree that the handicapped heretofore suffered by cripples is materially reduced.

An artificial arm was recently exhibited at the International Surgical congress held in New York, and the dexterity with which its wearer was able to perform different tasks was little short of a revelation. The artificial limb permits of the performance of all ordinary tasks, including the drinking of a glass of water, buttoning of shoes, tipping one's hat and, as an extreme example of its practicality, the carrying a satchel weighing about 30 pounds.

In the artificial arm, fiber willow is used for the wooden portion, while steel gears take the place of joints and rawhide cords act as muscles. Each rawhide cord ends on a pair of suspenders fastened across the back and the chest, which furnishes the necessary tension. Thus the shrugging of the shoulder is made to control the arm and hand and the 240 parts of which they are composed. The rawhide muscles move the steel joints, and the union that obtains makes the action of the arm almost natural. The elbow is bent with a simple forward movement of the stump which, by means of the cord attached from the forearm to the shoulder suspender, raises the hand as high as the wearer wishes—high enough to take off his hat or brush his hair, if so desired.

A downward movement of the shoulder causes a slight tension on another rawhide cord controlling the fingers, which results in bending the hand backward from the wrist joint and the opening of the fingers. Another shrug of the shoulder closes the fingers and locks them so that they tightly grip the object that is being handled, from a toothpick to a valve. Repeating the downward movement of the shoulder causes the fingers to be unlocked. The wrist is provided with a hinge joint and a button and can be locked securely in three positions. If desired, the button can be pushed back and the wrist flexed automatically by means of the cord which opens and closes the fingers. All the work is done by the shoulders. Raising the elbow moves the wrist one-third of a turn.

The accompanying line drawings depict the more important features of the artificial limbs. At A and B are shown the back and front views, respectively, of the shoulder harness or straps and how they are worn. The straps are so arranged that by slightly varying shrugs of the shoulders the rawhide cords actuate the arm and hand in the desired manner. At C appears a sectional view of the arm, in which the three cords appearing at the left are, in the order shown, the finger control cord, the wrist cord and the elbow cord. The pivot appearing at the center is the elbow pivot. The two cords at the extreme right are the finger-operating cords. An enlarged view of the lever mechanism of the arm appears at D. At E is shown the bevel gear mechanism which serves to turn the wrist, while at F appears the hand member.—Scientific American.

Class Spirit in Rainbow.

The class spirit is going strong at Hartford City. A few days ago every high school girl in the school wore silk stockings of brilliant hues—the class colors. There was a display of hosiery of purple and gold, some pearl and gray, others green and white, and still others black and red.

The boys, not to be outdone, appeared next day similarly garbed, and in many instances wore collars painted in class colors.

WHO ARE MEXICAN PEOPLE?

They Had Civilization Before Spanish Explorers Entered Continent—Mixture of Races.

There are still numbers of Americans who are under the misapprehension that the Mexican is some kind of negro—or, at least, that there is a strong infusion of African blood, as in Haiti. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Not only is there less African blood in Mexico than in the United States, in proportion to population, but there is less even after you have eliminated our black belt. Many better informed persons refer to the native Mexicans as Indians. But they are not Indians—as we know Indians. True, here and there in the mountainous regions are found tribes of semi-savages who compare with the native peoples of what is now the United States, says the World Outlook. But they figure in national affairs little more than our own pure-blooded Cherokees et al. figure here. When the Spanish conqueror came the bulk of the aboriginal Mexicans were not savages, but a civilized people, as far removed from the wild nomads of North America as the white races themselves. This aboriginal Mexican element is variously estimated as representing from one-third to one-half the population, by some guessers even more. It has furnished some of the most learned scholars and exalted patriots celebrated in Mexican history. The greater part of the remaining population is made up of mixed Spanish and aboriginal blood, from which is derived the term, "Spanish-American." It is to this mixture of European and Aztec that is attributed the peculiar traits of the "Spanish-American character," and the supposedly woeful inferiority of our neighbors to the southward.

ST. JOHN'S EVE CUSTOMS

Brittany Village Folk Kindle Great Bonfires and Maidens Use Charms To Get Husbands.

Some of the customs of St. John's eve in Brittany are as quaint as they are picturesque. In many villages giant bonfires are built, and round them, in a circle, seats are placed for the departed. The cure has charge of kindling fire, or, where it is possible, a boy dressed as an angel is let down the bell tower by means of a pulley, and lifted up out of sight again after he has applied a lighted faggot to the pile.

To insure getting a husband before the end of the year the village maidens dance round nine bonfires, and return home to dream of the young man destined for them. At midnight they rise and lay the table with bread and cheese and garlic, and throw the front door wide open. There is no obligation for them to accept whoever is the first to enter, but it often happens that they do, for the right man is not likely to miss his chance. If, indeed, he appears, the parents are quickly called in to give their consent to a betrothal, which takes place there and then.

Swiss Move of Importance.

The Swiss federal council recently authorized the creation of the Societe Suisse de Surveillance. It will be composed of fifteen Swiss appointed by the council and chosen from the various cantons where German, French and Italian are spoken. The organization will supervise the importation of supplies and materials required for home consumption and to provide Swiss industries with material. It will exercise no control over the importation of metals, which is in charge of a separate syndicate under government control.

French Colonial Possessions.

The French possession of Indo-China comprises the colony of Cochinchina, the protectorates of Cambodia, Annam, Tonkin and Laos, and the territory of Kwong-Chow-Wan, leased from China—an area embracing approximately 310,000 square miles. The population is estimated at 18,000,000, of which about 35,000 are Europeans, the rest being natives, savage tribesmen, Chinese, Malays, and Hindoos. The principal city as well as the principal port of entry is Saigon, Cochinchina. There are now 1,378 miles of railroad operated in Indo-China.

Modern War Conditions.

The sword is the costliest single article in the equipment a subaltern officer of the British army must buy, and since under present conditions this weapon is worn only when royal reviews the troops that form of celebration is proving none too welcome in the new armies. Presumably grandchildren of veterans sixty years or so hence will weep over the dear little rusty tin can in which the old hero carried his bouillon to the battle line at Mons.

Gets Soft Wood From America.

China draws its principal supplies of soft woods from the United States and Japan. In 1913, the last year for which figures are available, China imported from the United States approximately 79,700,000 feet board measure, valued at $1,500,000. These imports were more than twice the amount of the preceding year and 16,000,000 feet in excess of 1910.

Germany Has 2,500 Ambulance Dogs.

At a meeting of the German Ambulance Dogs association it was stated that the number of trained dogs owned by the association at the beginning of the war was only eight, but that the number was now 2,500.

IS IT BABEL TOWER?

Ruins in Euphrates Valley Interest Archeologists.

Many Believe Tower Famous Structure Mentioned in the Bible—Built of Colored Brick in Succession of Stages.

It is doubtful if there is any place in the world so rich in ancient remains as the valley of the Euphrates, in Mesopotamia. The result is that to archeologists and scholars the place is a veritable "Tom Tiddler's ground," and new "finds" are constantly being reported. When it is remembered that tradition places the site of the Garden of Eden here, while amongst its many ruins are those of ancient Babylon, the promising nature of the valley to the scientific excavator becomes apparent.

