Michael Schenk.

Michael Schenk was born in Obergoember, Baden, Germany, May 9, 1832, and died at his home in Sylvan township, Tuesday afternoon, November 7, 1916.

Mr. Schenk came to this country with his parents in 1849, and they settled in Freedom township on the farm at present owned by Emanuel Schenk.

Mr. Schenk has been a resident of Sylvan township for sixty-one years. He first settled on the farm now owned by Fred Kalmbach, and for the last fifty-two years has resided on the farm where bedded.

He had been a member of Salem German M. E. church for fifty-nine years, and for many years has been a steward of the society, which office he held at the time of his death. He was united in marriage with Miss Mary Kalmbach in August, 1855.

He is survived by his wife, six sons, Wm. P. and John W. of Chelsea; Henry, of Sharon; Adolph, of Ann Arbor; Adelbert, of Sylvan; Edwin, of Flint; four daughters, Mrs. E. Pickell, of Detroit; Mrs. Elmer Kirby, of Jackson; Mrs. Herman J. Dancer, of Chelsea, and Miss Adah Schenk, of Sylvan; twenty-four grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren. One daughter, Mrs. Geo. Zick, died a few years ago.

The funeral will be held from the home Friday morning at 10 o'clock and from Salem German M. E. church at 10:30 o'clock, Rev. Geo. C. Notthardt officiating. Interment at Salem cemetery.

Judge Scored Both Sides.

Both sides of the Millen-Potter litigation were scored rather severely Monday in an opinion for a decree, made by Judge Edward D. Kinne and filed with County Clerk Beckwith.

Judge Kinne denied the relief asked for by attorneys for Homer Millen and his wife against the Potters, and then assessed the costs of the case against the defendants, N. S. Potter and sons.

The opinion is as follows: "It is probable that if the defendant Potter had wisely recognized the force of the former decree and submitted gracefully to the mandates thereof the proceedings in this present case would never have been instituted. It would seem, however, that he was unwilling to do so, and the present suit was started. I am not able to follow the solicitor of the plaintiffs in his theories of the present case. It may be due to my misconception to the practice and the law.

"It would seem to me that the defendants have finally opened fully their books and have not concealed aught from the plaintiffs. The commissioner to whom was entrusted an accounting on the foot of the former decree was confronted with shameless conditions. These are now entirely removed. The conduct of the defendant Potter can only be understood on the theory that he was a law unto himself, and was at perfect liberty to repudiate the natural conclusions in the previous case.

"In my opinion the present bill cannot be maintained. The relief sought should be denied, and a decree may be entered in this cause accordingly."

HAD ALL SHE COULD STAND

Despite Possible Proposal, "Young Old Maid" Was Unable to Put Up With Bore.

Iole is a new and charming correspondent who describes herself as "a rather young old maid in whom the eager desire for matrimony is almost overbalanced by an unfortunate sense of the ridiculousness of all masculine beings."

"I am, you know," he interjected, "connected with the Emmanuel movement."

"Why should you be surprised that I am interested in so absorbing a subject?" he demanded. And I'm afraid I glanced at the clock as I answered:

"I didn't imagine you could be connected with any sort of a movement!"

"But isn't it too bad? I think he would have proposed if I'd let him talk for another hour or so!"

"Congratulations, my boy," said the attorney, "you have inherited a nice little fortune."

"Perfectly legitimate business. He's merely grafting peaches."

It is always easy to be wise for someone else.

A Growing Custom!

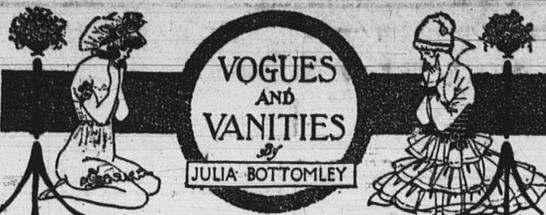

The custom of placing Grape-Nuts on the table at all meals is growing in American homes.

Both children and grown-ups help themselves to this delicious food as often as they like. It contains the entire nutriment of wheat and barley, digests quickly, and is wonderfully energizing.

Every table should have its daily ration of

"There's a Reason"

Two of the New Long Coats.

Perhaps you are looking for a coat which you will enjoy wearing in the evening and expect to press into service for afternoon occasions. In this case you might turn attention to velvet with the assurance that your judgment is directed to the right quarter. Velvet stands midway between cloth and fur, having a restricted following of its own. At its best it is fur-trimmed or made so that it can be conveniently worn with a fur set.

Something New in Matched Sets.

Faille silk and no end of work, with yarn flowers and kolinsky fur combined to make a hat and muff. With a narrow scarf, or high collar, of kolinsky about the neck, the wearer may achieve a very original and elegant set that no amount of money can exceed for smartness.

The KITCHEN CABINET

This world which clouds thy world with doubt is but a carpet inside out. It's when we view these shreds and ends, we know not what the whole intends. So, when on earth, things look but odd, They're working out some scheme of God.

WAYS WITH PEANUTS. Peanuts are so cheap, so common and so wholesome that one should learn more ways of serving them. In different localities it is called by various names, goober, ground nut, ground pea and earth nut. It is classed with nuts, but it really belongs to the leguminous plants, to which peas and beans belong.

Nut Pie Crust.—Take three table-spoonfuls of peanut butter to a cupful of flour and use as in making ordinary pastry, adding cold water to make a mixture to roll. Grind fresh roasted peanuts and mix with mayonnaise or any good salad dressing, spread on buttered bread for a sandwich filling.

A handful of fresh-roasted peanuts crushed with a rollingpin and sprinkled over head lettuce with a little shredded onion and a French dressing, makes a most delicious salad.

A half cupful of crushed peanuts sprinkled over the top of a custard pie before going into the oven is a pleasant change.

A little salt codfish is good to prevent nausea, either car sickness or seasickness is relieved by it.

HUNTER'S GAME BAG.

Rabbits are in season all winter and plentiful in most districts and they are good, if they are well cooked and seasoned. Use a cleaver to divide the portions, as one does chicken, saute in a little hot fat, then stew in a casserole with onion, a little lemon juice and a cupful of any kind of soup stock, or a little kitchen bouquet with water will do for stock;

Curried Pheasant.—Melt a half cupful of butter in a saucepan, add two chopped onions, and brown; then strain out the onion and lay in the pheasant, cut at the joints in neat pieces, fry five minutes, sprinkle with a tablespoonful of curry powder and cook five minutes longer; then add the fried onions, a chopped apple, two cupfuls of stock, salt and pepper to taste and simmer one hour. Add the lemon juice just before serving. Place the meat in the center of a hot platter and surround it with well seasoned boiled rice.

Squirrel Pie.—Arrange thin slices of bacon in the bottom of a deep baking dish, season with salt and pepper; add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one tablespoonful of mixed herbs and a cupful of white sauce. Cut two squirrels in serving-sized pieces and place them over the bacon; cover with a layer of sliced potatoes and place a cover of puff paste or any rich pastry will do. Bake an hour in a hot oven. Add another cupful of white sauce through the vent at the top; brush with egg and brown.

Venison Steak.—Lay the steak in a mixture of two tablespoonfuls of oil, one of vinegar and let it lie for an hour, turning it often. Drain and fry in a hot frying pan or broil before a hot fire. Serve with brown gravy and spiced grape jelly.

Some foods are of themselves so stimulating that they answer the purpose of a condiment and a food; such are onions, peppers and garlic. Herbs of various kinds also add their value as condiments and flavor.

Roast Opossum.—Soak the opossum over night in salted water, then score the skin every quarter of an inch. Place two chopped carrots, two onions, one green pepper, a bay leaf and a blade of mace, two cloves and a clove of garlic in a baking pan. Put in the opossum and roast slowly. Baste often and serve with guava jelly.

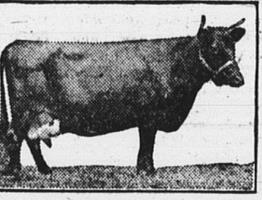

There is no action so slight nor so mean, but it may be done to a great purpose, and ennobled thereby; nor is any purpose so great but that slight acts may help it.—Ruskin.

EVEN PERIODS FOR MILKING

Cows Thus Milked Gave More Milk in Evening Than in Morning—Effect of Phosphates.

An English experiment station has definitely determined that the total quantity of milk is not influenced by equal or unequal periods of milking, but that the fat percentage is materially altered by the length of time between morning and evening milkings. Cows milked at even periods gave more milk in the evening than in the morning. The evening's milk was slightly the poorer in quality.

English Dexter Cow.

day. No appreciable effect was obtained either on the quantity or quality of the milk produced. Apparently this material had no effect on the stimulation of the nervous system; if anything, it had a depressing effect. The weight of cows receiving the precipitated bone ash showed a slight increase.

