Mrs. Emily Parker.

Emily Marie Spaulding, daughter of Abi Rockwell and David Spaulding, was born in Dexter township December 19, 1832. Later her parents moved to Sylvan where the earlier part of her life was spent.

On May 24, 1856, she was united in marriage with Orrin Parker and has lived in Scio township continuously since. To this union two children were born, one dying in infancy, and Clifford O., surviving.

The death of Mr. Parker occurred December 12, 1897.

Mrs. Parker, in early life, united with the Congregational church and has always held steadfastly to that faith. She led a quiet simple life, much devoted to her home and happiest in caring for the welfare of her family.

Since her illness of last spring she never fully regained her former strength and was called from this life on January 19, 1917, at the age of 84 years and one month.

Besides her son, she leaves to mourn her loss two grandchildren, several nieces and nephews, and a large circle of friends.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at her late home, Rev. A. A. Schoen officiating. Interment in Clements cemetery.

Almarion B. Skinner.

Almarion B. Skinner was born in Ingham county, Michigan, October 1, 1844, and died at his home Tuesday, January 23, 1917.

Mr. Skinner had resided on the farm in Sylvan where he died for the last 27 years, and previous to that time he was engaged in the jewelry business with his father. He was twice married, the second marriage with Mrs. Emily Craig was September 29, 1873, and to this union three daughters and one son were born.

He is survived by his wife, four daughters, Mrs. Carrie Price, of Ludington, Mrs. Marion Meacham, of Milan, Ohio, Mrs. Lucy Barnes, of Dayton, Ohio, Mrs. Margaret Rowen, of Jackson, one son Almarion B. Skinner, jr., of Sylvan, four grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. A. J. Sawyer, of Ann Arbor.

The funeral will be held at the M. E. church at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning, Rev. G. H. Whitney officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

A Follow-up Nurse.

A state board of health nurse is at work in the counties where tuberculosis surveys were held late in 1915 and early in 1916 with a view of determining the present condition of the persons diagnosed in the public clinics as "positive" cases of tuberculosis. The report of her work shows that about eighty per cent of the cases are in improved physical health, and of this eighty per cent a respectable proportion of persons are either entirely well again or so far on the way that perfectly restored health is in sight for them.

The report of the follow-up nurse proves, the state board of health workers declare, that the tuberculosis survey means a message of hope to the people of the state, not of despair.

Soldier Boys at Home.

Company I, Ann Arbor's unit contribution of the thirty-first Michigan national guard, arrived there about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, amid the blowing of whistles and the ringing of all the bells in the city. The varsity band and the city band marched to the depot, together with several thousand people and escorted the soldiers to the army where they disbanded Wednesday night a banquet was given in honor of the Ann Arbor company in the army.

Mrs. Simon Weber, Sr.

Mrs. Simon Weber, sr., died at the home of her son, Simon, of Sylvan, on Sunday, January 21, 1917, at the age of 98 years, 2 months and 18 days.

Genevieve (Hauser) Weber was born in Steinbach, Germany, November 3, 1818. She left her native land in May, 1843, and sailed for America. After a two months' voyage on a sailing ship she arrived at New York, and from there came to Lima township.

She was united in marriage to Simon Weber, September 15, 1843, at St. Mary's church, Detroit, and to this union seven children were born, five of whom are living.

MRS. GENEVIEVE WEBER.

Mr. and Mrs. Weber resided on the General Williams farm in Lima township about three years and then moved to Sylvan township where they lived for thirty-seven years, and then came to Chelsea where they resided until Mr. Weber's death, December 4, 1903. Since that time she has made her home with her son, Simon in Sylvan.

She is survived by two sons, Simon of Sylvan, and Joseph of Chelsea; three daughters, Mrs. Jacob Forner of Jackson, Mrs. Jacob Hummel and Mrs. Peter Merkel, both of Chelsea; twenty-nine grandchildren and twenty-eight great-grandchildren.

Four Killed by Car.

Four cock-fight fans were killed by the Michigan Central crossing train Sunday morning when the sports went to attend a cock-fight which it seems have been quite popular recently in that neighborhood. The sheriff learned of the proposed match and broke up the gathering. Sports were present from Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, South Bend and other cities. The heavy snow storm at the time evidently confused the driver of the automobile and he drove onto the track directly in front of the train. All four of the men were instantly killed and the driver, Henry Reiser, of Jackson, was terribly injured.

W. H. EVERY,
Finance Committee.

Moved by Supervisor Dawson and supported that the report be accepted and adopted.

The Committee appointed to report on Mortgage and other securities reported as follows:
The Honorable Board of Supervisors:
Gentlemen:—
Your committee appointed to investigate the scope and meaning of the law governing taxing bonds, notes, etc., through the services of the Prosecuting Attorney, beg leave to report that on recommendation of the Prosecuting Attorney, submit copy of the act and sentiments expressed by other Boards of Supervisors.

Your committee therefore recommends the adoption of the following resolutions, and that a copy be sent to each of the Representatives of this County.

Signed by the entire Committee,
CHARLES L. BROOKS
W. H. EVERY,
E. B. McCULLOUGH.

Whereas, Act No. 142 of the Public Acts of 1913 provides that a large variety of bonds, notes or written obligations, and other evidence of secured debts may be filed with the County Treasurer, the tax of one-half of one per cent paid thereon, and that the County Treasurer may retain for the general fund one-half of the amount so paid, the other half going to the state, and also provides that the payment of this specific tax shall render these bonds, notes, etc., exempt from all other taxation, and

Whereas, this law is so obviously unfair and unjust as to be iniquitous in its purpose and vicious in its application, and

Whereas, Act No. 254, of the Public Acts of 1915 adds to the iniquity by increasing the scope of the Act, and

Whereas, these two acts are examples of the vicious class legislation by particularly and notoriously favoring a class of citizens and a species of wealth most able to pay a just and fair proportion of taxes, and

Whereas, these Acts deny or abridge the fundamental right of community to self government inasmuch as the privilege of local taxation is denied them, and

Whereas, The State and County can have but an indirect interest in the taxation of this class of wealth.

Therefore, be it resolved, that this

Board hereby goes on record as favoring the repeal of these Acts and all similar Acts or of having them so amended that the portion now going to the County will be credited to the township, village or city where the owner or holder of this class of property resides, and that the said tax be made assessable and collectible annually, or so amended that a tax of three quarters of one percent will be levied quarterly, one quarter to go to the State, one quarter to county and one quarter to township or city, respectively, in which the holder resides.

Moved by Supervisor Dawson and supported that the report be accepted and adopted.

Carried.

Supervisor Roberts offered the following resolution:
Resolved, That Whereas, certain monies have been voted by the electors of Washtenaw County, and certain bequests been made by a resident of this County to assist in the construction of a new County Infirmary, and

Whereas, it is deemed expedient by this Board that the necessary steps be taken to insure a speedy erection of said Infirmary.

Be it therefore resolved, that the Building Committee of this Board on the new Washtenaw County Infirmary be hereby authorized and empowered to employ architects, approve plans, receive bids for the construction of, let the construction of to the lowest possible responsible bidder and do all other acts or things necessary and proper pertaining to the erection of and speedy completion of the aforesaid New Washtenaw County Infirmary.

THIRTY-SECOND IS BACK HOME AGAIN

MICHIGAN COMPANY ARRIVES FROM EL PASO AFTER UN-EVENTFUL TRIP.

ABOUT 1050 MEN IN COMPANY

Twelve Men Who Left Did Not Return—Three Joined Regular Army and Others Accepted Positions in Texas.

Detroit—After a tiresome but uneventful trip the 32d Michigan infantry arrived home.

In a strict sense, it was not a home-coming for the men of the Thirty-second because they live at points out in the western part of the state. But it was what the easterner coming from the west and the southerner returning from the north likes to call getting "back to God's country."

In all, there were 1,050 officers and men, commanded by Colonel Louis C. Covell, of Grand Rapids, headquarters of the regiment.

Twelve men who left with the Thirty-second did not return. Three of them were discharged to enlist in the regular army, and the remainder accepted positions in Texas.

The three battalions of the regiment were headed, respectively, by Majors J. Charles McCullough, of Lansing; Eli V. R. Falardeau, of Big Rapids; and Earl R. Stewart, of Grand Rapids.

