CHELSEA WON SECOND PLACE AT YPSILANTI

Basketball Players Defeat Every Team But One—Get Silver Cup and Medals.

The basketball team of Chelsea High School journeyed to Ypsilanti last Thursday afternoon to participate in the basketball tournament conducted by the State Normal College for schools of the state with an average enrollment not to exceed 200. In the drawings which took place on Thursday evening at 7, Chelsea drew Wyandotte, and in the game which followed at 7:30, defeated them by a score of 26 to 17. This gave the boys a great deal of encouragement and on Friday morning they went after Mt. Morris in dead earnest. Mt. Morris had defeated Cass City the night before by a close score, but when Chelsea got through with them they knew they had been in a real basketball game. The score was 34 to 8.

According to the drawing on previous night Chelsea would now play the winner of the game between Unionville and Frederic. But neither team put in an appearance at the meet so Chelsea won the afternoon game by forfeit, 2 to 0.

In the evening a big banquet was served to all the teams but Chelsea was unfortunate enough to have its game scheduled with Wayne for that evening on their own floor and were compelled to return to Chelsea.

Four teams were now left to compete for the honors: Grayling, Gaylord, Lawton and Chelsea.

Chelsea defeated Gaylord on Saturday morning in a hotly contested game. Gaylord had the advantage in passing, but were unable to shoot baskets and the game resulted in the score 20-16 with Chelsea on the long end. This gave Chelsea second place at least with a chance of first place by defeating Grayling in the afternoon.

The boys were getting pretty well fagged by the grueling contest, having played four games which was one more than Grayling had played. They were also handicapped by the fact that the floor was large as compared with their own floor. The boys have no excuses to offer for their defeat. They were beaten by a better team. However, Grayling had the advantage in several ways. The score in the final game was 32-9 with Chelsea on the small end.

As winner of second place each member of the team received a bronze medal and the school a silver loving cup. The same are on display in Fenn's window.

The following boys participated in the tournament and received medals: Leland Kalmbach, Glenn Brooks, Robert Lawrence, Austin Palmer, Clark Rowe, Reuben Wagner, Max Schoenhals and James Monroe.

A large delegation from Wayne arrived in Chelsea in a special car on Friday evening with their basketball teams and blood in their eyes, ready to clean up on the Chelsea high school. However, they returned sadder but wiser for the Chelsea team showed up so much stronger and better than they had anticipated that they were literally deluged with the rain of goals that kept pouring through the Chelsea basket.

The girls team showed up very well, although suffering by the shake up necessary on account of illness of some of the regulars. Esther Collins showed her old time pep in a new position and succeeded in ringing up four goals. Vivian Gorton was right in trim, making 21 of the 29 points made by Chelsea. Liettha Alber kept the tall Wayne center busy every minute although she was not in the best of form for the game. The Wayne girls came back strong in the last half but were unable to overcome the lead Chelsea had obtained in the first half. The line up was as follows:

CHELSEA	WAYNE
Gorton.....	H. F. Nichols
Collins.....	L. F. Moore
Alber.....	C. Phillips
Grace Shepherd.....	R. C. Murphy
Schoenhals.....	L. G. Rayercraft
Gladys Shepherd.....	H. G. Walker

Score first half—Chelsea 16, Wayne 18.

Final score—Chelsea 29, Wayne 17.

Field goals—Gorton 8, Collins 4, Moore 6.

Free throws—Gorton 5, Moore 2.

Referee—Smith.

Although the Chelsea boys had played two games in the past 24 hours they waded right in and soon had the game clinched. In the last half G. Lawrence and M. Schoenhals were given an opportunity to show their ability and at the same time giving some of the boys who would have to play the games on Saturday at the tournament a chance to rest. The line up follows:

CHELSEA	WAYNE
Brooks.....	R. F. Brown
Kalmbach.....	L. F. Smith
R. Wagner.....	C. Wagner
Rowe.....	R. G. Cozadd
Palmer.....	L. G. Glover

Score first half—Chelsea 30, Wayne 18.

Final score—Chelsea 48, Wayne 14.

Field goals—Kalmbach 10, Brooks 4, R. Wagner 4, Rowe 3, Wagner 2.

Free throws—Brooks 6, Brown 2, Smith 2.

Referee—Ottmar.

Sold Liquor to Minors.

Two Chelsea boys were arrested in Ann Arbor Saturday night for being drunk, as a result of which four Ann Arbor saloonkeepers face prosecution for selling to minors. In Judge Thomas' court Monday the boys gave the testimony which will result in the prosecution of the saloonkeepers.

The boys were only seventeen years of age and no bartender could mistake them for men of legal age, unless he did not want to live up to the law in the case.

According to the state law, the two were let go by Judge Thomas following their answering of questions as to where they received their supply of liquor. Four bars were named by the boys as the places where they received drinks. They were told to leave in two others, they testified. In the four they were not questioned as to age, they said, and they received beer in all the places named.

On report that the boys had been arrested for being drunk, Prosecutor Carl Lehman demanded an immediate investigation of the charges, and promised that prosecutions would follow if evidence warranted. When told that the boys accused four dealers, he said they would be arrested soon and the charges would be followed to a finish.

Dr. Thomas Shaw.

Dr. Thomas Shaw, aged 71 years, died at his home in Ypsilanti Monday afternoon after a long illness.

Dr. Shaw was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, January 28, 1846. He commenced the study of medicine in 1866 as a student of Dr. Jacob Smith of Ridgeway, Ont., and later entered the office of Dr. Charles Lake of the same place. He entered the medical department of the University of Michigan in 1868, graduating in 1870. He then located in Chelsea, where he was married in marriage with Miss Mary Adella Hooker July 31, 1872. He continued his practice here until 1888, when he moved to Ypsilanti. While in Chelsea he was elected twice as a member of the common council and one term as village president.

He received the appointment as a member of the county board of pension examining surgeons in 1893. During his forty years of experience Dr. Shaw made advanced research work in some of the branches of medical science.

One daughter, Miss Mary Shaw, survived. The funeral services will be held at Ypsilanti Thursday and the remains will be brought to Chelsea this afternoon for interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

Dr. Shaw was a member of Phoenix Lodge, No. 13, F. and A. M., of Ypsilanti, and of Chelsea Tent, No. 281, the Maccabees.

A drama of a thrillingly true race for a fortune and a heart. ### CHANGE IN FIRM TO TAKE PLACE APRIL 1

Chauncey Freeman and Lyle Runciman New Owners of Freeman Store.

A change in the ownership of the L. T. Freeman Co.'s store will take place April 1, whereby Chauncey Freeman and Lyle Runciman will become the owners of the business, which they will conduct under the firm name of Freeman & Runciman. They will continue the business the same as it has been in the past, one of the high-class stores of the county. L. T. Freeman has been engaged in the mercantile business in Chelsea for nearly thirty years, and thinks that he is entitled to a vacation. Chauncey Freeman has been with the company for seventeen years, and Mr. Runciman has been connected with the Farmers and Merchants Bank for the past two years.

An Important Amendment

Some Good Reasons Why the Constitutional Amendment Pertaining to Bonding for Drains Should Receive the Entire Vote of the People in the April Election:

It will not affect cities, counties, townships or individuals who do not need legally constructed drains.

It will place the country districts on a par with cities in the matter of bonding for drains, the same as cities bond for sewers.

It will permit drainage districts to issue bonds and thereby make it possible for a farmer to make his drained land earn the cost of the drain before he has to pay for it.

It will save at least 20 per cent. on the first cost of drains owing to the fact that at present the drain job is let to contractors who must be paid in orders due in from one to three years and pay the discount for cashing same.

It is the only way in which Michigan can get the larger outlet drains very necessary now to prevent flooding, as the present manner of paying for same would be burdensome, if not prohibitive.

It will make it possible for farmers to have their lateral drains constructed at the same time as main drains, thereby receiving the benefits of such drainage before being asked to pay for it and not afterward as is now the case, the whole cost of main drain and the laterals necessary being prohibitive if paid at once.

It will be optional with the taxpayers whether they bond for each drain or not, such bonding being done only when so requested by the people who have to pay for the drains, and when the people on any drain wish to pay for them in one or two years they shall have the right to do so in every case.

It was earnestly requested by the Governor of Michigan in his inaugural address and has passed both branches of the legislature with scarcely a dissenting vote. Therefore it is for you and everyone to vote "YES" on this amendment.

CZAR ABDICATES RUSSIAN THRONE; REVOLT SUCCEEDS

Dynasty of Romanoffs Ends—
Nation Now a Republic.

MONARCHY IS ABOLISHED

Soldiers Aided Revolutionists in Overthrowing the Government—500
Persons Reported Slain During Fighting at Petrograd.

Petrograd, March 10.—Czar Nicholas II has abdicated the throne of Russia, both for himself and the twelve-year-old czarévitch, Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, his brother, who had been decided upon originally to be regent, also has abdicated.

This ends the dynasty of the Romanoffs.

Russia now is virtually a republic.

Monarchy is Abolished.

The executive committee of the duma issued a manifesto stating that the government of Russia will be handed for three months by a committee of twelve. For the time being, it is stated, the monarchy has been abolished. Councils of nobility in fifteen provinces have endorsed the revolutionary government.

The Grand Duke Nicholas is reported in a letter dispatch from Petrograd to have reached the Russian capital. The dispatch says that he will probably take command of the troops.

A dispatch to the London Chronicle from Petrograd on Thursday says the emperor of Russia has been placed under guard.

According to information received here the Russian people have been most distrustful during recent events of the personal influence of Empress Alexandra. She was supposed to exercise the greatest influence over Emperor Nicholas.

