REUNION OF THE NOTTEN FAMILIES

Fifth Annual Gathering Held at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry

The fifth annual reunion of the Notten family was held Saturday, August 26, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lehman, north of Francisco. By 10 o'clock 142 descendents of the twin brothers, John and Ehlert Notten, had assembled. At noon a sumptuous dinner was served. The following girls waited on the tables, which were set under canvas canopies: Aurelit Lehman, Myrtle Youngs, Nina Kalmbach, Ora Miller, Almarine Whitaker, Mabel Kalmbach and Eva Lehman.

Following the repast the business meeting was held, and the following officers were chosen:

President, Philip Schweinfurth; secretary-treasurer, Emma Lehman. It was then decided to hold the next meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Whitaker on the last Saturday in August, 1917.

BUCHANAN.

HE election of 1856 was the first contest between the two parties as they exist today. Buchanan, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, opposed John C. Fremont, Republican, of New York. The Republican party had just been created. Slavery was the principal issue, and signs of the approaching catastrophe were plainly visible. Buchanan was elected, receiving a popular vote of 1,838,169 to 1,341,264 for his opponent. Millard Fillmore of New York, who was the candidate of the American party, received 874,538 votes. J. C. BY S. M. B. F.

I listened to these words as they fell from the lips of a valued friend, a It was all of a response, after being Mrs. Chas. Chadwick, of Jackson, the recipent of a large bouquet of from the floor a few moments before. "A few more posies while I am yet and worthiness while the blood flows through the veins, while the ears hear, the eyes see and the nostrils inhale the fragrance. Poor and obscure indeed has that clay tenement been in life that has not had some mute, Detroit Wednesday after spending but sweet, offering laid upon his bier. Many flowers in blankets, crowns, wreathes, gates ajar, and in every form are heaped about and upon caskets of those who in their life time received never a kindly word or sweeted flower--the remembrance only coming after the opportunity to be thankful for the acknowledgment of appreciation felt.

What the world has ever needed, now needs and will ever need is sentiment. We in the strenuous work-a-day world may call it bosh or softness, yet down in the depth of our nature is the smothered cry for "more posies while yet alive." A few words of commendation in our efforts to do the duties that lie before us.

Oh there is a mighty host of workers who are not paid for their priceless services in gold or silver; not many are ever thanked for their life long A good crowd was present at Ep- | ministry by home, or state, or church or individuals, but are subjected to captious criticism by those who never did, or could, do the work that has been done by them. In this, the host are faithful superintendents and teachers in the Sunday schools, they who, form the conscience of the state, not by ethical or philosophical codes of man's invention, but by the codes of Sinai and Calvary.

The church choirs often unrecognized, but surely lift hearts upward by their voices to the New Jerusalem, to the "land of pure delight," while the congregation listens and are deighted. How many scatter posies along the pathway or say the kindly words of praise to those sweet singers.

It does not cost much to scatter a few "posies" while our triends are still alive. We are willing to cover their cold remains with flowers from garden and greenhouses and pronounce words of eulogy and praise when they are oblivious to them all, but, why not say kindly words to those about us while they are here?

Tell your pastor when his words find echo in your heart. Ten chances to one he will preach a better sermon the following Sabbath. Your family physician to whom you have prayed next to God for the deliverence from sickness and death tell him how you appreciate his services and when occasion offers scatter a few "posies" while he is yet alive. O, there are so many. The man with whom you do business, your grocer, your dry goods merchant, the man who ministers to your needs, the Good being only knows how some times, they are perplexed and disheartened over difficulties. A kindly word of encouragement, how it will help them to take up the burden and go forward.

Then there is your village editor who gives honor and significence to your town abroad, withholds your family perversities from the public gaze, publishes your church and school notices free and in contra distinction from the metropolitan press, as editor, publisher and financier, possibly politician all in one, when his task is greatly interested in physical culture done, spends more hours at hard work than any other class or profession, and for less remuneration. Do we fail to acknowledge the courtesies extended, or to commend a righteous article published, while we never fail or cease to criticise or comment on mistakes made?

Oh, there are plenty of chances to strew posies while our friends are yet alive, not in words of flattery, that are worse than mockery, but by words of kindly praise for work done in a conscientious worthy manner.

ROPE FOR THE KICKING COW

System Described in Which Milk-Stool Is Eliminated-Much Better Than Being Kicked.

Tie the cow about the neck with a rope in a bowline knot. Tie the other end of the rope to the manger or post, leaving about 18 to 20 inches of rope from the cow to the post, Next place the pail on the ground near the cow, but at a distance great enough to keep her from kicking it. Put your head against the cow just about the flank (there being no stool in this system). If she starts to kick the contraction of the muscles under your head warns you and you must start to push against her with all your might. If you start soon enough she will not kick as the shove you give her with your head causes her to think the will lose her balance and she keeps her feet on the ground to prevent falling.

