Chautauqua Boosters.

The dates for the holding of the Lincoln Chautauqua, June 21-28, are fast approaching, and the Chautauqua Boosters' Club met at the Congregational church Tuesday evening and elected the following officers and committees:

President—Rev. P. W. Dierberger. Vice President—R. D. Walker. Secretary—John L. Fletcher. Treasurer—Paul Niehaus. Press Committee—Ford Axtel, L. T. Freeman and Wm. Bacon.

Grounds Committee—John S. Cummings, W. K. Guerin and E. P. Steiner.

Entertainment Committee—Messdames Alice Koedel, E. B. Hammond and J. S. Cummings.

Active work will be started at once and the sale of season tickets will be pressed.

There is no doubt about the value to a community of a good chautauqua, and it deserves everybody's personal boost, because it is a good thing for Chelsea, and because it is worth any man's money.

The Lincoln Chautauqua gives six days of the finest entertainment, all of which tend for the uplift of the whole community.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Fred Morton has entered the third grade.

Ellen Constable, from Omaha, has entered the second grade.

Winifred Ward has left the first grade, to be gone several days.

Miss Livingstone will visit the schools in Battle Creek, Friday.

The children of the seventh and eighth grades of the rural schools are taking their examinations.

James Willis has resumed his lessons in the sixth grade after two months absence due to an injury received during spring vacation.

Miss Grace Walt has accepted a position in the junior high school at Ypsilanti, with a substantial increase in salary for the coming year.

The fourth graders are having a series of lessons which bring out the spirit of Mothers' Day, and are busy making little booklets for their mothers.

Clair Rowe journeyed to Kalamazoo last Saturday to represent Chelsea high school in the Kalamazoo College meet. Once more he must be credited with putting our school on the map as regards athletics. Last year through his excellent work the Chelsea high school team won the Tri-County meet at Wayne. Saturday, he smashed all records in the pole vaults for the Kalamazoo track, tied another for us in the high jump, won third place in the broad jump and single handed put Chelsea high in the fifth place in the meet. Clair deserves much credit for his persistent efforts in track and field work and to him must be credited much of the interest shown in this field of athletics. Locomotive for Rowe! The medals that he received are on exhibition in the show window of H. H. Fenn Co.

Found Stolen Car.

Fay Dunning, of Lansing, last Saturday morning purchased a seven passenger Reo touring car. In the evening he drove down town and stopped in front of a store which he entered and was inside about ten minutes. When he returned to the street his car had disappeared. The machine was recovered by officer Howard Brooks Sunday morning.

The party who took the machine had abandoned it in front of the home of C. Heiber on south Main street. Karl Bagge notified Mr. Brooks of the abandoned machine and the officer had it taken to Palmer's garage where it was discovered that the gasoline was nearly gone and one cylinder was out of order. The car had been driven 125 miles.

Officer Brooks notified the Chief of Police in Lansing of the whereabouts of the stolen car, and Mr. Dunning came here and returned home with his machine Sunday evening.

Making Some Profit.

The Michigan Agricultural College department of experimental chemistry rubs the gloss off a gold brick last week when it served notice upon three Michigan chemical companies that unless they bring the labelling of certain "anti-smut cures" within the law before May 19, they will be put out of business. The college experiment station discovered that the manufacturers have been selling at $2 a pint plain formaldehyde, which when pure costs but $1.50 a gallon. Farmers were being asked to pay the difference between $16 a gallon and $1.50 for a little coloring matter, tar, oil and an improved smell.

For years the college has been recommending the use of formaldehyde to control the smut of oats, wheat and barley. Capitalizing this remedy, the Anti-Smut Chemical Company, of North Adams, the Albion Chemical Works, producing Bob's so-called Smuticide, and the Dr. Lape Veterinary Company, of Adrian, makers of Dr. Lape's Smut Destroyer, put ordinary formaldehyde into bottles, renamed it, put in a little dye and aroma, and raised the price to $2 a pint. In making the transformation, however, they forgot to print upon their labels, as the law requires, the fact that their "smut cures" are nothing more than the common old formaldehyde of yore.

Similar remedies are being marketed as agents for the control of potato blight and the college accordingly is cautioning farmers to be on their guard.

It might be added that while plant disease specialists have been recommending the use of pure 40 per cent formaldehyde, the solutions marketed by three companies hit by the college never contained more than 30 per cent, and cost times as much.

"We'll Charge a Fortune for a Tea Biscuit and Bankrupt Everybody That Comes," Said Gloria.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

By Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes

Novelized from the Motion Picture Play of the same name by George Kleine.

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a conservative father. Her childhood capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Escaping from the parental home she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freeman, five years later she leaves school and meets Freeman at the theater; he has forgotten Gloria. Later Freeman persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's father-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous and Doctor Royce discovers her in an ally. Freeman takes Gloria to his home from her window an attack made upon him. Doctor Royce convinces her it is delirium. She accidentally sees the supposed suicide of Freeman reported in the paper. Gloria swears to find the murderer. Royce tells what he knows of Freeman to Mr. Stafford. Gloria insists on going to Palm Beach. She is recognized by her one-time captives, the young Seminole chief. He tells her that Royce and not Freeman was her rescuer at that time. Gloria attends night court; she sees a picture there, also the tramp who attacked Freeman. But Judge Freeman releases him. She follows the tramp when he leaves the court, discovers him in a low saloon dance hall, and is selected by one of the patrons as his partner. Doctor Royce, however, follows her when she attempts to leave, calls down a riot on her heels. The hall is raided and the tramp is taken before Judge Freeman. Casimir arrives with the child Gloria, who has been kidnapped by Freeman. During a playful scuffle Gloria sees and recognizes the envelope. She suspects Royce of complicity in the murder. Royce tells her all. She sees one of Lois' letters to Freeman. Judge Freeman confesses his part. When Lois is confronted she flees from Gloria intent on suicide.

