Township Meeting.

At the township meeting Monday afternoon the clerk read the financial statement as printed in last week's issue of the Standard.

The township board recommended that $1,500 be raised in the contingent fund, $2,000 in the highway improvement fund, $1,500 in the road repair fund, and $400 in the poor fund, which was adopted.

A motion was made to raise $400 to be used in graveling the road west from the Old People's Home to the west Guthrie crossing. Carried.

A motion to raise $1,000 as a gravel fund was carried.

After considerable discussion it was decided to raise $1,000 to be used in repairing and graveling the territorial road west from Sylvan Center to the township line.

Two hundred dollars were voted to finish the graveling of West Middle street.

It was decided that in cases where the work on any piece of road would amount to $50 or more, the job be let to the lowest bidder.

WARRANTS ISSUED FOR FOUR A. A. BARTENDERS

Chelsea Youth of 14 Years Claims They Sold Him Liquor on March 17.

Ann Arbor Times News: Warrants for four bartenders, employed in Ann Arbor saloons were issued Friday at the order of Prosecuting Attorney Carl A. Lehman. Anderson Cleveland, a 14-year old Chelsea boy, signed the complaint.

The warrants are for William Chatterton of the American House bar; George Parker of the Alliance; Fred Wagner of the Farmer's Home and Pearl Teeple of the saloon operated by Richard Reitz, on South Fourth avenue. The alleged offenders were to be arraigned late Friday afternoon.

The action follows an investigation of charges brought by young Cleveland and Leo Madden, both of Chelsea. Madden gave his age as 16 and Cleveland as 16, but the latter's mother in court said he was but 14.

Cleveland and Madden, arrested Saturday, March 17, for being drunk, informed Justice of the Peace Thomas they had bought liquor in local saloons and named the places where they had been served.

Prosecutor Lehman instructed Chief Deputy William Esslinger to investigate the charge, which resulted in the signing of the warrants.

Deputy Esslinger declares that calling of seven more youths to the witness stand when the four bartenders are examined, will bring forth other developments.

Mrs. Cleveland, mother of the boy who claims buying liquor in local saloons, came with her son from Chelsea Friday morning, and demanded the prosecution of the saloonmen, and on complaint of the boy and order of the prosecutor the warrants were drawn.

It was intimated that with the testimony of the other youths, who are said to have "made the rounds" with Cleveland and Madden, additional arrests will probably be made.

All seven of the boys who were in the "gang" that Saturday night have been quizzed by the prosecutor and Deputy Esslinger, and the arrest of at least three more barkeepers is promised.

Cleveland said Friday he had bought beer in all four places mentioned, and in none of the places was he asked his age. The testimony of Madden the day after his arrest concurred.

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, winters at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious and witty young lady. Her childish caprice causes young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Lost in the ever-changing sea of life, she is captivated by the handsome, idealistic, and somewhat mysterious Dr. Royce. Gloria falls in love with her. Five years later she leaves school and meets Pierpont at the theatre. He has forgotten Gloria. Later Pierpont persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's father-in-law, Louis, becomes intensely jealous. Pierpont goes sailing with Gloria. It results in pneumonia for Gloria. Doctor Royce is summoned. Pierpont's finances being low, he approaches Pierpont Stafford. Louis threatens him with dire punishment. Her husband, Gloria's brother David, becomes suspicious. Pierpont plans to have Gloria send Gloria a bunch of telegrams. Gloria sees from her window an attack made upon Pierpont. Doctor Royce convinces her it is delirium. Later, a telegram, followed by a letter, comes from Pierpont. She replies, but her telegrams are returned. She sees the supposed suicide of Pierpont reported in the paper. Gloria swears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce tells what he knows of Pierpont to Mr. Stafford. Together they seek to prevent Pierpont from enveloping Gloria. She accuses them in her mind of conspiracy against her. Gloria goes to David's country home. She meets Muriel, who lives at once. Gloria insists on going to Palm Beach. Again she sees Muriel there. He leaves for the North. She is recognized by her one-time captor, the young Indian chief. He tells her that Royce and Pierpont were her rescuers. Gloria attends night court. She sees Muriel there, also the tramp who attacked Pierpont. But Judge Freeman releases him. She follows the tramp when he leaves the court, and falls into the hands of holding men. She finds herself in a low saloon dance hall, and is selected by one of the patrons as his partner. Doctor Royce, however, follows her and when he attempts a rescue she is down a riot on her head. The hall is raided and the crowd, including Gloria and Royce, is arrested and taken before Judge Freeman.

FOURTEENTH EPISODE

The Floating Trap

"Thank heaven, nobody knows of our escapade!" Pierpont Stafford was just saying to his daughter Gloria. She had declined to be frightened by his scowl and had almost won him to a smile across his breakfast coffee cup when his eyes fell on the headlines of the morning paper. He nearly went over backward. The butler, who was stealing a glimpse of the headlines over his master's shoulder, nearly went over forward.

POLICE NET GLORIA STAFFORD.

Millionaire's Beautiful Daughter, a Recent Delinquent, Caught in Raid on East Side Dance Hall.

Dr. Stephen Royce Battered in Brawl.

Gloria was stupefied. She sat in a daze while her father went through the other papers. Equally fatal headlines or worse were in all of them. He pushed them before her. She pushed them to the floor. Then brother David came in, his hat and overcoat still on. He carried a bundle of papers, too. He was furious. Gloria mockingly waived him and his papers away.

Pierpont glowered at her. David sat down and glowered at her.

The miserable silence was invaded by the second man who appeared and reported:

"If you please, sir, there's an army of reporters at the door."

Gloria threw up her hands in surrender. David sprang to his feet. Pierpont pushed him back and stalked out in a towering fury. He ordered the newspaper raiders off. They bunched him with questions. He had to take refuge in the house. He returned to the dining room livid with wrath. He ordered the servants out. He thundered at Gloria.

"Now you see what would have happened if you had told the police about your delirium!"

He stormed on, Gloria trying vainly to break in. At last he was exhausted and she spoke:

"But, daddy, it was no delirium."

The Butler Gives Stas a Bath.

I saw poor Dick murdered. Last night proved it. For I saw the man who killed him. Why did the judge let him go. Why don't you want him captured?"

Pierpont stared at her, then took her to the window and pointed to the crowd of reporters. He shook the newspapers under her eyes, saying:

"My one and only reason for silence is this publicity! It is horrible!"

To one of Gloria's training and position, the reporters were almost more precious than the police.

Suddenly she started and pointed out of the window at two forlorn, ragged figures strolling up the drive as if they had wandered from the slums and were lost. They were the waiter, Casimir, and his little boy, Stas, whom Gloria had befriended at the night court. She had forgotten them and now they arrived at the most inopportune moment. Casimir had Gloria's card in his hand. He saw the reporters and grew uneasy. He pushed through and rang the doorbell. Gloria insisted on their admission and greeted them warmly.

Pierpont stared at the shabby waiter in disgust. He looked at his watch. He started to go. Gloria grabbed him. She told him that she had promised the waiter a job. Pierpont said he had no job for waiters. Then he ordered Gloria to lunch with him at the Bankers' Club.

"The very idea," she exclaimed. "Get Casimir a job there."

"In those clothes?" Pierpont exclaimed.

"Buy him a new outfit," was Gloria's solution.

Pierpont was enraged, but she had her way as usual, and he motioned the waiter to come with him. Casimir kissed Gloria's hand. The boy tried to follow him and cling to him in terror. Gloria knelt down and called the boy. Stas ran to her and let Casimir go with Pierpont.

The boy Stas looked about the room as if he were in heaven and Gloria's winged angel that flew there with him. He threw his arms around her again and let her back to earth. The butler in horror took the boy's dirty hand from Gloria's shoulder and tried to cleanse it on a napkin. It blackened the napkin, but the hand was not visibly bleached.

Gloria laughed, put the boy in a chair at the table, and called for finger bowls. The butler brought two. Gloria called for soup and a towel. "This was appalling. The butler almost mutilated. Then she washed the child's hands with soap in the finger bowls. They turned out to be surprisingly white."

She drew a wet towel down his cheek and it left a white canal. She laughed again, but more soberly. She pondered a minute, then made up her mind and motioned to the butler:

"Griggs, what he needs is a bath. You may give him one."

Old Griggs muttered and shook his head. Gloria gave him one of the looks she ruled her father with. "Run along now, while I telephone for a complete troupeau for him."

Griggs groaned. Stas did not want to leave Gloria, but she kissed him, carefully selecting the clean streak on his face, and assured him that Griggs was a nice man. She watched while Griggs led the boy by one clean finger to the servants' wing and one of its built-in tubs. Then she ran into her own room, only to learn that it would take three weeks to make the boy's clothes. He could not possibly wait! She banged the receiver on the hook and ran through the telephone book till she found the number of a large men's furnishing establishment. A dainty gentleman answered the telephone.

"Send me several of everything a boy has to have," Gloria demanded. When the clerk ventured to ask what his measurements were Gloria answered, "Measurements? How do I know? Do you have to have them?"

When he said that he did, Gloria called for her maid, a pencil, a tape measure, a piece of paper, and ran to the servants' quarters. She was about to enter one of the doors when she caught a glimpse that made her retreat.

