AGENT PLAN ADOPTED Farm Organizations Name Committee

Saturday to Work For Appropriation.

An effort will be made within the very near future by a committee of five men named Saturday by delegates from a number of farm organizations, looking to the institution of the county farm agent plan for Washte-

Dr. Eben Mumford, of Lansing, an active worker in the extension department of the state Agricultural College, was present and outlined the plan followed by other counties in Michigan, in securing an expert agriculturalist. Through the explanations he gave, and the advice he offered, a committee of five Washtenaw county men was selected to present the matter before the board of supervisors.

This committe will ask for an approprfation of approximately $1,500. The money to be raised for this purpose, if granted by the county board, will go towards the salary, and expenses of the system. The government provides $1,200 for such work, Dr. Mumford explained, and a total of $2,700 would be available for county expert purposes, he said.

No action can be had, however, until the time of the board meeting in October, when the situation will be presented, backed by the approval of practically every farm organization in Washtenaw county, it is believed. Following the discussion and the address by Dr. Mumford, the delegates authorized the selection of the tollowing committee of five to take the matter up with the board of

FORMER CHELSEA" RES-IDENT KILLED BY CARS

Wife of the Founder of The Standard Killed When Automobile Was Struck.

The many friends of Mrs. Wm. Emmert, of Elyria, Ohio, were shocked to learn of her death which occurred on Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Emmert was one of a party of five who were returning in an automobile from a picnic which was struck by a fast train, killing the entire party. The gate tender had failed to lower the gates and the driver of the car could not see the approaching train on account of a string of cars that was standing on a siding. Mrs. Emmert was a resident of Chelsea for a number of years, her husband, Wm. Emmert, being the founder of the Standard, and while here was prominent in the work of the Congregational church. Besides her husband she leaves one son, and a brother, Fred H. Nissly, of Ypsilanti. The funeral services were held Friday and the remains were taken to Saline for interment.

A Beautiful View.

A writer in the Jackson Patriot in giving a description of an automobile trip from Jackson, gave the following description of a stop made in Lyndon

At the farm of Henry Stoffer, who has a fine home and 360 acres of hill and valley land, we stopped for a while to enable those of the party, who could climb a steep ascent to the summit of Peach Orchard Hill, to get a magnificent view of the surrounding country. The day was one of crystalline clearness. North of east could be seen the smoke ascending from the factory chimneys at Pontiac; to the south the cement plant at Chelsea was plainly visible; to the southwest the smoke could be seen rising from the tall chimneys of Jackson, and these places are from thirty to thirty-five miles distant.

The hill had been cleared of timber along its sides and at its top, where a peach orchard had been planted some The superintendent will be in his years ago, and a few remaining trees office on the first floor of the new build- rewarded the climbers with juicy and wildest and broadest sweeps of vision p. m., for the purpose of classifying obtainable on a clear day anywhere else in southern Michigan. The return trip was through the northwestern corner of Washtenaw county into the town and village of Waterloo, with a constant exhibition of splendid scenery, goop crops, and dark green forests. It might interest many to know that Mrs. Artz, formerly Miss Locher, a sister of Wm. Locher of Francisco, is now seventy-nine years of age and still enjoying good health. Her mother, Mrs. Locher, who resides two miles north of Francisco, is in her ninety-fifth year and still hale and nearty.

Republicans Must Nominate a Man Who Can Defeat Congressman Beakes

In the series of advertisements published over the signature of the Dixon District Campaign Committee we have endeavored to show the voters of this county that it is their duty to use more than ordinary care in the selection of a candidate for congress this Indications everywhere point to a Republican landslide which will place in the White House the Republican nominee for president, Charles F. Hughes, but Republicans must not lose sight of the fact that a Republican president needs a Republican cangress to carry out the policies which Republicans everywhere believe to be those best fitted for the government of this country. We desire a return to the policies which for a half century has proved best, and which have resulted in an era of prosperity for this country. To bring about such a condition of affairs we must have a Republican congress, and while there is every indication that the Republicans will have a majority in the next congress, conditions might arise which would make the margin of safety so small that the result would hinge upon one district.

