Couple Stole Household Goods. under arrest Monday forenoon by John and Etta Hutton were placed Officers Cooper and Dillon for the theft of about forty different articles Sunday from the home, of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Stevens, who reside in a house owned by Mrs. Allison Knee on

Jackson street. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were away from home spending the day at some of the near by lakes. Upon returning home they found that Mr. and Mrs: Hutton, who had been occupying a room there since last Thursday had disappeared. The officers captured the couple near the home of Chris H. Kalmbach in Sylvan. The couple claimed that their former home was in Buffalo, New York, and that they lost it recently by fire. They are about 44 years of age and had been in Chelsea for a week. Mrs. Knee also says that the couple took three blankets from her house, which they cut up and manufactured into "holders" which they endeavered to sell about town.

The couple were given a hearing before Justice Witherell, who gave them a sentance of ten days in the county jail at Ann Arbor. Officer Cooper took them to the jail Monday

"My Home Town Girl."

Theatergoers who remember John Hyams and Leila McIntyre in their great success, "The Girl of My Dreams" will be glad to learn that the popular stars have been reclaimed from vaudeville and are being featured in Perry J. Kelly's new musical offering, "My Home Town Girl" which comes to the Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, Saturday, September 16, matinee and night. Frank Stammers, author of the book and lyrics, has provided Mr. Hyams with the most fitting role of his career and the new piece is pronounced the greatest musical success of several seasons. The music is by Louis A. Hirsch, author of "Hello Frisco" and of the song hits in Florenz Ziegfeld's last "Follies" production.

"My Home Town Girl" is a striking bit of work and the best that Mr. Stammers has done. It is written tor Hyams and McIntyre and allows Mr. Hyams to make characteristic use of an assortment of humorous situations and speeches, while Miss McIntyre is seen in a characterization of a demure, sweet girl, the kind of a role in which she is a distinct favorite. Pretty singing and dancing girls and songs that bear the label of real hits fit in with the genuine humor of the piece to render it a delight to audiences.

The two stars are supported by a notable New York cast, all of whom are well known in musical comedy and dramatic productions. A company of fifty people in all. The company carries its own symphony orchestra.

The Steinbach hill on the territorial road, in Lima township was the scene of a fatal automobile accident about 5 o'clock Wednesday after-

Frank L. Arndt, of Michigan City, Ind., the owner and driver of the car, Ben E. Adams and Henry Snyder, of Jackson, and a woman were the members of the automobile party which started out for Detroit.

The party made a short stop in Chelsea. When the machine started down the grade all went well until near the foot of the hill when the car skidded and upset. Adams was pinned beneath the car, and an examination by Dr. G. W. Palmer showed that his death was caused by strangulation. Adams was sitting in the front seat. ELECTING A PRESIDENT

INCOLN, having been assassinated, was succeeded in office by Andrew Johnson, who was vice president. The war had ended. Grant had returned a hero. The Republicans nominated the general, while the Democrats put forward Horatio Seymour of New York. The south, having been defeated, again participated in this election and supported Seymour.

The election of 1872 was an exciting one. Horace Greeley, formerly a Republican, had disagreed with his party and ran on the Democratic ticket and the Liberal Republican ticket. Grant was again the Republican nominee. There were four other minor candidates. Grant received 3,597,070 votes and Gree lev 2.834.079.

TO hold "its place in the sun," is the avowed purpose of a great nation's conflict. To hold "its place in the sun," is the object of every business in the great fight for industrial and commercial supremacy.

To be able to hold "its place in the sun," is the supreme test of an asphalt roof. It is the sun, not rain or snow, that plays havoc with a roof. If it can resist the drying out process of the sun beating down upon it, day after day, the rain or snow will not affect it except to wash it clean and keep it sanitary.

