LOCATE BALL PLANT ON HAYES STREET

New Industry Will Go There If Consumers' Power Is Available.

The new Chelsea Steel Ball company will build its plant at Hayes street and the Michigan Central railroad, providing they can arrange for power from the Consumers' Power Co. The proposed location is in the northwest part of town, near Robert Schweikert's residence.

Originally, it was planned to locate the new industry at Congdon street and the D. J. & C. tracks, just west of the Chelsea Screw Co. plant, where the Consumers' power is already available, but owners of residence property in that vicinity objected and so the new location has been picked.

However, if the plant is built on the Hayes street site it will be necessary to extend the Consumers' power line, probably along Wilkin street north, which involves a right of way from the village.

Inasmuch as the village authorities have previously gone on record as not favoring the granting of any more rights in the village to the Consumers' company, there is still some doubt as to the feasibility of the proposed location of the ball plant.

(By Our Staff Correspondent.)

Lansing—The history of Michigan's legislature of 1917 has been written. Two memorable things for which the session will be noted are the passage of bills to make the state dry and the $5,000,000 war bond issue.

It was the first legislature in the United States to pass laws providing men and money for upholding the nation and no state in the union has evolved such complete and comprehensive plans involving military, industrial and agricultural organization for war.

BABES LEFT TO STARVE IN WOODS

Roam Forests of Canada Like Wild Animals When Parents Die.

SUFFER FOUR YEARS

Three Found by Nurse in Ragged Bed, Two Crippled, and All Shivering From Cold and Famished From Hunger

Winnipeg, Man.—A community nurse recently happened upon a lonely shack in the woods near Whitmouth, in Manitoba, Canada. She entered and approached a bed. Turning back the ragged covers, she saw three little human bodies shivering from the cold; three matted heads that had known neither water nor brush for many months; three drawn faces thinned from want of food; six hands ingrained with dirt; six feet bruised and uncares for; one child maimed for life, one threatened with a wasting disease, and all suffering from terrible hunger.

The nurse reported the case, and an agent of the neglected children's department hurried to the scene. His investigation revealed one of the most pitiful stories ever heard in the province.

Father Drowned in River.

Five years ago the happy little family of John Brady had a plot of land and a home a little north of Whitmouth. There were the father and mother; two twins, Violet and Jessie, aged three, and Irene, a baby in arms. The man and his wife were looking hopefully into the future. It was a country of opportunity, and they expected to prosper.

But one day Brady was making a short-cut to town for provisions. It took him across the river. The ice broke. He went through and perished. Three children were left fatherless with a mother of none too robust vitality. Soon afterwards she died of tuberculosis, brought on by grief and overwork.

Thus the three children, the twins four years of age and the baby two, remained alone. How they survived the next four years nobody knows. Part of the time they were given bits of food by a poor widow who was supporting four little ones of her own in the same community. The rest of the time they roamed about the woods half naked, like savages, trying to nourish their bodies with wild fruits and herbs.

Never Had a Doctor.

Medical attention they never knew. A year ago, Irene, then five years old, stumbled over a fallen tree. She fell upon a sharp rock and fractured her left kneecap. Crawling back home, she lay rbed until the pain abated sufficiently to allow her to limp about. She is still limping and will probably be lame through life. Exposure and lack of nutrition, coupled with a slight bruise, brought a hip disease to one of the older girls. She, too, suffered without medical care.

The steady drain upon their constitutions through want of food and clothing was gradually killing them, and it is likely that they would not have survived the winter if the nurse had not come to their rescue.

In blankets and sacks the three children were taken to Whitmouth. There the townspeople gave them clothing. The grateful little girls were then put on a train for Winnipeg, where they are now wards of the Salvation army.

Birth of Twins Restores Mother's Sight

Burlington, Kan.—Two weeks of blindness was ended for Mrs. McCullough, when she gave birth to twins. A few hours after the babes were born she awoke from sleep and was able to see a faint light. Since that her sight has gradually returned.

KAZAN

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

CHAPTER II.

Into the North.