Experiments showed no advantage in milking three times a day was compared with twice a day. Cows fed palm-nut cake did not increase in weight as did those fed cotton cake, but they showed a looser skin with a glossier look. The palm-nut cake gave a higher percentage of fat in the milk.

TREATMENT FOR LEAKY TEAT

Forty-Penny Spike, Rounded Off to Point and Applied While Hot Will Prove Effective.

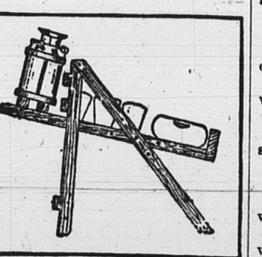

Many good cows are butchered because they milk so easily that the pressure in the udder during a big milk flow causes the teats to leak. Leaking teats can usually be identified by the concave depression at the milk opening. Hard milkers have a convex surface around the orifice. To stop a cow's teat from leaking, the best method I have found is to file a 40-penny spike, round off the point, heat the end hot enough to sear, and press it gently into the milk orifice, says a writer.

Hold in place till the cow informs you that you have done enough. It is better to repeat the operation than to do too much at the first trial. The burn will nearly always cure readily as the result of the soothing influence of the milk, but if it is slow in healing, grease with salve. When the scar forms around the milk orifice, it contracts the opening and prevents the milk from leaking.

CLEANLINESS OF THE DAIRY

Vital Factor in Successful Production of Milk—Rack for Sunning Cans Is Illustrated.

Cleanliness is a very vital factor in the successful production of milk. The illustration shows a simple sunning rack for milk cans and utensils. Any farmer can quickly construct this rack. All you need is a few 2-by-4s and 1-by-4s. The framework is of 2-by-4s and the braces are 1-by-4s. The cut shows an end view and the length will depend on the number of cans and utensils to be sunned. The rack should be adjustable to the direct rays of the sun. This is accomplished by the use of an iron bolt in securing the horizontal pieces at their intersection, with the upright 2-by-4s forming the pedestal. For clean milk cans, wash first in cold water, then steam (or scald, if steam is not available), then use the sun rack.

THOROUGH COOLING OF MILK

One of Most Important Steps in Its Care—Strain Immediately and Place in Cold Room.

Prompt and thorough cooling is one of the important steps in the care of milk. Milk should never be left in the milking pail for several minutes in a warm place. It should be strained at once and put in the coolest place possible.

PROUD OF THEIR MODEL SON

Of Course He Was Young, but Just Then His Habits Were Absolutely Irreproachable.

"Ah, well, wife," said John Rumbles, the honest farmer, "though our corn was stricken with quinsy this year, and our pigs all got the ear disease, and our cabbages were all hollow, and our wheat had appendicitis, we have the consolation of knowing that we have a model son. Just think, Roland has never smoked a cigarette in his whole life."

"Nor anything else, for that matter," replied Susan, his honest wife. "And he would no more think of taking strong drink than he would of flogging."

"True," asserted honest John, with a sickly smile. "And the regular hours he keeps!"

"Yes," put in honest Susan, eagerly. "To bed right after supper every night regular as clockwork."

"And for a while John smoked in contemplative silence, while Susan knitted away in her easy chair.

"But, of course, there's this," said John at length. "We can't tell how he'll be later on. We must remember he's only six months old."

"Ah, John, we mustn't borrow trouble. We have enough already, goodness knows," snickered Susan.—Detroit Free Press.

To Live Long!

A recipe given by a famous physician for long life was: "Keep the kidneys in good order! Try to eliminate through the skin and intestines the poisons that otherwise clog the kidneys. Avoid eating meat as much as possible; avoid too much salt, alcohol, tea. Drink plenty of water."

NEWS OF DETROIT

Detroit, Mich.—"Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets have saved my life, and I am grateful beyond the power of words to express. After years of suffering and finding no relief in the different medicines that I had taken, I was on the verge of giving up all hope, when I happened to pick up a pamphlet. I sent for a box of the Anuric Tablets, and after taking the first box I began to feel better, so continued their use. Now I feel like a different woman. The pains in my back are all gone and my work seems no longer a burden."

The DESTROYING ANGEL

By Louis Joseph Vance

Can you imagine yourself dead for five years? Suppose at the end of that time you turned up suddenly among old friends in New York city, asked for an accounting of your estate and announced your intention of finding the girl you had married under pressure before you disappeared—much to their shocked surprise! That's the position in which we find Hugh Whitaker in this installment. How his plans ruin the important plans of others about him, how he creates a furore at a big theatrical performance and how he finds his wife, is told with dramatic effect.

Whitaker laughed quietly and turned the conversation, accepting the manager's pseudo-confidences at their face value—that is, as pure bluff, quite consistent with the managerial pose.

They rose presently and made their way out into the crowded, blatant night of Broadway.

"We'll walk, if you don't mind," Max suggested. "It isn't far, and I'd like to get a line on the house as it goes in." He sighed affectedly. "Heaven knows when I'll see another swell audience mobbing one of my attractions!"

They pushed forward slowly through the eddying tides, elbowed by a matchless motley of humanity, deafened by its thousand tongues, dazzled by blindness of walls of living light. Whitaker experienced a sensation of participating in a royal progress: Max was plainly a man of mark; he left a wake of rippling interest. At every third step somebody halted him, as a rule by his first name; generally he responded by a curt nod and a tightening of his teeth upon his cigar.

They turned east through Forty-sixth street, shouldered by a denser rabble whose faces, all turned in one direction, shone livid with the glare of a gigantic electric sign, midway down the block:

THEATER MAX

SARA LAW'S FAREWELL.

It was nearly half-past eight; the house had been open since seven; and still a queue ran from the gallery doors to Broadway. The lobby itself was crowded to suffocation with an accidental durbur of barbaric magnificence, the city's supreme manifestation of its religion, the ultimate rite in the worship of the pomps of the flesh.

"Look at that," Max grumbled through his cigar. "Ain't it a shame?"

"What?" Whitaker had to lift his voice to make it carry above the buzzing of the throng.

"The money I'm losing," returned the manager, vividly disgusted. "I could've filled the Metropolitan opera house three times over!"

He swung on his heel and began to push his way out of the lobby. "Come along—no use trying to get in this way."

Whitaker followed, to be led down a blind alley between the theater and the adjoining hotel. An illuminated sign advertised the stage door, through which, via a brief hallway, they entered the postscenium and—Max dragging him by the arm—passed through a small door into the gangway behind the boxes.

"Curtain's just up," Max told him; "Sara doesn't come on till near the middle of the act. Make yourself comfortable; I'll be back before long."

He drew aside a curtain and ushered his guest into the right-hand stage-box, then vanished. The few empty stalls were rapidly filling up. There was a fluent movement through the aisles. A subdued hum and rustle rose from that portion of the audience which was already seated. The business going on upon the stage was receiving little attention—from Whitaker as little as from anyone. The opening scene in the development of the drama interested the gathering little or not at all; it was hanging in suspense upon the unfolding of some extraordinary development, something unprecedented and extraneous, foreign to the play.

Max slipped quietly into the box and handed his guest a program. "Better get over here," he suggested in a hoarse whisper, indicating a chair near the rail. "You may never have another chance to see the greatest living actress. Wonderful house," he whispered, sitting down behind Whitaker. "Drummond hasn't shown up yet, though."

"That so?" Whitaker returned over his shoulder.

"Yes; it's funny; never knew him to be so late. He always has the aisle seat, fourth row, center—but he'll be along presently."

He glanced idly at his program, indifferently absorbing the information that "Jules Max has the honor to present Miss Sara Law in her first and greatest success entitled Joan Thursday—a play in three acts."

The audience stirred expectantly; a movement ran through it like the movement of waters, murmurous, upon a shore. Whitaker's gaze was drawn to the stage as if by an implacable force. Max shifted on the chair behind him and said something indistinguishable, in an unnatural tone.

A woman had come upon the stage, suddenly and tempestuously, banging a door behind her. The audience got the barest glimpse of her profile as, pausing momentarily, she eyed the other actors. Then, without speaking, she turned and walked up-stage, her back to the footlights.

Applause broke out like a thunder-clap, pealing hesitantly through the big auditorium, but the actress showed no consciousness of it. She was standing before a cheap mirror, removing her hat, arranging her hair with the typical, unconscious gestures of a weary shopgirl; she was acting—living the scene, with no time to waste in pandering to her popularity by bows and set smiles; she remained before the glass, prolonging the business, until the applause subsided.

Whitaker received an impression as of a tremendous force at work across the footlights. The woman diffused an effect as of a terrible and boundless energy under positive control. She was not merely an actress, not even merely a great actress; she was the very soul of the drama of today.