NINETEENTH EPISODE

Her Vow Fulfilled

As Lois Stafford fled down the terraces of her father-in-law's majestic estate, her own life seemed to be symbolized in her desperate ambition to destroy herself. The flowers and the aromatic shrubs threw out their fragrance about her, but she would not pause. She was bent upon the tragedy waiting for her in the deep ravine toward which the express train was plunging as if in obedience to her summons.

The cries of Gloria, who pursued her frantically, came to her like the voice of conscience. She had never heeded that voice and she would not hearken to it now. She had trodden the primrose path of dalliance and it had led her forth into the glare of exposure. She would not endure the shame. It seemed better to her irresponsible soul to run away from self-denial. She had not cared what laws of fidelity she broke and she did not care now what hearts she might break. Her husband's tarnished honor, her father's blighted career, did not win a thought from her.

It was Gloria who thought of these things even as she followed. Gloria felt more guilt than Lois, for Gloria had confronted Lois with the proofs of her perfidy, never fancying that Lois would answer the charge by punishing herself with the same recklessness that had marked her sin. As she saw Lois running toward death with eagerness, she understood for the first time that it was in Lois' character to do everything passionately. She realized that Lois had always been Lois, and that her fault was, perhaps, beyond her own control. Lois was born without imagination of consequences and without an instinct of justice for others. Was Lois to blame for her failure to inherit such qualities? At the time, at least, Gloria was convinced that Lois was like one born blind, more to be forgiven than hated. Gloria felt only pity for her sister-in-law and she accused herself of cruelty in demanding payment of her.

Gloria ran as fast as she could, her heart beating till she was ready to faint down with the pain of it. She was about to give up when Lois, glancing back for a last look at the beautiful earth she was about to leave, stumbled and went to her knees.

She rose at once and sped on, but Gloria had been enabled to gain on her, and to overtake her at the very edge of the ravine. With loving ruthlessness Gloria flung herself on Lois and dragged her back.

Lois fought with insane ferocity, tearing Gloria's hands loose and writhing out of her grasp. But Gloria seized her again and again. Lois carried her back to the brink and the turf at the edge gave way under their feet as they wrestled. Gloria had now her own life to fight for as well as Lois', for at any moment both women might

Gloria knelt by her, begging her not to cry. At last she offered the final bribe in her power. She drew the envelope of letters from the bosom of her gown and held it out to Lois, saying:

"I forgive you, dear. I have no right to judge you. I can't take that responsibility. Keep your life and your past and make what you will of them."

Lois rather saw the prize than heard the counsel and she snatched at the letters with the instinct of a child.

Gloria felt her heart harden again. She could not keep back a feeling of contempt for the selfish pettiness of Lois.

Gloria was afraid to speak lest she waste further rebukes on a soul that could not profit by any other chastisement than sacrifice and fear. So Gloria left her and climbed the terraces. She noted with relief that no one had seen the brief drama that might have startled the whole nation. She was afraid that she had done everything she ought not to have done.

As she was entering the house to go to her room the boy Stas called her. He was holding a picture book of foreign paintings. He knew nothing of any of them and he asked Gloria many questions she could not answer. One of the pictures represented Christ kneeling and writing on the ground. Near him lay a contrite woman in shame and tears. In the background a number of men were turning away shamefaced. The picture was labeled, "Neither Do I Condemn Thee, Go and Sin No More."

Now, Gloria felt that she was justified in laying aside her impulse to exact a penalty from Lois. She told Stas that the picture was beyond the understanding of a child, and that he was lucky to be a child. She wished that she had never grown up. Then she went to her room. Looking from her window, she could see the embankment where she had won a double victory over Lois and herself. Lois was tearing the bundle of letters to bits and scattering the pieces upon the railroad track, where she had nearly been torn to pieces herself.

Gloria felt that one riddle at least was solved. She felt sorry for David and his choices among women. Then she remembered the judge's accusation against David. According to that her brother was guilty of a more heinous crime than Lois'. He had taken a life or, with even greater wickedness, had persuaded another man to commit murder for him. She could not rest till she had either cleared David of that suspicion or warned him that his secret was known.

The reason that this deed between Gloria and Lois had not been observed by anyone but the fleeing eyes of the fireman on the express engine was that the Stafford estate was a little world in itself.

David had been conferring with his business associates by telephone. Pierpont had been inspecting the prize cattle with which he jealously expected to confound his rival neighbors at the next county fair. Stas had been looking at the big picture books on the huge table in the great living room. His father, Casimir, had been working among the rose bushes with the head gardener. Judge Freeman had been involved in one more conspiracy, which he firmly hoped would be the last.

It was Casimir who first interrupted Gloria in her search for David. Casimir had hardly believed that there were as many roses in all the world as there in the Stafford close. He could see his wife lying in a reclining chair in a sunny nook and it occurred to him that one of those roses would cheer her and serve as a bit of gallantry. So he plucked one. The gardener saw the deed, charged on him with a roar, and snatched the flower from him. The deep thorn bite he received in his thumb did not pacify him. He stood sucking his thumb and swearing when Pierpont stroled by.