Certain-teed

takes "its place in the sun" and holds it longer than other similar roofing, because it is made of the very best quality roofing felt, thoroughly saturated with the correct blend of soft asphalts, and coated with a blend of harder asphalts. This outer coating keeps the inner saturation soft, and prevents the drying out process so destructive to the ordinary roof.

The blend of asphalts used by "The General" is the result of long experience. It produces a roofing more pliable than those which have less saturation, and which are, therefore, harder and drier.

At each of the General's big mills, expert chemists are constantly employed to refine, test and blend the asphalts used; also to experiment for possible improvements. Their constant endeavor is to make the best roofing still better.

The quality of CERTAIN-TEED is such that it is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to thickness (1, 2 or 3 ply). Experience proves that it lasts longer. Behind this guarantee is the responsibility of the world's largest manufacturer of roofings and building papers.

By FANNY GRAY.

Nathan Leach was a spoiled only son when Lena Clark married him. His mother had slaved for him all his life, and but for the fact that his was a naturally sunny, unselfish nature, his upbringing would have spelled ruina-

On the whole, however, he was a pretty good sport, and Lena, who had married him with her eyes open, had little cause for complaint. Naturally, he had imbibed the idea that it was woman's place to do all she could to please man, especially to cater to his stomach; for "mother" had always striven to gratify his appetite, and many a time, when scarcely able, hadslaved over a hot stove to get up a meal that should please him and his farmer father.

Now Lena was something of a cook herself, and rather proud of it, though she did yield the palm to her motherin-law in-some things. When they were first married, Nathan had complimented her highly; but, after a time, he had become more critical, and unconsciously fell into the habit of comparing his own table with his mother's.

Lena took it good naturedly, always had a ready answer and so friction was avoided. But the habit grew until it became a very pernicious one, and Lena woke up at last to realize that she never served a meal that did not bring forth some comment or criticism.

She turned the situation over and over in her mind, wondering how she could meet it.

Finally she hit upon a plan. Nathan's mother was a pretty good sort, after all. And, although she had been weak and had spoiled her son, she recognized the fact and regretted it. Knowing this, Lena decided to go to her for help in her trouble.

She laid the case before her, and the older woman entered into her plan most readily.

A few days after Lena's conference with Mrs. Leach, Nathan received a letter from his mother, who lived several miles away, stating that she would arrive on the next day to pay them a visit of a week.

The next morning, at breakfast, after a slightly adverse comment on the coffee, Nathan began: "I do hope you'll be real careful, Lena, about the cooking while mother's here. She's a right smart hand at it, is mother, and I shouldn't want her to think I wasn't havin' as good victuals as she used to set before me."

Mrs. Leach arrived. Dinner the first day passed off very well, but afterward Nathan took occasion to say, Second Modern Girl-I'll tell you when he and Lena were alone, "Say, Lena, if there's one thing mother can cook it's beefsteak, and that we had today wasn't up to the mark-not by a good deal." "That so?" said Lena quietly. "Well, didn't see anything the matter with it. Your mother ate her share all right, and acted as if she liked it,

"Oh, she'd seem to. You know that. But I tell you it was overdone."

Lena didn't answer, and Nathan said no more then. But similar scenes took place during the whole of his mother's visit. Possibly he criticized a little less openly than he had been doing at the table, but Lena had to listen to complaints and comparisons till it was wonder how good-naturedly she bore

Sometimes, in the presence of both, he would refer to the things "mother used to make," half jokingly, or ask Lena to get the recipe for this thing or that.

On the last day of Mrs. Leach's stay, Nathan came in at noon to find Lena lying down on the sofa and his mother ready to take up the dinner and serve him. In response to inquiries, Lena made light of her indisposition, and even ventured the statement that she was feeling so much better maybe she would come to the table.

"Your mother got the dinner, Nathan," she said, as Mrs. Leach was taking up the beefsteak and vegetables. "I am sure you'll enjoy it." "You bet I will," agreed Nathan, drawing up his chair. "Seems just as if I was at home again."