Beyond this he knew in his heart that she was his wife. Sara Law was the woman he had married in that sleepy Connecticut town, six years before that night. He had not yet seen her face clearly, but he knew. To find himself mistaken would have shaken the foundations of his understanding.

Under cover of the applause, he turned to Max.

"Who is that? What is her name?"

"The divine Sara," Max answered, his eyes shining.

"I mean, what is her name off the stage, in private life?"

"The same," Max nodded with conviction; "Sara Law's the only name she's ever worn in my acquaintance with her."

At that moment, the applause having subsided to such an extent that it was possible for her to make herself heard, the actress swung round from the mirror and addressed one of the other players. Her voice was clear, strong and vibrant, yet sweet; but Whitaker paid no heed to the lines she spoke. He was staring, fascinated, at her face.

Sight of it set the seal of certainty upon conviction: She was one with Mary Ladislav. He had forgotten her so completely in the lapse of years as to have been unable to recall her features and coloring, yet he had needed only to see to recognize her beyond any possibility of doubt. Those big, relief, illumined by the glow reflected from the footlights. It was inevitable that she should see him. Her eyes fastened, dilating, upon his. The scene faltered perceptibly. She stood transfixed.

In the hush Max cried impatiently: "What the devil!" The words broke the spell of amazement upon the actress. In a twinkling the pitiful counterfeit of the shopgirl was rent and torn away; it hung only in shreds and tatters upon an individuality wholly strange to Whitaker: a larger, stronger woman seemed to have started out of the mask.

She turned, calling imperatively into the wings: "Ring down!"

With a rush the curtain descended as pandemonium broke out on both sides of it.

CHAPTER VI.

The Late Extra.

Impulsively Whitaker got up to follow Max, then hesitated and sank back in doubt, his head awhirl. He was for the time being shocked out of all capacity for clear reasoning or right thinking. Uppermost in his consciousness he had a half-formed notion that it wouldn't help matters if he were to force himself in upon the crisis behind the scenes.

Beyond all question his wife had recognized in him the man whom she had been given every reason to believe dead: a discovery so unnerving as to render her temporarily unable to continue.

This, then, explained Drummond's reluctance to have him bidden to the supper party; whatever ultimate course of action he planned to pursue, Drummond had been unwilling, perhaps pardonably so, to have his romance overthrown and altogether shattered in a single day. He had lied, lied desperately, doubtless meaning to encompass a marriage before Whitaker could find his wife, and so furnish him with every reason that could influence an honorable man to disappear a second time.

On the other hand, Max to a certainty was ignorant of the relationship between his star and his old time friend, just as he must have been ignorant of her identity with the one time Mary Ladislav. For that matter, Whitaker had to admit that, damning as was the evidence to controvert the theory, Drummond might be just as much in the dark as Max was. It was only fair to suspend judgment. In the meantime

The audience was getting beyond control. In the gallery the gods were beginning to testify to their normal intolerance with shrill whistles, cat-calls, sporadic bursts of hand-clapping and a steady, sinister rumble of stamping feet. In the orchestra and dress circle people were moving about restlessly and talking at the top of their voices in order to make themselves heard above the growling din.

Abruptly Max himself appeared at one side of the proscenium arch. It was plain to those nearest the stage that he was seriously disturbed. There was a noticeable hesitancy in his manner, a pathetic frenzy in his habitually mild and lustrous eyes. Advancing halfway to the middle of the apron, he paused, begging attention with a pudgy hand. It was a full minute before the gallery would let him be heard.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he announced plaintively, "I much regret to inform you that Miss Law has suffered a severe nervous shock"—his gaze wandered in perplexed inquiry toward the right-hand stagebox, then was hastily averted—"and will not be able to continue."

Wave upon wave of sound swept through the auditorium to break, roaring, against the obdurate curtain. Max with difficulty contrived to make himself disconnectedly audible.

"Ladies and . . ." he shouted, sweat beading his perturbed forehead . . . "regret . . . impossible to continue . . . money . . . box office . . ."

An angry howl drowned him out. He retreated at accelerated discretion.

Whitaker, slipping through the stage door behind the boxes, ran into the stage manager standing beside the first entrance, heatedly explaining to anyone who would listen the utter futility of offering box-office prices in return for seat checks which in the majority of instances had cost their holders top-notch speculator prices.

"They'll wreck the theater," he shouted excitedly, mopping his brow with his coat sleeve, "what t'ell'd she wana pull a raw one like this for?"

Whitaker caught his arm in a grasp compelling attention.

Well, what's your guess? Will Whitaker's wife receive him with gratitude and open arms—because he saved her honor long ago—or will she look him over calmly and chase him off the place?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

He Knew in His Heart That She Was His Wife.

Intensely burning eyes, that drawn and pallid face, the quick, nervous movements of her thin white hands, the slenderness of her tall, awkward, immature figure—in every line and contour, in every gesture and inflection, she reproduced the Mary Ladislav whom he had married.

And yet . . . Max was whispering over his shoulder:

"Wonderful make-up—what?"

"Make-up!" Whitaker retorted. "She's not made up—she's herself to the last detail."

Amusement glistened in the manager's round little eyes: "You don't know her. Wait till you get a pipe at her off the stage." Then he checked the reply that was shaping on Whitaker's lips, with a warning lift of his hand and brows: "Sah! Catch this, now. She's a wonder in this scene."

The superb actress behind the counterfeit of the hunted and hungry shopgirl was holding spellbound with her inevitable witchery the most sophisticated audience in the world; like wheat in a windstorm it swayed to the modulations of her marvelous voice as it ran through a passage-at-arms with the termanent. Suddenly ceasing to speak, she turned down to a chair near the footlights, followed by a torrent of shrill vituperation under the lash of which she quivered like a whipped thoroughbred.

Abruptly, pausing with her hands on the back of the chair, there came a change. The actress had glanced across the footlights; Whitaker could not but follow the direction of her gaze; the eyes of both focussed for a brief instant on the empty aisle-seat in the fourth row. A shade of additional pallor showed on the woman's face. She looked quickly, questioning, toward the box of her manager.

Seated as he was so near the stage, Whitaker's face stood out in rugged

Educated Rooster.

"Spizzerinkum" is an old name even for a rooster, but this rooster is no ordinary fowl. The bird comes from a strain of Banded Plymouth Rocks, was hatched last May and weighs six pounds. He is owned by E. E. Bennett of Hartford City, who refuses to part with his prize-winner at any price. Judges at various fairs where he has been shown, have told the owner that he is a most promising bird, and this is borne out by the fact that $100 has been offered for him.

"Spizzerinkum" is also an educated fowl. One of his chief delights is riding the seat of a specially constructed wagon and holding the reins over eight boys who act as steeds for him. He drove this team in the centennial parade at Hartford City.—Indianapolis News.

Confirmed Suspicion.

Uncle Mose was one of those omniscient persons who always refuse to acknowledge either astonishment or ignorance. When the circus and the sideshow came to town and the prestidigitator called for someone to go up on the stage, Mose was pushed forward. Presently the magician was taking various wonderful articles out of Mose's garments. Lastly, he extracted a pair of white rabbits from Mose's bushy wool.

"Weren't you surprised at the rabbits, Mose?" asked his master, afterward.

"No, sah," Mose answered. "Fact is, sah, I'd been suspecting' dey's some rabbits up there fo' some time."

Altogether Too Economical.

Mr. A.—So the Tompkins-Chorkins match is broken off, is it?

Mr. B.—Yes. The Tompkins objected to Chorkins being so economical.

Mr. A.—You astonish me.

Mr. B.—Yes. You know he is a contractor himself, and so sent circulars to all the ministers in town asking for their lowest estimates for performing the ceremony.

Strong drinks like beer, whiskey, tea and coffee, irritate the kidneys and habitual use tends to weaken them. Daily headache, with headache, nervousness, dizzy spells and a rheumatic condition should be taken as a warning of kidney trouble. Cut out, or at least moderate, the stimulant, and use Doan's Kidney Pills. They are fine for weak kidneys. Thousands recommend them.

J. B. Geller, 239 Broadway, Grand Rapids, Mich., says: "I do a great deal of sitting and that weakened my kidneys, causing back-ache. I had a steady dull pain through my loins and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. I felt miserable in every way. Finally, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me completely that I haven't been troubled by my back or kidneys since."

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands of Men and Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Nature warns you when the track of health is not clear. Kidney and bladder troubles cause many annoying symptoms and great inconvenience both day and night.

Unhealthy kidneys may cause lumbago, rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints or muscles, at times have headache or indigestion, as time passes you may have a pale complexion, puffiness or dark circles under the eyes, sometimes feel as though you had heart trouble, may have plenty of ambition but no strength, get weak and lose flesh.