Following are the companies comprising the Thirty-second Michigan: Company A, of Coldwater; B, of Adrian; C and D, Kalamazoo; E, Ionia; F, Grand Haven; G, Muskegon; H and the supply company, Big Rapids; I, refinery company, Owosso; and the remainder—Companies I, K and L and the headquarters and machine gun companies—from Grand Rapids.

FOUR DEAD IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Michigan Central Train Strikes Party of Five Returning From a Cock-fight Near Jackson.

Jackson—Driving an automobile upon the Michigan Central railway tracks in front of eastbound passenger train No. 26, four Ohio men were killed and Henry Reiser, of Jackson, was injured about the head and his leg was broken, Sunday morning at Leoni village, seven miles east of Jackson.

The dead are: A. H. Leppely, 45, Cleveland, O.; Gustave Rost, 35, Cleveland, O.; Albert Cottle, 38, Cleveland, O.; William Webber, 45, Alliance, O.

The men were returning from a game cock fight, which had been stopped by the sheriff, it is said. A snow storm is believed to have prevented the men from seeing the approaching train.

All four of the men killed met death instantly, the bodies being carried on the pilot of the engine about 100 rods. The automobile was wrecked. Reiser, who was driving the automobile, was the only man alive when the train stopped.

TEACHERS TO BE PENSIONED

To Be Eligible Must Have Taught at Least Thirty Years.

Lansing—Trustees of the teachers' retirement fund board met in the office of the state superintendent of public instruction, elected E. T. Cameron of Mt. Pleasant secretary at an annual salary of $1,800 and formulated plans to carry out the provisions of the teachers' retirement fund act recently declared constitutional by the supreme court. Acting under the advice of Attorney General Grosbeck, the various boards of education, Detroit city excepted, will be notified to deduct from the teachers' salary the amount assessed against each teacher, which will be sent to the state treasurer who will be custodian of all funds.

To be eligible for a pension under the law, a teacher must have taught, in all 30 years, of which the last 15 years, including the last five years of service preceding the application for retirement, must have been in the public schools of this state.

The women of the Oakland County Hospital association, who built and presented to Pontiac free of debt, a hospital valued at $80,000, have voted to make a further gift of $15,000 now in their treasury to apply on a nurse's home.

Attorneys for the estate of Edwin C. Way, late president of the Scott-Dillon Tobacco Co., of Detroit, adjusted the claim of Way's former housekeeper, Miss Pauline Klaubush, of Marshall, for $25,750. She had brought suit for $125,000.

Charles Larson, 40 years old, leaped from Mercy hospital window at Muskegon and ran a mile before officers caught him.

There is more "dry" sentiment in Gratiot county than in any other county in the state. This information is revealed in a study of the vote cast on the prohibition amendment last November, which shows that 69 per cent of those who voted in Gratiot county cast ballots for the dry cause. Kalamazoo county was second, with a vote of 68 per cent dry and Hillsdale county third with 67 per cent.

Physicians are puzzled over the case of Geo. E. Steff, an employe of a Battle Creek laundry, who though having two arms, is able to use only one. WILSON IN SENATE TALKS ON PEACE

Takes the Second Step in Effort to End the European War.

MONROE DOCTRINE FOR ALL

Insists That the Struggle Must Be Ended on Treaties Which Will Embody Terms Able to Win Approval of Mankind.

Washington, Jan. 23.—An appeal that the United States outline the principles of a league of nations to make future wars an impossibility was made by President Wilson. Unexpectedly he took the second step in his effort to end the European war. In an address to the senate, which shares with him the power to handle the foreign affairs of the nation, the president outlined what in his opinion is necessary to end the struggle and to make certain that it will be the last great conflict.

MONROE DOCTRINE FOR ALL

The president declared that he proposed a "Monroe doctrine for all of the people of the world." He said that he proposed that no nation shall seek to extend its policy over any other nation of people but that every people shall be left free to determine its own policy.

He insisted that the war must be ended on treaties which will embody terms which will win the approval of mankind.

"No covenant of co-operative peace which does not include the peoples of the new world," he said, "can suffice to keep the future safe against war. Elements of the peace must engage the confidence and satisfy the principles of American government."

The senate galleries were jammed while many members of the house crowded in on the floor to hear the proceedings. Everyone was plainly deeply concerned because of the secrecy which had surrounded the entire proceedings.

Although the president's remarks had been sent to the public printer in time to have copies available before he reached the capitol there was a delay and none of the senators had received them before President Wilson reached the capitol.

BOSTON REVIVAL IS ENDED

Billy Sunday Collects $50,800 in Ten Weeks' Campaign in Hub City.

Boston—Billy Sunday closed his 10 weeks' Boston revival by preaching to 70,000 persons in four services. J., to visit a grandson at school.

After a few days' rest at his home in Winona Lake, Ind., he will open a revival at Buffalo.

Boston's cash gift to the evangelist brings the total of free-will offerings he has received since conducting revivals up to approximately $600,000. Collections for expenses for Boston were $90,438.75.

At the tabernacle 60,510 replied to the evangelist's appeal to "hit the sawdust trail."

DIRECTORS PROPOSE INCREASE OF $45,000,000 IN COMMON STOCK ISSUE.

EARN $61,715,329 IN YEAR

Orders On Hand at Beginning of Year Amount to $193,500,000, Exceeding Previous Year By $18,000,000.

New York—One of the largest "one" ever divided by an industrial corporation was announced when directors of the Bethlehem Steel corporation increased the common stock dividend from 7 1/8 per cent to 10 per cent quarterly and recommended a 10 per cent common stock dividend bonus.

This action was made possible by the proposed increase of the common stock from $15,000,000 to $60,000,000.

Earnings of the Bethlehem Steel corporation for the year ended December 31, 1916, amounted to $61,715,329. Deducting interest charges of $3,772,575, depreciation of $14,350,785 and depletion, the aggregate net addition to the surplus is $43,592,000, making a total surplus on December 31, 1916, of $69,370,198.

$32,000,000 AT STAKE IN SUIT

Government Tries to Recover Loss From Southern Pacific Railroad.

New York—Nearly a half million acres of oil land in the San Joaquin valley, California, valued at $2,000,000, is at stake in the government's suit against the Southern Pacific railroad on trial before the federal court at Los Angeles.

From this land, the testimony shows, the railroad company has been taking about 900,000 barrels of oil a month. If the government wins the suit for possession of the land it is said that these oil fields will be used to supply fuel for the navy.

The government holds that the Southern Pacific company obtained land grants from the government knowing that oil was present there while the government officials understood that the property was to be used for agricultural development. The suit is brought on grounds of fraud.

The DESTROYING ANGEL

By Louis Joseph Vance

A new mystery develops in this installment of "The Destroying Angel." Whitaker finds much in Miss Fiske's manner to puzzle him and make him wonder if—well, read for yourself.

You will recall that Whitaker, returning to New York several years after his supposed death, discovers his wife, now a famous actress known as Sara Law, about to marry Drummond, his old partner—Drummond disappears, supposedly a suicide, and Sara, asking her husband to agree to a divorce, also drops out of sight. Whitaker, mysteriously assaulted, goes to the country home of his friend Martin Ember.

He makes the acquaintance of pretty Miss Fiske, a neighbor, finds spies are watching her, and follows her abductors when they kidnap her in a motor boat. Both crafts are wrecked on a reef. Whitaker and the girl are tossed upon an island lately abandoned.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued.

The reminder had an effect singularly distressing. He turned a little faint, as seized with a slight sensation of dizziness, at the thought of food, so that he was glad of the catboat for sport.

"Oh, you are!" Compassion thrilled to the tone. "I'm so sorry. Come—if you can walk." She caught his hand as if to help him onward. "We can build a fire and have something hot; there's plenty of fuel."

"But—what did you do?" "Oh, I took my eggs on a natural—bringing some salt and pepper. I was too much of a hurry to bother with stove."

"Why in a hurry?" She made no answer for an instant. He turned to look at her, wondering, by his unutterable astonishment she not only failed to meet his glance, but seemed unconscious of it.