The Empress Alexandra, before her marriage to the emperor of Russia in 1894, was the German Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt.

A popular revolution has been successful and the government of Russia rests temporarily with a self-appointed committee of the duma.

After three days of battle, in which the majority of the 30,000 troops in Petrograd rallied and supported the revolutionists, the czar has returned.

The czar's abdication was in compliance with the urgent demand of the committee of the duma, which notified him that upon his assent depended the fate of the dynasty.

Troops Back the Duma.

Telegraphing from Petrograd Wednesday, Reuters' correspondent says Kronstadt, the fortress and great naval station at the head of the Gulf of Finland, 20 miles west of Petrograd, has joined the revolutionary movement. Two deputies, Popov and Tashkin, on instructions from the duma committee, proceeded to Kronstadt, where the troops placed themselves at the disposal of the duma.

The Copenhagen Ekstrabladet reports that the Russian consul in Haparanda, Sweden, says that former Premier Sturmer and Minister of the Interior Protodanov were killed in Petrograd. Both were charged with pro-German sympathies.

New Cabinet Announced.

A new national cabinet is announced, with Prince Lvov as president of the council and premier, and the other offices held by the men who are close to the Russian people.

The members of the new national cabinet are announced as follows:

Premier, President of the Council and Minister of the Interior—Prince George E. Lvov.

Foreign Minister—Prof. Paul N. Milukoff.

Minister of Public Instruction—Professor Shantlov of Moscow university.

Minister of War and Navy, and Interior—A. J. Guchkov, formerly president of the duma.

Minister of Agriculture—M. Ichugareff, deputy from Petrograd.

Minister of Finance—M. Tureshtchenko, deputy from Kiev.

Minister of Justice—Deputy Kerenzki of Saratov.

Minister of Communications—N. V. Nekrasov, vice president of the duma.

Controller of State—M. Godneff, deputy from Kazan.

The proclamation by the military governor in Petrograd forbidding any street assemblies and declaring that any disorders would be ruthlessly suppressed made it apparent that affairs were graver than the dispatches allowed by the Russian censorship would indicate.

Blow for Germany.

Authenticated dispatches from Petrograd, together with the consensus of governmental advisers here, indicate that the uprising was a rebellion against the growing German reaction believed responsible for the food shortage and lack of effective military organization.

In this connection Andrew Bonar Law, chairman of the exchequer, announcing the success of the revolution to the house of commons, said that it was comforting to England to learn that the revolution "was not directed at securing peace by Russia."

Declarations against the government have been frequent during the last few weeks. The attempted propagating of the duma fanned the fire, which spread rapidly from "class" to class and from civilians to troops.

Sunday it broke forth in flame. Panicked, the government ordered the mounted patrols to fire on the people. The patrols refused, and a battle between the police and the troops followed, resulting after regiment joining the revolutionists, seizing arsenals, burning prisons and jails, and throwing the heads of the secret police into prison.

For three days open battle raged in the streets of Petrograd. Strikes in factories and on street cars were called in sympathy with the revolution.

Wednesday the week's nightmare of revolution ended more suddenly than it had begun. Planks were pulled from windows, doors were unbarred, factories, stores and banks reopened.

The only evidence that a revolution had been fought and won was the smoldering ruins of a few public buildings. The cost in life is unknown. It is believed, however, that it did not exceed 500.

Magnificent and sudden as was the transition from the old to the new, it is believed here that its results will be almost immediately visible in the institution by the new Russia of a more vigorous and efficient prosecution of the war against Germany.

The duma telegraphed the principal generals at the front to use their influence with Emperor Nicholas in support of the duma's appeal for a popular government, says Reuters' Petrograd correspondent.

General Brusiloff, commander in chief of the armies on the southwestern front, replied:

"Your telegram received. I have fulfilled my duty to my emperor and my country."

Gen. Nicholas V. Kuzsky, member of the supreme military council, replied: "I have carried out your request."

M. Rodzianko, president of the duma, sent the following telegram to Emperor Nicholas:

"The situation is becoming worse. Measures must be taken immediately, for tomorrow it may be too late. The hour has arrived when the fate of the country and of the dynasty is being decided."

M. Chichegoroff, president of the council of empire, was arrested in his home and temporarily held in the military room of the duma.

A telegram received by the naval attaché of the Russian embassy in Paris reported that the railways and public services in Petrograd had resumed work.

The revolution, which evidently was carefully prepared, broke out simultaneously in Petrograd and Moscow.

The garrisons, which obeyed the instructions of the revolutionaries, immediately took possession of these cities after comparatively little fighting and equally small amount of destruction of property.

Petrograd Bridge Blown Up.

In Petrograd one bridge was blown up. Strict military rule prevails and the army has the situation so well in hand that it is not expected adherents of the late government will be able to offer any serious resistance, even in remote provinces.

After receiving word of the revolution, it is reported, Emperor Nicholas returned to the palace, where he arrived on Wednesday.

The following details of the revolution have been given to the press from a source usually well informed as Russian affairs:

"The soldiers refused to act against the crowd which started trouble when it heard of the ukase issued by Emperor Nicholas proroguing the duma. On Sunday the committee which had met to discuss the food situation was partly transformed into a provisional government under the presidency of President Rodzianko of the duma and included representatives of the duma council of the empire and of the municipality. The garrison agreed to support the provisional government."

Papers Fail to Appear.

Newspapers, with the exception of revolutionary publications which sprang into life with the success of the revolt, had failed to appear.

Street car service at noon had not been resumed, but it was believed that night would see partial service.

The government was declared to be overthrown by the duma leaders, who met in the Mavritchitsky palace after the regular session had been adjourned by imperial ukase, and in a telegram to the emperor the popular representatives declared that a special committee, composed of the leaders of the various parties in the duma, would submit a list of names for the new cabinet.

The imperial palace at Tsarskoye Selo is said to be in a state of siege, but thus far no fire has been reported between the guards defending the palace and the revolutionists and troops.

It is stated that General Michael V. Alekseeff, former chief of staff, has been offered the military dictatorship.

Two Statesmen Killed.

Stockholm, March 19.—Passengers arriving at Haparanda, Sweden, with hospital trains reported that two persons of prominence in Petrograd had been murdered.

One of them was said to have been Alexander D. Protodanov, minister of the interior, and the other was believed to be Boris Sturmer, former premier.

The old Russian government, it is alleged, tried to bring troops to Petrograd from Finland to save the situation, but the troops refused to go.

Helsingfors is declared to be in a state of siege.

ADAMSON LAW HELD CONSTITUTIONAL

SUPREME COURT HOLDS THAT CONGRESS HAD POWER TO PASS SUCH A LAW.

COURT DIVIDED FIVE TO FOUR

Immediate Effect of Decision Will Be to Basic Eight Hour Day On Interstate Railroads.

Washington.—In an epochal decision holding congress to be clothed with any and all power necessary to keep open the channels of interstate commerce, the supreme court sustained the Adamson law as constitutional and enforceable in every feature. The court was divided five to four.

The immediate effect of the decision will be to fix a permanent eight-hour basic day in computing wage scales on interstate railroads, for which a nation-wide strike has been threatened, and to give, effective from last January 1, increases in wages to trainmen of about 25 per cent.

The cost to the railroads is estimated at from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year.

The court, through Chief Justice White, declared both carriers and their employees, engaged in a business charged with a public interest, subject to the right of congress compulsorily to arbitrate a dispute affecting the operating of that business.

"Whatever would be the right of an employee engaged in private business to demand such wages as he desires, to leave the employment if he does not get them and by concert of action to agree with others to leave on the same conditions," said the opinion, "such rights are necessarily subject to limitation, when employment is accepted in a business charged with a public interest and as to which the power to regulate commerce by congress applied and the resulting right to fix in case of disagreement and dispute a standard of wages as we have seen necessarily obtained."

Coming on the heels of the concession of the eight-hour basic day by the railroads to avert the threatened strike, the decision is regarded as largely supplanting that agreement. It also is regarded as removing for all time, through the broad interpretation of congressional authority outlined by the court, the probability of future transportation paralysis.

Joining in with the chief justice in sustaining the law were Justices McKenna and Holmes, his immediate seniors in point of service, and Justices Brandeis and Clarke, junior members. Dissenting for various reasons were Justices Day, Van Devanter, Pitney and McReynolds.

RECRUITING WORK BOOMS

Prospect of Early Action Lures Youth of City.

Detroit.—Expectations of active service are once more filling the marine corps recruiting offices with youths eager for "action," as military men refer to fighting. They came Tuesday in such numbers as to necessitate keeping a medical examiner all day in the station. Ordinarily the doctor who is not in the service, calls in for an hour and tests the day's applicants.

Holland.—Thirty-five section men on the Michigan Central railroad were laid off when they petitioned for increase in pay from $1.75 to $2.25 a day.

Daten Rapids.—Mrs. Elias N. Carter, 78 years old, died at her home, southwest of this city. She was the second child born in Brookfield township.

Reed City.—Lightning played a queer prank at the home of Mrs. John Melster. A bolt of lightning entered the roof of the house without leaving an opening from the outside and struck a picture on one of the walls, melting the frame and wires on the picture. No other trace of the bolt was left except a small hole in the ceiling.

SPEED WORK ON WAR CRAFT

President Authorizes Expenditure of $115,000,000 Emergency Fund.

Washington.—News received from Plymouth that 15 men, some of them Americans, had been drowned when the American merchantman Vigilance was sunk without warning by a German submarine, added, it is possible, to the already grave view of the situation held here as a result of the destruction of the Vigilance, the Illinois and the City of Memphis.

