CHARLES HENRY KEMPF

Charles Henry Kempf.

Charles Henry Kempf was born in Trumbauersville, Bucks county, Pa., January 1, 1831, and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clarence J. Chandler, in Detroit, October 22, 1916.

In 1838 his parents moved to Ann Arbor. There he learned the tin-smith's trade, and in 1853 started the first tinshop in Chelsea, later enlarging his business to that of general hardware. Five years after that his brother Reuben came to Chelsea and together they went into partnership and opened the first lumber yard, also handling the produce of the country.

In 1866 they established the Kempf Bros. Bank which in 1898 was incorporated under the general banking laws of Michigan under the name of The Kempf Commercial and Savings Bank. Mr. Kempf was vice-president of the bank at the time of his death.

October 3, 1855, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Freer, of Lima. Their first child, Charley R., died when about two years of age.

Mrs. Kempf died March 16, 1910. Three other children were born to them, George H., of Albion; Wilbur G., of Hillsdale, and Myrta, now Mrs. C. J. Chandler, of Detroit. They, with five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren survive.

Mr. Kempf has been a member of the Congregational church for many years. He was also a member of Olive Lodge, No. 156, F. & A. M.

He was a Republican, and was one of the presidential electors in 1876.

For many years he has spent his winters in Detroit at the home of his daughter, but his summers always in Chelsea. Last November he had a severe illness with pneumonia. Since then he has been confined to his bed most of the time because of weakness.

The funeral services were held at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning in the Congregational church, Chelsea, conducted by Rev. Mac H. Wallace, D. D., pastor of Brewster Congregational church, Detroit.

Interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

Big Crowd Hears Billy Sunday.

Billy Sunday spoke to 11,000 people in Wienberg's coliseum in Ann Arbor at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

There were 2,000 University of Michigan students, in a special reserved section, and they gave the Rev. Billy a "siren," a "locomotive" and a "Rah-rah! Sunday," with three "fight" ems tacked to the end.

Every student in the audience was won over before the Sunday talk on "Get On the Water Wagon" began, when jolly Homer Rodeheaver called for that "Salome-devilment" and the students boosted a varsity cheer leader on the platform.

The Rev. Billy disappointed no one. He flayed the liquor interest with a tongue so wound up with bitter denunciation that people fairly lost their breath trying to follow the names he applied to those conducting such business from the brewer down. He told stories of the effects of drink, he mounted chairs, he pranced on the desk, and he stood on one leg almost as often as he stood on two. He repeatedly called, "I ask no quarter of the dirty dogs," and once he promised: "I will fight them till hell freezes over, and then I'll buy a pair of skates and fight 'em on the ice."

There were more than 100 from this vicinity who took advantage of this opportunity to hear the noted evangelist.

Holler Eight Wins in Wager Race.

As a result of a discussion relative to the merits of six and eight cylinder cars between dealers at Houlton, Me., a race was arranged recently between a Holler Eight and a six cylinder car of prominent manufacture. The route designated was from Houlton to Boston, a distance of 363 miles.

The arrangements were that the first car to check in at the Adams House in Boston should win a wager of $500.

Both machines left Houlton at 7 in the morning and went from that town, in the northeastern corner of Maine, down through Bangor, Portland, Portsmouth, Newburyport to Boston. The Holler reached the Adams House at 8:30, in just 134 hours.

Its arrival had hardly been announced when the six drove up, the driver of which was very much surprised to learn that he had been beaten by 10 minutes.

Both drivers made the entire distance without stopping to eat, the $500 was paid to the owner of the Holler, and Fred Lewis' car now bears an even better reputation in that part of the country than ever before.

Charles D. Allyn.

Charles D. Allyn, son of James and Elizabeth Allyn, was born in Avon, Livingston county, N. Y., April 11, 1832, and died at his home on Railroad street, Wednesday afternoon, October 25, 1916, after an illness of two years.

In 1838 his parents settled at Brighton, and three years later the family moved to a farm in Dexter township. He was educated at the Normal School at Ypsilanti, and for several years taught in the schools of Dexter township, and there are many residents of this vicinity who attended schools taught by him.

He was a man of deep thought, and strict integrity, and was highly respected.

He has been a resident of Chelsea for nearly forty-four years, devoting his time to farming and painting.

He was twice married, the first time to Miss Elmeretta Jones, and to this union two children were born, both of whom are now dead. His second marriage was to Miss Jennie Smith, May 4, 1872. He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Minnie, one granddaughter, Miss Susie Everett, two sisters, Mrs. Wm. Snow of Cavanaugh Lake, and Mrs. Chas. Kelley of Brighton, and several nephews and nieces.

The funeral will be held from the home at 2 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, J. G. Staley, pastor of the Baptist church, officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Mrs. Julia Jensen.

Mrs. Julia Jensen was born in Pennsylvania; November 19, 1833, and died at her home on VanBuren street, Sunday afternoon, October 22, 1916, after an illness of several months.

She was united in marriage with Thomas Jensen about twenty years ago and they have made their home here most of the time since their marriage.

She is survived by her husband and a number of other relatives. The funeral was held from the M. E. church at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. G. H. Whitney officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE M. C. R. R. MONDAY NIGHT

Fred Hansmann, aged 29 years, was killed between the north and south tracks, at the west end of the Michigan Central passenger station, here at 10:56 Monday night.

The young man accompanied by his brother, Martin Hansmann, jr., a railway switchman employed in Jackson, spent the evening with John Yousse, and about three-quarters of an hour after they had left Mr. Yousse's bakery, Fred, who was a baker and formerly worked with Mr. Yousse, lost his life.

According to the story told by Martin, the two went out to take what they supposed was a west bound passenger train, but which was a freight. As the two men came near the west bound track they discovered No. 18, a through passenger train east bound, was near them. Martin caught his brother and pulled him off the track but Fred fell and the cylinder of the locomotive struck him on the head, crushing the skull. Martin escaped with a slight injury to one of his hips.

At the time of the accident telegraph operator Wesley Smith was on the north side of the west bound freight delivering an order to the trainmen.

Drs. Palmer and Avery were called to the depot, and later the body was removed to the undertaking rooms of S. A. Mapes.

Dr. Avery, acting as coroner, empaneled the following jury: G. W. Palmer, J. Coin, D. T. Kelly, Chas. Todaro, J. Smith, Wesley Smith. The inquest was held Wednesday afternoon. The witnesses were Martin Hansmann, of Jackson, and Philip Robbecke, of Detroit, a member of the crew of a freight that was on a siding here at the time of the accident. The verdict was in accordance with the facts as above given.

The father of the young man, Martin Hansmann, sr., of Jackson, came here Tuesday morning and the body was taken to his home on the evening train. The deceased is survived by his father, one brother and one sister, all residents of Jackson.

An Interesting Meeting.

The October meeting of the Parent Teachers' Association was held in the high school assembly hall, Tuesday evening. The meeting was largely attended and the program was very entertaining and instructive. Mrs. E. R. Dancer gave a lecture on Michigan birds, illustrated by lantern slides. The lecture was well received and the pictures were good. The Association has a very unique plan to gain the co-operation of the children in swelling the attendance and gaining the interest of the parents. A picture is placed in the grade which has the largest representation of parents at the meeting of the Association. The sixth grade had the largest representation at this meeting and will have the picture during the next month.

Mrs. Martha E. Taylor.

Mrs. Martha Elvira Taylor, daughter of Albert and Harriet Noble, was born in Unadilla township, September 11, 1848, and died at her home in Chelsea on Friday, October 20, 1916.

She was united in marriage to Wm. R. Taylor, March 20, 1872, since which time she has been a resident of Chelsea. To this union two sons were born, Albert W., of Chelsea, and Fred E., of Jackson, who with nine grandchildren survive her. Mr. Taylor died February 14, 1915.

The funeral was held from the home at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. G. H. Whitney conducting the services. Interment at Oak Grove Cemetery.

Some State.

Michigan industries are able to furnish the United States government, in the event of war, with all pharmaceutical supplies, automobiles and motor trucks it will need, besides considerable munitions and raw material for deadly gases, according to the reports recently completed by the organization for industrial preparedness, appointed last spring to gather data from industries.

Easier to Stop Now.

It is easier to check a bronchial cough now than later. Coughs grow worse the longer they continue. Foley's Honey and Tar stops tickling in throat, allays inflammation and irritation, restores sore and discharging membranes to healthy condition, opens congested air passages, and affords longed for relief. ### San Carlo Grand Opera Company.

The rapid and lasting advancement made by the San Carlo Grand Opera Company during the past five years, the genuine progressiveness displayed by its managers the universal favoritism the organization has achieved with American music lovers, stands out as one of the most unique features of the country's operatic history. The San Carloans are known to music devotees from one end of the country to the other, and these enthusiasts have now come to expect each season something in the way of new, fresh and sensational voices in the forces of the company. The present tour of the San Carlo organization will be a rich one in this respect, for aside from such superior artists as Mmes. Vaccari, Kaestner, DeMette and Messrs. Salazar, Antola, DiBlasi and others, Impresario Fortune Callo has gone to the extent of admitting to his ranks several artists from European opera companies, who, on account of the disturbances of the foreign war have found their positions on the other side of the water lamentably interfered with. The numerical strength of the San Carlo is now up around the century mark, this unusual total embracing a large and perfectly-trained singing chorus and an orchestral section of opera trained musicians who will appear at the Majestic theatre, Jackson, the evening of Tuesday, October 31.

Satisfy!—that's a new thing for a cigarette to do

It's nothing for a cigarette to just taste good—lots of cigarettes may do that. But Chesterfields do more—they satisfy! Just like a thick, juicy steak satisfies when you're hungry.

Yet, with all that, Chesterfields are MILD!

No other cigarette can give you this new enjoyment (satisfy, yet mild), for the good reason that no cigarette maker can copy the Chesterfield blend—an entirely new combination of tobaccos and the most important development in cigarette blending in 20 years.