In the event of her succeeding in getting one foot raised, be sure to keep a good hold on her teats and don't stop pushing against her. In a few lessons the cow learns that it is not safe to raise her feet and you can just place your head as stated and lean against her. Of course, this is very tiresome at first, but it is much better than being kicked and after you get the "knack" of the thing you will put the milk-stool in the junk heap.

REGULAR FEEDING FOR COWS

Greatest Degree of Contentment in Herd Can Only Be Secured by Strictest Regularity.

It is of great importance that strict regularity should be observed, both in feeding and in milking, in order to secure the greatest degree of contentment in the herd. First give the grain mixture, and milk the cows while they are eating it. This routine is recommended because, with some cows, the

Cured roughage should be fed after milking because it fills the air in the after milking, because of the odor that to spend the day in the stall, and for two or three hours about midday they should not be disturbed. Turning them out into the yard, or giving them access to a strawstack or field of corn stalks, will cause them to shrink in milk, no matter how much or how well they may be fed in the morning and evening. No more feed should be given them than they will eat up. The mangers should be absolutely clean and free from any feed during the day and night.

Truthful Wife.

A detective was praising the truthfulness of women.

"If war bulletins were as truthful as women," he said, "we'd have a better ldea of how this world struggle is really going.

"I remember a case the other dayit's interesting in its revelation of woman's truthfulness-the case of a husband who had disappeared.

"Questioning the wife, I said to her: "'And now, madam, tell me-this is very important-tell me what your husband's very last words were when he left?"

"'His last words,' the truthful creature answered, with a blush, 'were, "For heaven's sake, shut up!" '"

No Trouble.

INTERCROPPING PRACTICED IN ORCHARDS

The cultivated orchard is more productive and consequently more profitable than the average orchard, which is neglected or in which grass or hay is grown, asserts F. S. Merrill, assistant in horticulture, Kansas State Agricultural college.

"In the young orchard, however, a judicious system of intercropping may be practiced without causing injury to the trees, and at the same time profitable crops will be produced in the waste space between the rows," says Mr. Merrill, "Sufficient space should be left on each side of the tree to perportionate in width to the spread of roots. the branches.

RED SPIDERS HARM YOUR RASPBERRIES

Flowers of Sulphur Is Recom- Massachusetts County Agent mended as Excellent Remedy for These Parasites.

(By C. P. GILLETTE, Colorado Agricul-tural College, Fort Collins, Colo.) During dry seasons like the present, great many people complain of the red spiders or brown mites infesting their raspberries, current bushes, sweet peas, and many other plants, shrubs and trees. These mites usually are most abundant on the under side of the leaves and are too small to be readily seen by the naked eye. If the red spider is doing the injury, a very delicate web will always be found covering the surface of the leaves. Remedies .- Flowers of sulphur is perhaps, the best remedy, wherever it can be thoroughly applied to both the upper and the lower surfaces of the eaves. Use in the proportion of one pound of the sulphur to about four gallons of water. First, mix the sulphur in a small quantity of soapy water and then dilute to required strength. Apply through any spray pump that may be at hand. It is just as well to make the application dry, if one is provided with bellows or dusting appliances to distribute the sulphur.

ORCHARD CLEAN-UP IS VERY PROFITABLE

Demonstrates What Can Be Done With Apple Trees.

A county agent in Massachusetts be gan, in 1914, a demonstration in the renovation of some old apple orchards. The following year from a two-acre Orchard heavily infested with San Jose scale when the demonstration was begun, a net profit of $210.77 was realited after paying spray materials, man and horse labor, 5 per cent interest on the land, trees, and working capital, taxes and all other expenses incident to the proper management of the orchard.

The net cost of developing young orchards in the same county has been reduced greatly by growing cash crops among the trees as suggested by the county agent. In the case of an eightacre young orchard, the crop so grown in 1915 met all the costs of the year properly chargeable, besides paying for some permanent improvements, and lacked only $10.88 of paying for the trees, planting, etc.

Forget to Pay.

Patrons of Winchester barber shops eem to have a mania for forgetting o pay their tonsorial bills. In many cases it is done unintentionally.

One evening, recently, a former Winchester resident who now lives in California entered a barber shop for a haircut and shave. He was in a hurry. His business for the evening included a lodge meeting, and, most important of all, catching a train for his home. Many of his old-time friends were in the shop when he stepped from the chair. He bade them all good-by and started to leave the shop. He had not yet paid his bill.

"Did you forget something?" the barber asked as the customer was leaving the shop.

"Oh, yes, I beg your pardon," the customer replied, "Good-by, good-by." And the bill still remains unpaid .-Indianapolis News.