Pierpont had lost his temper at the dairy because the head valet to the cows had not brushed their teeth to his satisfaction nor manured their hoofs to perfection. When the gardener explained that Casimir had dared to pluck one of the famous and priceless Pierpont roses which had never failed of honorable mention at the annual exhibition of the Garden club, Pierpont was more wroth than the head gardener.

Casimir quailed before the onslaught, and Gloria, drawn to the spot by the noisy voices, found him craven with confusion. She took his part at once, and when the gardener and her father explained the atrocity he had committed Gloria also turned on him:

"In heaven's name, Casimir, what did you mean by taking the only rose my poor father has?"

"I did take it," Mees Gloria, for to grieve my poor wife. Better I should go away now, yes?"

"You took a rose to give to your wife, did you?" Gloria cried. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"I am it! Oh, I am it!" Casimir protested.

"I should think you would be," Gloria stormed. "Taking one rose for your poor wife. The next time you want flowers for her you take as many as you can carry."

While her father and the gardener and Casimir gazed like dolls, she snatched off a dozen of the Pierpont roses with the gardener's own shears. She laid them in Casimir's arms and said: "Maybe she won't care for the Pierpont roses. I don't think much of them, myself. So take her some of each of these varieties, and find which she likes best. Then if the gardener bothers you again, tell me and I'll snip his head off the same way and you can have his place."

She gave the gardener his shears, pushed Casimir out of the enclosure, and followed, turning to say: "Thank you, father."

Pierpont and the gardener looked at each other and both said, "When?"

Gloria went along to make sure that Casimir's wife received the flowers with no hint of their hazardous gathering. Then she went to the house to find David.

She was encountered by her aunt, the great Hortensia, with a bevy of other great ladies from the countryside.

"Give us tea, Gloria, for heaven's sake," said Hortensia, "and come listen to our scheme."

They dragged Gloria to the Japanese tea garden, whither the servants brought tea and all its accompaniments across the lawn. Aunt Hortensia gathered in Doctor Royce as well.

Aunt Hortensia explained that it was about time to "get up something." Each of the ladies had her pet charity which needed funds and everyone talked at the same time. Gloria's mind was too full of her own problems to feel much interest. She beckoned to Casimir and sent him with tea and cakes for his wife. When he came back with the china she piled up a little mid-afternoon banquet for himself.

He took it shyly, then stared at it, and shook his head and offered it back. Gloria asked why. He hesitated, then exclaimed: "In my Poland millions of my peoples are dying because they have not of bread. And should I eat of cake? No, I could not, please!"

Gloria respected his feelings too much to force him to eat, but she turned to the committee and, claiming the floor, asked the house to listen to a delegate from Europe. She made Casimir speak. He was tongue-tied at first with embarrassment, but he warmed to his theme and told of the miseries of his beloved land, over which vast armies had fought back and forth again and again till the wealthy and noble were living in cellars and eating husks and the poor were dying in herds.

When he had finished every eye was wet and every heart aflutter for Poland. When Gloria proposed a mammoth lawn festival for Polish relief there was unanimous assent.

"We'll charge a fortune for a tea biscuit and bankrupt everybody that comes," said Gloria. "Then I'll take the money over to Poland myself to make sure that it falls into the right hands."

"And I'll go along with you," Doctor Royce spoke up, "to make sure that you don't fall into the wrong hands."

Everyone applauded the impudence, but Gloria answered it with one of her bluntest looks. Doctor Royce was still under the ban. He had confessed too much and duped her too well to be forgiven in haste. But her rebuke was ignored in the excitement of the convention. A mammoth lawn festival for Polish relief; there was no dissent.

Now once more Gloria felt free to seek David. She found him, hiding, he said, till the women got away. She asked him to follow her. She had perfected her scheme for testing his innocence or his guilt.

David had not been present when the yachting expedition set forth to run down Trask, nor had he been present when Trask was brought in. David was thoroughbred enough to rule his own expressions and to pretend ignorance of Trask's existence. But Gloria felt sure that if she could bring the two men suddenly face to face one or the other would betray a guilty knowledge.

So she said to David: "Come with me. I've got a surprise for you."

David followed her up to the guest room where Trask had been installed. She led him to the door, knocked, opened the door, and bade David enter. A screen stood before the bed and she drew it aside quickly, keeping her eyes on David. She saw surprise in his face, but not of the sort she expected. His surprise was blank wonder.

She turned to see how Trask took the confrontation. Trask was not there. The bed was empty.

Gloria ran to find the nurse. She met her just coming in from a motor ride. She had taken her two hours of liberty, she said, leaving Nell to care for her father. She was stunned by the news of Trask's departure. He was too weak to rise and walk. It seemed impossible that he could have been carried out without attracting the attention of a dozen servants.

"And I'll Go Along With You," Said Doctor Royce.

Gloria felt bewitched. She ran to seek Doctor Royce. David ran after her, asking: "What's it all about? What's the little surprise you had for me? It seems to have caught you first."

"Don't bother me," was all Gloria would say.

David seemed so amused by her dismay that she began to suspect him of kidnapping his confederate. But she dared not accuse him lest, if he were innocent, she would reveal to him more of Lois' guilt than she felt it her right to divulge.

She stood off David and hurried on to find Doctor Royce. She met Judge Freeman on the lawn, and told him what had happened. He expressed surprise, but when she had left him she began to feel dissatisfied with the sincerity of his amazement. But she could not pause to investigate further. When at last she found Royce, she forgot that he was in her black book still. It had been her habit for so many years to run to him with her problems that she ran to him now, and, laying her hands on his arm, cried:

"Oh, Stephen, Stephen, they've stolen Trask! I've lost him again and I don't know what to do."

"Stolen Trask!" Royce exclaimed. "It's impossible."