The admirable ease and gracious self-possession which he had learned to associate with her personality as intangible traits were altogether gone, as then—obliterated by a singular, notic attitude of constraint and diffidence, of self-consciousness. She seemed almost to shrink from his regard, and held her face a little averted from him, the full lips tense, lashes winking and trembling upon her cheeks.

Halfway up to the farmhouse a memory shot through Whitaker's mind as startling as lightning streaking athwart peaceful evening sky. He stopped with an exclamation that brought the girl beside him to a standstill with questioning eyes.

"But the others—!" he stammered. "The others?" she repeated blankly. "They—the men who brought you here—?"

Her lips tightened. She moved her head in slow negation. "I have seen nothing of either of them."

Horror and pity filled him, conjuring up a vision of wild, raving waters, mad blood-lust, and in their jaws, arms and heads helplessly whirling and tossing.

"Poor devils!" he muttered. She said nothing. When he looked for sympathy in her face, he found it not and inscrutable.

He delayed another moment, thinking that soon she must speak, offer him some sort of explanation. But she remained uncommunicative. And he could not bring himself to seem anxious to pry into her affairs.

He took a tentative step onward. She responded instantly to the suggestion, but in silence.

The farmhouse stood on high ground, commanding an uninterrupted sweep of the horizon. As they drew near it, Whitaker paused and turned, narrowing his eyes as he attempted to read the riddle of the enigmatic, amber-tinted distances.

There was not a gull visible in all the blue cup of the sea. "I don't know," said Whitaker slowly, as much to himself as to his companion. "It's odd . . . it passes me."

"Can't you tell where we are?" she inquired anxiously. "Not definitely. I know, of course, we must be somewhere off the south coast of New England. There are islands off the south coast of Massachusetts—a number of them: Nantucket, you know, and Martha's Vineyard. This might be either—only it can't be, because they're summer resorts."

"That"—he swept his hand toward the land in the northeast—"might be either, and probably is one of 'em. At the same time, it may be the mainland. I don't know."

"Then . . . then what are we to do?" He looked round, shaking a dubious head. "Of course there's nothing like a map here. We might nail a plank to the corner of the roof and a table cloth to that, I suppose."

"And build fires, by night?" He nodded. "Best suggestion yet. I'll do that very thing tonight—after I've had a bite to eat."

She started impatiently away. "Oh, come, come! What am I thinking of, let you stand there, starving by the shore?"

They entered the house by the back door, finding themselves in the kitchen—that mean and commonplace assembly room of narrow and pinched lives, the immaculate cleanliness of decent, those poverty lay over it all like a light. Whitaker bustled himself immediately with the stove. There was a full woodbox near by; and within a very few minutes he had a brisk fire going. The woman had disappeared in the direction of the barn. She returned with a good time with half a dozen eggs, coming in the pantry and cupboards, and brought to light a quantity of supplies, a side of bacon, sour potatoes, tea, small stores of edibles in tin. "I'm hungry again, myself," she declared, attacking the problem of simple cookery with a will and a confident air that promised much.

The aroma of frying bacon, the steam of brewing tea, were all but intolerable to an empty stomach. Whitaker left the kitchen hurriedly and, in an endeavor to control himself, made a round of the other rooms. There were two others on the ground floor; in the upper story, four small bedchambers; above them an attic, gloomy and echoing. Nowhere did he discover anything to moderate the impression made by the kitchen. It was all impeccably neat, desperately bare.

Depressed, he turned toward the head of the stairs. Below a door whined on its hinges, and the woman called him, her voice ringing through the hallway with an effect of richness, deep-toned and bell-tune. He was staggered by something in the quality of that full-throated cry, something that smote his memory until it was quick and vibrant, like a harp-swept by an old familiar hand.

"Hugh?" she called; and again: "Hugh! Where are you?" He paused, grasping the balustrade, and with some difficulty managed to articulate:

"Here. . . coming. . ." "Hurry. Everything's ready." Waiting an instant to steady his nerves, he descended and re-entered the kitchen.

The meal was waiting—on the table. The woman, too, faced him as he entered, waiting in the chair nearest the stove. But, once within the room, he paused so long beside the door, his hand upon the knob, and stared so strangely at her, that she moved uneasily, grew restless and disturbed. A gleam of apprehension flickered in her eyes.

"Why, what's the matter?" she asked with forced lightness. "Why don't you come in and sit down?" He said abruptly: "You called me Hugh!"

She inclined her head, smiling mischievously. "I admit it. Do you mind?" "Mind? No!" He shut the door, advanced and dropped into his chair, still searching her face with his troubled gaze. "Only," he said—"you startled me. I didn't think—expect—hope—"

"On so short an acquaintance?" she suggested archly. "Perhaps you're right. I didn't think . . . And yet—I do think—with the man who risked his life for me—I'm a little justified in forgetting even that we've never met through the medium of a conventional introduction."

"It isn't that, but . . ." He hesitated, trying to formulate phrases to explain the singular sensation that had assailed him when she called him, a sensation the precise nature of which he himself did not as yet understand.

She interrupted brusquely: "Don't let's waste time talking. I can't wait another instant." Silently submissive, he took up his knife and fork and fell to.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Beacon.

The girl was the first to finish. She had eaten little in comparison; chiefly, perhaps, because she required less than he. She rested her elbows easily on the table, cradled her chin between her half-closed hands. Her eyes grew dark with speculation, and oddly lambent. He ate on, unconscious of her attitude. When he had finished, he leaned back a little in his chair, surprised her intent gaze, laughed sheepishly, and laughing, sighed with repletion. A smile of sympathetic understanding darkened the corners of her lips.

"It's coming on night," said he. "You haven't forgotten our signal fires? I've got my work cut out for me, to forage for fuel. I must get right at it."

The girl rose quickly. "Do you mind waiting a little? I mustn't neglect my dishes."

She worked rapidly above the steaming dish-pan, busy and intent, the fair head bowed, the cheeks faintly flushed. Whitaker lounged, profoundly intrigued, watching her with sober and studious eyes. What did it mean, this impression that had come to him so suddenly, within the hour, that he had known her, or someone strangely like her, at some forgotten time—as in some previous existence?

It was her voice that had made him think that, her voice of marvelous allure, crystal-pure, as flexible as tempered steel, strong, tender, rich, compelling, compelling. . . . Where had he heard it before, and when?

Henderson—She saw me first.

"It's almost dark," her pleasant accents broke in upon his reverie. "Quite finished." The girl scrubbed her arms and hands briskly with a dry towel and turned down her sleeves, facing him with her fine, frank, friendly smile. "If you're ready . . ."

"Whenever you are," he said with an oddly ceremonious bow. To his surprise she drew back, her brows and lips contracting to level lines, her eyes informed with the light of wonder shot through with the flashings of a resentful temper.

"Why do you look at me so?" she demanded sharply. "What are you thinking . . .?" She checked, her frown relaxed, her smile flickered softly. "Am I such a fright—?"

"I beg your pardon," he said hastily. "I was merely thinking, wondering . . ."

She seemed about to speak, but said nothing. He did not round out his apology. A little distance apart, they stood staring at one another in that weird, unnatural light, wherein the glow from the lamp contended garishly with the ebbing flush of day. And again he was mute in bewildered inquiry before that puzzling phenomenon of inscrutable emotion which once before, since his awakening, had been disclosed to him in her mantling color, in the quickening of her breath, and the agitation of her bosom, in the timid, dumb questioning of eyes grown strangely shy and frightened.

And then, in a twinkling, an impatient gesture exorcised the inexplicable mood that had possessed her, and she regained her normal, self-reliant poise as if by witchcraft.

"What a quaint creature you are, Hugh," she cried, her smile whimsical. "You've a way of looking at one that gives me the creeps. If you don't stop it, I swear I shall think you're the devil! Stop it—do you hear me, sir? And come build our bonfire."

She swung lithely away and was out of the house before he could regain his wits and follow.

Off in the north, where Whitaker had marked down the emurpled headland during the afternoon, a white light lanced the gloom thrice with a sweeping blade, vanished, and was replaced by a glare of angry red, which in its turn winked out.

"What is it?" the girl asked. "A ship signalling?"

