Roup starts as a simple cold in the head. The indications are watery eyes or nostrils, dirty beaks, wheezing or coughing at night. Later the discharge becomes a thick mucus. A chicken cannot blow its nose. The nasal passage fills up, the face puffs out, the eyes swell shut, then death ensues. A little GERMOZONE in the drinking water generally prevents or check these disorders right at the start. BETTER TRY IT. 50 CENTS.

Communication.

To the People of Chelsea: I send greeting. If there is one place that I like better than another it is Chelsea and the people of Chelsea; not altogether because it is the home of my boyhood days, but because it is the home of so many good people. They are equal to the emergency every time. I find that they are handicapped by one thing, that is strong drink. I don't want to cast, any reflection on any one, but I know that every boy that went to the bad in Chelsea went through strong drink. The only plea I have to make is to every voter in Chelsea to vote dry and against home rule on the 7th of November, next.

MACHINE TO PEEL PEACHES

Industry in California Will Be Revolutionized by Remarkable Invention, Growers Predict.

There has been quietly and secretly installed at the California Peach Growas the Fresno Home Packing company's plant, a peeled peach machine which promises to revolutionize the peach industry and make it profitable to market peeled peaches at the low price of 8 or 9 cents per pound.

With the advent of the peeled peach machine, which can put out a perfect peeled peach at less cost than can be done by hand, it is predicted that there will be a big demand for the peeled peaches, and this will form one of the important outlets for the peach indus-

"Tomorrow, at nine, Warren." Warren Dean's car sped silently along the parkway to Alma's home, and neither of them spoke again until ie drew up at the curb.

"And when you have finished your ook?" he asked. "Oh, another book, perhaps; 'that's

"Alma, dear, don't think me unsympathetic. I'm as proud of your success as you are, but some day the book of your own life must have its new chapters written in. I've asked you twice for the big role in that book, and I shall continue to ask you until you confront me with a rival more formidable than your embryo books."

"We've been such good friends that I truly wish we might be more, Warren, but unless I felt that we must be more it would be unfair to us both to give you the answer you want now,' said Alma gently.

"Goodby," said Warren, at the porch steps. "And remember that if you ever want me or need me, I'll be waiting for your call."

The next day, Alma set out for a little mountain village where she worked throughout the summer on her book. By September, the book was finished, and its first installment as a sertal was going into type for the November issue of a leading magazine. Alma went from the village to a ranch.

Books, letters and magazines reached her in each semiweekly delivery, but Warren's letters had gradually become shorter and fewer.

"Ah, well," she said to herself one afternoon, "it's like a man to want to be everything or nothing, but I'll climb upon Eagle Rock with a new magazine for company, and leave all men to

"He loves me, even if he doesn't write." Alma laughed at her childishness, but the incident made her feel happy, and she descended the trail, feeling strangely elated.

When she reached the ranch house a large touring car stood at the yard gate. Alma passed hurriedly into the house. Then she heard the shrill voice of the ranchman's wife trying to get telephone connection with a big hotel at a summer resort 40 miles away. The voice came clearly through the thin walls into Alma's room. "Here they are, madam," it said, "here's the Elkton house."

"Please let me speak to Mr. Brown the desk clerk," said the woman's rich voice that had a familiar sound to Alma. When the woman spoke again Alma clapped her hand over her mouth to smother an exclamation. It was the voice of a woman she knew and disliked, but a woman famed as a bewitching widow. "This is Mrs. Atwill speaking, Mr. Brown. We lost our way and have just succeeded in locating ourselves. I'm expecting some friends from the East. Has Mr. Warren Dean of New York registered?" A brief silence "No? Then he may arrive on the seven o'clock train. If so, will you kindly tell him of our delay, and say we shall be there not later than eight? Thank you."

The next morning she was ready to laugh at herself for having spent a sleepless night. Seated under a big pine midway along a path that led to a deserted mining shaft, she looked out upon the autumn glory of the mountain sides.

In England the private motorist is no longer allowed to use gasoline freely. So much is needed for military purposes that the new restrictions are severe. High and low are being treated alike, and it is, perhaps, some consolation to the ordinary motor car owner to know that the prime minister and the speaker of the house of commons are allowed only six gallons of petrol a month. Mr. Lowther, the speaker, cannot dream of motoring as usual to Penrith, and Mr. Asquith will be hard put to it to run down to his Berkshire home for a week-end. Mr. Asquith, however, rarely uses his car in town, and can be seen any evening, unescorted, and almost unnoticed, strolling from the house back to Downing street.