Card of Thanks

I desire to express my sincere thanks to my many friends in Chelsea and adjoining townships for their splendid support given me at the Primaries Tuesday for Representative. My vote was much larger than I had hoped to receive, and those who labored unselfishly in my behalf are entitled to all the credit, for my time was so limited by other matters that I could not avoid, that I could do but little for myself.

Whether I am elected or not, my great appreciation of the result at the Primaries will remain.

Respectfully,

Michigan's exposition will be greatest event of its kind in the history of the Wolverine State. Notable attractions are announced for every day.

Special features will be the Million Dollar Livestock show and stupendous display of farm machinery. Practical demonstrations will be given by noted experts in the industrial and agricultural world.

Speed Events

Opening on Labor Day, Michigan's fastest trotters and paces will compete for rich purses.

America's famous auto drivers will contest for over $5,000 in cash prizes, and will attempt to lower dirt track records.

Other events on the speed program are chariot races and running races, as well as contests for men and boys

Machinery Display

Most modern types of farm machinery, including gasoline engines, cream separators, silo fillers, farm tractors, and other time saving inventions of mechanical experts, will attract the attention of Michigan rural residents especially. The display of machinery and mechanical appliances will set a new record for size and interest it will create.

Children's Exercises

The State Fair management has arranged special entertainment for the children, and in addition the children will give drills and folk dances on the stage in the grove. There will be games and contests for the children, and amusement features, including dog and pony shows, vaudeville acts, etc.

Notable attractions which will be of interest to the children, as well as their parents, include the automobile show, Better Babies' Contest, State Fair Boys' School, poultry and pet stock show, day and night fireworks, horse polo, athletic events, domestic exhibits, auto polo, entertaining midway shows, girls' milking contest, day and night horse show, trained animal acts, wild fowl exhibits and superb displays of the products of Michigan's farms and factories.

FAMOUS SPEED PILOTS TO RACE AT STATE FAIR

Entries Are Being Received to 18, will be the address of John From Various Stars

Three days of auto racing will be on the card of the Michigan State Fair. Sept. 10, 11 and 12. The Ford drivers will tool their minature speedsters around the oval Sunday, the first day of the races, to select a new Michigan champion, and the two following days the professional drivers will compete, Interstate Event Scheduled. G. W. Dickinson, secretary and manager of the State Fair, is planning an interstate championship event for the two days that the major leaguers will whirl around the dirt oval. While all the details of the race have not been fully worked out, it will probably be run on a basis of twenty-five mile heats, three on Monday and two on Tuesday, the winner to be decided on the point system, as in horse racing.

To Carry Michigan's Colors. The drivers competing in this race will represent the various states from which they hail, and a Detroit driver will probably carry the colors of Michigan. "Farmer Bill" Endicott, always a favorite with the Michigan speed nuts, will compete, representing the Hoosier state. He asserts he will lower the track record if weather conditions are favorable.

Other Contests Arranged.

In addition to the heat races for the interstate title, for which the Michigan State Fair will give a handsome trophy, other contests are scheduled for the professional speedsters. The entry blanks were placed in the mails last week. Most of the drivers will come to Detroit from Minneapolis, where the Hamline oval will stage its annual big dirt track 100 mile event the week

Entries Close Aug. 29. Entry blanks for the elimination for the Ford championship race on the Sunday of the Fair were mailed out during the week to the drivers, and the management has been assured of a large field for the semi-pro event. The entries will close Aug. 29.

ት The Sinner's Sentence

By VIRGINIA ESTABROOK

With the skill of an expert boatwoman and a strength born of exercise and practice, Hazel Grey drove the yawl under her control against" the shingly beach, leaped out and ran swiftly to the spot where a fellow creature lay in deadly peril.

She had sculled the clumsy craft from the little island in the center of the lake and half the distance accomplished had hurried her course, for this is what she noted: A young man toppling over the edge of the bluff 20 feet up from the beach. Either he had slipped in venturing a descent or had been asleep and rolled down the steep slope. In any event the fall had been a bad one, for he lay half submerged by the water, his eyes closed and apparently unconscious.

Hazel lost no time in dragging the half suffocated victim out of the water. He stirred as she did so. She looked troubled and full of pity as she noticed a bruise near his temple. In landing his head had struck a stone. Abruptly he sat up and looked about him in a dazed way. Then a glance at the fair girl brought full intelli-

"Hello!" he ejaculated and arose. Hazel drew back, shy and blushing. He seemed to comprehend what she had done through a glance at the wet streak where his body had been dragged over the sand. He rubbed the abrasion over his brow. His eyes lit up with appreciation and gratitude. "You have worked quick," he observed, and she said simply:

"I had to." "And I owe you my life!" he added, after a brief pause and quite solemnly, "Tell me about it."