"No; a lighthouse—probably a first-order light—with its characteristic flash, not duplicated anywhere along this section of the Atlantic coast. If I knew anything of such matters, it would be easy enough to tell from that just about where we are. If that information would help us."

"But, if we can see their light, they'll see ours—won't they?—and send to find out what's the matter?"

"Perhaps. At least—let's hope so. They're pretty sure of it, but they may think the natives here are merely celebrating their silver wedding, or Roosevelt's refusal of a third term, or the accession of Edward the Seventh—or anything."

"Please don't be silly—and discouraging. Do get to work and build the fire."

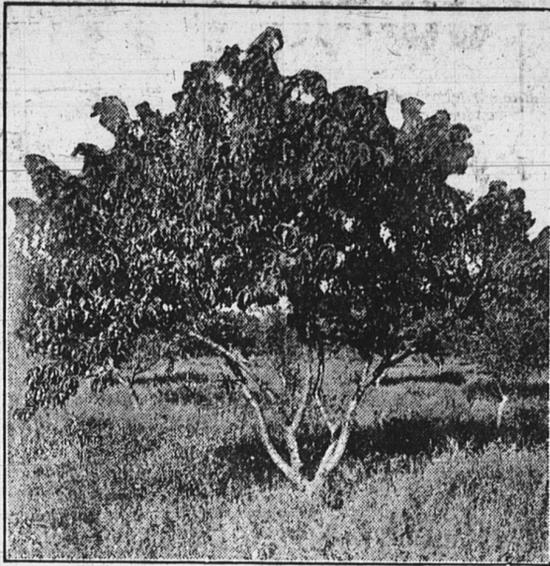

He obeyed with humility and expedition.

Where do you think Miss Fiske learned her rescuer's first name? Do you believe she knows more about the kidnapers and their intention than she wishes Whitaker to know?

OBTAIN DIFFERENT RESULTS BY PRUNING

BAD PRUNING CAUSES BEARING AT EXTREMITIES OF BRANCHES.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) There are several different results to be obtained by pruning fruit trees, namely:

1. To keep the tree within bounds, so that the work of spraying and of picking the fruit can be done with the greatest facility.
  2. To remove dead or interfering branches.
  3. To open the top of the tree to admit air and sunshine, and to reduce the struggle for existence among the branches.
  4. To thin the fruit and stimulate the development of fruit buds.
  5. To make the tree stocky and increase its vigor.
- There are differences of opinion as to the best ways of pruning to secure the results desired, but most successful growers admit that regular pruning is desirable. Each grower in pruning his trees has in mind the securing of some definite objects, though he may not know just what the principles of pruning are. Each tree furnishes a problem in itself, but if the principles are understood these problems can be solved.

Avoid Bad Crotches.

After a tree is planted it is headed back to a single unbranched stem or a stem with several branches, depending on the size and age of the tree.

The second season several of these stubs or new branches are selected to form the scaffold limbs of the tree. Care should be taken to have these three or four spread out well along the main stem so as to avoid bad crotches later. The branches selected are headed back 10 or 12 inches. The third season two or three branches are allowed to remain on each of these scaffold limbs, and all others cut off. The branches selected this time should be located so as to balance evenly and keep open the top of the tree. The fourth season the operation is repeated on the limbs of the preceding season's growth. In all later prunings care should be used to save fruit spurs and keep the bearing wood low and well distributed throughout the tree.

In pruning, all cuts should be made close to the parent branch, leaving no stubs which might later decay back and injure the tree. All wounds of more than an inch in diameter should be painted.

The correct principle seems to be to do the least cutting possible and yet get the results desired. A great deal of the cutting done in winter may be avoided by a little judicious pinching back of buds during the summer. This pinching back prevents the growth of branches that must be removed later and permits better growth in the branches that are desired.

Thinning.

The purpose of thinning is to reduce the quantity of fruit which a tree sets to a quantity that it can mature and at the same time develop fruit buds for the next year's crop. An excessive crop usually means small and often poorly colored fruit, and the overloading frequently breaks down the limbs of the tree. The development of seeds is an exhaustive process on a tree, and the growth of seeds in small fruits is as depleting as in the case of large fruits; thus thinning relieves the tree of a severe strain. In the case of winter apples it is quite likely that annual bearing is encouraged by thinning, for it gives more opportunity for the development of fruit buds. Summer varieties of apples require several pickings, and each of these pickings may in a way be called a system of thinning. With stone fruits, especially peaches, thinning has become an established practice among most commercial growers. How much and when to thin depends on conditions. The usual time of thinning is just after the so-called June drop. The amount to thin varies with the kind of fruit and the variety. With some varieties it is not always profitable, and the extra drain on the tree by the production of seed can be overcome by fertilizing. Peaches are usually thinned to about five or six inches apart on the limbs.

Orchard Renovation.

Many orchards contain trees which, owing to old age, neglect of pruning, insects, or disease, have become unprofitable. All of these trees which

SMALL FRUITS NEED WINTER PROTECTION

Should Be Bent to Ground and Covered With Earth—Pick Warm Day for Working.

(By E. F. MKUNE, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

In a climate such as ours, there is always more or less winterkilling of raspberries, blackberries, Logan berries, and blackcaps, so, in order to insure a crop for the following year, it is almost always necessary to protect the bushes in some way from the cold and drying winds. Sometimes the practice of merely tying the bushes with strong string and bending them over is enough to protect them, but this method often fails. The cheapest and best way is to cover them with soil to the depth of three to four inches. This should be done as late as possible, but before the ground is frozen. Some time before the bushes are to be covered, the old canes should be cut, leaving a few more canes than are needed for the next year's crop. The extra canes are to be used in case any should be broken during the covering process. All the old canes should be burned immediately, to get rid of the different diseases that they may have on them.

The covering should take place on a rather warm day, as the canes will bend easier and are less apt to break. With bushes that have strong and brittle stems, it is often necessary to remove a spadeful of soil from the side of the bush toward which the canes are to be bent. Use only enough soil to cover the canes thoroughly. Straw can be used in place of the dirt, but it affords a good home for mice, and they are apt to destroy the canes by eating the base.

DAIRY

BALANCED RATION FOR MILK

Cow Must Be Given Combination Necessary to Maintain Her Functions and Produce Milk.

For the most profitable milk production, the cow must be fed a balanced ration at the cheapest price such ration can be provided. By balanced ration is meant the combination of such a proportion of nutrients and in such quantities as the cow requires to maintain her bodily functions and as she can utilize in the production of milk. These nutrients are classified as protein, carbohydrates, and fats. Protein is one of the principal constituents of milk; fats and carbohydrates perform much the same functions, that is, produce energy and heat, and in the balancing of a ration are usually classed together. If the cow is given a ration containing an excess of either element, the excess is liable to be wasted; hence the economical importance of a balanced ration.

USE SHORTHORNS FOR DAIRY

American Association Representing This Class Fixes Basis at 60 Per Cent for Milk.

The question is often asked, in judging dairy, or dual-purpose Shorthorn cattle, how much is allowed for beef and how much for milk. The American association representing this class of cattle fixed the basis at 60 per cent for dairy qualities and 40 per cent for beef. This is a very good basis to work from. More should be given for dairy, for this is most likely to be deficient, and a larger ration will have a tendency to stimulate the dairy development. Some stock shows and fairs fix the ratio at 50 per cent for each; but the rating given above seems better. More emphasis is being placed on the development of the dairy qualities of this breed, bringing it back to its original standing among the breeds of the world—one of the best for dairy purposes.

SILAGE IN PRODUCING MILK

Increase of 17 Per Cent is Seen in Test Conducted by Ohio Experiment Station.

Cows fed a ration composed largely of silage produced 17 per cent more milk and 28 per cent more butterfat than those given a ration consisting mainly of grain in a feeding test conducted for 121 days at the Ohio experiment station. The silage ration was also cheaper for milk production.

PREVENT LARGE DAIRY LOSS

Contagious Abortion Costs Farmer and Stockman $20,000,000 Yearly in Dead Calves.

Every farmer and stockman should fight contagious abortion in his district, and do his part to save $20,000,000 loss in dead calves and sterile cows. The disease is preventable and controllable. Isolate affected animals, treat aborting cows, disinfect the bulls and clean up the premises. This is good business for cattle owners.