The president authorized the expenditure of the $115,000,000 emergency fund, provided by congress to speed up naval construction and pay for special additional war craft, and the suspension of the eight-hour labor law in plants engaged on navy work.

Immediately afterward Secretary Daniels ordered the New York navy yard to begin building 50 submarine chasers of the 110-foot type, to be completed in from 60 to 80 days.

With the president's approval, the secretary also ordered the graduation of the first and second classes at the naval academy. The first class will go out March 29, releasing 172 junior officers to fill existing vacancies, and the second in September, furnishing 202 more a full year before they otherwise would be available.

While the energies of the navy will be concentrated for the present on efforts to get into commission craft designed particularly to destroy submarines and guard the coast, warship building generally will be speeded up under the recent agreement with private builders and with the funds now made available.

3 AMERICAN SHIPS SUNK

Act Virtually Places U. S. in State of War With Germany.

Washington.—Three American steamships have been sunk by German submarines. The vessels sunk were the City of Memphis, Illinois and Vigilance. Fifteen members of the crew of the Vigilance lost their lives.

Of the three ships destroyed, two of them were unloaded and homeward bound, and all were American built. American owned and officered and manned largely by American citizens.

Menger dispatches indicate that all were sunk with complete disregard for the safety of those on board, and that some of the members of the crew may have been lost.

With the announcement of the ruthless destruction of three unarmed American merchant ships by submarines, it was unofficially admitted that virtually a state of war exists between the United States and Germany.

International lawyers and constitutional experts showed no hesitancy in saying that President Wilson has full authority to interpret this as an act of war, and announce that this country considers that an actual state of war exists by reason of Germany's flagrant assault on American shipping.

RAIL MEN TO GET BACK PAY

Estimated That 12 to 13 Million Dollars Is Due Employees.

New York.—Much hard work remains for the railroad managers and the brotherhood leaders as a result of the agreement putting into effect an eight-hour day as from January 1.

About 800 new wage contracts must be signed. It is estimated the employees will receive between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000 in back pay.

Cadillac.—Fifty-two bodies are in vaults in Maple Hill cemetery, awaiting burial this spring. Thirty-one are the most ever been in the vaults at one time heretofore. Pneumonia and measles caused the majority of the deaths.

LABOR INSURANCE MAY BE COMPELLED

BILL INTRODUCED TO COMPEL STATE PROTECTION FOR ALL WORKMEN.

BANS PRIVATE INSURANCE

Provides That All Employers Who Now Carry Workmen's Insurance
Come Under New Act.

Lansing.—Compulsory state industrial accident insurance is the object of a bill introduced in the legislature by Representative William H. Jones, labor representative of Detroit.

The measure provides that all employers who are under the workmen's compensation act shall come under the new act, the state administering the insurance.

A commission of three men, with terms of six years, is provided and is empowered to work out a proportion of the insurance cost that must be borne by the state.

The funds now held in the state's employers' liability insurance fund shall pass to the control of the new board. This fund is maintained by a comparatively small number of employers who have come under the state's optional act.

The act prevents accident and industrial insurance underwriting by private companies.

EIGHT RAIL BILLS PENDING

Roads Ask for Passage of One But Are Opposing Others.

Lansing.—Eight bills affecting steam railroads are pending. The railroads ask for the passage of one of the bills. They are opposed to the other seven. This fact developed at hearing before the joint committees on railroads.

The one they favor is the passenger fare bill. The seven they oppose are: To provide shelters at livestock pens at all stations from which livestock is shipped; to speed up livestock shipments by fixing a minimum to the number of miles livestock must be moved per hour while in transit; to require that shipments of all kinds of freight must be moved not less than 50 miles each 24 hours, to insure adequate feeding of poultry in transit to markets; for an eight-hour work day for railroad crossing and tower men; to require a light at night at the head of a bunch of freight cars that a locomotive is pushing, and a "spotter's" bill which would give discharged railroad employees on account of reports made against them by private detectives, a right to a hearing and to be confronted by their accuser.

The railroads oppose most of these bills on the general ground that each would add to operating expenses.

If the legislature won't do anything to help increase the revenues of steam railroads and refrain from passing any bills that will add to their operating expenses the railroads will accept the result as a 50-50 split.

PROTEST FORCED PENSION

Younger Teachers Asked Right to Withdraw From Ranks.

Lansing.—The revolt of hundreds of the younger teachers in the state against the teachers' pension bill bore its first fruit when the house committee on education reported out favorably the McArthur bill, giving each teacher the option of coming under or refraining from coming under the measure.

The McArthur bill had its inception in the protest of the entire teaching staff of the Grand Lodge schools, the teachers there, asking for the right to withdraw from the ranks.

In many quarters, the passage of the bill, if it goes through both houses, is regarded as the forerunner of a break on the state's teachers' pension system. The younger element is dissatisfied with a number of features of the measure, chief among them the fact that a large number of the highest paid education officials of the state, some of whom receive salaries of from $3,000 to $7,000, are eligible to pensions.

Their pensions will be so large that they will constitute a burden out of all proportion, the younger teachers insist, particularly as most of the higher salaried principals and superintendents will reach the pensionable limits at a much earlier period than the majority of the teachers.

E. L. Smith, of Flint, 30 years old, was arrested for going on a chloroform jag. He said the anesthetic affected him the same way as alcohol.

A military company, directed by men who attended the Flatshurg training camp last season was recently organized at Battle Creek.

Pere Marquette reorganization managers have contracted for 1,000 new freight cars, to cost $1,300,000, for delivery during next September. The cars will be of 50,000 pounds capacity, in view of the early termination of the reorganization, the federal court was unwilling to enter into a contract for the purchase of equipment, and the reorganization managers, for this reason, made the purchase direct.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Mrs. Marianne P. Nims, of Monroe, 68 years old, wife of Frederick A. Nims, a member of the Custer Cavalry brigade in the Civil war, is dead.

The state forestry department has drafted a bill for the present state legislature providing exemption of taxes for standing timber. Taxes would be paid when timber is cut.

President H. B. Hutchins, of the University of Michigan, has received a letter from a young man, 22 years old, living in Turkey, who wants to enter the University of Michigan.

Forest fires last year burned over 17,144 acres of land and did $3,336,500 damage. It was reported at the annual meeting of the Northern Forest Protective association at Marquette.

A short course in forestry for high school boys, coupled with opportunity for an ideal summer vacation for boys of more than 16 years of age, will be offered by the Michigan Agricultural college this year.

Montcalm county now boasts 95 miles of state reward road on which it has received in state bounties $50,591, or about $1.50 for each dollar it has paid the state. Considerable new road is to be built.

Preliminary arrangements have been made such progress that it is probable bids will be asked within the next 60 days for construction of the Pennsylvania-Detroit railroad's line between Carleton, Mich., and the western city limits of Detroit.

Two score Muskegon county farmers, all of whom desire to take advantage of the federal farm loan act, enabling them to borrow money from farmer loan banks at lower rates of interest than they are now paying, met and organized the Muskegon National Farm Loan association, the first of its kind in western Michigan. An application for a federal charter was forwarded.

Northern Michigan's largest "wooden hen" will soon be in operation at Cadillac, a local produce company having ordered an incubator 5 feet wide and 76 feet long, with a capacity of 10,200 eggs. The plan is to raise chicks for the farmers of this section of the state, each to furnish his own eggs, or order them through the produce company, from selected flocks in other counties.

Noticing a large bird soaring about the carcass of a calf in his father's field, Clinton Springer, 17 years old, Chesham township, set a trap near by. Within a few minutes the trap had closed on the legs of the bird, which proved to be a bald-headed Rocky Mountain eagle, measuring eight feet from tip to tip. It is believed that the bird escaped from some park, as he is accustomed to people.

Dr. J. S. Donald, a veterinary surgeon, and Felix Guano, proprietor of the Hotel Royal, at Bay City narrowly escaped drowning when they attempted to cross an arm of the Saginaw bay with an automobile. The machine broke through the ice when about 500 yards from shore and went to the bottom. Both men barely managed to crawl out on the ice, thoroughly drenched. An effort will be made to recover the machine.

A campaign to enlist 600 Michigan physicians in the medical reserve corps of the army has been begun by the Michigan branch of the national board for civilian medical preparedness at Ann Arbor. Committees have been appointed to conduct the campaign in each county. Dr. Reuben Peterson is chairman of the Michigan board. Dean Victor C. Vaughn, of the medical school, is chairman of the national board. A similar campaign will be conducted in every state.

Muskegon residents who have been dodging collectors by changing their residence will be tripped up on this scheme hereafter. The city ordinance requiring all the teamsters to register with the chief of police each Monday the names of everyone whom they have moved the preceding week, except retail merchants, has just become effective. The police will inform merchants desiring to know the whereabouts of any debtors who have moved. The ordinance was adopted at the request of local merchants who feel there are altogether too many tenants dodging bills.

A temporary organization of the new Pere Marquette railway company has been formed, and Frank H. Alfred, now general manager of the system, has been made president. Papers of incorporation and reorganization have been filed at Lansing. The receivers are about ready to deliver the road to the new owners. To perfect delivery, it is understood, a receiving company had to be organized. There are details of sale of some of the subsidiary properties, like the Indiana branch and the branch line in Canada, which could only be perfected in case there was a new organization to which to make the delivery.

While playing on "shore ice" at Gratiot Beach, Port Huron, Gordon Tappan, 8 years old, broke through the ice and plunged into water over his head. He kept his head above the icy water until Clarence Sperry, a companion, rescued him.