As for the speaker, one day recently a traveler on the top of a South London tramcar bound for Westminster observed among his fellow-passengers the picturesque figure of Right Hon. J. W. SYNOPSIS.

Can you imagine a more tragic figure than a young girl deserted in a ratty hotel by the man with whom she eloped, and given notice that her people have cast her out of their lives and she must shift for herself? One little maiden in such a plight thought there were but two courses ahead for her. One was dishonorable. So she emptied a little black bottle into a glass of water and-well what happens is told in this installment with dramatic effect.

CHAPTER II

"Mrs. Morten."

It was three in the morning before Peter Stark, having to the best of his endurance and judgment tired Whitaker out with talking, took his hat and his departure from Whitaker's bachelor rooms. Whitaker shut the hall door and turned back wearily into his living-room. It was three in the morning; his body ached with fatigue, yet he made no move toward his bedcham-

Picking his way across a floor littered with atlases, charts, maps and guide-books, he went to the bathroom and took a bottle of chloral from the medicine closet.

What he took brought him three road has been built in China new trade hours of oblivion. He rose at eight, opportunities have sprung up and new ordered his breakfast up by telephone, markets have been created. On the bathed and dressed. When the tray upper Yangtze river in western China, came up, his mail came with it. Among a rich island empire in the Chungking others there was one letter in which consular district, having a population

Peter and I found out that we loved one another only yesterday, so we're going to be married the first of tronomer, who was slow to do what was expected of him, "if-if you would Whitaker read no more. He could guess the rest, and for the moment he felt too sick a man to go through dressed, thoughtfully; "I would rather blurring and running together beneath to the end. Indeed, the words were his gaze. After a long time he put the letter aside, absent-mindedly swallowed a cup of lukewarm coffee and rose from an otherwise untasted meal.

That settles that, of course," he sald quietly. "And it means I've got "I wonder if Wombat intended to to hustle to get ahead of Peter."

Whitaker packed a hand-bag with a few essentials, not forgetting the bottle of chloral. He was not yet quite sure what he meant to do after he had definitely put himself out of Peter Stark's sphere of influence, but he hadn't much doubt that the drug was destined to play a most important part in the ultimate solution, and would as readily have thought of leaving it behind as of going without a toothbrush or railway fare.

Leaving the bag in the parcels-room at the Grand Central Station, he went down-town to his office. Happily his partner, Drummond, was out of town for the day. He worked expeditiously, having no callers until just before he was ready to leave. Then he was obliged to admit one who desired to make a settlement. He took Whitaker's receipt for the payment in cash, leaving behind him fifteen one-hundreddollar notes. Whitaker drew his personal check for the right amount and left it with a memorandum under the paper-weight on Drummond's desk: put a match to a shredded pile of personal correspondence in the fireplace; and caught a train at the Grand Central at one-three.

Not until the cars were in motion did he experience any sense of security from Peter Stark. He had been apprehensive until that moment of some unforeseen move on the part of his friend; Peter was capable of wide but sure casts of intuition on occasion, especially where his affections were touched. But now Whitaker felt free, free to abandon himself to meditative despair. Cold horror crawled in his brain like a delirium-horror of himself, of his morbid flesh, of that moribund body unfit to sheathe the clean fire of life. At about four o'clock the train stopped to drop the dining-car. Wholly On the station platform he found himself pelted by a pouring rain. In his own good time the clerk appeared. His welcome was an indifferent nod and a glance at the register which seemed unaccountably to moderate his apathy.

"Mr. Morton-uh?" he inquired. Whitaker nodded without words,

The youth shrugged and scrawled hieroglyph after the name. "Here, Sammy," he said to the boy-"Fortythree." To Whitaker he addressed the further remark: "Trunks?"

The youth seemed about to expostulate, but checked when Whitaker placed one of his hundred-dollar notes on the counter.

"I think that'll cover my liability," he said with a significance misinterpreted by the other.

"I ain't got enough change-"

"That's all right; I'm in no hurry." The eyes of the lout followed him as he ascended the stairs. On the second floor as Whitaker came into view, the boy thrust open the door, disappeared for an instant, and came him a coin in passing-an attention which he acknowledged by pulling the door to with a bang the moment the guest had entered the room. At the same time Whitaker became aware of a contretemps.