It is near the ruins of Babylon that we find what many scholars believe to be the remains of the Tower of Babel—an immense cube of brick work called by the natives Birs Nimrud. Recent exhaustive examination of the strange pile and its site has revealed the fact that the tower which once stood here consisted of seven stages of brick work on an earthen platform, each stage being of a different color. The tower boasted of a base measurement of nearly six hundred square feet, and rose to an unknown height. Even today the ruins rise some hundred and sixty feet above the level of the surrounding plain.—Popular Mechanics.

A Lonely Pile, Worn by Ages of Weather Is the World's Only Claimant to the Honor of Being to Tower of Babel.

Dog Knows Phone Ring.

Bud, a Boston terrier, owned by W. P. Pinney, an employee of the Southern New England Telephone company and a member of the volunteer fire brigade, can distinguish his master's telephone call—two rings—from the other numbers on the 316 line, according to a Winsted (Conn.) dispatch to the New York Herald.

When the bell rings twice and Pinney is at home and does not hear the call the dog searches for him. By barking and other means he attracts his master's attention to the telephone.

When Pinney fails to respond at night to the double ring Bud dashes to his master's room and rouses him. That is one reason why Pinney never fails to report for duty at a night fire.

Napoleon in Opera.

Long ago dramatic authors put Napoleon I upon the stage. But until the present the little corporal has only spoken. Now he is going to sing. The libretto of the opera is ready and a Genevese musician, M. Joseph Lauber, is to write the music. The title is simple, "1815." The theme will include the flight from the Isle of Elba, the hundred days, Waterloo and St. Helena. The role of the emperor will be taken by M. Zimmerman, who joins to a strong tenor voice the Napoleonic face. The idea of making Napoleon sing does not lack in audacity and one may well ask if it will be accepted by the French public.

London Short of Doctors.

The operation of the English insurance act, with its free medical attention to the low-waged class, is seriously hampered by lack of doctors. In London, the 1,440 panel doctors have been reduced by 170 who have joined the forces at the front, leaving 1,270 to look after the city's 1,500,000 insured persons. If the remaining number is further reduced by the new armies, the medical benefit of the insurance act may be allowed to lapse, which would bring great suffering upon the poor.

South Africa's Fruit Exports.

It is anticipated that large quantities of oranges and other citrus fruits will be available for shipment from South Africa to England during the coming season. In another four years the South African shipments of such fruit will, according to the estimate of C. du Chiappini, British government trade commissioner to South Africa, amount to 400,000 boxes, and in ten years to 4,000,000 boxes annually.

Greece Exports Much Opium.

Opium is such an important article of export from Greece that it ranks third in the country's export list, coming after tobacco and currants. There was an enormous increase in the opium exports in 1914 on account of the war, which reflected to Saloniki shipments of the drug which would otherwise have been landed elsewhere. Opium shipped from Greece is used for the manufacture of morphine.

Dumplings

For Soups, Stews and Fricassee Chicken

Left over of roast lamb, veal or beef, the cheaper cuts of fresh meats, and fowls too old for roasting, make delicious and nourishing stews. K C Dumplings make them doubly attractive and the whole dish is most economical—an object to most families while meats are so high and must be made to go as far as possible.

K C Dumplings

By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, the well known baking expert.

2 cups flour; 3 level teaspoons K C Baking Powder; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 cup shortening; milk or cream.

Sift together three times, the flour, baking powder and salt; into this work the shortening and use cream or milk to make a dough less stiff than for biscuits.

Allow the stew to boil down so that the liquid does not cover the meat or chicken. Add half a cup of cold water to stop its boiling and drop the dough in large spoonfuls on top of the meat or chicken. Cover and let boil again for 15 minutes.

Made with K C Baking Powder and steamed in this way, dumplings are as light as biscuits and are delicious with thickened gravy.

This recipe is adapted from one for Chicken Pot Pie in "The Cook's Book" by Janet McKenzie Hill, editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine. The book contains 90 excellent recipes for things that are good to eat and that help reduce the cost of living. "The Cook's Book" sent free for the colored certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder. Send to Jacques Mfg. Co., Chicago.

What to Do When Backache Comes on

"Foley Kidney Pills have done me more good than $150.00 worth of other medicine," writes Chas. W. Fox of Elmwood, N. Y.

When backache comes on, and it seems as if you can't stand the pain and pressure in the small of your back and sides, do not feel that you must continue to suffer, but get a bottle of Foley Kidney Pills and begin taking them. They usually help from the very first doses.

It is worth a good deal to you to know that Foley Kidney Pills give you just what your system needs to repair the weak sick kidneys. It is their inability to do their work properly that causes your pain and misery. Foley Kidney Pills lend to middle-aged and elderly people the spryness and elasticity of youth. They take away the cause of backache, stiff and aching joints, rheumatic pains and annoying bladder and urinary troubles. Try them today.

STRANGE FASHION FREAKS

Women's Styles Follow Stage Fads or National Costumes—Garter Helped One Young Lady.

In nine cases out of ten fashions are born, not made, and they can often be traced to the influence of passing events. It would seem that the short, full skirts which are now in vogue originated with the Russian ballet which has been so popular of late, in the same way as the tight skirts followed the craze for oriental plays and dances. Following up the Russian influence, the Paris fashion experts introduced the Cossack coat and high Cossack boots.

Dress experts keep changing the fashions, as it were, in self-defense. At one time elaborately-worked and hand-embroidered blouses were the vogue. Then machines were so perfected that machine-embroidered blouses outlived the hand work, and fashion experts retaliated by designing blouses as plain as they could be made.

The fashion for uncured feathers was the result of a wet day. Curled ostrich feathers were on every hat, when, at some fashionable function, the rain descended in torrents and every feather was soon absolutely straight. Milliners, always alert for an idea, were struck with the appearance of these feathers, and uncured ostrich plumes became the demand.

The fashion for wearing ribbons intermingled with curls piled on the top of the head originated in the reign of Louis XIV of France. A certain Mile Fontange was out hunting with the king and court, when a branch of a tree caught her hair and pulled it down. With quick resourcefulness, she leaned down, pulled off her ribbon garter, and twisted up her hair with it. The king, noticing the pretty effect, complimented her on her charming coiffure, and from that moment the "fontange," as it was termed, became the rage.

It cannot be denied that most of the more extreme fashions originate with the stage, but the most lasting fashions are due to royalty. The vogue for black and white, which has not yet died out, was the result of the death of King Edward.

GOVERNMENT SELLS COAL

Two Big Fuel Stations in Panama Zone Have Thriving Business With Passing Steamers.

At the rate of 12,000 tons a trip two big colliers are now carrying coal to the government coal plant at Cristobal, Canal Zone. The colliers are the Achilles and the Ulysses. They are 500 feet long and 80 feet beam, the largest coal carriers so far constructed here.

The colliers start from Norfolk with their cargoes. They are fast twin screw vessels and make the passage to Cristobal in about five days. Each is expected to make twenty trips a year and accordingly they will carry 240,000 tons each to the government coaling stations.

The Achilles and Ulysses were built by the Maryland Steel company at Sparrows Point, Md., at a cost of about $1,000,000 each. They are commanded by former captains of Panama liners.