If such conditions are permitted to continue, serious results may be expected; Kidney Trouble in its very worst form may steal upon you.

Prevalence of Kidney Disease. Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalence of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are among the most common diseases that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patients, who usually content themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease may constantly undermine the system.

If you feel that your kidneys are the cause of your sickness or run down condition, try taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the famous kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys improve, they will help the other organs to health.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., which you will find on every bottle.

SPECIAL NOTE—You may obtain a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. This gives you the opportunity to prove the remarkable merit of this medicine. They will also send you a book of valuable information, containing many of the thousands of grateful letters received from men and women who say they found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed in kidney, liver and bladder troubles. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample size bottle. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

INCORRIGIBLE FLIRT.

A newly married couple have just moved into a bungalow in what the real estate people call "a new development" near New York. The benevolent land company runs an electric car from the property to the railway station. This car, which (like the Toonerville trolley) meets all trains, is manned, as usual, by a conductor and a motor-man, both of whom are naturally on very friendly terms with the patrons. The other day the bride's mother came to visit her. She noticed that her daughter often waved a greeting toward the electric car as it passed the house. "Why, Gladys," said the old lady, "do you know all the conductors on this line already?"—Exchange.

"What do I get?" asked the defendant.

KNOCKOUT FOR MR. BROWN

His Better Half's Story of Experience With Lottery Certainly Not Flattering to Him.

Mrs. Brown has a special horror of lotteries, and at all times and places she embraces every opportunity of holding forth with vehemence concerning this pet abomination. Her indignation will therefore be imagined when, one evening, her worthy spouse came home and proudly announced that he had joined a goose club. For something like an hour she poured the vials of wrath on her unfortunate husband's head, while he endeavored meekly to bear it all.

At last the warmth of the attack proved quite too much for the long-enduring John, and he decided that the time had come for him to fire up in return.

"I suppose, my dear," said he, endeavoring to be sarcastic, "you were never in a lottery, were you?"

But, alas for the speaker! Mrs. Brown turned upon him with withering scorn.

"Once, John, and only once," said she. "They say, as you know, that marriage is a lottery. Well, I went in for that, and I myself won a goose!"—London Tit-Bits.

He glanced idly at his program, indifferently absorbing the information that "Jules Max has the honor to present Miss Sara Law in her first and greatest success entitled Joan Thursday—a play in three acts."

The audience stirred expectantly; a movement ran through it like the movement of waters, murmurous, upon a shore. Whitaker's gaze was drawn to the stage as if by an implacable force. Max shifted on the chair behind him and said something indistinguishable, in an unnatural tone.

YOU may live to be 110 and never feel old enough to vote, but it's certain-sure you'll not know the joy and contentment of a friendly old jimmy pipe or a hand rolled

DRYS WIN STATE; HOME RULE LOST IN RECORD VOTE

UP-STATE GOES HEAVILY AGAINST ALL WET ISSUES

UPPER PENINSULA VOTES DRY

Prohibitionists Jubilant as Counties Rolled Up Majority Exceeding Their Expectations

Detroit—From the moment the returns began to roll in from up the state the prohibition cause took on an aspect of victory that exceeded the expectation of the most ardent of the "drys" as voiced in the campaign.

Wets Win in Detroit. Wayne county and Detroit particularly was relied upon by the "wets" to register in a whopper vote in favor of home rule and against the prohibition amendment.

Towns Vote Dry. Grand Rapids went on record for a dry Michigan as did also Battle Creek and Jackson. The first returns to reach the ranks of the "drys" at their headquarters the night of election was the report from Northville.

First returns from Oakland county increased the majority in favor of a dry state. Farmington gave a majority of 200 for prohibition and the majority against home rule was 186.

REPUBLICAN TICKET WINS IN STATE

ALBERT E. SLEEPER

Returns on governor show that Albert E. Sleeper, Republican candidate, carried the state by a slightly larger margin than did Mr. Hughes.

Final returns indicated it was an easy election for Lieutenant-Governor Luren D. Dickinson, of Charlotte, to succeed himself.

Governor-elect Albert E. Sleeper, tired from his arduous campaign, and hardly smiling, so weary was he, arrived in Detroit Tuesday night after his election was absolutely assured.

Sleeper Delighted.

"I am delighted," he said, "delighted beyond words. I had faith in the Republican party and it has been justified, both as to our next president and our state ticket. We're all going through. The people of Michigan will find that neither I nor my colleagues on the state ticket will be unmindful of the honor they have given us, and they will find that we shall carry out our promises of the best government of which we are capable."

MARX ELECTED MAYOR FOR THIRD TERM

Detroit—Oscar B. Marx was elected Tuesday to serve his third term as mayor. His majority over Judge Conolly was 10,000.

RECORD VOTE CAST IN DETROIT

Heaviest Vote Polled in the City's History.

Detroit—By far the heaviest voting in the history of Detroit occurred at Tuesday's election when more than 120,000 ballots were cast, while fully 10,000 more voters were disfranchised.

When the polls closed at 9 o'clock scores of voters waiting outside, but through a late ruling of the election commission, ropes were thrown around the waiting lines, all who had arrived before 9 o'clock being placed within the ropes, and allowed to vote as fast as room could be made for them in the booth.

Many Voters Delayed. Insufficient instructions from the election commission, failure of supervisors and inspectors to appear, improper allotment of ballots and other incidents of the sort, caused a marked delay in the voting in a large number of precincts in the city Tuesday.

In the First district, Fourth ward, the delay threatened for a time to disfranchise many voters, who it appeared, would not be able to cast their votes before the polls closed.

For some time after the polls were supposed to open confusion reigned in this precinct. The only member of the election board to appear was Thomas G. Crag, registrar. The election commission, it appeared, had not provided inspectors to take the places of the former board.

Ballots Were Missing. The election commission was immediately notified and inspectors, clerks and supervisors were obtained. Then when it was announced the scores who were waiting outside could begin voting, it was discovered one form of ballot was missing and in its place was a duplicate ballot.

Unfamiliarity with their work caused considerable confusion among members of the election board at the opening of the polls in numerous districts. In several precincts the policemen instructed the men on various points until the election commission could be consulted.

There was little evidence of crooked work. Challengers, with lists of names of those who registered and were under suspicion, stood by. There were a large number of challenges against those registered whose addresses were found inaccurate through the registry department of the United States mails. These men were sworn in and their votes accepted.

NOISY CROWDS GREET DETROIT ELECTION NIGHT

Detroit's election night voice was a squawking, rattling, ringing, shrieking bedlam that rose over streets seething with roisters, and filled with masses watching the screened election returns.

It was a cheerful crowd under its dining and clamoring surface. It was an earnest crowd, else in its din the human voice added little to the total volume. It was a crowd that rang bells, tooted horns, rattled rattlers and sounded squawkers. Although divided, its attitude was orderly.

When the first returns from New York flickered at late twilight on big canvas screens in the downtown section announcing that Charles Evans Hughes, Republican presidential candidate, had carried that state, a crowd of approximately 50,000 election watchers jammed every available inch of space within viewing distance of the screens.

President of Drys Wires "Billy" Sunday.

Predicting the state dry by at least 75,000 and possibly more, Richard H. Scott, president of Michigan Anti-Saloon league, quit hearing returns at 2 o'clock this morning. Before he went home he sent this telegram: "William A. Sunday, Winona Lake, Ind.

"Returns indicate Michigan gives prohibition amendment 75,000 majority. Home rule defeated by even larger majority. Michigan owes you a debt of gratitude it can never pay. "RICHARD H. SCOTT."

At the same time Grant Hudson, reviewing the result of the election, predicted national prohibition within three years.

MARYLAND FOR WILSON BY LARGE PLURALITY

Baltimore.—President Wilson carried Maryland by a plurality estimated at 16,510, but Congressman David J. Lewis, "father of the parcel post," was defeated in the contest for the United States senatorship by Dr. Joseph I. France, whose estimated plurality was 6,367. Lewis' defeat was attributed largely to the openly expressed hostility of the democratic organization in Baltimore and to the anti-prohibitionists because of his vote in congress for a national prohibition amendment. Baltimore, which gave President Wilson 9,300 plurality, gave Dr. France 9,782 plurality.

Four democratic and two republican congressmen were elected, a republican gain of one. In addition to the five incumbents, Frederick N. Zilman, of Cumberland, republican, was elected from the sixth district formerly represented by Mr. Lewis.

Prohibition was defeated in seven of the 11 localities in which the proposition was voted upon in the state. Baltimore gave a majority of 43,000 against it. Annapolis rejected it by 500, while Havre De Grace, at which racing is conducted, went "dry" by 22 votes. Hagerstown voted "dry."

The budget amendment to the state constitution was adopted by about 50,000 majority.