"Of course it's impossible," said Gloria, "but it's true, too."

Royce set out to pick up what trace there might be of him. Gloria tagged along. Royce asked every servant he met where he had been. Several of them had been on the lawn serving tea. Judge Freeman had sent others on various errands. The cook and her crew had been busy providing for Aunt Hortensia's mob. Royce called for his own chauffeur. He had been in the kitchen, he confessed, as a guest at a tea party below stairs.

Judge Freeman was not to be found. As a matter of fact he was the principal offender. After he left Gloria he had wandered about in a deep and gloomy meditation. He was convinced that Gloria, with her impulsive and unmanageable temper, was set upon unraveling every knot in the tangle. He was sure that her inexperience with the world would keep her from foreseeing the consequences and that she would compel a complete revelation. This would end only in a public scandal, an enormous and irretrievable disaster.

David would be put on trial for his life and Trask would turn state's evidence against him to save his own life. David would perhaps be sentenced to death, or, if he escaped that, he would escape it in some pretense of insanity, with all the aftermath of endless serial scandals. In any case, Lois would be disgraced before the world, and if David's wealth could bribe an acquittal, it would purchase a divorce.

Another consequence would be that the judge himself would be impeached or forced to a resignation without pay, with his crime dishonored. It is fairly fair to say that the judge's fears for his own suffering had less weight with him than his fears for the wreck of his daughter's life and of David's. He loved David as if he were his own son. He had a deep affection for Pierpont, and he cherished a great fondness for Gloria. He respected even the motives that were so perilous to herself as well as all the others.

He wandered disconsolately about the lonelier portions of the Stafford demesne and found himself at the outer gate. There he chanced to see the bargeman, Jed, come up the road. Jed asked if he knew where the Stafford place was. Judge Freeman told him that it was before him. Jed asked if a badly hurt man had been taken in there with his daughter. The judge nodded and asked what he knew of the pair.

Jed said he didn't know much except that the old man's daughter was his girl and going to marry him some day and he was afraid she was in trouble. So he had left the barge to hurry back and see if he could be of some use.

The judge questioned him cautiously and finally proposed that the best thing to do would be to get the old man out of the hands of the Staffords, who meant him no good. Jed seized on the suggestion hungrily and the judge offered his co-operation. He led Jed by a little frequented path to the rear of the house and bade him wait. He went in and sent Nell out to speak to Jed and make sure that she wanted to escape with him. Nell assured him that she did. The beauty of the house oppressed her.

While Nell was talking with Jed Judge Freeman was ordering his own chauffeur to bring the car up to a corner of the driveway shielded from the house by a clump of ancient rhododendrons as large as trees. Then the judge, surprised at his own craftiness and bringing into play all the lore he had acquired from hearing thieves' confessions, set about the burglarious art of clearing the house. Most of the servants had been impressed into the service of wholesome tea at Aunt Hortensia's convention. The rest Judge Freeman sent on various errands with messages to distant laborers on the grounds.

When the coast, or at least the stairway, was clear, he called in his chauffeur and Jed. They hurried up to Trask's room and, lifting him in his sheets, hurried out into the hall and down the stairs with him. The old man suffered agonies from the jolts and jars, but he smothered his groans somewhat. The judge went ahead as a scout and varded off one maid who ran in for Aunt Hortensia's parasol and a man who hurried back for a social register of the county to be used in making up a committee list.

Thus Trask was, as the saying is, spirited away without being seen by anyone except his abductors. The chauffeur ran his car from the grounds by the tradesmen's entrance and Judge Freeman, lingering, saw the cloud of dust the machine raised as it dashed north. He remained to keep watch and to do what he could to turn pursuit in the wrong direction.

He felt disquieted by the pallor of Trask and by his extreme exhaustion. He was afraid that the old man would not last long. He hated himself for the thought, but he could not dismiss the belief that it would solve all problems if the wretch would pass away in silence. If he spoke he might condemn himself to death in the chair and take David with him.

Judge Freeman abhorred his own deed and regretted that he could not punish himself publicly as severely as he would have punished another judge who violated his honor so. But he had been a father before he became a judge, and the parental instinct overruled the legal obligation. He understood as never before the almost irresistible impulses that compel men toward criminal acts, and he wondered which it were better to do, resign his post as judge of other men or remain on the bench and administer mercy more freely than he had been wont to do.

Meanwhile he smiled, though dimly, to think that his old head had outwitted the young wits of Gloria. He saw how disturbed she was by the escape of her captive, but he felt no more remorse than one feels who takes a sharp knife away from a child lest it wound itself as well as others.

Gloria was frantic. She was still surrounded by hostile friends who thwarted every effort she made to learn the truth that were all important to her peace of heart.

Government Issues Warning Against Fly Poisons

Following is an extract from "The Transmission of Disease by Flies," Supplement No. 29 to the Public Health Reports, April, 1916.

"Of other fly poisons mentioned, mention should be made, merely for a purpose of condemnation, of those composed of arsenic. Fatal cases of poisoning of children through the use of such compounds are far too frequent, and owing to the recent blazes of arsenical poisoning to summer diarrhea and cholera infantum, it is believed that the cases reported do not, by any means, comprise the total. Arsenical fly-destrorying devices must be rated as extremely dangerous, and should never be used, even if other measures are not at hand."

100 fly poisoning cases have been reported by the press within the last three years. As stated above this number is but a fraction of the real number. Protect your children by using the safe, efficient, non-poisonous fly catcher.

WAR ON INSECT PERIL NEXT

Extirpation of Winged and Creeping Enemies of Mankind Held to Be of Vital Importance.