ELEVENTH EPISODE

The Saving of Dan O'Mara

Young Peggy O'Mara was troubled in mind. She had become suspicious of her own father. On more than one occasion of late that debt-harried toiler from the Applewaite works had been visited by a stranger who impressed the sophisticated young Peggy as anything but attractive. And an honest man, Peggy argued with herself, finds no need for stealing up to a house at night and closeting himself with its owner behind the locked door of a cellar workroom. So the spindle-legged daughter of Dan O'Mara, watching for her chance, decided to investigate.

But the girl's chances for investigation were limited, for Peggy was a hard-driven young housekeeper, with a bedridden mother to look after as best she could. Late one night, however, when Dan O'Mara had led his mysterious visitor into his cellar workroom and locked the door behind him, the girl slipped off her broken-toed shoes and stole silently down to that underground chamber of mystery.

There, with her ear to the keyhole, she overheard enough to confirm her darkest suspicions. She waited until the mysterious visitor had stolen out through the house, with a parcel under his arm, and then once more made her way down to her father's workroom. The door, this time, was unlocked. So she entered noiselessly and crept over to where Dan O'Mara sat staring at the wall with unseeing eyes.

"Pop, what're you thinkin' about?" suddenly asked a tremulous voice close to his shoulder.

He swung about like a shot.

"What should I be thinkin' about?" he demanded.

"You're thinkin' about that man who was down here ten minutes ago," was the girl's answer.

"What man?" equivocated the culprit.

"Chinatown Charlie."

"And how'd you know he's called Chinatown Charlie?" demanded rebellious-eyed Dan O'Mara.

"I know more'n that, pop," said the girl, with a gulp. "I know that city crook's ropin' you in for work I never thought you'd do!"

"Work? What work?"

"There's a bunch of opium smugglers got wise to the fact that the dye works is bringin' in tons of that Katsow wood from China. And certain o' them blocks is goin' to come in hollow with secret marks, and you're goin' to dig the opium out o' them and hide it here until that hop runner for Chinatown Charlie comes and carries it away in a laundry bag!"

"Ain't your mother got to have medicine?" demanded her father. "Ain't we behind in our rent? And ain't the company docked next month since that one-armed man had me machine work taken away from me?"

"But you'll have more'n your machine taken away from you, pop. You'll be queered with the company, for tamperin' with stock, and then the bulls 'll get wise and send you up the river for smuggling!"

"I've thought that out, me gerl. I've no love for goin' against the law, at me time o' life, but I guess we've got to take chances. We've got to, or go under for good and all! For I'm thinkin' your poor mother was right when she said there was no crime so black as the crime o' bein' poor!"

"But they'd promised to raise your pay, over to the dye works!" she reminded him.

"Instead o' which they took off me machine and gave it to that one-armed snitch who claimed I'd been workin' against the company by tryin' to invent a chemical color that'd soon be sendin' their old logwood plant to the scrap heap!"

Silent as Peggy O'Mara remained on the subject of her discovery, she brooded long and darkly on this heavier cloud that hung over her home and her father's good name. It haunted her thoughts as she worked. It filled her blind young heart with a spirit of revolt. It converted her into a diminutive yet lowering-browed Ishmael.

ite. She hated the owner of the works, she told herself as she carried her father's dinner pail to the factory the next day, and she hated the hard-boiled foreman, Mr. De la Shaft room. She turned to sullenly towards Anson Appallin, the immaculate son of the factory owner himself, as he ushered her into the room of whirling shafts and flying belts a small group of visitors.

Yet the immaculate young face softened a little as she looked at one member of that approaching group. For one fair-haired girl of about twenty, dressed in black, whom young Applewaite piloted about amid the roaring and clattering machinery and repeatedly addressed as "Miss Golden," was beautiful enough to bring a wayward pang of envy to the breast of Peggy O'Mara. As she watched her eyes suddenly widened in alarm. For Margery Golden, in starting about the room, had unconsciously moved closer to one of the ponderous machines. There the loose end of her motor-cape was snapped at by a spinning cog wheel, as a bound snaps at a bone. The next moment the whirling teeth had fastened themselves in the fabric of the garment edge, carrying it back between the jaws of the twin cogs that quickly closed on the cloth and seemed to reach out for more.

At the same moment that Margery Golden turned about to determine the meaning of this sudden tug at her clothing, the alert-eyed Peggy O'Mara made an apparently maniacal spring for that astounded young woman's throat.

With a quick jerk of her thin young fingers Peggy tore the cape free where it was already straining against the white column of its wearer's throat.

It was not until Margery Golden saw the iron teeth of the cog wheels swallowing up the last of her vanishing cape that any inkling of her danger came home to her.

Margery Golden stepped back and leaned against a guard rail. Then, after looking studiously at the slattern and slightly abashed figure of her deliverer, she opened her pocketbook and from it took out two or three neatly folded bank notes. These she held smilingly out to the girl with the broken-toed shoes.

But a quick flash spread over the usually colorless cheeks of Miss Peggy O'Mara as she backed determinedly away from the bills.

"Don't you care to take them?" asked the somewhat astonished young woman in black.

"No, ma'am!" was the girl's almost sullen retort. "I ain't earned 'em!"

"But I rather think you have," persisted the other, still smiling.

"You see, you saved my life. And surely you won't embarrass me by arguing that it's not worth that much!"

"I don't want your money," announced the sullen-eyed girl, putting her hands behind her. But already young Applewaite was discreetly doing his best to pilot his visitors away from the scene.

Peggy O'Mara stared after the departing group. So intently did she stare after them that she was oblivious of the movements of the one-armed man who had been stooping low over his machine, in a pretense of filling its oil cups. He crept out to where a small gold locket had dropped from Margery Golden's neck during the encounter. He caught it up from the oil-stained floor, looked at it for one short moment, and then slipped it triumphantly into his pocket. After that he stood behind his machine, well out of sight, watching the fair-haired girl in black as she stepped out through the factory door. His eyes, as he watched her, were both calculating and sinister.

But the pallid-faced girl standing so close beside him had no means of knowing that this preoccupied and stoop-shouldered workman who had lost his right hand was Jules Legar, long known to his enemies as the Iron Claw.

That mysterious one-armed man, however, was destined to become better acquainted with Peggy O'Mara than she imagined. For that night, when the uneasy-minded girl knew her father to be once more shut up in his cellar workroom, she was further disturbed by the sound of stealthy steps across the bare wooden floor of her home. She tiptoed out through the door, crossed to the cellar steps, and crept silently down into the darkness.

There, vaguely outlined against the door cracks in the wall shielding her father, she could make out a stealthily inquisitive figure. And she knew that figure could mean no good to the house of O'Mara.

She crept as silently up the broken steps again, went to her father's timeworn tool chest and from it took out a somewhat rusty but ominous-looking revolver.

The thin-armed girl with the thick-bodied revolver then crept back towards the cellar. And she reached the top of the stairs when she saw a dark figure slowly emerge from the gloom.

Then a gasp of surprise broke from her lips, for she saw it was the case.

workman from the Applewaite story. And the next moment she remembered that this was the same man who had tried to rob her father of his work. And she no longer hesitated. "Get out o' this house!" she commanded. "And get out quick, or I'll put a hole clean through you!"

For a moment Legar stared round-eyed at the apparition confronting him.

"Now, my girl, I mean no harm for you here," he tried to argue, as he felt for the door behind him.

"You mean harm for me father—and that's enough for me! Get out o' here, and go while the goin's good!"

"Listen to me," persisted Legar as he backed through the door, "you're doing your father more harm, at this very moment, than I could ever do him."

"I'll take me chance on that," was her retort.

"But you're losing your chance, you're—"

Legar did not complete that sentence. Instead, he leaped suddenly towards the girl with the firearm, for he had noticed her dress sleeve catch in the screen-door hook. This had resulted in the momentary deflection of that ever-menacing revolver barrel, and Legar's long fingers had encompassed that weapon before she could level it again.

With a quick turn or two he had twisted it out of her hand. Then he caught her by the shoulder and swung her fiercely about.

"Now, my girl, I'm going to tell you a thing or two," said the man with the revolver, stooping closer to her in the moonlight. "You think I'm an enemy of your father's. But you're wrong. All I am is a treasury agent. And I've been wondering if you know how many years it means for a man who gets caught in a twenty thousand-dollar drug-smuggling coup?"

Legar turned and nodded pregnantly toward the cellar where he knew O'Mara to be.

"You've nothin' on me father!" protested the now terrified girl.

"Nothing beyond the fact, of course, that he's carrying Katsow wood away from the Applewaite factory. And why he's doing that you know as well as I do!"

A sob suddenly shook the meager body of the white-faced girl.

"For Gawd's sake, mister, gather me in if you want to! Take me, but don't send me father up! He's a good man, at heart, and wouldn't so much as harm a fly! You can kill me if you want to, but don't be hard on me father!"

Legar stood thoughtfully regarding her.

"I don't want to kill you, my girl. I want to help you. And if you're willing to take a turn at helping me, in a

"It's up to you to make her. And the best way to get her out here is to persuade her to fill a basket of food and wine and bring it back with her in her own car. She knows you belong to the factory settlement here, and she won't be suspicious. You do your work right, and you'll have her here tomorrow night."

The youthful eyes which life had already left hard studied the sinister figure in the moonlight.

"And when I get her out to that sluiceroom, what're you goin' to do with her?"

The one-armed man laughed quietly.

"That's something strictly between her and me," was his calmly enunciated reply as he stepped slowly back and disappeared through the shrubbery beside the O'Mara cottage.

The girl stood staring after him without moving. So intently did she look after that vanishing figure that she did not observe a second figure, even more mysterious than the first, as it slipped out of the shadows and stepped quietly up beside her.

She turned with a start and stared up at the stranger confronting her. And it did not add to her peace of mind to discover that this stranger wore a mask over his face.

"What'd you want here?" was her brusque demand.

