HAPPENINGS OF COM-MENCEMENT WEEK

The Events of Commencement Week Have Been Very Interesting

-Ended Last Night The faculty reception to the Senior llass of the Chelsea high school was held at the home of Superintendent and Mrs. W. L. Walling last Friday evening. The event was a very en oyable affair. The evening was de voted to games and social enjoyment ce cream and cake were served.

The baccalaureate address, was deivered by C. Rufus Osborn, pastor of the Baptist church, in the M. E church Sunday evening, and it was both an able and instructive one, and was highly appreciated by the arge audience. The prayer was by Rev. G. H. Whitney, pastor of the M. E. church. Rev. A. A. Schoen, pastor of St. Paul's church, read the scripture lesson. The music was furnished by the M. E. choir and a male quartet consisting of Messrs. Broesamle, Fulford, Riemenschneider and Walling. The members of the Junior. Class acted as ushers. Every member they entered the church in a body! headed by Supt. Walling, followed by the members of the faculty.

The Junior Class certainly did themselves proud in the arrangement and decoration of Maccabee hall when they gave a reception to the Senior Class Tuesday evening. The decoration were green and white, the colors of the graduating class, and both the hall and reception parlor were liberally supplied with potted plants, terns and palms. The event was without a single doubt one of the finest school functions ever given in Chelsea. A dainty four course lunch was served and the tables were handsomely decorated with candles. The music was furnished by White's Saxaphone Quartet, of Ann Arbor. The program of amusements consisted of numerous games, dancing and a playette entitled, "A Perplexing Situation."

The M. E. church was filled to overlowing Wednesday evening with the friends of the members of the graduating class.

The platform was decorated with palms and cut flowers in the class colors, green and white, while overhead was suspended the class motto, 'Not finished-just begun."

The salutatory, by Floyd Rowe, wa lelivered in a pleasing manner.

The class prophecy by Nina Kalmbach and Leigh Luick, and the class will by Gladys Taylor and Dorothy Schumacher were filled with hits on the members of the class and the

The valedictorian, Clara Holden, as all that could be desired.

The vocal solos by Miss Hannah Cochran were beautifully rendered, and the address by W. J. McKone, president of the state board of educa ion, was out of the usual line of commencement addresses, and held the attention of the large audience from start to finish.

The exercises closed with the presentation of the diplomas by Supt W. L. Walling.

The following are the members of the class: Wilber M. Hinderer, Clara Holden, Phyllis Wedemeyer, Winter Cooper, Floyd D. Rowe, Esther A. Chandler, Alberta A. Dole, Hollis W. Freeman, Lloyd R. Hirth, Esther A. Johnson, Ethel F. Kalmbach, Nina A. Kalmbach, Helena R. Koch, Waldo H. Kusterer, Leigh M. Luick, Aloysis J. Merkel, Leon S. Mohrlock, William H. Schatz, Dorothy L. Schumacher, Florence Smith, Gladys H. Taylor, Clayton R. Webb and Myrtle B.

Mrs. Richard Clark.

Mrs. Ann Clark was born in Ireland, June 14, 1824, and died at her home in Lyndon, Sunday, June 11, 1916.

When she was quite young her par nts came to America and settled at Rochester, New York, where they esided for a number of years, moving rom there to Michigan. She was mited in marriage with Richard Clark at Dexter, May 22, 1857, and they began housekeeping on the farm in Lyndon, which has been the family home for the past fifty-nine years. Mr. Clark died in December, 1888.

She was the mother of four children, two sons and two daughters, all of whom survive, Alfred, John and Miss Mary, who reside on the family homestead, and Mrs. John Burns, of Sylvan.

The funeral was held Wednesday morning from the Church of Our Lady

Family Rennion.

A very pleasant event was the fam ly reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kantlehner on South Main street last Sunday in honor of Mrs. Kantlehner's seventy-sixth birthday. The entire family, consisting of the parents, seven sons, one daughter, eight grand children and one great grandchild, was present. At noon all partook of a bounteous dinner served by the wives of the seven sons. The table was beautifully decorated and in the center was a birthday cake bearing seventy-six lighted candles.

After dinner a picture of the father, mother and the children was taken, also one the four generations, and one of the entire party twenty-eight

Mrs. Kantlehner was presented with sum of money, and all departed rishing her many happy birthdays.

Banquetted Hollier Eight Band.

Jackson Patriot: As a mark of apreciation for the splendid musical program rendered Saturday afternoon and evening by the popular Hollier Eight automobile band at the automobile show and industrial fair, of the Senior Class was present and a banquet was given in their honor Saturday night at the Otsego hotel. Covers were laid for thirty-five and the gathering was presided over by Fred H. Lewis, executive head of the Lewis Spring & Axle Company of Chelsea. After dinner the party adjourned to the show grounds, where the evening's musical program was carried out before a large and appreciative audience. As an evidence of the versitality of this high grade musical organization a wide range of selections was offered during the afternoon and evening, and each number seemed to meet with the unqualified approval of those in attendance. To the untiring efforts of Fred H. Lewis is due the present efficiency of the Hollier Eight band. Himself a musician of recognized ability, he has devoted his whole energies to the perfection of a band that would be a credit to the community. Those who were fortunate enough to be present at the show last night give ample testimony to the abundance of his success.

As if to make the Hollier Eight symphony complete an automobile of this well known manufacture was completely assembled on a raised platform during the evening, by a corps of factory experts. In an incredibly short time a mass of parts were converted into a complete automobile before the very eyes of the astonished onlookers.

Miss Clara Henrietta Hepfer.

Miss Clara Henrietta Hepfer was born in Chelsea, July 18, 1875, and died at her home in Cadillac, Sunday, June 11, 1916.

Miss Hepfer had spent almost all of her lite in this place, moving to Cadillac in April with her mother, where she expected to make her home with her two sisters. Her death came as a shock to her many Chelsea friends, and she passed away before her sisters, who were here to attend the funeral of their mother, which was held last Friday, reached home. She is survived by two sisters, Misses Amelia and Flora Hepfer and several uncles and aunts.

The body was brought here Tuesday afternoon, and the funeral was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. Staffan, Rev. A. A. Schoen officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

If you could buy groceries of us for the same money or less than you could by sending away everything else equal, would you send away? We are here every day of the week, 365 days of the year, and know we can give you better service, give you just as good quality, have the goods right here for your inspection before you buy, and we will sell you these goods for the same money and in many cases less than you pay when you send away. This means Dollars and Cents to you. If it did not we would not ask you for your business.

The leading mail order houses in the United States advertise they sell sugar and flour below the Chicago wholesale price. So far, so good. But stop, think, reason-what about their other goods? They must make a long profit on them or they would not be able to pay the large dividends they paid to their stockholders last year.

We do not sell our flour and sugar below cost, but to prove our statement that we sell other goods for less money we have listed below item for item in the grocery line for comparison:

Poverty has spurred to splendid achievement many a youth who, reared in luxury and endowed with a fortune, would have accomplished nothing. The man who has made some costly sacrifice for love or duty's sake, or opposed a dauntless front to afflictions concerning which the only choice was as to the spirit in which they should be met and borne, is often happier than another whose rectitude imposed no hardships, or who has never been called upon to battle with adversity. The woman whose presence in a sick room is a better tonic than any which the physician prescribes, whom little children love, and to whom young girls go with their perplexities, is frequently the one who years ago buried all personal ambition in the grave of husband or child, wrestled with her sorrow, conquered it, and learned thereafter to live in the joy of other lives:

BO SAYS DR. RUPERT BLUE, SURGEON GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES.