Old Griggs, with coat off, sleeves rolled up, and a towel for apron, was just lowering the boy into the steaming water. He dropped the boy with a splash and, whirling, flung himself against the door. He spoke through it in a shocked manner, motioning the boy to hide in the suite. Gloria explained, Griggs opened the door a little and clutched the tape measure. He took the boy's dimensions and called them out to Gloria, who repeated them to her secretary-maid. Griggs had to thrust his arms into the water two or three times to reach the boy's knees and heels. He was most gloriously unhappy.

Gloria ran back to the telephone and resumed negotiations with the clerk. When he had transcribed the numbers, he promised to deliver the goods in a jiffy. A jiffy is a long time to a boy just out of a tub, and when Griggs explained to Gloria that Stas' entire wardrobe consisted of one Turkish towel and two safety pins, she had more thinking to do. She solved the problem by sending her maid to fetch a pair of her silk pajamas.

By and by there was a knock at the door, and Griggs carried in Master Stas. The pajamas were worlds too big for him, but he was almost unrecognizably improved—white and pink with curls of gold and the eyes of a cherub. The laundries do not always send things back better than they went, but Stas had gone out a grimy pauper and he came back a prince. Gloria embraced him, called to the maid for a pair of her satin slippers for his bare feet, and took him in her lap and combed his curls. He was her new doll, and she spent a little into those curls to think that she would never have a child of her own.

She remembered her own childhood and the nursery where she and her brother had been indulged in every toy that money could buy or ingenuity invent.

She hastened up to the great room which she had not visited for years. Poor Stas had never had any nursery besides the streets or any toy except some pitiful makeshift. He did not really know how to play. Gloria had

"It's nothing. Just a little tickling in the throat, eh?"

"I guess so," Stas confessed. "I am tickled all over."

He gave the boy a lozenge for medicine and turned to Gloria. She asked him again why he had tried to deceive her about the delirium.

"Why don't you tell me the truth now? What is Lois to you?"

Royce protested that Lois was nothing to him and that a doctor has his secrets—like a priest, Gloria was furious. She gathered up the child and was about to storm out, but she paused, meditated, whirled, and went to him impulsively.

"Forgive me. You saved my life twice. You fought for me then, why against me now?"

He answered sadly, "I am not fighting against you, Gloria. Some day you will know it, but not now."

Gloria went out sadly and Royce indulged in a little delirium of his own, cursing his luck in managing always to have his devotion misunderstood. He was glad that Lois repented her liaison with Pierpont, but he wished that she had chosen some other person for father, confessor or some other time to sail.

In the majestic blue dining room of the Bankers' Club, Gloria found Casimir already installed. Pierpont's influence had secured the engagement for him and money had provided the neat costume that changed Casimir almost as much as Stas had been changed. The captain waiter placed a cushion on a chair for Stas and motioned Casimir to lift him into it. Casimir had not yet recognized his own boy, disguised as he was with a bath and rich men's clothes. But Stas recognized his father and hugged him with vigor to the amazement of Aunt Hortensia, who had been invited to the luncheon so that she and Pierpont might agree on some new interest for Gloria. They agreed to postpone the task till after luncheon. By that time Gloria had flown.

As the luncheon neared its last course Casimir was beckoned out by an anxious-looking waiter. When he returned he was evidently suffering a great emotional strain. He made blunders and was so excited that when Pierpont rebuked him Gloria took pity on him and asked him what the trouble was. The captain was agitated. For a waiter to have personal troubles during a meal was as bad as for a soldier to stop a battle to write a letter home. But Gloria was "she who must be obeyed."

Casimir told her that he had just received word that his wife had been sent back from the hospital. He broke down and clung to the weeping Stas. Gloria could not understand. She said, "But I should think you would be glad to hear your wife sent back."

"No, no," Casimir sobbed. "Poor people who are going to die are sent away from the hospital so they will not die there."

Gloria was furious. She proposed to investigate the hospital and turn out the scoundrels in charge. Meanwhile she insisted on going to Casimir's home and taking Casimir with her. She paused only to telephone Doctor Royce to meet her there. He was difficult to understand as a man, but as a doctor he was ideal. So Gloria dashed away with Casimir and Stas, while Hortensia and Pierpont held up their hands in despair of her.

When Gloria's chauffeur and footman heard the address she gave them they thought they had misunderstood. She repeated it in most positive tones. They raised their eyebrows in a way that indicated, "What next?"

Coincidences do happen now and then in real life—not quite so often or so gracefully as in fiction, and yet none in a while. In fact, coincidences make life what it is. And so it happened that the murderer of Dick Freeman whom Gloria had followed from the night court had found a hiding place in the same block where Casimir lived.

Gloria recognized the region as soon as her limousine turned into it. She recognized the sabbath and dance hall where she had found and lost her man. But she did not recognize the murderer's daughter in the crowd that gathered about the unusual limousine when it drew up along the garbage cans.

Nell Trask was looking for her father, and she paused to see the fine lady descending from the palace car. In Nell's arms was the child of Richard Freeman, a beautiful creature like its father. Gloria, hurrying through the crowd, could not help pausing to admire the baby and to tweak the little finger it held up. There for a moment the two women paused with Dick Freeman's child between them; and neither dreamed that the other had ever heard of him. Gloria passed on into the tenement and Nell went to seek her father.

The boy began to cough, to turn red and purple in the face, and to shake with paroxysms.

"O, dear! O, dear!" Gloria moaned; "he's had a bath, and it's given him pneumonia. The doctor! Quick, I must get him to the doctor!"

Dr. Stephen Royce was trying to practice the proverb, "Physician, heal thyself." He was dressing the wounds of battle he had received the night before in Gloria's defense. He was plastering his fist and approving it for its good work when a caller was announced. It was Lois Stafford. She had repented of her affair with the dead Freeman and was trying to live it down. Idleness was both temptation and distress. She wanted to know if there was not some work she could do. Royce told her that there were always poor people in plenty and lonely sick, but whom he treated with none the less care.

As she was leaving she met Gloria coming in with the boy. Royce was disgusted because Gloria looked angry. He should have been delighted at the hint of possible jealousy. Gloria coldly informed him of the boy's bath and its terrible consequences. She made the boy cough for the doctor. Royce did not seem to be as much impressed as Gloria had been. He set the boy to laughing and got him to put out his tongue by making faces at him which the boy mocked. Then he said:

"It's nothing. Just a little tickling in the throat, eh?"

"I guess so," Stas confessed. "I am tickled all over."

He gave the boy a lozenge for medicine and turned to Gloria. She asked him again why he had tried to deceive her about the delirium.

"Why don't you tell me the truth now? What is Lois to you?"

But Stas

recognized his father and hugged him with vigor to the amazement of Aunt Hortensia, who had been invited to the luncheon so that she and Pierpont might agree on some new interest for Gloria. They agreed to postpone the task till after luncheon. By that time Gloria had flown.

As the luncheon neared its last course Casimir was beckoned out by an anxious-looking waiter. When he returned he was evidently suffering a great emotional strain. He made blunders and was so excited that when Pierpont rebuked him Gloria took pity on him and asked him what the trouble was. The captain was agitated. For a waiter to have personal troubles during a meal was as bad as for a soldier to stop a battle to write a letter home. But Gloria was "she who must be obeyed."

Casimir told her that he had just received word that his wife had been sent back from the hospital. He broke down and clung to the weeping Stas. Gloria could not understand. She said, "But I should think you would be glad to hear your wife sent back."

"No, no," Casimir sobbed. "Poor people who are going to die are sent away from the hospital so they will not die there."

Gloria was furious. She proposed to investigate the hospital and turn out the scoundrels in charge. Meanwhile she insisted on going to Casimir's home and taking Casimir with her. She paused only to telephone Doctor Royce to meet her there. He was difficult to understand as a man, but as a doctor he was ideal. So Gloria dashed away with Casimir and Stas, while Hortensia and Pierpont held up their hands in despair of her.

When Gloria's chauffeur and footman heard the address she gave them they thought they had misunderstood. She repeated it in most positive tones. They raised their eyebrows in a way that indicated, "What next?"

Coincidences do happen now and then in real life—not quite so often or so gracefully as in fiction, and yet none in a while. In fact, coincidences make life what it is. And so it happened that the murderer of Dick Freeman whom Gloria had followed from the night court had found a hiding place in the same block where Casimir lived.

Gloria recognized the region as soon as her limousine turned into it. She recognized the sabbath and dance hall where she had found and lost her man. But she did not recognize the murderer's daughter in the crowd that gathered about the unusual limousine when it drew up along the garbage cans.

Nell Trask was looking for her father, and she paused to see the fine lady descending from the palace car. In Nell's arms was the child of Richard Freeman, a beautiful creature like its father. Gloria, hurrying through the crowd, could not help pausing to admire the baby and to tweak the little finger it held up. There for a moment the two women paused with Dick Freeman's child between them; and neither dreamed that the other had ever heard of him. Gloria passed on into the tenement and Nell went to seek her father.

ming as she stepped into the limousine and told the footman, "The office!"

The car started and was checked almost at once by a tangle of trucks.

Gloria, looking about impatiently, caught sight of Nell Trask and her father just leaving the opposite tenement. She recognized the old man. She was dumfounded. As she gazed, they were lost in the crowd. She saw that the car could not be turned around. Every moment was precious. Impulse told her not to lose this precious chance. She obeyed impulse.