But Hazel drew back from exploiting her casual dash in the interests of humanity., "I was sculling over to get some groceries for the camp," she explained briefly. "You see, there are twelve of us, all seminary girls, and we are putting in a week at roughing it." "Oh, I see," murmured Warner and then he turned sharply, for, staring quite beyond him, an expression of vast discomfiture and amazement in her beautiful eyes, Hazel stood rock rooted with the fluttering gasp: "Now I'm in for it!" She seemed quite to forget the presence of the stranger. Warner drew to one side to arrange his disheveled attire. An automobile containing a chauffeur and an angry faced, overdressed woman of about forty dashed up to the spot "Come here this instant," she commanded Hazel and panting like a child. the girl approached the machine. The woman seized her arm and quite pulled her into the car. Go on!" she ordered the chauffeur. "But my clothes! What will the girls think?" demurred Hazel.

"Clothes. You will wear sackcloth and ashes for the next six months, believe me you wicked sinner!"

And then the machine and its occupants flashed down the beach, and Dudley Warner had to rub his head and blink his eyes to convince himself that it was not all a dream, so quickly had all happened, so strange the happening.

A youth in an outing suit came strolling down a bluff path. He paused grinned at Warner and looked ex-saw you tumble, but that sprite was ahead of me."

"Who is she?" asked Warner. "Miss Hazel Grey."

"And the lady in the automobile?" "I fancy an aunt, an old maid relative, who has adopted Hazel. I only guess that from what I pick up. You see, Hazel and eleven of her friends are putting in a week's vacation over tried to scare them nights, hovering around as sheeted ghosts and with hollow awesome cries, but you can't faze Hazel. She has stuck it out. Her aunt lives about fifty miles from here. She must have heard of Hazel's last exploit and it scandalized her so she has marched her home in a jiffy."

"And where does this ogre of an

"At Wadham." She's a distressingly over-particular person, I hear, and likes no fun or frolic, and all that. Poor Hazel, she's the life of the place."

"H'm," said Warner reflectively. Stirred up more than he could ever have dreamed over a memory of bright eyes and a bewitching face he repaired to his hotel at the village.

He thrilled every time he thought of the misstep that might have ended him but for the nerve of the dainty sprite who had come to his rescue.

It took Warner only a day to find out all about Hazel Grey. A young man of wealth, impetuous and ingenuous in his nature, he was soon engulfed neck deep in the adventure of his life. He saw the mournful group don their camp, bereft of the soul of their enterprise, their doughty leader. Then Warner went to Wadham and "hung around."

Yes, sentence had been passed on the pretty sinner, and Hazel was indeed among sackcloth and ashes. The residence of Aunt Maria well accorded with her own stern and severe bear-The old house was prim and uninviting, the grounds surrounded by a high brick wall. Only twice in two days, Warner observed, was Hazel allowed to walk in the garden. He located her room. She slept with the window open. Thereafter for a week, getting up at daylight, Warner secured the daintiest, rarest bouquet money could buy, scaled the wall and when Hazel awoke the lovely floral offering lay on the floor. Then a note was enclosed in a cluster of lilies of the valley and Hazel knew the identity of her ardent knight errant.

Love laughs at locksmiths, brick walls and lynx eyed failers. Now Dudley Warner was making of the grand passion a business, systematic and progressive. It was a delightful two weeks. Four ecstatic secret interviews in a sequestered part of the garden brought two harmonious souls together, and again Hazel "saved" Warner's life by not sending him away nopeless, he declared!

Dudley Warner was a venturesome young man and Hazel a confiding and determined girl. There was a hurried ladder climb over the garden wall one dark evening, an hour's swift dash in an automobile, a return, kisses and promises and the next morning Warner appeared before the dreaded Miss

And then to his amazement the shrewd spinster smiled-he fancied she chuckled. She never flinched, she never betrayed an emotion except sat- SLANG IS UPHELD BY COURT isfaction supreme.

"I admire you unutterably," she said incisively. "I have been studying you at a distance for two weeks. You rise early, that shows no laggard. You scale walls, evidencing activity. You are a model young man, I have taken pains to learn so-therefore, why not? I have watched your every move-I, the lynx eyed-ah! You are a better guardian for Hazel than I-"

"You consent!" cried the astounded

"Don't interrupt me," commanded Miss Maria—"as I said, take Hazel with my blessing."

"You angel!" raved the enraptured Dudley Warner.

BRIGHTON-Four well known young Brighton people have a true fish story to relate. While they were enjoying a twilight trip down the Huron river, not far from our village, a sudden purring and a flop in the front end of the boat drew their attention; one of the occupants jumped up in time to catch the intruder. Upon examination it proved to be a two pound bass. An affidavit can be furnished if necessary .- Argus.

YPSILANTI-When James Tinkler was arraigned in justice court Tuesday on a drunk charge he accused Officer Batway of holding out four $5 bills. The officer was summoned to inswer the accusation. Meanwhile Tinkler sat down and presently arose with two of the bills in his hand. He said he found them in his sock. He was told to look in the other sock, where he found the other bills. The officer was exonerated.