MEETS IN DETROIT

We Must Combat Poyerty, Ignorance, Cruelty, Greed, These Are Called Arch Enemies.

Detroit-Poverty, ignorance, intemperance, cruelty, greed, these are the great enemies we must combat," said Dr. Rupert Blue, surgeon-general of the United States, president- elect of the American Medical association, at the opening session of the association's sixty-seventh annual meeting in the Lyceum theatre:

"We have an adequate coast defense against disease from abroad," said the surgeon-general, "We must control the diseases that are with us. To do this, medical education of the public is necessary and qualified health officers are needed. No selfish, halfhearted service will suffice." A study of the relation of wages ti

NO. 3 ELEVATOR OF THE NORTH-ERN CENTRAL RAILWAY AT BALTIMORE DESTROYED BY FIRE.

TEN KILLED AND 36 INJURED

Two Steamers and Several Schooners Were Partially Destroyed; Cause of Fire Unknown.

Baltimore-Ten men were killed, 36 injured by burns and falls from a great hight, about $2,000,000 in property was destroyed and the grain industry of Baltimore given a severe blow when No. 3 elevator of the Northern Central railway, the superstructure of the vast grain dryers, and the big ore pier at Canton, were burned and two steamships and several schooners were partially destroyed.

Estimates of the actual loss of life vary. From best posted authorities it seemed assured that ten men died by fire in the grain elevator itself, or died in leaps of from 150 to 180 feet to the pier and water, while many sailors were injured. The sidewalls of the elevator crushed upon the Dutch steamer Wilhelm Van Driel, Sr., smashing the super-structure of the ship.

The cause of the fire can only be conjectured. The officials charge it to spontaneous combustion due to the rapid handling of the grain. This creates a dust which generates gas. Men at work in the neighborhood insist it was a bomb that caused the trouble, as the explosion blew out a side of the wall on the fourth floor and immediately after the flames shot out of the upper story windows.

Steady March of the Czar's Forces Remain Unchecked in Galicia

London-Lemberg, capital of Galicia, is threatened from three sides by the Russian armies under General Brusileff, whose smashing advance in Volhynia, Galicia, and the Bukowina has continued without substantial check during the last 24 hours, despite the German aid rushed from the north, Field Marshal von Hindenburg's apparent hauling out for a general offensive on the Riga-Dvinsk front has thus far failed to exert any influence upen the Russian drive in the south. THREE RAIDERS ARE KILLED

Armed Intervention in Mexico Is Now Only a Question of Time Say State Department Officials.

Washington-With 1,500 additional regular troops ordered to the Mexican border and reports of the rapid spread of anti-American feeling continuing to pour in from consuls all over northern Mexico, administration officials made no attempt to disguise their uneasiness. It was officially admitted that there is growing alarm over what the agitation may produce and the possibility of an attack on General Pershings' expedition. Part of the increasing apprehension here is due to the renewed raids in the Laredo region. Officials declined to reveal details; but they gave the impression of having reason to believe a serious purpose was behind the bandit raid on the Coleman ranch. Three raiders were killed and three captured, one report said.

The prompt action of the war department and the statement of Secretary of State Lansing that the situation in northern Mexico is steadily. growing worse were accepted in many quarters as foreshadowing more drastic steps in the event that the Mexicans should attempt any organized act forceful speaker, and in setting forth the issues of the campaign as the Democratic party sees them he evoked the frequent cheers of his audience. Especially did he emphasize the success of President Wilson's policy in keeping the American nation from being embroiled in the European war. The policy the president has pursued, he asserted, is the same that has been from Washington down, who by skillsaid: "To maintain our national honor Corn-Cash No 3, 71 1.2c; No 3 by peace if we can, by war if we must, yellow, 73 1.2c; No 4 yellow, 71 1.20 is the motto of the president of the United States."

Glynn Sounds the Keynote. Mr. Glynn is an eloquent and

This led the speaker to the subject of preparedness, and in this connection he claimed the present adminisand our navy than any administration sion, he said, was what the Democratio

"Golden Lane" of Suffragists. The spectacular feature of the day was the unique demonstration made by the army of woman suffragists. This took the form of a "walkless parade," the women, thousands of them, standing in lines on both sides of Locust street, down which the delegates proceeded from their headquarters to the Coliseum. This was called the "Golden Lane," from the colors of the suffragists, and, though the demonstration was talkless as well as walkless, its proportions and the evident earnestness of the great number of women taking part semed to have its due effect on the delegates. Every woman in the long lines wore a yellow sash and carried a yellow parasol "Suffrage Plank," the donkey mascel of the St. Louis suffragists, was a feature that called forth loud cheers. especially when he grew restless and let his heels fly about a bit.

The climax of the women's demonstration was a tableau at the old Art Museum, where Liberty stood on a pedestal in the center of a pyramid of beauteous ladies.

The day's program of entertainment for delegates, alternates, correspondents and distinguished guests began after the convention adjourned. Automobiles carried the city's guests on a tour of St. Louis, after which there was a moonlight excursion on the Mississippi river, with a differ, on the steamer Grey Eagle.

On his resultarium at him self-market him self-market him from a self-market him from a siderable and undersome siderable and the sheridans. He sees "New House" of the Sheridans. He sees Mary Vertrees looking at him from a summer house next door. The Vertreeses, side town family and impoverished, call on the Sheridans, newly-rich, and afterward the Sheridans, newly-rich, and afterward the Sheridan boys. At the Sheridan housewarming banquet Sheridan housewarming banquet Sheridan housewarming banquet Sheridan spreads himself. Mary frankly encourages pim Sheridan's attentions, and Bibbs hears he is to be sent back to the machine shop. Mary tells her mother about the banquet and shocks her mother by talking of Jim as a matrimonial possibility. Jim tells Mary Bibbs is not a lunatic—"just queer." He proposes to Mary, who half accepts him.

will Old Man Sheridan be able to inspire Bibbs with his own belief in Bigness and win the young man to the business standard? Or will Bibbs prove to his practical father that there is a place in the world for poetry and music and persuade the elder to let him devote his life to poetry and writing?

He seated himself in a chair at his

on's side and, leaning over, tapped

Bibbs confidentially on the knee. "This city's got the greatest future in America, and if my sons behave right by me and by themselves they're goin' b have a mighty fair share of it—a mighty fair share. I love this town. I bve it like I do my own business, and I'd fight for it as quick as I'd fight for my own family. It's a beautiful town. Look at our wholesale district; look at my district you want to; look at the park system we're puttin' through, and the boulevards and the public statuary. And she grows. God! how she grows!" He had become intensely grave; he spoke with solemnity. "Now, Bibbs, I an't take any of it-nor any gold or silver nor buildings nor bonds-away with me in my shroud when I have to o. But I want to leave my share in it to my boys. I've worked for it; I've been a builder and a maker; and two blades of grass have grown where one grew before, whenever I laid my hand on the ground and willed 'em to grow. I've built big, and I want the buildin' to go on. And when my last hour tomes I want to know that my boys are ready to take charge. Bibbs, when I'm up above I want to know that the big share I've made mine, here below, s growin' bigger and bigger in the charge of my boys."