DEMOCRATS SWEEP STATE OF UTAH

Salt Lake.—Woodrow Wilson has carried Utah by about 15,000 plurality. United States Senator George Sutherland, republican, has been defeated by Judge William H. King. Simon Bamberger, democrat, has been elected governor, and the entire democratic state ticket swept the state. Both democratic candidates for congress were elected.

Mr. Bamberger is the first democrat and the first non-Mormon to be elected governor of Utah.

Glenn Miller, republican state chairman, said: "President Wilson has carried the state by more than 5,000, and the indications are that Senator Sutherland is beaten. We hope to save the governor."

PRESIDENT WINS IN OHIO

Cincinnati.—President Wilson appeared to have a good lead in Ohio. His plurality over Mr. Hughes may run over 60,000. All doubt that Mr. Wilson had carried the state was removed Wednesday morning, when the republican state headquarters conceded the state to the president.

New York.—The election of Charles E. Hughes and Charles W. Fairbanks, which practically had been conceded, became involved in doubt. A swing toward President Wilson in the states of California, Washington, Delaware, South Dakota, and New Hampshire threatened to totally wipe out the indicated Hughes plurality in the electoral college.

The situation is unparalleled in the recent history of the country, save in 1884, when the contest between Grover Cleveland and James G. Blaine required the counting of the last ballot to decide it.

See Possible Need of Official Count. In many cases an official count may be necessary to decide, but there is a probability that the final result will be known before an official count.

The gain of United States senators on the Republican ticket in Indiana was offset by the election of Gerry, in Rhode Island, and Wolcott, in Delaware, Democrats. New and Watson won in Indiana.

Aside from this the Republican gain in the senate and house is not affected by the narrowing of the race between Wilson and Hughes.

Polls Old Party Figures. The "doubtful states" went for the Republican nominee. New York gave Mr. Hughes a splendid majority and New Jersey, Maine and Vermont will cast their electoral votes for the G. O. P. standard.

The Hughes' pluralities approximated the figures of the combined Taft and Roosevelt vote of four years ago. The efforts of one wing of the Progressives to drive the members of their party into the Wilson camp failed.

Returns in New York showed plainly that the record of Governor Charles S. Whitman has been satisfactory to the electorate. President Wilson ran far ahead of his ticket, as also did William M. Calder, Republican candidate for United States senator. William F. McCombs, one of the leaders of the movement to put Mr. Wilson in the white house four years ago, was beaten for United States senator.

In Indiana, where the political battle was bitter, the Democratic candidates for the United States senate, John W. Kern and Thomas Taggart, present incumbents, were defeated by Harry S. New and James Watson, organization Republicans and towers of strength in the Republican anti-Progressive old guard.

Hughes Wins Wisconsin and Indiana. Wisconsin, one of the states upon which the Democratic managers relied for victory in the event of losing New York, was carried by Hugh S. Senator Lafollette and Governor Phillip, both Republicans, have been re-elected.

Indiana, the pivotal state of many a presidential election, gave 15 electoral votes to Hughes. The Republican ticket won in Indianapolis by a large plurality. Hughes also won Michigan by an old-time Republican vote.

New England in Line. New England went Republican by an overwhelming plurality of the popular vote. Maine, fully as positively as in its September election, repudiated the Wilson administration.

New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont returned Republican pluralities, as in the past. In Massachusetts the vigorous fight waged by the Democrats, particularly in industrial centers, availed little, for Hughes swept the state and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was re-elected.

Louisiana returned an old-time Democratic plurality as did the balance of the "solid south."

Maine is Republican. While the state went for Hughes, the Republican margin has been reduced compared to the vote for governor in September. Then the Republicans piled up 12,000 plurality in Portland, the largest city in Maine, Hughes won by 1,400. His margin in the state was approximately 10,000.

The general result on the face of returns indicates that the split in the Republican party occasioned by the Roosevelt defection in 1912 has been completely healed.

WOMEN REAP BIG CROP IN ELECTION; SOCIALISTS ALSO.

Miss Jeanette Rankin, Montana suffragist, will be the first woman congress "man."

Drys carry Michigan, Nebraska, Montana, South Dakota; lose Maryland, Missouri and probably California.

Socialists elect two representatives—Myer London, of New York, and Berger, of Milwaukee, and possibly also Hillquit and Lunn in New York. This is the first time more than one socialist has sat in congress.

South Dakota grants woman the ballot.

SIXTY EXECUTED; OTHERS WARNED

VILLA BANDITS CAPTURE TORREON; SLAY MERCHANTS WHO TRY TO SHIP GOODS.

WOMEN OIL-SOAKED-BURNED

Many Prominent Families Are Leaving Chihuahua For the Mexican Border.

El Paso, Tex.—Villa bandits have captured Torreon and are pressing a campaign of terror, which further is marked by Villista occupancy of other cities recently, according to arrivals from the interior. Three Torreon merchants, who had attempted to send their goods out of the city on the approach of the bandits, were put to death by order of Villa, whose forces now number 10,000, the refugees say.

Before reaching Chihuahua, the arrivals say, they were told by Mexicans fleeing from Parral that Villa had caused oil to be poured upon the heads of two women who had angered him, and had set fire to the oil-soaked hair, making the women human torches. With heads ablaze, the two women ran perching through the town until they dropped exhausted and quickly died.

The names of 60 Mexicans, who were put to death by Villa at Santa Rosalia, are reported by refugees to have been sent to Chihuahua by Villa as a warning to the people of that city of the fate that awaits those who oppose Villista occupancy.

Many families of prominent Mexicans in Chihuahua are arriving at the border on every train coming out. It is said by people from there that warning was sent from Mexico City to several of the leading families to leave the city immediately.

Refugees from the Santa Rosalia district confirmed the reported killing by Villistas of Dr. Fisher, an aged American physician, who for 30 years had been treating the poor people without charge. He was stabbed to death by Villa bandits because he would not give them $2,000 American money, which he was said to have had in his house.

At Santa Rosalia and in villages near Parral, Villistas killed women and children and burned their bodies, refugees say. By capturing railway equipment, Villa has been able to run trains from Parral to Torreon. It is claimed, and he has captured and is holding all towns between the two cities, including Jimenez and Escalon, important towns abandoned by Carranza forces.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

The United States immigration bureau of Detroit examined 1,420 aliens during the month ending Oct. 25, according to the report of Chief Inspector G. Oliver Frick. Of this number, 90 were excluded from the United States, and 233 United States citizens who have been making their homes in Canada, returned to live in Detroit.

The supply officer of the Thirty-first regiment was requested by General Bell to place an order for turkey for a Thanksgiving dinner for the Detroit regiment so that if this regiment should through later developments still be on the border on November 30, the boys would have a homelike feast.

"Jimmy" Shultz, 25, of Jackson was found dead in a box car at Lansing. With him in the car were eight men, all in drunken stupors. Over-indulgence in alcohol and Jamaica ginger was the cause of Shultz's death, according to Coroner Palmer.

Average temperature for October was 53 degrees, 1.3 degrees above normal for the month and the same average which was shown in October, 1915. The highest mark was 85 degrees, October 8, and the lowest 34 degrees, October 20. There was 2.48 inches rainfall, 10 above normal.

MANY BODIES COME ASHORE

As the Result of the Collision of Two Steamers off Irish Coast.

London.—Forty-three bodies of victims of collision between the steamers Connemara and Retriever were washed ashore on the Irish coast. It is now believed that from 90 to 100 persons perished when the two vessels crashed together in a violent hurricane off Carlingford Lough.

Among the bodies picked up between Killeek and Anfield Point, were those of Capt. G. H. Doeg, of the Connemara, and his son. The partly clothed corpses of two women passengers of the Connemara also drifted ashore.

Many of the bodies were naked. Some were so badly crushed that they can never be identified. Others bore absolutely no marks of the disaster. The Connemara carried 51 passengers and a crew of 30; and had her lower decks filled with cattle. The Retriever carried a crew of 13 and no passengers so far as is known. It is believed that no American was on either ship.

Ten bodies were washed ashore at Canfield Point, 50 miles north of Dublin. Near the same spot a number of cattle swam ashore from the Connemara. The bodies of many more were found along the coast, mingled with human corpses and wreckage of the two steamers.

RAILROAD CHANGES HANDS

The D. B. C. & W. Buys Port Huron Southern Railroad.

Port Huron.—The Port Huron Southern railroad, a small railroad system operating between the main lines of the Pere Marquette and Grand Trunk railways and several factories in the southern part of the city, has been purchased by the Detroit, Bay City & Western railroad, according to announcement made here. The D. B. C. & W. railway, which is being built to Port Huron from Bay City, will be in operation by December 1. This city raised $40,000 as a bonus to the builders of the road, which will be presented when the first train enters the city.