There are two government coal plants at Panama, one at Cristobal and the other at Balboa. The larger, at Cristobal, is capable of holding 750,000 tons, not including a reserve store of 150,000 tons for the use of the navy. Government agents say that they will always be able to sell fuel to merchant ships at a cheaper rate than private concerns.

Duck Flew Away From War Zone.

During the first week of December a hunter, several miles east of Henryetta, Okla., shot and killed a Harlequin duck, a rare species in this part of the Southwest. Attracted by the bird's beauty of plumage and markings, the hunter carefully scrutinized his trophy, on one leg of which he found a metal band marked "24 Berlin Zoo." The duck was mounted by a Guthrie taxidermist, and is now the property of Mr. Walter Wilson of the First National bank of Henryetta. The probable route of migration of this duck is regarded as of interest to ornithologists. Crossing the northern Atlantic in its flight from Germany, the duck reached the shores of America, and then proceeded far inland on its southward flight. Naturally, the noise and disturbance of war in Europe is attributed as a possible reason for the duck's long journey to a new land. It is hardly thought that the voyager came across Asia by way of Bering sea.

How Smoking Injures Health.

Laboratory work at the Paris Medical college indicates that tobacco smoking does injure the heart, but not, as generally supposed, on account of the nicotine present. Tobacco with various proportions of nicotine was used in the tests, and the effect on the heart was the same. Oak leaves were found to produce very much the same result as tobacco, and the conclusion reached was that the harmful effects are due to products of combustion contained in smoke of widely different origin.

Splinter From Heart.

Early in the present war a splinter of steel from an exploding grenade penetrated the heart of a French soldier where it remained for four and a half months. Recently surgeons succeeded in removing it in a delicate operation and the man is regarded as cured, for the heart acts normally.

HE APPRECIATED COLD DRINK

Farmer, in Enjoyment of His Refreshment, Calls on Wife and Children to Join Him.

Claude Martin of St. Louis county says this really happened: A farmer in the Creve Coeur district whose wife greatly deprecates his intermittent convivial tendency, came to St. Louis in the holidays and greatly enjoyed himself. Upon returning home he was extremely thirsty, desiring above all things, a drink of cold water. The bucket rose almost noiselessly as he pulled the windlass and he secured a mighty draft.

He drank till he could hold no more. The night was quite cold and the water splendid.

Suddenly, in the gratitude of his refreshment, he lifted up his voice. "Maria!" he shouted. "Oh, Maria!" "Whatever do you want?" demanded his wife, from the house. "What are you standing out there in the lot, bellerin' like a calf for?" "Oh, Maria," the husband pleaded, "you and the children come on out here and get some of this good water." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Out of the Ordinary.

"I'm very much afraid my wife is going to have brain trouble," said the druggist.

"What reasons have you for thinking so?" queried his friend, the doctor.

"Last Sunday," explained the pill-maker, "when she returned from church she repeated the text and never said a word about what the other women had on."

DIDN'T UNDERSTAND.

The Farmer—How you noticed how purty Silas Cornassale's daughter is getting to be?

The Parson (somewhat of an artist)—Why, she's as beautiful as Hebe.

The Farmer—No; she's a heap sight purtier than he be. She gits her beauty from her ma.

Rapid Progress.

"I understand you have a new hostler from England."

"Yes. I'm giving him a few lessons in hanging on to his 'atches'."

"What's the first lesson?"

"He repeats after me, 'Harry Hastings had a hotel in Hoboken.'"

"How's he getting along?"

"Fine. He can say that sentence now and only drop two out of the five 'atches.'"

Might Be Worse.

"Doppel certainly does look ridiculous in his motor car."

"Why so?"

"He wears big goggles, the latest agony in motor caps, a coffee-colored coat and a pair of enormous gauntlets."

"Well, I don't object to a man dressing up like that, just so he doesn't plaster his car with pennants when he makes a tour through the country."

Strategy.

Hub—I told Bohrsam that we might drop in on them tonight.

Wife—Oh, fudge! You know I don't want to visit those people, and I can't see why you do.

Hub—I don't. I told him that so that we can stay at home tonight without fear of having them drop in on us.

Ma's Too Busy.

"Everybody's sick at your house."

"Yep. Pa's got the grippe. So has Aunt Mary and Sister Jane. I'm just getting over it."

"And your mother? Has she the grippe, too?"

"Gee, whizz no! Ma ain't got no time to have it. She's got to wait on all the rest of 'em."

Growing Family.

"Taking a cheerful view of life is all a matter of habit," said the philosopher.

"Perhaps so," answered the man with a worried look, "but so long as the stock continues to show such partiality to my household, I fear it's a habit I won't be able to acquire."

Youthful Egotism.

"Miss Flivver will read a paper before the Thursday Literary club on 'British Bards.'"

"That's a rather large order. I should say."

"Depends on how you look at it. She says she can do Browning nicely in a paragraph."

Very Unusual.

"Then you say you have a model husband?"

"Quite. Since we have been married he has never given the neighbors a moment's anxiety."

BREVITIES

COLDWATER—Charles P. Conklin celebrated on Tuesday his forty-second anniversary as a member of the postoffice force in Coldwater.

GRASS LAKE—Ward McLaughlin & Co. of Jackson have purchased the warehouse on the corner of Main and Lake streets, formerly owned by A. W. and M. W. Dwelle.

ANN ARBOR—In addition to the veterans of the G. A. R. 200 high school students and two companies of university infantry will march in the Decoration Day parade here next Tuesday.

CLINTON—A peculiar coincidence presented itself to Willis Green when he recently attended Masonic lodge in Manchester. It was past masters' night and the officers conferring the degree that night were the same that formed the team when he was raised to a Master Mason 17 years ago. He lived in Manchester at that time.—Local.

DEXTER—When Edward French was returning home from Dexter early Thursday evening and as he was turning into his own yard, an automobile coming behind him at a high rate of speed and without any warning whatever, crashed into the side of his rig, striking the horse at the head and quite badly injuring it. The harness was smashed to pieces, but Mr. French miraculously escaped injury. Deputy Sheriff James Roberts was notified and overhauled the parties in Chelsea.

FOWLerville—After a year or more of undecided the Methodist people have at last determined to go ahead with their church building project and the old church building is advertised for sale. The official board decided at one its meetings some time since that when the soliciting committee had reached the sum of $8,000 in dependable pledges the matter would be considered feasible and that amount was reached a few days ago and the work will be commenced as soon as the old church building is disposed of and removed, as the new building will be a brick structure, and will be erected on the present site. The new building will be plain, but commodious, with a view as to service rather than display.—Review.

YPSILANTI—Automobiles don't come when they are whistled for, and specimens of the same "breed" cannot be readily identified by the owners, according to Police Chief Cain, who wishes that they were as easy to recognize as dogs. A business man got him out of bed recently and reported the "theft" of his machine. One of the same make was standing in front of the complainant's place of business, but a woman's coat in it had convinced the man that it was not his. The local sleuths found a second machine of the same make as the "stolen" car in front of a store next door. There was mud on it, so the frantic business man was sure that it was not his. The sleuths watched for hours during the drizzly evening. Finally the woman came. She had put her coat in the wrong car. The business man wouldn't believe the machine in front of his store was his until he had wired Lansing and found that the license number was the one standing in his name.