He leaned back, deeply moved. "There!" he said, huskily. "I've never spoken more what was in my heart in my life. I do it because I want you to understand—and not think me a mean father. I never had to talk that way to Jim and Roscoe. They understood without any talk, Bibbs." "I see," said Bibbs. "At least I think I do. But-" "Wait a minute!" Sheridan raised his hand. "If you see the least bit in he world, then you understand what t meant to start one o' my boys and have him come back on me the way you did, and have to be sent to a sanitarium because he couldn't stand work. Now, let's get right down to it, Bibbs. I've had a whole lot o' talk with ole Doc Gurney about you, one time and another, and I reckon I understand your case just about as well as he

"Yes," said Bibbs, "that's about the

"Well, then, I reckon it's up to me act only to make you do it, but to make you like it!"

Bibbs shivered. And he turned upon his father a look that was almost thostly. "I can't," he said, in a low roice. "I can't."

"Can't go back to the shop?"

"No. Can't like it. I can't." Sheridan jumped up, his patience tone. To his own view, he had reaoned exhaustively, had explained fully and had pleaded more than a faher should, only to be met in the end rith the unreasoning and mysterious tubbornness which had been Bibbs' affling characteristic from childhood. "Good-by, sir," said Bibbs, meekly. CHAPTER IX.

Bibbs' room, that neat apartment-for transients to which the "lamidal" George had shown him upon his return, still bore the appearance of temporary quarters, possibly because Bibbs had no clear conception of himself as a permanent incumbent. However, he had set upon the mantelpiece the two photographs that he owned; one, a "group" twenty years old-his father and mother, with Jim and Roscoe as boys-and the other a "cabinet" of Edith at sixteen. And upon a table were the books he had taken from his trunk: Sartor Resartus, Virginibus Puerisque, Huckleberry Finn, and Afterwhiles. There were some other books in the trunk-a large one, which remained unremoved at the foot of the bed, adding to the general impression of transiency. It contained nearly all tray. Some of these he glanced through dubiously, finding little comfort in them; but one made him smile. Then he shook his head ruefully indeed, and ten on paper stamped "Hood Sanitarium." and it bore the title, "Leisure."

Mary looked aside, but otherwise she was able to maintain her composure. "I had the impression he was a friend of yours," she said, adding, hastily, "and your husband's."

"Oh, yes," said the caller, absently. 'He is, certainly. A man's reputation for a little gayety oughtn't to make a great difference to married people, of course. It's where young girls are in question. Then it may be very, very dangerous. There are a great many things safe and proper for married people that might be awf'ly imprudent for a young girl. Don't you agree, Miss Vertrees?"

"I don't know," returned the frank Mary. "Do you mean that you intend to remain a friend of Mr. Lamhorn's, but disapprove of Miss Sheridan's do-

"That's it exactly!" was the naive and ardent response of Sibyl. "What feel about it is that a man with his reputation isn't at all suitable for Edith, and the family ought to be made to understand it. I tell you," she cried, with a sudden access of vehemence, "her father ought to put his foot down!"

Her eyes flashed with a green spark; something seemed to leap out and then retreat, but not before Mary had caught a glimpse of it, as one "No; don't go." She applied a might catch a glimpse of a thing darthandkerchief to her eyes, emitted a ing forth and then scuttling back into

CHAPTER X.

Sheridan had decided to conclude his day's work early that afternoon, and at about two o'clock he left his office with a man of affairs from foreign parts, who had traveled far for a business conference with Sheridan and his colleagues. Herr Favre, in spite of his French name, was a gentleman of Bavaria. It was his first visit to our country, and Sheridan took pleasure in showing him the sights of the country's finest city.

They arrived at the Pump Works, and for an hour Herr Favre was personally conducted and personally instructed by the founder and president, the buzzing queen bee of those buzzing

"Now I'll take you for a spin in the country," said Sheridan, when at last they came out to the car again. "We'll take a breezer." But, with his foot on the step he paused to hail a neat young man who came out of the office smiling a greeting. "Hello, young fellow!" Sheridan said, heartfly. "On the job, are you, Jimmie? Ha! They don't catch you off of it very often, I guess, though I do hear you go automobile ridin' in the country sometimes with a mighty fine-lookin' girl settin'up beside you!" He roared with laughter, clapping his son upon the shoulder. "That's all right with me-if it is with her! So, Jimmie? Well, when we goin' to move into your new warehouses? Monday?"

"Sunday, if you want to," said Jim. "No!" cried his father, delighted. 'Don't tell me you're goin' to keep your word about dates! That's no way to do contractin'! Never heard of a contractor yet didn't want more

BETTER STANDARD OF DAIRY

Farmers Allow City Dalrymen to Pick Out Best Producers in Herd-Quality Deteriorates.

It seems to be true that the quality of the farm dairy herds is of a much lower standard in practically every way than those of the city dairyman. This really works to the detriment of the farmer and yet he is to blame for the whole thing. The city dairyman who must buy all of his feed knows that he cannot afford to keep a cow unless she is a real producer, therefore he goes out into the country and persuades the farmer to part with the very best cows in his herd. The cow is taken to the city and worked as hard as possible until she begins to fail, when she is sold to the butcher. All of her calves have gone to the same place and thus we see that nothing whatever has been done toward building up the standard of the dairy animals of the country.

Circumstances make it necessary that the city dairyman should make a very close study of the business and knowledge thus acquired enables him to take advantage of the average farmer when he goes out into the country in search of cows to add to his herd. Very seldom does he consider buying the cows that the farmer is willing to dispose of but he ferrets out those "Fine young man, yes," said Herr that he is confident are the real producers and, be it said to the credit of his shrewdness, he usually gets what

Such sales are bound to keep any profit are gone, also there is but small likelihood of any improvement because calves from poor cows seldom prove more valuable than their dam. Such methods usually allow the quality of the herd to deteriorate.

Should Be as Near Absolutely Pure as Possible-Used for Flavoring and Preserving.

Salting the butter is a nice operation which requires considerable knowledge and care to be done properly. In the first place, the butter must be washed until entirely free from buttermilk before the salt is added. The salt should be as near absolutely pure as can be purchased and the finer it is the better. One ounce of salt to one pound of butter, added to the butter gradually and well worked in, is the rule. It is advisable to permit the butter to stand after salting for 24 hours if possible, then work it over and put it in prints or pack it for market as desired. Salt is added to butter with a twofold purpose. First as a flavoring element and also as a preservative. Water holds in solution an enormous quantity of salt and the salt in butter absorbs the water which persists in the butter in spite of much work and makes the product proper as it comes to the table, nearly dry. The amount of water in the usual sample of butter runs between 10 and 12 per cent. There is no step in the production of good butter more important than the

EXPENSE OF RAISING HEIFER

Must Be Worth More Than $60 When Two Years Old to Be Profitable to Dairy Farmer.

Investigations made by the department of agriculture indicate that the average cost of raising a heifer on a dairy farm in the northern and eastern sections is about $61 at the end of her second year; this includes an allowance of $7.81 for labor. The heifer is given a credit of $8 for the manure she produces. Thus it appears that the dairy farmer in the sections mentioned cannot afford to raise a heifer that is not worth more than $60 when two years old.