"Fly Cop" and "Bonehead Stunt" Both Perfectly Proper, Judge Says.

A recent decision by the supreme court of Louisiana holds among other things that "as newspaper accounts of police court proceedings and detectives' escapades are not required to be written in a dignified style, it is not slanderous per se for the report to call a detective a 'fly cop,' to characterize his ruthless and unwarranted. arrest of a man as 'spearing' him, and describe the officer's blunder as 'pulling off another bonehead stunt." Upon this point the court said:

"It is in evidence that the term 'fly cop' does not mean an officious policeman, as might be inferred from the ordinary meaning of the slang adjective 'fly.' We are informed that a 'fly cop,' sometimes called a 'shadow bull,' or a 'tec,' means nothing more

"It also appears that to 'spear' a person, in the figurative or meta-"I once defended a case," he says, phorical sense in which the expression was used in the article comconvicted, but added a rider affirming plained of, means to catch a person that the prisoner was sane. The doctors sent gaff into him; and we understand that to see him were satisfied of that, and to 'pull off a bonehead stunt' means the sentence was not carried out. A nothing more nor less than to commit

"The newspaper reporter, in this instance, credited the plaintiff with a keener sense of humor than he possessed, but we are not convinced that there was malice in the publication. Stories of detectives' escapades are read by men who enjoy a little nonsense now and then, and it would take much of the flavor out of the newspaper accounts of such proceedings if we should require that they be written up in the dignified manner of the opinion and judgments of this court. "For example, although we might deem it more appropriate to say, in commenting upon what we considered a mistake, that a reversible error or an abuse of discretion had been committed, a newspaper reporter might well say of a more or less serious error, without intending any disrespect, that a-bonehead stunt had been pulled off."-New York Sun.

Make a soft dough, roll into a sheet, cut into rounds, pinch a hole in the center with the finger and fry in deep fat.

Fat for frying should not be hot enough to brown the doughnut until it has risen. When the doughnut is dropped into the fat it sinks to the bottom. As soon as it comes up it should be turned and turned a number of times while cooking. This recipe is ex-cellent as they do not take the fat in frying and will stay moist for days.

MORE GUARDSMENTO BORDER

Men Will Move at Once Under New Order.

Washington-National Guard troops of Ohio, Kentucky and Vermont, now in mobilization camps, were ordered to the Mexican border.

Some time ago they were ordered to the border and when the railway strike situation became acute, on General Funston's recommendation the order was suspended. The suspension, of orders to guardsmen of all other states remaining in mobilization camps still stands.

Officers of the general staff said that the troops from these three states would complete certain portions of the divisional organization on the border and enable division commanders to operate wth and train the full force which they are supposed to command.

About 12,000 men will be moved south at once under the new order, six regiments going from Ohio, three from Kentucky, two Vermont and auxilitary organizations making up the balance.

WEMPHIS SWEPT UPON ROCKS

Twenty Men Returning to the Ship From Shore Leave Were Drowned.

Washington-Rear Admiral Pond. at San Domingo City, cabled the navy department that the armored cruiser Memphis, swept upon the rocks by a heavy sea in the harbor there, would be a total loss, and although it was expected all on board would be saved, more than 20 men returning to the ship from shore leave in a motorboat had been drowned. The message follows:

"Terrible weather in harbor. Memphis ashore. Crew being disembarked. More than 20 men lost with motor boat. Castine safe at sea."

Admiral Benson explained that the construction of the Memphis is such that she probably would withstand a great amount of pounding, allowing for rescue of those aboard. WHOLESOME RHUBARB. If Solomon had lived in this century he would no doubt have written that of the making of recipes there is no end," and yet there is really nothing new under the sun. Food combinations which are passed on from one to another as" original may be found verbatim in some popular cook book, so that a truly new recipe is as rare as a perfectly satisfied person. As rhubarb is cheap, is easily grown, and when one has a small garden spot

a few plants will yield all one needs for the table it is evident that too much has not been said in its favor. One method of canning it for winter use to be made into pies, is very simple-prepare it by removing the peeling and cut in bits, then fill fruit jars as full as it can be packed in, and turn in the cold water from the tap or pump until it overflows and all the bubbles of air are expelled. Put on the rubber and cover and seal as usual. Of course it is hardly necessary to state that the jars should have been well sterilized, the rubbers dipped in hot water and the tops well scalded to make the sterilization complete. Rhubarb Jam.—Cut the rhubarb in lengths and choose the stalks that have a good red color. If cut very early in the spring it need not be peeled, but later the skin becomes tough. Cover the cut rhubarb with an equal weight of sugar and let stand ever night. For each three pounds of fruit add a thinly sliced lemon, discarding the seeds. Cook a half hour after beginning to boil, then simmer for another half hour. At the last add a small quantity of shredded, blanched almonds and put in jars for winter

A most delightful combination for those who are fond of ginger is four pounds of sugar to five pounds of rhubarb, the juice and rind of three lemons and a small jar of preserved ginger with the sirup. Add a cupful of water, cut the ginger very fine and cook slowly an hour. Put into jelly glasses and seal as usual.