Everything came in for praise. Never was steak so exactly right, potatoes couldn't be more mealy, and as for the hot biscuits and rhubarb pie-well, they were perfect.

Nathan drove his mother home in the cool of the early evening. When he returned, Lena, having recovered remarkably well from her illness of the morning, sat on the piaza, waiting for

There was something she wanted to say, but, somehow, now the momenthad come, she couldn't seem to find the right words. But her mother-inlaw had done all the enlightening for

Nathan felt his way in the dark to the chair near hers, and both kept silence for a few moments. Then Nathan spoke: "Mother told me all about how you and she have made a fool of me all this week-her doin' all the cookin' and neither of you lettin' on but what it was you. Well, I don't know but I deserved it. Anyhow, she says I did. I guess I was kinder fallin' into bad habits."

This being a good deal from Nathan, Lena met him half way.

"I always knew you didn't mean it, Nathan, but it used to hurt, just the same. I'm glad you're not angry at the joke. Let's start all over again." "Sure thing," said Nathan.

EXPECT TO RAISE BIG SUM

Anti-Tuberculosis Societies Plan Sale of One Million Dollars' Worth of Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Three hundred million Red Cross Christmas seals are being printed in Cincinnati for the annual holiday campaign to be conducted under the joint auspices of the American Red Cross and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The campaign for the sale of the Red Cross seals this year will be larger than ever before. Although in 1915 the sale reached the record total of 80,000,000 seals, bringing in $800,000, it is expected that this year at least 100,-000,000 seals or $1,000,000 worth will be sold. The sale will be organized from Alaska to the Canal Zone and from Hawaii to Perto Rico. Every state and territory in the United States will have seals on sale. New organizations will be working in a number of the western states, including Montana, Utah and Wyoming. Distribution of the seals is now under way.

sold for a Christmas present." A. Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:-

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. MARGARET GRASS-MAN, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass .- "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. George A. Durbar, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. Kissling, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa. No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and hold in strict confidence.

Three strong reasons urge you to buy the Ford car: First, because of its record of satisfactory service to more than fifteen hundred thousand owners; Second, because of the reliability of the Company which makes it; Third, because of its large radiator and enclosed fan, streamline hood, crown fenders front and rear, black finish, nickel trimmings, it is most attractive in appearance. To these must be added its wonderful economy in operation and maintenance-about two cents a mile; likewise the fact that by reason of its simplicity in construction anyone can operate and eare for it. Nine thousand Ford agents make Ford service as universal as the car.

One Sunday Morning

By HAROLD CARTER

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

James Randall, standing at his garden gate, was at peace with all the world that sunny morning in early summer. His wife and daughter were at church; he himself had been kept in by a cold, but the weather was so balmy that it had tempted him into the garden. As he stood there, secure in his sense of social integrity, not a memory of the past troubled him.

Up the street came a tramp. Randall frowned. Tramps were not en-couraged in that suburban district, which prided itself upon its social order. The man stopped at the gate and regarded him quietly.

"Got a dime to spare, mister?" he Randall's hand sought his pocket. It was his instinct to be charitable, but on second thought he refrained. The man might be an impostor. No man needed to be out of work these days. "I guess there was a time when you done your bit of panhandling," said the beggar, sneering. Randall looked at him with growing horror, clutched at the bars of the gate and breathed like a man with apoplexy. "Yes, Jim, it's me-Bright," said the tramp. "I found you at last, and I guess I'm going to talk to you. I chose church warden, I guessed you wouldn't want folks to see us together. There's an hour yet before your folks come home. You see," he added, with a

"I got you pretty well down in black and white before I come here. "Come into the garden," said Ran-

The tramp followed him in, and they sat down on the bench in front of the living room. The tramp could see into the neatly furnished house.

"Sort of spick and span, ain't it?" said the tramp. "A little different from the state penitentiary, I guess. Maybe your memory carries you back fifteen years?" he added, banteringly. "What do you want? Blackmail? demanded Randall roughly.