THE ARMY TITLE ORIGINS

Names of Official Positions Go Back to Greek and Roman Days-Some Curious Derivatives.

An article on the origin of the names of weapons of war has led us to speculate idly on the origin of rank in the army, with more or less interesting re-

We find that "private" comes from prived. Probably that's because the humble private is deprived of the privileges of his officers; or maybe it is because he is deprived of his freedom. At any rate the Latin term is prettier than the Greek. The Greek private was supposed to be so ignorant that we derive the word "idiot" from him.

"Corporal" is corrupted from "caporal" and its root is the same as that of "captain," from "caput," a head. The Mrs. M. J. Noyes returned home corporal is a sort of head private, in the derivation of his title is lower; for "sergeant" is from the low Latin "serviens," meaning a servant.

"Captain," we have considered; its earlier form is "capitan" and it is thus in the Spanish. "Lieutenant" is "locum tenens"-one who takes another's place. The old English form was "lieftenaunt," and from that pronunciation "leftenant" still lingers in England. "Major" is simply the Latin word for "greater" and "mayor" is only another form of the word in a diffirst of the week at the homes of their ferent application. "Colonel" is from the Italian "colonnella," meaning a little column. How the little column or regiment, gave its name to the commander thereof is somewhat uncertain. "Cadet" is an interesting word. It comes from the Gascon "capdet" and means a little captain, or the youthful member of a "head family."—Cleveland Plain Deal-

The False Friend

By ALVAH GARTH

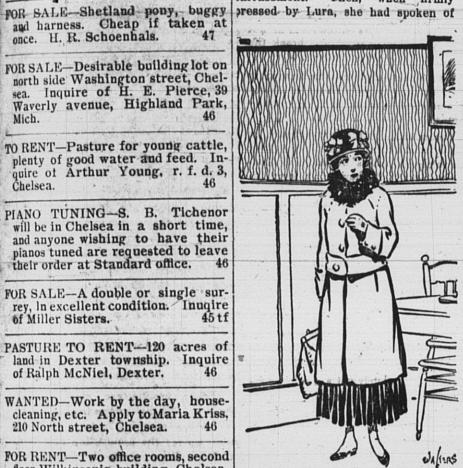

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.) "Oh! why did you bring me here-why did you ever tell me? Mrs. Lura Davenal, two years a sride, moaned and wept and drew sack from the window whither suspense and suspicion and the subtle plotting of a woman she should never have trusted, led her.

She deemed Minna Burton a friend. She should never have placed faith n this false counselor. She knew she and been one of a group of admirers of her husband before his marriage. who had been particular never to go out with her, for her reputation was. iot a clean one, but he had been coureous to her. Minna had not seen nuch of him until the last month. Then a lady friend of hers had intinated to Laura that Minna had told ier secretly that she felt sorry for her secause her husband was deceiving and then had declared that her husband was false to her.

"He goes to see a certain lady every tages at Cavanaugh Lake. Inquire lay," said Minna. "Dear Mrs. Davenal, spare yourself grief. Men are all alike. It can do no good to unmask

"Never!" Lura was aroused and then Minna had said: "Very well, I will take you tomorrow where you shall see for yourself," and she had kept her word, for looking across a requests its patrons who have busi- a room Lura saw her husband and a woman she did not know. > Lura was heartbroken. Viewing her with a crafty eye, Minna began to give advice. Why not abandon this false husband? At least, teach him a lesson, disappear, if only temporarlly. From a distance bring him to his > feet in humiliation and contrition! And to all this poor distressed Lura listened, never dreaming that a woman at heart a wicked plotter was bent on separating her from a man she had once loved.

"Yes, yes," she sobbed, "take me somewhere away from this heartbreak and sorrow!"

"I have a cousin, a Mrs. Lavery, a widow, living about a hundred miles from here, who will be glad to give you a temporary home," suggested the specious Minna, and Lura, half mad with her grief and suspicions, agreed to be at a place Minna named later that afternoon, prepared for the journey. She was to bring her grip and Minna was to convey her to the train and start her on her way to seclusion and safety, as she put it.

Lura returned home in tears and made her preparations for departure, sobbing heartbrokenly. She wrote a brief note to her husband, telling him that she had discovered his perfidy and that she would never return to him. She placed this on a stand in their room, where he would be sure to see it. Then she left the house. Lura was unfamiliar with the address Minna had given her. She had told her it was a quiet restaurant and to go to its side door and wait in a secluded rear room. Lura in her urgency and confusion of mind arrived a half hour ahead of the appointed She shivered and glanced about her apprehensively as she entered a vacant room. The sound of clinking glasses and ribald voices in an adjoining apartment frightened her. Suddenly a girl wearing a tawdry garb peered into the room. She viewed Lura critically and then she approached her. "I don't know you, I ain't your kind," she said, "but I can guess from something I overheard this afternoon that you are here to meet Minna But

"If I was if if has she been here?" faltered Lura.

"She will be soon and you must go away at once. Listen, lady, fly from that woman. All she has had you meet her for is to compromise you, for this is a den no respectable person should enter."

Lura turned white as a sheet: Her deepest suspicions were aroused. She hurried from the place. She fairly ran until several squares distant.

Now she was more hopelessly wretched than ever. She thrilled with horror as she thought of the wicked snare set for her feet. Were all womankind unworthy and cruel? She shuddered, a score of wild thoughts in her mind. Even the dark, deep river seemed to invite her. Gradually the distraction grew less intense. She remembered a married school friend. Surely she, her closest companion for four years, would offer her a refuge. Lura resolved to return home, destroy the note left for her husband, write to hor friend asking her to take her in, await a reply and then leave the house forever.

She was faint and trembling from excitement and despair as she neared the house. She entered, stood dazed as she saw her husband coming from upstairs. He was never home at that time of the day. He must have found the note, and yet with a beaming face he came towards her.

"You dear little wanderer," he cried. Wherever have you been, when I have a great surprise for you?"

"A surprise?" she repeated, scarcely knowing what she said.

"Yes, come," and he entwined his arm about her and drew her past the drawing room draperies. "Lura, my nearest and dearest of kin, Myra Blodgett," spoke Sydney and Lura faced the young lady that Burton had pointed out to her. She extended a hand, but her senses were reeling. What did it all mean?

"Cousin Myra is responsible for the first secret I ever kept from you, dear," proceeded Sydney. "She is a runaway-cruel papa and all that! She would not let me bring her here for fear she would be located, but within an hour her gallant knight errant will be here with a clergyman and then we can face the issue."

How Not to Sneeze.

Everyone who attends church or goes to the theater or other place where people are assembled knows how embarrassing it is to have to sneeze with the usual unpleasant sounds that accompany such an outburst of our real nature, an exchange says. Such may very easily be avoided by thinking quickly and following a simple little rule which will save us much annoyance.

When the feeling comes over us which always precedes a sneeze, all we have to do is to lay our finger across the upper lip directly beneath the nose and press firmly upon the lip for a few seconds. The sneeze will leave without making itself heard.

The same result can be obtained by laying the finger across the lower lip just above the chin and pressing rather firmly for a few moments.