COMMON CAUSE OF TROUBLE

Next to Overfeeding Calf is That of Feeding Milk Too Cold—Feed at Blood Heat.

Possibly next to overfeeding the calf on milk, the commonest cause of trouble is that of feeding milk too cold. Feed milk at as nearly blood heat (98 degrees F.) as possible and remember that 20 degrees below blood heat may result in a case of scours with very young calves.

CHIEF FACTOR IN CREAMERY

Much of Success or Failure Depends Upon Density of Cream—Thin Cause of Big Loss.

The density of the cream is one of the most important factors in the success or failure of a creamery. Thin cream is chiefly responsible for the abnormal loss of butterfat and quality of butter and hence the low price paid the patrons for butterfat.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

By Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes

Novelized from the Motion Picture Play of the same name by George Kleine.

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, banker and railroad magnate, with his sixteen-year-old daughter, Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess from whom she repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause severe Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. She steals from her room at night and in an auto plunges into the surf, where she leaves the car. Becoming lost in the everglades she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. She is rescued and returned to her father, who had offered a reward for her return. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater; his attention having been occupied with her sister-in-law he has forgotten Gloria.

FOURTH EPISODE

Gloria went as if blindfolded through the glittering throngs in the corridor of the Metropolitan. It was a cruel humiliation to her young heart not even to be recognized by the man she had waited for through five eternal years, the man she had loyally considered herself engaged to all that time.

Put Freneau was not long in finding out his mistake. Gloria had run away from her father to run to Freneau, only to run away from him in turn. Old Stafford, looking for Gloria, encountered Freneau, shook him warmly by the hand and asked: "Have you seen my daughter?"

Then he realized with a shock that the man Freneau was engaged to his daughter, and that the respite of five years was up. The mortgage on Gloria's heart was due. Stafford glowered at the handsome young enemy of his happiness.

But Freneau had suddenly realized that Gloria was Gloria. He made haste to pursue her. He caught her just as she paused at the door of the Stafford box and put up her absurdly small handkerchief to catch the absurdly large tears, as they escaped over her pink petal cheeks.

Freneau deftly turned his slight into a compliment: "Miss Stafford—Gloria! I was so fazed when I saw you that I couldn't speak. You were tremendously pretty as a— as a kid; but now, with your hair up and all this grandeur on you—you're a goddess. And you're mine, aren't you? You're still mine!"

The impetuous charge staggered her, but she was too deeply hurt to forgive him at once. She shook her head dolefully and punished him with sorrow rather than with anger. In spite of all he could say she slipped into the box, closed the door almost in his fingers and vanished.

He cursed his stupidity and turned away. He joined a group of men seated in a box, among them his partner, Frank Mulry, who was beaming like a full moon wrapped up in broadcloth and white linen. Freneau began peering about the house through his opera glass. He fastened them on Gloria where she sat brooding bitterly. The first great meeting with her lover had failed to live up to the dreams she had been cherishing for five years.

Her father leaned over and tried to interest her in the opera. "Boris Godunov" is my favorite opera," he said, "and Amato is in splendid form tonight."

But Gloria hardly heard the sonorous orchestra or the thundering chorus. The music was little more to her than a loud wind blowing about her ashes of her dead romance.

By and by the opera glasses went roving idly along the boxes. They suddenly brought Freneau before her jump. He seemed very near and was of his opera glasses were staring into her own. She Mr. smiling back into his Mrs. Indeed, when he began operation in the week, has returned consent.

The next meeting, that Arbor of Gleaners will see home of Mr. and Mrs. The Schneider on Thursday, January everglades and her capture by the Seminoles.

She shook her head at Freneau and turned to see what her father thought of her flirtatiousness. She saw why he liked "Boris Godunov" so much. He had never slept better. Now, with her chaperon gone to Dreamland, it looked to Gloria as if Providence meant that she should pursue the adventure.

She did not know that Lois Stafford, seated in David's box, was taking in these wireless signals from one side of the horseshoe to the other. She did not see how Lois glowered at Freneau's alluring grin; how fiercely she frowned when Freneau rose and left the box, and how frantic she was when Gloria arose and left hers. For Gloria, seeing Freneau go, hesitated only a moment, then rose and stole away, too, leaving her father in a peaceful slumber which all the clamors of the Russian opera could not disturb.

Outside the Stafford door Freneau waited in ambush. He was rewarded by the appearance of Gloria. He was so delighted that when she asked him why he had motioned to her to meet him he could think of nothing better to say than: "I thought you might be hungry. There's the buffet upstairs."

Gloria smiled and understood and accepted the challenge. She said she was famished. The corridors and the massive stairway were empty at this time and they scampered up to the refreshment room like children.

Gloria was enchanted by the array of cakes and became hungry in the presence of the feast. She poked her finger at the most toothsome.

"Give me this, give me this; one of these, two of those and a chocolate and pistache ice cream—and some lemonade."

Love had evidently not ruined her young appetite.

Freneau led her to a table and they began to renew old acquaintance. She renewed her five-year-old expression of gratitude to him for rescuing her from the Indians, and he had neither the courage nor the honesty to admit that it was not he but Dr. Royce who had fought the chief to a lull.

Freneau and Gloria had many things to discuss, but he did not tell her all the mischief he had been up to in the five years' test. That went without saying. They did not know that the room filled up with a chattering mob when the curtain went down, nor that the chattering mob disappeared when the curtain went up again.

Gloria prattled on, munching her cakes and ice and sipping her lemonade. Suddenly she felt her ear seized in a familiar grasp. Her father had wakened with a start when the orchestra quit playing. He had blinked about in the sudden bright lights and missed his daughter. She was lost in the mazes of the opera house. He was tempted to offer a reward for her, as he had when she decamped into the everglades.

He decided to search first for her himself. He found the stray in the deserted buffet, spooning up the last of her ice cream and the best of Freneau's flatteries. He dragged her out of heaven. She fought him all the way down the stairs, but he would not let her go. He would not let Freneau come near.

At the next intermission her father tagged along like a younger brother. Before she could get to Freneau her sister-in-law, Lois, captured him. Lois rebuked Freneau for his attentions to Gloria, and reminded him of his oaths of fidelity to her own unfaithful self. He made light of his interest in Gloria and was avowing his devotion to Lois when her husband appeared at their elbows.

They masked their confusion as best they could and Freneau sauntered away. David glowered after him and glared at his wife. He had not forgotten that Freneau had been his rival for Lois' fickle heart before they were married. He did not dream how deeply she was involved with Freneau now; but the first seed of suspicion was sown. Lois' father, Judge Freeman, had not forgotten Lois' early infatuation for the young broker, who had a gift of making women reckless. He saw how David was miffed. He saw also how Gloria tried to reach Freneau, only to lose him in the crowd. The judge was trained in observing human nature. He even ventured to speak to Gloria.

"I wouldn't think too much of that Freneau fellow if I were you, Gloria."

"But you aren't me, are you, judge?" Gloria answered impudently, and the judge retorted, mumbling: "No! I'll have to admit that."

Then Pierpont came up and compelled Gloria to go back and listen to more opera, when she wanted to hear Freneau's glorious voice. When the last curtain fell and the multitude flooded the corridors she did not get a glimpse of him. Her father kept watch over her and Gloria went home amazed at the cantankerous meddlingness of parents in love affairs.

She told her father that he ought to be in better business than playing the demon chaperon, but he only smiled. She was all he had and he wanted to keep her to the last moment. He wanted also to make some investigation of Freneau's behavior and his reliability as a son-in-law. He had heard but little about him, but that little was not good.

The next day a rescuer appeared in unexpected guise. Her aunt, the great Hortensia Stafford, called to see her, raved over her beauty and hailed her as a graduate from the ranks of girl-dom.

"You must have a coming-out party," she said, "and take up the duties of womanhood."

Pierpont violently insisted that Gloria was only a child. But he was only a father and merely a brother to Hortensia, so she waved him aside as a nuisance. Gloria embraced her fervently and thought her an angel.

She changed her mind when it came to sending out the invitations for the debut, for Aunt Hortensia was a stickler for social selectness and she loved to blue-pencil doubtful names.

