The election resulted as follows: One hundred and forty-five ballots were cast, of which two were scattering: Jabez Bacon 30; Dr. G. W. Palmer 113. Dr. Palmer having received a majority of all the votes cast was declared elected. The meeting then adjourned.

Gift From Frenchman.

Lynn Pratt, who is well known to many residents of Chelsea, is now with the Bonstelle Company at the Garrick theatre in Detroit. A few days ago he received from an old school friend, a Frenchman, Count de la Romiere, a large plain finger ring made by a French soldier on the firing line at Verdun from the aluminum of a german shell. The letter with it from the count, who is in the trenches, said it had helped to keep up the soldier's courage and prevented him from going insane from horror of his surroundings and the count added, "The ring is not adorned with any stone, but in the trenches rubies are blood and pearls are tears. So picture this ring set with a beautiful ruby—the red blood of that brave young soldier who has since lost his life for his country—encircled with the pearls, the tears of his heartbroken mother." The count was one of the first to enlist. At a farewell dinner at which he was host and Mr. Pratt one of the guests, he presented to the latter a silver-headed cane, a present to the count from the king of Cambodia after a visit to Paris at which the count served on the entertainment committee.

To Water Users.

Owing to the enormous amount of water being consumed it becomes necessary to enforce the following rules, which are a part of Ordinance No. 19, regulating the use of water:

- It is necessary that the rules be observed in order to have water for fire protection.
- No. 1—Sprinkling lawns and gardens must be from 6:00 a. m. to 7:00 a. m. and from 6:00 p. m. to 7:00 p. m., standard time.
- No. 2—Hose must not be used without nozzle, which must not exceed one-quarter inch in diameter.
- No. 3—Two lines of hose must not be used at the same time.
- No. 4—Hose must not be left running on lawns and gardens after the above hours.
- No. 5—Consumers of water must not permit outsiders to use water from their hydrants.
- No. 6—Consumers of water must not sprinkle street beyond their frontage.
- No. 7—Faucets must not be left running or permitted to leak.

The Marshal has been instructed to see that Ordinance No. 19 is enforced. Any violation of the above rules will result in the water being cut off, and a charge of $1.00 will be made to turn it on. By order of E. L. & W. W. COMMISSION.

ANN ARBOR—Dr. Hugh M. Beebe, head of the surgical department of the homeopathic school, is in receipt of a telegram from the war department ordering him and his first assistant, Dr. C. B. Pillsbury, to report to the commanding officer at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, for duty.

ELECTING A PRESIDENT 3

Jefferson Elected by House of Representatives.

THE Democratic Republicans supported Thomas Jefferson for president and Aaron Burr for vice president in 1800. The Federalists supported John Adams and C. C. Pinckney. The vote, as counted on Feb. 11, 1801, was:

Jefferson, 73; Burr, 73; Adams, 65; Pinckney, 64; Jay, 1.

No one having received a majority of the votes cast, the house of representatives proceeded on the same day to elect a president. The balloting continued for six days, and finally Jefferson received the votes of a majority of the states and was declared elected. Sixteen states voted.

Jefferson defeated C. C. Pinckney of South Carolina by a big majority in the election of 1804.

ESCAPED CONVICT WANTED ICE CREAM

Charles Rosebury, Who Escaped From Prison Farm, Betrayed by Sweet Tooth.

Charles Rosebury, an escaped convict from the Jackson prison farm was caught near the Sylvan crossing about one o'clock Sunday morning by Deputy Sheriff Worden, of Grass Lake, and another Jackson county deputy sheriff.

Charles Rosebury called at Deputy Sheriff Worden's place of business in Grass Lake about 9 o'clock Saturday evening and obtained a dish of ice cream which he ate there. The officer recognized the man as he was leaving the store and called to him to stop.

Instead of doing the man started on a run and the officer after a short run caught up with the convict, who turned on his pursuer with a knife and slashed his hand and made a get away in the swamp at the edge of the village.

The Jackson county sheriff and a number of his deputies, in autos, started out searching the country for the man, and the Grass Lake deputy with his partner, followed the Michigan road in their machine, and near the Sylvan crossing they stopped.

After a short wait they saw the man coming along the track from the west and when he discovered the officers he started on a run, but was soon captured, after a stiff fight.

About two o'clock the officers called Marshal Cooper and notified him that the man had been caught. Marshal Cooper, who had got home about an hour before called night telegraph operator Collins and asked him to inform the Jackson officers, who were in their auto asleep on Main street, having arrived some time before from a trip through Sharon, that they were at liberty to return to their homes as the chase had come to a successful end. When Mr. Collins awoke the officers they greeted him with an automatic revolver, but he informed them that he did not want that kind of a "pill" and as the prisoner had been caught they could go home.

After the officers had apologized for their action with the gun they thanked him for the information and "hit the high spots" for Jackson.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Evangelistic Meetings are Being Conducted by The Leonards of Chicago.

The initial service of the community campaign was launched Tuesday night under the auspices of the Baptist church. The meetings are to be evangelistic in their nature and will be conducted by the Leonards, of Chicago, who for the past few weeks have been making their home here.

The following statement was given out by C. Rufus Osborn, pastor of the Baptist church:

We would like it distinctly understood that our desire is to conduct the work not only for the betterment of our church but also for the other churches and the community at large. With this for our purpose we most cordially invite all who are interested in a moral and spiritual uplift in our community to join with us and urge that you cooperate as far as possible.

The services will be conducted every night except Monday at 7:30. Those who have attended say that it is the coolest place in town. A short song service with special solos precedes every preaching service and Mr. Leonard's sermons are short and spicy and to the point. You cannot afford to miss them. Come and bring your friends.

There will be three special services on Sunday. In the morning at 10 o'clock. There will be a mass meeting at 3 o'clock, at which time Mr. Leonard will give his special lecture on "The Home." Although this is a mass meeting for everybody, a part of the house will be reserved for mothers and all are requested to wear a flower in honor of their mothers in the evening there will be the regular union service at 7:30 o'clock.

These meetings will continue all next week, and on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons from 3 to 3:30 o'clock there will be special Bible study at the church conducted by Mrs. Leonard.

Filed Counter Claim.

Counter charges that machinery furnished the Washed Cleaned Sand and Gravel Co., located about four miles east of Chelsea, from the shops of the Allis-Chalmers Company of Milwaukee some time ago, had proved worthless and inadequate for the work for which it was ordered, were made Friday in the filing of a plea and notice by the Gravel Company in circuit court. The Allis-Chalmers concern recently started suit to collect on the cost of equipment sent the Gravel Co.

According to the notice of Friday, a trial of the matters set forth in the complaint of the Milwaukee concern is demanded by the Gravel people, and it will be the endeavor of the latter to show that damage has accrued to them in the sum of several thousand dollars through failure of the machinery to perform its duty. It is their contention that a roll crusher was ordered of the plaintiffs, and that it was represented and guaranteed to do the work for which it was bought. "This it failed to do in any respect," the notice reads, "and to the damage of this defendant in the sum of $1,000, which this defendant will ask the court to certify to its credit."

The Gravel concern will also show that an agreement was entered into whereby the company would ship to Dexter a screening outfit, conveying machinery, belts, transmission, crushing rolls and other machinery. This material was guaranteed on a certain date, the notice says, and was ordered to produce a certain kind of material for a specific contract.

However, despite this agreement, a delay of four months occurred before the machinery was shipped. After lengthy negotiations had been carried on for some time between the two concerns, suit was started by the Milwaukee company.

MICHIGAN TROOPS NOW AT EL PASO

REACHED THERE TUESDAY MORNING FOR BORDER DUTY NO SICKNESS REPORTED.

CHEERED ALL ALONG ROUTE

Troop Trains Were Carefully Guarded During the Run From Camp Ferris to End of Journey.

El Paso, Tex.—The Michigan troops reached their destination July 11th, after covering 1,947 miles and encamped at Camp Cotton one mile from the heart of El Paso and only a few blocks from the Rio Grande river.

The camp in which the boys are located is an ideal one, about three miles from Fort Bliss and one mile from the center of the city. None of the privates have been allowed in the city as yet and only those officers who had business have come in. It is predicted here that the entire brigade which was at Camp Ferris, Grayling, will be here inside of a week, and that brigade headquarters will be established, at least temporarily.

The boys on the first section were pleased at the final decision, as also were those of the second, which caught up with the first at Kansas City. No sickness had been reported on the first or second sections.

Chaplain Atkinson held religious services Sunday morning on the second section. The Sunday ride was a beautiful one through the rich farming country of Illinois and Iowa, dotted with typical villages of the prairie country.

At all stations where the train stopped the people turned out en masse to greet the Michigans. The Michigan troops were preceded by four trains of Wisconsin troops and directly behind a contingent from Nebraska.

Stop Sending News.

Grayling.—By order of General Kirk all telegrams relating to movements of troops must be submitted to the military censor before being offered to a telegraph company for transmission. As the censor has been advised by the war department that no troop movements may be published until they have been completed, this means that no news of the leaving of the remaining two regiments and detached troops from Grayling will be announced until they reach the destination to which they have been assigned. Correspondents on trains, however, may mail letters to their papers.