The room was of fair size, and it was tenanted by a woman in Street dress. She stood by the washstand, with her back to the light, her attitude one of tense expectancy; hardly more than a silhouette of a figure moderately tall and very slight, almost angular in its slenderness. She had been holding a tumbler in one hand, but as Whitaker appeared this slipped from her fingers; there followed a thud and a sound of spilt liquid at her feet. She moved forward a pace or two, her hands fluttering out toward him, then stopped as though halted by a force implacable and overpowering.

"I thought," she quavered in a stricken voice-"I thought. . . you . . . my husband . . . Mr. Morton . . the boy said . . ."

Then her knees buckled under her, and she plunged forward and fell with a thump that shook the walls.

"I'm sorry-I beg pardon," aker stammered stupidly to ears that couldn't hear. He swore softly with exasperation, threw his hat to a chair and dropped to his knees beside the

In another moment he was back at the bedside with a clean glass of water, which he offered to the girl's lips, passing his arm beneath her shoulders and lifting her head so that she might drink.

She emptied the glass thirstily

"Look here," he said almost roughly under the lash of this new fear-"you didn't really drink any of that stuff, did you?" Her eyes met his with a look of negation clouded by fear and bewilderment. Then she turned her head away. Dragging a pillow beneath it, he let her down again. "Good," he said in accents meant to tinguish. "Please . . ."

"Yes?"

"Please don't . . . call anybody. ." "I won't. Don't worry."

The lids quivered down over her eyes, and her mouth was wrung with anguish. He stared, perplexed. He wanted to go away quickly, but couldn't gain his own consent to do so. She was in no condition to be left alone, this delicate and fragile child, defenceless and beset. A strange girl, to find in a plight like hers, he out minus the bag. Whitaker gave thought: not pretty, but quite unusual; delicate, sensitive, high-strung, bred to the finer things of life-this last was self-evident in the fine simplicity of her severely plain attire.

A variety of impressions crowded upon his perceptions in little more than a glance. For suddenly Nature took her in hand; she twisted upon her side, as if to escape his regard, and covered her face, her palms muffling deep tearing sobs while waves of pentup misery racked her slender little

Of the others, one was directed to a Mr. C. W. Morton in care of another person at a number on lower Sixth Avenue, New York; and from this Whitaker began to understand the singular manner of his introduction to the wrong room; there's no great difference between Morton and Morten, especially when written carelessly.

But the third letter caused his eyes to widen considerably. It bore the name of Thurlow Ladislas, Esq., and a Wall Street address.

Whitaker's mouth shaped a still-born whistle. He was re-calling with surprising distinctness the fragment of dialogue he had overheard at his club the previous afternoon.

CHAPTER III.

Mrs. Whitaker.

He lived through a long, bad quarter hour, his own tensed nerves twanging in sympathy with the girl's sobbinglike telegraph wires singing in a gale -his mind busy with many thoughts, strangely new and compelling, wearing a fresh complexion that lacked altogether the coloring of self-interest. He mixed a weak draught of brandy and water and returned to the bedside. She made an effort to rise. The effect was quickly apparent in the color that came into her cheeks, faint but warm. After a moment she asked:

"Please-who are you?" "My name is Whitaker," he said-'Hugh Morten Whitaker, "I didn't want to be known, so registered as Hugh Morten. They mistook me for your husband."

The girl swung to her feet. "I want to tell you something." She faced him bravely, though he refused the challenge of her tormented eyes. "Won't you listen?" He crossed to a window, where he stood staring out. "I'd rather not." he said softly, "but if you prefer-" "I do prefer," said the voice behind him. "I-I'm Mary Ladislas." "Yes," said Whitaker.

"I . . . I ran away from home last week-five days ago-to get married to our chauffeur, Charles Morton . . ."

She stammered. "Please don't go on, if it hurts," he begged without looking around.

"I've got to-I've got to get it over with. . . . We were at Southampton. the bed. Then turning to his hand-bag, at my father's summer home-I mean, that's where I ran away from. He-Charley-drove me over to Greenport and I took the ferry there and came here to wait for him. He went to New York in the car, promising to join me here as soon as possible. . . . "And he didn't come," Whitaker wound up for her, when she faltered. "How much money of yours did he take with him?" There was a brief pause of astonishment. "What do you know about that?" she demanded. "I know a good deal about that type of man," he said grimly.