RAILROADS EARN $246,558,236

The Total Operating Expenses Were 195,369,812.

Washington.—Reports from 124 of 185 railways whose revenues exceed $1,000,000, issued by the interstate commerce commission, show that their net revenue from railway operations ran up to $246,558,236, an increase of more than $40,000,000 over the previous September. A complete report for July shows that all the roads having $1,000,000 revenues or more had a net revenue from railway operation of $107,558,005, a $20,000,000 increase over the previous July. The complete total railway operating revenues were $302,917,817 and total railway operating expenses $195,369,812.

MICHIGAN GUARD NOTES

A communication from Gen. Funston informed the officers of the 31st Michigan Infantry definitely, for the first time, that they were to be mustered out at Fort Wayne, Detroit, instead of at the state reservation at Grayling.

Gen. Funston has ruled on an application from several Detroit soldiers in El Paso they would each receive from the government in cash what it would cost to transport and feed a soldier from El Paso, Texas to Detroit.

Private Walter C. Sweet, Co. D, Thirty-first, has been discharged from the army because he did not know who was president of the United States or colonel of his regiment, and couldn't read the newspaper satisfactorily. Sweet, in his youth, suffered an injury that caused this deficiency.

MICHIGAN LIBRARY IS WIDELY USED

Report Shows That Many Thousand Books Have Been Sent Out Over State.

NOW CIRCULATING PICTURES

New Feature Has Been Added to Work Done by Institution at Capital—4,213 Loaned in 19 Months.

Lansing.—The Michigan state library comprises many thousand volumes, but the advantages which these books offer to the state outside of the citizens of Lansing, capital employees and members of the legislature are little known to many people.

As a matter of fact, however, during the past 19 months 10,238 books were sent out to 172 towns in the state in the form of traveling libraries. These traveling libraries are sent not only to schools, but to church young people's societies, lodges, clubs and other like organizations.

The state library receives 341 current periodicals and 39 daily newspapers. These are placed in the reading room. Upon a count taken by one of the members of the library staff, during 19 months, it was found that 5,925 people came in to read and that 3,100 were from M. A. C.

A great amount of work has been done along the line of the traveling libraries. Schools, Sunday day, Epworth leagues, granges, and other associations make regular application for the books. Printed lists are sent out and selection may be made from these. Then the books are sent by freight. The freight charges are paid both ways by the borrower. The library may be kept from three to six months. Every superintendent of schools has the privilege of getting books. These are general libraries.

Of the 232 special libraries sent to the study clubs of the state during the last biennial period, 100 were to women's clubs, 20 to schools, ten to granges and miscellaneous study clubs, and three to factories and stores, totaling in all 6,925 books, 692 pamphlets, 230 clippings. The pamphlets and clippings were circulated during the last year only, as these collections were not started until after the special library work of the first year was practically finished.

Another feature of the work that the library is adopting is that of circulating framed and unframed pictures. The report shows that 4213 have been sent out in 19 months. The library has made a specialty of lantern cards for the use of colleges and lectures, 700 of which are circulating.

Rape State High Schools.

As a result of examinations required of every freshman entering the Michigan Agricultural college, Prof. W. W. Johnson, head of the department of English, has issued a statement condemning the preparatory work being done in the state high schools.

Professor Johnson maintains that the M. A. C. freshmen are no exception to the general rule, for other colleges are reporting the same difficulty. "Students are being turned out, supposedly ready for college, who cannot spell the ordinary English words, not alone knowing where to use them."

Out of 543 freshmen, 215 were found to be deficient in spelling and 140 in grammar. Fifty-eight of this number were girls.

3,389 Accidents in State.

According to the statistical report of the industrial accident board for October, the total number of accidents reported during the month was 3,389.

Of this number 1,541 brought compensation. Of these 46 were fatal, 144 resulted in permanent partial disability, and 1,351 in temporary total disability, exceeding two weeks.

The total sum paid in compensation to injured workmen, or their dependents, was $164,776.67.

Michigan to Get Guard Money.

El Paso, Tex.—Michigan troops have been accepted as part of the National Guard of the United States and are entitled to a portion of the money allowed for the support of such organizations. Word to that effect is contained in official notification to Gen. John P. Kirk and may be considered a compliment to the organization and the state it represents.

Under the law of June 3, 1916, a provision is made that only such states as are efficient shall be entitled to financial assistance from the government in supporting their military units. The war department is made the sole judge of this efficiency, and the standard is so high that only the best will get in under the wire.

New Corporations.

Ideal Metallic Furniture company, Detroit, $25,000; Charles W. Kirchner, John Kohler, Peter A. Menth. The Barstow club of Detroit, Detroit. Imported Balkan club, Kalamaazoo. I. O. F. Building association of St. Clair, St. Clair, $3,000; A. A. Stuart, J. Meddler, W. T. Hendricks. Gibson Garage company, Detroit, $25,000; James A. Gibson, Walter G. Gibson, John W. Yarex. Michigan Tea Eusk company, Holland; $50,000.

The IRON CLAW by ARTHUR STRINGER

AUTHOR OF "THE OCCASIONAL OFFENDER," "THE WIRE TAPPERS," "GUN RUNNERS," ETC. NOVELIZED FROM THE PATHE PHOTO PLAY OF THE SAME NAME

SYNOPSIS.

On Windward Island Pallardi intrigues Mrs. Golden into an appearance of evil which causes Golden to capture and imprison the Italian by branding his face and crushing his hand. Pallardi floods the island and kidnaps Golden's little daughter, Margery. Twelve years later in New York Margery is rescued by Legar, a masked man who takes her to his father's home, whence she is recaptured. Margery's mother fruitlessly implores Golden to find their daughter. The Laughing Mask again takes Margery away from Legar. Legar sends to Golden a warning and a demand for a portion of the chart of Windward Island. Margery meets her mother. The chart is lost in a fight between Manley and one of Legar's henchmen, but is recovered by the Laughing Mask. Count De Espares figures in a dubious attempt to entrap Legar, and claims to have killed him. Golden's house is dynamited during a masked ball. Legar escapes but De Espares is crushed in the ruins. Margery rescues the Laughing Mask from the police. Manley finds Margery not indifferent to his love. He saves her from Maulit's poisoned arrows. Manley plans a mock funeral which fails to accomplish the desired purpose, the capture of the Iron Claw and his gang. Margery is saved from death at the hands of the Iron Claw by the Laughing Mask. An attempt by the Iron Claw to blow up the De Espares cottage is frustrated in the nick of time.

THIRTEENTH EPISODE

The Hidden Face.

Enoch Golden looked at the heavy shadows about his daughter's eyes. Then he seated himself heavily in the arm-chair which she had so abstractedly turned about for him. "Margery," he said with an effort at sternness, "are you still worrying about that young Manley?" For a moment or two the girl remained silent.

"I can't help it, father," she finally acknowledged. And she further discomfited her frowning parent by a suspicion of tears in her downcast eyes. "But I don't believe David Manley is any more dead than I am!" the old millionaire finally and stoutly asserted.

"Then why has there been no word of him, no trace of him, since the night of that awful explosion?" This question, apparently, was not an easy one to answer. But Enoch Golden was not to be lightly disarmed from his task of consolation.

"I'll tell you what I believe, my girl. I believe everything's all right, no matter what you think. Everything's going to come out all right. Before the week is out, if what the police tell me is true, we're going to have this man Legar safe behind the prison bars where he belongs. What's troubling me more than David Manley, that now, is the problem of this Laughing Mask person. I had nothing less than a deputy commissioner call me up this morning, for the authorities down in Center street are convinced of the fact this Laughing Mask would be a better haul than even Legar himself. They claim to have a clear record against him, and in ten minutes I've got to face a delegation from the detective bureau and tell them for the twentieth time just how arm, she noticed, was carried in a voluminous white cotton sling. "Didn't I tell you to keep away from this dump?" he wrathfully reminded her. "Well, I didn't come because I wanted to!" was the other's retort. "What's wrong?" "Everything's wrong! Old Golden had a bunch of flatties in his house, and that Laughing Mask boob squealed on me to the bunch. So I had to beat it."

Legar swung about on her. "And you beat it straight here, in open daylight, leaving a paper-chase trail at your heels!" There was rage in his voice. "I tell you I left no trail. I've got my own scalp to take care of. And if I've taken a chance to beat it up here and put you wise, it seems to me there's more than this grouch-talk comin' to me!"