It behooves the Republicans of the Second district therefore to use especial care in the selection of their candidate for congress. They should choose wisely, and in making a selection should choose a man who can win the support of the entire Republican strength in his district. It will require a strong man. Mr. Beakes' campaign managers declare that Mr. Beakes will be renominated by the Democratic party, and if this is true, the Republican candidate must be a man who can capture the greatest number of Republican votes. Mr. Beakes and his managers claim that he will receive a certain number of Republican votes no matter who his opponent may be. We do not know the basis for such a claim, as it has been our observation during the primary campaign that Republicans in this district are pretty generally disposed to assist in bringing about a change in the administration. But if there is any reason to suppose that the Democratic candi date will receive any Republican support at all, Republicans must see to it that a candidate will be selected who will provide no excuse for any Republican to scratch his ticket.

We are satisfied that there is but one man among the Republican candidates who measures up to such a standard, and that man is Thornton Dixon of Monroe. It is an old saying that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country," but Mr. Dixon's record disproves the truth of the old saw. Monroe county will be almost solid for him. At a time when Monroe county was pretty evenly divided politically Mr. Dixon made a remarkable record as a vote getter. Three times he was elected prosecuting attorney of Monroe county, and could have been elected the fourth time had he not refused the honor. In his home township, where he was born and brought up, he received more than 300 votes out of the total of 400 cast, which is a pretty good indication of what Mr. Dixon's home folks think of him.

In the coming congressional primary election he will sweep Monroe county, and he has been steadily growing in favor in every county in the district since his candidacy was announced. Monroe county people feel that that their county is entitled to the congressional candidate this year. Twice since the Civil war the county has been represented in congress, and the voters of that county are beginning to feel that it is about time that their county should be rewarded. They have assisted in the selection of congressmen representing other counties in the district for some years now, and believe that they are entitled to some consideration on that score.

Monroe county Republicans are united for Mr. Dixon, and if he is nominated he will receive the support of large numbers of Democrats in that county, not only because of his great popularity there but because Republicans and Democrats alike believe that their county is entitled to the congressman this year.

Mr. Dixon is a man of pleasing personality, a lawyer and a business man. He has the ability to conduct the sort of a campaign that wins votes among the doubtful voters, and if nominated and elected he will reflect credit upon his district.

This is an important period in the affairs of the United States, anl no man should be sent to congress to help make the laws which govern us without careful consideration among the voters as to his qualification for the place. Mr. Dixon is the ideal candidate for the place, and we bespeak for him the support of a large majority of the members of his party at the primaries on August 29. Be sure and cast your vote for

And completing their descent to the library, the two made their appearance to Roscoe and his father. Sibyl at once gave a full and truthful account of what had taken place, repeating her own remarks, and omitting only the fact that it was through her design that Bibbs had overheard them.

"But as I told mother Sheridan," she said, in conclusion, "it might turn out for the very best that he did hearjust that way. Don't you think so, father Sheridan?"

He merely grunted in reply, and sat rubbing the thick hair on the top of his head with his left hand and looking at the fire. He had given no sign of being impressed in any manner by her exposure of Mary Vertrees' character; but his impassivity did not dismay Sibyl-it was Bibbs whom she desired to impress, and she was content in that matter.

"I'm sure it was all for the best," she said. "It's over now, and he knows what she is. In one way I think it was lucky, because, just hearing a thing that way, a person can tell it's soand he knows I haven't got any ax to grind except his own good and the good of the family."

Mrs. Sheridan went nervously to the door and stood there, looking toward the stairway. "I wish I wish I knew what he was doin'," she said. "He did look terrible bad. FOOD FOR CONVA! ESCENT.

To keep a patient comfortable and happy is no small part of the journey to Wellville. To keep him happy and comfortable he must be refreshed with proper drinks and food. During the heated season valuable aid in preparing cooling drinks: The acid of the lemon is cooling to the blood, and when the drink is combined with egg it is also nourishing. A well-beaten egg or two stirred into a glass of lemonade will often convey all the nourishment needed, and the patient does not realize (if he fails to have an appetite) that he is really being fed.

During the hot weather such foods as custards, plain rice, farina and cornstarch, as well as rice flour, make delicate dishes, easily digested by an invalid. An uncooked custard is liked by many; simply chill the milk, add the egg and sugar, beat well, and serve with a bit of flavoring and a pinch of salt. This is one form of egg nog.

It is never safe to experiment with foods upon a convalescent as "what is one man's food is another man's poison." Buttermilk will agree beautifully with some people with intestinal trouble when cream, top milk and malted foods cannot be taken at all.