What will Whitaker do with this frail girl on his hands? What would you do in such circumstances?

HOW LLOYD-GEORGE WORKS Better Be Safe

Depends Much on Secretaries and Than Sorry! Never Writes a Letter If He Can Help It.

It is said that Lloyd-George, the British war minister, depends very much on his secretaries, and never writes a letter if he can help it. Davies, who has served Mr. Lloyd-George in a very confidential post for some time; Miss F. L. Stephenson, who is probably the first woman to occupy such a post with a responsible statesman, and Mr. W. Sutherland, who is underpaid. Lloyd-George, by the way, has made more than one find among his private secretaries, and, even in face of comment, he has not hesitated to secure their promotion to responsible posts. There is, for instance, Sir W. H. Clark, a former board of trade clerk, who was the present war secretary's "ghost" at the board of trade and the exchequer, who became a member of the council of India, and who, at the age of forty, is a knight busily engaged in organizing the capture of German trade. Another of Mr. Lloyd-George's former private secretaries is Mr. John Rowland, a brilliant Welshman, who has done good work as Welsh Insurance commissioner

Profit in Christmas Trees.

"Every farmer in Michigan can grow Christmas trees profitably," says Professor A. K. Chittenden, head of the forestry department of the Michigan Agricultural College, in his new bulletin on "The Growing of Trees and Greens for Holiday Use." The stock for planting one acre of Christmas trees will not cost much over $125, and figuring interest at 6 per cent for five years, the total cost would be in the neighborhood of $165. "From this a crop of 5,000 trees can be easily produced, providing good strong transplants are used, which would sell for nearly $800. The col-Mr. and Mrs. E. E. #### DIPHTHERIA TRACED TO CATS

Absolute Proof That Domestic Pets Can Be Carriers of Most Dangerous Disease.

The relationship between the diseases of men and of animals has been as much neglected in this country as it has been studied in the tropics. For this reason we are profoundly ignorant of the role which animals play-if they play any role at all-in the dissemination of epidemics.

Special interest attaches, therefore, to a communication to the National Medical Journal, which describes how an outbreak of diphtheria in an orphanage was traced back to some cats in the building. Sixty-nine cases of; diphtheria out of a total of 71 came, it was found, from the boys' house. Af- American life that has swept away so ter many investigations and precau- many of the moorings of the home tions such factors in the production and family the attic was about all of the disease as sanitary defects, contaminated water supply and food were eliminated. Realizing that there must be a carrier of the bacillus, the physician in charge decided to turn his attention to the cats and took swabs from all their throats.

On bacteriological examination it was found that the four cats from the. boys' side of the orphanage were suffering from diphtheria; the four cats from the girls' side, although showing other microorganisms in profusion, did not prove to have the true diphtheria bacillus. The cats were destroyed, and after that only ten more cases of diphtheria occurred. They occurred within a few days, showing that they had already become infected when the cats were destroyed. There have been no cases since. This tends to show that cats are, or can be, carriers of diphtheria.

GOES SOUTH OF THE YANGTSE

Expedition From the American Museum of Natural History Is to Explore Strange Lands.

According to Roy Chapman Anfrews, leader of the zoological expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, "the vast Tibetan region, north of the Himalaya mountains," is the region where remains of the early mammals, including man, may be found. The scope of the expedition is primarily zoological rather than anhropological, however.

Little is known of the large territory lying south of the Yangtse river, and the expedition, which will approach Central Asia by way of China. will spend much of its time in that neighborhood, and particularly in the wild and mountainous province of Kweichau, which, says Mr. Andrews, "is probably the most interesting of all, and certainly one of the least known."

One thing that makes this province interesting is the presence of the independent tribe called the Miaotse, of which little is known.

Among other places, the expedition will visit Foochow, on the coast between Shanghai and Hongkong, where an effort will be made to get a specimen of a tiger hitherto uncatalogued by science. This animal, according to amateur naturalists, is "a handsome beast, with a Maltese ground color."

The Rodin Collection.