Without pausing to inform the chauffeur, Gloria opened the door, dropped out, and ran after the Trasks. She picked them up again after a while. She saw a policeman. She resolved to order him to arrest the criminal. As she hesitated, she saw Trask stop and tenderly relieve the weary Nell of her baby's weight. He fondled and nursed the child and laughed with a grandfatherly foolishness. Gloria turned away from the policeman.

She followed at a little distance, wondering what to do. The best thing would be, she felt, to find out where he lived. She followed for blocks. The Trasks climbed the stairs of the elevated. Gloria went up after them. She took the next car on the same train. It seemed that they would ride on forever. Far uptown they got out. Gloria got out. She trailed them at a greater distance now because the streets were sparsely populated. The street sloped sharply down to the river. Moored to the wharves were a number of huge, cumbersome barges. To one of these the Trasks clambered. They went down into it through a cabin door.

Gloria was in a plight. She had traced her fugitive to his home. But his home was about to move. A tough-looking tugboat with a tough-looking crew was already fastening a towline to the barge. There was no policeman to sight anywhere. The men loitering about the barges did not appear to Gloria as desirable Samaritans to ask for help.

Another of Gloria's impulses stirred her feet almost against her will. She ran along the wharf, crossed a plank to the Trask barge, and went to the cabin hatchway. She heard voices of anger coming up. The girl was upbraiding her father for deserting her and accusing him of a further crime. She was crying hysterically.

"You killed him. He is dead and you killed him."

The old man denied the charge with frenzy. He laughed at it, swore that he was innocent. The girl was already persuaded and this so enraged Gloria that she darted down the steps and cried out at Trask:

"You did kill him. I saw you."

PAINS SHARP AND STABBING

Woman Thought She Would Die. Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ogdensburg, Wis.—"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. ERRA DORRIS, Ogdensburg, Wis. Physicians undoubtedly did their best, but with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

To Prevent Old Age Coming Too Soon!

"Toxic poisons in the blood are thrown out by the kidneys. The kidneys act as filters for such products. If we wish to prevent old age coming too soon and increase our chances for a long life, we should drink plenty of pure water and take a little Anuric," says the world-famed Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y.

When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains
here or there, or that constant tired,
worn-out feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain a little Anuric (double strength)
from your nearest druggist and you will quickly notice the grand results. You will find it many times more potent
than lithia, and that it dissolves uric
acid as hot water does sugar.

and allow the time of the farm laborer, who has filed on the land, to apply as residence duties, the same as if he actually had lived on it.
This special concession is the reduction of one year in the time to complete duties. Two years' residence instead of three as heretofore,

This appeal for farm help is in no way connected with enlistment

and Bay City.

Amendments Carry.

The amendments authorizing state purchase of the D. G. H. & M. bonding by rural drain districts, amending the highway acts to secure federal appropriations, and extending the scope of the absent voters law to railroad

NEW COURT BILL PASSES

Abolishes and Takes Place of All Courts Below Circuit Court.

Lansing—The senate passed the Murtha bill, establishing municipal courts with control over all classes of cases arising within cities of over 40, 000 population. The bill was amended so that cities may, through their common councils, decide upon the number of municipal judges, but shall not create more than four for the first 40,000 of population.

The new court abolishes and takes
the place of all courts below the circuit court, such as the police and civil justices. It takes unto itself jurisdiction over all cases of domestic relations, ordinance cases, misdemeanors,
injunctions, civil cases and bastardy
cases which are now handled by the recorder's court and the circuit court
in hancery.

Senator Murtha stated that the bill would save the state several hundred thousand dollars annually. It was drafted by Attorney General Groesbeck. Senators Bolen, Battle Creek, and Willison, Kalamazoo, opposed the measure. The bill applies to Detroit, Grand Rapids, Bay City, and Saginaw
now. It will likely apply to Lansing, Flint, Battle Creek, Jackson, Kalamazoo
and Highland Park when the 1920
census is taken.

The Reo Motor Mfg. Co., Lansing, gave 42 employees, who served with the Lansing battery on the Mexican border, more than one-half their salary
for the eight months the soldiers were absent, on their return to work
Wednesday. Some of the men averaged more than $100 in back pay.

Thirty thousand alumni throughout the United States will be called upon by the University of Michigan within the next few weeks to furnish data regarding their capacity for service in time of war. Resolutions to this effect were adopted by a combined assembly of the university deans and student councilmen. The resources of the university are to be catalogued
and placed at the disposal of the government.

RE-ELECT CLARK SPEAKER OF HOUSE

MISSOURI MAN NOMINATED BY AN INDEPENDENT REPUBLICAN
MEMBER—TAKES 50 MINUTES.

DEFEATED MANN OF ILLINOIS

Vote Stood Clark, 217; Mann, 205;
Lenroot, 2; Gillette, 2, and Two Recorded as Present But Not Voting.

Washington—Champ Clark of Missouri was elected speaker of the house of representatives of the Sixty-fifth session in a session of the house
that was marked with sensation almost from the outset. The speaker defeated James R. Mann, of Illinois.

CHAMP CLARK

Mr. Clark received 217 votes against 205 for Representative Mann, the Republican choice for speaker, who not only failed to receive an independent vote but lost support of five of his party colleagues. Four hundred and twenty-nine members were present.

All Democrats voted for Mr. Clark and were joined by Representatives Scholl, Progressive, Minnesota; Martin, Progressive, Louisiana; Loudon, Socialist, New York, and Randall, Prohibitionist, California.

Mann Loses Republicans.

The five Republicans who did not support Mr. Mann were Representatives Gardner, Massachusetts, who voted for Representative Lenroot, of Wisconsin; Gray, New Jersey and Dallinger, of Massachusetts, who voted for Representative Gillette, of Massachusetts, and Haskell, New York and James, Michigan, who voted "present." Representative Fuller, Independent, Massachusetts, voted for Representative Lenroot.

To the surprise of Republicans, Representative Scholl placed Mr. Clark in nomination. For a time it was thought that he had done so by inadvertence,
but later it developed he had acted
through pre-arrangement with Democratic leaders.

He asked permission to address the house just after the first roll call and then after declaring the international situation demanded united support of President Wilson, aroused tremendous cheering by announcing that although with his sightless eyes he could be of no use on the battlefield he could at least support the president by casting
a vote for Champ Clark.

Representative Green, of Massachusetts, presented Mr. Mann's name and Representative Lenroot, of Wisconsin, the Progressive-Republican leader, seconded it. There were no other nominations and in just an hour and forty minutes after the house was convened Mr. Clark, as he had prodicted to the minute several days ago,
was declared elected and was escorted to the chair by a committee headed by Mr. Mann. In a brief address the speaker pleaded for united action
in the present crisis.

Clark Sees Difficult Work.

"I am profoundly grateful to the house for my fourth election to the speakership; also to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Mann, for the cordial, generous and splendid manner in which he introduced me,"
the speaker said.

"I appreciate that it will be difficult to discharge the duties of speakership
in this house. I will use my utmost endeavor to be fair and I invoke the aid of all members in so doing. Politicians and no place in this house when the welfare and the common defense of the nation are at stake. Let all the ends we aim at be our country's."

After his speech Speaker Clark
said:

"Gentlemen, I am ready to take the oath of office and request that it be administered by Representative Talbot of Maryland."

Oconomocook—E. B. Hoffman, owner of the Wildermuth hotel, will spend $40,- 000 on the structure this year.
Chelsea—The Chelsea Steel Ball
Co., a $15,000 company, has incorporated at Lansing. It has also purchased a site here and let contracts

DETROIT

Public health is something more than a mere absence of disease. It is the physiological functioning of the community.

"The keyword in this public health policy is co-operation—co-operation having as its basis the full recognition of the fact that in its last analysis the health problem is an economic problem and as such cannot be solved without careful consideration of the economic of the community."

Isaphan's Glory Gone.

A report from Constantinople to the effect that the Persian city of Isaphan had been freed from Russian rule by an uprising of tribesmen who had waged a "holy war" against the foreigners, failed to attract more than casual comment in the news dispatches from the war fronts of Europe and Asia. Yet had this city retained to the twentieth century the power and magnificence which were hers in the seventeenth, no news in the world, not even that affecting Berlin, London or Paris, would have been of greater interest, for in that era Isaphan, the capital of its country, had a population variously estimated between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000, while its palaces, gardens and wonderful bazars were without rival in any clime, according to a war geography note issued by the National Geographic society.

Would Breed Deer in Captivity.

The artificial rearing of deer is suggested by Dr. H. L. Dittmars to the New York Zoological society as an industry that would have especial promise in the southern United States. For venison purposes, the Indian and Malay Sambar, breeding rapidly, would be very suitable, and adults of 500 or 600 pounds would have a value in New York of about $150 each. For specimens for museums and parks, a number of varieties might be chosen, with the prospect of a good demand.

NOT MERELY MEDICAL PROBLEM

Protection of Public Health Has Its Foundation on Broad Municipal Policy, Is Assertion.

The protection of public health is more than a mere medical problem, Dr. W. C. Rucker, assistant surgeon general, United States public health service, told the American Public Health association.

Community health cannot be called "public health," he said. "It must rest on co-operation and a broad municipal policy."

"A public health program for cities is in reality nothing more or less than a complete plan for communal existence," said Doctor Rucker.

"Unfortunately, health has been considered in the past solely as a medical problem and the pendulum has been enthusiastically swung so far that health is almost regarded as an artificial state to be achieved and maintained solely through the intervention of medical safeguards."

Expert knowledge of disease is absolutely necessary for the work of health department, but cannot be the foundation of a broad municipal health policy.