The little Glass girl who was so terribly burned last Thursday died that evening. The funeral was held from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Friday, interment at Mt. Olivet cemetery. Of the two boys burned, the Oesterle boy is in the most serious condition, but it is thought that they will both recover.

A "velvet gold fibre" screen has been installed in the Princess theatre by the Detroit Theatre Equipment Co. Pictures projected on the screen are remarkably clear and distinct, possessing great depth and a natural color tone, while the eye strain so noticeable to many people when pictures are being projected on a plain white surface is almost entirely eliminated, even when sitting close to the curtain.

Two interurban cars met in head-on collision about 8:45 Wednesday night on Watts' hill on the D., J. & C. Ry. near Jackson. No one was killed but several received severe injuries which may in two cases prove fatal. A limited and a local figured in the accident. It is evident a misunderstanding of orders was responsible for the wreck. Ernest R. Pierce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Pierce of Lima, was among the injured, and was taken to the hospital. His injuries are not so serious as first reported. Mr. Pierce is the D., J. & C. agent at this station. This hill has figured in other wrecks in which Chelsea people have been injured.

SYNOPSIS.

Sheridan's attempt to make a business man of his son Bibbs by starting him in the machine shop ends in Bibbs going to a sanitarium, a nervous wreck. On his return Bibbs is met at the station by his mother, Edith.

One of the near-tragedies of life comes when the poor young man or woman is snubbed by the rich crowd with whom he or she has played at school in childhood. It is then that poverty strikes, and pride of family doesn't help much. The situation is quite as interesting, though reversed, when a rich and lovable young man is snubbed by a poor but haughty aristocrat because he belongs to the "new rich."

"Oh, he's a friend of the whole family," she returned, with a petulance which she made no effort to disguise. "Roscoe and he got acquainted somewhere, and they take him to the theater about every night. Sibyl has him to lunch, too, and keeps— She broke off with an angry little jerk of the head. "We can see the new house from the second corner ahead. Roscoe has built straight across the street from us, you know. Honestly, Sibyl makes me think of a snake, sometimes—the way she pulls the wool over people's eyes! She hooies up to papa and gets anything in the world she wants out of him, and then makes fun of him behind his back—yes, and to his face, but he can't see it! She got him to give her a twelve-thousand-dollar porch for their house after it was—"

"Good heavens!" said Bibbs, staring ahead as they reached the corner and the car swung to the right, following a bend in the street. "Is that the new house?"

"Yes. What do you think of it?"

"Well," he drawled, "I'm pretty sure the sanitarium's about half a size bigger; I can't be certain till I measure." And a moment later, as they entered the driveway, he added, seriously: "But it's beautiful!"

CHAPTER III.

It was gray stone, with long roofs of thick green slate. An architect who loved the milder "Gothic motives" had built what he liked: it was to be seen at once that he had been left unhampered, and he had wrought a picture out of his head into a noble and exultant reality. At the same time a landscape designer had played so good a second, with ready-made accessories of screen, approach and vista, that already whatever look of newness remained upon the place was to its advantage, as showing at least one thing yet clean under the grimy sky.

Altogether, the new house was a success. It was one of those architects' successes which leave the owners veiled in privacy; it revealed nothing of the people who lived in it save that they were rich. In our swelling cities rich families, one after another, take title and occupy such houses as fortunes rise and fall—they mark the high tide. It was impossible to imagine a child's toy wagon left upon a walk or driveway of the new house, and yet it was—as Bibbs rightly called it—"beautiful."

What the architect thought of the "Golfo di Napoli," which hung in its vast gold level of rocco frame against the gray wood of the hall, is to be conjectured—perhaps he had not seen it. "Edith, did you say only eleven feet?" Bibbs panted, staring at it, as the white-jacketed twin of a Pullman porter helped him to get out of his overcoat.

"Eleven without the frame," she explained. "It's splendid, don't you think? It lightens things up so. The hall was kind of gloomy before."

"No gloom now!" said Bibbs.

"This statue in the corner is pretty, too," she remarked. "Mamma and I bought that." And Bibbs turned at her direction to behold, amid a grove of tubed palms, a "life-size," globe-bearded Moor, of a plastic composition painted with unappealing gloss and brilliancy. Upon his chocolate head he wore a gold turban; in his hand he held a gold-tipped spear; and for the rest, he was red and yellow and black and silver.

"Hallelujah!" was the sole comment of the returned wanderer, and Edith, saying she would "find mamma," left him blinking at the Moor. Presently, after she had disappeared, he turned to the colored man who stood waiting, Bibbs traveling bag in his hand. "What do you think of it?" Bibbs asked, solemnly.

"Gran!" replied the servant. "She mighty hard to dus'. Dus' git in all 'em wrinkles. Yessuh, she mighty hard to dus'."

"I expect she must be," said Bibbs, his glance returning reflectively to the black full beard for a moment. "Is there a place anywhere I could lie down?"

"Yessuh. We got one new spare room all fix up for you, suh. Right up stairs, suh. Nice room."

He led the way, and Bibbs followed slowly, stopping at intervals to rest, and noting a heavy increase in the staff of service since the exodus from the "old" house. Maid and scrub-women were at work under the patient nominal direction of another Pullman porter, who was profoundly enjoying his own affectation of being harassed with care.

"Nothing but look apick an' span to the big doan's tonight," Bibbs guided explained, chuckling. "Yessuh, we got the doan's tonight! Big doan's!"

The Turmoil

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

(Copyright 1915, by Harper & Brothers)

The room to which he conducted his luggage charge was furnished in every particular like a room in a new hotel; and Bibbs found it pleasant—though, indeed, any room with a good bed would have seemed pleasant to him after his journey. He stretched himself flat immediately, and having replied "Not now" to the attendant's offer to unpack the bag, closed his eyes wearily.

White-jacket, racially sympathetic, lowered the window shades and made an exit on tiptoe, encountering the other white jacket—the harassed over-seer—in the hall without. Said the emerging one:

"He mighty shaky, Mist' Jackson. Drop right down an' shet his eyes. Eyelids all black. Rich folks gotta go same as anybody else. Anybody ast me if I change 'th 'at ole boy—No, suh! Le'm keep 'is money; I keep my black skin an' keep out the ground!"

Mr. Jackson expressed the same preference. "Yessuh, he look tuh me like somebody awready laid out—"

He fell silent at a rustling of skirts in the corridor. It was Mrs. Sheridan hurrying to greet her son.

She was one of those fat, pink people who fade and contract with age like drying fruit; and her outside was a true portrait of her. Her husband and her daughter had long ago absorbed her. Edith lived all day with her mother; as daughters do; and Sheridan so held his wife to her unity with him that she had long ago become unconscious of her existence as a thing separate from him.

Mrs. Sheridan's manner was hurried and inconsequent; her clothes rustled more than other women's clothes; she seemed to wear too many at a time and to be vaguely troubled by them, and she was patting a skirt down over some unruly internal dissension at the moment she opened Bibbs's door.

At sight of the recumbent figure she began to close the door softly, withdrawing, but the young man had heard the turning of the knob and the rustling of skirts, and he opened his eyes.

"Don't go, mother," he said. "I'm not asleep." He swung his long legs over the side of the bed to rise, but she set a hand on his shoulder, restraining him; and he lay flat again.