Guest Peterson, employee at the Oliver Iron Mining Co.'s Queen mine at Negaunee, was killed instantly when he was struck by the Lake Superior & Ishpeming Railway Co.'s snow plow pushed by a switch engine. He was 67 years old and one of the pioneer Scandinavian residents of the city.

MICHIGAN OWNERS OF AUTOMOBILES

Are Greatly Favored With Mutual Insurance.

The farmer of the state as well as the lawyer and banker feels the need of keeping his automobile insured against the damage claims and suits together with fire and theft.

When the farmers began to buy automobiles they found that with the increased number, accidents would often occur in which some person would be injured, a horse would become frightened, running away and injuring the driver, etc. Damage claims were brought entailing the expense of defending a lawsuit or paying a large judgment, possibly $5,000. This condition has created a demand. Michigan is the only state that has a large mutual insurance company protecting against fire, theft, and liability and its rapid growth and success is being watched by other states.

The cost in stock companies for this insurance has been about $50 per year, but on the mutual plan with a large membership it is estimated that the cost is about 2 cents per day.

A man who is able to own an automobile is willing to lay aside a few dollars each year to protect this car against fire and theft and the accumulations of years from damage suits.

The past week an automobile was stolen from Arthur Sine, a farmer near Springport; another one was stolen from the barn from David LaBlanc, Romulus; a car burned on a farm near Jonesville, and another one near Frankenmuth. In every paper you read of damages done by automobile owners to person and property.

As only about 4% die leaving an estate of over $1,000 but few are able to stand heavy losses without protection; that is reason that 17,000 policies have been issued by the Citizens' Mutual Automobile Insurance Company of Howell.

The cost is $1.00 for policy plus 25 cents per H. P. to join.

The company is now starting on the third season; 245 claims have been promptly paid.

THE RANGER SHOWS WHAT A DESPERATE MAN HE IS WHEN PROVOKED TO VIOLENT ACTION

Mrs. Alaire Austin, a handsome young matron, gets lost in the Texas desert and after an all-day struggle wanders into the little camp of David Law, a ranger officer, hunting a Mexican murderer. Circumstances force her to stay there overnight. She finds the ranger an interesting character.

"Bloodhounds ain't any good, outside of novels. If beef got scarce, them Greasers would steal the dogs and eat 'em." He added, meditatively, "Dog ain't such bad eatin', either."

"Have you tried it?"

Mr. Law nodded.

"Did you join the Maderistas for excitement?"

"Mostly. Then, too, I believed Pancho Madero was honest and would give the pesos land. An honest Mexican is worth fightin' for, anywhere. The pelados are still struggling for their land—for that and a chance to live and work and be happy."

Mrs. Austin stirred impatiently. "They are fighting because they are told to fight. There is no patriotism in them," said she.

"I think," he said, with grave deliberateness, "the majority feel something big and vague and powerful stirring inside them. They don't know exactly what it is, perhaps, but it is there. Mexico has outgrown her dictators. They have been overthrown by the same causes that brought on the French Revolution."

"The French Revolution?" Alaire leaned forward, eying the speaker with startled intensity. "What do you know about the French Revolution?"

Reaching for a coal, the Ranger spoke without facing her. "I've read a good bit, ma'am, and I'm a noble listener. I remember good, too. Why, I had a picture of the Bastille once." He pronounced it "Bastilly," and his hearer settled back. "That was some calaboose, now, wasn't it?" A moment later he inquired, ingenuously, "I don't suppose you ever saw that Bastille, did you?"

"No. Only the place where it stood." "Sho! You must have traveled right smart for such a young lady." He beamed amiably upon her.

There was something winning about this young man's modesty, and something flattering in his respectful admiration. He seemed, also, to know his place, a fact which was even more in his favor. Undoubtedly he had force and ability; probably his love of adventure and a happy lack of settled purpose had led him to neglect his more commonplace opportunities and sent him into the Ranger service. This man had been denied what she termed education; therefore she decided to put one in his way.

"Do you like to read?" she asked him.

"Say! It's my favorite form of exercise." Law's blue-gray eyes were expressionless, his face was bland. "Why?"

"I have a great many books at Las Palmas. You might enjoy some of them."

"Now that's nice of you, ma'am. Maybe I'll look into this cattle-stealin' in your neighborhood, and if I do I'll sure come borrowin'."

"Oh, I'll send you a boxful when I get back," said Alaire, and Dave thanked her humbly.

Later, when he went to move his mare into a shady spot, the Ranger chuckled and slapped his thigh with his hat. "Bessie Belle, we're going to improve our minds," he said aloud. "We're going to be literary and read 'Pillgrim's Progress' and 'Alice in Wonderland.' I bet we'll enjoy 'em, eh? But—doggone! She's a nice lady, and your coat is just the same color as her hair."

Where the shade was densest and the breeze played most freely, there Dave fixed a comfortable couch for his guest, and during the heat of the forenoon she dozed. But one cannot sleep well with a tropic sun in the heavens, and since there was really nothing for her to do until the heat abated, Alaire, when she awoke, obliged the Ranger to amuse her.

As the morning progressed Law proved himself an interesting companion, and in spite of the discomforts of the situation the hours slipped rapidly. Luncheon was a disagreeable meal, eaten while the arroyo bled and the heat devils danced on the hills; but the unpleasantness was of brief duration, and Law always managed to banish boredom. Nor did he seem to waste a thought upon the nature of that grim business which brought him to this place. Quite the contrary, in the afternoon he put his mare through her tricks for Alaire's edification, and gossiped idly of whatever interested his guest.

Then as the sun edged to the west and Mrs. Austin became restless, he saddled Bessie Belle and led her down the gulch into a safer covert. Returning, he carefully obliterated all traces of the camp. He watered the ashes of the fire, gathered up the tattered scraps of paper and fragments of food, and then when the place suited him fell to examining his rifle.

Alaire watched him with interest. "Where shall I go," she asked, "and what shall I do?"

"You just pick out a good cover beyond the water hole and stay there, ma'am. It may be a long wait, for something may have happened. If so, we'll have to lie close. And don't worry yourself none, ma'am; he won't make no trouble."

With the sunset the water hole lay sleeping.

Alaire's retreat was far from comfortable; there was an ants' nest somewhere near her and she thought of moving; but suddenly her breath caught and her heart jumped uncontrollably. She crouched lower, for directly opposite her position, and outlined against the sky where the sharp ridge cut it, was the figure of a mounted man. She was conscious that a keen and hostile pair of eyes was searching the coverts surrounding the charco.

Then, as silently as it had appeared, the apparition vanished beyond the ridge. Alaire lay close, as she had been directed, praying that the horseman had been warned; but shortly she heard again the rustle of stiff branches, and out into the opening rode a Mexican. He was astride a very gray pony, and in the strong twilight Alaire could see his every feature—the swarthy cheeks, the roving eyes beneath the black felt hat. A carbine lay across his saddle horn, a lariat was coiled beside his leg, a cartridge bullet in his hand.

"No time was lost. Both Mexicans fell to with a will, and in a surprisingly short time water was boiling. When it came Law's turn to eat, Alaire, who was eager to be gone, directed her employee to fetch the ranger's horse. Panfilo acquiesced readily and buckled on his cartridge belt and six-shooter. He was about to pick up his rifle, too, but finding Law's eyes inquiringly fixed upon him, he turned with a shrug and disappeared down the arroyo. It was plain that he considered his friendly relations well established and resented the ranger's suspicion.

"How long has that fellow been working for you?" Law jerked his head in the direction Panfilo had taken.

"Not long. I don't know much about him," Alaire confessed. Then, as if in answer to his unspoken question, "But I'm sure he's all right."

"Is he looking up range for you?"

"No—no! I left him at the ranch. I don't know how he came to be here, unless—It is rather strange!"

Dave shot a swift, interrogatory glance at Panfilo's traveling companion, but Alaire's face was stony, his black eyes were fixed upon the fire.

With an abrupt gesture Law flung aside the contents of his cup and strode to Panfilo's horse, which stood dejectedly with reins hanging.

"Where are you—going?" Alaire rose nervously.

"It was nearly dark now; only the crest of the ridges were plain against the luminous sky; in the dusky bottom of the arroyo the shadows were deep. Alaire had no wish to be left alone with the prisoner.

With bridle rein and carbine in his left hand, the ranger halted, then, scooping for Auto's discarded cartridge belt, he looped it over his saddle horn. He vaulted easily into the seat, saying:

"I hid that mare pretty well. Your man may not be able to find her." Then he turned his borrowed horse's head toward the brush.

Auto had squatted motionless until this moment; he had not even turned his eyes; but now, without the slightest warning, he uttered a loud call. It might have served equally well as a summons or as an alarm, but it changed the ranger's suspicious into certainty. Dave uttered an angry exclamation, then to the startled woman he cried:

"Watch this man! He can't hurt you, for I've got his shells." To his prisoner he said, sharply: "Stay where you are! Don't move!" The next instant he had leaped into the brush on the tracks of Panfilo Sanchez, spurring the third gray pony into vigorous action.

It was an uncomfortable situation in which Alaire now found herself. Law was too suspicious, she murmured to herself; he was needlessly melodramatic; she felt exceedingly ill at ease as the pony's hoof-beats grew fainter. She was startled by hearing other hoofbeats now; their drumming came faint but unmistakable. Yes, there were two horses racing down the arroyo. Auto, the fugitive, rose to his feet and stared into the dusk.