Gloria made out a list of those she wanted. There were dozens of girl friends and a few young men she had known from baby-carriage days. She wrote among them the name Richard Freneau with loving flourish. Aunt Hortensia ran him through with one straight thrust of her deadly blue pencil. Gloria protested, but Hortensia answered:

"I don't know him. I don't wish to know him. You have no time to know him. Who is he?"

When Gloria started to tell her she would not listen, and Pierpont had one from Freneau's hand, he slapped him on the back and said: "The main thing is that she thinks you saved her, so it's her turn to save you. Marry her quick! We can borrow a big wad on your father-in-law's mere name."

Freneau saw the point and promised. His triumphant smile did not last long.

His mind shifted back and forth like a shuttlecock, weighing all the chances. There was his entanglement with Lois. What a double-dyed fool he had been to flirt with Gloria's sister-in-law! How very careless of him! She might spoil everything. She would be bound to see and know something of his courtship.

He felt sure he could win Gloria over again as he had won her heart five years before, provided he could still pose in the light of a courageous and faithful suitor. But Lois must be kept from ruining everything. His best chance lay in speed, he thought, and his ability to keep Lois quiet.

His face cleared and his most charming smile was turned to Mulry. "All right. We'll marry her."

Standing at the head of the famous Stafford stair, in line with her aunt, her girl friends, and Lois, was the most exquisite debutante of the season. Aunt Hortensia had seen many in her long life, but she heaved a small, polite sigh of great pride and contentment as she glanced over the imperious young figure at her side.

Miss Stafford had insisted that simplicity be the keynote of her niece's attire at this afternoon reception in her honor; but the cunning of the dressmaker had contrived to cause the appearance of simplicity over a most complicated study in beauty line.

Yet above the wealth of fabric the joyous youth of Gloria shone forth transcendent.

The house was so filled with flowers sent by admiring friends and hope-

He Fastened Them on Gloria.

he put all his contempt into his eyes whenever Freneau's attempts to get a word alone with Gloria became too flagrantly expressive.

The chase was watched also by another—the terrified, conscience-haunted wife of David. Lois had given up her peace and happiness and her respect of self for the prize that she now saw being taken from her. She felt no repentance, but only a helpless rage.

Gloria had counted on dancing the first dance with her Mr. Freneau. She was so beset with woos that he could not reach her. He was not the only man in New York willing to make love to the heiress of the Stafford wealth, who was, incidentally, dowered in her own right with a beauty and magnetism that would have meant a fortune to any girl.

Gloria tried to dodge the gnatlike suitors: "May I have this dance? The next? The one after that, then?" They followed her among the pillars about the ballroom floor. They cornered her at last, and Dr. Royce confronted her. She was about to take him in desperation when she saw Freneau at her shoulder.

He was the man of men, but a sudden shyness overwhelmed her. Her betrothal to him had not yet been ratified again, and she was afraid to let everyone see her choose him. Her humid eyes caught sight of her father, who was smiling in the hope that there was security in numbers. She made a dive at him and made him her beau. Everybody admired her tactful choice; but Pierpont knew more about investments than about the fox trot, and he had more rheumatism in his muscles than grace. He made a sorry figure in the crowd of dancers, and finally collapsed in Royce's arms. Gloria giggled.

"I turn him over to you, doctor."

Royce laughed till he saw that she surrendered herself to Freneau. Then he frowned. He was in a miserable dilemma. He could see that Freneau cast a spell over the young soul of Gloria, and he knew him to be unworthy of the girl's trust. Royce knew that Freneau was a cad. He had stolen from Royce the fruits of his victory over the Indian chief. Royce had fought for Gloria and for his own life while Freneau carried her off. And now Royce wanted to save her from Freneau as he had saved her from the Seminole. But, alas! this was quite another matter, for Gloria did not want to be saved.

Royce could not bring himself to declaring the truth of the matter, for he could not endure to exploit his own prowess. He knew enough of the world, too, to know that if he went to Gloria with criticism of her cavalier, he would only add to Freneau the charm of persecution. He was in the presence of a complication of dangerous symptoms, and he did not know how to act to prevent their developing into a plague of troubles. He could only do what he could to keep Freneau assured that his conquest of the young girl's heart would not be opposed.

Suddenly a careless glance at Lois gave him a start. She was in such distress that he moved to her to offer his help. She was watching Freneau dance with Gloria. She saw how content they were together and her heart turned sick. But before Royce could reach her a determined youth cut in on Gloria's dance with Freneau and dragged her from his arms for the rest of the dance. Then Freneau hurried to Lois.

Instantly Lois was better, smiling once more, for now it was she whom Freneau encircled with his arm and piloted through the skipping and gliding traffic on the ballroom floor.

Freneau held Lois tightly and whispered to her honeyed lies. He explained that he had to be polite to his hostess and that Gloria was a dear child, but, of course, she was nothing to him, while Lois was all in all.

And Lois believed.

Bad women are, of course, bigger fools than good women; otherwise they would be wise enough to be good. But, being fools, it is not strange, perhaps, that they should be so easily fooled. They can seldom believe or disbelieve truly. The intuition upon which they so confidently rely constantly plays them false, and belief becomes the servant of wish.

That dance over, the godlike young heart breaker betook himself again to the trail and followed the Stafford million

Gloria had had enough of the guests. She wished that they would all go home. Instead they were still pouring in. The slam of the doors of their cars could be heard even here, as motor after motor rolled up, emptied its human contents on the marble steps and rolled away.

What Gloria wanted now was a solitude for two. Freneau was more than willing. Seeing a young man coming to whom she had promised several dances and given none, Gloria fed among the crowd, motioning Freneau to follow. She led the way through the dense wilderness of the conservatory to a marble bench, appropriately placed at the feet of a fountain where a little old marble Cupid presided. The trysting place was evidently popular, for Gloria flushed one brace of plover when she parted the branches.

She did not recognize the young man and woman who scurried away, but she understood their longing for quiet and would have apologized if they had lingered. But now that they were gone she smiled at Freneau and invited him to sit beside her.

"This is the nearest to the everglades we have," she said.

He lost no time in preambles. He began: "Gloria, dear, I've waited five years for this moment, and I want you to know that my heart has never for one moment—"

There was a rustle of palm leaves and the swish of skirts. Someone was invading their Eden. He sighed: "No hope!"

Gloria whispered: "Never mind; come out to our country place tomorrow and I'll take you for a sleigh ride behind my ponies. And I'll drive."

Freneau chuckled as he understood. He drew closer to the delectable witch only to see over her shoulder the eyes of an earlier witch.

It was Lois. Fearing that Gloria might see her she retreated. But Doctor Royce had followed, too, and he had seen Lois' face as she watched the lovers. He understood now the fever that he had noted on her face a while before. He understood, too, that he had an ally in his battle against Freneau's prosperity with Gloria—not an altogether desirable ally, but all allies are welcome in love or war. And this was both.

Biggest Little Dairy Country. Denmark holds the world's record for intensive farming. After Germany had taken Schleswig-Holstein, Danish experts figured that their development must come from within and they proceeded to develop the arid wastes of Jutland, which have now become tremendous producers of agricultural and dairy products. The Danes claim that they have solved most of Europe's intensive farming problems and that much of German efficiency in this direction has been learned from them. The little kingdom is one of the great dairy producers of the world and its butter is exported to every part of the earth. It is found in Mexico, and even in the far-off islands of the antipodes as well as in Patagonia. Its reputation in Europe, particularly in England, is unexcelled, and vast quantities have been shipped for years to all the countries of Europe. American business men have always admired the wonderful cow-feeding methods employed by the Danish farmers who tether their cattle in rows in such a way that they can eat but a certain section of grass in a day. The next day they are moved forward in the meadows and it is worked out on such a minute basis that by the time the cows have reached the end of the pasture the grass is again ready for grazing at the beginning.—Wall Street Journal.

Likely as Not. The auto had broken down. A pair of legs protruding from underneath it seemed to indicate the presence of someone attempting repairs.

"Break down?" inquired a passerby.

"Oh, no; only playing hide-and-seek with the works," came in muffled sarcasm from the voice belonging to the legs.

But the questioner was not easily daunted.

"What power car is it?"

"Forty horse," came the reply.