THE COGNAC CASK

"Bring that woman in here!" commanded Enoch Golden as he flung open his library door. He stepped inside, the next moment, as the figure h black, pinioned close between young Manley and Wilson, the butler, was piloted into the shadowy room. "Sit down!" he barked out at the silent and motionless figure with the heavy black veil still draping its face. "Manley, is there any chance of this woman being armed?" Golden suddenly asked of his secretary. "She's not armed, sir," was young

"Do you intend to answer?" demanded the millionaire. "Or must I have you put out of this house without a hearing?"

"That seems to be a habit of which time has not deprived you," was the quiet-toned reply.

It was not the muffled sting in those words, nor the calm bitterness with which they were spoken, but more the voice itself, with its ghostly reminder of other days, that brought Golden up short.

"Who are you?" he repeated when he saw that he and the veiled woman were alone in the room. "And why my child, find her and save her. Sure-times a foreigner or two comes in mostly by accident. But yesterday, when I was in the kitchen, three men came in a hurry. They had dodged under cover there to escape being seen by a plain-clothes man. I could hear their talk through the little kitchen slide through which we pass our dishes. And when I heard their voices I opened the slide a little, and I knew at once that one of the men was Palidori, or Legar, as he calls himself now. He was talking mostly to a man called Casavanti. Then-"Wait a minute," interrupted Golden, with his finger on the bell button, "I want my secretary to hear this."

The woman in black sat silent thtil Manley had re-entered the room. Then Golden motioned for her to continue.

"I heard Legar mention your name," she went on, still unmoved by the older man's half-sneering incredulity. "Then he blamed Casavanti for some scheme that had failed, some scheme to degrade my Margory. But he had the girl back, he said, and this time he'd expect Casavanti to do his part.

Manley, as he did so, slipped a hand in under the lapel of the older man's coat, lifted a wallet lightly from its pocket, and stood upright again. Then, with a shrug that was almost one of pity as he looked down at the still silent millionaire, he turned away and slipped out of the room.

The departing woman had already passed through the street door before he could overtake her. She stopped wonderingly at his call to her.

"Mr. Golden, madam, seems to have changed his mind. Here are a few hundred dollars from him, which may be of material assistance to you in this matter you spoke of."

Manley, who had taken the roll of bills from the wallet, was quite solemn-faced as he handed the money to the equally solemn-faced woman. Yet the shadow of a smile played about his lips as he watched the austere figure in black disappear from sight. Then he turned back to the library.

There he found Golden pacing back and forth, padding grotesquely about from pocket to pocket. "Manley, my wallet's gone!" was

The Emissary in Oak.

Midway betwen that portion of New York harbor, known as the Upper bay, and the open reaches of the sea that wash up the sands of Manhattan beach, lies a district that might be fittingly denominated as No Man's land. One of the least savory habitations adorning that fringe of a city's flotsam was the ruinous boathouse of at it hungrily, from half-closed eyes, a certain Oyster Joe.

And Oyster Joe, the river pirate, his still muscular limbs, the looseness of his entire surroundings, all united to proclaim him a lover of the cup that can cheer and at the same time inebriate. This fact, indeed, was further evidenced by the earnestness with which Oyster Joe, himself making his way into the sail loft, lifted a worn tarpaulin aside and studied a row of cognac casks.

So intent was his study of this wealth of joy to be that he saw and heard nothing of a slender-bodied stranger who quietly approached his abode, entered it, and stared studiously about. What made this intruder even more mysterious was the fact that across the upper part of his face he wore a narrow band of yellow cloth.

The movements of this mysterious stranger were marked by celerity. When his investigations, in fact, were suddenly interrupted by a sound which grew louder along the narrow road winding inland through the salty marshes, he crept to the door, peered out and prepared himself for a promised intruder. For approaching Oyster Joe's boathouse he could plainly make out a two-horse wagon driven by a slattern-shouldered a. d white-bearded man of about sixty.

The masked intruder crept back through the boathouse, entered the sail loft and stealthily approached the still musing figure of Oyster Joe. In a moment he had the old pirate bound and gagged. Then, hearing the wagon wheels almost at the door, the stranger dragged his inert captive to a nearby beam, lashed him to it and over him threw the tarpaulin from the cognac casks.

Slipping back to the outer rooms the masked stranger drew his revolver and stood close in beside the shadow of the door, calmly waiting for the the wagon.