This order followed a general order which prohibits all commissioned officers and enlisted men from sending news of any nature to newspapers. Because the Maxim machine guns will be received before the thirty-third leaves for service, the machine gun company of that regiment had turned over its rifles to Co. A, which had a shortage. Automatic pistols for the machine gun company have arrived.

Six mounts will be taken to the border by Capt. Heinrich Pickert, of troop B, Detroit. Other horses will be furnished for the troop at the border, and as these horses will be new to the cavalry game, some time will have to be spent in preparing them for service. Otherwise, the troop is in excellent shape, without a sick man or a worry, Capt. Pickert stated.

MICHIGAN NEWS ITEMS

Edward Crist, two and one-half years old, died when he fell down a 15-foot shaft to a cement floor in the Boderdorfer store at Muskegon.

A double-barreled muzzle loading shotgun was accidentally discharged while he was loading it, and Fred Newton, 26, of Superior township, was instantly killed, the top of his head being blown off.

Henry Reimer, a farmer, and one of the directors of the Farmers' Elevator Co., lost three valuable cows of what appeared to be a mysterious malady. The veterinary surgeon who attended them was puzzled until a search revealed a number of old paint cans, with the contents partially dried in the bottoms. The cattle had licked the lead mixture in sufficient quantity to kill them.

The new Grand Trunk roundhouse which was built two years ago was destroyed by fire at Bad Axe. The flames had gained such headway that there was no chance to either save the building or run out a locomotive. The loss is estimated at upwards of $25,000. The origin of the fire is unknown, although it started in that portion of the building where an electric switch was operated.

Busiest places in Berrien county nowadays are the canneries which are at vantage points all through the fruit belt, at Coloma, Watervliet, Berrien Springs, Sodus, Benton Harbor and other towns.

Oscoda county reports no warrants for arrests and no prosecutions for the last six months according to a report filed by C. H. W. Snyder, prosecuting attorney of the county, with the attorney-general. This is a record never before made by any Michigan county.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Members of the Flint Board of Education estimates the population of Flint to be between 70,000 and 75,000.

Miss Ethel Purcell, stenographer of the state senate and house for three years, died from a fractured skull suffered in a runaway.

Bert McDonald, 18, sentenced from Detroit February 18, to two years for larceny, escaped from the Jackson prison farm on July 5.

James Hammel, Jr., has been appointed chief clerk to the state labor commissioner, to succeed his father, who held that office at the time of his death.

William Johnson, sentenced from Mecosta county in 1890 to serve a life sentence in Jackson prison for a statutory offense, died from heart trouble.

Despondent over financial troubles, Joe Irwin, of Peoria, Ill., and his bride of two weeks, entered a suicide pact while spending their honeymoon at Macatawa park.

One hour after eating some tablets which he found on a chair beside his mother's bed, Maynard Reed, two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Reed, of Sebawa township, died in agony.

Raymond Leonard, of Indiana, who was spending his honeymoon at Dowagiac, dove to his death from a boat on Eagle lake while his bride was watching him. The body has not been recovered.

Roy Bailey saved Howard Wade from drowning at Lansing when he dove from the Michigan avenue bridge and swam ashore with his friend, who had gone down for the third time.

Mrs. Frank Grinnell, wife of a soldier at Grayling, has applied for a tax exemption from city assessment. Kalamazoo officials are puzzled as to whether they have any right to take any such action.

Mrs. Addison Spaulding, 83, one of the oldest and most prominent residents of the southwestern part of Barry county, and the last of the earliest pioneer school teachers is dead at her home near Milo.

The 2-year-old daughter of Mrs. Lee Gore, of Sandusky, was burned to death despite the mother's heroism in rushing into the burning residence and carrying the child out. The house was completely destroyed. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The police of Bay City are convinced that a gang of professional burglars is infesting the city. July 4 they broke into the Bay City Tire & Supply Co.'s store and robbed the safe of $140. This is the fifth robbery reported in as many days.

John T. Winship, state fire marshal, has added a new section to the fire marshal regulations, prohibiting smoking, or the use of matches in all garages. This action was brought about by the recent fire at Charlotte, where a life was lost, besides large property damage, caused by lighting a match in a garage.

On account of the large number of persons constantly confined in the Flint jail, the Genesee supervisors are considering the enlargement of the jail by building cells in the section now occupied by the sheriff as a residence and constructing a separate building as a home for the sheriff. For months the jail has been housing from 20 to 30 more prisoners than its capacity.

Charges are being made at Sault Ste. Marie that the new $175,000 high school building is threatened with collapse because of land formation. The foundations are settling rapidly. The contractor in reply to criticisms, says the material and workmanship are the best and that he knew of the condition of formation and advised piles be driven, but the school board took no action. He admits the foundations are in bad shape.

Within the next five years $150,000,000 will be spent upon American roads through co-operation between the national government and the states in highway improvement. Work has already been started on the half and half plan of the federal aid good roads measure. In the apportionment of the $75,000,000, Michigan receives $2,250,750, and will have to expend a like amount bringing the total to over $4,500,000 to be spent on Michigan roads within the next five years.

That Michigan is enjoying prosperity insofar as new companies for various lines of business are being formed is shown from a compilation made by Lee H. Pryor, head of the corporation division in the secretary of state's department. This compilation shows 262 new corporations authorized by the state department during the month of June, as against 190 a year ago in June and paying franchise fees of $16,845.41 into the state department, as compared to $7,873.74 a year ago for the corresponding month.

Contracts amounting to $111,893 have been let to Kalamazoo and Toledo firms for a new high school building to be erected at Plymouth.

The 10-year-old son of Michael Donahue, an Ottawa county supervisor, has been sent to Ann Arbor for the pasteur treatment. The boy was bitten by a mad horse, which had recently been bitten by a rabid dog. The dog had also bitten the cow. These two animals were killed by Donahue. The horse that bit Donahue's son also bit a cow. The animals have been killed.

BRITISH LINE UP WITH THE FRENCH

RECAPTURE NEARLY THE WHOLE OF TRONES WOOD, NORTH OF SOMME.

HAVE STRAIGHTENED LINE

The Dangerous Germans Salient Since the Great Drive Has Prevented the British From Keeping Up With the French.

London.—In furious fighting the British recaptured nearly the whole of the Trones wood, north of the Somme. General Sir Douglas Haig announced from his field headquarters in France. All but the northernmost end of the wood is again in British hands.

With this success, the British have further straightened out the dangerous German salient which, since the initial advance of the Anglo-French drive more than a week ago, has prevented the British from bringing their lines up abreast with the French advance south of the Somme, and now are in a position to continue their operations in conjunction with the French.

London.—The capture by the Russians of the important railway junction of Delatyn, in Galicia, one of the three objectives of the present phase of the offensive operations on the eastern front, and further progress by the French and the British on both banks of the Somme, are the outstanding features of the war situation.

PRES. WILSON IN DETROIT

Passed a Strenuous Day and Returned to Washington.

Detroit.—President Wilson and wife arrived in Detroit Monday morning having left Washington Sunday night. The object of his visit was to address the World's Salesmanship Congress. The party went direct from the train to the hall where the congress was assembled. He was received with outbursts of cheers by the thirty-five hundred people in the hall as he was in passing through the streets. In his address the president said:

"We must respect the sovereignty of Mexico. I say this for the benefit of those who wish to butt in."

"Mexico feels we do not wish to help her, but to possess her."

"This is due to the manner in which some have tried to exploit her possessions. I will not help these men."

"Lift your eyes to the horizon of business," he urged in closing, "and with the thought that you stand for the liberties of mankind, sell your goods and try to convert the people to the principles of America."

Mrs. Wilson dressed plainly with no display of jewels was the special feature for thousands who watched the progress of the party through the streets, or had seats in the hall.

After his address the party were taken to the Athletic club for lunch and a reception. Following this the party moved to the Ford factory where the president met Mr. Ford and made a brief address. Leaving this point the party was taken to the depot and boarded the train for the return trip to the capital. The day was not marred by an unpleasant feature though it must have been a tax on the chief magistrate's physical strength.

MICHIGAN CAN RAISE BIG ARMY

Wolverine State Has 634,518 Citizens of Military Age.

Washington.—Michigan has 634,518 citizens of military age, according to an estimate just completed by the United States census bureau. The report shows 21,071,076 such citizens in the entire United States.

The report is made in reply to the question as to how many able bodied citizens of military age (18 to 45 years) there are in the country. The department passes up the "able bodied" portion of the query as impossible to answer, but it fixes the above figure as representing all citizens or foreign-born males who have declared their intention to become citizens who are within the prescribed age limit.

Alexander Maidmont said to be a wealthy attorney of Montclair, N. J., was arrested at Kalamazoo for the alleged embezzlement of $50,000.

Grand Rapids' largest baby, weighing 15-12 pounds, was born July 4, to Mr. and Mrs. John McPhilly. Mrs. McPhilly is the mother of 14 children. The baby is in perfect condition.