"Sit down!" Alaire ordered, sharply. He obeyed, muttering beneath his breath, but his head was turned as if in an effort to follow the sounds of the pursuit.

Next came the distant rattle of loosened stones—evidently one horse was being urged toward the open high ground—then the peaceful quiet evening was split by the report of Law's thirty-three. Another shot followed, and then a third. Both Alaire and her prisoner were on their feet, the woman shaking in every limb, the Mexican straining his eyes into the gloom and listening intently.

Alaire had begun to feel the strain of the situation and was trying to decide what next to do, when David Law came riding out of the twilight. He was astride the gray, behind him at the end of a lariat was Bessie Belle, and her saddle was empty.

Mrs. Austin uttered a sharp cry. Law dismounted and strode to the prisoner. His face was black with fury; he seemed gigantic in his rage. Without a word he raised his right hand and cuffed the Mexican to his knees. Then he leaped upon him, as a dog might pounce upon a rabbit, rolled him to his face, and twisted the fellow's arm into the small of his back. Auto cursed, he struggled, but he was like a child in the ranger's grasp. Law knelt upon him, and with a jerk of his lariat secured the fellow's wrists; rising, he set the knot with another heave that dragged the prisoner to his knees. Next he booted Auto to his feet.

"I've a notion to bend a gun over your head," Law growled. "Clever little game, wasn't it?"

"Where?—Did you—kill him?" the woman gasped.

Alaire had never beheld such a demonic expression as Law turned upon her. The man's face was contorted, his eyes were blazing insanely, his chest was heaving, and for an instant he seemed to flinch her in his anger. Ignoring her inquiry, he went to his mare and ran his shaking hands over her as if in search of an injury; his questioning palms covered every inch of gleaming hide from forehead to withers, from shoulder to hoof, and under cover of this task he regained in some degree his self-control.

"That hombre of yours—didn't look right to me," he said, finally. Laying his cheek against Bessie Belle's neck, as a woman snuggles close to the man of her choice, he addressed the mare: "I reckon nobody is going to steal you, eh? Not if I know it. No, sir; that hombre wasn't any good, was he?"

Alaire wet her lips. "Then you—shot him?"

"I didn't say I shot him," he told her, gravely. "I wanted him first, and he turned on me—blew smoke in my face. Then he took to the brush, afoot, and— I cut down on him once more to help him along."

"He got away?"

"I reckon so."

"Good? Didn't he steal my horse? Didn't he aim to get me at the first chance and free his compadre? That's why he wanted his Winchester. Say! I reckon he—needs killin' about as much as anybody I know."

"I can't understand it," Alaire said down wearily. "One of my men, too."

"This fellow behaved himself while I was gone, eh?" Law jerked his head in Auto's direction. "I was afraid he—had try something. If he had—Such a possibility, oddly enough, seemed to choke the speaker, and the ferocity of his unfinished threat caused Mrs. Austin to look up at him curiously. There was a moment of silence, then he said, shortly: "Well, we've got a horse apiece now. Let's go."

The stars had thickened and brightened, rounding the night sky into a glittering dome. Auto, the murderer, with his ankles lashed beneath his horse's belly, rode first; next, in a sudden silence, came the ranger, his chin upon his breast; and in the rear followed Alaire Austin.

Under the stars, at the break of the arroyo, three hundred yards below the water hole, a coyote was slinking in a wide circle around the body of Panfilo Sanchez.

David Law's action in killing the Mexican has a more significant effect on the ranger's career and on that of Mrs. Austin than either of them can possibly foresee. Read the next installment.

The Bishop's Ring.

Bishop Russell Wakefield of Birmingham, has a ring with a curious history. It is a reminder of the war, and of the wanton destruction of the beautiful cathedral of Johns. Some months ago he was allowed to visit the cathedral shortly after a bombardment. Colored glass from the famous windows and broken fragments of the richly-ornate stonework lay among the debris. The bishop picked up some scraps of stained glass, of pure red and sapphire color, and he has had small portions mounted in a new episcopal finger ring. He regards it as one of his most interesting souvenirs.—London Tit-Bits.

His Fatal Oversight.

He proposed to her by mail, and by letter she replied; he read her brief refusal, then committed suicide. Alas! he'd be alive today, and she a happy bride, had he but read the postscript penned on the other side.

GIVING AN UPWARD SQUEEZE

Illustration Given Herewith Shows How One of Standard Milk Machines is Operated.

The drawing shown here illustrates how one of the standard milking machines draws the milk from the cow's teat. Any method of drawing the milk from the udder down through the teat also tends to draw blood from the veins of the udder down into the smaller veins of the teat. It is necessary that something shall keep massaging the blood back from the teat, so that it will continue in circulation. The comfortable upward squeeze does exactly this. This squeeze is adjustable, so that the operator, by turning a little lever, can give a heavier squeeze to a big-teated cow and a lighter squeeze to a small-teated cow. This each cow gets just the squeeze needed in her individual case—a feature that makes each cow give her maximum.

When the calf milks, its tongue has a squeezing action on the teat, the same as your tongue does if you place your finger in your mouth and suck it. This squeezing action of the calf's tongue keeps the blood in the teat in circulation. If the calf stopped squeezing, just sucked each swallow; it would slowly suck so much blood down into the veins of the teat that the teat would appear red and swollen.—Farmers Mail and Breeds.

RECORD OF BIG IMPORTANCE

Small Amount of Work Required to Keep Books If Done Regularly—Profit or Loss Shown.

It is a good thing to keep records of all the farm operations. They may seem trivial at the time, yet some day are sure to be of great value and are a great help and satisfaction in clearing up difficulties that frequently arise. It requires only a small amount of work to keep them if the work is done regularly and systematically. The very fact that records are kept makes one careful of details and interested in making the things of which the records are kept turn out the best. It helps one to have a firm grasp on his affairs and to know just where he stands in all his work. He knows whether he is running his farm or any branch of his farming at a profit or at a loss.

In no branch of farming are records of more importance than in dairying. It is of actual money importance to know whether a cow is making a profit on the feed she consumes or is eating more than she is worth.

VENTILATION OF DAIRY BARN

Where Air Is Good, Cows Should Remain in Stalls at Night Both in Summer and Winter.

If ventilation of the barn is good, cows should remain in the stall all night, both in summer and in winter. If ventilation is imperfect in very hot weather it would be advisable to turn them out in some clean lot or pasture, but in doing this considerable manure is lost.

During some of the colder days of winter it would be advisable not to turn cattle out except during short periods for watering. Chilly weather has considerable influence in reducing milk flow and a good cow should not be exposed to too severe climatic changes.

CULL OUT ALL THE LOAFERS

Big Increase in Profits Made by Farmer Who Weeded Out All Unprofitable Animals.

Merely by culling out the unprofitable cows one farmer reports that he was able to raise the milk receipts per cow from $50 one year to $150 the next, and the live-stock receipts per $100 worth of feed from $70 to $170. This made it possible for the farmer to increase the profit $1,500 on his farm in addition to what the farm contributed toward the living and after 5 per cent interest on the investment had been subtracted. The year previous the farmer had lost money.

Ship Was of the Danton Class and One of Six Built for the French Navy in 1909-10.

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.—A French battleship of the Danton class was sunk by a German submarine in the Mediterranean.

The warship was protected by destroyers and was running a zig-zag course trying to escape the U-boat.

Warships of the Danton class displace 18,028 tons. The complement consists of 681 officers and men. There are five battleships of the Danton class, in addition to the name ship, the others being the Mirabeau, the Diderot, the Condorcet, the Vergnaud and the Voltaire. All except the Vergnaud were completed in 1909, she having been finished in 1910.

Ships of the class have a length of 481 feet, beam of 84 feet and draft of 27.5 feet. Their armament consists of four 12-inch guns, 12 9.4-inch guns, 16 2.9-inch guns, 10 three pounders and two torpedo tubes, submerged. They average about 19.5 knots in speed.

HEALER PERMITS BOY TO DIE

No Doctor Called for Flint Boy—III With Diphtheria.

Flint—Coroner Henry Cook, acting on the advice of state medical officials, has called an inquest for March 26 to inquire into the responsibility for the death of Jared King, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jared C. King and grandson of Police Justice James M. Torrey.

The boy died Monday night of diphtheria, developing from tonsillitis, and, it is said, he had no medical attention until an hour and a half before death. Up to that time he had been given treatments, it is said, by Emory S. West, self-styled spiritualist healer. No quarantine for diphtheria was maintained and no report was received by the health authorities until Dr. O. W. McKenna, who attended the boy at his death, reported the case to the coroner.

Questioned by Prosecutor Brownell West denied that he had treated the child as a physician, but merely as a healer and said he did not make a practice of treating cases of infectious disease. As soon as the boy's illness developed into diphtheria, he said, he called a physician.

VOTE ON WET ISSUE IN 1918

Liquor Men Plan to Resubmit Question Next Year.

Lansing—"The plan is to resubmit the prohibition question in 1918. Immediately after May 1, 1918, we shall get out petitions for the signatures needed, file them with the secretary of state, and have the matter submitted at the 1918 fall election." This was the declaration of the intention of the "wets" to have the state-wide prohibition question re-opened, and it was made here by Carl A. Zimmer, president of the Knights of the Royal Ark, the Detroit saloonkeepers' organization, and John Zang, its former president, just retiring.

It is accepted here as settling the question of what the wets will do in the way of struggling against conditions to be imposed on them by prohibition.

The Royal Ark is the strongest organization of retail liquor dealers in the state, and it is understood that in the program, outlined above, the Ark will have the support of the brewing interests of the state. Whether the so-called "Home Rule league" will be revived is a question. Retail liquor men from out in the state are also being lined up for the program.