France has at last accepted the collection offered by the great sculptor, Rodin. It took her three years to decide. She always hesitates when authentic riches are offered her, remarks Cri de Paris. If it is a question of horrors, like those amassed by the late Chauchard, she jumps at them. Rodin has collected many antique marbles, but he has not admitted the terra cottas of Tanagra or Myrrhina into his gallery. "One may be easily deceived," he said. "It is so easy to mold an ancient original in clay. And how are you to detect the fraud? Henri Rochefort had two glass cases filled with Tanagras which were false. The fraud was discovered by analyzing the earth of which these statuettes were made. This substance, said the geologists, was found in the suburbs of Paris. So it was not certain that the Greek decorators would have gone there for their clay." Among other antique fragments Rodin possesses the marvelous hand of a statue. "This is signed Phidias," he said one day to an American who had come to visit him. The American turned the hand over to discover the precious stamp. He could not find it. "Ah," said Rodin, "the signature is only visible to the eye of the

They found food without covers exposed to the dust-swirls of airshafts, and lamb chops riding up and down on the dirtiest dumb-waiter ever lifted. In the midst of the scurrying of kitchen maids to find the mislaid covers and to broom out the caked dumb-waiter dirt, a little Slavic maid sidled up to one of the inspectors. "Say, will you blease do the homes, too?" she said in a low undertone of broken English. "You know, where I board they don't care whether they clean any at all. When will you be

ATTIC A THING OF THE PAST

Treasure House of Family Relics Has Completely Disappeared in These Modern Days.

A very modern indictment against the architects and builders of this town has been returned by a young married couple who have spent considerable time looking for a home. They report the incredible fact that there are no attics in the newer class of houses, or very few. Where the attic ought to be there are finished rooms with regular floors, papered walls and lighting fixtures.

To the philosophic mind this is a state of affairs of the gravest moment, for in the swift moving tide of that was left to tie to, remarks a writer in the Indianapolis News. Not everybody can have ancestors, portraits, family skeletons, and the other things that go with lineage, but everybody can have an attic if they will make a stand for it and not allow a where style in houses to deprive them of their rights. An attic is the nearest substitute for a family tree that has been discovered. It takes only a few generations to furnish it with mementos that constitute a complete genealogical history of the occupants of the house. And these are the things -like portraits and skeletons-that go to preserve family pride.

No man can go into the attic and see the first copper-toed boots he wore as a boy hanging to the rafters without feeling some sort of a stir within him. He cannot see the remains of his grandmother's hoopskirts without feeling somehow that there is a connecting link between him and the history of his country. As for the padded silk brocaded vest his grandfather wore on his wedding day, it is a patent of respectability equal to a suit of armor-besides looking a good deal

FIGHTING COCK KILLS OWNER

Knife on Game Fowl's Leg Cut Artery in Man's Leg, and Death Followed Shortly.

What proved to be a fatal attempt at fighting cocks surreptitiously was the one made in the back yard of Vicente's stables at 417 calle G. Tauson, Sampaloc, in which Florentino de la Cruz received a deep gash on the left thigh, cutting an artery, from the fighting knife of one of the roosters, from which he died from loss of blood while being rushed to the Philippine General

From the investigation of the occurrence and from the testimony of witnesses, it is deduced that Florenand Pedro Santos, another cochero, were about to engage in a surreptitious game of cock-fighting and had fastened knives to their respective birds'

When everything was ready both men sat on their haunches preparatory to turning the birds loose. Florentino, however, put his bird on his lap and as the two men who had sat too close together their birds began to fight while still in their hands, with the result that Florentino received a deep thrust in the left thigh, cutting an artery. The fast wagon was immediately called to convey the injured man to the hospital, but on account of the severe loss of blood he died on the way. -Manila Cable to New York Sun.

Cossack's Horse a Wonder.

The achievements of the Cossacks in the recent Russian advance is no surprise to anyone familiar with the Cossack's horse. The animal is small with a short, thick head and neck and a sloping back, but what he lacks in size he appears to make up in intelligence. He is indifferent to weather and climate, because he never had a warm stable. He thrives where any other horse would starve and relishes food that a goat might scorn. His rider will tether him on a snow covered plain and he will get his own food by scraping aside the snow to reach the grass underneath. And so docile is he that he will form a breastwork for his master to fire over.

Tripoli is the last of the great old trading ports where the desert meets the sea. She is the hub of a sprawling wheel, whose spokes are caravan routes striking through the great Sahara and shipping lines that radiate over the Mediterranean.