Wonderful days followed for Kazan. He missed the forests and deep snows. He missed the daily strife of keeping his teammates in trace, the yapping at his heels, the straight, long pull over the open spaces and the burrens. He missed the "Kooosh-kooosh-Hoo-yah!" of the driver, the spiteful snap of his twenty-foot caribou-whip, and that yelping and straining behind him that told him he had his followers in line. But something had come to take the place of that which he missed. It was in the room, in the air all about him, even when the girl or his master was not near. Wherever she had been, he found the presence of that strange thing that took away his loneliness. It was the woman scent, and sometimes it made him whine softly when the girl herself was actually with him. He was not lonely, nights, when he should have been out howling at the stars. He was not lonely, because one night he prowled about until he found a certain door, and when the girl opened that door in the morning she found him curled up tight against it. She had reached down and hugged him, the thick smother of her long hair falling all over him in a delightful perfume; thereafter she placed a rug before the door for him to sleep on. All through the long nights he knew that she was just beyond the door, and he was content. Each day he thought less and less of the wild places and more of her.

Then there came the beginning of the change. There was a strange hurry and excitement around him, and the girl paid less attention to him. He grew uneasy. He sniffed the change in the air, and he began to study his master's face. Then there came the morning, very early, when the babble collar and the iron chain were fastened to him again. Not until he had followed his master out through the door and into the street did he begin to understand. They were sending him away! He sat suddenly back on his haunches and refused to budge. "Come, Kazan," coaxed the man. "Come on, boy."

He hung back and showed his white fangs. He expected the lash of a whip or the blow of a club, but neither came. His master laughed and took him back to the house. When they left it again, the girl was with them and walked with her hand touching his head. It was she who persuaded him to leap up through a dark, high hole into the still darker interior of a car, and it was she who lured him to the darkest corner of all, where his master fastened his chain. Then they went out, laughing like two children. For hours after that Kazan lay still and tense, listening to the queer rattle of wheels under him. Several times those wheels stopped, and he heard voices outside. At last he was sure that he heard a familiar voice, and he strained at his chain and whined. The closed door slid back. A man with a lantern climbed in, followed by his master. He paid no attention to them, but glared out through the opening into the gloom of night. He almost broke loose when he leaped down upon the white snow, but when he saw no one there, he stood rigid, sniffing the air. Over him were the stars he had howled at all his life, and about him were the forests, black and silent, shutting them in like a wall. Vainly he sought for that one scent that was missing, and Thorpe heard the low note of grief in his shaggy throat. He took the lantern and held it above his head, at the same time loosening his hold on the leash. At that signal there came a voice out of the night. It came from behind them, and Kazan whined so suddenly that the loosely held chain slipped from the man's hands. He saw the glow of other lanterns. And then, once more, the voice—

"Kaa-aa-zun!"

He was off like a bolt. Thorpe laughed to himself as he followed. "The old pirate!" he chuckled. When he came to the lantern-lighted space back of the caboose, Thorpe found Kazan crouching down at a woman's feet. It was Thorpe's wife. She smiled triumphantly at him as he came up out of the gloom. "You've won!" he laughed, not unhappily. "I'd have wagered my last dollar he wouldn't do that for any voice on earth. You've won! Kazan, you brute, I've lost you!"

His face suddenly sobered as Isobel stopped to pick up the end of the chain. "He's yours, Issy," he added quickly. "But you must let me care for him until—we know. Give me the chain. I won't trust him even now. He's a wolf. I've seen him take an Indian's hand off at a single snap. I've seen him tear out another dog's jugular in one leap. He's an outlaw—a bad dog—in spite of the fact that he hung to me like a hero and brought me out alive. I can't trust him. Give me the chain!"

He did not finish. With the snarl of a wild beast, Kazan had leaped to his feet. His lips drew up and bared his long fangs. His spine stiffened, and with a sudden cry of warning, Thorpe dropped a hand to the revolver at his belt. "Kazan has good reason to hate McCready—so have the others. This dog's vision penetrates deeper than mere eyesight, and he does his best to warn his friends."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A woman has wonderful self-control if she never buys anything at a bargain sale that she really wants.

CONCRETE PAVEMENT IS BEST

Affords as Good Foothold for Horses as Any Other Hard Surface and Wears Quite Well.

The concrete pavement in use on the main driveway at the Kansas State Agricultural college has proved that this type of pavement is successful, according to L. E. Conrad, professor of civil engineering. This pavement has been in use for more than three years and shows practically no wear. The traffic over this road is heavy. It consists of all the coal and machinery delivered to the college, a large part of the material that is used in the construction of new buildings on the campus, college mail and express, and the many pleasure vehicles that are continually using this road.