A writer in an English journal has suggested that the next great war will be between man and the insect world. This war would be waged not only on insects that actually attack man himself, but also on all those winged or creeping things that are his enemies in less direct ways—those species that, to use the writer's phrase, "exist at the expense of human progress and happiness."

We all shudder with horror at the thought of a scorpion or of a centipede, although few of us ever see one of them, but we do not shudder enough at the thought of the millions of untold disgusting things that we are putting up with all the time. Perhaps it is unfortunate for us that many of these harmful, and even death-dealing, insects are very small. If they were as large as they are had we should soon rid ourselves of them. When we see the housefly or the mosquito hugely magnified we realize at once that, compared with them structurally, the tiger is a charming and beautiful thing; but we go away and forget the magnified picture and submit to the original of it. The death toll that vermin have caused in the present war so enforced its lesson that the world has roused itself to clean things up. The knowledge that certain insects were disgusting and unclean did not seem to be sufficient reason for action, but the knowledge that these same insects are quite as dangerous as so many bullets is a strong argument.—Youth's Companion.

Ordinance No. 54.

An Ordinance granting permission to the Consumers Power Company, a corporation, of the City of Jackson, Michigan, to set poles and maintain wires for transmission of power along certain streets of the Village of Chelsea.

THE VILLAGE OF CHELSEA ORDINANCES.—Section 1.—That consent and permission are hereby granted to the Consumers Power Company, to set poles, and thereon to string wires for the transmission of electricity beginning at the transformer, on the property of The Lewis Spring and Axle Company, on the east side of north Main street, in the Village of Chelsea, and running thence west across said north Main street to North street; thence west along North street to Hayes street; thence south along Hayes street to a point opposite the land of the Chelsea Steel Ball Company; thence west across Hayes street to the land of Chelsea Steel Ball Company's land.

Section 2.—In constructing and repairing said line along streets aforesaid all poles or apparatus that may interfere with the rights of others or the public use of said streets by the Village, shall be set in such places as the Common Council shall designate and the said council reserves the right to order said Company to change the location of any of its poles or wires along said streets whenever it shall deem it proper to do so, and the said Consumers Power Company upon the receipt of such orders shall make change required within a reasonable length of time.

Section 3.—In constructing said line said Company shall not unreasonably obstruct any of said streets and shall hold and save said Village harmless from damages resulting from the use of said streets for the transmission of power.

Section 4.—This Ordinance shall take effect and be in full force from and after its publication.

Approved, May 2, 1917.

C. LEHMAN,

President of Village of Chelsea.

LOCAL ITEMS

F. C. Kilgler is having a refrigerating plant installed in his market.

Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Avery were called to Howell Friday by the death of Mr. Avery's father.

Donald Castle, little son of Mrs. Mary Castle, fell from a tree Tuesday and dislocated his right elbow.

Several of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Howe are confined to the home of their parents with the measles.

Catherine, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Wheeler, is confined to the home of her parents with an attack of scarlet fever.

The eighth grade pupils of the rural schools are taking their examinations at the high school here. They will be here today and Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cooke returned to their home here last Friday from Detroit, where Mrs. Cooke has been for several weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Myron Lightbail.

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Slaybaugh, who have occupied the house owned by Rev. G. Eisen on Washington street, for the past year, moved Monday to the Beissel residence on North street.

There will be a Red Cross mass meeting at the town hall Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Chaplain P. L. Donegan of the 32d Regiment Michigan National Guard, will be the speaker.

Henry Merker, who is employed by the Lewis Spring & Axle Co., fell from the second floor to the basement in building No. 8 last Thursday afternoon. The young man lost three of his teeth and was otherwise bruised.

The Saline Savings Bank opened its beautiful new bank building last week. George A. Lehman, the cashier, was a former resident of Chelsea, and his many friends here are pleased over the success that has been his since he left this place.

Station Agent W. R. Hughes and his assistants were called out Wednesday night to unload and feed three carloads of hogs which were in transit. The animals had been on the road the full time allowed by law. The stock was unloaded Thursday morning.

The Michigan Central has informed its employees that the company will plow and drag any of the tillable land along its right of way, if they desire to plant the same to crops. Several of their Chelsea employees will take advantage of the offer and plant potatoes.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Schanz on west Middle street has been placed under quarantine. Five of their children have scarlet fever. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Canfield is also under quarantine as their daughter Catherine is ill with the same disease.

Rev. C. R. Osborn, former pastor of the Baptist church here, and who has been attending the Rochester Theological Seminary, has returned to Chelsea and will act as pastor of the church during the summer. He will be here Sunday and will preach a special sermon on Mothers' Day.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Hall have received dispatch stating that their son Lester, who enlisted in the navy a short time ago, is seriously ill with spinal meningitis. Mr. and Mrs. Hall reside on the Emery Chipman farm east of town and Mr. Hall is an employee of the Lewis Spring & Axle Co.

Monday, May 14, there will be a conference of the Ann Arbor Evangelical Ministers Association at St. John's Evangelical church, Freedom township. Sixteen ministers are expected to take part. Rev. W. Koch, of Grand Haven, the presiding elder, will preach Monday evening at 7:30. Everybody welcome.

The last day of school at "Pumpkin College," Lyndon, Miss Veva Hadley teacher, Friday was well attended, four districts being represented. A bountiful dinner was served at noon followed by suits and fruit. The program occupied the afternoon at the close of which ice cream and cake were served. A good time was reported by all.