The physician should always be consulted and his advice carefully followed in regard to the proper feeding. Such foods as delicately cooked eggs, kumiss, milk gruel, barley or rice flour gruel (long and well cooked), or scatded milk are often well borne by those troubled with inflammation of the digestive tract.

INCREASING YIELD OF

Two Quarts of Wheat Bran Morning and Evening Will Bring About Desired Results From Cows.

If the milk is sold it will pay to give each cow two quarts of wheat bran norning and evening. Give a forkful of hay or straw to each the first thing in the morning, and after the hay is eaten the bran may be given. This method of feeding keeps the cows in good order, the milk yield is increased and there is less danger from bloat from eating wet clover. Another advantage from feeding bran comes from the fact that less grass will be needed by the cows, and the droppings from the cows will enrich the pasture to a considerable extent. The manure should be broken fine and spread over the sod and not left in a solid cake to kill the grass under it. Keep the cows in the pasture day and night.

It may not pay to feed grain on lieve it pays to feed a little grain all through the summer months-this is the custom in most dairy districts. If grain cannot be fed, arrange to have plenty of fodder corn, millet or sugar cane. Fodder corn has the most food value when the corn is in silk. Cut and allow the fodder to wilt a few hours before feeding. Place an armful of this fodder in each cow's stall for the night's feed, the cows will be ready to come to the stable in milking time as soon as the pasture gate is opened. Grain or a forkful of green feed in the cows' stall will keep them quiet during the time of milking-and a larger yield of milk may be had when this is pro-

CALF REQUIRES MUCH CARE Future Success of Dairyman Depends

Largely on Attention Given to Young Animals.

The well-bred calf is made or unmade the first 12 months of its life. Good dairymen are poor calf raisers, and this has resulted in the stunted calf we see on the average farm. Calves are well cared for in Holland and Denmark, which fact has had much to do with the development of the industry in those countries. The future success of the dairyman depends so largely upon the care of his calves that too much emphasis cannot be placed upon this subject.

REMOVE CALF FROM MOTHER

Strong, Vigorous Youngster Can Very Safely Be Taken Away After One Good Filling Up.

The time of taking a calf from its mother should be governed by the condition of the calf. A strong, vigorous calf can very safely be removed after one good filling up; but it is a distinct mistake to take a weakly, poor-nourished calf from its dam before three days or a week.

der Goltz, the German Spy.

It is with a mitigated commiseration that one reads the story of how Von der Goltz, the German spy, finding himself recognized in Petrograd, "spent some hours eating two parcels of incriminating papers which he dare not burn in the grate." As a feat of mastication, says the London Observer, Von der Goltz by no means holds the record. Paper is easily reduced to a pulp and swallowed (the ink acting as an appetizer), and the only difficulty in this case was the quantity. Leather is another matter, but apart from meals of hard-pressed explorers there are authenticated instances of meals of the kind.

What may be described as a paper meal de luxe was that of the famous Fanny Murray mentioned by Horace Walpole: "I liked her spirit in an instance I heard of t'other night. She was complaining of want of money. Sir Richard Atkins immediately gave her a £20 note. 'She said: 'D- your £20! What does it signify?' clapped it between two pieces of bread and butter and ate it."

The organism is said to be very minute, the difficulties attending its artificial cultivation and identification being so great that the discovery is as yet of little value for the purpose of early diagnosis of suspected cases. Monkeys inoculated with the micro-organism, developed a disease corresponding to infantile paralysis in human beings. From these experiments it was determined that the mucous membrane of the nose and throat of persons not sick with the disease may become contaminated with the virus and that without falling ill themselves they may become carriers of the disease. It was found, in monkeys, that the virus could be discovered six months after inoculation, and that drying and mixing it with dust did not de-

New Post Toasties represent the most appetizing form in which choice, nutritious Indian corn has ever been prepared.

A new patented process which includes rotary toasting under quick, intense heat gives these flakes a delicious, new and distinctive flavour.

The New Toasties are featured by the bubbly appearance of the surface of the flakes—due to this new art of toasting which releases the wonderful new and attractive true corn taste.

New Post Toasties are not "chaffy" in the package; and they don't mush down when milk or cream is added like common "corn flakes."

ANN ARBOR, MICH.

Candidate for Representative in Congress Second Congressional District. Republican Ticket.

Mr. Wall is a man intimately acquainted with the needs of the District, having been in the postal service of the United States for several years six of which were spent in the Second District.