"I'm looking for a young girl who happens to be in trouble," was the quietly spoken reply.

"Then I guess you'll have to keep on travelin'," announced Peggy as she swung up the broken steps with assumed nonchalance, strode in through the door, and shut it after her. She stood there for several minutes before venturing to move. Then she silently reopened the door and stared out to make sure that her visitor had taken his departure. Instead of catching sight of the masked figure, however, she was a little startled to see the one-armed man push his way in through the bushes and once more creep to the door where she stood.

"What did that man want?" quickly demanded the newcomer.

"I didn't wait to ask him," was the girl's retort.

"No, I guess, this isn't a time for waiting," ruminated the other aloud.

"And for that reason we'll have to speed up that bargain of ours, and put the thing through tonight!"

"Tonight?" echoed the girl in a whisper of alarm.

"Do you want to save your father?" "I'll bring 'er," she announced with grim determination. "I'll bring her, even though I have to throw a string o' fits to start her on the way!"

move or two, I believe I could still make this thing come out all right."

"You'll let me father off?" she demanded.

"Yes."

"Then tell me what I'm to do."

"You remember that young lady at the works this morning, who nearly got drawn into the machinery?"

"The skirt with the stary eyes? Sure!"

"Well, I want to meet that young lady, in secret."

"And where do I come in?"

"I want you to go to her house and ask her to come to the sluiceroom of the factory tomorrow night."

"I can see that millionaire dame losin' her beauty sleep to beat it out to a dye dump like this!"

"Then it's up to you to take her there," was Legar's retort.

"But I ain't no miracle worker!" Legar drew back.

"Then our bargain is to fall through?" he demanded, with a head movement towards the cellar door.

"But how'm I goin' to make her come?" inquired the distressed girl.

Legar drew out the gold locket which he had picked up from the factory floor.

"This dropped from her throat when you tore her cape free this morning. Take that to her. Tell her you'll found it after she left. She'll feel sorry for you. In fact, you've got to make her feel sorry for you. You'd better try a faint, when you're talking to her, and tell her you haven't eaten for a couple of days. She'll try to give you money. But you must tell her that your mother is worse off than you are."

"But s'posin' she won't swallow that door."

tion the expediency of her midnight mission. Yet as she looked at the unhappy and hollow-eyed girl at her side she felt sure that her journey, odd as it had at first seemed to her, could not be altogether a mistake. The girl was honest, of that there could be no question, for she had journeyed many long miles to restore a trivial bit of jewelry to its owner. She had also refused to accept money. She had even seemed unwilling, after Margery had packed a large motor hamper with jelly and milk and potted meats, to have that luxurious young lady venture so far a-field at such an hour of the night.

But Margery felt that it was a case where the loss of time might possibly mean the loss of a life, and she was glad, as they went humming out past the thinning lights of the city's remotest suburbs, that she had not hesitated to do what she could to repay her debt to the daughter of Dan O'Mara.

"Why are we stopping at the Applewaite works?" she asked as the car drew up beside the unlighted roadside.

"Because me mother's here for the night," explained the wistful-eyed girl as she clambered down from the car, grateful for the gloom that already surrounded her. "You see, ma'am, they put us out o' the house this mornin'! So pop got the watchman here to let me mother sleep in one o' the basement rooms."

"Will your father be here?" inquired the somewhat bewildered young woman at her heels.

"I can get 'im, ma'am," explained the girl as she put down the hamper. "If you'll just step in through that door."

"But who'll take me to where your mother is?" asked Margery, gathering up her skirts as she glanced into the dingy storeroom feebly lighted by its one dingy electric bulb.

"I'll be back in a minute, ma'am," the girl replied, only too glad of any reasonable excuse for disappearing.

Margery, in the meantime, peered doubtfully about the somber building in which she found herself so unexpectedly a visitor. Along one side of the room in which she stood she could make out dark masses of dye wood piled as high as her head. Beside this she saw, in the uncertain light, an open pit filled with water. Into one side of this pit ran a cement-walled sluiceway, stained almost black, with a watertight gate in the upper part of its channel. The opening in the far side of the pit, which was guarded by a heavy iron grill as big as a park gate, led into a high-walled cavern across which stretched a number of huge steel drums. Set in these drums were rows of knife-edged cleavers.

The polished surfaces of these great blades of steel shone ominously in the half-light.

Margery was still staring at the great drums bristling with cleavers when with a suddenness that startled her the electric lights were thrown on across the roof of the chamber. She wheeled about quickly to discover the cause for this. As she did so, an involuntary gasp escaped from her lips. For standing beside the door, with his finger still on the switch, the Iron Claw himself confronted her.

"Why are you afraid of me?" he confidently purred. For the girl drew slowly away while he as slowly followed after her, step by step. Then, with a movement that was feline in its quickness, he flung out an arm and seized her. Then he turned her deliberately about until she faced the black-walled sluiceway. But the girl shrank back.

"Don't be afraid of it, my dear," he mocked as he led her forcibly, step by step, to the lip of the channel through which the mill water was curling and eddying. "In fact, I want you to look at it closely and understand it fully. It's wonderful, wonderful for many reasons. At the end of this sluiceway, you see, is a log mangle. I have seen those knives shed a six-inch timber in less than a minute's time."

He turned and stared down at the white-faced girl, drinking to the full the dizzy wine of her terror, wringing a voluptuous delight out of her wordless gaze of horror. Then the look on his face suddenly altered, and he wheeled about, still clutching the girl close to his side. He stood staring at the door which he had locked but a minute before. And his face suddenly hardened as he saw the heavy iron latch of that door move.

Margery, following his glance, also watched that door. And when she heard the thump of a heavy timber on its panels a new hope sped through her. That hope equipped her with fresh strength. It prompted her to struggle against the Iron Claw with the utmost power of her desperate young body. But her enemy, for all her efforts, was too much for her. Foot by foot he forced her back towards the open sluiceway. Then, with a muttered gasp of finality and a sudden upward heave of his shoulders, he flung the girl headlong into the water.

As he did so the door burst open. For the heavy-hearted Peggy O'Mara, after slipping guiltily away from the sluiceroom where she had left her quite unsuspecting victim, awakened for the first time to the full enormity of her offense. As she stood there in the darkness, staring back at the dark mass of the factory walls, the aches of remorse lay heavy on her young heart.

She was standing there, with tears of helplessness in her eyes, when a figure stepped up to her. She would have fled, inconspicuously, at the approach of that intruder. But the stranger held her with a gently restraining hand. And as she peered up at his face she saw that it was the man in the laughing mask.

"The righting of wrongs is a part of my business in life. Can I help you?" The girl hesitated.

"Yes," she finally confessed, with a burst of tears. And through her sobs she broke out again as much as she dared of that night's proceedings. But she continued to weep.

"And me father'll be goin' to the pen for what I'm tellin' you," she wailed out in her misery.

"He will not," avowed the Laughing Mask, with decision. "He'll have more than help before this night is over, and a better job and a clear conscience before another one comes! But tell me first where you left this girl you brought out from the city?"

"Inside the door o' the sluiceroom there."

"Good God!" gasped the man in the mask. Then he caught the spindle-legged Peggy O'Mara by the hand and started for the shadowy pile of the factory on the run. "Quick!" he said as he ran, "show me the door!"

The half-breathless girl pointed it out to him. But, as he ran up to it he found it locked. He stooped and frantically caught up a piece of timber almost as long and heavy as his own body. Peggy O'Mara, seeing that its weight seemed more than he could manage, promptly ran to his assistance.

"Now, come together," he said, "for we've got to knock that door in!"

Twice, three times, they charged the door before it gave way. But the moment its panels crashed in the Laughing Mask leaped through the opening. As he did so he caught sight of the two struggling figures on the brink of the blackened runway. As he saw the figure of the woman flung headlong into the open sluiceway he leaped with a shout towards the one-armed man who stood on its brink. But that one-armed man, with a lightninglike movement, whipped a revolver from his pocket, swung round on the intruder, and fired.

The Laughing Mask wheeled half way about, staggered a step or two, and then fell forward on his face.

The wide-eyed Peggy O'Mara, following at his heels, saw both that fall and the fact that the Iron Claw had already leaped towards the control board of the water mangle. Peggy screamed aloud, shrilly and belligerently, as she leaped for the man already before the control board. She caught at him, clawing at his upraised arm, fought him with every jot of her thin-blooded girlish body.

But she was no match for that determined and malignant opponent. The most she could do was to distract and harry him for a precious moment or two. Then, realizing she was a factor to be eliminated without scruple, he caught her bodily up from the floor, raised her above his head, and with a sickening thud, sent her body against the solid masonry of the factory wall.

She lay there stunned, without moving, legged brokenly with pain, as Legar darted back to the control lever of the mangle drums and shifted that lever to the spot marked "start." The next moment he had thrown over the switch of the sluiceway control.

He ventured one triumphant glance in the direction of the whirling mangle knives and the slowly ascending gate. Then, with a grimace of satisfaction, he leaped over the inert body of the Laughing Mask, ran to the door, and disappeared in the darkness.

Had that flight been less hurried Legar might have observed that the eyes of the Laughing Mask were open, and the inert body, weak as it was from the loss of blood from a flesh wound in the hip, was already painfully gathering itself together for some predetermined movement. That movement, wavering and unsteady as it was, took the crawling man directly to the control board of the water mangle.

There, by a supreme effort, he raised himself to his feet, groped about with an unsteady hand, and swung back the lever.

The next moment the roar of the machinery stopped, the threshing knives stood poised. But it had been only in the nick of time. For Margery Golden, who had clung to the sluiceway until its withdrawing bars had compelled her to relax, he last desperate clutch on its bars and drop back into the black tide, carrying her closer and closer to those falling blades of death, now caught and clung to a graphite-coated driving chain little more than a yard from the foremost nangle drum which towered above her like an open jaw. And as she clung there, a renewing wave of hope swept through her body, for from the sluiceway wall above her she could hear a reassuring if somewhat unsteady voice calling down to her. And that voice, she knew, was the voice of the Laughing Mask!