"Then, for the love of heaven, woman, don't holler so the whole house will hear you! Speak quietly." A one-sided smile played about the hardened face of that worldly-wise young woman. "I guess you're kind o' losin' your nerve," she contemptuously announced. "Listen to me, my girl. I've been at this game longer than you have, and I've learned there are times when even walls have ears."

an wearing a housemaid's apron. The startled young woman, on discovering that she had been detected in the act of listening at a keyhole, sprang to her feet and fled like a shadow down the long hallway. "Why, that was one of our maids!" cried the astonished girl. "And also a secret agent of the Iron Claw's," announced the man in the mask.

"But what are you going to do?" demanded the puzzled girl. "I'm going to show that I'm still your friend, and at the same time prove that this particular maid is your enemy," called back the man in the mask.

But that particular maid, realizing apparently that events were shaping themselves into some final issue, lost no time in loitering along the hallway of that shadowy house. She ran straight to the heavy folding doors which shut off the library wherein, she knew, Enoch Golden was already conferring with his circle of officers from the detective bureau. Opening these doors, she confronted those startled officials.

"If you're after that man you call the Laughing Mask," she announced in her shrill soprano, "you'll find him here in this house, at this very moment." "In this house?" echoed the astounded old millionaire. "You'll find him," shrieked the white-faced maid, "in Margery Golden's room. And the sooner you get there the better!"

They rose as one man and moved towards the door. But they did not pass through that door. They came to a pause, for the very material reason that a man in a yellow mask, holding a revolver in his hand, confronted them from the hallway. "Just a moment, gentlemen," this masked stranger suavely announced, although the suavity of his voice was somewhat discounted by the obviously menacing position of his firearm.

"Since denunciations seem to be in order, will you permit me to point out to you that the young lady who has just addressed you is Betsy LeMarsh, alias Williamsburg Sadie, not only one of the most adroit woman crooks in the city, but also an emissary and agent of Jules Legar himself!" Having made that speech, the Laughing Mask promptly swung the heavy folding doors shut. He did so before one of the astonished onlookers could interfere. Then he turned the key in the snaplock, and ran headlong along the quiet hall. He all but collided with Margery Golden herself.

"Here's where I take time by the forelock," he grimly announced, as he darted across the room to a huge old-fashioned grandfather's clock which stood against the farther wall. The astonished girl saw him swing open the door and step inside the clock. Then she turned quickly about, for the men from the central office were already in the room. And she had no desire to make their task easier for them.

"That man came into this room!" declared one of the older men, challenging the half-smiling girl with an indignant forefinger. "Where is he?" "How should I know?" asked the calm-eyed young woman. "Well, he's here, and we'll get him," declared the man who seemed to be the leader of the others. Then Margery Golden's heart suddenly came up into her mouth, for she could see that he was hurrying across the room in the direction of the clock. She could see his right hand go into his pocket and whip out a revolver as his left hand threw open the little black-walnut door along the face of the clock. Then she breathed again, for the clock was empty.

But the man with the revolver had dropped to his knees and was patting interrogatively about the clock base. "I thought so!" he suddenly called out. "There's a spring trap here that opens through the floor. Quick, some of you men, get down to the basement!" Margery Golden was even able to smile again. "Wilson," she said, "be so good as to show these gentlemen the way to the basement. And then be so good as to have Miss Betsy LeMarsh come here."

So preoccupied was she, however, in putting distance between her and the house which she had just left that she scarcely noticed a figure simultaneously and quite as eagerly emerging from a basement window. Yet as she hurriedly rounded the block, in eager quest of a taxicab, this figure showed unmistakable interest in her movements. And when she had finally hailed a taxicab and climbed into it, the stranger in a yellow mask so cautiously shadowing her made a signal to the driver of a mysterious limousine, which seemed to be casually engaged in following his own movements. "Follow that taxicab," he commanded his driver as he leaped into the still-moving car.

The man in the limousine sat tense and silent, watching the flight for mile after mile. Then, realizing that it was taking them beyond the bounds of the city itself, he drew shut the side-blinds of his car, reached under the seat and took from its hiding place a japanned tin box, remarkably similar to an actor's make-up box.

Balancing this on his knees, he first removed his mask of yellow cloth, adjusted a small folding mirror to the box lid, and busied himself with the assortment of pigments and cosmetics of the make-up putty therein contained. The clear-lined face which first gazed into the folding mirror slowly but unmistakably became converted into something repellent to the eye.

The next moment the limousine came to a stop at the roadside. "That taxicab has just turned in at the Bellaire inn," the well-trained driver called back to his master.

"So I notice. And that's the place, I'll wager, where Legar himself is trying to keep under cover."

"There's the woman herself, running up the steps," announced the driver.

"So I also observe. And under the circumstances, I think it would be best for you to slip after her, as quietly and quickly as you can."

"Yes, sir!" "Then come back to the car and report to me the number of the room she asks for. Find out the number, whatever happens. For in that room, I imagine, we're going to encounter our old friend of the Iron Claw."

The Flash for Help.

Jules Legar was in anything but an amiable frame of mind, and when Williamsburg Sadie was quietly ushered into room 307 of the Bellaire inn, he greeted her with a malignant scowl which she promptly and openly resented.

"You don't seem exactly crazy to see me," she announced as she watched Legar lock the door through which she had just entered. His right hand was raised to his forehead, and he stood half-way between the chair and the wall, watching the man with the iron claw as he exulted over his enemy. She watched Legar's hand as it reached out to the mask of yellow cloth and tore it viciously from the face which it had concealed. Then a scream, short but high pitched, burst from her startled lips.

It was, in fact, in the office of the hotel itself, where High-Collar Davis, the house detective, leisurely perused an evening paper for certain racing returns close beside a rotund and roblinlike room clerk in a red vest, that an electric bulb just above the register began to conduct itself in a manner that was first mysterious and then challenging.

High-Collar Davis, looking languidly up from his racing charts, watched this light for several moments of silence. "Well, I'll be blowed!" he finally ejaculated.

"What's wrong?" asked the room clerk. Instead of replying, the house detective took out paper and pencil, and carefully watching the winking and blinking bulb, wrote a number of letters down on his slip of paper.

"That's the first time," he solemnly announced, "I ever saw an electric bulb talk Morse!" "Talk Morse?" echoed the other.

"Yes, talk Morse, or I never pounded the brass for two years. And here's what it has said, twice over. Help—room three—seven—help—help!" The house detective suddenly stood upright. "Say, who is in 307 in this house, anyway?"

"That Virginian with his arm in a sling!" "Then it's up to us to find out what's going on in that room!" The Laughing Mask, in the meantime, was no longer giving his attention to the wires along the closet wall. But with his pocket knife he had already removed the set screw from the door knob of the closet door. Then, swinging lightly up to the shelf that stood some five feet from the floor, he seated himself there opposite the door.

By grasping the two heavy clothes hooks screwed into this door, and by planting his feet firmly against the sash on either side of it, he felt that he was not altogether at the mercy of his enemies. Even as he sat there he could hear the key turned in the lock and then the sound of Legar's quick oath of exasperation as the door knob fell loose to the floor, in response to his tug at it. At the same time hope rose in the captive's heart, for he could hear the muffled sound of a knock on the outer door. And still again the prisoner in the closet could hear Legar's oath of exasperation. This was followed by the sudden impact of the heavy wing chair against the panels of the closet door. That blow, repeated again and yet again, was heavy enough to break through the wood. But that dignitary known as High-Collar Davis, being a gentleman not given to inactivity in moments of emergency, and being sufficiently persuaded of untoward proceedings behind the door which refused to open to his knock, promptly seized a fire ax from its vermillion-painted rack in the hall, and sent it crashing through the panels of the door which bore the numerals 307.

Legar, seeing the door giving way before this determined onslaught, drew his revolver and emptied it into the half-demolished closet door even as he backed away across the room to the open window. There he followed his already vanishing accomplices out on the fire escape, swarming down the narrow ladder after them as the outer door of the room gave way and a group of excited hotel attendants, headed by High-Collar Davis, came tumbling into the room.

The man who emerged from the Williamsburg Sadie, out of the silence of apprehension which fell over the little group. "You will," calmly announced Legar.

"Not on your life!" was the girl's quavering reply. "I'm through with those people!"

"But you're not through with me yet, my girl. You're going to take this note to Enoch Golden, and you're going to do it without any risk. I'll call up Golden myself and tell him he'll get it back, ten to one, if he makes a single move against you. And besides that, we've got him so beaten at this game that he's going to cry quits the minute he sees we're roped in the last of his gang, the minute I tell him I'll leave the country on condition he coughs up the paper!"

"And s'posin' he does weaken and hand over that paper? Where do I get off?" "You come back here with it as fast as wheels can carry you. And if you move as quick as I want you to move, you'll just about get back in time to see the finish of your friend in the yellow mask!"