"No," she said, bending over to kiss his cheek, "I just come for a minute,

"You Look a Great Deal Better Than What I Expected."

but I want to see how you seem. Edith said—"

"Poor Edith!" he murmured. "She couldn't look at me. She—"

"Nonsense!" Mrs. Sheridan, having let in the light at a window, came back to the bedside. "You look a great deal better than what you did before you went to the sanitarium, anyway. It's done you good; a body can see that right away. You need fattening up, of course, and you haven't got much color—"

"No," he said, "I haven't much color."

"You look a great deal better than what I expected."

"Edith must have a great vocabulary!" he chuckled.

"She's too sensitive," said Mrs. Sheridan, "and it makes her exaggerate a little. What about your diet?"

"That's all right. They told me to eat anything."

"That's good," she said, nodding. "They mean for you just to build up your strength. That's what they told me the last time I went to see you at the sanitarium. You look better than what you did then, and that's only a little time ago. How long was it?"

"Eight months, I think."

"No, it couldn't be. I know it ain't that long, but maybe it was longer in I thought. And this last month or so I haven't had scarcely even time to write more than just a line to ask how you were gettin' along, but I told Edith to write, the weeks I couldn't, and I asked Jim, too, and they both said they would, so I suppose you've kept up pretty well on the home news."

"Oh, yes."

"What I think you need," said the mother, gravely, "is to live up a little and take an interest in things. That's what papa was sayin' this morning, after we got your telegram; and that's what'll stimulate your appetite, too. He was talkin' over his plans for you—"

"Plans?" Bibbs, turning on his side, shielded his eyes from the light with his hand, so that he might see her better. "What—?" He paused. "What plans is he making for me, mother?"

"She turned away, going back to the window to draw down the shade. "Well, you better talk it over with him," she said, with perceptible nervousness. "He better tell you himself. I don't feel as if I had any call, exactly, to go into it; and you better get to sleep now, anyway."

She came and stood by the bedside once more. "But you must remember, Bibbs, whatever papa does is for the best. He loves his children and wants to do what's right by all of 'em—and you'll always find he's right in the end."

He made a little gesture of assent, which seemed to content her; and she rustled to the door, turning to speak again after she had opened it. "You get a good nap, now, so as to be all rested up for tonight."

"You—you mean—he—" Bibbs stammered, having begun to speak too quickly. Checking himself, he drew a long breath, then asked, quietly, "Does father expect me to come downstairs this evening?"

"Well, I think he does," she answered. "You see, it's the house warming," as he calls it, and he said he thinks all our children ought to be around us, as well as the old friends and other folks. It's just what he thinks you need—to take an interest and live up. You don't feel too bad to come down, do you?"

"Mother?"

"Well?"

"Take a good look at me," he said.

"Oh, see here!" she cried with brusque cheerfulness. "You're not so bad off as you think you are, Bibbs. You're on the mend, and it won't do you any harm to please your—"

"It isn't that," he interrupted. "Honestly, I'm only afraid it might spoil somebody's appetite. Edith—"

"I told you the child was too sensitive," she interrupted, in turn. "You're a plenty good-looking enough young man for anybody! You look like you been through a long spell and begun to get well, and that's all there is to it."

"All right. I'll come to the party. If the rest of you can stand it, I can!"

"I'll do you good," she returned, rustling into the hall. "Now take a nap, and I'll send one of the help to wake you in time for you to get dressed up before dinner. You go to sleep right away, now, Bibbs!"

He woke refreshed, stretched himself gingerly—as one might have a care against too quick or too long a pull upon a frayed elastic—and, getting to his feet, went blinking to the window and touched the shade so that it flew up, letting in a pale sunset.

He looked out into the lemon-colored light and smiled wanly at the next house, as Edith's grandiose phrase came to mind, "the old Vertrees country mansion." It stood in a broad lawn which was separated from the Sheridans' by a young hedge; and it was a big, square, plain old box of a house with a giant salt-cellar atop a cupola. Paint had been spared for a long time, and no one could have put a name to the color of it, but in spite of that the place had no look of being out at heel, and the sword was as neatly trimmed as the Sheridans' own.

Directly opposite the window the Vertrees' lawn had been graded so as to make a little knoll upon which stood a small, rustic "summer house." It was almost on a level with Bibbs' window and not thirty feet away. Probably the "summer house" was pleasant and pretty in summer. But now in the thin light it was desolate, the color of dust, and hung with haggard vines which had lost their leaves.

Bibbs looked at it with grave sympathy, probably feeling some kinship with anything so dismantled; then he turned to a cheval glass beside the window and paid himself the dubious tribute of a thorough inspection. Throughout this cryptic seance his manner was profoundly impersonal, but finally he appeared to become pessimistic. He shook his head solemnly; then gazed again and shook his head again, and continued to shake it slowly, in complete disapproval.

"You certainly are one horrible sight!" he said, aloud.

And at that he was instantly aware of an observer. Turning quickly, he was vouchsafed the picture of a charming lady, framed in a rustic aperture of the "summer house" and staring full into his window—straight into his eyes, too, for the infinitesimal fraction of a second, before the flashingly censorious withdrawal of her own. Composedly, she pulled several dead twigs from a vine, her action conveying a proclamation to the effect that she was in the summer house for the sole purpose of suchlike pruning and tending.

Having pulled enough twigs to emphasize her unconsciousness—and at the same time her disapproval—of everything in the nature of a Sheridan or belonging to a Sheridan, she descended the knoll with maintained composure, and sauntered toward a side door of the country mansion of the Vertreeses. An elderly lady, bonneted and cloaked, opened the door and came to meet her.

"Are you ready, Mary? I've been looking for you. What were you doing?"

"Nothing. Just looking into one of Sheridans' windows," said Mary Vertrees. "I got caught at it."

"Mary!" cried her mother. "Just as we were going to call! Good heavens! We'll go, just the same," the daughter returned. "I suppose those women would be glad to have us if we'd burned their house to the ground."

"But who saw you?" insisted Mrs. Vertrees.

"One of the sons, I suppose he was. I believe he's insane, or something. At least I hear they keep him in a sanitarium somewhere, and never talk about him. He was staring at himself in a mirror and talking to himself. Then he looked out and caught me."

"How did he look?"

"Like a ghost in a blue suit," said Miss Vertrees, moving toward the street and waving a white-gloved hand in farewell to her father, who was observing them from the window of his library. "Rather tragic and altogether impossible. Do come on, mother, and let's get it over!"

And Mrs. Vertrees, with many misgivings, set forth with her daughter for the gracious assault upon the "new house next door."

CHAPTER IV.

Mr. Vertrees, having watched their departure with the air of a man who had something at hazard upon the expedition, turned from the window and began to pace the library thoughtfully, pending their return. He was about sixty; a small man, withered and dry-and-fine, a trim little sketch of the elderly dandy. His lambeau mustache, like his smooth hair, was approaching an equally sheer whiteness; and though his clothes were old, they had shapeliness and a flavor of mode.

The room was cheerful and hideous. Under a mantel of imitation black marble a merry little coal fire beamed forth upon high and narrow "Eastlake" bookcases with long glass doors, comfortable, incongruous furniture, half a dozen Landseer engravings which Mr. and Mrs. Vertrees sometimes mentioned to each other, after thirty years of possession, as "very fine things." They had been the first people in town to possess Landseer engravings, and there, in art, they had rested, but they still had a feeling that in all such matters they were in the van.