Mr. Wall is a firm believer and an irdent advocate of an adequate preparedness policy for this country, preparedness not for war but for peace. His views on Americanism can best be expressed by the following: "Let it be borne on the flag under which we rally in every exigency, that we have one country, one constitution, one destiny."

He stands for an equitable revision of the tariff along constructive lines.

He opposes the needless waste of public funds and looks upon government as a business proposition in which the best and more lasting results are to be obtained through the application of business principles.

A square deal to all is his slogan. Tom Wall can be elected in Novem ber, so vote for him at Primary elec tion, August 29th, and it will be appreciated.-Adv.

Four years ago I was a candidate at the primary for Nominee for Congress on the Democratic ticket, and was opposed for the nomination by Samuel W. Beakes, Present Congressman. I was the choice of a majority of the democrats voting at the primary at that election, receiving a majority of seventeen over Mr. Beakes. Mr. Beakes petitioned for a recount in Lenawee County where I received a vote of four to his one, his petition charging fraud. The recount increased my majority to twenty-three, but it was discovered on the recount that the Inspectors of Election, in several precincts, had inilialed the primary ballots in the wrong place, viz.: above the perforated line instead of below it. Mr. Beakes took immediate advantage of these technicalities, appealing to the Court to disfranchise these democrats who (through no fault of their own) had voted ballots not properly initialed by the Inspectors. ### SENATOR TOWNSEND STICKS TO HIS POST

United States Senator Refuses to Leave His Seat at a Time of National Crisis to Campaign for Re-election.

Senator Townsend has in his one term as United States Senator, risen to a commanding place as one of the leaders of the minority and their chief spokesman. His presence is necssary in order to protect the interests of the minority on all important measures, and he has never been known to shirk his duty and he has built up a record for regularity of attendance surpassed by few members

UNITED STATES SENATOR CHARLES E. TOWNSEND.

For this reason, the Senator is compelled to refuse the many urgent requests to visit various sections of the State in the interests of his own campaign. His friends have, however, him, and a voluntary committee of fifty has been organized to present the Senator's candidacy so that his own time may be given to the people's interests. This committee is now sending out an address to the voters of the state as follows:

Detroit, August 10th, 1916.

Detroit, August 10th, 1916.

Dear Sir:

Charles E, Townsend was the first United States Senator from Michigan to be nominated directly by the people. He has fully justified their faith and we urge his renomination and election.

The United States benate is of supreme importance to all who believe in the principles of the remited Republican party. The Senate will be close even though a Republican President and House be elected. The success of Republican policies, therefore, demands the strongest men in the Senate, men of experience, of judgment and proved ability, men of strong convictions with the clurage and ability to express them. A time of national crisis is no time for experiment.

Senator Townsend has proved himself to the people of Michigan and the Country in both House and Senate. The trusted friend of two great Republican Presidents, he was spokesman on the floor of the House for their most important progressive measures. He fought for freedom of debate against the strong control of the House for their most important progressive measures. floor of the House for their most impor-tant progressive measures. He fought for freedom of debate against the reac-tionaries of his own party. He has stood uncompromisingly for protection to American industries and labor, scientific-ally administered.

As a leader of the Republican minority in the Senate he has not hesitated to de-nounce incompetency disloyates blue in the Senate he has not hesitated to denounce incompetency, diplomatic blundering or extravagance in the Democratic regime. He is one of the members of the Senate most regular in attendance and has helped shape some of the most important legislation of the last six years. He has been indefatigable in the interest of citizens having business with or requiring the aid of the government.

The people of Michigan need the experience, ability and statesmanship of Senator Townsend at Washington during the crucial years that are at hand. We hope you will do everything in your power to p further his renomination and election.

Senator Townsend."

The importance to the country of Senator Townsend remaining at Washington has been forcibly demonstrated in the last few weeks. His recent extemporary reply to the victous attack made by Senator Walsh upon Justice Hughes attracted the attention of the whole country. A few days later Senator Townsend voiced the protest of a whole people against the maintenance of unacclimated Northern militia in Mexico to do police duty, merely as a cloak to cover the administration's failure to put the regular army in condition for that purpose. His castigation the other day of the southern industries which employ child labor was so vigorous and so apt that it challenged the attention of the country and helped to pass the anti-child labor bill ever the epposition of many seuthern

Rumania Has Cast Her Lot With the Allies-Berlin Sends Ultimatum.