But Betsy LeMarsh's friend in the yellow mask, for all his captivity, was apparently preparing for that finish in a more active manner than was imagined by his captors. For, the moment he was locked in the narrow closet, he had undertaken a systematic search of its gloomy corners. That search, however, was rewarded only by the discovery of a group of insulated wires running along its outer wall. Yet these wires he examined with not a little care. And the examination led him to conclude, both from the nature of the wires and the heaviness of the insulation about them, that they were an integral portion of the lighting system of the hotel. That they were not "dead" he promptly discovered by scraping away the insulation tissue and bringing two of the bared wires in contact. This resulted in an immediate hiss and spark of light. And that gave the prisoner an idea.

By "breaking" the current, he knew, he could send a message needling through all the nervous system of the house. And at some one point, he felt sure, that methodic play of dot and dash in the light bulb would arouse suspicion and cause a search to be instigated.

It was, in fact, in the office of the hotel itself, where High-Collar Davis, the house detective, leisurely perused an evening paper for certain racing returns close beside a rotund and roblinlike room clerk in a red vest, that an electric bulb just above the register began to conduct itself in a manner that was first mysterious and then challenging.

High-Collar Davis, looking languidly up from his racing charts, watched this light for several moments of silence. "Well, I'll be blowed!" he finally ejaculated.

"What's wrong?" asked the room clerk. Instead of replying, the house detective took out paper and pencil, and carefully watching the winking and blinking bulb, wrote a number of letters down on his slip of paper.

"That's the first time," he solemnly announced, "I ever saw an electric bulb talk Morse!" "Talk Morse?" echoed the other.

"Yes, talk Morse, or I never pounded the brass for two years. And here's what it has said, twice over. Help—room three—seven—help—help!" The house detective suddenly stood upright. "Say, who is in 307 in this house, anyway?"

"That Virginian with his arm in a sling!" "Then it's up to us to find out what's going on in that room!" The Laughing Mask, in the meantime, was no longer giving his attention to the wires along the closet wall. But with his pocket knife he had already removed the set screw from the door knob of the closet door. Then, swinging lightly up to the shelf that stood some five feet from the floor, he seated himself there opposite the door.

By grasping the two heavy clothes hooks screwed into this door, and by planting his feet firmly against the sash on either side of it, he felt that he was not altogether at the mercy of his enemies. Even as he sat there he could hear the key turned in the lock and then the sound of Legar's quick oath of exasperation as the door knob fell loose to the floor, in response to his tug at it. At the same time hope rose in the captive's heart, for he could hear the muffled sound of a knock on the outer door. And still again the prisoner in the closet could hear Legar's oath of exasperation. This was followed by the sudden impact of the heavy wing chair against the panels of the closet door. That blow, repeated again and yet again, was heavy enough to break through the wood. But that dignitary known as High-Collar Davis, being a gentleman not given to inactivity in moments of emergency, and being sufficiently persuaded of untoward proceedings behind the door which refused to open to his knock, promptly seized a fire ax from its vermillion-painted rack in the hall, and sent it crashing through the panels of the door which bore the numerals 307.

Legar, seeing the door giving way before this determined onslaught, drew his revolver and emptied it into the half-demolished closet door even as he backed away across the room to the open window. There he followed his already vanishing accomplices out on the fire escape, swarming down the narrow ladder after them as the outer door of the room gave way and a group of excited hotel attendants, headed by High-Collar Davis, came tumbling into the room.

The man who emerged from the closest lingered only long enough to point out to them the fleeing figures already at the foot of the fire escape. Then he himself darted down through the hotel hallway, took the stairs on the run, circled out through the rotunda, and springing through shrubbery and flower beds, leaped into a limousine drawn up at the side of the road.

"Follow that touring car those men have just piled into," he called out to his driver. "Follow it until we get into the city. Then swing past it and get to Golden's house before it does, whatever happens!"

But that touring car showed itself to be a much speedier vehicle than its unkempt appearance might indicate. And its driver seemed possessed of a surprisingly intimate knowledge of suburban side roads, for as the black limousine drew up on it the dust-covered open car suddenly swerved to the left, dipped into a narrow valley, and took the rise to the railway track like a swallow rounding a cliff head.

Then the man in the yellow mask stood up in his car, with an involuntary gasp of horror on his lips. For thundering along the curving track as the dusty touring car rose to the crossing came an even swifter-moving through freight, whistling its frantic warning as it came.

But that warning was too late. The pilot of the locomotive seemed to root like a boar's snout under the flimsy body of the automobile and then toss it and its human freight high over his shoulder. There was a momentary cascade of bodies and metal through the air, a sudden discontinuance of the whistle blasts, and the grind of steel against steel as the startled engine driver threw on his brakes.

"Did they strike?" asked the Laughing Mask's chauffeur over his shoulder. "Yes, they struck! But don't turn back. Keep going! For there's another car from that hotel following us, and we've still got to get to Golden's house first."

It was some twelve minutes later that Margery Golden, as she sat disconsolately in the quietness of her room, found herself confronted by an unannounced visitor.

"It's you!" she gasped, as she rose to her feet and found the Laughing Mask standing, a little breathless, just inside her door. "I'm sorry to startle you," he explained, "but as usual, they didn't give me any too much time!"

"But what has happened?" "The same thing over again. There are five men downstairs persuading your father the Laughing Mask is a criminal, and those five men are determined to make me a prisoner."

"But why should they keep saying this?" asked the bewildered girl. "Because they don't understand," she repeated. Then she turned and stared at the masked face. "Nor do I altogether understand!" "But surely you'd trust me enough to hide me away here until I can escape from them?"

"How can you ask me to trust you when you refuse to trust me?" "But I do trust you. I always have!" "Yet not enough to remove that mask?"

"And you insist that I unmask?" "No, I do not insist. But if you believe in my honesty I also want to believe in yours."

Again there was a moment of silence. "You are right," said the man in the mask. Then he crossed the room to the door of the white-tiled bathroom, laughing as he went. "But since my hands are clean, I also insist that my face shall be!"

The girl stood puzzled as she heard the sound of a tap being turned and the splash of water. "What are you doing?" she demanded. "Washing my face," answered a somewhat altered voice, "and I'm afraid I'm rather spilling your towel with my make-up."

The next minute the Laughing Mask, denuded of his domino, stepped back into the room. "Will you trust me enough now to help me get away?" he asked. The girl stared round-eyed into the smiling face above her. She started to lift her hand, as though in wonder, to her brow. But the man in the door way imprisoned that hand in his own, and drew her a little closer to him. "Will you trust me now?" he repeated. "Yes," she said, in a voice lushed with wonder, as she felt his arms close about her. "I will always trust you!"

"Just Naturally Run Down
Not Fit For Work. Tanlac
Put Me On My Feet Again."

"I was just naturally run down and not fit for my work. In the first place my stomach troubled me. I could not eat, so lost a lot of flesh. I could not sleep and get my rest at night.

"What I ate would lie in the pit of my stomach and cause dreadful cramps. I did not know what to do. I had a bad taste in my mouth most of the time and my face was pale as could be, no color at all.

"A friend of mine who works with me saw how badly I was looking and said, 'Why don't you try Tanlac? I took some and I think it is great stuff. It fixed me up all right.' This recommendation sounded so good to me I came right over and got me a bottle. I was not going to lose any time starting.

"Well, the results were one bottle did me so much good I got another and now I have finished my third bottle of Tanlac. I can eat fine with no more cramps or lumps in my stomach. I have gained in weight and strength until my friends hardly know me. My color is fine. I can attend to my work and am in a good shape all around. I have no trouble sleeping and get up feeling refreshed.

"I want to recommend Tanlac because it put me on my feet and now I say Tanlac is a wonderful medicine for stomach trouble such as I had, and will cure that tired feeling."

The above statement was made to J. A. Copp, the Tanlac man, by Otto Weingart who lives at 503 Rankin street, Flint, while he was calling at the Mercer Co.'s Drug Store, 415 S. Saginaw street.

James J. Jeffries spoke to the high school students Monday afternoon on the subject of "Efficiency." To be efficient, he said, one must be happy, contented and at peace with God. To be thus, one must be healthy, which can only be brought about by proper food, exercise and rest. He also spoke quite broadly on the evil effects of tobacco and alcoholic liquors.

Mr. Walling spent the latter part of last week in Grand Rapids, attending the Michigan State Teachers' Association. He reports a very large attendance, almost 7,000, which is about 600 more than year. The program was carried out as given in the advance announcements and was one of the best ever given by the association. Such men as Charles H. Judd, University of Chicago; James Burns, Oneida Institute; Dr. E. A. Steiner, Grinnell College; Major Moton, Tuskegee Institute; Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of Michigan, would insure the success of any program. The concert on Thursday evening was a grand success including such stars as Oscar Szele, baritone; Jacques Tiband, violinist; Povla Frisch, soprano; Jean Nerd, pianist.