The tramp put out a bony hand and gripped him by the shoulder.

"More," he said laconically. "I want the thing you hold dearest in life, Jim. No, not your life, your reputation. I'm going to put you out of your home and make you ashamed to meet the eyes of your neighbors you-you blackguard, you cur!'

Randall did not say a word, but shivered upon the seat, as if struck by ague, in spite of the sun.

"Fifteen years ago," the tramp continued, twisting his mouth as if a spasm of pain was racking him, "you and I was inmates of the penitentiary. Correct? I see it is. I was serving three years for robbery, and you-you'd stolen thousands from them that trusted you, and had a sentence of fifteen years. You'd just about have come out now if we hadn't-hadn't-"

His voice broke. Randall might have tried to take advantage of his weakness to plead with him, but he only sat dumbly beside him. "I was dying of tuberculosis," continued the other presently. "When they transferred us to the new penitentiary you made me a proposition. If we'd change names and sentences. it wouldn't matter to me, because I'd soon be dead, and you swore you'd look after my little girl as long as you lived-she that was alone in the world, that hadn't any chance in life but that of an asylum orphan. You swore it. Well! You liar, you hound, where is

Lily? Did you ever find her?" Randall still returned no answer. "You didn't, you dog!" swore the and waited for the message that was to come to me and never came. Then I determined that I wouldn't die. I'd serve out my fifteen years-your fifteen years—and I'd come back, and was terrific, but still he refrained from don Tit-Bits.

answering. After a few moments the tramp cooled, he seemed possessed by a devil of vengeance.

"I meant to take your life," he said. "I thought I'd find you among the kind you used to mix with. But when I tracked you here and found you was respected, a church warden, and the head of the Young People's league, and all that sort of graft, and had a wife and girl, I saw your measly life wasn't any use to me. I resolved to take other means. First I'll ruin you, and then I'll hound you back to the penitentiary to serve out your fifteen

Randall lifted his head and spoke. "But that won't give you back your daughter," he said gently.

The tramp sprang to his feet. "You know where she is!" he swore.

Randall got up. There was a new dignity in his manner as he confronted the other. "Yes, I know," he answered. "She is happily married, to a man who is kind to her, and she knows nothing of her father. And I shall never tell you where she is."

"You're lying!" jeered the tramp. You never went near her. If you had, you'd have taken her for your own. And you haven't got an adopted daughter, nor never had. You lie, just as you used to lie."

Randall gazed impassively down the street. He saw that folks were leaving the church and strolling homeward. Among them were his wife and daughter, happy, little dreaming of what the future had in store for them. The fellow saw his look and interpreted it

"Quick, now," he said roughly. hold off until I can go and see whether -whether you kept your word to me. If you don't tell me I'll denounce you. Quick, now!"

"You can do what you like," said Randall, "but you will never know. Sunday because, hearing you was a Do you think I am going to let an in- and one-half pounds and was one of knowledge that she has a convict fa-

> "Well, I am," answered the other. "You won't take your chance? Here's your folks coming. For the last time?" "No," answered Randall.

His wife and daughter entered the gate and came into the garden, then, seeing Randall in conversation with a tramp, hesitated. The tramp looked at them in astonishment. Somehow, now that his vengeance was at hand, he hesitated to use it.

"Will you come here, my dear?" has something to say."

Wondering, the woman approached. face in amazement. He opened his lips, but no sound came from them. Then he turned to Randall.

"I guess I'll go," he said roughly, "If you can't get me a job, she can't."

"You thought I wouldn't recognize Parents Should Early Instill This Best of All Virtues in the Minds of Their Children.

Teach your children to be truthful. Impress upon them that if they tell you the truth they will be given far less punishment than they would receive if they lied to you. The parent who has a child he can rely on to tell the truth is fortunate. It is worth a good deal to know where anyone stands, and a truthful child is the most teachable one, for you know where to find him.