Among the pictures in the Detroit Tribune recently of the members of the Detroit Naval Reserves was that of Francis H. Fenn, who was a petty officer of the Fourth Division. Since being called to the front he has been appointed chief clerk to the paymaster. Mr. Fenn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Truman Fenn, former residents of Chelsea.

Mrs. Florence Hulson, of Jackson, president of the Federation of Ladies Clubs of Michigan, was present at the meeting of the Bay View Reading Circle at the home of Miss Jessie Everett Monday evening, and addressed the members on the advisability of joining the Federation. The circle voted to give the Red Cross the sum of $10, and is the first society here to make a donation to this noble institution.

The cases against the Ann Arbor saloonists for selling liquor to Chelsea boys are ended. The first case to be tried was that of Pearl Teeple, and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. Wednesday morning when court convened, prosecuting Attorney Lehman asked permission of Judge Kinne to enter an order of nolle prosequi in the cases of Wagner and Parker, which was done and the men were discharged.

Davidson & Bauer are at work in Ann Arbor on a new building for the Hoover Steel Ball Co.

OPERATION OF NEW DRAFT LAW

Official Instructions Concerning the Raising of Military Forces Determined On.

POLLING PLACES TO BE USED

All Persons Within the Age Limits
Prescribed by the Law Must Present Themselves There—Governors of States at Head of Registration Work.

Washington.—With the object of stimulating publicity to the work of raising the military forces called for under the army draft law the war department has issued the following instructions, which will govern the work:

There was a time in the country's history when military enumerators, backed by bayonets, went out among the people to take a compulsory service census. Today, under the principle of universal liability to service, the execution of the law is put into the hands of the people.

The approval of the new national army bill and the president's proclamation thereunder have been coincident. All persons within the age limits prescribed are required to present themselves for registration at the customary voting places in the voting precincts in which they have their permanent homes, on a day which the president will announce.

The governor of each state is the chief of registration therein. The machinery of registration in each county is in charge of the sheriff, the county clerk, and the county physician, acting ex officio, unless a different board shall be authorized by the governor. In cities containing populations of more than 30,000, the registration will be under the control of the mayor and selected boards of registration. In order that the designated county and city officials, and the people generally, can get a clear understanding of the census methods the following brief outline is given:

The sheriff, or other designated officials, immediately upon receiving notice from the governor, shall appoint registrars for each voting precinct.

Appointment of Registrars.
The proportion of registrars shall be one for each 170 persons to be registered. Each age to be registered will comprise about 1 per cent of the population.

If, for instance, all men between nineteen and twenty-five years of age inclusive, are to be registered, the registrar would have to enroll about 7 per cent of the precinct population.

It is desirable to accept the services of competent volunteer registrars to serve without compensation. All registrars must be sworn.

The voting place in each precinct must be prepared for registration. Full printed instructions covering every detail of registration will be in the hands of sheriffs and mayors on the fifth day after the president's proclamation.

Cities of Over 30,000 Population.
The mayor of a city containing more than 30,000 inhabitants, or the official designated by the governor therein, shall, with approval of the governor, appoint for each ward or convenient minor subdivision containing about 30,000 people one registration board, and shall designate one officer of each board to perform duties similar to those imposed on the sheriff, as herebefore outlined. If the mayor desires, he may appoint a central board to coordinate the work of minor boards.

Duties of County Clerks, and of Clerks of Cities of Over 30,000 People.
On the fifth day after the president has issued his proclamation, clerks of counties and cities of over 30,000 must secure a supply of blanks and copies of the registration regulations from the sheriff or from the mayor. Absentees and the sick will apply to such clerks to have their registration cards filled out. In no case shall such persons be given registration certificates. They are to be instructed by the clerk that the burden is on them to see to it that the cards reach the registrars at their home precincts by registration day.

Absentees and the Sick.
Persons absent from their home counties may be registered by mail. If so absent, a man should go to the clerk of the county where he may be staying, on the sixth day after the date of the president's proclamation. If he is in a city of over 30,000 population, the city clerk is the official to whom to apply. The absentee will be told how to register, but he must mail his card in time to reach his precinct by registration day.

Persons too sick to present themselves for registration must send a competent person to the county or city clerk on the sixth day after the issuing of the proclamation. The clerk will give instructions for registration. Colleges, Universities, Homes and Other Institutions.
Officials of educational, charitable and other institutions should apply for instructions to the county or city clerk on the sixth day after the date of the proclamation for instructions as to a convenient method of registration.

The wardens of jails, penitentiaries, and reformatories should apply to the county or city clerk for instructions on the sixth day.

Five days after the date of the president's proclamation complete regulations will be in the hands of all sheriffs and of the officials of cities of over 30,000 population.

The president is authorized to call upon all public officers to assist in the execution of the law. The plan is, however, to rely on the people for the proper execution of the law. It is expected that patriotic citizens will offer their services free as registrars. Such services will be gratefully acknowledged. Volunteers for this service should communicate immediately with the proper official.

BANKS ASKED TO CO-OPERATE

Secretary Authorizes Financial Institutions to Receive Subscriptions for the Bond Offering.

Washington.—Secretary McAdoo telegraphed the entire list of 27,513 national and state banks and trust companies in the United States, authorizing them to receive subscriptions for the $200,000,000 bond offering, enabling them to telegraph a rough estimate of the amount of bonds each would take for itself and its patrons.

"You can render an invaluable service to your country," Mr. McAdoo told the banks, "by receiving subscriptions and co-operating with the federal reserve bank in your district."