From the mouth behind the white whiskers came a squeak, like the unexpectedly into his startled old face. Before he could quite recover from The is. It was not until that driver was well away from the waterfront and had rounded many a corner, that he ventured to pull up and tap on the oak staves beside him.

"It's all right!" he called out as he felt about the rough oak and found the hidden spring. "Just hold steady now, and I'll help you out." The girl uttered a sigh of thankfulness as they once more got under way.

"There's always help around, Casavanti, in a case like this," proclaimed the scoffing Legar as a white-whiskered old figure in bottle-green coat and hat laboriously rolled the cask of liquor through the opened door. The Owl, with unlooked-for nimbleness in one of her years, was already close at hand, waiting with bung starter and glasses.

Margory watched the suddenly clamorous group as they clustered about the open barrel. Her heart sank as glasses were refilled and the clamor, instead of diminishing, grew louder and louder.

Then, even as she stood depressed and troubled by this thought, a soft pedal seemed to be slowly applied to the tumult about her. The soporific Owl herself, stumbling to a chair, sank inertly into it. Then one after another they sank into dreamless stupor.

It was then, and only then, that Margory dared to move. She studiously stared at that uncouth company of sleepers. Then, no longer watching them, but with her eyes on the man who had already alighted from door through which their lookout might at any moment appear, she groped her way to the side of the barrel. There she felt about the blacksqueak of a rat behind a wainscoting, ened oak barrel top for the hidden as the stranger's revolver was thrust spring. A gasp of relief escaped her lips as she found it. They might, indeed, have remained gurgling and writhing there like two tethered copperheads while the carecient vintage, and having there conferred with a lush dip in hiding from the flatties of Manhattan, decided to circle homeward by way of Oyster Joe's, in the hope of that refreshment which had more than once cheered him on his dusty journeys. Instead of finding refreshment, however, he unearthed two ferocious-eyed and dry-throated captives, who, when released, danced and gesticulated incoherently about their habitation. Then, when speech had returned to them the visit of the mysterious stranger was explained and the necessity of getting in touch with Legar made plain.

It was not long, accordingly, before three men and a car naively missing on one cylinder went coughing inland along the narrow road threading those uncounted acres of sea marsh. They were within fifty paces of a cross-roads landmark known as Chimney-Pot Corner when a bellow not unlike that of a branded range steer burst from the indignant throat of Old Eli. For that worthy had the unique experience of beholding not only his own purloined team and wagon, but a disconcertingly lifelike replica of himself driving it. Scupulo, with the genius of a true general, arrested the progress of that wagon by promptly stopping his car directly in its track. This collision in no way improved the vehicle of ancient vintage; but sterner issues were at hand. A moment later the belligerent trio from the broken car were trimphantly charging for Margory Golden and her guardian. That guardian, fully realizing the meaning of the charge, tossed his reins to the frightened girl and commanded her to drive for all she was worth. Then he himself prepared for invaders.

It was to the first comer that he directed his main attention, for Scupulo, he noticed, already held a knife in his swarthy hand. One well-placed kick on the clenching knuckles, however, sent that glimmering icicle of steel circling off into the road-dust, and an equally well-placed blow on the jaw sent the owner of the knife after

And before they re- row band of a yellow mask, a yellow gained either their feet or their men- mask which covered the eyes and the tal faculties, the wagon itself was well upper part of the head. But below the on its way.

Yet the driver of that wagon knew that his escape was only a temporary was a smiling one.

"We've got to get out of this!" he cailed to the lurching girl at his side, as he seized the reins and caught up a whip. "We've got a run of a mile and "And the bunch a'ready soused wit' more before we can reach Bohawkin bridge and help!"

He lashed the team forward. "We've got to get to that bridge!"

The girl suddenly caught at his arm. "I can see a car!" she called out. 'It's following us! It's gaining on us! Again the driver plied his whip.

"Are they still gaining?" he asked, moment later. "Yes," was the girl's answer. "But see, there's the bridge ahead of us!" "By the help of God, we can make it!" suddenly exulted the man at the reins, for already his tired team was plunging up the incline of the bridge approach. They were on the bridge now, thundering across the draw.

A power house attendant, framed in his grimy doorway, stared at them in wonder.

"Lift your draw!" frenziedly commanded the stranger. "Stop that car! For God's sake stop that car!"

But the man in the jumper saw no reason for any such action. The other. brushing him aside, leaped to the control lever. The outraged bridgetender at the same moment leaped for the intruder.

But that intruder, for all this sudden attack, was not to be turned from his purpose. The lever was thrown over and one end of the massive draw responding to the impulse of the equal ly massive machinery, rose slowly from the lip of the dusty roadway.

Legar's car was already thundering across its span as that network of steel began to lift. But the increasing incline of the draw, for all the car's momentum sucked from that straining engine its added strength, retarded a little and yet a little more the hurrying wheels. But in the ascension of the draw-end there was no delay.