Two methods were used to surface the road. On the level portion of the roadway the finish was made comparatively smooth, while on the grades a heavy stable brush was drawn over the green cement, leaving a rough surface. It is probable that after a few years of service the roadway which has the smooth surface will present a more uniform appearance but at present there is no appreciable difference. "The teamsters hauling coal to the college power plant were strongly of the opinion that the road would be slippery," remarked Mr. Conrad, "but they say, after using it for three years, that it affords as good a foothold for the horses as any hard surface."

"The expansion and contraction of the concrete is taken up by steel-bound joints that are placed every 35 feet, these joints being surrounded by an elastic material. Outside of a few dollars for replacing some of this material, there has been no expense whatever for the repair or upkeep of the roadway."

SPRING WORK ON GOOD ROADS

One or Two Trips Up and Down With Drag Will Put Them in Fine Condition—Details of a Drag.

(By LEO MATTHEWS.)

In the spring of the year, when the roads begin to dry and the dirt is still somewhat moist, one or two trips up and down with the road drag will put them in excellent condition. If each farmer would care for the road which passes his place, dragging it every time it needed it, we would all have occasion to rejoice.

Personally, I don't believe there is a steel drag made that will beat the work of the old King drag. Another point in its favor is that it can be made at home and costs practically nothing.

Because of constant inquiry for plans of this drag and to encourage its further use I give this detailed drawing and make the following suggestions:

Use light wood. The drag will do the most efficient work if it is light enough for one man to lift.

Don't use square timber, as it will not stay sharp on the edge like a half-round timber. A log from 10 to 12 inches in diameter is best.

A strip of iron three-eighths of an inch thick, three or four inches wide and thirty-six inches long bolted to the right-hand side of the front timber, is very effective in cutting down unusually rough spots.

TREES ALONG ALL HIGHWAYS

Plan for Annual Appropriation Commands Recognition—Investment Would Give Satisfaction.

The plan for an annual appropriation for the planting of shade trees and shrubs along the great extent of state highways commands recognition. This looks to the decoration of regions in which from year to year there is a greater passage of our people for recreation and the enjoyment of the pleasures of nature. There is no investment from whose dividends greater satisfaction can be drawn.—Boston Post.

Results From Road Drag.

The systematic use of the road drag will give better results for the money spent than any other method of maintaining an earth road, and costs from $10 to $15 per mile per year in Illinois, provided the road has been properly built.

$1,750,000 for Concrete Roads.

A bond issue for $1,750,000 to be used for building approximately 125 miles of concrete highways in Sacramento county, Cal., passed a few days ago, the vote being four to one.

Source of Supply? New York!

YOU ALL KNOW, OF COURSE, THAT MEN'S STYLES ORIGINATE IN NEW YORK CITY. WE OWN AND OPERATE A BIG NEW YORK FACTORY WHERE BOND'S CLOTHES ARE MADE. WHEN WE SAY THAT BOND'S CLOTHES ARE MADE. WHEN WE SAY THAT BOND'S CLOTHES ARE DESIGNED AND TAILORED IN NEW YORK, WE'VE SAID ENOUGH TO CONVINCE MOST MEN THAT BOND'S STYLES ARE RIGHT.

Your Choice

Men's and Young Men's Suits, Topcoats, Raincoats, Evening Clothes, anyone a $25 value—

Something About Bond Quality—

While it's true Bond's price is only $15, Bond's quality is comparable with the retailer's $25 lines. That is why men come back for more Bond Clothes after they have worn their first Bond garment.

Selling an ordinary $15 suit for $15 is no "trick" at all. Every clothier in town can do it. But here's where we have the drop on the other fellow:

Save That Extra Ten Dollars

Summer's coming and you will want to take a vacation. About that time, an extra ten-spot or two will come in mighty handy. Take a vacation on Bond this year—use the money we can save you on your clothing purchases and you can take a "regular" vacation.

Nature Cures. The Doctor

Takes the Fee.

There is an old saying that "Nature cures, the doctor takes the fee," but as everyone knows you can help Nature very much and thereby enable it to effect a cure in much less time than is usually required. This is particularly true of colds, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy relieves the lungs, liquefies the tough mucus and aids in its expectoration, allays the cough and aids Nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition.—Adv.