A large boulder will be placed in front of the old Will Carleton home-stand, birthplace of the poet, two miles east of Hudson, by the Will Carleton Memorial association, which was formed a few months ago. The boulder will be taken from the Carleton farm and on it will be a bronze tablet.

300 MEXICANS ARE KILLED

Were Massacred by Broncho Yaquis in Lower Sonora According to Report.

Nogales.—From two to three hundred Carranza soldiers and camp followers were massacred by broncho Yaquis in Lower Sonora, according to arrivals at Nogales. Those of the de facto government not killed by gunfire, it was said, were burned at the stake.

While reports place the number of dead at 300, conservative estimates made on the known disposal of troops near the scene of the massacre, put the loss at 200.

News of the disaster to the Carranza force has caused extreme unrest among the several thousand Yaquis and Mayos now at Tampalme. While it is known that large numbers of Yaquis have joined the de facto army, there has been general disbelief that the entire Indian nation, including the Broncho or wild Yaquis have made peace with the Mexicans. For that reason the reports of the revolt and ensuing slaughter generally are credited.

Gen. Estrada has had several thousand troops in the Yaqui valley, holding back the Yaquis, and it is believed the opportunity for the reported massacre came about when Estrada moved his main command north to Hermosillo and Magdalena in the course of mobilization maneuvers.

Recover Stolen Horses.

El Paso.—Fourteen Mexican bandits were wiped out by American cowboys at Anapra, N. M., 30 miles west of El Paso. The Mexicans had crossed the border and stolen 46 horses belonging to Tom Perrine, a ranchman near Anapra. With two of his men, Perrine took the trail. There were about 40 Mexicans in the band. Perrine and his men followed them to the hills and met them and opened fire. The Mexicans ran and Perrine's men pursued them to the border, shooting as they went. Meanwhile a negro employe had come to El Paso in an automobile to get reinforcements and ammunition. Before these could be started for Anapra, Perrine himself telephoned that 14 Mexicans had been killed and buried in a ditch. Incidentally the horses were recovered.

START BATTLE ON SCOURGE

New York's 1,600,000 Babies Are Threatened With Infantile Paralysis.

New York.—The biggest city in the world is the mobilization center of forces of nation, state and city who are waging one of the biggest battles to save life that ever has been fought. New York's 1,600,000 babies are threatened with that mysterious malady, infantile paralysis. Half a dozen other states reported child victims. The federal government started plans to organize a great laboratory here where it is hoped the nation's greatest bacteriologists may make the sacrifice of the baby victims of the scourge not a vain one—where it is hoped some preventive may be discovered. The total number of cases in New York City since July 6 had reached 893; the total deaths 205.

TAXABLE PROPERTY NEAR BILLION MARK

The Valuation of the Townships Was Increased $68,753,032 and Detroit $177,609,010.

Detroit.—Valuation of Wayne county is placed at near the billion mark in the report which will be recommended to the board of supervisors by the board's committee on equalization. The total value of taxable real and personal property in the county is placed at $932,325,357. This figure is the full value of the property in the county, it is said, the valuation having been made on a 100 per cent basis.

The total boost over last year's valuation is $246,277,042. In 1915 the total valuation was $685,948,315. The 100 per cent valuation resulted in giving two townships, Taylor and Van Buren, and one ward, the Seventeenth, lower valuations than in 1915. Valuation of the Seventeenth ward last year was $53,147,850; this year it is placed at $26,452,880.

Work has been started on a $15,000 theatre being erected on Main street, Plymouth, by W. Thompson, of Northville.

David W. McPherson, of Battle Creek, was killed in the North Sea naval engagement May 30. He went to London on a cattle boat and enlisted in the British navy. He was a seaman on the Defiance, sunk by the Germans.

Dallas, Tex.—A score of militiamen were slightly injured when a troop train bearing the Fourth Nebraska infantry collided with a switch engine in the Missouri, Kansas and Texas yards at Dallas.

Mobile, Ala.—Fourteen steamships—large schooners and other vessels of size—are known to have been lost in the vicinity of Mobile during the hurricane of July 6, and five steamers, six big sailing vessels and six smaller schooners were beached or wrecked.

DRANK CHAMPAGNE AT BOTTOM OF SEA

BECAUSE ENGLAND'S NAVY DOES NOT APPRECIATE GERMAN HUMOR. MOR SAYS CAPTAIN OF DEUTSCHLAND.

ANOTHER ON WAY TO BRAZIL

The Submarine Is More Than Three Hundred Feet Long and Draws Seventeen Feet of Water.

Baltimore.—It was Paul Koenig, skipper of the world's first deep sea diving merchantman, telling the reporters how his Deutschland played her pretty game of hide and seek with a navy which does not appreciate German humor. "And we sat down on the floor of the English channel," he chuckled, "because the roof was crowded with noisy destroyers, and we drank good French champagne while we sang 'We're rings on our fingers and bells on our toes,' and presently the destroyers gave us room on the roof and we came up and went on to America. It was all just as simple as that, I tell you."

Captain Cooke stated that the submarine is more than 300 feet long, 30 feet wide and was drawing 17 feet of water when she entered the Virginia capes. The submersible is propelled by two Diesel engines of 600 horsepower and makes about 15 knots an hour. She is larger than the average freight steamer and makes a speed about three knots in excess of the speed attained by the average freighter.

The Deutschland is commanded by Captain Koenig and manned by a crew of 29 Germans. She left a German port, the name of which was not disclosed, June 23, according to the story Captain Koenig told Captain Cooke, who was shown through the submersible that the trip across the Atlantic was uneventful.

Movie pictures of the crew were taken with the exception of the captain, no man of the entire crew appeared to be out of his thirties. Most of them appeared to be yet in their early twenties, and half a dozen of them still in their teens. The captain suggested that the pictures be sent to Germany by his ship.

"Better send them back by us," he said. "It's the quickest and safest way. You know Germany is not cut off from America like she has been."

"This is only the beginning," he said. "We'll be paying you regular visits from now on and in bigger submarines."

Removal of the cargo was begun on Tuesday and a thorough examination of vessel and cargo will be made by United States officers. The cargo when discharged will be placed in a bonded warehouse, to be disposed of later by the local representatives of the vessel's owners.

REVENUE BILL PASSES HOUSE

Washington.—The administration's omnibus revenue bill, creating a tariff commission, imposing a protective tariff on dyestuffs, repealing present stamp taxes and providing for new taxes on incomes, inheritances and war munitions profits, passed the house by a vote of 240 to 140.

Several amendments providing for elimination of the bankers' tax and modifying the tariff commission section, were adopted over the opposition of Democratic leaders. The Democrats voted solidly on the final ballot.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

John Hulet, of Flint, was reunited with his brother, Alfred Hulet, after a separation of 20 years, during which each had mourned the other as dead. A chance meeting of the friend of the Michigan man with the Indiana brother resulted in the breaking of the long separation.

Revised figures showing the amount of money taken in by the secretary of state for 1916 for automobile licenses, chauffeurs' licenses, etc., make a total of $1,501,089.23, of which amount $733,487.01 has been paid to the various counties and $767,602.22 to the state highway department. A total of $34,114.85 was received from the sale of special fees, including chauffeurs' licenses, etc., and this money all goes to the state highway department, not being divided with the 83 counties in the state.

Jarballo, Kas.—An unmasked robber locked Kelly Moore, the cashier, into the vault of the Jarballo state bank and escaped, with about $900.

New York.—A daring attempt at a wholesale jail delivery from the Tombs, New York's famous prison, was blocked by Warden Hanley after a trusty had given him a tip. Two federal prisoners, charged with a $500,000 registered mail robbery in Jersey City, were placed in solitary confinement after they had admitted important details of the plot.

SHIFTING THE SCENERY

By CATHERINE CRANMER.

"Positively my last appearance this season at a stupid, so-called 'at home.'" Betty Barnes dropped among the pillows on the cretonne-covered couch in her mother's bedroom, and pulled off her long gloves with languid jerks.

"Surely you don't mean that Mrs. Mason's 'at home' was anything but a success?" Her mother's response was both a protest and an inquiry.

"Too successful," was Betty's bored reply. "That's one reason it was tiresome. But I'm tired of being a detail in the stage setting for some woman ambitious to put over on her gullible guests either her money or her brains or her marriageable daughters."

"You're desperately disappointing, Betty. Keep up such conduct another season and you'll be worse than a stage fixture; you'll be forced clear out of the wings."

"Then perhaps I'll strike up an acquaintance with the stage hands or the newspaper reporters or somebody else who can be spontaneous and interesting."

"Please don't remind me of your scandalous conduct at the Lafayette club dinner dance. I should never get

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Tom Grant Is Deluged by Offers of Old Rags

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Tom Grant of the Washington chamber of commerce is being swamped with letters from people in all sections of the United States who have rags to sell. Each mail brings letters from farmers' wives, letters from farmers' boys and girls, and letters from the farmers themselves, stating that they have a fine collection of rags which they are eager to dispose of.