Either of these acts will not attract attention and in almost every instance the person will be saved the annoyance of disturbing the entire audi-

REMEMBERED HIS DEAD CHUM

Stricken Soldier True to Promise He Had Made, Though Himself Close to the End.

Miss Day told me another little story that is worth repeating. It was about a soldier named McGinnis, who had interested her greatly by reason of his unusual intelligence and his patience under suffering. One morning, when Miss Day came to the hospital, the superintendent told her that Mc-Ginnis was dying. An operation had been performed on him and it had not been successful.

"He is very anxious to see you," said the superintendent. "Does he know about his condi-

"Not yet; we have not told him." Miss Day went at once to the soldier's bedside, and found him weak but perfectly conscious.

"I am glad you have come," he said. 'I want to ask if you will write a letter for me. There was a comrade of mine shot down at Santiago, and before he died he made me promise that I would send a message to his mother. . I've got her address here.' He drew a paper form his shirt. "I have waited till I was well enough to write, but-but-I am getting on slowly and I'd rather you did it. You see, I know about mothers-how anxious they get. I'll write to her myself when I'm better."

Then he dictated the message, speaking the words with difficulty, and these were about the last words he spoke. He died that night.-Cleveland Moffett, in Leslie's Weekly.

AVOID ENVY AND JEALOUSY

One's Own Honest Purpose and Good Will Is the Only Source of Real Comfort,

There is nothing which so sours the face and shrivels the muscles as envy or jealousy.

Defended by Human Wall. According to legend, the ancient castle of Hapsburg, overlooking the Rhine, was founded in 1020, and was without surrounding walls for defensive purposes—a strange omission in those warlike days. A friend, coming to stay at the castle, so greatly deplored the absence of the usual defenses that its lord declared that, before sunrise on the following morning, his stronghold would be surrounded by impregnable walls. Naturally the visitor smiled and did not believe that this thing could come to pass; but, in the early morning, he was awakened by the lord of the castle, who bade him look out upon the walls. He had kept his promise, but in an unexpected way. Instead of seeing a surrounding wall made of stone, the visitor saw an unbroken circle of the lord's followers, all in their armor and the Civil War.-Brief Sun. bearing weapons. And it has since been the boast of the Hapsburgs that the family's devoted subjects were sufficient defense in no matter what

Scant Praise for Verdi's Music. An English critic said of Rigoletto when it reached London in 1853: "There is little offensive music in Rigoletto; the ears are seldomer stunned than in most of the composer's other works and there is, we fancy, less pretense in the writing. Nevertheless Verdi's sins are apparent in every scene. Poverty of ideas, an eternal effort at originality-never accomplished-strange and odd phrases, lack of coloring, and a perpetual swag--melodies if you will-in Rigoletto, which are sure to find favor with the barrel organs."

How Raindrops Make the Lightning. An English scientist declares that the splitting of raindrops in falling through the ascending air currents which are characteristic of thunder storms, is the source of the lightning. The small drops with negative charges go up with the wind while large ones with positive charges stay below. Thus during a thunderstorm there is between the positive earth and the negative upper portion. When the charge has become sufficient a series same line and these produce what we see as a lightning flash.

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.) Harry Lawson sighed and, pushing back the half-finished letter, looked drearily out of the hotel window. A carriage was driving up to the door. The sun was shining, the trees and shrubs looked their best that bright July day. And the letter was to his

Of course it was unthinkable that he should jilt her. Such an idea had never entered his mind. But if she, too, had ceased to care for him-if he could come to that conclusion . . . He had hinted at it in his letter, and he had been trying to form it so that he should not hurt her feelings. He would have given anything to have discovered the state of May's feelings.

Suddenly he sat motionless, listening with amazement to two voices beneath the window. One of them sounded like May's. At last he rose and looked cautiously out. One of two women who had seated themselves on the porch beneath, was May -the other was her friend Julia Sandow, whom Harry knew slightly, and had always vaguely disliked. He had felt that Julia had taken an antipathy toward him. He had wondered wheth-

"Yes, I love him," answered the girl. "I have never ceased to love him. I am not of that nature. But feebling the emotional part of our nahe-he does not care for me any more. That is what is breaking my heart."

"You are mistaken, dear. How do" you know? Business men have so many worries, and they can't always to the rapture of the engage-

He was my ideal of a man, so fine in every way. And it seemed wonderful to me that Harry could love me. And for months we were very happy. But then he began to grow cool; and I just know that he is tired of me. He never tells me things now, as he used to do. And if only I were sure I should break the engagement. COULD NOT BE KEPT HIDDEN But I am not sure.

"More than once I have started to write him a letter, releasing him, and then—then I have torn it up because I didn't know. How can I know? He is too honorable ever to tell me if he has ceased to care for me. How can

"I don't believe that he has ceased to care," said Julia. "Now listen to me, dear. There is all the difference in the world between being engaged and being married. When you are engaged the whole world seems new. Everything is wonderful. You think you are going to live in a paradise. But that isn't what counts at all. How many married couples do you know who live in that state of rapture?" "But Harry and I were going to be different," sobbed the girl.

"So everyone thinks, but afterward you understand your mistake. It is the building up of the life together engaged nearly a year, and during that that counts, my dear. "Oh, do you believe that, dear?"

"I am sure of it," said Julia. "You and Harry ought to marry at once, and then you will understand. I know he cares for you, and it is possible that he, too, has felt something of the same thing. That is the whole trouble. Well, I suppose we must have lunch if we are to catch the early train back."

They went into the hotel, while Harry waited above. So the girls had only come over for the day! They would not look at the hotel register, of course. Still, he feared detection; they could not but know that he had eavesdropped.

He waited till they came out and stood on the porch together. Evidently Julia's conversation had raised May's spirits, for she looked less unhappy; but she was still a pathetic little figure as she stood there.

"Come, dear, let us be going," said

Harry watched the two women walk down the path toward the station. And, looking after them, suddenly he felt the fog lift from his heart.

Julia, with her woman's intuition, had guessed rightly. Of course he loved May, and had never ceased to love her. It was the past, the other faces he had seen, that had lifted themselves like ghosts between them. And he had not understood.

He saw now that it is only by faith and loyalty that love endures. Love must be grappled and held. Everything that he had attributed to May, the coldness, the weariness, was nothing but the reflection of his own inner heart. He saw her again as she had been on that wonderful day when she ad promised to become his wife.

And his own heart was singing with happiness. He went downstairs and told the landlord that he was return-

When he got back to the city he found that his business troubles had had the same interpretation. Nothing was wrong. A man is as he thinketh. He had thought wrong-in every way he had thought wrongly; he nearly lost the hand of happiness outstretched to him.

It was with a beating heart that he walked up the road toward his fiancee's house on the next day. But it was with a heart steeled against its weaknesses. He knew its strength beyond all doubt, its power to hold.

And, even as he held May in his arms he saw her troubled face clear and grow radiant. There was a new warmth in her kisses. She clung lovingly to him, and was again his sweetheart of old.

"Harry, do you really love me?" she whispered.

He smiled at the question. "Well enough to ask you when you are going to make me happier still," he an-

When Shared With a Friend.