Ships steam into the harbor cautiously, feeling their way behind the protecting crescent headland that shuts out gales from the north, for the water is shallow and studded with sand bars. To the right the old city rises from the water's edge in a series of green terraces, where the homes of the wealthy stand in their gardens. To the left is the Mohammedan quarter, with its domes and

The heart of Tripoli is in the mosques, the beauty of Tripoli in the oasis and the explanation of Tripoli in the great market. There you see a motley concourse of traders from all northern Africa-Arabs, Turks, Italians, Egyptians, Negroes, Jews. They sit or stand by their stacked wares and barter after the custom of the immemorial East, where time is no object and conversation with all and sundry one of the pleasures of life.

Tripoli has two of the finest mosques in Africa, but the admission of Christians is not encouraged. It is worth all the trouble, however, and all the black looks you will get from the loungers at the gateways to see the Grand Mosque. It is arranged with the simplicity that characterizes the temples of Islam-a bare court, a niche toward Mecca, a latticed booth for the women, and the sultan's boxbut the proportions, the sweep of the flanking archways that end sharply against sheer tiled walls, are beauti- alone. fully restful and harmonious.

Changing Street Names.

And why should street names ever be changed? The whole public comes to have a certain vested interest in the old names. When one is displaced to serve some private purpose, to immortalize some ward politician, or to promote some real estate speculation, there is no telling how many other interests are affected, or what legitimate sensibilities are hurt. > BROOKLYN-The burning of Maron Morgan's big barn on the Chicago turnpike was a sensational loss last Friday night. The fire was of mysterious origin and was discovered shortly after midnight. It was then beyond control. Only a few things could be saved and the loss included a filled silo, windmill and chicken house. The big barn was full of the season's products, including a large quantity of hay, 350 bushels of wheat, 400 bushels of oats, 500 bushels of rye and various farm machinery and equipment, but no live stock. The barn was L shaped, about 180 feet long. The building was only partly insured and Mr. Morgan will take a big loss. Harvey Wilcox, who has been working the place shares in the loss of the contents. That the origin of the fire is a mystery brings back to mind other mysteries of the barn and place after it was built many years ago by "Jockey" Smith, then a widely celebrated character. It was at one time supposed to be a sort of underground railroad for horses that passed in the night. The proprietor of the place did not keep open house and the barns were always locked. Since the death of the old proprietor the place has changed hands several times and until now nothing strange has ever happened on the premises .-

ONE CLOCK NOT SET AHEAD

Wise Official Who Couldn't Solve the Problem That Was Puzzling the Teuton Farmer.

The new regulation in Germany by which the clocks have been set forward one hour as an economical measure in the matter of illumination has proved somewhat puzzling, especially to inhabitants in the rural districts. The Frankfurter Zeitung relates an amusing incident which occurred in connection therewith in Bavaria. Rasmus Rasmussen, a farmer, who was always punctual in complying with all laws and regulations, was somewhat bewildered by this new order and sought counsel in regard thereto from the district official. "Well, Rasmussen, what is troubling you now?" said the official to the farmer, who stood before him nervously fingering his cap. "It's about the clocks," said Rasmussen. "I wanted to ask if it is true that we must set the clocks forward an hour?"

"Of course," replied the official, "and the order embraces every clock in the German empire." Rasmussen appeared dumfounded and wiped his perspiring brow. "But that's an awful problem for me," said the farmer. "You see, I have a very old clock which has been in the family since my grandfather's time, and I wanted to ask your honor if I could not leave it just as it always

"You cannot," said the official bluntly. "No clock is exempt." "Well, of course, as you say, but I don't know how I'm going to do it." "Why, don't be silly. You simply push the hour hand forward one hour. Now go home and don't forget about it." "Well, all right, but I'll have to see a mason about it."

"What's a mason got to do with it?" "Well, you see, the clock is in my garden and is imbedded in a cement column. It has no hands; it is what you call a sun clock or sun dial, and-" But the official waved him away and refused to listen to him any further.

A big new discovery in cigarette blending

The big thing about Chesterfields is their unique blend. The Chesterfield blend is an entirely new combination of tobaccos. This blend is the most important new development in cigarette making in 20 years.

As a result, Chesterfields produce a totally new kind of cigarette enjoyment—they satisfy! Just like a "bite" before bedtime satisfies when you're hungry.

But with all that, Chesterfields are MILD, too!