Truth-telling raises the standard of everyone who is known to possess this good quality.

Those who tell the truth may not always be the most popular, but they never fail to command respect, and that is worth a great deal more.

The man whose word can be relied upon occupies an enviable place in the community.

The place is not overcrowded. A truthful man follows a truthful youngster. Truthfulness is a habit of

It may take some time and tact to make a truthful boy out of that lad of yours, but it is worth all the effort it requires. Set an example of truth, but do not let it end there. The secret of success in everything worth while in this life lies in the habit of truth. Truth is the eternal law of being.

A handsomely dressed damsel entered a crowded tramcar. A roughlooking old fellow, wearing a dilapidated hat and a suit of homespun clothes, rose to his feet.

"Miss, take my seat. I don't look as well as these 'ere gentlemen," he said, nodding to several men, "but I've got more politeness."

Without a word of thanks the young woman sat down. "Miss," said the old fellow, with a smile, "I believe I left my tobacco-

"Old Grouch," as Randall, the treas rer, was called, was the hardest member of the corporation. This much universally admitted. Nobody ever went to him for a raise of salary without a sinking heart, for whatever Randall did was done grudgingly.

Yet the few who were in the know were aware how deeply the acid of life had eaten into Randall's soul. His only daughter had died, five years before, just after graduating from Vassar. His only son had gone to the bad and run away from home prior to. that. Once the boy had come to the father's door; but Randall had sent out a curt message by the servant that he would not see him.

Of late Randall had been conscious that he was growing old. He had wondered whether he might not have dealt with the lad more kindly. He had heard nothing of Horace since that visit, which had been shortly after his daughter's death. His wife had died years before; he was alone in the world, and his embitterment made it a gloomy one.

He was working at the office late that night, for the spring rush of business had started; then the department managers were overworked, and Randall had to check up their errors, which were numerous and annoying. Having to consult the books, he rose from his desk and went into the large bookkeepers' room. A man was leaning over a broom, his eyes closed, supporting himself against the wall. It was the night watchman.

Randall went up and bellowed in his ear. Kimball started and looked at him vaguely. He had been nine months in the corporation's employment, but that did not assuage Randall's anger.

"You're a fine watchman!" bellowed the treasurer. "You can get your money in the morning!"

"Mr. Randall-" the man began to stammer.

"Not a word, now. Think we hired you to sleep here, I suppose?"

He left the discomfited man and walked back to his desk, growling. One could trust nobody. Thieves might enter while Kimball was sleeping. He forgot all about the books.

To Randall's indignation and astonishment his seat was no longer empty. A tiny, neat little girl, with flaxen curls that hung about her shoulders, was seated in his chair, scribbling all over his blotting pad. Anger rendered Randall mute.

Then the little girl looked up and smiled at him. Something in Randall's heart seemed to rise up and fill his throat. Minnie had smiled like that—and this child looked like Minnie.

"Well! Who are you?" demanded Randall gruffly. "I'm Leonora, and I'm not a bit afraid of you," answered the child. "How did you get here? Kimball brought you, eh?"

The child nodded. "He often brings me, only he tells me not to let you see me, because you're an old grouch." "I guess I'm an old grouch all right," said Randall. "But you can't make me afraid of you," said the child. "People say you're terrible. Papa says so." "I guess I am. Somebody's got to

"I'd hate to be you," said Leonora. Randall glared at her. At first he could not find words to say. He was thinking that he hated to be himself. At last he found his tongue. "Kimball!" he bellowed.

The watchman appeared. He stood looking in dismay, first at the child and then at the treasurer.

"Got any good reason, for being asleep on duty?" Randall inquired. The watchman's face flushed heavily. "I was up all last night with my sister's husband," he answered. 'That's his child."

Randall began to notice that Kin ball had the speech of an educated man. Strange that he had not noticed it in those nine months!