"What seems to be the matter?"

"Well, as far as I can judge," answered the car's owner, crawling under the wreckage, "39 of the bolts have bolted and the remaining one too upset to answer questions."

The Spirit of Victory.

"Nothing can beat this," says a French journal, commenting on an article published by the Austrians in a little paper in Montenegro called the News of Cetinje. The little paper notes that on Mount Lovcen will be erected a colossal monument to recall to future generations the conquest by the Austrian armies of this Gibraltar of the Adriatic. The sketch of this work, presented to the Emperor Francis Joseph but a short time before his death by the artist, was approved by the aged ruler. It represents the Spirit of Victory. Its enormous hands are crossed upon a gigantic sword and it looks toward a horizon "beyond which now trembles the traitress Italy."

IN PROSPEROUS FORMOSA

IRRIGATION IN FORMOSA

Twenty years ago, when Japan took it over, Formosa was a haunt of pest and crime. Today the island can show a collection of clean, modern, prosperous towns. The present governor general, Baron Ando, is a fine looking man with a clear eye and a kindly manner. His guests at the palace experience Japanese hospitality at its best, and no pain is spared, with the help of interpreters and courteous officials, to show what can be seen of the island and its workings even in a tour of ten days. The most favored visitor in such a short space of time, however, cannot hope to gain more than a series of interesting pictures.

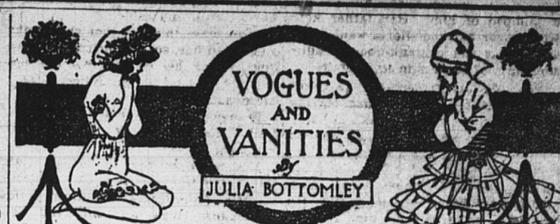

In answer to a question as to the problem that interested Baron Ando most keenly regarding the island, he answered that the problem that always held him was how best to govern for the good of the people, says a writer in the London Times. The impression gained of Taihoku, the capital of Formosa, is of a large clean government city. It is situated in the beautiful northern plain and is ringed around by hills that would make an enchanting frame to any metropolis. There is a population of 135,000, about 40,000 being Japanese. There are very wide, straight streets and handsome white buildings in western style. The sky blue, the sun hot, but not too hot, palm, acacia and banyan trees in groups, or in avenues, on all sides, and white roads some inches thick with fine dust, make a background for the Formosan people.

Long Period of Chinese Rule. There is something appealing in the faces of these Formosans. Their history is an ugly one. From the beginning of time, in the case of the aboriginal savages, who are mostly head-hunters, it is a series of horrors, bloodshed, plague, murder, sudden death, battle and exploitation. The savage tribes preyed on each other and on the unlucky sailors and passengers whom terrible storms so frequently wrecked on the island shores. Then the settlers from China took revenge on the savages who made constant raids on the dwellers of the plain and the Chinese governors oppressed their own people. Except for the forty years that Dutch adventurers, while filling their pockets, returned spiritual for material favors and did excellent educational and civilizing work among both savage and Formosan inhabitants—even educating the women!—as a Japanese writer naively puts it—the island has had an unhappy history. From China's 250 years of squalid rule little good seems to have come.

The Formosan Chinese, however, brought with them that instinct for work that is their heritage. Neither ill usage, violence, oppression nor savage incursions have kept the Chinaman from being industrious. He was dugged and sowed and planted. He has woven and spun his garments and dyed them a beautiful indigo blue, evidently for the love of the thing. The great falling of this industrious man, however, has ever been his uncleanliness. There is no doubt whatever that John Chinaman and his wife, or wives, are not to be moved either by evil smells or ugly surroundings. The wonder always is to see the lovely embroideries that are evolved in Chinese haunts of disease and dirt. Whoever speaks of Formosa with authority tells the same tale. When Japan took over the island 20 years ago Taihoku was nothing but a dirty Chinese town. And the visitor who would see something of a genuine Chinese old style town and realize the contrast, should visit Rokko. It lies on the west coast and is distant from the sea by the breadth of many salt fields.

City of Darkness. Rokko seems chiefly to be one long, almost interminably long, street. The houses that face each other are shaded from the sun's rays by heavy bamboo roofing that stretches from side to side of the roadway. Even in that brilliant tropical sun that seems to burn through parasol and hat, scarcely a ray of direct sunshine pierces the dimness of Rokko. The result is, of course, coolness, but it is also bad smell and airlessness that suggest the atmosphere of a medieval prison instead of a village in one of the sunniest and richest islands of the Pacific. How strange that in a land where sun and greenness and blue water might have it their own way human beings should choose to create such an environment. These Chinese houses that face each other are all alike in one thing. The whole front is open so that the interior is public, and the back wall of every living room has a sacred picture with one or two vases or ornaments, with tapers and lanterns that are lit in the evening. The family shrine is—whatever spiritual quality it may or may not possess—in the center, the background and the heart of the home. At midday some of the inhabitants are resting; others are eating or smoking; working, working. Never was there greater industry than these embroiderers, lantern-makers, carpenters, blacksmiths and weavers are fevered by. Occasionally John Chinaman is to be seen sitting by the entrance washing his long legs in a small hand basin.

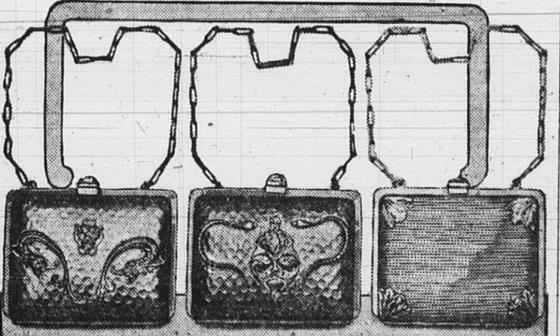

Learn About Sanitation. They appear to be peaceful, industrious folk, and to the casual eye two-thirds of them seemed emaciated enough to be bad phthisical cases. The kindly policeman from northern Japan who piloted us through this town said that he had little difficulty now in getting the people to carry out official orders for cleaning their houses, but at the beginning they simply did not understand what was wanted, and great patience was needed. Rokko has a bad name of old for pest. The scourge, which as recently as 1900 claimed 1,000 deaths out of 80,000 cases of infection, is now supposed to have been entirely stamped out. Wherever the visitor goes throughout the island there is the same striking contrast between Japanese and Chinese dwellings. In dusty, hot Kagf, or in breezy Tokyo, after passing rows of dreary Chinese dwellings, it is a relief to come suddenly on a Japanese house with a peep of dainty interior and miniature garden, and the inevitable sturdy bare-legged boy or girl in single cotton kimono industriously ladling clean water on the roadway to keep down the dust. In medical and sanitary matters the Formosan has been whisked suddenly from the awful depths of the fourteenth century right up to the era of what the bacteriologist calls “bugs.” If modern civilization is a blessing, that Japan has blessed the Formosans. With the benefits of progress there have also come modern evils, but the evils that accompany our civilization today are less gruesome and leprous than those of the Chinese era in this beautiful island.

Whatever You Will in Coiffures.

Just at present, coiffures are almost as diversified as heads. In the matter of hair dressing there are no styles that govern and about everything is left to individual taste. The hair dresser asks you what you will have, and is prepared to execute any sort of order, even to bobbing off half your locks and curling what is left of them. He is not arbitrary about a single thing, but is insistent that waved hair is better than straight hair, no matter what style you may elect to make your own. Young women like the style in which the hair is combed back off the forehead so well that they are reluctant to part with it. It is still a favorite. But it is much less becoming than waves or curls about the face, and newer coiffures insist upon covering at least a portion of the forehead. All of them present waved hair as an essential feature and all of them are exquisitely neat. A coiffure for evening dress is shown in the picture, with the hair parted a little to one side and waved. Only half of the forehead is uncovered and the waved hair almost covers the ears. There is a fad for turning the ends of the hair under and pinning them in without coiling them into a knot or making them into puffs. This is not so easy to do if the hair is long. The ends are usually disposed of in a knot at the top of the crown, as in the coiffure pictured. Not many hair ornaments, except combs, are worn; but in this as in coiffures, the individual may please herself. Some of the smartest women have worn a single soft feather, held by a brilliant ornament, in the hair at the opera.