Want Hens in English Parks.

In the hope of saving a large part of the $40,000,000 spent every year for foreign eggs, an agitation is on foot to throw open London parks for poultry breeding. The scheme is receiving serious consideration from the authorities because it is one of the latest wartime economies suggested on a large scale. The promoters of the idea have asked for part of one park to start with. The plan provides for a site of about three acres and accommodation for 600 hens. The leading poultry breeders of the country will be invited to send six selected fowls of the same breed and strain. Scientific feeding tests are to be made. All the eggs will go to the wounded soldiers, and prizes will be awarded to the owners of the hens laying the most eggs.

May Develop Irish Coal Mines.

The idea that Ireland will never become a mining country of any account is not the view of the Newry Urban council, which at their last meeting considered the proposals made by the Irish Association of Gas Managers at Dublin, in view of the present condition of the Irish coal supply. If not relieved, the gas managers said, the smaller gas works must be shut down and the government should be urged to provide an adequate supply of coal at reasonable rates. The Newry council approved this opinion and passed a special resolution to be presented to the British executive stating that the time was opportune for the development of the large and valuable coal measures which undoubtedly exist in Ireland.

Metal Tent Supports.

Those fond of camping out will be glad to hear of a new contrivance consisting of a combined tent frame and cot, which dispenses with cumbersome poles and simplifies the question of how to move one's sleeping accommodation from place to place. The new tent supports are of light angle iron, and the longer pieces as well as those forming the cots which go with each tent are jointed so that they may be folded up when necessary. The frames of the cots are suspended from the uprights by two coil springs, used for the same purpose as springs in the ordinary house-bed. During the day the cots can be folded up against the tent frame and well out of the road, by releasing one of the springs at each end.

REJUVENATING AN OLD APPLE ORCHARD

WELL-PRUNED TWELVE-YEAR-OLD APPLE TREE.

How to rejuvenate an old orchard so as to get real money out of it, was told by Dr. J. H. Merrill of the entomology department of the agricultural college at a recent meeting of the Kansas State Horticultural society in Topeka. Doctor Merrill said in part:

"The first steps to be taken in rejuvenating an old orchard depend upon the time of the year when the work is to be started. If in the winter, pruning will come first, but if in the spring, spraying. It is better, however, to start with pruning, as this will greatly simplify the spraying which is to follow."

"Every tree is an individual problem. There are a few general principles upon which a man may work, but the solution of the matter is finally dependent on the grower's own judgment. It is well to keep in mind a general idea as to the kind of tree you desire finally to get. The presence of a large number of dead, diseased and broken limbs which must be removed will upset plans to a certain extent, but this can be largely overcome by eventually forcing new growth into these vacant places in the tree."

"Every man has his own idea as to the best way to prune a tree. An effective method is to begin at the lower part and work your way upward, removing all dead, broken, diseased and overlapping limbs on your way up. After reaching the top of the tree, you are in a position to plan how to make a tree out of what is left. If the tree is old, the chances are that it is high and therefore impossible to spray thoroughly. The limbs are usually too weak and slender to support many apples and it would cost more than the apples were worth to pick them, if they happened to be any. Therefore, while you are in the top of the tree, head back these high limbs to such a height that they may be easily sprayed and that fruit can be picked economically."

"Each cut should be slanting, so as to shed the water, and should be made just above a lateral branch. If the cut is made in this way, the lateral branch will serve to draw up the sap and the wound will heal over nicely. It is generally acknowledged that the best apples are borne at the top of the tree, but wouldn't this be just as true if the trees were 15 instead of 50 feet high?"

"Sunlight is necessary if the apples are to color well. If, after worthless wood is removed, the tree still seems too thick, some thinning may be done, but too much wood should not be removed at one time. More satisfactory results will be obtained if three years are allowed in which to put the tree into satisfactory shape. If possible, however, some of the center branches should be taken out to give the sunlight an opportunity to get down into the tree and color the fruit."

"As the tree grows in its natural state, there is a balance between the root system and the crown, or that portion above the ground. When a large amount of wood is taken from the tree, as in the case of heavy pruning, this balance is disturbed. The root system remains the same, but there is not enough wood above ground to utilize the plant food which the roots have stored; consequently, in the following season a large number of watersprouts will be put out by the tree."

"If the tree has been high-headed, with most of the bearing wood at the top, and this you have removed in heading the tree back, it will be necessary to start some new bearing wood in the lower part of the tree. This can be done by making use of the watersprouts. Unless they are too thick, it is well to leave most of them for the first year, but they should be cut back to three or four buds. By this method you will provide leaf surface enough to take care of the plant food which the roots are sending up, and the cutting back of the watersprouts will cause them to develop fruit spurs."

"The second year the undesired watersprouts may be removed. Those which you wish to save for permanent bearing wood should be left about 12 inches apart. The watersprouts which later appear and are not wanted, may be rubbed off when they are small buds. Clipping the ends of the branches will force out new growth further back on the limb and will also have a tendency to make the branch thicker, thus enabling it better to support the weight of a crop of apples. Every branch should be cut as close as possible to the limb from which it is being removed. The greatest care should be taken not to disturb any more of the fruit spurs than necessary as it takes a long time for these to develop."

DAIRY FACTS

VARIATIONS IN CREAM TESTS

One of Most Common Causes Is Difference in Amount of Water Used for Flushing.

There are many causes for the variations sometimes found in cream tests. Frequently would be a better word to use than sometimes in connection with this subject, for variations in the tests may always be looked for. A few of the causes are here given.

If the milk of a herd of cows whose average test is 4 per cent is separated so that the cream tests 40 per cent and the milk suddenly drops to 3.5 per cent of fat, as will often occur, the cream will then test only 35 per cent. The amount of fat lost in the skim milk is not affected to any appreciable extent by the richness of the milk separated.

One of the most common causes of variation in the test of cream from the farm separator is a variation in the amount of water or skim milk used for flushing out the cream at the end of the run. It is apparent that especially where a small quantity of cream is separated, a marked difference in the richness of the cream may be made by a change in the amount of water or skim milk added. It is an easy matter to vary a pint or more in the water or skim milk used and this alone may easily change the per cent of fat in the cream from 2 to 5 per cent. The per cent of fat in the cream may be readily changed, as is well known, by adjusting the cream screw.

The cream screw, however, is not changed very frequently and it is not the common cause of the variations in the test which constantly occur and which causes so much friction between the buyer and seller of cream.

SCRUB SIRE NOT PROFITABLE

Farmers Advised by Ohio Expert Not to Sell Head of Herd Until Daughters Been Tested.

Can a bull be worth nearly $3,000 in one year in a dairy herd? The animal may be worth this much or even more, according to figures given by Prof. C. C. Hayden of the Ohio experiment station.

He shows that in the station dairy herd one bull produced daughters averaging 153 pounds more butterfat annually than their dams. If ten daughters produced milk for six years, the total production of this sire would be worth $2,750 more than that of a bull that produced no increase, if butterfat is worth 30 cents a pound.

Since the value of the bull can be determined only by the milk and butter yields of his daughters, farmers are advised not to sell the dairy sire until his daughters have been tested. Buyers should not discriminate against an old bull if he has some high-producing daughters, for his value cannot be determined until he is at least four years old.

HERD SUBORDINATE TO FARM

Farmer Makes Big Mistake If He Does Not Regard Cows as Assistants or Side Issue.

(By DR. H. B. FAVILL.)

The man who doesn't regard his herd of dairy cows, be they grade or purebred breeding cattle, as the hand-maidens of the farm, as the assistants, as the side issues of the farm, and which is only a means of building the farm up to its highest possibilities, ought to fail, and he probably will.

For, after all, it is the farm that counts, and not the herd that is on it. It is the farm that makes the farmer, and not the herd. In the long run, take the country through, there will be no great breeders except those that are great farmers, because the herd is subordinate to the farm and is used for the purpose of magnifying the farm.

RICHNESS OF A COW'S MILK

Mistake to Expect That It Can Be Influenced by Character of Feed Given to Animal.

It seems reasonable to expect that the richness of milk could be influenced by the character of the feed given to the animals. However, it has been thoroughly proved that for all practical purposes it is impossible. The richness of the cow's milk depends upon inheritance and can no more be changed permanently by the feed than can the color of her hair. If the milk cannot be changed in richness by the feed it is clearly impossible for cream to be influenced in this way.

The KITCHEN CABINET

If a girl in business is entrusted with a delicate piece of machinery, she is taught the structure, use and care of it. How much more necessary is the need for teaching her the care of her wonderful body.

SOME GOOD THINGS.

A nice way to serve plum pudding is to steam them in individual molds, then decorate each with almonds that have been shredded and browned. These little puddings may then be served with a ball of hard sauce of a lemon, egg, or any desired sauce. A rich pudding served this way is more apt to be eaten than the larger slices, and much more dainty and attractive.

Supper Dish.—Take one and a half pounds of calf's liver and a half pound of fresh, fat pork, chop fine, season with chopped onion, a little powdered sage and a teaspoonful of pepper and salt. Steam over boiling water for half an hour, skimming off the fat as it rises. When cold, add a cupful and a quarter of crumbs and three well-beaten eggs. Mix all thoroughly together and add a grating of nutmeg. Shape into oblong forms, like sausages, rolling each in flour. Put them into a well-greased pan and bake slowly for half an hour, or until a nice brown in color. Place them on a hot dish, pour off the fat, make a thickened gravy in the pan, with a tablespoonful of flour and a little water; serve very hot.

Pork Tenderloins in the Chafing Dish.—Remove the small rounds of meat from the pork ribs, or cut the whole tenderloin if procured, in inch-thick slices; add a cupful of gravy, a few drops of tabasco sauce, a dash of salt, a half cupful of tomato catchup, and a small piece of butter; simmer only until the meat is tender and well cooked; stir in a cupful of cooked macaroni and serve hot with fried hominy, garnished with crisp parsley.