SOME SMILES

Exaggerated Sense of Possession.
"The airs some people put on!"
"Yes!"
"There's Dub-
waite."
"What about him?"
"He has only
$7 deposited in a $30,000,000 institution, yet he speaks of the president as 'my banker.'"

Easily Located.
"I have an engagement to meet my wife downtown."
"Did she name the place?"
"No."
"The time?"
"No."
"Then how do you expect to find her?"
"My wife's a methodical little woman. She's usually at the same movie theater at the same hour every afternoon."

A Real Innovation.
"You can get almost anything in one of these big department stores."
"Yes. They are wonderful places.
I wouldn't be surprised if they were to add matrimonial bureaus and furnish mates for single persons."
"That would be a fine scheme, provided they also had an exchange department with a competent divorce
lawyer in charge."

Expediency.
"Your honor, I don't need a lawyer."
"You'd better
have one. You may be convicted,
you know."
"What I mean,
your honor, is that I can be convicted of just as well
without one."

Usual Explanation.
"Before the recent election Mr.
Froble said his victory was assured."
"Yet he was badly defeated. How does he account for that?"
"He says it was due to a combination of circumstances over which he had no control."
"Meaning?"
"He didn't get enough votes."

The Way of the Amateur.
"How is Higgins getting on with his vegetable garden?"
"He's enthusiastic about it—works
in it every day himself. By the way,
he asked me not to forget to give him
the address of the market huckster I deal with."

At the Wedding.
"You know, the beginning of the happy pair's acquaintance was when he offered her an umbrella to keep her new hat from getting ruined."
"I see. He was her rain bean and that is why she carried a shower bouquet."

The Happy Life.
"Mrs. Gadder never seems to have any servant problem."
"Do you know why?"
"No."
"She's never at home long enough to find out whether she has or not."

A Punctured Enterprise.
"So the submarine is going to make a dash home."
"Yes. If the enemy does not put a period to its trip."

will turn out bad.

Mrs. Blount, a member of the Old People's Home, went into a closet off her room Saturday morning, and as it was dark in the room lighted a match in order to enable her to find the garment for which she was looking. The result was that a little later the closet was a mass of flames, and the prompt work by William Atkinson with a fire extinguisher saved the fire department a job.

A very quiet wedding took place at the Baptist parsonage in Ann Arbor Wednesday, April 4, 1917, when Miss Helen L. The impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. John Mason Wells. The young couple left for a short trip in the west. They will be at home to their friends at 513 McKinley street, Chelsea, after May 1.

The press correspondent for the department of Michigan Woman's Relief Corps, Mrs. Franc L. Adams of Mason, has sent out requests to all of the 187 corps in the state to look up the graves of all soldiers in their vicinity, giving the history of each as far as possible, these names to be used by the state historical commission at Lansing in making a roster for future reference. As soldiers of the Revolution, various Indian wars, the war of 1812, Mexican, civil war and Spanish-American veterans are buried within the state borders it is hoped a large list can be obtained, with the service of each given whenever possible.

Imagine what a story could be built upon an idea like this. And by such a master hand as Cyrus Townsend Brady.

This play was shown at the Princess November 10, 1916. It is extremely seldom that any picture is ever repeated at the Princess, but numerous requests from patrons for a repetition of this play and the fact that the management considers it one of the greatest productions they have ever shown has prompted a return looking.

THEIR HEART IN THEIR WORK

Engineers and Mechanics Alike Suffered When Great Bridge Over St. Lawrence River Collapsed.

When the great steel span of the Quebec bridge buckled and fell into the St. Lawrence river "a cry of anguish went up from the engineers who had planned the bridge, and they put their faces into their hands and wept," says the Toronto Globe in its account of the disaster. "They saw their carefully thought-out plans, on which they had placed their professional reputations, suddenly ruthlessly thwarted and tumbled to ruin. It was as if they had lost a great friend. They had lived with this span. They had pride in this work of their brains and hands, and it melted into the river and sank in an instant, never to be recovered."

The same paper tells of how the hundreds of men who had worked on the bridge for months and years were "plunged into the deepest gloom." The bridge was dear to them, and they sat on the bank and looked at the spot in the river where the bridge had gone down.

Each workman who is worth his salt is proud of his work and of the structure that rises from the labor of his mind and hand, whether it be a car, a boat, a house, a mighty bridge, a poem or a field of corn. The laborer who has not this feeling of pride in achievement is not a good workman.

PRESIDENT DEMANDS WAR TO THE LIMIT

Urges Full Co-Operation With Allies in Counsel and Action; Asks Large Financial Credit to Supply Entente Nations With War Materials

APPEALS FOR UNIVERSAL TRAINING

Address in Full Sent to Germany by German Official News Agency for Publication—Text Also Went to England,
Summary Sent Around World to Other Nations

WASHINGTON—In a dispassionate, but unmeasured denunciation of the course of the Imperial German government, which he characterized as a challenge for all mankind and a warfare against all nations, the President declared that neutrality was no longer feasible or desirable, where the peace of the world was involved.

He asserted armed neutrality had become ineffectual and was likely to produce what it was meant to prevent, and urged Congress to accept the gauge of battle with all the resources of the nation.

- President's Recommendations.
- To carry on an effective war against the German government, which he characterized as a "natural foe to liberty," the president recommended:
- Utmost practical co-operation in counsel and action with the governments already at war with Germany.
- Extension of liberal financial credits to those governments so the resources of America may be added so far as possible to theirs.
- Organization and mobilization of all the material resources of the country.
- Full equipment of the navy, particularly for means of dealing with submarine warfare.
- An army of at least 500,000 men, based on the principal of universal liability to service, and the authorization of additional increments of 500,000 each as they are needed or can be handled in training.
- Raising necessary money for the United States government, so far as possible without borrowing and on the basis of equitable taxation.

Resolutions carrying out the President's recommendations were introduced immediately upon the conclusion of the address.

President Wilson's address to congress follows in full:

"I have called the congress into extraordinary session because there are serious, very serious, choices of policy to be made, and made immediately, which it was neither right nor constitutionally permissible that I should assume the responsibility of making.

"On the third of February last, I officially laid before you the extraordinary announcement of the Imperial German government that on and after the first day of February it was its purpose to put aside all restraints of law or of humanity and use its submarines to sink every vessel that sought to approach either the ports of Great Britain and Ireland or the western coasts of Europe, or any of the ports controlled by the enemies of Germany within the Mediterranean.

Assaults Unrestricted U-Boat Warfare.

"That had seemed to be the object of the German submarine warfare earlier in the war, but since April of last year, the Imperial government had somewhat restrained the commanders of its undersea craft in conformity with its promise then given to us that passenger boats should not be sunk, and that due warning would be given to all other vessels, which its submarines might seek to destroy, when no resistance was offered or escape attempted, and care taken that their crews were given at least a fair chance to save their lives in their open boats. The precautions taken were meager and haphazard enough, as was proved in distressing instances after instance in the progress of the cruel and unmanly business, but a certain degree of restraint was observed.

"The new policy has swept every restriction aside. Vessels of every kind, whatever their flag, their character, their cargo, their destination, their errand, have been ruthlessly sent to the bottom without warning and without thought of help or mercy for those on board, the vessels of friendly neutrals along with those of belligerents. Even hospital ships and ships carrying relief to the sorely burdened and stricken people of Belgium, though the latter were provided with safe conduct through the prescribed areas by the German government itself, and were distinguished by unmistakable marks of identity, have been sunk with the same reckless lack of compassion or of principle.

"Live Cannot Be Paid For."

"I was for a time unable to believe that such things would, in fact, be done by any government that had bled subscribed to the humane practices of civilized nations. International law had its origin in the attempt to set up some law which would be respected and observed on the seas, where no nations had right of dominion and where lay the free highways of the world. By painful stage after stage has that law been built up with meager enough results, indeed, after all was accomplished that could be accomplished, but always with a clear view, at least, of what the heart and conscience of mankind demanded.

"This minimum of right the German government has swept aside under the plea of retaliation and necessity, and because it had no weapons which it could use at sea except these, which it is impossible to employ as it is employing them without throwing to the winds all scruples of humanity or of respect for the understandings that were supposed to underlie the intercourse of the world.

"I am not now thinking of the loss of property involved, immense and actions as that is, but only of the wanton and wholesale destruction of the lives of non-combatants, men, women, and children, engaged in pursuits which have always, even in the darkest periods of modern history, been deemed innocent and legitimate. Property can be paid for; the lives of peaceful and innocent people cannot be.

"The present German submarine warfare against commerce is a warfare against mankind. It is a warfare against all nations. American ships have been sunk, American lives taken, in ways which it has stirred us very deeply to learn of, but the ships and people of other neutral and friendly nations have been sunk and overwhelmed in the waters in the same way.

"There has been no discrimination. The challenge is to all mankind. Each nation must decide for itself how it will meet it. The choice we make for ourselves must be made with a moderation of counsel and a temperance of judgment befitting our character and our motives as a nation.

"We must put excited feelings away. Our motive will not be revenge or the victorious assertion of the physical might of the nation, but only the vindication of right, of human right, of which we are only a single champion.

Armed Neutrality Not Enough.

"When I addressed the congress on the twenty-sixth of February last, I thought that it would suffice to assert our neutral rights with arms, our right to use the seas against unlawful interference, our right to keep our people safe against unlawful violence. But armed neutrality, it now appears, is impracticable.