This new enjoyment (satisfy, yet mild) comes ONLY in Chesterfields because no cigarette maker can copy the Chesterfield blend.

Proper Living Conditions Pay. In a report on "Camp Sanitation and Housing" the California state commission of immigration and housing offers this businesslike illustration to large contractors:

"Suppose a camp of 200 men with a pay roll of $400 per day: If living conditions are bad and the sleeping accommodations make a reasonable rest impossible, if the food is fly infested and the tollets are unclean and revolting, the men become disgruntled and dissatisfied and some become sick. Experience has shown that often under such conditions there will be a 25 per cent loss of working efficiency, or a loss a day of $100, or $3,000 a month. The sum of $10 a day, or $300 a month, will cover easily the cost of good sanitation. This camp, therefore, can save $2,700 a month by installing model livally quitting, both frequent products to have a sanitary and 'livable' camp."

As she came and went, she flew the black and white colors of the German navy, a gun was mounted on the forward deck and another aft. while eight torpedoes, plainly visible under the forward deck, gave mute assurance that the warship was ready for a fight at the drop of the hat.

Lieutenant-Captain Hans Rose, who hung up a new world's record in bringing an armed submarine in battle array across the Atlantic, said that he had called at Newport simply to mail a letter to Count von Bernstorff. He required neither provisions nor fuel and would be on his way, he said, long before the 24 hours, during which a belligerent ship may remain within a neutral harbor, had expired.

The submarine was in American waters a little more than three bours, assuming that she continued to sea after submerging.

To the naval men generally most interesting fact disclosed by Captain Rose was that he had been at sea 17 days and still had provisions for three months, abundant fuel, and needed no repairs. Not so much as a bottle of water was taken aboard, and the ship was spick and

TO PREVENT WHITE SCOURS

Pennsylvania State Experiment Station Outlines Some Suggestions to Prevent Disease.

White scours is a germ disease, heuce its suppression lies in the prevention of infection. The Pennsylvania state experiment station outlines the following suggestions for the prevention of this disease:

The cow should be permitted to drop her calf upon a clean bed of straw in a thoroughly disinfected stall. Immediately after birth of the calf, the umbilical cord should be soaked in a 2 per cent solution of some standard dip. A wide-mouthed vessel will be the most convenient container for the solution, as it may be held close to the body and the cord folded down into the solution.

To prevent contamination the cord should not be touched with the fingers. After soaking, both the cord and an area three inches in diameter surrounding it should be painted with iodine, by means of a small piece of absorbent cotton. A drying powder of equal parts boric acid, powdered alum and flowers of sulphur should then be dusted on the cord twice daily should be applied with a dusting can. Additional precautions include the rinsing of the cow's udder with a dip templating the deluge, ran shouting to solution to destroy germs on these she folded up the note. She was still Margery Golden shrinking close to the the hallway, where he was joined by parts before the calf is suckled, and thorough cleaning of the stable, including disinfection of the walls and

DAIRY FARMER LOSES MONEY

Raises Most of Feed and Buys Very Little Material-Herd Helps Keep Up Fertility of Soil.

How can a dairy farmer lose money on his cows and still make a living? The answer is easy. The farmer raises most of his feed and probably buys very little material not raised on the to assist him in keeping up the fertilmoney for commercial fertilizers. It results in a small profit on the farm, but profit is made on feed raised and not on the dairy cattle that consume

Separator Milk Is Liable to Cause Indigestion, Capricious Appetite and Diarrhea.

(By GEORGE H. GLOVER, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins.) Separator milk is not a balanced ration for calves. On this feed alone, and the way it is usually given to them, they are liable to get indigestion, as shown by a bloated condition, capricious appetite and diarrhea. Most of this trouble can be averted by adding a handful of oilmeal, cornmeal orcottonseed meal, to supply, in a way, the fat that has been removed in the skimming. The milk should be given to them warm and never when it is frothy. Never allow a calf to drink all of the milk that it wants at one meal. It is bad practice to allow several calves to drink out of one trough, some of them will get too much. Care in feeding calves is of vastly more importance than "cures" for calf scours

CALVES FED IN STANCHIONS

Practice Prevents Them From Getting Into Each Other's Feed-Also Protects Ears.

Feed the calves in stanchions. This reeps them from getting each other's feed and also helps to keep them from the habit of sucking each other. Heifers often have their udders inured by being sucked.