Traverse City—Cadillac and Scottville have asked for details on the city beautiful campaign here before starting one in these cities.

Traverse City—Pet dogs and cats condemned by the authorities will not be shot or hit in the head with an axe in the future. If a suggestion of the Grand Traverse County Humane society is carried out, the society asks that a metal box be manufactured, to be connected with an electric current. Into these boxes they would put all the condemned pets and kill them instantaneously.

Kalamazoo—The States Motor company, of this city, will be reorganized with an authorized capital of $50,000,000.

Whitehall—Mrs. Christian Biers left her two-year-old daughter in care of a neighbor boy while she went to the village to do some shopping. The boy saw some cattle in the yard and went out to drive the stock away. When he came back, five minutes later, the baby was dead on the floor. All her clothing had been burned off. There was no fire in the stove and how the accident happened is a mystery.

WOMAN NOW IN PERFECT HEALTH

What Came From Reading a Pinkham Advertisement.

Paterson, N. J.—"I thank you for the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies as they have made me well and healthy. Some time ago I felt so run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous, had such bad dreams, did not sleep at night, and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. I advise every woman, single or married, who is troubled with any of the above-mentioned ailments, to try your wonderful Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and I am sure they will help her to get rid of her troubles as they did me."

Paints King by Proxy.

King Alfonso of Spain, absorbed by his occupation, has been unable to give the necessary number of sittings to Carlo Vassquez, who is engaged in painting the monarch's portrait. Señor Vassquez, however, has solved the difficulty. No matter at what time one visits his studio the king can be seen there sitting in a familiar pose in the uniform of a colonel of infantry.

If one examines the sovereign attentively it can be seen that he retains his immovability—it is a wax figure which represents him. The figure and attitude of Alfonso have been exactly copied and he will have to pose only for the face and hands.

In Boston.

"Now," said a Boston school teacher to her class in English, "can anyone give me a word ending in 'ous,' meaning full of, 'dangerous,' full of danger, and 'hazardous,' full of hazard?" For a moment there was a dead silence. Then a small boy raised his hand.

"Well," queried the teacher, "what is your word?"

Then came the reply: "Pious, full of pie!"—Tit-Bits.

BREVITIES

SALINE—Miss Grace Wheeler was quite severely bitten by a bull dog belonging to Ray Combs, on Tuesday night of last week, while on an errand to the latter's home, and suffered an ugly gash in the calf of her leg, besides other bruises. The injuries have confined her to her bed for the past week. It is hoped that nothing serious will result.—Observer.

PINCKNEY—Sheriff Miller was in town last Friday and secured a bottle of blitz, sold at a local hotel, and put out for a soft drink. When the same was tested it was found to contain four and thirty-four one-hundredths per cent alcohol, which is more than beer contains, one-half of one per cent being all that the law allows for soft drinks. Saturday Sheriff Miller came over and loaded the blitz, three barrels of it, into his Ford and took it to Howell. It looks like a general clean up in the county as arrests have been made at Brighton and Fowlerville where drinks were being sold that contained even more alcohol than blitz. It is not thought that the hotel proprietor was aware of the amount of alcohol contained in the blitz.—Dispatch.

He plans to have Mulry send Gloria a bunch of telegrams. After Freneau takes leave of Gloria she runs from her window an attack made upon him. Doctor Royce convinces her that what she has seen is the result of a delirium. Later a telegram, followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies, but her telegrams are returned. She accidentally sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper. Gloria appears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce becomes alarmed and tells what he knows of Freneau to Mr. Stafford. Together they seek to prevent scandal from catching Gloria. She accuses them in her mind of conspiracy against her. Gloria sets about to run down Freneau's murderer. Royce warns Mulry to tell Gloria nothing. Gloria calls on Mulry and there sees Lois who is also worried. Gloria's suspicions are aroused. Royce endeavors to show her the difficulty she faces. Gloria goes to David's country home. She meets Mulry there. He leaves for the North. She is reconciled by her one-time captor, the young Indian chief. He tells her that Royce and not Freneau was her rescuer at that time.

TWELFTH EPISODE

The young Indian chief who had found the girl Gloria, a rattler run away, lost in the Everglades, and had tried to marry her, had been the cause of her falling in love with Dick Freneau. After a few months the Indian was still only a poor Seminole selling his wares to Palm Beach visitors. But Gloria had loved and lost, and had been the unwilling object of Freneau's intrigues and the helpless witness of his murder.

Now the chief had attacked the only foundation of her trust in Freneau. The Indian had laughed at Gloria's story of the courage of Freneau and had given the credit for the battle to Doctor Royce. The young chief was in danger of unconsciously destroying the romance he had unconsciously begun. Doctor Royce had disclaimed the credit, and Gloria had been overwrought with remorse at suspecting Freneau.

Still, the suspicion rested there. It kept flitting back to mock her whenever she tried to resume her quest. What difference did it make who killed Freneau if he had been dead enough to take a young girl's gratitude and adoration and praise for bravery when he had been a poltroon?

She was worn out with alternating between upbraiding Freneau and herself for turning against him on the word of an Indian. She could not find Frank Mulry, and she did not care much whether he had gone back to New York or not.

She listened about Palm Beach and responded to none of her father's appeals or her doctor's efforts to brighten her eyes. She went back to New York at length. Of course she refused to go out. She sat while her father played solitaire. She played cards with him once or twice, but she was so absent-minded that he preferred to play alone or occasionally with Judge Freneau, a kind of relation—that is, he was the father of Gloria's brother David's wife, Lois.

One evening while the two old men were playing Doctor Royce dropped in. He found Gloria in a deeper lethargy than usual. He nudged his brains to think up something to interest her, but without success until the judge rose and said:

"I hate to quit when I am winning, but I'm overdue at the night court. I mustn't keep the criminals up late."

"That's it," muttered Royce.

"That's what?" Pierpont inquired.

"Royce, started from his reverie, apologized.

"I think Gloria needs diversion of some unusual sort. Mr. Stafford, now, while I would not call Judge Freneau's decisions a diversion, exactly, I do think that his night court would be interesting enough to compel Gloria's thoughts."

"The very thing," said Pierpont. "It will appeal to her, and possibly she will try to mother some of your black sheep, if you'll let her, Judge. Will you take us?"

"Of course, glad enough to have you," answered Freneau.

Gloria received the proposition indignantly, but consented to be taken along. When they arrived at the courthouse they entered Judge Freneau's room. He donned his judicial robe and they followed him to the bench, where chairs were placed for them on either side of him. Everybody in the courtroom rose as the judge entered and then sat down with him to the banquet of justice. Gloria sat at his left, and frequently he leaned toward her, explaining a case or answering a question.

She became at once another Gloria, vividly alive and interested in the human documents spread before her. Sometimes the row of faces seemed like her childish memories of the chamber of horrors in Mme. Tussaud's waxworks; then again the beauty and nobility of some countenance would completely bewilder her when the judge told her that it belonged to the worst confidence man in New York or to a professional beggar who would certainly refuse any offer of real work, however real the remuneration.

Gloria was constantly amazed at the judge's insight into human nature and his general fairness and discrimination.

A ferocious Irishwoman of huge proportions begged protection of the court from a much battered and meek little husband whose head bore, among other decorations, the outline of the familiar flatiron. His face was almost lost in the wilderness of bandages and adhesive plaster. His legs were a complete wreck, and he clung to the officer's arm for support. The judge motioned the policeman to take the stand. As he did so the little man tried to follow him. He was restrained and upheld by another officer, who protected him from the threatening upstart of the woman.

The policeman on the stand took the oath and tried to conceal his grin as he explained:

"Your honor, the lady had me to arrest her husband for assault and battery."

The spectators shook with laughter. Even the solemn Gloria had to smother her snickers. The judge pounded on his desk for order. The court officers silenced the spectators.

The judge motioned the woman to the stand. The policeman stepped down. The injured innocent began to talk on her way to the chair. She was interrupted to take the oath, and threatened the clerk, took the oath with indifference, and began at once to harangue the judge about the wickedness and brutality of her husband: "His crookery is something awful. I demand protection for the poor, wake woman I am."

The judge tried to quiet her. She reached out her hand imploring help. Seeing Gloria, she appealed to her. Gloria recoiled in terror. It took two policemen to get the woman from the witness stand, but it would have taken a hundred to silence her. Next the timid little husband was put on the stand. He told his story briefly, and the judge sentenced him briefly to "Thirty days on the island for rest and recuperation." He received from the little man a snail of beatific gratitude; then he turned an unmistakable glare of triumph on the wife of his bosom and marched safely past her under the shelter of the police. The wife hustled out of the court through the spectators. They opened an alley quickly in the face of her wrath.

Next on the docket was a sad-eyed and timid Hungarian waiter. As he entered from the detention cell with the officers an agent of the Gerry society came from among the spectators leading a ragged little boy, seven or eight years of age. The waiter and the boy, father and son, flew to each other's arms. Then the waiter, casting one heart-broken glance at the boy, turned to the judge and poured forth his story. His name was Casimir; his son was Stas. He was out of work, with a sick wife, living in a miserable room. An ambulance had taken his wife to a hospital and then the law had taken his child away because he was unable to give it proper care. He had fought to keep the boy and had resisted an officer.

Gloria listened tensely while tears of sympathy gathered in her eyes. To her the man's story was finished. The judge shook his head sadly. He was powerless to restore the child to his father, and he was about to sign the paper committing him to the children's society when Gloria rose from her chair and commanded a halt in the proceedings.