"He's getting over an attack of pneumonia," continued Kimball. "What does he do for a living?" asked Randall; and yet he could not imagine why he was interested.

"Well, sir, like me, he was brought up in a rich home, and we were both wasters in our youth. I couldn't turn my hand to anything, and he's the same. I guess we're both sorry now. He was watchman with Wiley company till it dissolved."

"Yes, I know," Randall sneered. Both born to better things and can't hold down a watchman's job. Heretake yourself off and take the child

They went away, the little girl shaking her hand at him and laughing. Randall, when they were gone, sat at his desk thinking. His life was passing in review before him, the empty years, the thankless years. What if he had dealt hardly with the boy?

He cursed himself for a sentimentalist. Why should these thoughts come to him now? And yet-well, he might give Kimball another chance. He might do that. He would give him that vacancy in the clerical department. And the girl! It was odd how she reminded him of Minnie. His daughter had looked just like that when 'she was a child.

He rose and went home, frowning, and anyone who had met him on the road would have thought he was the surliest looking man that he had encountered in many a day. But once in his room the old man paced the floor, shaking his head and conscious of the same sense of uselessness.

He refused three applications for increase of salary, scolded the department managers noundly, and made himself even more feared than usual. He, "Old Grouch," was going to tell the man that he could come to work at eight, as usual. Poor devil of a watchman! He was not so much to blame, if his story was true!

The address was a poor street off Third avenue. Randall gazed around him in disgust as he passed through the slum. A drunken man was clinging to a post. Two shrews were scolding each other from different doorways. What a place in which to bring up a child! Suppose it had been

Then he was aware of a tiny figure at his side, and the little girl was looking up into his face.

"Old Grouch!" she lisped."

Grouch, come and see papa!" It was strange that the child's touch turned his will to water. Randall suffered her to lead him by the hand. He went into a dark passage and halted at the door of a tiny room. It was almost dark inside, but he heard the woman sobbing at the side of the man who lay there. She rose and turned and faced him.

"I am your son's wife," she said with simple dignity. And in the dark Randall, incredulous, saw the figure upon the bed. "I guess it was a mistake," the woman continued. "This is my little girl, and Mr. Kimball has been taking her to the office nights while my husband was ill. You didn't know, and-there is no need to stay, Mr. Randall." Randall struck a match with trembling fingers and looked at the man on the bed. He saw the fever-flushed face of his own son, whom he had thought gone forever. And then the man's will broke. "Old Grouch" kneeled down at his side.

"Horace!" he whispered, taking his hand in his. "Horace, you will come home! I have come to take you home-you and your wife, and-and Leonora. I have wanted you-heaven knows how much," he continued. "Only I didn't know it."

Prohibition History in Michigan

Back in the late 60's and early 70's there was prohibition all over the state of Michigan. Everything was WIDE OPEN. Any man who could get money to buy a jug of whiskey could sell it as long as there was a drop left-and there was liquor sold the whole 24 hours of the day and night.

It got unbearable, a regular reign of terror, and even the temperance cranks united with the rest of the citizens in Ann Arbor to pass an ordinance to license saloons.

This was gotten around, for there was no mention made of the sale of liquor, simply saloons. The saloon-keepers were put under $300 bonds that their places were to be closed at certain hours.

There was a Mr. Kidson who questioned the validity of this enactment.

The supreme court held that the ordinance was valid and could be enacted even while prohibition was in the state—the ordinance having said nothing regarding the sale of liquor.

I never saw so much drunkenness among students as there was during this prohibition period.

Mystery of the Alligators Found in Rock Creek

ASHINGTON.—There are no sharks in the District, it is true, but until recently there were live and uncivilized alligators disporting themselves in Rock creek near the zoo. They had not escaped from the alligator pond at the zoo, in fact, the authorities are in the dark as to how they got in the creek. It might have rained alligators, or maybe some person who had them as pets let them stray down the street in an unguarded moment. Anyway, they appeared suddenly near the zoo.