The growth of the city, which might easily have made Mr. Vertrees a millionaire, had ruined him because he had failed to understand it. When towns begin to grow they have whims, and the whims of a town always ruin somebody. The dainty little man was one of the first to fall down and worship Bigness. He was a true prophet of the prodigious growth, but he had a fatal gift for selling good and buying bad. He sold his inherited office building and house in town to buy lots; then he sold his farm, except the house and the ground about it, to pay taxes on the lots. But he had to do something to keep himself and his family up, so in despair he sold the lots (which went up beautifully the next year) for "traction stock" that was paying dividends; and disappeared altogether from the commercial surface at about the time James Sheridan came out securely on top.

But there came a day when three servitors of Bigness in Philadelphia took greedy counsel with four fellow worshippers from New York; and not long after that there were no more dividends for Mr. Vertrees. In fact, there was nothing for Mr. Vertrees, because the "traction stock" henceforth was no stock at all, and he had mortgaged his house long ago to help "manage somehow" according to his conception of his "position in life"—one of his own old-fashioned phrases. Mr. Vertrees had discovered, too, that there was no salary for him in all the buzzing city—he could do nothing.

It may be said that he was at the end of his string. Such times do come in all their bitterness, finally, to the man with no trade or craft, if his feeble clutch on that slippery ghost, Property, shall fail.

The windows grew black while he paced the fan-shaped zone of firelight. But as the mantel clock struck wheezy six there was the rattle of an outer door, and Mary Vertrees came rushing into the library and threw herself into a deep chair by the hearth, laughing so uncontrollably that tears were in her eyes. Mrs. Vertrees followed decorously, no mirth about her; on the contrary, she looked vaguely disturbed, as if she had eaten something not quite certain to agree with her, and regretted it.

"Papa! Oh, oh!" And Miss Vertrees was fain to apply a handkerchief upon her eyes. "I'm so glad you made us go! I wouldn't have missed it!"

Mrs. Vertrees shook her head. "I suppose I'm very dull," she said, gently. "I didn't see anything amusing. They're most ordinary, and the house is altogether in bad taste, but we anticipated that, and—"

"Papa!" Mary cried, breaking in. "They asked us to dinner?"

"What?"

"And I'm going!" she shouted, and was seized with fresh paroxysms. "Think of it! Never in their house before; never met any of them but the daughter—and just barely met her—"

"What about you?" interrupted Mr. Vertrees, turning sharply upon his wife.

She made a little face as if positive now that what she had eaten would not agree with her. "I couldn't!" she said. "I—"

"Yes, that's just—the way she—she looked when they asked her!" cried Mary, choking. "And then she—she realized it, and tried to turn it into a cough, and she didn't know how, and it sounded like—like a squeal!"

"I suppose," said Mrs. Vertrees, much injured, "that Mary will have an uproarious time at my funeral. She makes fun of—"

Mary jumped up instantly and kissed her; then she went to the mantel and, leaning an elbow upon it, gazed thoughtfully at the buckle of her shoe, twirling in the firelight.

"They didn't notice anything," she said. "So far as they were concerned, mamma, it was one of the finest coughs you ever coughed."

"Who were they?" asked her father.

"Whom did you see?"

"Only the mother and daughter," Mary answered. "Mrs. Sheridan is dumpy and rusty; and Miss Sheridan is pretty and pushing—dresses by the fashion magazines and talks about New York people that have their pictures in 'em. She tutors the mother, but not very successfully—partly because her own foundation is too flimsy and partly because she began too late. They've got an enormous Moor of painted plaster or something in the hall, and the girl evidently thought it was to her credit that she selected it!"

"They have oil-paintings, too," added Mrs. Vertrees, with a glance of gentle pride at the Landseers. "I've always thought oil-paintings in a private house the worst of taste."

"Oh, if one owned a Raphael or a Titian!" said Mr. Vertrees, finishing the implication, not in words, but with a wave of his hand. "Go on, Mary. None of the rest of them came in? You didn't meet Mr. Sheridan or—"

He paused and adjusted a lump of coal in the fire delicately with the poker. "Or one of the sons?"

Mary's glance crossed his, at that, with a dash of utter comprehension. He turned instantly away, but she had begun to laugh again.

"No," she said, "no one except the women, but mamma inquired about the sons thoroughly!"

"Mary!" Mrs. Vertrees protested.

"Oh, most adroitly, too!" laughed the girl. "Only she couldn't help unconsciously turning to look at me—when she did it!"

"Mary Vertrees!"

"Never mind, mamma! Mrs. Sheridan and Miss Sheridan neither of them could help unconsciously turning to look at me—speculatively—at the same time! They all three kept looking at me and talking about the oldest son, Mr. James Sheridan, Jr. Mrs. Sheridan said his father is very anxious to get Jim to marry and settle down, and she assured me that 'Jim is right cultivated. Another of the sons, youngest one, they didn't seem to consider quite one of themselves, somehow. The other brother is the middle one, Roscoe; he's the one that owns the new house across the street, where that young black sheep of the Lamhorns, Robert, goes so often. Papa—"

She stepped nearer to him so that he had to face her, and his eyes were troubled as he did. There may have been a trouble deep within her own, but she kept their surface merry with laughter.

"Papa, Bibbs is the youngest one's name, and Bibbs—to the best of our information—is a lunatic. Roscoe is married. Papa, does it have to be Jim?"

"Mary!" Mrs. Vertrees cried, sharply. "You're outrageous! That's a perfectly horrible way of talking!"

"Well, I'm close to twenty-four," said Mary, turning to her. "I haven't been able to like anybody yet that's asked me to marry him, and maybe I never shall. Until a year or so ago I've had everything I ever wanted in my life—and papa gave it all to me—and it's about time I began to pay back. Unfortunately, I don't know how to do anything—but something's got to be done."

"But you needn't talk of it like that!" insisted the mother, plaintively. "It's not—it's not—"

"No, it's not," said Mary. "I know that!"

"How did they happen to ask you to dinner?" Mr. Vertrees inquired, uneasily. "Stextrawdy thing!"

"Climbers' hospitality," Mary defined it. "We were so very cordial and easy! It's a sort of house-warming dinner, and they talked about it and talked about it—and then the girl got her courage up and blurted out the invitation. And mamma said that you and she had promised to go to a lecture at the Emerson club tonight, but that her daughter would be delighted to come to the big show! So there I am, and there's Mr. Jim Sheridan—and there's the clock! Dinner's at seven-thirty!"

And she ran out of the room, scooping up her fallen furs with a gesture of flying grace as she sped.

When she came down, at twenty minutes after seven, her father stood in the hall, at the foot of the stairs, waiting to be her escort through the dark.

"At least no one could suspect me tonight," she said. "I look rich, don't I, papa?"

She did. She had a look that worshipful girl friends called "regal." A head taller than her father, she was as straight and jauntily poised as a boy athlete; and her brown hair and her brown eyes were like her mother's, but for the rest she went back to some stronger and livelier ancestor than either of her parents.

"Don't I look too rich to be suspected?" she insisted.