Jellied Oatmeal.—Place three cupfuls of water and one of milk in the upper part of the double boiler, add a pinch of salt and when boiling stir in two cupfuls of oatmeal; cover closely and cook for two hours over hot water; then add, just previous to serving, one cupful of stiffly whipped cream; serve in china dishes, sprinkle with chopped nut meats, and accompany with sugar and thick cream.

Eggs stuffed with finely chopped seasoned chicken, in a cream sauce is a most tasty hot dish and quickly prepared after the eggs are ready.

Baked peaches make a most appetizing dish; serve with the slirp from the pan, baste them while baking with butter and water.

Laughter is one of the greatest helps to digestion and the custom prevalent among our forefathers of exciting it at table by jesters and buffoons was founded upon true medical principles.

SOME FOODS TO AVOID.

Very hot bread, hot cakes, heavy rolls, fried foods and greasy cakes and meat, should be avoided by people who are inclined to indigestion. When repeated trials of certain foods have resulted in indigestive disorders, the warning should be heeded.

Starchy foods of all kinds, undercooked, are not good for anybody. Cold roast pork may often be eaten with no discomfort where the hot roast could not be tolerated. Carefully remove the fat from all poultry for those who find it difficult of digestion. Fish is often a food that causes biliousness and skin eruptions. Lobster and crab are difficult of digestion.

Cabbage, cooked, is not easy of digestion, and many find the root vegetables, like potatoes, turnips and carrots cause distress. Most vegetables when well cooked and seasoned agree with everybody.

Fruit is considered wholesome, but it takes a good digestion to take care of a sour grapefruit, a dish of oatmeal and cream, a few griddle cakes and a cup of coffee well sugared and creamed. It is wisest to eat the acid fruit on the mornings when it is not followed by a cereal with cream. Apples and oranges usually agree with nearly everyone. Bananas are nutritious and wholesome to some and to others very difficult of digestion.

Tea drinking is injurious to many women when indulged in too frequently. Tea should under no circumstances be boiled, and should not stand on the grounds to absorb the tannin. If the face flushes after drinking tea you may be sure that it disagrees with you, or if you feel the least indigestion following the cup of tea, it should be tabooed, substituting cocoa instead.

Food that at certain times in the life agreed with one may at other times cause indigestion. Milk is often too heavy and causes biliousness in adults when in childhood it was the main food.

People who lead an indoor life do not require much meat. Mutton and lamb are much easier of digestion than beef, and meat once a day is all that is needed.

THIS IS CERTAIN

The Proof That Chelsea Readers Cannot Deny.

What could furnish stronger evidence than the test of time? Thousands of people testify that Doan's Kidney Pills have brought lasting results.

Home endorsement should prove undoubtedly the merit of this remedy. Years ago your friends and neighbors testified to the relief they had derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. They now confirm their testimonials. They say this has completed the test. Mrs. W. D. Arnold, E. Middle St., Chelsea, says: "I suffered greatly from dull, nagging backaches and distressing pains in the region of my kidneys. My kidneys gave me a great deal of annoyance. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Penn's Drug Store, and they helped me wonderfully. They banished the pains in my back and corrected the action of my kidneys." (Statement given July 7, 1909.)

Over Three Years Later, Mrs. Arnold said: "My cure has been permanent and I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Arnold has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

What Michigan Farmers Think About the Saloon Men's Fake "Home Rule" Amendment

The following resolution was adopted unanimously by the Executive Committee of the Michigan State Grange at a meeting held at Lansing, Sept. 6, 1916: Whereas, The president of an organization favoring the adoption of the so-called "Home Rule" amendment, intended to destroy the present County Local Option system by providing a smaller unit for its application, has advertised as a "member of the State Grange" with the evident intention of carrying the inference that he represents the sentiment of the Michigan State Grange,

And Whereas, the State Grange in all its annual sessions in recent years has by unanimous vote enthusiastically endorsed the County Local Option system and opposed the reduction of the unit to the township, village and city.

Therefore Resolved, by the Executive Committee of the State Grange, acting for and with the full authority of that body between its annual sessions, that the action of the said person is entirely out of harmony with the sentiment and intent of the State Grange and that until state-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic becomes an actual fact, we are unalterably opposed to any decrease in the unit of territory for local option below the county and call upon every member in our order and every lover of sobriety, good government and clean manhood to work earnestly and persistently from now until the polls close on the evening of November 7 against this misleading and pernicious measure and we urge every voter to vote "NO" on this so-called "Home Rule" amendment, which is but another attempt to destroy what we have already gained in the fight against the saloon.

FLINT MAN SAYS, "I HAVE NEVER TAKEN ANYTHING THAT CAN EQUAL TANLAC"

"I am a man of 74 years," says Wm. H. Pitcher of 220 Wilson street, while talking to Mr. Copp, the Tanlac man, the other day, "and for the past five years I have been almost an invalid. My back hurt me so badly I could hardly stand it. I thought it must be from my kidneys, and for the past two years the pain was so bad. I was troubled with dizzy spells. I hardly dared to stoop over for fear I would fall.

"I could hardly eat enough to keep me alive, and what I did eat would lie in the pit of my stomach like a hard lump, forming an accumulation of gas that was nauseating and distressing.

"I took Tanlac because I saw the great good it had done my wife. Since I have taken it the soreness has gone from my back and the dizzy spells are nearly gone. I can now eat without everything souring on my stomach and having that heavy weight in the pit of my stomach.

"I can sleep well and get up feeling fine, for the first time in a number of years, and I can truthfully say Tanlac is the best medicine I ever took in all my seventy four years of life and I speak truthfully of the good it done me. My wife has taken all kinds of medicine and I was surprised at the good she got from Tanlac, as it has helped her more than I ever expected."

A Chat With You on the Overcoat Subject

Overcoats are primarily intended for warmth and bodily comfort, but style is a mighty factor of importance that must be considered.

This season, Fashion has decreed the extremes in Overcoat designs—the form fitting English models and swagger full box effects share equally in popular favor.

The fabrics are bold in pattern and inclined to be high in color and you may as well make up your mind that your last year's overcoat will never do if you want to be properly attired.

It's not too early for Overcoats, the evenings are getting chilly and it's always advisable to make early selections, thus insuring yourself of obtaining first choice of a complete new stock

Autumn Leave.

There are some years when nature's preparation for winter is short, uninteresting and almost ugly; when she clothes her trees and shrubs for a small space in yellow and brown, and then sends storms to strip them of their coverings, as if she were ashamed of the decorations she herself had painted. There are other autumns in which she uses every color on her palette to decorate the foliage, as if it was her desire that what is about to perish shall have a period of glory before it dies.

This year is one of nature's favorites. Dwellers in the city who are fortunate enough to have access to the country, who are neither too busy nor too lazy to visit the woodlands which lie almost at our doors, have been astonished at the season's leafy brilliance. It seems almost as if nature, tiring of the old school's art, had discovered a brightness and a warmth of color which she may have used when the world was young, but forgot in the latter years.

The oaks especially are her favorites, and some of the maples. She usually does well by the sumachs, but this year they are richer than ever. But there are maples which she has painted almost as red, and the red of the oaks this year is deep and thorough like that of mahogany. In the woods are all the colors of the spectrum except blue, and this is furnished by the clear October sky. The beauty of the country this fall is a compensation for the high cost of food, and a relief from the thought of coal bills. —Detroit News Tribune.

MICHIGAN MEN GET DANGEROUS PLACE

TWO COMPANIES FROM THE THIRTY-SECOND BEGUN GUARD DUTY ON ISLAND.

MEN MAY HAVE HANDS FULL

The Thirty-first, Thirty-second and Thirty-third Will Each Receive 7 to 9 Days Guard Duty.

El Paso, Tex.—Sufficient work to utilize the time of Michigan troops for the next month was laid out when an order was received at brigade headquarters that two companies from the Thirty-second regiment should begin guard duty on the island, a track of land which occupies the center of the old bed of the Rio Grande and near the quarters of the Thirty-first and Thirty-second.

Two companies or necessary parts thereof to guard the outposts will cover the station daily. In this way each regiment will consume from seven to nine days in its work. The guard consists of 69 privates, two commissioned officers and three supernumeraries. The Thirty-third will follow the Thirty-second and the Thirty-first will come last.

The stretch of territory to be guarded is five miles long and has formerly been guarded by Massachusetts troops. It is considered one of the most dangerous posts in the district and from the Mexican side many shots have been fired in the last three months. Owing to the renewing of ugliness of the Mexicans it is expected the Michigan boys will have their hands full.

While this order indicates there is no intention of returning the Michigan troops soon it was stated at brigade headquarters there is nothing to prevent a changed order. A recent order to clear all paper work to date has been construed by many as forecasting northern movement. But brigade headquarters expressed the opinion this is only a matter of business, the same as in civilian life, and has no significance.

CONVICTS ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Both Are High-Grade Feeble-Minded Men and Will Resist Capture.

Ionia.—Two long-time and troublesome men escaped from the Ionia State hospital, and the countryside is being scoured by all officers available. John Jackson, 42 years old, weighing 175 pounds, with many scars on his body, was the leader in the getaway. He was accompanied by Fritz Monk, 30 years old, and weighing 190 pounds.

The men effected their escape by forcing two inside doors to the underground tunnel. There they broke the lock of a heavy iron door, padlocked and chained and entered airing court and then scaled a 20-foot wall, and disappeared.

Both are high-grade feeble-minded men, and will offer strong resistance to capture, it is said. Jackson has served time in four prisons, Elmira, N. Y.; Columbus, O.; Jackson and Marquette. He was sent to the Ionia asylum, from Marquette, about three years ago, where he was serving time for safe-blowing.

Monk was sentenced from Grand Rapids and was serving time in Jackson for criminal assault when he was transferred to Ionia. His time is up in 1920. He has served several terms in other reformatories.