It was a most astonished keeper who looked on the bank of the creek one morning and saw Mrs. Alligator stretched out sunning herself. Assistance was hurriedly called and a posse went after the alligator. It slid off into been water, but was rounded up by the men who had pursued it into the creek.

They captured it, and it is now among the alligator collection in the lighhouse It was a large 'gator, too. Superintendent Baker said that "it was big enough to take a nice piece out of one's leg, if one were wading in the creek," It was about four fest long, of a very wigglesome disposition, and by last reports is doing well. It has been named Bessie. But that by no means finished the 'gator shower. The morning after its capture, another was seen, sunning itself at about the same spot on the creek bank. The posse was again organized, and hunted down the second arrival. One managed to catch it by the tail, but it had to be shot before it could be

Where Uncle Sam Cares for 3,200 Insane Persons

N THE southern outskirts of Washington there is a large country estate which belongs to the government. Extending over several hundred acres of green lawns and farm lands are 60 brick buildings and frame cottages which house over 3.200 residents. There are all the appurtenances of a self-support- UNCLE ing colony, from a blacksmith's shop to a shoe factory. There is an ice plant, a bakery, a dairy with a herd of 201 cows, and a big carpenter shop, where tools and furniture and brooms are fashioned. The residents make their own clothes, farm the land and care for the lawns, do the building and repair work and give their own theatricals in a theater built for the purpose. The colony is not a federal socialistic experiment. It is the government asylum for the insane, one of the most remarkable scientific institutions in the world. Here come psychologists from all over the United States to work in the psychological laboratory, as well as many eminent alienists from abroad, who, while coming to observe and study, bring many new and interesting theories with them. For the last 25 years the asylum has been under the superintendence of Dr. William A. White. a psychologist of the modern school and an admirable executive who has worked out the present unique system by which all necessities are produced by the patients within the confines of the grounds. As an economic expedient not much can be said in favor of the system, since the great majority of the articles manufactured could be bought very much cheaper direct from factories, but the work serves to keep the patients occupied and contented.

Every day any number of patients may be seen laboring busily about the atting the grass, working the farm and feeding the poultry and cattle and if it were not for the pathetic similarity of expression on their faces, the bread iron bars on the windows of the houses and the high brick wall which completely surrounds the grounds you would imagine that Uncle Sam was conducting a summer agricultural and industrial college.

St. Elizabeth's, as the asylum is called, was established by the government n 1855, primarily for the military insane, although it was also to take care of the insane of the District of Columbia, who at that time were not very numerous, Now, in addition, it receives all the insanity cases of the federal prisons, for which there is a special building securely barred and elaborately

Veteran of Civil War Repeats March in Capital

The hundreds of people that thronged the avenue stopped and gazed curiously after the erect and soldierly looking veteran as he marched as he did over half a century ago. Sergeant Kirk applied for a permit to make the march several days before, and Major Pullman told him he dd not need one. The sergeant explained that he simply wished to make the arch in memory of days gone by. No one knew the purpose of the "parade," but many, seeing his quaint miform, and thereby knowing him to be a veteran of America's great war, theered him along the route.

EXPERIMENT A BIT FOR THE NEXT CROP

it Is Sort of Adventure to Try Necessary Operation in Many In-Out Something for Yourself on Small Scale.

(By BREEZE BOYACK, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.) Why not plan for a bit of an experiment for yourself, next crop season? As you go about the business of cultivating and harvesting this year's crops, you often wonder what some other crop might do; make a mental note of it, and try out that crop on a small scale next year. Why not? It's a bit of an adventure.

Do not wait for someone to do your experimenting for you. The successful business man is the one who is first in the field. Of course, if your community has settled upon a variety as a community enterprise, as is done with peas, potatoes, apples, alfalfa, etc., it is not wise to depart from it.