"You look everything beautiful, Mary," he said, huskily.

"And my dress?" She threw open her dark velvet cloak, showing a splendor of white and silver. "Anything better at Nice next winter, do you think?" She laughed, shrouding her glittering figure in the cloak again. "Two years old, and no one would dream it! I did it over."

"You can do anything, Mary."

There was a curious humility in his tone, and something more—a significance not veiled and yet abysmally apologetic. It was as if he suggested something to her and begged her forgiveness in the same breath.

And upon that, for the moment, she became as serious as he. She lifted her hand from his shoulder and then set it back more firmly, so that he should feel the reassurance of its pressure.

"Don't worry," she said, in a low voice and gravely. "I know exactly what you want me to do."

Will Mary be able to infatuate young Jim Sheridan at the dinner, or will she become disgusted with her fortune-hunting plot and throw up the whole business?

Rest Those Worn Nerves

Don't give up. When you feel all unstrung, when family cares seem too hard to bear, and backache, dizzy headaches and irregular kidney action mystify you, remember that such troubles often come from weak kidneys and it may be that you only need Doan's Kidney Pills to make you well. Don't delay. Profit by other people's experiences.

A Michigan Case

Mrs. W. P. Jones, Pine St., E. W. R. Mich., says: "I was in bad shape with kidney trouble and my back and head ached constantly. Sometimes I was so dizzy, I could hardly stand and stooping brought severe pains in my back. Mornings, it was all I could do to get up and my nerves were in a bad shape. Doan's Kidney Pills promptly cured me after doctor's medicine had failed."

If You Want White Clover.

Most of the clovers are biennials or perennials, but not so white clover. It is annual and propagates itself only by seed. Therefore if one wishes white clover in the lawn he must cut it so short that no ripe heads will be formed to provide seed for the following year. Some people are always sowing white clover in their lawns and wondering why they have to repeat the process every year.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription outline—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of outline—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning, and you should soon see that the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength outline, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles. A.S.V.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs help, advise her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

Regular Nightmare.
"Well, Bobby," said young Lightwit, as the small brother of the only girl entered the grocery, "how are all the folks—and what can I do for you this morning?"

"Oh, the folks ain't got no kick comin' in 'cept Mame. I heard her tellin' maw she dream'd about you again last night."

"And what did your ma say?" inquired Lightwit, bending over the counter eagerly.

"Maw told her she'd have to 'cut out mince pie and pickles before she went to bed after this—and I want a nickel's worth of crackers and two cents worth of milk," rejoined the youngster.

Not Exactly Comforting Scripture.
At the anniversary meeting of the Bible Reading association Rev. W. Y. Fullerton of the Baptist Missionary society told a story of illustration the fact that some people needed guidance in the selection of their Bible reading.

According to the Westminster Gazette the story was a reminiscence of Mr. Fullerton's mission days, when a man came to one of his meetings and told of his efforts to comfort his wife as she lay upon the sickbed.

"I read to her every night," he said. "What did you read to her?" asked the missionary.

"Well," said the man, "I began at the first chapter of the Book of Proverbs, and when I had finished the book she died!"

"GATLING GUN" PARKER

Surprise and concern were felt when it was learned that a United States army machine gun had failed to work during the raid made by Villistas on Columbus, N. M. Promptly the war department set about preventing a repetition of that breakdown by sending to the border the army's machine-gun expert, Maj. John Henry Parker of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, variously known in the service as "Gatling Gun Parker" or, more intimately, "John Henry." Major Parker has a noteworthy record, because he is the man who demonstrated the possibilities of the machine gun.

This happened 18 years ago, during Shafter's campaign, which culminated in the fall of Santiago de Cuba. The man in the street may not be aware of it, but Lieutenant Parker—for such he was then—has been credited with turning the tide of battle at a critical period and making the modest little detachment effectually halted the operating of a formidable weapon that might easily have put many of Shafter's fieldpieces out of action.

In short, Lieutenant Parker showed the military world for the first time just what the machine gun could be relied upon to do in the hands of capable men. He anticipated and actually predicted the part that the machine gun has played in the present struggle in Europe.

Long before the war with Spain Lieutenant Parker grasped the tactical value of the machine gun, and became so insistently an advocate of the weapon that he talked about it upon every possible occasion.

He drew up plans for a suitable carriage, so that the machine gun, ordinarily equipped with only a tripod, might have the fullest mobility and keep right along with the most advanced troops.

So persistent was Parker in riding his hobby that other army officers thought him something of a bore and sometimes avoided his company. But his enthusiasm and theories have been fully justified, first by the work of his machine-gun detachment in the Spanish-American war, and now, even more fully, by the developments of the great conflict in Europe.

VARDAMAN ON "FLUNKIES"

James K. Vardaman, United States senator from Mississippi, has said many biting and even bitter things during his public career, and the other day he took occasion to pay his respects to a certain class of citizens of Washington, in the course of an eloquent plea for better citizenship made before a mass meeting in Alexandria.

"There are more flunkies to the square inch in Washington than I ever saw in my life," declared the senator, "and I verily believe that if you would stuff a colored laborer's overalls with straw and label the effigy 'congressman' or 'senator,' you would soon have half the population crawling to it."

Senator Vardaman said that a public office should be honored, but that the man in that office should be honored in accordance with his worth. Honest, fearless, patriotic men and women are needed at the ballot box today, Senator Vardaman told his audience, and if mistakes have been made in the past they may be righted in the future. The speaker expressed the fear that "in this nation dollar is the god and commerce the religion of too many."

DEMOCRATS' PUBLICITY MAN

When the joint finance and executive campaign committee of the Democratic national committee selected Frederick W. Steckman as director of publicity for the national committee in the coming presidential campaign, it picked one of the most experienced and popular of the newspaper writers and correspondents in Washington.

Mr. Steckman, who was born in Princeton, Mo., thirty-six years ago, first went to Washington about 1904 as correspondent of the St. Louis Republic. For some years now he has been a political writer for the Washington Post and besides has covered the capitol and the White House for the New Orleans Daily States. However, he began his newspaper activities when he was less than ten years old.

In 1912 Mr. Steckman was in charge of the Chicago headquarters of the Democratic national committee, and it was he who devised the plan of small contributions for the campaign from great numbers of people. The scheme netted the committee more than $100,000. His excellent publicity work that year led to his selection for chief of that department in this campaign.

MADDEN, LONG LOST BROTHER

Martin B. Madden, congressman from Chicago, is not only wealthy. He is also quite handsome. Nevertheless he is not satisfied with his physical make-up. He would be much better pleased if he were built along more original lines. The trouble with him is that he looks like too many people. He makes a specialty of being a ringer for the long-lost brothers.

On an average of once a month he gets a letter from someone who has seen his picture and claims him as a brother thought to have been lost at sea or strayed from home years and years ago.

One day he heard from a woman, who said she had a locket with an "M" on it, and containing a boyhood picture of her long-lost brother that looked exactly like the one of Madden in a Chicago paper. Madden was obliged to tell her that his congressional duties are too pressing to allow him any time for being a long-lost brother this year. This is only a sample incident, and Mr. Madden is getting somewhat "peevish."