London-The series of battles at different points along the Balkan front, which began with the launching of the Allies' offensive on August 19, are rapidly developing into a gigantic general engagement all along the 150-mile line, with the British, French, Russian, Italian and Serbian forces, on the one side, successful at some points, and the Austrian, German, Turkish and Bulgarian forces at others.

Both wings of the Allies have been bent back by the Central Powers. In the center, however, where the Allies' main effort is being made at the entrance to the great Vardar valley, Paris reports important gains. The Serbians apparently have been the heaviest losers and have been forced back on their extreme left about five miles from the Serbian Green frontier. They claim, however, continued progress on the other sections of their front, on the Allies' right, the British and French who had crossed the Struma towards the Bulgarian frontier have been forced back on the river.

Whereupon Manley meekly took his departure. Two minutes later, however, yet another figure was passing through the gloomy silences of Enoch Golden's home. It was a more purposeful figure than that of the lazy-eyed young secretary. And over the face of this intruder as he cautiously made his way through the great house was an add-looking band of yellow cloth, cut in the form of a mask. The center of this, drooping apronlike almost to his upper lip, was marked by an inverted crescent, which at first glance lent to the partly-covered face the beint suggestion of an tronically laugh-

"Who are you?" the grim-faced old financier finally demanded. But the girl remained silent.

Golden, studying her more closely, rose unsteadily to his feet. "How did you get here?" he asked. And passing a hand across his mois-

The next minute Griswold was hurrying from the house and leaping into is waiting limousine.

Golden, sitting at his desk, stared startled and vacant-eyed before him. Yet that young secretary who was so foolishly accepted as feather-headed was, at the time being, anything Legar was conducting his campaign but idle. Ten minutes after his talk over the wire with Golden he was in a taxicab speeding towards the Stein tering casually up to the home of

"Then you go and tell him that," Manley in a telephone booth, talking as the belligerent-eyed maid strode out to the wagon, Manley slipped in "Have you received any message through the still open door, dropped guardedly up through the silent house. When he came to a large room, half library and half laboratory, he stared in wonder at the strange apparatus which stood on a table in the center of this room. He heard the sound of approaching steps. He saw a door on his right and darted through it. He realized, as soon as he had done so, that he had committed the fatal error of diving into a trap.

As he peered out through the still partly opened door he saw that it was the German maid who had entered the room. Then she crossed to the closet door itself, straightened the edge of the disordered rug, closed the door and turned the key in the lock. A moment later, Manley, with his ear against the panel, heard the sound of heavier steps. Then came the even more interesting sound of voices.

"Vell, wat do you say of Oldt Stein now, maybe? You still t'ink he talk foolish ven he claim dose actinic rays in conjunction mit converging wireless impulses couldn't maybe start a leetle combustion von or two miles away, Manley suddenly ducked back behind a waterproof, smelling acridly of acid burns, for footsteps had approached the closet door and the key was being turned in the lock."

The fugitive stood close against the wall, draped by the waterproof, as the spectacled scientist groped blinkingly about for his housecoat.

Clustered about the table, bent close over the map, he could see Stein and Legar and two of his unknown accomplices. Manley advanced silently into the room, crouching low as he went. For on the table he had "Whatever you do, don't let them already caught sight of the blueprint get that young woman away from of Stein's projector apparatus. "Police headquarters!" he told the driver. Brief as was Manley's visit to police headquarters, that call resulted in sudden and startling movement from the great gray structure in Center street. For the mysterious fires were new breaking out even in crowded tenements on the East side, keeping a bewildered fire department shut-the lieutenant and his men were in through the door, wielding nightsticks and flashing firearms.

It was Manley himself who caught up a chair and brought it crashing down on a strangely complicated mechanism standing squarely in the light of the Tower window.

But Legar himself had not been idle. At the first wild charge into his tower room, the master criminal had dropped crouching behind a worktable, darted across to his parcel chute and there touched a hidden spring. The next moment the chute stood open and Legar was descend- she had done it. The letter and her ing like a plummet to the floor below. He hailed a taxicab and hurried eastward to the Owl's Nest. Two minutes after Legar went rocking and swerving eastward he was followed by a stranger in a second cab. This stranger drove straight to the water front, two blocks to the north, dismissed his taxi, and earnestly conferred with a roughly-dressed longshoreman, who later rounded the slip in a rowboat and took the stranger aboard.

Legar, in his quarters beneath the Owl's Nest, was in anything but an amiable mood. He stared about at his coterie of unsavory confederates.