"Because submarines are in effect outlawed, when used as the German submarines have been used against merchant shipping, it is impossible to defend ships against their attacks as the law of nations has assumed that merchantmen would defend themselves against privateers or cruisers, visible craft giving chase upon the open sea. It is common prudence in such circumstances, grim necessity indeed, to endeavor to destroy them before they have shown their own intention. They must be dealt with now if dealt with at all.

"The German government denies the right of neutrals to use arms at all within the areas of the sea, which it has prescribed, even in the defense of rights which no modern publicist has ever before questioned their right to defend.

"The intimation is conveyed that the armed guards, which we have placed on our merchant ships, will be treated as beyond the pale of law and subject to be dealt with as pirates would be. Armed neutrality is ineffectual enough at best; in such circumstances, and in the face of such pretensions, it is worse than ineffectual: it is likely to produce what it was meant to prevent.

"What this will involve is clear. It will involve the utmost practicable co-operation in counsel and action with the governments now at war with Germany, and, as incident to that, the extension to those governments of the most liberal financial credits, in order that our resources may, so far as possible, be added to theirs.

"It will involve the organization and mobilization of all the material resources of the country to supply the material needs of the nation in the most abundant and yet the most economical and efficient way possible.

"It will involve the immediate full equipment of the navy in all respects, but particularly in supplying it with the best means of dealing with the enemy's submarines. It will involve the immediate addition to the armed forces of the United States already provided for by law in case of war, at least 500,000 men, who should, in my opinion, be chosen upon the principle of universal liability to service, and also the authorization of subsequent additional increments of equal force so soon as they may be needed and can be handled in training.

Wants Present Generation to Pay.

"It will involve also, of course, the granting of adequate credits to the government, sustained, I hope, so far as they can equitably be sustained, by the present generation, by well conceived taxation. I say sustained so far as may be equitable by taxation, because it seems to me that it would be most unwise to base the credits, which will now be necessary, entirely on money borrowed.

It is our duty, I most respectfully urge, to protect our people so far as we may against the very serious hardships and evils which would be likely to arise out of the inflation, which would be produced by vast loans.

In carrying out the measures by which these things are to be accomplished we should keep constantly in mind the wisdom of interfering as little as possible in our own preparation and in the equipment of our own military forces with the duty—for it will be a very practical duty—of supplying the nations already at war with Germany with the materials which they can obtain only from us or by our assistance. They are in the field and we should help them in every way to be effective there.

Will Suggest Measures Desired.

"I shall take the liberty of suggesting, through the several executive departments of the government, for the consideration of your committee, measures for the accomplishment of the several objects I have mentioned. I hope that it will be your pleasure to deal with them as having been framed after very careful thought by the branch of the government upon which the responsibility of conducting the war and safeguarding the nation will most directly fall.

"While we do these things, these deeply momentous things, let us be very clear, and make very clear to all the world what our motives and our objects are. My own thought has not been driven from its habitual and normal course by the unhappy events of the last two months, and I do not believe the thought of the nation has been altered or clouded by them.

"I have exactly the same things in mind now that I had in mind when I addressed the senate on the twenty-second day of January last; the same that I had in mind when I addressed the congress on the third of February and on the twenty-sixth of February. Our object now, as then, is to vindicate the principles of peace and the justice in the life of the world as against selfish and autocratic power and to set up amongst peoples of the world such a concert of purpose and action as will henceforth insure the observance of those principles.

Says Neutrality No Longer Feasible.

"Neutrality is no longer feasible or desirable where the peace of the world is involved and the freedom of its peoples, and the menace to that peace and freedom lies in the existence of autocratic governments, backed by organized force, which is controlled wholly by their will, not by the will of their people. We have seen the last of neutrality in such circumstances.

"We are at the beginning of an age, in which it will be insisted that the same standards of conduct and of responsibility for wrongdoing shall be observed among nations and their governments that are observed among the individual citizens of civilized states.

"We have no quarrel with the German people. We have no feeling towards them, but one of sympathy and friendship. It was not on their impulse that their government acted in entering this war. It was not with their previous knowledge or approval.

"It was a war determined on as wars used to be determined on in the old, unhappy days when peoples were nowhere consulted by their rulers and wars were provoked and waged in the interest of dynasties or of little groups of ambitious men who were accustomed to use their fellowmen as pawns and tools.

"Self-governed nations do not fill their neighbor states with spies or set the course of intrigue to bring about some critical posture of affairs which will give them an opportunity to strike and make conquest. Such designs can be successfully worked only under cover and where no one has the right to ask questions.

Points to Russian Revolution.

"Continually contrived plans of deception or aggression, carried, it may be, from generation to generation can be worked out and kept from the light only within the privacy of courts or behind the carefully-guarded confidence of a narrow and privileged class. They are happily impossible where public opinion commands and insists on full information concerning all the nation's affairs.

"A steadfast covenant for peace can never be maintained except by a partnership of democratic nations. No autocratic government could be trusted to keep faith within it or observe its covenants. It must be a league of honor, a partnership of opinion.

"Intrigue would eat its vitals away; the plottings of inner circles who could plan what they would and render account to no one would be a corruption seated at its very heart. Only free peoples can hold their purpose and their honor steady to a common end and prefer the interests of mankind to any narrow interest of their own.

"Does not every American feel that assurance has been added to our hope for the future peace of the world by the wonderful and heartening things that have been happening within the last few weeks in Russia?

"Russia was known by those who knew it best to have been always, in fact, democratic at heart, in all the vital habits of her thought, in all the intimate relationships of her people that spoke their natural instinct, their habitual attitude towards life.

Scores German Plots in U. S.

"This autocracy that crowned the summit of her political structure, long as it had stood and terrible as was the reality of its power, was not, in fact, Russian in origin, character or purpose, and now it has been shaken off and the great, generous Russian people have been added in all their native majesty and might to the forces that are fighting for freedom in the world, for justice and for peace. Here is a fit partner for a league of honor.

"One of the things that has served to convince us that the Prussian autocracy was not and could never be our friend is that from the very outset of the present war it has filled our unsuspecting communities and even our offices of government with spies and set criminal intrigues everywhere about against our national unity of council, our peace within and without, our industries and our commerce.

"Indeed, it is now evident that its spies were here even before the war began; and it is unhappily not a matter of conjecture, but a fact proved in our courts of justice that the intrigues, which have more than once come perilously near to disturbing the peace and dislocating the industries of the country have been carried on at the instigation, with the support, and even under the personal direction of official agents of the Imperial government accredited to the government of the United States.

Refers to Zimmermann Plot.

"Even in checking these things and trying to eradicate them, we have sought to put the most generous interpretation possible upon them because we know their source lay, not in any hostile feeling or purpose of the German people towards us (who were, no doubt, as ignorant of them as we ourselves were), but only in the selfish designs of a government that did what it pleased and told its people nothing.

"But they have played their part in serving to convince us at last that that government entertains no real friendship for us and means to work against our peace and security at its convenience. That it means to stir up enemies against us at our very doors the intercepted note of the German minister at Mexico City is eloquent evidence.

"We are accepting this challenge of hostile purpose because we know that in such a government, following such methods, we can never have a friend, and that in the presence of its organized power, always lying in wait to accomplish we know not what purpose, there can be no assured security for the democratic governments of the world.

Foresees Fight to Finish.

"We are now about to accept battle with this natural foe to liberty and shall, if necessary, spend the whole force of the nation to check and nullify its pretensions and its power. We are glad, now that we see the facts with no veil of false pretense about them, to fight thus for the ultimate peace of the world and for the liberation of its peoples, the German peoples included; for the rights of nations great and small and the privilege of men everywhere to choose their way of life and of obedience. The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted upon the trusted foundations of political liberty.

"We have no selfish ends to serve. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when those rights have been secured as the faith and the freedom of the nations can make them.

"Just because we fight without rancor and without selfish objects, seeking nothing for ourselves, but what we shall wish to share with all free peoples, we shall, I feel confident, conduct our operations as belligerents without passion and ourselves observe with proud punctilio the principles of right and of fair play we profess to be fighting for.

Explains Relation With Austria.

"I have said nothing of the governments allied with the Imperial government of Germany because they have not made war upon us or challenged us to defend our right and our honor. The Austro-Hungarian government has, indeed, avowed its unequalled indifference and acceptance of the reckless and lawless submarine warfare adopted now without disguise by the Imperial German government, and it has therefore not been possible for this government to receive Count Tarnowski, the ambassador recently accredited to the government by the Imperial and royal government of Austria-Hungary, but that government has not actually engaged in warfare against citizens of the United States on the seas and I take the liberty, for the present at least, of postponing a discussion of our relations with the authorities at Vienna. We enter this war only where we are clearly forced into it because there are no other means of defending our rights.

"It will be all the easier for us to conduct ourselves as belligerents in a high spirit of right and fairness because we act without animus, not in enmity towards a people or with the desire to bring any injury or disadvantage upon them, but only in armed opposition to an irresponsible government, which has thrown aside all considerations of humanity and of right and is running amuck.

"We are, let me say again, the sincere friends of the German people, and shall desire nothing so much as the early re-establishment of intimate relations of mutual advantage between us, however hard it may be for them for the time being, to believe that this is spoken from our hearts. We have borne with their present government through all these bitter months because of that friendship, extending a patience and forbearance which would otherwise have been impossible.