NEW ENGINEERING BUILDING

Work Progressing Slow By on Account of the Extensive Details Incorporated in Plans.

East Lansing, Mich.—Larger and better engineering buildings are being erected on the site of the old structures, which housed the engineering department at the Michigan Agricultural college prior to the fire. Last April, which destroyed the buildings, with a loss of $248,000. Four new buildings are being erected, a large four-story engineering hall, to be known as the "R. E. Olds Hall of Engineering," and three shops. The shops are nearly completed, and all of the mechanical departments will be in permanent quarters before the end of October. Work on the engineering hall has not progressed so rapidly, because of the extensive details, which have been incorporated in the plans to make the new building one of the most modern engineering buildings in the country. The contractors, however, expect to have the building completed Jan. 1.

FIFTY-ONE LIVES LOST IN BIG STORM

STEAMER MERIDA ADDED TO THE LIST OF BOATS THAT FOUNDERED IN LAKE.

FIND SEVEN BODIES IN LAKE

Colgate Founded in Lake Erie With Crew of Twenty-two; Captain Rescued.

Detroit.—With the loss of the steamer Merida in Friday night's gale on Lake Erie conceded by officials of the Valley Camp Shipping company of Midland, Ont., her owners, the death toll of the storm in which four vessels sank, reached 51 men. Proof that the Merida had gone down came when seven bodies wearing lifebelts stamped "Merida" were picked up in mid-lake by two other ships. Her entire crew of 23 men is believed to have perished.

Another name was added to the death list when it became known that Walter J. Tede, of Redwood, N. Y., had been washed from the deck of the barge Isaac L. Bell in Friday's storm. The Bell, bound down in tow of the steamer S. J. Murphy, was at anchor at Bar Point, not far from where the D. L. Flier went down.

With the loss of 23 lives on the Merida, that of Tede, 21 on the James B. Colgate, and six on the Flier, the death list reached 51. Only 10 bodies of "Black Friday's" lake victims have been recovered. The revenue cutter Morrill left Cleveland to search the lake for bodies.

Twenty-One Lives Lost.

Cleveland.—Another tragedy of Lake Erie's "Black Friday," which cost the lives of 21 men, came to light Sunday, borne on the waves, when a life raft to which Captain Walter Grashaw, master of the whaleback steamer James B. Colgate, had clung since she foundered, 34 hours before, was picked up off Rondeau, Canada, and taken to Conneaut, Ohio.

Nineteen men were sucked down to death when the Colgate foundered off Long Point, opposite Erie, and Captain Grashaw's two companions on the life raft were washed away just as the rescue ship, car ferry steamer Marquette and Bessemer No. 2, came plowing through the waves toward them. Grashaw is the sole survivor of the Colgate's crew of 22. The loss of the Colgate is the most conspicuous of the year, the next being the steamer S. R. Kirby, which sank in Lake Superior with 19 men May 8.

Captain Rescued.

Detroit.—Six lives, two ships went out in the 50 mile gale from the southwest that swept over Lake Erie beating the sea into a fuming, raging mass of destructiveness.

"I heard the screams of my crew as they were dashed into the water. It sent a chill through me. I wanted to save them, but what could I do?"

Thus Capt. John Mattison, master of the schooner D. L. Flier, which was sunk off Bar Point, near the mouth of the Detroit river, described his plight during the gale that swept Lake Erie and in which two ships foundered, with a loss of six lives, all from the Flier.

Capt. Mattison, rescued only after he had clung 12 hours to a spar that was part of the wreckage of his ill-fated craft, was worn to a point of total exhaustion when he was brought to Cleveland by the D. C. steamer Western States, but he gave a graphic account of his experience.

Thirteen others were rescued from the vengeance of the storm. They were members of the crew of the steamer Marshall F. Butters, which foundered on Southeast Shoals. Three of these were rescued by the steamer Frank Billings, which took them to Cleveland; the other 10 were picked up by the steamer F. G. Hartwell and were taken into Fairport.

Rollie Strong, of Lansing, driving an automobile, was struck by an M. U. T. street car and thrown 30 feet.

According to the mortality report for September, 3,544 deaths occurred in Michigan last month, of which 868 were among children under one year of age. Infantile paralysis caused 43 deaths during September, the largest number ever recorded from this disease in one month in Michigan. Other important causes of death were tuberculosis in its various forms, 170; pneumonia, 129; diarrhoea and enteric in among children under two years of age, 431; cancer, 193, and violence, 241. The total number of births reported during September was 6,738.

For the first time in history of Flint's fire department, it was called out to extinguish a fire that was "burning up" Flint river at a point where it flows through the industrial part of the city. The firemen fought the stubborn flames for more than an hour.

After spending five cents with Charles Zeley, a grocer, of Flint, for a cigar, a well dressed young man whipped out a revolver, forced Zeley to open the cash register, took the contents amounting to about $50, and walked out of the store.

AUSTRIAN PREMIER IS SHOT

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.—Count Karl Stuerghk, the Austrian premier, was shot and killed while at dinner, by the editor of a Vienna newspaper, named Adler, says the Overseas News Agency. News of the assassination reached Berlin and spread rapidly throughout the city. One dispatch said Count Stuerghk was lunching at the Hotel Reissl and Schindl when he was attacked. Frederick Adler, said to be the editor of a Vienna periodical, walked into the dining room and without a word fired three shots, taking careful aim at Count Stuerghk's head. The premier fell over in his chair. Friends rushed to his side and found that he had died instantly.

Count Stuerghk has been a prominent figure in Austrian political affairs for years. He was minister of public works in the cabinet formed in 1909, at the retirement of which, in October of 1911, he was asked to form a new ministry.

Telegraphing from Vienna a few days ago, a correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, said a ministerial crisis in Austria was considered unavoidable. The dispatch did not specify the reasons and little information has been obtained in regard to current Austrian political conditions, although there have been many dispatches in regard to political strife in Hungary. The Austrian parliament has not been in session since before the war.

MICHIGAN GUARD NOTES

Gen. Kirk Gives Stringent Orders to Guard Against Typhus Near Michigan Troop.

El Paso, Tex.—Discovery of a case of typhus fever in the city jail, which originated in the home of a Mexican family a block from two battalions of the Thirty-third Michigan regiment has led to stringent orders by Gen. Kirk, tending toward protection of the health of Michigan soldiers.

Many think the antitoxin treatment given at Grayling, and later at El Paso, is a protection against typhus. This is said not to be the case. The origin of typhus germ never has been discovered, and consequently there is no serum to combat it.

The order issued by General Kirk are to the effect that no more laundry work shall be done for the men by Mexican women, a custom which has been common in the past; no more Mexican bootblacks or newsboys shall be allowed in camp; all stray dogs shall be removed from camp; men are ordered to keep away from Mexican families. Since coming here many of the men have visited with Mexicans near the camp, hoping thereby to obtain a knowledge of Spanish or to learn their peculiar customs. This is to be done away with.

NEW BARLEY AT M. A. C.

Barley That Will Stand Michigan Winters and Produce Large Yields.

East Lansing, Mich.—The Michigan experiment station, at the Michigan Agricultural college, after two years, has perfected a variety of barley that will stand the Michigan winters, and produce a yield of 59.3 bushels an acre, although the average yield of other types of barley during the same period, as given by the United States department of agriculture is 25 bushels an acre. Winter barley has not been a commercial success north of the Ohio river. Experience shows that it must cover the ground with a vigorous growth before winter weather. The top freezes completely, usually below the winter lodging line of the Hessian fly. The fly is killed and the frozen tops protect the crowns of the plants.

Building permits taken out in Detroit during the past week represent construction work, on which combined cost estimates, make a total of $1,662,350, in comparison with $1,310,605 for the previous week and $629,190 for the similar week of last year.

Charles Smith, fireman at the White Star Laundry plant at Ann Arbor, in a moment of remorse for his habits, walked into the office of the laundry and said to the young woman bookkeeper, "Guess I'll kill myself." Drawing a revolver he placed the muzzle of it under his chin, and shot through his head. He died on the way to the hospital.

The city officials of Pontiac are preparing to put up a legal fight for the city's share of the $20,000 paid to Oakland county as its part of the money received from the sale of automobile licenses. The money has been placed by the county treasurer in the general road fund.

The Western Association of Shoe Wholesalers, in their annual convention at Grand Rapids, adopted a resolution calling upon President Wilson to place an embargo on the exportation of all hides, skins and leather from the United States.

Can Fix Titles.

Although it is hardly considered "good form," county election boards may place their own captions on the two liquor amendments to the constitution to be voted on November 7. In other words, there is nothing to stop the county boards from replacing the caption suggested by the secretary of state with another of their own making. There is nothing in the law to stop them and there is information at hand here that changes are going to be made in several instances.

Forty-three Die of Paralysis.

Infantile paralysis in September broke all records in Michigan for any single month. In that month, according to the report of the vital statistics department made public, there were 43 deaths. There was also one death from tetanus. Other prominent causes of death, with the number of victims, were: tuberculosis, 170; pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia, 129; enteric under two years of age, 431; cancer, 193; violence, 241. The total number of deaths in the state during the month was 3,544, a rate of 14 per 1,000, while the births numbered 6,738, a birth rate of 26.3 per 1,000.

To Help Smaller Counties.

Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers has worked out a tentative plan for the distribution of the federal appropriation for good roads in Michigan to be used during next summer. The plan is to help the smaller counties. Mr. Rogers plans to use all of the government money on the so-called "legislative trunk lines." In some counties he would have the state share one-half the cost with the county, while in others the state pays nothing and the county all. The federal money goes for 50 per cent of the total expenditure in all cases.

Milk Strike Averted.

The Michigan Milk Producers' association agreed to ask $2 a hundred pounds for milk after Nov. 1, and at the same time it became known that the condensers have agreed to pay that price for the month of November. This action, it is believed, will avert the threatened milk strike in the state. What action will be taken by the condensers after Nov. 30 is not indicated, but it is known that the producers will insist on maintaining the $2 rate.