One woman in southwestern Missouri, who evidently thought Secretary Grant was personally collecting rags, suggested that he call with a wagon, since she had a supply which had been accumulating in her attic for the last 30 years. "No living man can tote 'em," she wrote, "so you'd better bring a wagon." Another woman, who lives in Iowa, says she understands rags are in great demand, and wants to know if two bushels of them will "fetch enough to buy a new outfit for myself and the children." In the event that they will, she requests Secretary Grant to advise her what day he will call, so that she may put the children to bed and have their clothes ready for him.

It all came about through a bulletin issued several weeks ago by the department of commerce advising housewives throughout the country to save their rags, as the shortage in raw material for paper manufacture made them valuable. The bulletin, which was circulated broadcast throughout the country, advised those having rags to sell to apply to their local chamber of commerce for information regarding disposal. The bulletin bore a Washington date line, and, judging from the number of letters Secretary Grant has received, people in the rural districts think there is only one chamber of commerce in the United States, and that that one is located in the capital.

Uncle Sam Finding Jobs for Unemployed Girls

THE department of labor has organized a women's and girls' division of the new federal employment bureau with a view of finding employment for girls not younger than 16 years of age. The work is in charge of Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett of Alexandria, Va., president of the Florence Crittenton mission and former president of the National Council of Women. With her is associated Mrs. Grace Porter Hopkins of Washington, long recognized as one of the leading women in the nation in problems relating to the employment of women.

The department proposes to establish an interchange of information between the states and labor zones and offices of the United States employment service. Also, it provides for the co-operation of the Federation of Women's Clubs, this being the first organization of women which has received federal recognition. Mrs. Frederick H. Cole, chairman of the civil service reform committee of the federation, has charge of the club side of the new movement.

Mrs. Barrett has made a thorough study of the condition of girls in America and in Europe and is satisfied that lack of employment is the cause of a bulk of the delinquency found among women in America. She has tabulated records regarding 110,000 girls who have "gone wrong," with a general view to family ties and trends. She has concluded from a careful study of all facts relating to these many cases that back of the abrupt act of breaking free from home ties, from the moral sense of responsibility and from old and respected associations, lies an economic condition, particularly in the cases of untrained girls. It is to correct this evil that the department of labor has organized the new bureau.

Two years ago Mrs. Barrett went to Europe and there studied the immigrant problem in the homes of the girls who come to America. This served to strengthen her belief that if the government would take care of immigrant girls and keep them from the hands of employment agencies and the influence of designing men it would go far toward solving one of the most serious employment problems with which American women must deal.

Members of Marine Band Wail Over Lost Revenue

MEMBERS of the Marine band, the nation's crack musical organization, are up in arms over the provisions of the new army reorganization law which cuts them off entirely from outside employment and compels them to rely wholly upon government pay. Several members of the band have expressed their intention of leaving the organization since their outside pay is cut off. Thus far there have been no desertions, but marine corps officers believe that some musicians whose services have been most in demand will leave the band.

The provision of the army reorganization bill complained of was inserted at the instance of the Musicians' union. It provides that hereafter no member of the band shall be permitted to leave his post to fill any engagement to play when he might compete with civilian musical organizations.

The result of this new law, which is now in effect, is to keep members of the band from giving music lessons, from appearing in private concerts, or as soloists at receptions or other social affairs. It also prevents the band from holding its annual concert tour, which has been a national musical event for years.

The law does not prevent the appearance of the band at White House receptions or park concerts, as orders for appearance at such events are given as a part of their duties.

In the recent preparedness parade it was necessary to obtain a special order from the secretary of the navy for participation of the band.

Bill Gordon Is Not So Ferocious as He Looks

THE most ferocious looking member of congress is Mr. Bill Gordon of Cleveland. He has the burly build of one of the larger sizes of prizefighter, and a voice like four or five big, boisterous lions all going at once. When Gordon is engaged in debate on the floor of the house, he gestures always with his fist, never with his open hand, and visitors in the gallery are frequently appalled at the number of members who have the temerity to sit close to him. Yet with all his terrifying manner, Gordon is in reality as gentle as an ordinary Maltese kitten. One can walk right up to him and stroke him with impunity. He is one of the most conservative members of the house committee on military affairs, opposed to too elaborate a preparedness program, simply because he is not warlike at heart and does not grow alarmed over war talk.

One day Gordon and a member from South Carolina exchanged comments on one another in the course of a debate. Gordon spoke to him quite unkindly. "Step outside and tell me that," suggested the South Carolina man. Members are always asking one another to step outside, but nothing ever comes of it.

"Do you think that I'm going outside," inquired Gordon, brusquely, "just because I'm asked to by a crazy yep from South Carolina?" And he proceeded calmly with his speech, without further interruption.

India's City of Discontent

PROCESSION OF STATE ELEPHANTS

THE query on the lips of those who know India is whether the new viceroy, Lord Chelmsford, will be able to soothe the "City of Discontent." This is Lahore, writes Charles M. Pepper in the Washington Star. There are plenty of other discontented and dissatisfied sections of India, but it is the unspoken belief that whoever can keep Lahore quiet can tranquillize the rest of India.

Lahore is well to the north. It is the capital and commercial center of the fertile Punjab. This is known as the five-river region, because of the important streams which water it. Lahore itself is on the River Ravi.

The Punjab, by means of its rivers, has been enabled to develop a very complete system of irrigation canals. Its wheat crop helps to feed England and to stabilize prices of food in the United Kingdom. It also has abundant crops of corn, oil seeds, cotton, cane and rice. It is the most varied and productive agricultural region of India.

Lahore is the gateway of northern India. The railway runs to Rawalpindi and beyond to Peshawar, at the mouth of the Kabul pass into Afghanistan.

Lahore also is considered the gateway to and from Kashmir. A splendid highway runs from Rawalpindi to Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir. The mail coaches and the tongas, or native buggies, and the bullock carts once monopolized this road, but the automobiles now have crowded them out, although there is still some traffic by means of the bullocks.

There is also another road from Lahore to Srinagar, more direct but less convenient and consequently less traveled. The commerce of northern India which reaches Lahore flows out through the port of Karachi, on the Arabian sea. There is through railway communication.

The railways also keep Lahore in direct communication with Bombay and Calcutta, so that as the city of discontent it is in touch with the dissatisfied elements in all parts of India. The city itself is an industrial center. There are cotton and flour mills, potteries, metal-working and numerous minor industrial activities. There are also the hand looms, since the mills have not yet entirely displaced this ancient form of Hindu weaving.

Punjab Museum is interesting. The Punjab museum, for those who wish to know something of the industrial life, is the most interesting place in Punjab. The Buddhist sculptures from Peshawar are very striking. There are carpets and rugs and glazed tiles, mosaics, pottery and examples of exquisite metal-working, along with screens and doors which illustrate the delicacy of the lacquer work carving. There are also the old doors of the sixteenth century, in themselves an interesting exhibit. Then there are numerous drawings and reproductions by art students.

The most interesting exhibits, however, are the throngs of native visitors, whose comments are very characteristic. A local munchi, or teacher, who showed me through the museum, interpreted some remarks of one of the Punjabese visitors as there was "nothing English" in the museum. There is, however, a great deal that is English in Lahore.

Out Shalimar gardens way are numerous English bungalows, and also the English college in the Lawrence gardens, which is at once a tribute to British educational policy and a monument to the progressive Englishmen, who have not been afraid to teach the natives lest that should increase their discontent. The group of college buildings are not out of harmony with their environment.

The government buildings, while comfortable, are not imposing. They are in the midst of shaded grounds and their graceful towers and arcade balconies are in keeping with the surroundings.

The Shalimar gardens usually are described in the tourist guide books as hanging gardens. They lie beyond a half-ruined Moslem village. There are three terraces, or grassy platforms, almost distressing in their mathematical regularity, with squares and rectangles and with shallow lakes and fountains. Their shady walks have not been spoiled by overmuch landscape gardening, as is the tendency in India, where usually the ruling race seeks to add a few layers of ornamentation to the architectural traditions of the ruled race.

Tomb of Jehangir.

Jehangir's tomb is one of the chief historic attractions of Lahore. The mausoleum is on the bank of the Ravi river, which is now crossed by a fine bridge instead of the bridge of boats of old. There are four towers at the corners of the tomb. The mosaics and the marble lacquer work are the most beautiful features of the mausoleum. There is an inscription in the Urdu vernacular, reciting that it is the burial place of "Jehangir, the conqueror of the world."

Jehangir's conquests were many and thorough, and fill a great space in the history of the Mohammedan invasion of India. But the world was larger than Jehangir and his contemporaries knew, and there was even more to India itself than they realized. The world of India, which he conquered, did not remain vanquished, and much of it fell away from his successors. Nevertheless, the Mohammedan preponderance continued and the domes and minarets of the mosques still dwarf the temples of the Jains and other Hindu sects.

Anarkali's tomb is also one of the sights of Lahore. He was known as "the Lion of Lahore." The dome building in which is held the yellow marble coffin that contains Anarkali's remains is now occupied as a government office without detracting any from the greatness of "the Lion of Lahore."