It was then and then only that a sudden shout rose from the car. Five men, realizing what lay before them stood up in their seats as that throbbing and pulsing thing on wheels, mounting to the edge of the draw, for one moment poised there, and then dropped, like a poolball in its pocket, to the riverbed below.

It was not until then that the be whiskered man at the control lever be came fully conscious of the fact that the engineer in the oil-stained jumper was striking and clawing at his intent body. He endured that assault until the lever had been reversed and the draw started back on its descent Then, wheeling, the stranger sped across the draw and leaped into the waiting wagon, "Look!" cried the girl, pointing to the riverbed beneath them. There the stranger could see Legar of his swollen lips, the unkemptness "I like the spirit in this girl. > "I was hoping," said the stranger as he caught up the reins, "that this would be the last of him!" "Why should you hope that?" asked the girl at his side as they went lurching onward again. "I hoped it for your sake," was his answer.

"But who are you, that you should do all this for me?" "Look back and make sure we're not

By FANNY GRAY.

Lucy Cutler was helping her mother finish the Saturday cleaning and baking, and was rebelling in her soul. Not that she so particularly disliked the work itself, but the thought that she had to do that kind of thing day after day, with not even a maid servant's wage, stirred her to anger. Her father, a prosperous farmer, could well afford to pay for it, as she knew, yet he seemed to think it was the natural and proper thing for herself and her younger sister, Florence, to scrub along, week after week, satisfied with an occasional small sum with which to buy necessities.

When Lucy finished her work, she started to walk rather aimlessly down the road to rest and cool off. Her father had just acquired, through a foreclosure, a piece of property of about two acres adjoining his land, on which was a picturesque little cottage. As she reached a place in the road opposite the new property, she stopped to admire the tiny house and the old-fashioned flowers bordering the walk, as well as the climbing roses over the porch.

Just then Fred Emerson came along, and the two stood there together. Fred was a hustling young chap, with quite a bank account already. He had for some time been casting longing glances in Lucy's direction, but, being somewhat bashful, he had not progressed very far in his wooing.

Now, as they wewed together the snug bit of land and the house, with the "For Sale" sign against the stone wall, a thought of himself and Lucy in such a home rushed into his mind, and he wanted to give expression to it; but all he found himself saying was that it made him think of the little tea house some women had opened the summer before in Riverside.

An idea flashed through Lucy's mind. As soon as Fred went on, she rushed back to the farmhouse and found her mother.

"Mother, what's father going to do with the Clapp house?" "Why, nothin' this year that I know of. Of course, he wants to sell it." "Would he let me use the cottage, do you think, mether?" "Use the cottage! For the land's sake, child, what for?" "Well, I've got an idea. You remember when I visited Aunt Carrie last summer in Riverside? Some women set up tea house not half so pretty as the Clapp place and sold tea and things to motorists over there, and Aunt Carrie said they made a lot of in reluctantly. The girls worked with a will all the next week. They cleaned out the little cottage themselves. It was in pretty good order already and was furnished. There were three rooms on the ground floor. They turned the parlor, which was the largest, into the tea room proper, and made a sort of serving room of the dining room. The small piazza, they decided, would hold three tables. Mother loaned her best white and gold eggshell china. which seldom saw the light of day, and agreed to supply the first biscuit. Two or three days before they were ready, Lucy put a sign out on the lawn near the street, announcing the opening of the tea house. The first afternoon she told herself they really must not expect anyone; but her heart beat high with expectation just the same, as she and Florence, in white muslin dresses and dainty aprons, waited in the cottage.

"A man and woman driving through the country in a buggy were their first guests. A motorcyclist and one large automobile party made up the list for the day, and they thought it very encouraging, even if father did sniff a bit when told. Fred Emerson dropped in around six o'clock, just to cheer them up, he said. But it was noticeable that the cheering process lasted all through the prosperous season which followed.

The tea house was a great success, on the whole, and when the time came to close it and Lucy counted up the exact profit, she was highly elated and began at once to plan for the next year.

Her surprise was very great when her father told her that the cottage was no longer his to dispose of. It had been sold, and she must apply to the new owner for a lease, that owner being Fred Emerson.

For some reason, which she didn't quite comprehend herself, Lucy felt shy about going to him. But one day when she was alone at the cottage, putting away the last things for that season, Fred appeared. Lucy began

"Father told me you had bought the place, Fred. I want to know if I can have it again next year, and what the rent will be." It isn't necessary for us to know in just what words Fred told her that the house was hers on one condition, and that he had been determined to own it and install her as mistress ever since the first day he watched her moving about in it, looking so sweet and dainty, serving tea to her guests. She must have accepted the condition, for the next summer saw the little cottage transformed into a comfortable, livable home, and there were biscuits and tea, but the order was for two.