Always try just a little of anything new-a quarter acre, a half acre, or even an acre. Give it just average ground-it is better right alongside the standard crop. Don't baby it. Make it prove its worth, if it has any.

Grafting fruit trees is an easy thing to do where necessary. And it is necessary in many instances whenever apples and pears are grown and the best varieties are desired. In numerous instances I have grafted both apple and pear trees from real small to large ones and greatly improved the quality of the fruit, says a writer in an exchange. In most cases it is the seedlings that are improved for fruit hearing by grafting. Some of our best standard apples and pears, indeed most of them, have come from seedto be depended upon for fine large good breeds. fruit. An entirely new top is at once begun by grafting a seedling some three years of age. The entire upper portion is sawed off from two to three feet above the ground or at the point where the stock is just large enough to receive two scions.

UNIFORM COLOR IS DESIRED

Coloring Should Be Added Just Before Churning Begins-Overchurning Is Undesirable.

A uniform color in the butter from one season to the other is desirable, hence during the winter when the cows are getting dry feed a little coloring should be added. Too much coloring, however, is very undesirable. When coloring is used it should be added just before the churning begins.

Stopping the churn at the proper time has much to do with the quality of the butter. It should be stopped when the butter is in the form of granules about the size of a kernel of wheat or a trifle larger. When the butter is churned to too small granules many of them will go through the buttermilk strainer and will cause more or less loss. Overchurning is undesirable because the butter will retain considerable buttermilk, which is difficult to remove and which also tends to cause the butter to deteriorate faster. As soon as the churning has been completed, the buttermilk should be drawn

BLACKLEG IS TO BE AVOIDED

Infectious Disease Usually Attacks Cattle Between Ages of Six Months and Two Years.

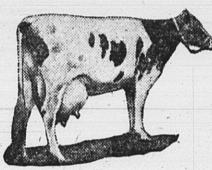

The infectious disease known as blackleg usually affects cattle between the ages of six months and two and one-half years. It gains entrance to the tissues through small wounds on the skin.

A swelling occurs beneath the skin on the hindquarters, the shoulder, or the lower portion of the neck. If the hand is passed over this swelling it crackles, and if cut into, a yellowish, bloody fluid flows out. The carcasses should be disinfected.

The healthy cattle should be removed from infected pastures and all susceptible cattle should be vaccinated.

The Harvard summer school students were told how easy it is to hypnotize anybody, almost as easy as "rolling off a log." The professor predicted a great field in the future for the expert in mind control. He said: "Hypnotism presents a vast field for the expert. It is so easy to produce the hypnotic trance that anyone can do it on others, but it is exceedingly dangerous when thoughtlessly or ignorantly used. tI is simply a case of increasing the suggestibility of the mind, and it can be used in medicine to cure the morphine fiend, the alcoholic fiend and all who have abnormal desires. Often only a slight hypnosis is necessary to effect a cure for nervous disorders. "Medicine, equally with law, is to be the food for the psychologist of the future. Every mental trait can be measured exactly by almost perfect standards. The old methods are obsolete and the whole science of diagnosis has been carried into the field of experiment. Psycho-analysis has a great future."

Two of a Kind. The pale-faced passenger looked out of the car window with exceeding interest. Finally he turned to his seat

"You likely think I never rode in the care before," he said, "but the fact is, pardner, I just got out of prison this mornin', and it does me good to look around. It is goin' to be mighty tough, though, facin' my old-time friends. I s'pose, though, you ain't got much idea how a man feels in a case Wke that?"

"Perhaps I have a better idea of your feelings than you think," said the other gentleman with a sad smile. "I am just getting home from congress."

Gets Attention—

First, because of its wonderfully delicious flavor—

Then again, because it is ready to eat-fresh and crisp from the package.

But the big "get attention" quality is its abundance of wellbalanced, easily digestible nourishment.