Artificial Flowers. Hortense is very fond of the present artificial flower bud, which she says is “so Frenchy.” Possibly never before have artificial flowers had such a vogue as they have just now, and a small corsage flower is one of the best means to giving color to a dark street frock or suit. There are bunches of tiny flowers in brilliant red that are very good. There are bouquets consisting of a rosebud, a few forget-me-nots and a sprig or two of green that are good. Then there are nasturtiums, poppies and many other flowers in their own natural, rich coloring.—Paris Correspondence.

Three Pretty Vanity Cases.

Vanity bags bob up or dangle in the most unexpected places. They swing from umbrella handles and from fans—they are concealed in shopping and party bags, and are even suspended from pretty garters. But vanity cases are frankly carried in the hand and hold, in the most compact arrangement, all the aids needed in emergency cases of beauty in distress. They also accommodate small coins—in case they are wanted.

In the illustration three cases made of German silver are selected from an array of many different patterns. There are perfectly plain cases with polished surface and others with satin finish, but, in the long run, the fancier cases look better than the plain ones. In the case at the left, two uncompromising dragons, rampant against a field of hammered silver, show a disposition to swallow everything inside and out of the strong-looking case. But there is a small “watchdog of the treasury” represented as on guard, between them. In the case at the right, the decoration is much simpler. Parallel lines across the back, with a leaf motif at each corner, are sufficient for this quiet design. The center case is made interesting by a device that suggests an old adage. We may infer that the two serpents on it typify evil, and “the love of money”—but you know the rest. A Chinese mask, between the serpents, grins unmoved by anything outside of the case—knowing what is within. Boots for the Street. One sees the most frivolous dancing boots, high of heel and paper thin of sole with street tailored girth for shopping and runabout wear in town; but such boots are not correct according to the canons of conventionality. Pretty boots of bronze or light-colored grayed kid are intended for formal wear with dancing or reception frock when one travels by limousine or brougham; the walking costume in tailored style demands a smart walking boot with long, slender lines and heel, high perhaps, but not too curved for comfort. Box Plaits Even on Sleeves. The tendency toward box or other plaits is very well expressed on the sleeves. A customary form is a box plait reaching from the shoulder to the cuff. Or again the fullness of the sleeve may be gathered or plaited at the upper part of the armhole and the sleeves cut in such a manner that these plaits or gathers are smoothed out at the wrist. Plaits, sometimes, begin from the elbow down.

The true new woman of today is a real home-maker. TO LIVE LONG! A recipe given by a famous physician for long life was: “Keep the kidneys in good order! Try to eliminate thru the skin and intestines the poisons that otherwise clog the kidneys. Avoid eating meat as much as possible; avoid too much salt, alcohol, tea. Try a milk and vegetable diet. Drink plenty of water, and exercise so you sweat—the skin helps to eliminate the toxic poisons and uric acid.”

For those past middle life, for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation, as backache, scalding “water,” or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, “rusty” joints, stiffness, and aches at the drug store. This is a wonderful eliminator of uric acid and was discovered by Dr. Pierce of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. If your druggist does not keep it send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial package and you will find that it is many times more potent than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

Nothing stands as high as a remedy for every womanly ailment, as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for women certain in its effects. “Favorite Prescription” is an invigorating, restorative, a soothing and strengthening nerve, and a complete cure for all the functional derangements, neuralgic disorders, and chronic weaknesses peculiar to the sex. For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical time; nursing mothers; and every woman who is “run-down,” tired or overworked it is a special, safe, and certain help. Canadian Farmers Profit From Wheat. The war's devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and wheat near $2 a bushel offers great profits to the farmer. Canada's invitation is therefore especially attractive. She wants settlers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves by helping her raise immense wheat crops and other lands at remarkably low prices. During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre, many yields as high as 40 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses full of nutrition are the only food required for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, churches, markets convenient, climate excellent. Good homes. Little money is not compulsory in Canada. You can live on a small income. Short Sheets and Cold Feet. Sleeping with feet protruding from under kneelength sheets and with head on "sipples" pillows, is the prospect held forth in the declaration of wholesalers that there is a scarcity of white sheeting.

H. B. Guttard, of Burnham, Stoepel & Co., of Detroit, states that dealers have given notice that the scarcity of sheeting will probably last until next fall.

"A direct cause as to the shortage may be defined as that the country has not kept pace with the wide sheeting demand for the past two years and the requirements for export trade have also drained the market."

"During the year many apartment hotels and apartment houses demanding a large supply of white goods have further distracted from the stock of goods on the market. Even though the price is higher now than it has been for over 40 years, still it is impossible for large manufacturers to make deliveries."

"The shipbuilding industry, although indirectly, has taken away a portion of these goods. The building of ships necessitates furnishings for the cabins and this in turn has demanded a great supply of wide sheetings and pillows casings, thereby helping to establish the present scarcity."

Standard Oil Employee Tells How Tanlac Helped Him.

STOPS STOMACH WORRIES

After spending $500 in vain efforts to get relief from stomach worries, Frank Wilder turned to Tanlac. "It did more than I expected, but just what I wanted," he told the Tanlac Man. Mr. Wilder, who lives in Durand and works in Battle Creek, said: "I was driving a wagon for the Standard Oil Company when my stomach went back on me. My appetite failed. I forced myself to eat, but gas formed on my stomach. I used to gasp for breath and a bad, bitter tasting fluid belched up in my throat. It seemed I would choke. "The food sickened me so that tears often came to my eyes. It was a regular thing for me to stop my wagon alongside the road, climb down and try to vomit. I don't believe this was caused by the jolting of the wagon. My stomach needed a tonic, so I tried Tanlac. "I can eat heartily now without fear of after effects and I am grateful to Tanlac for being able to eat that way. The gas and belching are gone. I don't have to give up eating a perfectly good dinner now for I enjoy eating and altogether I feel fine. TANLAC CAN BE OBTAINED HERE ONLY AT THE STORE OF H. H. FENN CO. Tanlac can also be obtained at the following stores: DEXTER, Dexter Pharmacy. GRASS LAKE, Grass Lake Pharmacy.—Adv.

The Committee on Soundings for foundation at the County Farm reported as follows:
REPORT OF SOIL TESTS MADE ON THE WASHTEWAW COUNTY FARM OCTOBER 16, 1916.
Test holes were to be dug at three different points which were located by the Building Committee, as possible sites for the new Washtenaw County House.
Location No. 1—About four hundred yards back from the road on line with the Pest House and directly south of the present building.
Location No. 2—About three hundred and fifty yards back from the road and toward the east of the present building.
Location No. 3—About twenty-five feet from the road and directly east of the present building about thirty yards.

The limited time allowed in which to make these tests and the fact that we were unable to obtain a testing auger in the city hindered us in making as thorough an examination of the soil as we would like to have done. At Location No. 1 we ran thru good sharp sand to about 5 feet below the surface at which point clay was encountered. At Location No. 2—Test at Location No. 2 was not attempted for lack of time. Location No. 3 we ran thru stratified sand, ceasing our digging at a point eight feet and two inches below the grade. Since the grade at this point is about eight feet below the road level and the finished grade at the proposed building must be above the road level we felt that this depth was at least seventeen feet below the proposed finished grade, so digging was stopped and a sample of the soil taken which we are submitting with this report. An examination of this sand revealed no signs of quicksand.
Respectfully submitted,
R. W. KOCH.

Location No. 3—About twenty-five feet from the road and directly east of the present building about thirty yards.

The limited time allowed in which to make these tests and the fact that we were unable to obtain a testing auger in the city hindered us in making as thorough an examination of the soil as we would like to have done. At Location No. 1 we ran thru good sharp sand to about 5 feet below the surface at which point clay was encountered. At Location No. 2—Test at Location No. 2 was not attempted for lack of time. Location No. 3 we ran thru stratified sand, ceasing our digging at a point eight feet and two inches below the grade. Since the grade at this point is about eight feet below the road level and the finished grade at the proposed building must be above the road level we felt that this depth was at least seventeen feet below the proposed finished grade, so digging was stopped and a sample of the soil taken which we are submitting with this report. An examination of this sand revealed no signs of quicksand.