"We shall, happily, still have an opportunity to prove that friendship in our daily attitude and actions towards the millions of men and women of German birth and native sympathy, who live amongst us and share our life, and we shall be proud to prove it towards all who are in fact loyal to their neighbors and to the government in the hour of test.

"They are, most of them, as true as local Americans as if they had never known any other fealty or allegiance. They will be prompt to stand with us in rebuking and restraining the few who may be of a different mind and purpose. If there should be disloyalty, it will be dealt with with a firm hand of stern repression; but, if it lifts its head at all, it will lift it only here and there and without countenance except from a lawless and malignant few.

Sees Months of Fiery Trial.

"It is a distressing and oppressive duty, gentlemen of the congress, which I have performed in this address upon you. There are, it may be, many months of fiery trial and sacrifice ahead of us. It is a fearful thing to lead this great peaceful people into war, into the most terrible and disastrous of all wars, civilization itself seeming to be in the balance.

"But the right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts—for democracy, for the right of those who submit to governments, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free.

"To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other.

The supreme court has affirmed the judgment of $1,000 secured by Gertrude Brodbeck, 12 years old, of Monroe, against the Detroit, Monroe & Toledo electric, operating the Piers line. The girl was injured by a car while she was walking along the private right of way through the marsh.

FORM TWO NEW REGIMENTS

Non-Commissioned Officers and Former Soldiers Would Form the Nucleus of New Body.

Detroit—Organization of two new volunteer regiments in Michigan is planned by young Detroit business men.

The regiments, one of infantry and one of cavalry, would be made up as far as possible of former regular army or national guard soldiers and men who have had military training at government training camps would be prepared.

The regiments would be similar in composition to the famous Princess Pat regiment.

This regiment was made up of picked men, practically every one of whom had been in the army.

Should the government express approval of the plan for mobilization of the volunteer regiments here, instead of holding reserve officers and men for other service it may deem more necessary, it is believed both regiments could be recruited in a few days and at once begin training for service.

Such organizations, those promoting them say, would give Michigan approximately 3,000 men who, with sufficient training, would be a credit to the state. In the course of six or eight months both regiments might be considered fairly well equipped fighting organizations.

ON THE WATCH FOR SPIES

Entire Force of Government Employees Asked to Aid.

Washington—Virtually the entire force of the government's civilian employees, approximately 600,000 men and women, has been summoned to aid the bureau of investigation and the secret service in the detection of spies and the apprehension of persons engaged in plots and intrigues against the interests of the United States.

The largest single force which the government has enrolled in its nationwide spy hunt, with the exception of the municipal police and detective forces, is the army of postmasters, all of whom have been instructed to permit no clue as to the identity of suspected individuals and their activities to go unreported. Under the postmasters are working the letter carriers in the cities and the rural delivery carriers in the country, all told, of about 200,000 men.

Instructions to the federal employees call for the prompt reporting of all information, no matter how trivial it appears, which might seem to furnish clues in ferreting out agents of foreign governments. Under this head come letters passing through the mails, telegrams and even scraps of conversation indicating activity against the government.

Such information will be promptly forwarded to the proper investigating body at Washington, the name of the informant held secret, and an inquiry quietly begun wherever, in the opinion of officials, investigation is warranted.

STEEL TRUST BOOSTS WAGES

Voluntary Increase of Ten Per Cent in Workers' Wages Amounts to $25 Million Yearly.

New York—The United States Steel corporation, through Chairman Elbert H. Gruy, announced an increase of "about 10 per cent in wage rates and salaries up to $2,500" of employees of the corporation's various subsidiaries. The increase will take effect May 1, subject to equitable adjustment.

During 1916, the most prosperous of the corporation, three voluntary wage increases were granted, totaling about 33 per cent. The annual pay roll was increased to $263,385,502 from $176,800,864 in 1915.

There are on the pay roll of the corporation 250,000 employees, 90 per cent of whom will benefit by the higher wage schedule.

In 1916, the daily average wage was increased from $3.01 to $3.36. The increase amounted adds $25,000,000 to the corporation's pay roll.

U. S. TO CONTROL FOOD PRICES

Wilson Determined to Prevent Suffering From Shortage or High Prices.

Washington—War-time distribution of food supplies for the nation's civilian population is to be placed under the central control of a commercial economy board it was decided at a conference of the Council of National Defense.

This decision was the culmination of plans outlined by administration chiefs during the last few days, which contemplate mobilization of all the nation's commercial interests through an eminent group of leaders in the commercial world.

Nashville—Three hundred residents turned out to say goodbye to the first four recruits to leave this village.

Leaving—Two regiments and a battalion of artillery will be raised in Michigan according to plans of Capt. McCormick, of Battery A.

Port Huron—Five hundred dollars is being raised here for the Belgian relief fund.

Sarny—The Cleveland-Sarny Saw-Mills Co. resumed operations. Two hundred extra men are employed. Six million logs will be sawed.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Beautify Your Hair! Make It Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant—Try the Moist Cloth.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all. Adv.

A Worthy Example.

When Louis Mann first met his farmer neighbor, Shag Hosman, upstate, Shag was very much interested in the Theatrical.

"So yer a actor, eh?" he asked.

"Indeed, 'tis true," replied Mr. Mann.

"Good one?"

"Ahem!" came from Mr. Mann. "Some people say I am."

"Well, you gotta go some to heat a actor I seen in a show one time," said Shag.

"So? What was he?"

"I've forgot his name," said Shag, switching his chew to the other cheek, "but I seen him with my own eyes turn a back somersault on top of a horse that was runnin'."

Teamster's Life Saved.

WRITES LETTER THAT IS WORTH
READING VERY CAREFULLY.

Peterson Bros.: I was afflicted with a very severe sore on my leg for years. I am a teamster and I tried all medicines and salves, but without success. I tried doctors, but they failed to cure me. I couldn't sleep for many nights from pain. Doctors said I could not live for more than two years. Finally Peterson's Ointment was recommended to me and by its use the sore was entirely healed. Thankfully yours,
William Haase, West Park, Ohio, Mar. 22,
1915, care P. G. Reitz, Box 199.

Peterson says: "I am proud of the above letter and have hundreds of others that tell of wonderful cures of Eczema, Piles and Skin Diseases."

Peterson's Ointment is 25 cents at all druggists, and there isn't a broad minded chemist in America that won't praise
it. Adv.

He Was Overlooked.
He was talking very loudly and boastfully in the railway carriage and compelling everyone to hear him,
whether they wanted to or not.

"Talking about Turkey," he bel-lowed, "why I've been to Constantinople
nearly ten times at least. Funny thing,
now, the way the dogs are scavengers there, and eat everything in the streets. Awfully dangerous to touch
'em. They eat up every scrap of rubbish."

A young lady in the corner said,
thoughtfully, "I really wonder you got home alive."

And presently a blessed silence
reigned in that carriage.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati man tells how to dry
up a corn or callus so it lifts
off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted off, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone
tell him to get a small bottle for you
from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

Blaze, in truth, was embarrassed by
the size of his holdings, but he shook his head. "No, I'm too old to go rampaging after new gods. I ain't got the imagination to raise anything more complicated than a mortgage; but if I was younger, I'd organize myself up and do away with that Ed Austin. I'd sure help him to an untimely end, and then I'd marry them pecan groves, and blended herds, and drug-store orchards.
She certainly is a heart-breakin' device, with her red hair, and red lips
an—"

"Father!" Paloma was deeply shocked.

Complete isolation, of course, Alaire
had found to be impossible, even though her ranch lay far from the traveled roads and her Mexican guards
were not encouraging to visitors. Business inevitably brought her into contact with a considerable number of people, and of these the one she saw most frequently was Judge Ellsworth
of Brownsville, her attorney.

It was perhaps a week after Ed had left for San Antonio that Alaire felt the need of Ellsworth's counsel, and sent for him. Ellsworth was a kindly man of fifty-five, with a forceful chin
and a drooping, heavy-lidded eye that could either blaze or twinkle. Judge Ellsworth knew more than any four men in that part of Texas; information had a way of seeking him out. He was a good lawyer, too, and yet his knowledge of human nature he considered far more important than law. His mind was like a full granary, and every grain lay where he could put his hand
upon it.

He motored out from Brownsville,
and after ridding himself of dust, insisted upon spending the interval before dinner in an inspection of Alaire's latest ranch improvements. Not until dinner was over did he inquire the reason for his summons.

"It's about La Feria. General Longorio has confiscated my stock," Alaire told him. "I was afraid of this very thing, and so I was preparing to bring the stock over. Still, I never thought they'd actually confiscate it."

"Hasn't Ed done enough to provoke confiscation?" asked the judge. "I have it pretty straight that he's giving money to the rebel junta and lending every assistance he can to their cause."

"I didn't know he'd actually done anything. How mad!"

"Yes—for a man with interests in federal territory. But Ed always does the wrong thing, you know."

"Then I presume this confiscation is in the nature of a reprisal. But the stock is mine, not Ed's. I want your help in taking up the matter with Washington."

Ellsworth was pessimistic. "It won't do any good, my dear," he said.
"You won't be paid for your cattle."

"Then I shall go to La Feria."

"No!" The judge shook his head decidedly.

"I've been there a hundred times.
The federals have been more than courteous."

"Longorio has a bad reputation. I strongly advise against your going.
You'd better send some man."

"Whom can I send?" asked Alaire.
"You know my situation."