The English section of Lahore is a fine and spacious Anglo-Indian town, with an abundance of shade trees, wooded arcades and palms. The real Lahore, the actual city of discontent, is something very different. Many of the streets are as narrow as alleys, with the balconies and roofs elbowing one another. In these alleys are some unusually fine examples of clay and wood carving, and of lattice and lacquer work. It is here that the native life pulses and seethes, and resents interference. Yet there are some concessions from the native customs. A Hindu "barker" in European clothes and with the helmet hat of the Englishman, crying the attractions of a slideshow, was one of these which I noted. Another was a group of Mohammedans playing cards with English cards. Nor was it whist that they were playing, either. Yet next to them was seated a naked fakir, or priest, discoursing to a group of devout disciples—a real picture of native life.

The Moslem preponderance, historically, in Lahore, and possibly numerically, raises a question why it should be the city of discontent, since the Mohammedans are mostly loyal and are the mainstay of British rule in India. But there is such a mixture of native races and religions in Lahore that no sect has any real preponderance. Apparently, discontent gravitates there because of the medley.

Proper Care of the Feet.

A frequent footbath is not only soothing and refreshing but is beneficial to the health of the feet and that of the entire system. The foot is an excretory center and by keeping the pores clear and free the waste matter of the system is removed. A good footbath for nightly use is composed of water as hot as it can be borne in which a little powdered boracic acid has been dissolved. Let the feet soak for five minutes, wash them off in cooler water and finish with a good brisk rubbing of cold cream.

All Through.

"How did you manage while I was away, dearie?" asked "fife as her husband met her at the station. "I kept house for about ten days and then I went to a hotel." "A hotel? Why didn't you go on keeping house?" "I couldn't. All the dishes were dirty."

STRENGTH AND SUPPORT OF FRUIT TREES

Methods of Supporting Trees.

(By A. W. BRAYTON of Ogden County, Ill., in Farmers Review.)

The matter of getting young trees into proper form sometimes requires quite a little ingenuity on the part of the grower. Young trees frequently have a tendency to grow into abnormal shapes. It becomes the duty then of the orchardist to train them into proper shape. Sometimes limbs that start out from the trunk in the correct place take a downward shoot or an inward growth. Either of these, if allowed to grow without help, would either badly deform the tree or necessitate cutting off the limbs later on.

The downward-growing limb can readily be taught its place by a temporary support. Some use a prop from the ground. This is not very satisfactory, as it is likely to be shaken down by the wind. If the limb is small and making rapid growth, a better way is to support it by a strong string or small rope, fastened to the trunk, or to some larger limb above. One season's growth will usually confirm the habit of more upright growth, so the cord or rope can be removed before serious damage is done to the bark. In the case of larger branches, where the weight is considerable, it is well to put pieces of folded burlap under the rope.

In the matter of an ingrowing limb just the opposite method must be employed. Some manner of pushing the limb out to its proper place and holding it there is necessary. A good brace for this purpose, in very small trees, is a joint of cornstalk. The stalk should be cut as long as necessary and a notch cut in each end, so it will remain in position. The limb is then forced out and one end of the stalk placed against it and the other end against the body of the tree or some larger limb. The soft pith of the stalk will not be injurious to the bark.

The supporting of limbs overloaded with fruit is a different matter. Theoretically there should be no such limbs. Everyone knows that fruit should be thinned so that the supporting of the limbs would not be necessary. This would mean larger fruit, less damage to the tree, and perhaps assure annual bearing. However, few of us can bring ourselves to the custom of thinning. Either we think we do not have time, or that it is too expensive, or, as is probably the fact, we do not have the courage to pick off the fruit and throw it away. All of these are mistakes and we know it, yet we continue to allow our trees to overbear. Since we do this it is well to look into the various methods of supporting the trees. The oldest and most common method is to use props (Fig. 1). These are cheaply made from 1-by-3-inch boards, cut in lengths to suit. In some cases no other form of support is feasible. It is a method, however, to which many objections can be made. One of these is that the wind is likely to displace them, and that, too, in time of storms, when they are most needed. Another objection is that they are absolutely rigid, and on this account often cause the limb to break off at point of contact with the prop. This can be overcome somewhat by allowing the limb to droop in an even slant from the tree over the prop to space beyond, so as not to make a square downward pressure at point of contact.

A better method of supporting overloaded limbs, and especially the larger ones, is by wires from screw eyes in limbs on one side of tree to screw eyes in limbs on the other side. (Fig. 2.) From No. 12 to No. 9 wire can be used. The screw eyes should be strong, the size depending on the size of limb to be supported. Sometimes it is necessary to run two wires across and twist these together with a stick between them. In case of trees with a main trunk running well up in center these wires can be adjusted from it. No fear need arise that the screw eyes will hurt the trees. The wood will soon grow around them, and in time cover them over. Another manner of applying this principle which has worked well with me on plum trees is to stand a 2-by-4 along the side of the tree. Drive a 20-penny nail in the end, run wires from this out to screw eyes on limbs as needed (Fig. 3). In case one should not have the screw eyes, or not want to risk putting them in the limbs, wires can be put around them if they are protected from cutting the bark. A good means of doing this is to use short sections of old garden hose. Run the wire through this.

The injury from overloads of fruit on poorly supported trees is sometimes very great, even to the entire destruction of the trees. We have saved such trees by use of props, and we have lost them when, during a storm, the wind displaced the props. In my pear orchard all of the trees were well supported by props, but a small tornado came along and in a few minutes so shook these trees as to throw nearly all the props down, and the weight of the pears then crushed the trees to the ground. In that portion of the orchard where wires were used the damage was comparatively light. A

Grimes Golden, tree was supported by about 20 props. This same tornado displaced so many that about one-quarter of the tree split and fell over to the ground. This large limb was left as it fell until the apples were mature. Ten bushels were taken from this one limb. A block and tackle was then used to draw it back into position. Five half-inch bolts about ten to twelve inches long were then passed through the tree and drawn up tightly so that this limb could not be moved much. A thin concrete was then allowed to run down into every crevice to prevent water from entering. Higher up in the tree several wires were run across for support. The tree now stands with every indication of a number of useful years ahead of it. If wires had been used in the first place instead of props, there is little doubt the tree would not have been injured. It is profitable work to look after these little things both in the young and in the bearing orchard.

OBTAINING PROFIT FROM STRAWBERRIES

Everbearing Variety Has to Compete With Too Many Other Fruits—Right for Home.

Growing everbearing strawberries on a large scale for commercial purposes is discouraged by F. S. Merrill, instructor in horticulture in the Kansas state agricultural college. A few growers made large profits in 1915 from small fields of these berries because of the unusual amount of moisture available. The cost of irrigation in ordinary seasons, however, is prohibitive. "Standard varieties of strawberries command good prices because they are the first fruit to make an appearance on the market," says Mr. Merrill. "They do not have to compete with other fruits. The opposite is true of the everbearing varieties, as they must compete with a large number of other fruits. This condition, coupled with the high price the grower must receive for the fruit, limits the demand to a minimum. The value of these everbearing varieties for home use should not be discouraged, however, as they bear fruit the same year they are planted. This counterbalances the extra labor involved in their care."

YOUNG PLANTS ARE BEST FORAGE FEED

Interesting Analyses of Pasture Crops at Different Stages Made at Iowa Station.

In connection with hog-feeding tests at the Iowa station some interesting analyses of pasture crops at different stages of development were made. They found, for instance, that green alfalfa contains 35 per cent to 40 per cent protein up to one foot high and that the protein content runs down as the plant gets bigger. Here is a scientific justification of the practice of many farmers in clipping alfalfa for hog pasture at frequent intervals. Young blue grass balances corn pretty well. It was noticed that hogs will eat the young blue grass when pastured on it with corn fed in a self-feeder. Many have assumed that this was entirely because the older grass was hard and woody.

Tests, however, show that 38 per cent of the dry matter of the young blue grass consists of protein and only 10 per cent or 11 per cent in older and mature grass. The 38 per cent protein stage lasts only for a few weeks. This indicates that young fresh blue grass is an excellent pasture, but should not be depended upon for the whole season.

MOLE IS INSECT DESTROYER

Does No Damage to Crops Except to Make Unightly Streaks on Lawn—Gopher Is Pest.

The mole is a great destroyer of insects and does no damage to crops except to make unsightly streaks on the lawn. The pocket gopher is a bad pest because he is a vegetarian, but the mole is a meat eater exclusively.

FARM SHOP IS MIGHTY HANDY

Time and Money Saver and No Farm Is Complete Without One—Convenient in Summer.

A well-equipped farm shop is a mighty handy thing; and a time and money saver. No farm is complete without one which will save many a day's time in the rush of the summer work.

The DAIRY

UDDER DEVELOPMENT OF COW

Sufficient Importance Not Placed on Dairy Characteristics by Dairy Cattle Owners.