A gleam of triumph showed in his narrowing eyes as he spied a whitefaced girl in a chair near the fireplace. "So we've got you back, little one?"

Legar, at the sound, wheeled suddenly about. "Who taught that damned bird to talk?" he demanded. There was a stir of uneasiness about the room. "Why, cap, that parrot can't talk," declared the tremulous coke-snuffer at the end of the table, "it never could talk!"

"Then who said 'Courage'?" called out the irate master criminal.

"I did," said the same distinct yet ghostly voice. And had that wideeyed group stared closer into the fireplace, instead of at the silent and motionless bird on its perch, they ters was a feverishly hurried and yet might have noticed where a small had been worked loome and lifted away from the heavy wall separating that unseen watcher from the room into which he had been peering.

By EARL SILVERS.

For quite a time before she became engaged to Jack Abbott, Olive Alkinbeen forgotten, until, shortly after her marriage, his name was little more than a memory. But Jack Abbott nursed a deep resentment toward the man he had defeated in the race for Olive's hand.

"I never liked him and I never will," he said. "I hope that we shall never see him again."

"There is really no need to worry." Mrs. Jack answered, placidly. "Bert has gone into business in Chicago and doesn't expect to come East for vears."

After that the other man's name was not mentioned in the Abbott household. Mr. and Mrs. Jack lived in blissful peace. But one afternoon in early summer

Mr. Jack reached home at about three o'clock. He had hoped to find Olive ready and willing for a set or two of tennis before supper, but he was doomed to disappointment. No Olive awaited him.

"Did Mrs. Abbott say where she was going?" he asked the maid. "Yes, sir," the girl answered. "She's gone to the city and will not be back until this evening. She told me to tell you that you had better eat supper alone."

Mr. Jack frowned. Tennis seemed suddenly to have lost its charm, so he wandered into the library in search of a book with which to while away the time. On the open desk in the corner he saw a letter addressed to his wife. The handwriting looked unfamiliar, and he absentmindedly picked up the envelope. Moved by a sudden impulse, he slipped out the single sheet of paper it contained and glanced over its contents.

Suddenly his eyes contracted, his lips forming in a straight, thin line. the door refused to close. Before that He read the letter carefully, from bebody could be dragged to one side, ginning to end, an expression of wonder on his clean-cut face.

"Dear Olive," he read, "I shall be in New York Wednesday for a day's visit. Then I must hurry back to Chicago. But before I go, I simply must see you. Will you meet me at Manley's at four o'clock? We can have a little supper for two and talk over old times. Hurriedly yours, Bert."

For a long time Mr. Jack Abbott gazed at the writing before him. It seemed hard to believe that his wife would disregard his wishes; would accept an invitation from a man whom she knew he did not approve of. But absence were conclusive evidence.

Mr Jack neither read nor played that afternoon. He walked from the library to the porch and into the library again.

When Mrs. Jack reached home, he had worked himself into an unusual state of mind. But he resolved to be 'Hello, dear!" There was not the slightest hint of guilt in Mrs. Jack's things," he answered, with a hint of dignity in his tone. "I didn't think you'd care at all." She seemed puzzled.

"Didn't think I'd care!" He flushed angrily. "Other people do it." Her tone was a trifle defiant. "I don't see why I should not?" "Yes," he said cynically, "in these modern times a woman may do almost anything. But you know how I feel toward the man, and I think that you might at least have said something to me about it before meeting him." "I don't know what you mean." She looked at him wonderingly.

"There's no use in beating about the bush," He arose, "Perhaps I shouldn't have done it, but I read a letter of yours which you left on the table." "What letter?"

"It was from Bert Overton, asking you to have supper with him tonight." Suddenly Mrs. Jack burst into peals of laughter, her husband watching ber with amazement. Finally she checked

"You foolish man." she said. "Did you think Bert Overton wrote that letter?" "Think!" Her laughter angered him. "Can't I read?"

"Listen, dear." She placed her hand on his arm. "That letter is from Ruberta Spencer, a college friend of mine. We always called her Bert, and I haven't seen her for years, because as soon as she graduated she went to Chicago?"

shamefacedly. "I'm sorry, dear." He placed his hand over hers. "If you don't mind, we'll get Annie to bring in the supper again. I didn't eat very much a while ago." She smiled into his eyes.

"Oh!" Mr. Jack smiled rather

"Of course," she answered. "It will be a supper for two, after all."