The judge considered a moment before replying. "I can't go, for I'm busy in court. You could probably accomplish more than anybody else, if Longorio will listen to reason, and,
after all, you are a person of such importance that I dare say you'd be safe.
But it will be a hard trip, and you won't know whether you are in rebel
or in federal territory."

"Well, people here are asking whether Texas is in the United States or Mexico," Alaire said, lightly. "Sometimes I hardly know." After a moment she continued: "Since you know everything and everybody, I wonder if you ever met a David Law?"

Ellsworth nodded.

"Tell me something about him."

"He asked me the same thing about
you. Well, I haven't seen much of Dave since he grew up, he's such a runner."

"He said his parents were murdered
by the Guadalupe."

"Yes. It happened a good many years ago, and certainly they both met a violent end. I was instrumental in saving what property Frank Law left,
but it didn't last Dave very long. He's right careless in money matters. Dave's
a fine fellow in some ways—most ways,
I believe, but—"

The judge lost himself in crowning meditation.

"I have never known you to damn a friend or a client with such faint
praise," said Alaire.

"Oh, I don't mean it that way. I'm almost like one of Dave's kin, and I've been keenly interested in watching his traits develop. I'm interested in heredity. I've watched it in Ed's case,
for instance. If you know the parents,
it's easy to read their children." Again

ALAIRE AUSTIN MEETS GEN. LUIS LONGORIO OF THE MEXICAN FEDERAL ARMY WHEN SHE GOES TO LA FERIA AND CAPTIVATES HIM COMPLETELY

Mrs. Alaire Austin, a handsome young matron, mistress of Las Palmas ranch, gets lost in the Texas desert and after an all-day struggle wanders into the little camp of David Law, a ranger hunting a Mexican murderer. Circumstances force her to stay 24 hours in camp.
Law catches his man, kills another, and escorts her home. "Young Ed," Austin, drunken vintner, upbraids his wife and makes insinuations concerning the ranger officer. Austin is secretly in league with Mexican rebels. Mrs. Austin starts for La Feria, her ranch in Mexico, to secure damages for cattle confiscated by Mexican federals.

he lapsed into silence, nodding to himself. "Yes, nature mixes her prescriptions like any druggist. I'm glad you and Ed—have no babies."

Alaire murmured something unintelligible.

CHAPTER V.

A Journey, and a Dark Man.

Alaire's preparations for the journey to La Feria were made with little delay. Owing to the condition of affairs across the border, Ellsworth had thought it well to provide her with letters from the most influential Mexicans in the neighborhood; what is more, in order to pave her way toward a settlement of her claim he succeeded in getting a telegram through to Mexico City—Ellsworth's influence was not bounded by the Rio Grande.

Alaire took Dolores with her, and for male escort she selected, after some deliberation, Jose Sanchez, her horse-breaker. Benito could not well be spared. Sanchez had some force and initiative, at least, and Alaire had no reason to doubt his loyalty. The party went to Pueblo by motor. On the following day, Alaire secured her passports from the federal headquarters
across the Rio Grande, while Jose attended to the railroad tickets. On the second morning after leaving home the party was borne southward into Mexico.

The revolution had ravaged most of northern Mexico; long rows of rusting trucks and twisted car skeletons beside the track showed how the railway's
rolling stock had suffered in this particular vicinity; and as the train penetrated farther south temporary trestles
and the charred ruins of station houses spoke even more eloquently of the struggle. Now and then a steel water tank, pierced with loopholes and ripped by cannon balls, showed where some detachment had made a stand. There was a military guard on the train,
too—a dozen unkempt soldiers loaded
down with rifles and bandoliers of cartridges, and several officers, neatly dressed in khaki, who rode in the first-class coach and occupied themselves
by making eyes at the women.

At its frequent stops the train was besieged by the customary crowd of curious peons; the same noisy hucksters dealt out enchiladas, tortillas,
goat cheeses and coffee from the same dirty baskets and pails; even their outstretched hands seemed to bear the familiar grime of ante-bellum days. The coaches were crowded; women fanned themselves unceasingly; their men
snored, open-mouthed, over the backs
of the seats, and the aisles were full of snuffling, squabbling children.

As for the country itself, it was dying. The ranches were stripped of stock, no carts creaked along the highways, and the roads, like the little farms, were growing up to weeds.

Not until she rose did he discover
Alaire; then he halted; his eyes fixed
themselves upon her with a start of
stunned amazement.

Alaire felt herself color faintly, for
the man seemed to be scanning her
from head to foot, taking in every detail of her face and form, and as he did so his expression remained unaltered. For what seemed a full minute Longorio stood rooted; then the stiffriggered cap was swept from his head;
he bowed with the grace of a courtier
until Alaire saw the part in his oily black hair.

"Senora! A thousand apologies for my delay," he said. "Caramba! I did not dream—I did not understand your message." He continued to regard her with that queer intensity.

"You are General Longorio?" Alaire
was surprised to note that her voice quavered uncertainly, and annoyed to feel her face still flushing.

"Your obedient servant."

Longorio, with a brusque command,
routed out the occupants of the seat
ahead, and, reversing the back, took a position facing Alaire. Another order and the men who had accompanied him withdrew up the aisle. There was no mistaking his admiration. He seemed enchanted by her pale beauty,
her rich, red hair held him fascinated,
and with Latin boldness he made his feelings crassly manifest.

"You probably know why I wished to see you," Alaire began.

Longorio shook his head in vague
denial.

"It is regarding my ranch, La Feria," saying that the name conveyed nothing, she explained, "I am told that your army confiscated my cattle."

"Ah, yes! Now I understand!" The Mexican nodded mechanically, but it was plain that he was not heeding her words in the least. As if to shut out
a vision or to escape some dazzling sight,
he closed his eyes. Alaire wondered if the fellow had been drinking. She turned to Dolores to find that good woman wearing an expression of stupefaction. It was very queer; it made Alaire extremely ill at ease.

Longorio opened his eyes and passed a brown hand across his brow as if
to brush away perverse fancies that interfered with his thoughts. Alaire noticed that one of his fingers was decorated with a magnificent diamond and

tory at San Pedro—thirty kilometers from La Feria. Not a prisoner was spared, senora."

"Is General Longorio with them?"
Alaire inquired quickly.

"That is what I came to tell you.
It is believed that he is, for he takes his army with him wherever he goes.
He is a great fighter; he has a nose
for it, that man, and he strikes like the lightning—here, there, anywhere."

Jose, it seemed, was a rabid Potosista.
"When the train arrives," she told her horse-breaker. "I want you to find General Longorio and ask him to come here."

"But, senora!" Jose was dm-founded, shocked. "He is a great general—"

"Give him this note." Quickly writing a few lines on a page from her notebook, she gave him the scrap of paper, which he carefully placed in his hat; then, shaking his head doubtfully,
he left the car.

Flushed with triumph, Dolores took
the first occasion to enlarge upon her theme.

"You will see what a monster this Longorio is," she declared. "It was like him to steal your beautiful cattle;
he would steal a crucifix."

"I've heard that," Alaire said gravely.
In the course of time the military train came creaking along on the main track and stopped, to the great interest of the south-bound travelers. It was made up of many stock cars crowded with cavalry horses, and penned in
with them were the women and the children. The soldiers themselves were clustered thickly upon the car roofs. Far down at the rear of the train was a rickety passenger coach,
and toward this Jose Sanchez made his way.

There began a noisy interchange of greetings between the occupants of the two trains, and meanwhile the hot sun
glared balefully upon the huddled figures on the car tops. A half-hour passed, then occurred a commotion at
the forward end of Alaire's coach.

A group of officers climbed aboard,
and among them was one who could be none other than Luis Longorio. As he came down the passageway Alaire identified him without the aid of his insignia, for his stooped head and shoulders above his companions and bore himself with an air of authority. He was unusually tall, at least six feet
three, and very slim, very lithe; a young man; his cheeks were grishly
smooth and of a clear, pale, olive tint;
his eyes were large, bold, brilliant; his nostrils thin and sensitive, like those of a blooded horse. Disdain, hauteur, impatience, were stamped upon the general's countenance as he pushed briskly through the crowd, turning his head from side to side in search of the woman who had summoned him.

Not until she rose did he discover
Alaire; then he halted; his eyes fixed
themselves upon her with a start of
stunned amazement.

Alaire felt herself color faintly, for
the man seemed to be scanning her

ruby ring, and this interested her quickly. No ordinary man could sit-tingly have worn such an ornament,
yet on the hand of this splendid barbarian it seemed not at all out of keeping.

"Dios!" Longorio continued. "Your ranch has been destroyed; your cattle stolen, eh? We will shoot the perpetrators of this outrage at once.
Eueno!"

"No, no! I don't want to see anyone punished. I merely want your government to pay me for my cattle." Alaire laughed nervously.

"Ah! But a lady of refinement should never discuss such a miserable
business. It is a matter for men."

She endeavored to speak in a brisk,
businesslike tone. "La Feria belongs to me. I am a woman of affairs, General Longorio, and you must talk to me as you would talk to a man. When I heard about this raid I came to look into it—to see you, or whoever is in charge of this district, and to make a claim for damages."

"Valgame Dios! This is amazing."
"There is nothing extraordinary
about it, that I can see."

"You consider such a woman as yourself ordinary? The men of my country enshrine beauty and worship

"Why Did You Take My Cattle?"

it. They do not discuss such things with their women. Now this sordid affair is something for your husband."