Many owners of dairy cattle do not place sufficient importance on the purely dairy characteristics of the animals they keep and breed. One of the points often overlooked is udder development, although it would seem that this would be the first thing an intelligent dairyman would look for in the selection of a cow. While an occasional cow with a small, ill-shaped udder will give a good quantity of milk, such animals are merely the exceptions which prove the rule that good dairy cows should show good development of the milk organs.

The good udder is large but does not display its size by hanging in a low inverted conical shape. Such an udder does not add to the beauty and symmetry of the animal and too often its dangling, swaying motion in travel is a source of irritation. It cannot possibly be expected to give as good results as a blocky compact udder of equal size in each quarter and extending well to the front and rear. The teats should be of sufficient size to be grasped firmly while milking. They should be set squarely on the quarter and be of cylindrical rather than conical shape. The cow with a low hanging bag and conical-shaped teats is not choice animal to milk and it will usually be found that she does not do well at the pail.

Parentage has much to do with the conformity of the cow's udder, and while the sire will influence this characteristic to a certain extent the function of the udder is not after his nature and the dam will have to be depended upon largely to perpetuate proper form in this regard. Practical experience will prove that a heifer calf will ordinarily have in a marked degree the external milk organ characteristics of her dam. It is therefore doubly desirable that in the selection of breeding stock close attention be paid to the udder development.

VARIETY OF FEEDS FOR CALF

When Animal Is Four Weeks Old It Can Get Along Without Milk—Gruel Answers Purpose.

After a calf is four weeks old it can get along very well on little or no milk if you are short. Make a gruel out of a variety of feeds, say corn meal, oil meal, middlings, bran, ground oats; mix them all together and cook a kettle of it, having about the consistency of gruel. At first feed a pint of this in three quarts of warm water, increase to a quart of the gruel.

In addition, give the calf clover hay and ensilage if you have it; in fact, any roughage you happen to have. Also begin to feed it corn meal and ground oats as soon as it will eat.

SUMMER WORK IN THE DAIRY

Nothing More Unpleasant Than When Pastures are Short and the Fleshes are Troublesome.

At no time of the year is dairyming more unpleasant work than during the time when pastures are short and the flies are troublesome.

Now is the time when it pays to have supplemental forage crops and to darken the stables and keep the cows inside during the hottest part of the day. The cold weather during the winter is less difficult to contend with than the hot sun and flies during the summer.

COWS REQUIRE MUCH WATER

Animals Should Have Access to Supply at Least Twice Daily—Well Water Is Best.

Milking cows require a much larger quantity of water than is necessary for growing animals. They should have access to a good clean water supply at least twice a day. The best supply is well water pumped into a tank or trough, falling this a running stream is best.

About twenty members of the organization left here at 6:30 o'clock, being conveyed to the lake in two auto trucks, but one of them refused to perform its work and had to be left beside the road. The other truck went to the lake and returned for the balance of the band. There were fully twenty-five auto loads from here, and the lake front and lawns were filled with boats and resorters who are spending the heated season at the lake, who enjoyed the excellent music. The band rendered a fine program for two hours, and at the conclusion of the numbers Mrs. Lewis served ice cream and cigars to the members of the band. BREVITIES

ANN ARBOR—According to a statement issued Friday by Dr. John Wessinger, city health officer, there have been no cases of infantile paralysis reported in the city in the last year. The city had 14 cases, with a death rate of 21 per cent, two years ago. The stable fly, according to the local health officer, is the carrier of the germ. As a precautionary measure, he recommends the use of a mild antiseptic spray for the nose and throat. Five per cent solution of carbolic acid to 20 parts of water, was recommended.

YPSILANTI—Just east of Belleville, where the paved road takes a turn is a spot dedicated to the unwary auto. Since the auto-going days arrived this spring a total of nine cars have been wrecked at this point, most of them turning turtle, but in no case has anyone been critically injured. On the Ypsilanti-Detroit paved way is a spot located between Wayne and Dearborn which has a similar record. During two days last week six autos were wrecked near this one spot—Ypsilanti Record.

ANN ARBOR—A steady drain on his financial resources and the fact that he is unable to complete the job without a heavy monetary loss being involved has caused Tom Joyce, of Kokomo, Ind., to give up the Hamilton road sewer job here. Joyce wrote City Engineer Manly Osgood informing him of his decision to drop the contract which involves the construction of about two miles of sewer. The only action that can be taken in the matter, according to Engineer Osgood, is to have the board of public works readvertise for bids. About 1,500 feet of the two-mile stretch has been completed.

DETROIT—Ora B. Fish of Fowler, lived up to the initials of his name, and met an affable stranger near the union station Monday and they started out to hunt for a rooming place. On the way they met another affable stranger. All three got to talking and pretty soon the two inveterate Fish into matching pennies. Fish's first friend won heavily from the second stranger, but the second stranger won heavily from Fish. Finally Fish was informed that he owed the third man $20, but as he only had $12 his "friend" kindly agreed to make up the difference. O. B. was only too glad to hand over the $12, as the third man was threatening to have both arrested—as swindlers. "I don't mind the loss so much," the poor fish told the police. "What I dread is the things my wife will say when she finds out about it."

The Turmoil

SYNOPSIS.

Sheridan's attempt to make a business man of his son Bibbs by starting him in the machine shop ends in Bibbs going to a sanitarium, a nervous wreck. On his return Bibbs finds himself an incomprehensible and unconsidered figure in the "New House" of the Sheridans. The Vertreeses, old-town family next door and impoverished, call on the Sheridans, newly-rich and gay after a party into words her parents' unspoken wish that she marry one of the Sheridan boys. Mary frankly encourages Jim Sheridan's attentions. Jim tells Mary Bibbs is not a lunatic—"just queer." He proposes to Mary, who half accepts him. Sheridan tells Bibbs he must go back to the machine shop as soon as he is strong enough, in spite of Bibbs' plea to be allowed to write. Edith, Bibbs' sister, and Sibyl, Roscoe Sheridan's wife, quarrel over Bobby Lamborn; Sibyl goes to Mary for help to keep Lamborn from marrying Edith, and Mary leaves her in the room alone. Bibbs has to break to his father Jim's sudden death. All the rest of the family helps in their grief. Bibbs becomes temporary master of the house. At the funeral he meets Mary and rides home with her. Bibbs purposely interrupts a tete-a-tete between Edith and Lamborn. He tells Edith that he overheard Lamborn making love to Roscoe's wife. Doctor Gurney finds Bibbs well enough to go back to the machine shop. Mary and Bibbs meet by accident and form a pleasant friendship. Roscoe Sheridan and his wife quarrel desperately about Bobby Lamborn.

Imagine the feelings of a hard-working, dutiful husband when he learns that his wife is dangerously flirting with a worthless bachelor—and when his wife defies him to do anything about the matter. Does such a situation justify divorce, notwithstanding the "until death do us part" vow?

"Won't you come in?" urged Mrs. Vertrees, cordially, hearing the sound of a cheerful voice out of the darkness beyond the approaching glare of automobile headlights. "Do! There's Mary now, and she—"

But Sibyl was half-way across the street. "No, thanks," she called. "I hope she won't miss her piano!" And she ran into her own house and plunged headlong upon a leather divan in the hall, holding her handkerchief over her mouth.

The noise of her tumultuous entrance was evidently startling, for there followed the crash of a decanter upon the floor of the dining room, and, after a rumble of indistinct profanity, Roscoe came forth, holding a dripping napkin in his hand.

"What's your excitement?" he demanded. "What do you find to go into hysterics over? Another death in the family?"

"Oh, it's funny!" she gasped. "Those old frost-bitten people! I guess they're getting their comeuppance!" Lying prone, she elevated her feet in the air, clapping her heels together repeatedly, in an ecstasy.

"Come through, come through!" said her husband, crossly. "What you been up to?"

"Me?" she cried, dropping her feet and swinging around to face him. "Nothing. It's them! Those Vertreeses!" She wiped her eyes. "They've had to sell their piano!"

"Well, what of it?"

"That Mrs. Kittersby told me all about 'em a week ago," said Sibyl. "They've been hard up for a long time."

"I Want to Know What You Say Over the Telephone to Lamborn."

and she says as long ago as last winter she knew that girl got a pair of walking shoes re-soled and patched, because she got it done the same place Mrs. Kittersby's cook had hers!"

"Well, well?" he urged, impatiently. "Well, I'm telling you! Mrs. Kittersby says they haven't got a thing! Just absolutely nothing—and they don't know anywhere to turn! She says the whole town's been wondering what would become of 'em. The girl had plenty of money to marry up to a year ago!"

or so ago, but she was so indifferent she scared the men off. Gracious! they were lucky! Marry her? The man that found himself tied up to that girl—"

"Terrible funny, terrible funny!" said Roscoe, with sarcasm. "It's so funny I broke a cut glass decanter and spilled a quart of—"

"Wait!" she begged. "You'll see. I saw a big wagon drive up and some men go into the house. Well, I thought I'd see, so I slipped over—and it was their piano! They'd sold it and were trying to sneak it out after dark, so nobody'd catch on!" Again she gave way to her enjoyment, but resumed, as her husband seemed about to interrupt the narrative, "Wait a minute, can't you? Yes, they'd sold it; and I hope they'll pay some of their debts. They owe everybody, and last week a coal dealer made an awful fuss at the door with Mr. Vertrees. Their cook told our upstairs girl, and she said she didn't know when she'd seen any money, herself! Did you ever hear of such a case as that girl in your life?"