When Planning for the Negligee

In planning negligees one must consider just what purposes they are to serve, and choose the materials and style accordingly. The dressiest ones of today are worn over petticoats, empire slips, or harem trousers made of silk or satin, and are long coats of thin materials (like chiffon or crepe or organdie or printed voile), lace and ribbon trimmed. The garment to be worn under them is of equal importance and often serves no other purpose than to complete the negligee.

The most practical of elegant negligees are those made of thin wash fabrics elaborated with dainty laces and embroidery, to be worn over silk petticoats or lace-trimmed skirts. Fine plain white goods in all the shawl and dainty weaves, are used for making them. They are much trimmed with lingerie lace and hand needlework on the body, and skirts open down the front with band or wide tucks about the bottom.

Besides the all-white cotton materials figured voiles and printed mulls accomplish some wonderfully pretty effects in less expensive designs. They are patterned after models in crepe or chiffon that are very filmy and beautiful. One of these crepe designs is shown in the picture, worn over a petticoat of flowered taffeta. It is made with a skirt of plaited crepe and bloused bodice, with shawl drape of wide shadow lace. A big rosette-bow of satin ribbon, with ends a half yard long, is chosen in a color to match the color prevailing in the negligee. Maize, pale green, rose, blue, and pink are liked best, and some lavender and orchid tints are exquisite. The color is chosen with reference to the petticoat, or the petticoat with reference to the color.

In the picture a pretty cap matches the negligee in color and is made of crepe and lace in the crown. Narrow ribbon is used for a ruffle and band trimming. Silk stockings and boudoir slippers of satin or ribbon finish a costume as alluring as any the wearer is privileged to own.

Boys' Rompers in Stanch Fabrics

If one has nothing of more importance to do, the chambray and gingham everyday play clothes for the little boy of five or so may be made at home. But clothes of this kind are manufactured so well and so cheaply that there is no economy in doing the work at home.

In buying material there is economy in getting enough for several suits and cutting them out at the same time. Plain and striped or checked patterns are used together, as shown in the illustration. The pieces left after the garments are cut serve to make the pockets, cuffs, collars, bands, etc., and those of the plain fabric are used on the checked or striped suit, or those of the checked on plain suits.

Just now suits made with plain pants with striped and belted Russian blouses are much the fashion for little boys, worn with leather belts in black. Bright red, blue, green or brown make the stripes against a white or unbleached ground, demonstrating that even the tops of the youngest athletes take some note of the fad for sports clothes. But the stanch qualities of old and tried fabric, like those shown in the picture, always give them first place in the consideration of manufacturers.

The rompers shown at the left of the picture may be had in chambray, coarse linen or heavy cotton weaves. The body and pants are set together at the front under a belt of checked gingham. The belt buttons on one side and the pocket and cuffs to match it finish this useful garment neatly. The suit at the right shows the reverse combination with the separate pants and blouse of checked material. A bias band of plain fabric finishes the neck and bottom of the pants; also the top of the practical patch pocket.

Short sox and strong strap slippers, or better still, sandals without sox, may be worn with rompers by the happy youngster who is not allowed the blessed privilege of going barefoot.

Julia Bottomley

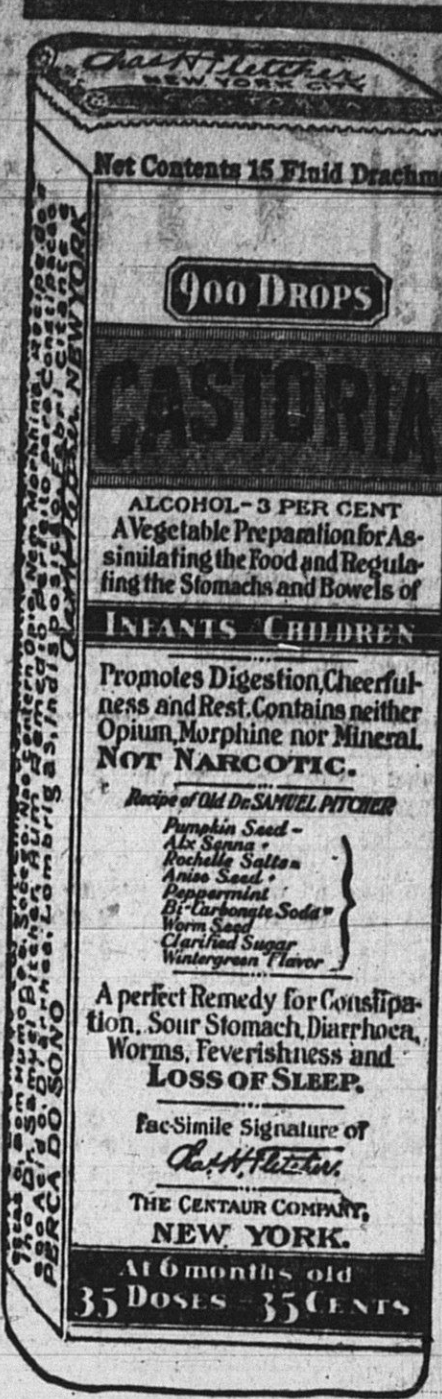

Handsome Blouses.

Georgette crepe is the most popular material for blouses and washes and iron like linen. Handkerchief linen is next in popularity. It comes in white, flesh, blue, lilac and gold, charming stripes, plaids and dots on plain grounds. More sheer and quite as elaborate and substantial is the new pineapple cloth, which is as transparent as organdie.

Hair Ornaments.

Russian hair ornaments consisting of strings of pearls which are caught to the hair in the back with fancy pins falling in a loop under the chin and again over the bust, are extreme, but very effective with evening dress. Russian jewelry in the form of bracelets in antique gold, set with colored stones, is attractive. They are oriental in design and coloring.

The cost of knee length is smartest for sports wear.

The Cure.
Robert W. Chambers, the popular novelist, said in an antisuffrage address in Brooklyn:

"A modern girl—one of those pretty, vote-chasing, athletic modern girls who ride astride, swim in men's swimming suits, smoke cigarettes and read Wells and Shaw—a modern girl of this type reined one day at a tea because she could not be an aviator in the war."

"Oh," she sighed, blowing a cloud of cigarette smoke from her lips—"Oh, if heaven had only made me a man!"

"Heaven did, my dear," said a placid matron, "and you'll find him some day, and then all this new-thought nonsense of yours will cease forever."

The Wheat Yield Tells the Story of Western Canada's Rapid Progress

The heavy crops in Western Canada have caused new records to be made in the handling of grains by railroads. For, while the movement of these heavy shipments has been wonderfully rapid, the resources of the different roads, despite enlarged equipments and increased facilities, have been strained as never before, and previous records have thus been broken in all directions.

The largest Canadian wheat shipments through New York ever known are reported for the period up to October 15th, upwards of four and a quarter million bushels being exported in less than six weeks, and this was but the overflow of shipments to Montreal, through which point shipments were much larger than to New York.

Yields as high as 60 bushels of wheat per acre are reported from all parts of the country, while yields of 45 bushels per acre are common.

Thousands of American farmers have taken part in this wonderful production. Land prices are still low and free homestead lands are easily secured in good localities, convenient to churches, schools, markets, railways, etc.

There is no war risk on land and no conscription. Write for illustrated pamphlet, reduced railroad rates and other information to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada.