The pleasure which is for myself alone satisfies me but little, and lasts but a short time. It is for myself and my friends that I read, that I reflect, that I write, that I meditate, that I listen, that I look, that I feel. I think continually of their happiness. If I am impressed by a beautiful line they shall know of it. Have I come across a lovely trait, I have promised myself to share it with them. Has some enchanting thing revealed itself to me, almost unconsciously I plan to tell them of it. I have consecrated to them the use of all my senses and all my

Many Nations Have Vainly Tried to Prevent Other Countries Purloining Sources of Wealth.

The following national secrets that have become world property are described in Farm and Fireside:

"There was a time when the Turkish government imposed the death penalty on persons caught trying to smuggle out of the empire the best breeds of Angora goats. In 1881, a Californian, Doctor Bailey, bought four goats in Turkey, carried them on mules, camels and in a closed carriage for some hundreds of miles, sheared off their luxuriant wool, rolled them in coal dust to make them look common and disreputable, and escaped with the sultan's goats and a whole skin. The descendants of these goats are found on ranches in the West and Southwest, crossed with Angoras from South Africa and other parts of the world.

"Once the governments of China and Japan guarded with similar jealousy the exportation of the tea plant. Someone escaped with some seed or cuttings, however, some forty years ago, and the original plantation of smuggled tea plants is still flourishing in South Carolina.

"Fifty years ago Brazil was engaged in an effort to keep the rubber tree in confinement in that empire. The seed was smuggled to Ceylon, however, and for half a century East Indian planters have been perfecting the rubber-tree until now the best plantations are there, rather than in Brazil, and the Brazilians who want the best varieties send to Ceylon, Java and other Asiatic countries for their trees for planting.

"The sultan lost his goat, the mandarins their tea and the dons their rubber trees-and in return Brazil has given the Asiatics the plague of the water hyacinth and the Mongolians have sent us the San Jose scale, the gypsy moth and several other pests.

"There-are at least two sides to the matter of free exchange, but it is one of the most fascinating subjects connected with agriculture."

WOMEN SEEK BARBER'S AID

Not Even the Softest Down is Allowed to Stay on the Faces of Japanese Ladies.

In Japan not only men but women go to the barber if there be any sign of hair on their faces; they do not permit even the soft down to grow, which the Japanese are often astonished to see left unmolested on the faces of some Western women. Often, too, the eyebrows are shaved. In recent years the female barber has become a feature of the profession in Tokyo, most of these being the wives of barbers who wish to make themselves useful to their husbands, though some are independent.

The seventeenth of every month is regarded as a barber's holiday, when they close up shop and go to theaters and places of amusement, for which they are often furnished with free tickets, because they allow the playbills and other advertisements of the places of amusement to be posted in their shops free. Most of the instruments now used by Japanese barbers are made in Japan, thought at first they were all imported.

Colored Rope.

Every rope used in the British naval service, from heaving line to hawser, wherever used on board ship or in dockyard, has woven into one of its strands, for purposes of identification, a colored thread. A different color is used according to the port of manufacture; red, blue, green and yellow being adopted for different ports.

The presumption is that any rope with the colored thread found outside of such uses is in improper hands. This custom has prevailed in the British navy since long before the days of Nelson. A similar method of identification is employed to some extent commercially. Some railways mark their rope in this way, and it is sometimes employed in identifying ropes which, used for the transmission of power in operating machinery and in lighters, would be liable to be stolen.

Tongues That Kill.

The tongues of some animals are very dangerous weapons. A lion could speedily kill a man by merely licking him with his tongue. The tongues of all the members of the cat family are covered with curious recurving spines, formed of tough cartilage. In the common domestic cat these spines are very small, but are sufficiently well developed to give the tongue a feeling of roughness. In the fiercest animals, such as the lion or tiger, these spines are frequently found projecting up for an eighth of an inch or more, with very sharp points or edges. While the mouth is relaxed the tongue is soft and smooth, but when the animal is excited the spines become rigid.

The law does not countenance violence during a strike or at any other time and strike or at any other time, and if organized labor adherents are guilty of using violence, should they have the right to demand that they be exempt from the law on the ground. from the law on the ground that it is their employer's prop-erty at which they are directing such violence?

If a court admonishes a man or body of men to cease using violence, destroying property and assaulting workers, and the injunction is disregarded, should it be necessary for that court to call in a jury of twelve men to pass on the guilt that is admitted? But, says Mr.

Washington Monument a Motion Picture Screen

WASHINGTON.—The Washington monument now classifies as the largest motion picture screen in captivity. On it are being projected open-air "movies" that are free to the public and that are strictly official in character, being produced under the auspices of the bureau of commercial economics. The pictures were taken for the government in the various national parks with the idea of showing the people of the country the beauty spots of America, and also for the purpose of doing a bit of real university extension work.

The idea of the pictures is purely educational and the films shown are of a character that does not compete in any way with the regular motion picture exhibitors' business. The officers in charge of the affair have been very careful about this, for the reason that they do not wish in any way to offend the exhibitors, many of whom have large investments in apparatus, etc., at stake which might be jeopardized by the establishments of free motion picture shows in the public parks.

The fact that the work that is being carried on by the bureau in the showing of this film is of an educational character solely is being carefully emphasized. In addition to the reels of film showing the national parks there is also a reel showing the growth of golden rod from the seed to the flower.

The series will be given during the summer not only in this city, but in most of the large cities, and many of the smaller towns throughout the country. For the purpose of carrying on this work the bureau secured a big motor truck which is equipped with a projecting apparatus, screen and all the necessary paraphernalia for showing pictures.

Finley Is Greatest Camera Dodger in Congress cane.

DAVID EDWARD FINLEY, the representative of the Fifth South Carolina district, is the greatest camera dodger in the Sixty-fourth congress. He admits that he lives in "mortal dread" of having his picture taken either out of doors or within the confines of a photographer's studio.

His colleagues cannot understand just why Mr. Finley has such a dislike to having his picture taken, for they point out that "he isn't such a bad-looking fellow," but they respect his wishes. Whenever a suspiciouslooking kodak fiend appears on the capitol grounds and they are in the company of the South Carolina representative these colleagues of Mr. Finley form a hollow square and, with the bashful representative in the center, escort him to a place of safety. The other day, while Representative Barnhart of Indiana, chairman of the committee on printing, was struggling to have his revised printing bill adopted by the house, Representative Edwards of Georgia offered an amendment providing that a picture of each member of congress shall accompany each biographical sketch in the Congressional Directory. It was then that Representative Finley "The motive of the gentleman in offering his amendment is to have the Congressional Directory contain photographs so that a person looking at the photographs would be able to recognize a member of the house?" he asked. "Yes," answered Mr. Edwards, "largely for the purpose of identification." "Then," drawled Mr. Finley, "the gentleman would discriminate against me. Eighteen or twenty years ago I thought I was good enough looking to have otograph taken. Since then I have not had one taken and never expect to have another. I should have to stand on my photograph of twenty years

"Well, I think the gentleman is better looking now than he was twenty years ago, and I am not saying that with any reflection on his appearance twenty years ago," said Mr. Edwards as the house tittered.