"What girl! Their cook?"

"That Vertrees girl! Don't you see they looked on our coming up into this neighborhood as their last chance? They were just going down and out, and here bobs up the green, rich Sheridan family! So they send her out to get a Sheridan—she's got to get one! And she just goes in blind; and Jim was landed—there's no doubt about that! But Jim was lucky; he didn't live to stay landed, and it's a good thing for him!" Sibyl's mirth had vanished, and she spoke with virulent rapidity. "Well, she couldn't get you, because you were married, and she couldn't get Jim, because Jim died. And there they were, dead broke! Do you know what she did? Do you know what she's doing?"

"No, I don't," said Roscoe, gruffly. "Sibyl's voice rose and culminated in a scream of renewed hilarity. 'Bibbs! She waited in the graveyard, and drove home with him from Jim's funeral! Never spoke to him before! Jim wasn't cold!'"

She rocked herself back and forth upon the divan. She shrieked. "Bibbs! Roscoe, think of it! Bibbs!"

He stared unsympathetically, but her mirth was unabated for all that. "And yesterday," she continued, between paroxysms—"yesterday she came out of the house—just as he was passing. She must have been looking out—waiting the chance; I saw the old lady watching at the window! And she got him there last night—to 'play' to him; the old lady gave that away! And today she made him take her out in a machine! And the cream of it is that they didn't even know whether he was insane or not—they thought maybe he was, but she went after him just the same! The old lady set him to pump me about it today. Bibbs! Oh, my Lord! Bibbs!"

But Roscoe looked grim. "So it's funny to you, is it? It sounds kind of pitiful to me. I should think it would to a woman, too."

"Oh, it might," she returned, sobering. "It might, if those people weren't such frozen-faced smart Alecks. If they'd had the decency to come down off the perch a little I probably wouldn't think it was funny, but to see 'em sit up on their pedestal all the time they're eating dirt—well, I think it's funny! That girl sits up as if she was Queen Elizabeth, and expects people to wallow on the ground before her until they get near enough for her to give 'em a good kick with her old patched shoes—oh, she'd do that, all right!—and then she powders up and goes out to mash—Bibbs Sheridan!"

"Look here," said Roscoe, heavily. "I don't care about that one way or another. If you're through, I got something I want to talk to you about. I was going to, that day just before we heard about Jim."

At this Sibyl stiffened quickly; her eyes became intensely bright. "What is it?"

"Well," he began, frowning, "what I was going to say then—" He broke off, and, becoming conscious that he was still holding the wet napkin in his hand, threw it pettishly into a corner. "I never expected I'd have to say anything like this to anybody I married; but I was going to ask you what was the matter between you and Lamborn."

Sibyl uttered a sharp monosyllable. "Well?"

"I felt the time had come for me to know about it," he went on. "You never told me anything—"

"You never asked," she interposed, curtly.

"Well, we'd got in a way of not talking much," said Roscoe. "It looks to me now as if we'd pretty much lost the run of each other the way a good many people do. I don't say it wasn't my fault. I was up early and down to work all day, and I'd come home tired at night, and went to go to bed soon as I'd got the paper read—unless there was some good musical show in town. Well, you seemed all right until here lately, the last month or so, I began to see something was wrong. I couldn't help seeing it."

"Wrong?" she said. "What like?"

"Well, you know the rooster look? He has food and shelter; he is warm in winter; his wife raises not one fine family for him, but dozens. And he has a clear sky over him; he breathes sweet air; he walks in his April orchard under a roof of flowers. He must die, violently perhaps, but he's healthy. He makes a better way! The rooster's wives and children must die! Are those of Mida's immortal? His life is shorter than the life of Mida, but Mida's life is only a sixth as long as that of the Galapagos tortoise."

The rooster is a dependent; he depends upon the farmer and the weather. Mida is a dependent; he depends upon the farmer and the weather. The rooster thinks only of the moment; Mida provides for tomorrow. What does he provide for tomorrow? Nothing that the rooster will not have without providing. The rooster and the prosperous worker; they are born, they grub, they love; they die. Neither knows beauty; neither knows knowledge. And after all, when Mida has had and rooster has not, Mida has had the excitement of accumulating what he has grubbed, and that has been his life and his love and his end. He cannot take that god with him when he dies. I wonder if the worthy gods are those we can take with us.

Midas must teach all to be as Midas; the young must be raised in his religion—

The manuscript ended there, and Sheridan was not anxious for more. He crumpled the sheets into a ball, depositing it (with vigor) in a wastebasket beside him; then, rising, he consulted a Cyclopaedia of Names, which a book agent had somehow sold to him years before; a volume now first put to use for the location of "Midas." Having read the legend, Sheridan walked up and down the spacious office, exhalting the breath of contempt. "Dam fool!" he mumbled.

He felt very lonely, and this was, daily, his hardest hour. For a long time he and Jim had lunched together habitually at a small restaurant near the Sheridan building, where they spent twenty minutes in the consumption of food, and twenty in talk, with cigars. But now Sheridan remained alone in his office; he had not gone out to lunch since Jim's death, nor did he have anything sent to him—he fasted until evening.

It was the time he missed Jim personally the most—the voice and eyes and handshake, all brisk and alert, all businesslike. But Sheridan's sense of loss went far deeper. Jim was the one who would have been sure to keep the great property growing greater year by year. Sheridan had fallen asleep, night after night, picturing what the growth would be under Jim. He had believed that Jim was absolutely certain to be one of the biggest men in the country. Well, it was all up to Roscoe now!

That reminded him of a question he had in mind to ask Roscoe. It was a question Sheridan considered of no present importance, but his wife had suggested it—though vaguely—and he had meant to speak to Roscoe about it. However, Roscoe had not come into his father's office for several days, and when Sheridan had seen his son at home there had been no opportunity.

He waited until the greater part of his day's work was over, toward four o'clock, and then went down to Roscoe's office, which was on a lower floor. He found several men waiting for business interviews in an outer room of the series Roscoe occupied; and he supposed that he would find his son busy with others, and that his question would have to be postponed, but when he entered the door marked "R. C. Sheridan, Private," Roscoe was there alone.

He was sitting with his back to the door, his feet on a window-sill, and he did not turn as his father opened the door.

"Some pretty good men out there waiting to see you, my boy," said Sheridan. "What's the matter?"

"Nothing," Roscoe answered indistinctly, not moving.

"Well, I guess that's all right, too. I let 'em wait sometimes myself! I just wanted to ask you a question, but I expect it'll keep, if you're working something out in your mind."

Roscoe made no reply; and his father, who had turned to the door, paused with his hand on the knob, staring curiously at the motionless figure in the chair. Usually the son seemed pleased and eager when he came to the office. "You're all right, ain't you?" said Sheridan. "Not sick, are you?"

"No."

Sheridan was puzzled; then, abruptly, he decided to ask his question. "I wanted to talk to you about that young Lamborn," he said. "I guess your mother thinks he's comin' to see Edith pretty often, and you know him longer 'n any of us, so—"

"I won't say a dam' thing about him!" Sheridan uttered an exclamation and walked quickly to a position near the window where he could see his son's face. Roscoe's eyes were bloodshot and vacuous; his hair was disordered, his mouth was distorted, and he was deathly pale. The father stood agast.

"By George!" he muttered. "Roscoe!"

"My name," said Roscoe. "Can't help that."

"Roscoe!" Blank astonishment was Sheridan's first sensation. Probably nothing in the world could have more amazed him than to find Roscoe—the steady old wheel-horse—in this condition. "How'd you get this way?" he demanded. "You caught cold and took too much for it?"

For reply Roscoe laughed hoarsely. "Yeah! Cold! I been drunk all time, lately. First you notice it?"

"By George!" cried Sheridan. "I thought I'd smelt it on you a good deal lately, but I wouldn't 'a' believed you'd take more'n was good for you. Bohl! No see you like a common hog!"

Roscoe chuckled and threw out his right arm in a meaningless gesture. "Hog?" he repeated, chuckling.

"Yes, a hog!" said Sheridan, angrily. "In business hours! I don't object to anybody's takin' a drink if he wants to, 'out o' business hours; nor, if a man keeps his work right up to the scratch, I wouldn't be the one to baste him if he got good 'n drunk once in two, three years, maybe. It ain't my way. I let it alone, but I never believed in forcin' my way on a grown-up son in moral matters. I guess I was wrong!"

You think them men out there are waitin' to talk business with a drunkard? You think you can come to your office and do business drunk? By George! I wonder how often this has been happening and me not on to it! I'll have a look over your books tomorrow, and I'll—"

Roscoe stumbled to his feet, laughing wildly, and stood swaying, contriving to hold himself in position by clutching the back of the heavy chair in which he had been sitting.