The DESTROYING ANGEL

By Louis Joseph Vance

HOW THE STORY GOES

Hugh Whitaker is told, after a diagnosis by eminent surgeons, that he cannot live longer than six months. His sweetheart jilts him. The double blow stuns him. Peter Stark, his friend, proposes a South sea voyage on Stark's yacht. Whitaker consents, but runs away to a country hotel with the intention of committing suicide. He surprises Mary Ladislav, daughter of a rich and hard New Yorker, in the act of drinking poison. Whitaker marries the girl to save her good name, gives her money and immediately puts her on a train for home. He turns—and walks into Peter Stark's arms. "No more foolishness," says Stark. "You've got to go sailing with me." The sick man shrugged wearily: "All right," he replies. "Have your own way." What happens next is told in this installment. You'll find it mighty interesting.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

Beyond drawing heavily on his bank and sending Drummund a brief note, Whitaker failed to renew communication with his home. He sank into a state of semi-apathetic content. The Adventure was five months out of port before he began to be conscious that he was truly accursed. There came a gradual thickening of the shadows that threatened to eclipse his existence. And then, one day as they dined with the lonely trader of an isolated station in the D'Entrecasteaux Islands, he fell from his chair as if poleaxed. He regained consciousness only to shiver with the chill of the wind that fanned by the wings of death. It was impossible to move him. The agonies of the damned were his when, with exquisite gentleness, they lifted him to a bed.

Stark sailed in the Adventure before sundown of the same day, purporting to fetch a surgeon from Port Moresby. Whitaker said a last farewell to his friend, knowing in his soul that they would never meet again. Then he composed himself to die quietly. But the following morning brought a hapchance trading schooner to the island, and with it, in the estate of supercargo, a capricious Scotch gentleman who had been a famous specialist of London before drink laid him by the heels. He performed a heroic operation upon Whitaker within an hour, announced by nightfall that the patient would recover, and the next day sailed with his ship to end his days in some abandoned Australian boozing-ken—as Whitaker learned in Sydney several months later.

In the same place, and at the same time, he received his first authentic news of the fate of the Adventure. The yacht had struck on an uncharted reef, in heavy weather, and had foundered almost immediately. Of her entire company, a solitary sailor managed to cling to a life-raft until picked up, a week after the wreck, by a tramp steamship on whose decks he gasped out his news and his life in the same breaths.

Whitaker hunted up an account of the disaster in the files of a local newspaper. He read that the owner, Peter Stark, Esq., and his guest, H. M. Whitaker, Esq., both of New York, had gone down with the vessel. There was also a cable dispatch from New York detailing Peter Stark's social and financial prominence—evidence that the news had been cabled home. To all who knew him Whitaker was as dead as Peter Stark.

"There is a world outside the one you know. To which for curiousness 'E'll can't compare; It is the place where wilful missings go. As we can testify, for we are there."

Kipling's lines buzzed through his head more than once in the course of the next few years; for he was "there." They were years of such vagabondage as only the South Seas countenance; neither unhappy nor very strenuous, nor yet scarred by the tooth of poverty. Whitaker had between four and five thousand dollars in traveler's checks which he converted into cash while in Sydney. Memory of the wreck of the Adventure was already fading from the Australian mind; no one dreamed of challenging the signature of a man seven months dead. And as certainly and as quietly as the memory, Whitaker faded away; Hugh Morten took his place, and Sydney knew him no more, nor did any other parts wherein he had answered to his rightful name.

The money stayed by him handsomely. Thanks to a strong constitution in a tough body (now that its malignant decision was exercised) he found it easy to pick up a living by one means or another. Indeed, he played many parts in as many fields before joining hands with a young Englishman he had grown to like and entering upon what seemed a forlorn bid for fortune. Thereafter he prospered amazingly.

When at length he did make up his mind to go home, he was in Melbourne with Lynch, his partner. Whitaker passed old friends in the street. They were George Presbury and his wife—Anne Forsythe that was—self-evident tourists, looking the town over without a hint of recognition; but his wife was another person altogether. Whitaker could not be blind to the surprise and perplexity that shone in her eyes, even though he pretended to be blind to her uncertain nod; long after he had been alone was visible to her he could feel her inquiring stare boring into he remembered that he was now a man of independent fortune and of idle hands as well. After prolonged consideration he suddenly decided, told Lynch to look out for his interests and expect him back when he should see him, and booked for London by a Royal Mail boat—all in half a day. From London Mr. Hugh Morten crossed immediately to New York on the Olympic, landing in the month of April—nearly six years to a day from the time he had left his native land.

He put up at the Ritz-Carlton, precisely as any foreigner might be expected to do, and remained Hugh Morten while he prayed around the city and found himself. Now and again in the course of his wanderings he encountered well-remembered faces, but always without eliciting the slightest gleam of recognition; circumstances that only went to prove how thoroughly dead and buried he was in the estimation of his day and generation.

Nothing, indeed, seemed as he remembered it. But his ultimate utter awakening to the truth that his home had outgrown him fell upon the fourth afternoon following his return, when a total but most affable gentleman presented himself to Whitaker's consideration with a bogus name and a genuine offer to purchase him a drink, and promptly attempted to emmesh him in a confidence game that had degenerated into a vaudeville joke in the days when both of them had worn knickerbockers. Whitaker privately admitted that he was outclassed, that it was time for him to seek the protection of his friends.

He began with Drummund. The latter, of course, had moved his offices. Whitaker found him independently established in an imposing suite in the

"Whitaker!" He gasped. "My God!"

Woolworth Building—found him an ashen-faced man of thirty-five, who clutched the side of his roll-top desk as if to save himself from falling.

"Whitaker!" he gasped. "My God!" "Flattered," said Whitaker, "I'm sure."

He derived considerable mischievous amusement from Drummund's patent stupefaction. It was all so right and proper—as it should have been. He considered his a highly satisfactory resurrection. Seldom does a scene pass off as one plans it; but Drummund played off his part in a most public-spirited fashion—gratifying, to say the least.

It took him some minutes to recover, Whitaker standing by and beaming. He remarked changes; changes as striking as the improvement in Drummund's fortunes. Physically his ex-partner had gone off a bit; the sedentary life led by the average successful man of business in New York had marked his person unmistakably. Only his face seemed as it had always been—sharply handsome and strong. Whitaker remembered that he had always somewhat meanly envied Drummund his good looks; he himself had been fashioned after the new order of architecture—with a steel frame.

He discovered that they were both talking at once—furiously—and, without surprise, that he had a great deal more enlightenment to impart to Drummund than he had foreseen. "You've got an economical streak in you when it comes to correspondence," Drummund commented, offering Whitaker a sheet of paper he had just taken from a tin document-box. That's Exhibit A.

Whitaker read aloud:

Dear D.: I'm not feeling well, so off for a vacation. Burke has just been in and paid $1,500 in settlement of our claim. I'm enclosing herewith my check for your share. Yours,

H. M. W.

"Far be it from me to cast up," said Drummund; "but I'd like to know why the deuce you couldn't let a fellow know how ill you were."

"That's so. And you never heard—?" "Merely a rumor ran round. More than that nothing—until we heard that the Adventure had been lost, half a year later."

"I'm sorry," said Whitaker contritely. "It was thoughtless . . ."

"But that isn't all," Drummund objected, flourishing another paper. "See here—Exhibit B—came in a day or so later."

"Yes," Whitaker recognized the document. "I remember insisting on writing to you before we turned in that night."

He ran through the following communication:

Dear Drummund: I married here, tonight, Mary Ladislav. Please look out for her while I'm away. Make her an allowance out of my money—five hundred a month ought to be enough. I shall die, intestate, and she'll get everything then, of course. She has your address and will communicate with you as soon as she gets settled down in town. Faithfully,

Hugh Morten Whitaker.

"If it hadn't been so much in character," commented Drummund, "I'd've thought the thing a forgery—or a poor joke. Knowing you as well as I did, however . . . I just sat back to wait for word from Mrs. Whitaker."

"And you never heard, except that once?" said Whitaker thoughtfully.

"Here's the sole and only evidence I ever got to prove that you had told the truth."

Drummund handed Whitaker a single, folded sheet of note-paper stamped with the name of the Waldorf-Astoria.

Dear Sir: I inclose herewith a bank-note for $500, which you will be kind enough to credit to the estate of your late partner and my late husband, Mr. Hugh Morten Whitaker.

Very truly yours,

Mary Ladislav Whitaker.

"Dated, you see, the day after the report of your death was published here."

"But why?" demanded Whitaker, dumfounded. "Why?"

"Mrs. Whitaker may have desired to marry again immediately. If I'm any judge of human nature, she argued that repayment of the loan wiped out every obligation. Feminine logic, perhaps, but—"

Whitaker nodded in somber abstraction.

"You may not," continued Drummund with light malice, "have been so generous, so considerate and chivalric, after all."

"Oh, cut that!" growled Whitaker, unhappily, "I never meant to come back."

"Then why did you?"

"Oh . . . I don't know. Chiefly because I caught Anne Presbury's sharp eyes on me in Melbourne—as I said a while ago. At the worst—if what you suggest has really happened—it's an open-and-shut case; no one's going to blame the woman; and it ought to be easy enough to secure a separation or divorce."

"You'd consent to that?" inquired Drummund intently.

"It's the only decent thing I can do."

Drummund laughed quietly. "If that's how you feel," he said, "I can only give you one piece of professional advice."

"What's that?"

"Find your wife."

"After a moment of puzzled thought, Whitaker admitted ruefully: 'You're right. There's the rub.'"

"I'm afraid you won't find it an easy job. I did my best without uncovering a trace of her."

"Did you try old Thurlow?"

"Her father died within eight weeks from the time you ran away. He left everything to charity, by the way. Unforgiving blighter."

"Well, there's her sister, Mrs. Pettit."