The court was thunderstruck as she turned to the judge, crying:

"Give me the boy! I'll take care of him, and I'll get employment for his father."

The judge was amazed, but when he saw how serious Gloria was he murmured to Pierpont: "The child will be a joy for her. Let her have him." Pierpont groaned, and the judge nodded his consent, if not his approval. The judge conferred with Gloria, and she took a card from her case and underlined her address. The judge gave it to the father and said, "Tomorrow." The father bowed and scurried to Gloria and, pushing the boy's head, made him bow, too. They went out at the gate together, so sure of protection henceforth that Gloria, the author of their contentment, sat back, proud and comfortable as a purring kitten.

She forgot her pride in the abrupt entrance of the man she had pursued in vain for weeks. It was Frank Mulry. An officer brought him forward. He had been arrested for speeding. He was indignant. Gloria crouched behind the judge's desk, so that Mulry could not see her while he explained: "I was going only eight miles an hour." The policeman laughed aloud with scorn and indicated that the speed was nearer eighty.

Gloria tugged at the judge's robe. He bent down to hear her whisper: "That's the man I've been chasing for weeks. Put him on ice till I can get at him." Judge Freneau nodded and ordered Mulry sent back to the cell.

Mulry pulled out a roll of money and looked inquiringly at the judge, but he shook his head in denial. Mulry was led away, crestfallen and disgusted. Dragged back to the detention room, he tried to bribe the policeman. This unheard-of insult was rejected and Mulry was thrown into a corner, while the policeman looked on the next candidate for Judge Freneau's consideration.

The officer called to a prisoner who had slumped on a bench with his back to the others. He did not answer. The policeman went to him and tapped him on the shoulder. The man turned suddenly in fright. He regarded some composure as the policeman smiled at him. He smiled back craftily.

Gloria and Royce were whispering and laughing together over Mulry's wrath. They did not see the new prisoner brought in. When he came to the bar the officer spoke as he handed up the complaint. The judge nodded wearily and said, "Pain drunk. First offense. Discharged."

At the sound of the judge's voice Gloria looked up. Her casual smile changed slowly to wonder, incredulity, conviction, wild excitement. She sprang to her feet, pointing at the man and trying to cry out. She toppled and swooned as Doctor Royce leaped to catch her.

The prisoner gaped in amazement and started to leave, but the policeman checked him.

Royce carried Gloria out of the room, followed by Pierpont and the judge. Royce deposited Gloria on a divan and, putting a cushion under her feet, ran to fetch a glass of water from the ice water stand. He sprinkled her face lightly. The judge and Pierpont murmured together in bewilderment. Gloria returned gradually to consciousness, looked about, still dazed and wondering. At length she saw the judge, lifted herself to her feet, and, finally gaining her voice, pointed to the door, crying, "That man—that man is the murderer! I saw him when he killed my Dick!"

She fairly assailed the judge to drive him back to the courtroom, crying "Quick! Quick! Stop him!"

The judge walked out more slowly than Gloria wished. Gloria started to follow. Pierpont restrained her. Royce tried to quiet her.

The crowd in the courtroom was still in a flurry of excitement when the court officer called for order. The tramp was greatly alarmed. He struggled with the policeman. The judge entered and paused with one foot on the step. He stared at the tramp, then back at the door, hesitated, set his jaw in stern resolution, motioned to the officer, and said, "Release him."

The policeman holding the tramp let him go. He threw a glance over his shoulder at the judge, then hurried through the gate and through the crowd and out. The judge waited a moment, pondering deeply.

An officer brought to the bar two fierce-looking desperadoes. The judge motioned them to wait and left the courtroom, pausing at the door to control himself.

When Gloria saw the judge returning she ran to him demanding, "Is he there? Is he a prisoner?"

The judge shook his head and murmured, "He had gone when I got there." Gloria flew into a fury and commanded, "Then send some one after him." The judge shrugged his shoulders, nodded, and went slowly back to the courtroom. The outside steps of the court were lighted by street lamps and the court lamps. Various people were loitering outside the courtroom or going up or down the stairs when the tramp came down, forcing his way through the crowd. He ran into a policeman standing there. The policeman gave him a shove and he hurried away.

Back in the retiring room Gloria thought hard a moment, then made up her mind, and darted for the door to the street.

Royce checked her. "Where are you going?"

Gloria answered, resolutely: "To find that man."

She tore the door open and rushed through. Royce seized his overcoat and dashed after her. Down the private stairs to the judge's room ran Gloria. Following a moment later by Royce. Reaching the street, Gloria stared up and down, wildly searching the crowd. She was frantic to see the tramp. She turned to Royce, questioning him suspiciously. "The judge let him go, why?"

Royce shrugged his shoulders and tried to dismiss the riddle.

Gloria rounded on him with sudden doubt. "And you told me it was all a delirium. Why?"

Royce was startled by her tone.

Her Casual Smile Changed to Wild Excitement.

He lowered his eyes before her, and then spoke suddenly: "It is too cold for you. I'll get your furs."

He tried to lead her inside. She refused. There seemed nothing for him to do but leave her there and go for her wraps.

She stared at the crowd, then on sudden impulse ran down the steps to a policeman standing on the walk. Trustingly she tapped him on the arm. "The man who just went by so hurriedly—he was poorly dressed, had a sly look and a beard, did you see which way he went?" she asked.

The policeman pointed to the right and Gloria started immediately to run that way. The streets were ill lit and poor, but she hurried on with hardly a glance at her surroundings. To lose the real murderer now was unthinkable to her; to have had him there in the very arms of the law, the man whom she had seen actually do her lover to death, only to have him escape again, drove her into a frenzy. She ran on, peering into dark doorways and alleys. Judge Freneau, whom she had watched all evening note out punishment to far lessening crimes, had actually made no effort to catch this demon for her. What was the mystery of it all? Why were they all in league to thwart her and to refuse vengeance on Dick's slayer?

Her brain was whirling, her searching eyes ached and burned as they peered vainly ahead for the dread figure of the tramp. So absorbed was Gloria in her pursuit that she gave no thought to the dangers she was exposing herself to, and the dangers were many. It was a bad district, a very hotbed of crime and poverty. The hour was midnight and she was alone—a young and beautiful woman carrying money and jewels, as well as her own priceless girlhood, but the impetus of her search carried her on without a thought for her own safety.

Doctor Royce and her father had returned with her wraps to the courthouse steps only to find her gone, and wild with anxiety, they started recklessly in pursuit, each taking a different direction. By misfortune neither of them was right.

Meanwhile Gloria hastened on. She actually caught a glimpse of the tramp ahead of her; he was loitering in a doorway gnawing a crust of bread hungrily, and she redoubled her speed, but he started on and turned the corner of a street while she was in the middle of a block and when she got there he was nowhere in sight.

Suddenly she realized she was tired and weak, that she could actually go no farther, and that she must rest. As she slackened her pace she was alarmed at seeing a rough-looking man cross the street toward her; he reeled as he came on, so that she was further aroused to danger at thinking him under the influence of liquor. She did not know that this was one of the numerous dodges of the pickpocket and that she would have been safer with an actually intoxicated man. She looked up and down the street as far as she could see, but there were no policemen in sight, and, hearing steps camped throughout the country a cake of chocolate is the usual accompaniment of a hike—and it is the sugar as well as the chocolate that is useful.

For sugar gives quick results in energy. If you are very tired, and nibble a bit of sweet or milk chocolate, or eat a couple of lumps of sugar, or eat any sweet candy, you will feel within a very few moments noticeably refreshed. And the tired shopper who has not time to stop for luncheon could gain strength for the rest of her work if she would eat a cake of chocolate or some sweet candy and sit still for ten minutes.

Undenably True.

Among a squad of policemen who were being examined on their knowledge of ambulance work was a certain Irishman with whom the doctor had the following colloquy:

Doctor—What would you do to a man who had a cat on the forearm?

Policeman—Sure, sorr, I'd bathe it with warm, soft water.

Doctor—What do you mean by soft water?

Policeman—Och! Just soft water, sorr; wet water.

Doctor—And what is hard water?

Policeman—Ice, sorr.—Teeth's Oar, pards.

IS GREAT FOE OF FATIGUE

Excellent Properties of Sugar Should Be More Generally Recognized—Add to Consumer's Energy.

If we all understand the proper duty and function of sugar, we should probably be a healthier nation. The trouble with sugar is that most of us eat it in such a way and at such a time that it spoils our appetite for more substantial food.

But sugar, in spite of all the harm that it does when eaten in excess, should be recognized as one of the greatest helps in counteracting fatigue. Sweet and milk chocolate are supplied liberally to the soldiers—as much for the sugar as for the chocolate. And various sorts of sugar candy are given to them. And some women, desirous to help the soldiers to the best of their ability, heard of this demand for sweets and turned their attention from knitting needles and worsteds to candy kettles and sugar, and turned out home-made fudge for the pound for the soldiers.

All of us who have heard a certain lecturer on mountain climbing talk know how often she pauses to say that at just that point she stopped to nibble a cake of a famous brand of milk chocolate. At the boys' and girls' behind her, she turned to seek protection, only to find three men more evil looking than the oncoming drunkard.

Suddenly the whole world of Gloria Stafford seemed to crumble before her eyes. Her dreams of vengeance, her hopes of ferreting out the murderer, indeed the murder itself became unreal as the immediate danger to her own person was felt. She longed to scream for help, but pluckily stayed quiet and, backing into the steps of a tenement suddenly, threw the following men into surprise for an instant.