Loan Subscriptions Pour In.
To all clearing house associations in the country Mr. McAdoo sent a telegram in which he said:

"The amount of the initial loan has been determined by the needs of the government and not arbitrarily. The enthusiastic and patriotic co-operation of the banks and bankers of the country will guarantee the success of the undertaking."

The result of the first announcement of the loan has been a deluge of subscriptions, aggregating many millions. Most of these came in by wire to the treasury. Virtually every large city and every state in the Union was represented.

Long $100,000,000 to Italy.
Negotiations continued today with representatives of the nations to which the United States is extending credit. Count di Colonna, the Italian ambassador, received the full amount of the first $100,000,000 loan made by this government to Italy.

Subscriptions to the second offering of treasury certificates were received during the day by the federal reserve banks. Indications are that the secretary will call for the proceeds within a week, possibly a few days.

The $100,000,000 loan to France will be turned over to Ambassador Jusserand, in whole or part, within a day or so.

MAY CENTER IN WASHINGTON

Probability That One Committee Will Purchase All Supplies Needed by the Allied Countries.

Washington.—Creation of a central purchasing committee in Washington for all supplies bought in the United States for the allied governments was forecast here by Sir Hamilton Lever, financial expert of the British war mission. The committee will supplant J. P. Morgan & Co.

Discussing the world financial situation, the British expert expressed the opinion that Germany will be practically bankrupt in the credit markets after the war.

"Our enemies," he said, "for all their boasted efficiency, have never had the courage to face their financial problems, with the result that when the war is over they will be hard put to it."

The Teutonic governments having pyramided one internal loan upon another, he explained, their interest charges would be so great that he believed they would either have to repudiate a large part of their debt or face inability to buy the enormous quantities of material they would need for reconstruction.

The allies, he added, had paid their way in the war "by the straightforward and natural means, by pouring out their gold, by selling, expiring masses of American securities, by raising loans." As a result, he predicted that the end of the war would find the allies in good shape financially, despite their enormous permanent debts.

Agree on Paying Men in Training.

Washington.—Conferees on the army bill agreed on a provision to pay $100 a month to men in training camps seeking to qualify as members of the officers' reserve corps.

Although the full allotted quota of 40,000 men probably will be enrolled in the officers' training camps when they open May 15, there still is "plenty of room for men of the right qualities," the war department announced.

In a statement saying that each of the sixteen camps seemed assured of its full allotment of 2,500 applicants for commissions, the department appealed for further recruits among men of proved ability.

Chicago to Furnish Chasers.

Chicago.—This city is now mobilizing its naval resources. Acting under orders from the navy department, Capt. W. A. Moffett, commander of the Great Lakes naval training station, began rounding up hundreds of small power boats preparatory to equipping them as submarine chasers. Captain Moffett expects to run them "to the seaboard" as rapidly as possible.

WAR PRISONERS TO WORK FARMS HERE

BRITISH MISSION SUGGESTS
SENDING CAPTURED MEN TO AMERICA.

SUPPLIES IN EUROPE SHORT

Sending Prisoners to U. S. Would Relieve Allies of Burden and Overcome Labor Shortage Here.

Washington.—Plans have been practically completed by the British mission with officials of this government for the United States to act as the prison for the Entente Allies, it was learned here. The plan contemplates the transportation to this country of all prisoners of war, thousands of them, captured by the Entente, including those now held as well as those captured in the future.

The first prisoners are expected to arrive in the United States within 20 days. It is proposed to employ them chiefly on farms in raising foodstuffs.

Because of the shortage of supplies in Europe, the Entente Allies would be relieved of a vast burden by sending the captured soldiers to this country, where supplies are comparatively plentiful and could be spared easily. It would also relieve the scarcity of farm labor in the United States.

The matter of transportation would be easy, officials have pointed out, as the men by hundreds could be put on commercial vessels returning to the United States, many of them at present without cargo, after having taken food to England and France. Arrangements for this are now being concluded.

NEWS CHANNELS CLOSED

Secretary Lansing Orders Department Heads to Withhold Information.

Washington.—The usual channels of information through which news of America's relationships to foreign powers have up to now reached the public have been closed by Secretary Lansing.

An order bearing his name was distributed broadcast to state department officials instructing them not to talk with newspapermen "even on insignificant matters of fact or detail." Henceforth, under the order, the press will not be able to discuss the background of complicated international questions with the experts at the head of each bureau.

If this order remains in effect the public will receive from the state department only such perfunctory news as the bureau gives out and such fragmentary explanations as Secretary Lansing himself finds time for in the crush of other work.

200,000 ASK TO BE OFFICERS

Apply to War Department for Admission to Training Camps.

Washington.—More than 200,000 men—five times as many as can be accommodated—have applied for admission to the 16 officers' training camps which opened Tuesday to begin developing men who will lead American armies to be raised within the next four months. About 50,000 have been certified as qualified for admission. From these 40,000 will be selected and placed under intensive instruction.

From among the 40,000 men under training, 30,000 will be chosen at the end of three months to become officers of the first army of 500,000 men to be called to the colors about September 1, under the selective draft system.

The remainder who qualify will be assigned to fill vacancies in the regular army or National Guard, or will be commissioned in the reserve corps and held to fill gaps in regiments at the fighting front when American troops get into action.

"MEATLESS DAY" ABOLISHED

England Finds That It Increased Demands on Bread Stuffs.

London.—Great Britain's "meatless day" is to be abolished because it augments the demand on bread stuffs and other substitutes less plentiful than meat. This was announced by Baron Devonport, the food controller, in the house of lords. He declared a diminution in the consumption of breadstuffs was of vital moment and a main factor in the situation, but he added:

"Provided that the call for a reduction is responded to and the efforts of the submarines are not successful beyond reasonable likelihood, we shall get through with a fairly satisfactory balance in hand to the time when the harvest becomes available."