New Rolling Kitchen for the Army Is Adopted

FTER much experiment and many tests of rolling kitchens from both A domestic and foreign sources, the military authorities believe that they fruit clusters. now have found a satisfactory type of rolling kitchen of American design. The principal objection to most of the types tested was that they added to the amount of transportation that had to be maintained for an army in the field and that they did not produce satisfactory results in the way of hot food for men on the march and on the firing line. The latest type is believed to solve the problem, and 25 of them have been ordered. Each of them is mounted on two wheels, and it can be drawn by two mules. Two of them are capable of furnishing hot stew and coffee for one battalion. The first of the kitchens was tried out at El Paso, Tex., and the reports of it were favor-

Contracts have been made by the war department with a Boston company for 10,000 of the new army emergency rations, with a view to ascertaining to what extent it will be possible to obtain the ration in the open market and so avoid the necessity of accumulating a large supply to be held in storage in anticipation of a sudden demand for its issue.

The new ration is in the form of cracker, and it is composed of flour and lean beef in equal quantities, with one-half as much dried milk and a little invert sugar intended as a binder for the purpose of rendering the cracker less likely to crumble, in addition to which the invert sugar has restorative qualities that will add to the value of the ration as a sustaining provision.

terminals. For several weeks there had been a running fire between Moore, and some of the middle West representatives on the "pork-barrel"

Representative Sloan of Nebraska, who suggested a line, of thought about "appropriations for gargling the mouth of the Delaware," was discussing the mud in the country roads. Moore inquired why appropriations to dig mud out of the rivers was not as essential as appropriating money to dig mud out of the roads. Sloan retorted that the trouble was the rivers and harbors advocates wanted to put water in the rivers. Some further badinage led to Moore taking the floor for the purpose of "embalming his

Nebraska friend in verse." Here is the result: "When my colleague from Nebraska takes the center of the stage Everybody stops to lisen, from the speaker to the page;

For they know 'there's something coing' and they want to see the fun. As my colleague from Nebraska puts the river on the run.

"Oh, my colleague from Nebraska talks about the river 'pork." You can see Iowa titter—consternation in New York! What a joke to spend our money on those sluggish little creeks. When the dear old cows in Kansas cannot sleep for cattle ticks!

"Gargle rivers with our money! Make a roadway for a ship! When our hogs are down with asthma and our pullets have the pip! 'Never,' quoth Nebraska's hero; 'Never,' echoes down the line.
'Never,' while appropriations may be had to help our swine."

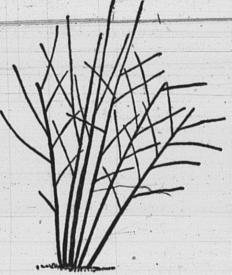

Nore Profitable If Farmer Understands Growth.

First Object Should Be to Give New Wood Room in Which to Grow-Summer Pruning Is Done During June or July.

The pruning of the red raspberry will be better understood if the pruner knows the habit of growth of the plant. A new cane springs up and develops during the summer; the next spring this cane throws out fruit clusters, bears fruit, and dies that year. The root is perennial and the cane is biennial. The object of the pruner the tops, thus encouraging lower then, should be: first, to remove the growth and heavier branches for supold wood as soon as it dies in order porting the fruit. are 24 to 30 inches high. If it is done in time the tender tips may be pinched off with the fingers and the use of shears is not necessary. The patch must be gone over more than once, since the canes will not all reach the desired height at the same time.

Briefly summarized, the pruning of the black raspberry is as follows: The old canes should be cut out and burned soon after fruiting. The new canes should be pinched back when 24 to 30 inches high, and thinned to not more than five or six canes to each crown. This pruning is called summer pruning, and is done in June or July. In the spring the lateral branches are cut back so that the remaining buds will develop into strong

PROPER PLANTING OF TREES

Object Should Be to Place Roots in Soil as They Were Before Removal From Nursery.

The perfection of planting consists in placing the tree roots in connection with the soil as nearly as possible in the same direction as that in which they were before removal, and but slightly-one or two inches-deeper than the tree stood in the nursery. If the season is very dry it will be a good plan to give each tree a bucketful or two of water when nearly done plant-

Planting should not be done too early -not before the leaves will come off easily. They must in no case be left on the trees, even for an hour or two after digging, as they carry off moisture rapidly, and the trees would soon be wilted to a certain extent; and to strip off the leaves by hand before their office is completed is not a good plan. The planting may continue as long as the soil works well (is not wet and sticky) and the ground not too

Soy Beans Make Excellent Hay, Increase Nitrogen of Soil and Desirable for Pasture

Soy beans are' very popular as a legume crop where they have been tried. They make excellent hay, increase the nitrogen supply of the soil and are highly desirable as a pasture crop for cows and hogs.

Soy beans are sure to be highly regarded in the Southwest when they are planted more extensively. They may be planted in rows and cultivated like cowpeas. The Mammoth and the Ito San are good varieties.

PRUNE THE RASPBERRY PRUNING THE TOMATO VINES

More Fruit Produced Than on Plants Allowed to Develop With No Attention to Shape.

Pruned tomato vines will produce more fruit and a superior quality to that grown on vines that are allowed to develop with no attention as to shape and density of the foliage. The plant that must supply sustenance to more branches than are necessary for supporting the crop, will have its vitality so uselessly sapped by them that the fruit will be small in size and of an inferior quality.

No set rule can be given for pruning tomatoes, which should be done according to their size, shape and vigor. However, tall, top-heavy vines are to be guarded against by cutting out branches are to be trimmed back well. There is a slight difference between premature ripening and rot.

For growing cucumbers, tomatoes, pole beans or the taller varieties of peas a trellis has many advantages over poles or brush. Fewer cucumbers remain hidden under the leaves and go to seed, and it is easier to spray them on both sides of the leaves to prevent rust when they are growing on a trellis. By CATHERINE CRANMER.

"Breezes" that blow in from the sea shore bring rumors of many conquests made there by Miss Amy Masterson, who is summering with her aunt, Mrs. de Laittre, at her handsome cottage." Gerald Mason flung the offending newspaper containing this unwelcome announcement all the way across the dining room of his mother's big house. of which he was the only occupant except the caretaker and the cook. As he read this gossip of the society column. Gerald realized the danger of remaining away from Amy at this time, and as he reflected upon the complicated state of the paper market, he realized the danger of remaining away from business long enough to make more than a flying visit to the distant place where Amy was summering. A moment later he stalked across the room and into the telephone closet, where he called up a railway ticket office and engaged a berth on the midnight train for the Atlantic coast. Fifcanes of the blackberry grow long blossom, before trimming out any of teen minutes later he was surveying and droop to the ground, whereas the the branches, when it can be seen the contents of a huge suitcase to see canes of the red raspberry are shorter where the crop will be too thick- if he had put in all the necessities of a three-day trip. Gerald arrived at his destination Saturday afternoon and learned from ous ones for developing and support- Amy's aunt that his day letter to Amy had never reached her, as she was off on an automobile trip, and the time KEEPING PLANT LICE AWAY for her return was vaguely indicated as "sometime Saturday."

Her aunt explained Amy's absence as being a motor trip with "the Marting," and Gerald wondered whether "the Martins" included any unmarried male eligibles.

After an evening call at Mrs. de Laittre's cottage, Gerald strolled along the board walk. He went in a cafe and ordered something as an excuse to have somewhere to sit and something to do. At a table very near him a pretty woman and two men were

"Don't look so cut up, Percy," said the woman, addressing a bored-looking blond youth. "Amy Masterson will be back tomorrow, and if she hasn't become engaged by that time to that tremendously rich old uncle of the Martins you may probably be able to have her all to yourself for-perhaps half an hour. Eh, Mr. Maxwell?"-this to

"Better not count on more than twenty minutes, Percy," the older man laughed. "Mrs. de Laittre tells me a young Lochinvar has come from 'way out of the West, and that he'll be pawing up the sand with impatience until she arrives, or words to that effect."