"Hoo—hoorah!" he cried. "'S my principles, too. Be drunken all you want to—outside business hours. Don't for Gossake le'st! Innefere business hours! Business! Thasht! You're right, father. Drink! Die! L'ever'right go to hell, but don't let Innefere business!"

Sheridan had seized the telephone upon Roscoe's desk, and was calling his own office, overhead. "Abercrombie? Come down to my son Roscoe's suite and get rid of some gentlemen that are waitin' there to see him in room two-fourteen. You needn't come in to let me know they're gone; we don't want to be disturbed. Tell Paul to call my house and send Claus down here with a closed car. We may have to go out. Tell him to hustle, and call me at Roscoe's room as soon as the car gets here. 'T's all!"

Roscoe had laughed bitterly through-out this monologue. "Drunk in business hours! Thasht! M'us'n' get drunk, mus'n' get drunk, mus'n' kill 'nobody—not in business hours! All right any other time. Kill 'nobody you want to—'s long 'tain't in business hours! Fine! M'us'n' have any trouble 't'll Innefere business. Keep your trouble 't'home. Don't bring it to 't'office. Might Innefere business! Don't let your wife Innefere business! Keep all, all, all your trouble an' your meanness, an' your trad—your trad—keep 'em all for home use! 's you got die, go on die 't'home—don't die round the office! Might Innefere business!"

Sheridan picked up a newspaper from Roscoe's desk, and sat down with his back to his son, affecting to read. Roscoe seemed to be unaware of his father's significant posture.

"You know wh' I think?" he went on. "I think Bibbs only one the family any 'telligence at all. Won' work, an' din't get married. Jim worked, an' he got killed. I worked, an' I got married. Look at me! Jus' look at me, I ask you. Fine 'dustrious young business man. Look whas happen to me! Fine!" He lifted his hand from the sustaining chair in a deplorable gesture, and immediately losing his balance, fell across the chair and came to the floor with a crash, remaining prostrate for several minutes, during which Sheridan did not relax his apparent attention to the newspaper. He did not even look round at the sound of Roscoe's fall.

Roscoe slowly climbed to an upright position, pulling himself up by holding to the chair. He was slightly sobered outwardly, having progressed in the prostrate interval to a state of befuddlement less volatile. He rubbed his dazed eyes with the back of his left hand.

"What—what you ask me while ago?" he said.

"Nothin'."

"Yes, you did. What—what was it?"

"Nothin'. You better sit down."

"You ask me what I thought about Lamborn. You did ask me that. Well, I won't tell you. I won't say dam' word 'bout him!"

The telephone bell tinkled. Sheridan placed the receiver to his ear and said, "Right down." Then he got Roscoe's coat and hat from a closet and brought them to his son. "Get into this coat," he said. "You're goin' home."

"All right," murmured Roscoe, obediently.

They went out into the main hall by a side door. Roscoe walked out of the building without lurching, and twenty minutes later walked into his own house in the same manner, neither he nor his father having spoken a word in the interval.

Sheridan did not go in with him; he went home, and to his own room without meeting any of his family. But as he passed Bibbs' door he heard from within the sound of a cheerful young voice humming jubilant fragments of song:

Who looks the mustang in the eye? . . . With a leap from the ground To the saddle in a bound— And away—and away! Hi-yay!

It was the first time in Sheridan's life that he had ever detected any musical symptom whatever in Bibbs—he had never even heard him whistle—and it seemed the last touch of irony that the useless fool should be merry today.

To Sheridan it was Tom o' Bedlam singing while the house burned; and he did not tarry to enjoy the melody, but went into his own room and locked the door.

"I found something of his on the floor upstairs this morning, before anybody was up," said Sheridan. "I reckon if people lose things in this house and expect to get 'em back, they better get up as soon as I do."

"What was it he lost?" asked Edith. "He knows!" he father returned. "Seems to me like I forgot to bring it home with me. I looked it over—thought probably it was something pretty important, belongin' to a busy man like him." He affected to search his pockets. "What did I do with it, now? Oh yes! Seems to me like I remember leavin' it down at the office—in the waste basket."

"Good place for it," Bibbs murmured, still red.

Sheridan gave him a grin. "Perhaps pretty soon you'll be gettin' up early enough to find things before I do!"

It was a threat, and Bibbs repeated the substance of it, later in the evening, to Mary Vertrees—they had come to know each other that well.

"My time's here at last," he said, as they sat together in the melancholy gas light of the room which had been denuded of its piano. But the gas light, though from a single jet, shed no melancholy upon Bibbs, nor could any room seem bare that knew the glowing presence of Mary. He spoke lightly, not sadly.

"Yes, it's come. I've shirked and put it off, but I can't shirk and put it off any longer. It's really my part to go to him—at least it would save my face. He means what he says, and the time's come to serve my sentence. Hard labor for life, I think."

Mary shook her head. "I don't think so. He's too kind."

"You think my father's kind?" And Bibbs stared at her.

"Yes, I'm sure of it. I've felt that he has a great, brave heart. It's only that he has to be kind in his own way—because he can't understand any other way."

"Ah yes," said Bibbs. "If that's what you mean by 'kind'!"

She looked at him gravely, earnest concern in her friendly eyes. "It's going to be pretty hard for you, isn't it?"

"Oh—self-pity?" he returned, smiling. "This has been just the last flicker of—" revolt. Nobody minds work if he likes the kind of work. There'd be no loafers in the world if each man found the thing that he could do best; but the only work I happen to want to do is useless—so I have to give it up. To-morrow I'll be a day laborer."

"What is it like—exactly?"

"It wasn't muscicularly exhausting—not at all. They couldn't give me a heavier job because I wasn't good enough."

"But what will you do? I want to know."

"When I left," said Bibbs, "I was 'on' what they call over there a 'clipping machine,' and that's what I'll be sent back to. It's very simple and very easy. I feed long strips of zinc into a pair of steel jaws, and the jaws bite the zinc into little circles. And yet I was a very bad hand at it!"

He had kept his voice cheerful as he spoke, but he had grown a shade paler, and there was a latent anguish deep in his eyes. He may have known it and wished her not to see it, for he turned away.

"You do that all day long!" she exclaimed. "No wonder—" She broke off, and then, after a keen glance at his face, she said: "I should think you would have been a 'bad hand at it'!"

He laughed ruefully. "I think it's the noise, though I'm ashamed to say it. You see, it's a very powerful machine, and there's a sort of rhythmic crashing—a crash every time the jaws bite off a circle."

Do you believe that delicate, high-strung Bibbs will be able to stand the din and monotony of work in the shop—how long do you think he will last at the job?

What the Tea Leaves Tell.
Do you know how to tell fortunes in a teacup? It furnishes a great deal of entertainment at a party. This Chinese rhyme explains it: "One leaf, alone you'll be; Two together, the priest you'll see. Three together, your wish will gain; Four, a letter from loving swain. Five, good news the letter will bring; Six in a row, a song you'll sing. Seven together, good fortune awaits. So say to you the teacups' fates. Tea leaves large and tea leaves tall Bring you company, great and small. Tea leaves many and scattered fine Is of bad luck the surest sign. Tea leaves few and near the rim, Your cup of joy o'erflows the brim."

Taken Philosophically.
An Irishman was sauntering homeward from his labors one pay day when he passed a quarry where some blasting was being done. Just as he passed a blast came and blew one of his hands off. The quarrymen quickly gathered about and consoled with him while awaiting the ambulance.

"What a fearful thing!" cried one of them.

"Oh, well," answered Murphy, "it might ha' been worse!"

"How's that?" asked the man.

"It might ha' been the hand wid me wages in."

Son Wanted to Prove It.
Father sat in his study one afternoon writing out a speech, when his son called shrilly from the garden:

"Dad! Look out of the window!"

"What a nuisance children are at times!" grumbled the parent as he put down his pen and advanced to the window. With a half smile he raised the sash and stuck forth his head.

"Well, Harry, what is it?" he asked.

The boy from a group of youngsters, called out, "Dad, Tommy Perkins didn't believe that you had no hair on the top of your head."

"How's your piano fund coming on?"

HEARD IN CHELSEA.

How Bad Backs Have Been Made Strong—Kidney Pills Corrected.

All over Chelsea you hear it. Doan's Kidney Pills are keeping up the good work. Chelsea people are telling about it—telling of bad backs made sound again. You can believe the testimony of your own townpeople. They tell of the benefit of you who are suffering. If your back aches, if you feel lame, sore and miserable, if the kidneys act too frequently, or passages are painful, scanty and of color, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has helped so many of your friends and neighbors. Follow this Chelsea citizen's advice and give Doan's a chance to do the same for you.

C. Lehman, 420 Garfield St., Chelsea, says: "I was bothered by weak kidneys and backache. Constant lameness across my back annoyed me and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. At night I was restless and got up in the morning all tired out. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they put a stop to the trouble. My kidneys became normal and the lameness left my back."