"Mr. Austin's business occupies his time; this is my own concern. I am not the only practical woman in Texas."

Longorio appeared to be laboriously digesting this statement. "So?" he said at last. "When you heard of this—you came, eh? You came alone into Mexico, where we are fighting and killing each other? Well! That is spirit. You are wonderful, superb!"
He smiled, showing the whitest and evenest teeth.

Such extravagant homage was embarrassing, yet no woman could be wholly displeased by admiration so spontaneous and intense as that which Longorio manifested in every look and word. Alaire knew the susceptibility of Mexican men, and was immune to ordinary flattery; yet there was something exciting about this martial hero's
complete captivation. To have charmed him to the point of bewilderment was a unique triumph, and under his hungry eyes she felt an adventurous thrill.

While he and Alaire were talking the passengers had returned to their seats;
they were shouting good-bys to the soldiers opposite; the conductor approached and informed the general of his train orders.

Longorio favored him with a slow
stare. "You may go when I leave,"
said he.

"Si, senor. But—"

The general uttered a sharp exclamation of anger, at which the conductor backed away, expressing by voice
and gesture his most hearty approval
of the change of plan.

"We must hold the train," Alaire
said quickly. "I will arrange to see you in Nuevo Pueblo when I return."

Longorio smiled brilliantly and lifted a brown hand. "No, no! I am a soldier man; I refuse to deprive myself of this pleasure. Now about these cattle." He thought for a moment, and his tone altered as he said: "Senora,
there seems to be an unhappy complication in our way, and this we must remove. First, may I ask, are you a friend to our cause?"

"I am an American, but what has that to do with my ranch and my cattle? This is something that concerns no one except you and me."

Longorio was plainly flattered by her words, and took no trouble to hide his pleasure. "Ah! If that were only true! We would arrange everything to your satisfaction without another word." His admiring gaze seemed to envelop her, and his wariness was unmistakable.

"Why did you take my cattle?" she demanded, stubbornly.

Alaire is flattered by Long-orio's extravagant attentions, but they soon become mighty irk-
some—as described in the next installment.

SLEEPER MOVES TO MEET CRISIS

LEGISLATURE IN FULL ACCORD WITH GOVERNOR'S PLANS FOR HUGE FUND.

ASSISTANCE TO DEPENDENTS

Credit Measure Providing State Loan
First Move of Michigan Lawmakers in War Crisis.

Lansing—Michigan's $5,000,000 war
loan bill, as drawn by Attorney-General Groesbeck and his assistants at the instigation of Governor Albert E.
Sleeper to meet the demands of the war crisis, went into both branches of the legislature within five minutes
after their convening.

Only the reading of the governor's message preceded a motion to suspend the rules and place the bill immediately where it could be taken up and discussed. In the senate the introduction of the bill itself was heralded with applause. Both houses passed an identical resolution.

Full Text of the Resolution.

The resolution follows:

"Whereas, his excellency the governor has deemed it necessary to send a special message to the legislature
concerning the grave crisis which this country is confronted with in its relations with Germany and making certain recommendations therein with reference to the appropriation of money and the providing of means by which
this state shall be put in a posture
of defense, and by which this state shall be enabled to contribute its share of men and arms to the national defense, and,

"Whereas, it is the sense of the senate that the recommendations of his excellency the governor should be
and will be immediately considered
and complied with, now therefore,

"Be it resolved, by the senate that the secretary of the senate is hereby instructed to inform the governor in response to his message that the senate will, with such speed as the limitations of the constitution permits pass a bill authorizing the raising of $5,000,000 for the following named purposes:

"1.—For the purpose of carrying on recruitment service to obtain the quota of men and organization required
by the federal government.

"2.—To provide a fund for the care
of dependents of the enlisted force
raised by this state under such rules

A freight train struck and killed George Brennstool, a farmer of this township, at Munith last Thursday night. The accident occurred at the crossing. Mr. Brennstool had gone to the village to take transportation on the passenger train, which follows the freight and was passing over the crossing to the depot en route from the south. Being hard of hearing it is probable he did not hear the train and accidentally stepped on the track in front of it. He was thrown about thirty feet ahead of the train and fell across one of the rails. His head was cut entirely off. It is said the train had whistled for the crossing and that the bell on the engine was ringing. An inquest was held at Munith Friday morning. Mr. Brennstool had planned to go to Jackson Thursday night to visit his son, William Brennstool, who is a resident of that city. The home of Mr. and Mrs. George Whittington was struck by lightning about 10 o'clock Saturday forenoon. The lightning struck a large tree at the southwest corner of the kitchen, passing to the well and followed the eavetrough to the northwest corner of the dwelling where it entered the ground. The roof had about one square yard of shingles destroyed, some of the siding torn off as well as the corner boards of the building. Things on the interior of the summer kitchen where the damage was done, were somewhat shaken up. An iron post at the corner of the woodhouse came in for a portion of the fluid, which passed under a cement walk to the roots of a tree. Two cement sidewalks and the cement curbing at the well were badly damaged, and the fluid followed the iron pipe to the bottom of the well, a distance of about 60 feet. At the time the bolt struck Mr. and Mrs. Whittington and daughter were in the kitchen, and while they were not materially affected the shock is one that they will long remember. The loss to the building is covered by insurance.

REAL DIPLOMACY

By A. M. BROWN.

I had never realized what a different nature I possessed until I tried to bring myself to propose to Millicent. I was pretty sure she would accept me if I could but screw up my courage to the sticking point.

Two or three times, indeed, I had very nearly taken the plunge. One afternoon Millicent and I grew confidential over the tea table, and my lips were actually framing the fatal question, when I shot the muffin dish into her lap.

A brilliant strategist would have risen to the occasion with a remark wittily appropriate and complimentary. Millicent would have blushing said that it did not matter, and the inevitable tableau would have resulted. As it was, seeing the havoc caused by the melting butter on her new silver-gray gown, I seized my hat and fled.

Again, one Sunday evening on the river, I let the oars trail in the water as we drifted under the bank. "Millicent," I began, hoarsely, leaning forward. "Will you—" A cough interrupted me, and I found two elderly dowagers on the towing path eyeing me with stern disapproval. I concluded lamely: "—pull your left, please."

The straits at last began to wear me thin, and I determined to resort to desperate measures. With this end in view, I invaded Ruger's street.

"I want an engagement ring," I said, cursing inwardly at the fine acoustic properties of the shop. Half a dozen people turned round to smile broadly in my direction.

"It's for a friend of mine," I added loudly.

"Yes, sir, I quite understand. What stone does the lady prefer, sir?"

"My friend didn't say," I told him. The shop door swung open again. I turned round and found myself face to face with Millicent.

"Fancy meeting you here!" I stammered.

"Um—er—yes, but! ha! Isn't it funny? The fact is—I dropped my voice to a confidential whisper—I am buying an engagement ring—for Tommy Husher. He is confoundedly shy about those things, you know."

"How sweet of you. Who is the girl?"

"Don't you know?"

"I can guess."

"You mustn't," I said. "Tommy wants it to be a dead secret."

"What is the size of the lady's finger, sir?" asked the shopman, returning with a tray of rings.

"I don't know," I said, glancing at Millicent's gloved hand.

"If it's Ella Burnaby," said Millicent softly, "she's got rather fat fingers, and will want a large ring."

"Tommy told me to be careful to get a small ring. I like this one, do you?" Millicent nodded.

"I'll take it," I said, "and chance it being the right size."

"Thank you, sir."

"I want a solid silver cigarette case," said Millicent to another salesman. "You see, Ella Burnaby asked me to buy this for her, as she's rather a shy girl, you know. I think it is for a Christmas present."

"Can I help you?" I said. "I am a bit of a connoisseur on cigarette cases. Is the fellow Tommy Husher?"

"I mustn't tell," said Millicent. "Because if it is, Tommy does not smoke."

"Oh!" she exclaimed blankly. "Ella must be playing a double game," I insinuated.

"I'm sure she isn't. Yes, that one will do."

"You'll have the initials engraved on the case, ma'am?" asked the salesman.

"Yes," said Millicent.

"T. L. H.," I told him.

"Yes, sir."

"No," broke in Millicent quickly, "these are the initials." She scribbled something on a card and pushed it across the counter without letting me see. "Of course, the initials must be engraved on Tommy's ring. They are—"

"They are not," I said quickly. "Here they are," I wrote something on another card.

"Is that right?" I asked recklessly, and handed the card to Millicent.

"I think so," she said, after a pause; dropping her eyes and handing the card to the salesman. "And—I hope you'll like your cigarette case."

Quite a Difference.

Reference at a recent dinner was made to the perplexities of the English language, when this story was fittingly related by Zane Gray, the author of many charming stories of the great Southwest.

Some time since a young girl who had gone through a fashionable college was having a highly intellectual talk with a young man acquaintance when the words "vision" and "sight" were used by the fair one.

"I think I catch the drift of our argument, Miss Smith," said the young man in answer to the girl's last remark, "but please don't make the mistake of saying 'vision' when 'sight' is what you mean."

"I don't quite understand you, Mr. Green," loftily returned the young woman. "There is absolutely no difference between 'vision' and 'sight.'"

"Oh, yes, there is," cheerfully declared Mr. Green. "Walking along the street you occasionally meet a girl who is a vision, and the next minute you may meet one who is a sight."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.