The thing who was crossing toward her, however, came on without pause and, inching against the iron railing to which she clung, snatched the gold bag she carried and fled with sure and steady steps, the other three following slowly in the apparent oblivion of the theft.

With a sigh Gloria sank to a sitting posture on the steps behind her. The loss of a gold mesh bag with its contents meant nothing to Gloria Staff-ford. The sudden plunge into a whole new world—a world of malice and crime; a world where murderers went free and bandits gained their aims unchallenged—appalled her. Breathing in little frightened gasps, she leaned against the friendly railing and tried to reassemble her scattered views of life.

Died of Premature Old Age!

(BY V. M. PIERCE, M. D.)

How many times we hear of comparatively young persons passing away when they should have lived to be 70 or 80 years of age. This fatal work is usually attributed to the kidneys, as, when the kidneys degenerate, it causes auto-intoxication. The more injurious the poisons passing through the kidneys, the quicker will those noble organs be degenerated, and the sooner they decay.

To prevent premature old age and promote long life, lighten the work of the kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water all day long, and occasionally taking Anuric (double strength) before meals. This can be obtained at drug stores. Anuric will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to constant arising.

What Well Dressed

Women Will Wear

Well Garbed to Meet Easter.

Every tailored suit must stand the acid test of the most discriminating of all public when it comes to the matter of suits. Long ago American won pre-eminence in this regard and not even Paris disputes it. Here is pictured one of the new spring models, in which any woman will delight to meet Easter. Even a brief glance at it reveals special features in its construction that will appeal to women with a fine sense of clothes.

To begin with, it is made of wool poplin in tau (which it is fashionable to call sand color), and it bespeaks the springtime. It is trimmed with attached buttons and they can't be expected for imparting a finished smartness.

The jacket is plain and beautifully shaped at the front. At the back, plait extending from the waistline to hem acknowledge the sway of this feature in spring styles.

The skirt has plaits at each side about the waist. The strap trimming appears in the hips, and it is as effective here as on the coat. The length as shown in the picture is correct, bringing the edge of the hem an inch or so below the shoe tops.

A detachable collar and vestee of white pique is to be worn with this suit, or this dainty addition may be made of organdie or crepe. By this means the touch of immaculate freshness is always possible, and nothing is more dear to the heart of women.

Triumphs in Tailored Hats.

After all is said and done, the smart tailored hat holds the center of the stage in the drama of millinery. Just as the best tailored suits are paramount in the world of apparel, these are the two items that should receive first consideration in every woman's mind whenever she turns her attention to her wardrobe. It is better to economize in dressy clothes than in those intended for street wear, and in the latter, style and good workmanship are essentials, which women should be willing to pay for.

Whether we like it or not, we must reconcile ourselves to some advance in prices for both tailored suits and hats. It is impossible to produce them as cheaply as in former years, yet millinery has advanced less in price than almost any other article that women wear.

Three handsome tailored hats are shown above. The model at the left is of black straw braid with bell crown and narrow mushroom brim. It has a strictly tailored trim of white gros-grain ribbon and is a hat that is becoming to almost every face. The hat at the center of the group is an adaptation of the "coco" hat from China, and is intended for youthful wearers. On a black straw or satin turban the coiled ribbons are posed at a jaunty angle. The finish is as it should be, a handsome tassel.

Narrow Toes for Shoes.

Those who make women's shoes prophesy even a narrower toe for the spring than we have worn heretofore. It was thought by the women that ugliness in this line had gone far enough. Those who wore No. 4 now have to wear No. 6, on account of the sharply pointed toe. It may be that we will revive the medieval shoe along with the medieval clothes, if fashion claim goes much further.

Among simpler evening coats the old-time Arab burnouse is new.

For sporting wear the newest combination is a velvet jacket and skirt of tweed.

There is a new sleeve that hangs straight and is very wide at the bottom.

Butter Cookies—Stir and beat a cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, one whole egg and the yolks of two, flavor with almond and add two cupfuls of flour, sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Cool for an hour, then cut out with a small cookie cutter, brush with the white of an egg and sprinkle with granulated sugar.

Apple Fritters—Make a batter of one and a third cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, sifted together, and mixed with two-thirds of a cup of milk and an egg. Cut two sour apples into bits and stir into this batter. Drop by spoonfuls into hot fat and brown. Roll in powdered sugar and serve with roast pork or chops.

Caramel Sponge—Soften a fourth of a package of gelatin in a fourth of a cupful of water. Brown a half cupful of sugar, then add a cupful of boiling water; stir until dissolved; add the gelatin and stir over ice water until the mixture thickens. Have ready two egg whites, beaten stiff; add them to the gelatin mixture, continue beating until it will hold its shape when turned into a mold. Serve with a cupful and a half of rich milk. Flavor with vanilla if desired.

Apricots and prunes stewed together make a very nice combination; use a little more sugar than with prunes alone, having equal amounts of prunes and apricots. By adding spices a nice conserve to serve with meats may be made.

Don't you ever stop to realize that no one is wholly indispensable in this world. Sooner can we take our place if we drop out. Why not accept all that is offered to us and get the most out of life we can?

GOOD COMPANY DISHES.

With eggs and butter so high we need to use both of these precious foods with care, hence cakes with large amounts of eggs or butter are quite too costly for everyday use.

Imperial Pound Cake.—To a half pound of softened, not melted, butter add a half pound of sugar; when well blended add the grated rind and juice of a lemon, a half cupful of citron, finely shredded, and a half pound of raisins, dredging the fruit with part of the flour. Sift a half pound of flour with a fourth of a teaspoonful of soda; the yolks of five eggs are added to the sugar and butter, the whites beaten stiff and added alternately with the flour. Add a half cupful of nut meats and bake in a tube pan an hour and a half in a moderate oven.

Orange Sauce to Serve With Roast Lamb.—Use a half cupful of gravy from the roast; make a brown sauce, using three-fourths of a cupful of water, adding the gravy, two tablespoonfuls of flour, the juice of two oranges and the finely shredded peeling of an orange which has been boiled in hot water five minutes then drained; season with salt, cayenne and the juice of a lemon.

Apple Fritters—Make a batter of one and a third cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, sifted together, and mixed with two-thirds of a cup of milk and an egg. Cut two sour apples into bits and stir into this batter. Drop by spoonfuls into hot fat and brown. Roll in powdered sugar and serve with roast pork or chops.

Caramel Sponge—Soften a fourth of a package of gelatin in a fourth of a cupful of water. Brown a half cupful of sugar, then add a cupful of boiling water; stir until dissolved; add the gelatin and stir over ice water until the mixture thickens. Have ready two egg whites, beaten stiff; add them to the gelatin mixture, continue beating until it will hold its shape when turned into a mold. Serve with a cupful and a half of rich milk. Flavor with vanilla if desired.

Apricots and prunes stewed together make a very nice combination; use a little more sugar than with prunes alone, having equal amounts of prunes and apricots. By adding spices a nice conserve to serve with meats may be made.

Just whistle a bit if the day is dark. And the sky be overcast; If mute be the voice of the piping lark. Why, pipe your own small blast.

DAINTIES FOR THE TEA TABLE

A sandwich or two with a small cake or conky with a cupful of tea is sufficiently sustaining for a light refreshment.

German Cookies.—Stir until foamy one and a third cupfuls of powdered sugar and three eggs, add a few drops of vanilla and two cupfuls of flour. Grease the tin, sprinkle with flour, then drop in teaspoonfuls in round heaps far enough apart so they do not touch and bake in a moderate oven.

Bund Kuchen.—Beat a half cupful of softened butter, with one-half cupful of sugar, four eggs, the grated rind of a lemon, one-half pound of raisins, one teaspoonful of salt; add a yeast cake, softened in a little warm water; one pint of lukewarm milk and three and three-quarters cupful of sifted flour. Work the dough with a wooden spoon, butter the pan well and sprinkle with flour, pour in the dough and let it rise for three hours in a warm place, then bake in a hot oven. Cover with paper if it browns too quickly.

Schwarzbrot Tort.—Cut in thin slices rye bread well dried, or dry it the oven, then grate fine. Pour over a cupful of the crumbs, a tablespoonful of vanilla and a half cupful of grape juice. Add two cupfuls of finely chopped almonds, four ounces of citron; the rind of a lemon, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one saltspoonful of cloves, and a tablespoonful of flour. Now stir one and a third cupfuls of powdered sugar and the yolk of a dozen eggs until foamy, using four yolks to begin with and adding four by one, stirring well after each addition. Mix lightly, then add the stiffly beaten whites. Crumble the baking pan, sprinkle with crumbs and put in the cake mixture. Bake forty-five minutes. If it browns too rapidly cover with paper.

Butter Cookies.—Stir and beat a cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, one whole egg and the yolks of two, flavor with almond and add two cupfuls of flour, sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Cool for an hour, then cut out with a small cookie cutter, brush with the white of an egg and sprinkle with granulated sugar.

Just whistle a bit if the day is dark. And the sky be overcast; If mute be the voice of the piping lark. Why, pipe your own small blast.

THE 3 D'S IN DODD'S

Mr. Robert W. Ferguson, Birmingham, Mass., writes: I suffered from kidney disorder for years. Had incessant backache and trouble. Nearly died from it at one time while in Vancouver, but overcame it by a persistent use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Finally I was completely cured. I occasionally use the remedy now in order to keep the kidneys regulated. I have the highest praise for Dodd's. Be sure to get "DODD'S," the name with the three D's for Dr. J. C. Dodd, Jr., of Boston, Mass. No similar named article will do.—Adv.