The party then rose and passed from the room, and Gerald glared gloomily after them. He was angry at hearing Amy's name tossed about from one man to another, and he had a sickening fear of that ridiculous rich uncle of the Martins becoming engaged to her before he, the young Lochinvar, had a chance to do anything more effective than paw the sand.

But a roomy bed and a sea breeze through the window brought their logical result of sound and restful sleep, so that the next morning Gerald awoke refreshed and with renewed courage to compete with his rivals for Amy's favor.

Eleven, twelve, and even one o'clock came on Sunday, but neither Amy nor any message from her came. Gerald, who had been invited to dine at her aunt's, appeared punctually. As the diners left the table and went into the long living room, there was the sound of a motor horn at the curb, and all rushed to the open French windows in time to see a middle-aged fat man in a dusty ulster and unsightly goggles take Amy's hand and assist her from a big roadster.

"Congratulate us!" he called out, as Mrs. de Laittre and her guests stepped upon the veranda. Gerald felt as if a bomb had hit him in the region of BEST EGGS FOR INCUBATION the heart, and he wished he might be miles away when the next words came from that offending mouth. But with the next words his hopes came back with a bound, for they were these: We are the only two of the six in our party who got back in time for Sunday dinner, thanks to my new car."

A general laugh followed the announcement that dinner was just over, but Mrs. de Laittre reassured the hungry motorists with promises of generous left-overs. Gerald suddenly found them covered. Do not wash hatching himself holding Amy's hand tightly and murmuring some words of greeting which he couldn't have identified upon oath a moment later. There was a welcome in her eyes, though, that brought back his courage and his senses, as she presented her middleaged friend, at whom Gerald cast a doubtful glance.

"Don't glance at me like a savage, young man," whispered the uncle of Mrs. Martin a moment later, as he drew Gerald aside into the darkened hall, "Do your glaring at these simps and sissies with dollar marks for backbones. I threatened to marry Amy to save her from such as they, and some dunce took me seriously and started the report. Take my tip, and don't go back west without a promise from her. She told me today she knew one man worth a dozen of these, and she said his last name was the same as my first, which is Mason. "So I guess we're brother Masons, all right, eh?"

The middle-aged man laughed heartily at his joke, and on the moonlit veranda that evening Amy confirmed what he had said in a manner which fully compensated Gerald for all the mental anguish he had undergone. (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspa

The Delight of Children

The self-developed, inner-flavour of New Post Toasties bear a unique attraction for the kiddiesthey even like them dry from the package for their lunches. A box of Toasties provides "eats" that will delight the children.

New Post Toasties are usually served with cream and sugar, in which form the flavour is more pronounced and the flakes more delicious. These New Toasties do not "chaff" or crumble in the package and they don't mush down in cream-both common defects of old-fashioned "corn flakes."

Then, too, notice the tiny bubbles on the flakes, produced by the quick, intense heat of a new patented process of making which imparts delightful crispness and a substantial body to the flakes.

New Post Toasties are a vast improvement over any old-style "corn flakes."

ions is a bad symptom of intellectual foolishness. Every trade and profesdon among us, every interest and prejudice, every aspiration, hypothesis or question about a question has gang of club members at its back. The fashionable mothers get up sodeties to determine what plays their children shall see during the holidays. I know of one woman who was not able to decide whether she should give a rubber ring or a coral to her teething child or should leave him to nature and the thumb. She accordingly formed a society. It is called the Ring and Coral association and meets twice a month. It has recently split into two organizations through the secession of the antiring and coralites. By means of these two societies any mother may today escape the mental anguish of making a decision for herself upon this teething matter.—John J. Chapman, in Atlantic Monthly.

DAINTY PUDDINGS.

Boil a cupful of water and pour into it six tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, mixed with a cupful of fruit juice; cook until clear, add sugar to taste and fold in the beaten whites of three eggs; cook two or three minutes to set the eggs, then add a pinch of salt and pour into a wet mold to cool. Serve with a custard sauce made of the yolks of the eggs. Serve

Prune Whip.—Stew a half a pound of prunes until soft, then set aside to cool after draining off the liquor. When perfectly cold chop very fine. Beat the whites of six eggs to a close firm meringue, add six tablespoonfuls of sugar and add the prunes. Bake half an hour in a deep buttered dish, covered for 20 minutes so that the souffle has risen to its full height. Send to the table immediately with a sauce made of a cupful of whipped cream, sweetened and flavored.

Rhubarb Pudding.-Roll out a thin piecrust and heap on a cupful or two of chopped rhubarb and a half cupful of raisins. Roll up and place in a deep dish. Add a cupful of brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter and a cupful of boiling water. Place in the oven and bake an hour. There will be sauce enough to serve with the pudding of the juice and sugar.

Date Pudding.-Take a third of a cupful of softened butter, add a half cupful of sugar, one egg beaten, a cupful of milk, two and a half cupfuls of graham flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt and a cupful of dates, cut fine. Steam two hours in a covered mold. A tube mold is better.

Caramel Rice Pudding.-Wash cupful of rice and cook it in salted water (one cupful) until it is absorbed. Add a quart of hot milk and cook until the rice is soft; then add two well-beaten eggs. Melt threefourths of a cupful of sugar until a light brown; cover the bottom and sides of a pudding dish with this caramel. Turn in the rice and cook in hot water for half an hour. Turn upside down on a serving dish and let stand ten minutes, and it will slip out easily.

DIFFERENT SAUCES.

The art of making and serving an appropriate sauce is one which should be cultivated as many plain dishes may be made most appetizing by a fitting sauce.

Drawn Butter Sauce .--Cook together a tablespoonful of butter and a tablespoonful of flour until brown and dry. Add a cupful of boiling water, cook two minutes, stirring well: add salt and pepper to taste. Using milk and adding it before the flour is brown makes a white sauce. With half cream and half white stock flavored with mushrooms and a dash of lemon juice it becomes Bechamel; cut out half the flour and add the yolks of three eggs, lemon juice, onion and another tablespoonful of butter for a Hollandaise; double the proportion of flour and it furnishes a thick sauce for delicate croquettes.

Brown Sauce.-Cook a half a tablespoonful of flour in a tablespoonful of butter until well browned; add a tablespoonful of chopped onion with other vegetables if liked; cover and simmer until soft. Add one cupful of water or stock, a half teaspoonful of salt, six peppercorns, a half a bay leaf and simmer gently ten minutes. Strain

Oyster Sauce.—Parboil and drain a half pint of oysters. Add cream to the liquor to make one cupful, prepare as white sauce adding the oysters at Lobster sauce is prepared the same way, using stock instead of cream and mincing the lobster before adding it to the sauce.

Bread Sauce.-Crumble fine stale bread crumbs in a saucepan with a half cupful of cold milk and six cracked peppercorns. Let simmer five minutes, then add a half cupful of cream, a teaspoonful of salt, but do not stir; simmer until all is absorbed. This is excellent to serve with roast