"Address," observed Drummund, dryly: "The American Embassy, Berlin. . . . Pettit's got some sort of a minor diplomatic berth over there."

"O the devil! . . . But, anyway, I can write."

He moved to a window and stared rudely at the Post Office Building for a time. "I'm going to find her just the same—if she still lives," he announced, turning back.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

And when Whitaker does find her, what do you suppose happens?—considering that she may have remarried.

FAMOUS FASHION WRITER

Julia Bottomley is recognized as one of the best informed women's fashion writers in the United States. She knows exactly the needs and desires of women in the small towns and country, for not many years ago she conducted a dressmaking and millinery shop in a little city in Colorado. And the articles she prepares for us are written with a view to meeting the conservative ideas of the ladies of our community. The tawdry and extravagant are taboo with her. Leading wholesale and retail dealers and manufacturers of women's apparel recognize in Mrs. Bottomley an authority and the editor of the Ladies Home Journal has consulted her frequently. She is at present associate editor of one monthly fashion periodical, is a regular contributor to another and is a fashion editor for an important newspaper syndicate. Before the war Mrs. Bottomley went annually to the Paris fashion center, and since then has kept in touch by personal correspondence. We publish these articles by special arrangement.

FASHIONABLE COAT FOR LITTLE MAID.

After reviewing coats made for the small girl it seems that they range through as great a variety of materials, and almost as great a variety of styles, as coats for grown-ups. All the soft, woolly goods, several fur-fabrics and plushes, velvet in various colors, and all-fur coats promise a season of rich and comfortable outdoor wear for the little miss.

It is a fad of the season to have a hat or bonnet and a tiny muff made of the same material as the coat. From top to toe almost everything small ladies wear is of one kind of cloth. For trimming, narrow bandings of the shorthair and least costly furs are used. Smocking and shirring play important roles in making coats of wool velours, Bolivia and similar cloths, and they are at their best on velvet. But coats of fur-fabrics or plush, like that shown in the picture, must be made on the plainest lines.

All-fur coats of white rabbit with caps and muffs to match make the most captivating sets imaginable. Baby Bunting's father spends his time to good advantage when he manages to clothe his small daughter in these

They have added coiffures with loops of hair to other high and stately styles, and are showing others with small puffs and several short curls pinned at the crown of the head in the back, for those who like a lower hairdress.

Among high coiffures there is one design in which a band of waved hair is wound about the head like a wide band of ribbon, near the forehead. It allows a few orderly waves and ringlets to escape about the face, and the back hair is arranged in puffs at the top of the crown. This is an unusual and very finished-looking hairdress.

A similar coiffure is shown in the picture. In this design all the hair is waved and the front hair is combed back over a foundation which raises it at the top of the head. At the back a cluster of curls is pinned below the crown and a band of waved hair is brought across above the nape of the neck. It will be seen that ornamental pins are an essential part of this coiffure—they finish and support it.

The coiffure at the left is much simpler. All the hair is marcelled for it and combed toward the top of the crown. It is finished in a small coil snowy skins. Rabbit is frankly rabbit this year, and costs money, at that. There are fascinating coats of white broadcloth trimmed with bandings of brown fur, and they are quaint replicas of models made for grown people.

The coat shown in the picture is a practical model of brown plush very durable and warm. It is so simple that there is almost no reason for a description of it. It has a turnover collar and cuffs of the same material as the belt. The belt slips through straps at the sides, and odd silk buttons provide the means of fastening.

Now that the waved and puffed and otherwise elaborated coiffure has come back, hairdressers appear to be working under the spur of new inspirations.

fastened with a shell comb. This is one of many styles to which a side part on the forehead gives a youthful touch.

Jersey. Paris likes it. America likes it. So it will go merrily on. It will not pass with the summer. Silk jersey is expected to remain all winter.

It makes a smart and useful all-round rig.

In a coated belt dress it is altogether modish.

Wonderful Dunes of Indiana

CLIMBING THE MINIATURE MOUNTAINS

LIVING within a ride of one hour and a half from the center of the city of Chicago is a natural wonderland, which has attracted the keen interest of scientists the world over. Yet it is not likely that one out of a thousand Chicago people ever visits it—much less is acquainted with the marvels which it presents.

When the International Association of Plant Geographers held their meeting in Chicago years ago its members—scientists from several continents, who were familiar with most parts of the world—were asked what features they specially wished to see in the United States. Every one of them included in his list of four or five localities the sand dunes about the southern end of Lake Michigan. They shared honors with the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and Niagara Falls as the leading attractions of the country in the minds of the visiting scientists.

Lately earnest efforts have been made to induce Indiana to purchase the dunes tract and make of it a state park. It has also been suggested that the federal government acquire it and set it aside as a national park.

Wonderful Wild Flowers. The first thing which makes the sand dunes country unique in America is the great number of rare wild flowers which grow there and nowhere else within hundreds of miles of Chicago. Perhaps in no other single place are to be found all the thousand varieties of plant life which are native to the dunes.

Here, for instance, one is startled to see the cactus—typical of the western deserts—growing in profusion. Here also the trailing arbutus, usually found only much farther north, blooms in all its glory. In the dune woods are to be found ten or a dozen varieties of orchids, the flowers of which are strangely beautiful. One must go hundreds of miles from Chicago to find in any other locality such a display of orchids.

In the spring the more wooded dunes are carpeted with ten or more different kinds of violets and in the early fall the fringed gentian—almost extinct elsewhere about Chicago—blooms in great abundance on the sloping sides of the dunes. This is but to mention the first half dozen of the more than thousand varieties of plant life which make the dunes with their intervening marshes and sloughs the greatest attraction within many miles of Chicago to lovers of wild flowers.

But the dunes have another and a most remarkable feature which makes them almost unique in the affection of the scientist and nature lover.

Plants and trees, it is known, change their shapes and their habits of growth to accommodate themselves to changing natural conditions. Usually these a big city, because in addition to its wealth of plant growth it is one of the great way-stations of the birds in their flights to and from the South. The chain of the great lakes bars the North and South pathway of the birds for hundreds of miles, and in their multitudes they sweep round the western edge of Lake Michigan to find the first open road. In the spring and fall hundreds of different species stop over in the wooded country of the dunes to rest their wings.

Eagles Seen There. Prof. H. C. Cowles of the department of botany in the University of Chicago, who has worked and studied in the dunes for 20 years, has often seen eagles there. Many varieties of owls and hawks are also among the feathered residents.

A large part of the dune country which is adjacent to Chicago has already been exploited. The manufacturing town of Gary was built among the dunes, which were leveled to suit the purposes of commerce. Another big tract is used as a sand mine and ruined as an object of natural beauty and interest.

It happens that during the Gary boom a tract of 2,500 acres, lying between Dune Park station and Michigan City, was bought up by a local syndicate and is still held untouched in its original condition. It fronts eight miles on Lake Michigan, and Professor Cowles is authority for the statement that its beach cannot be surpassed by that at Atlantic City. The slope out to deep water is most gradual, and the sand itself is much finer than ordinary sea sand, because it is sifted by the winds, which leave only the finest.

CERNAVODA BRIDGE A WONDER

Great Railway Span Across the Danube Cost Roumanian Government Nearly $7,000,000.

Regele Carol I is the official name of the greatest bridge in Roumania and one of the most interesting series of railway spans in the world. It is the long steel and stone link which when completed in 1895 bound Ostend on the North sea to Constantza on the Black sea, two ports that at the outbreak of this war were connected by a de luxe express train service three times a week, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society.

At the time it was thrown open to traffic this was the only bridge spanning the Danube below the Serbian capital of Belgrade. The engineer responsible for the structure was a Roumanian, A. Salgny, by whose name the village of Cernavoda is designated on some of the more modern maps of that country.

THE EVER-CHANGING DUNES

changes extend over centuries, so slow is the normal change in the surface of the land on which they grow and in the other factors which affect them.

The Shifting Panorama.

But in the dune country such changes in surface are rapid. From year to year the dunes creep and crawl under the influence of the winds. New dunes are created, old dunes swept away; where a dune has been conquered by plants and trees and has stood the same for years the shifting sands may start an invasion and pile a new dune on top of the old. To all these constantly shifting conditions the trees and plants as constantly fight to accommodate themselves.

One may see a promising forest of jack pines, maples or cottonwoods half buried in the rising sand or drowned in the flood, with nothing but their dead tops projecting. One may find where the willows, for instance, quickly changing to meet the changing conditions, have grown trunks twice as tall as usual, with roots running out several feet higher than the original surface of the ground.

Sometimes after the trees have grown tall the sand moves away instead of piling up and the roots are left bare, twisting and twining in curious shapes.

Some of the sand dunes are more than 10 feet high, and in many instances their tops and sides are carved into beautiful and strange shapes by the life winds.

Especially desirable is the preservation of a part of the dune country as a park and reservation for wild life near

Together with the approaches and the stone causeways across that part of the neighboring marshes and meadows which are subject to periodical inundations, this great structure is fully 14 miles long. The bridge proper, over the main channel of the river, is a slender iron structure more than 2,400 feet long, disposed in five arches. Two mighty abutments on the right and left banks, together with six stone piers and ice-breakers, support this section which is elevated more than 100 feet above the water, thus enabling the tallest vessels to pass beneath it without hindrance.

The bridge-cost the Roumanian government nearly $7,000,000. With its completion Bucharest was brought within a seven hours' journey of the Black sea shore. The eastern end of the bridge is 30 miles in an airline west of Constantza, and 90 miles east of Bucharest. The distance by rail between the capital and the port is 147 miles. Owing to the importance of this line in the handling of troops landed at Constantza by Russian transports, work probably has been rushed on the double tracking of the road between Bucharest and Cernavoda, this extension of the state-owned railway system having been decided upon by the Roumanian parliament more than a year ago.

Unfavorable Experience. "What's your idea of a scientist?" "The only one I ever met," replied Mr. Growcher, "was of the kind that use words of six syllables to explain that they don't know something."