Albion.—It was announced that all seniors and juniors of Albion college who leave school to enter the army, navy or for farm work under government direction will receive full credits.

Flint.—A general increase in salary for teachers in the Flint public schools has been granted by the board of education. The maximum salary of grade teachers was fixed at $250 and of high school teachers at $1,100. The minimum salary for untrained grade teachers was fixed at $400.

ARMY ENGINEERS SEE SERVICE FIRST

TRAINED RAILWAY MEN FIRST AMERICAN TROOPS TO BE SENT TO FRANCE.

12,000 MEN IN EXPEDITION

Detroit Is One of the Nine Great Railway Centers Asked to Recruit Men Needed.

Washington.—Nine new regiments of army engineers, to be composed exclusively of highly trained railway men, will be the first American troops to be sent to France.

"They will go 'at the earliest possible moment,' the war department announced, for work on communication lines, but speculation as to exactly when or to what points they will be sent is forbidden because of the submarine menace.

The new force will be volunteers raised at the nine great railway centers of the country. Each regiment will be commanded by an engineer colonel of the regular army aided by an adjutant. All other officers will be railway engineers or officials.

The recruiting points will be New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Atlanta, San Francisco and Philadelphia.

The expedition will have a total strength of between 11,000 and 12,000 men, each regiment being composed of two battalions of three companies each.

Every branch of railway workers necessary to the building or operation of lines will be represented in the ranks and the war department expects a response to the call that will permit a careful selection to be exercised and insure a force already trained to the minute, an army of experts in railway operation.

Recruiting for the regiments and the organization of each force will be directly under the control of each regiment. Recruiting machinery of the regular army or the national guard will be placed at their service and it is hoped the enrollment of the troops will take little time.

ALLIES NEED 2,000 DOCTORS

Medical Men and Ambulance Attendants Needed at Front.

Chicago.—England and France are in immediate need of 2,000 medical officers and 5,000 ambulance attendants, according to a statement issued by Dr. Franklin Martin, head of the medical division of the Council of National Defense.

Dr. Martin calls attention to the great need of England and France for trained medical men and reminds Americans that it is their duty to respond to the call of their allies.

Six Red Cross base hospital units with 24 doctors, 60 nurses, and a supporting personnel, aggregating 150 each, have been ordered by the war department to France for immediate service.

One hundred and ten hospital units with approximately 3,000 automobile ambulances and 5,000 men asked for by France, will be dispatched within the next three weeks.

Michigan to Send 500 Doctors.
Grand Rapids.—Six hundred doctors for the army and navy is Michigan's quota, according to Dr. Frederick O. Warmshuis, of Grand Rapids, secretary of the Michigan State Medical society. The society meets in Battle Creek this week to obtain the enrollment of the necessary physicians and to plan for the care of their business interests and their dependents.

Durant.—Thieves by going around the front way stole five bushels of beans from H. E. Reatty, farmer, who was sitting on a log behind his barn with a shotgun guarding his granary.

Port Huron.—To assist citizens to purchase government war bonds without working a hardship on themselves, a local bank has offered to purchase any number of bonds of $50 denomination and hold them until the price is paid into the bank at the rate of $1 a week on each bond.

Standish.—The Sterling schoolhouse near here was burned with all its contents. The loss is $7,000.

East Lansing.—To the farmer who wants to know what to plant to produce the greatest possible amount of food to the acre, the Michigan Agricultural college is saying "grow corn." "Corn," according to the college, "will in those districts where soil and climate are adapted to it, produce more food per acre for both human beings and livestock than anything else that could be sown."

WAR TRAINING AT FORESTRY CAMP

"COLLEGE IN WOODS" TO HAVE DRILLS IN ADDITION TO REGULAR STUDIES.

SCHOOL WILL OPEN JUNE 25

Differs From Old Camps of Past, in That It Is Open to Any Young Man Wishing to Attend.

Lansing.—Men who enroll this spring in M. A. C.'s "college in the woods" will get war training as part of their daily academic fare.

The principal aim of the forest school will be to instruct men in forestry and lumbering, but attention will be devoted to preparation for the war service ahead. Daily drills and exercises to round the men into sound physical condition will be a part of the program.

The "college in the woods" will be at Daykirk lake, in Wexford county. It will differ from the old forestry camps of the past, however, in that it will be open to any young man who chooses to attend.

The school will open June 25 and continue until Aug. 3.

FEDERAL AID TO BUILD ROADS

Five Pieces Recommended by Highway Commissioner.

Lansing.—The first real step in the use of federal money for Michigan good roads, under the act of congress and the Road bill in the last legislature, has been taken, by Highway Commissioner Frank F. Rogers.

He referred to the "government" through its chief engineer of roads for this district, James Boushell, of Chicago, five pieces of road upon which he wants federal aid and which he will start within a month or sooner, if the preliminaries are completed.

The five pieces are as follows: Six miles across Laketon township, Allegan county, a portion of the West Michigan pike; nine miles from Montague in Muskegon county to New Era, in Oceana county, a piece of the West Michigan pike; 10 miles in Isosco county, running southwesterly from the town of Osoda, a portion of the East Michigan pike; 10 miles in Presque Isle county, between Rogers of the East Michigan pike. A stretch across Baraga county, connecting the copper country with Marquette county.

THRESHERS WASTE GRAIN

State Food Preparedness Committee to Inspect Machines.

Lansing.—At a dinner given to farmers in the vicinity of Lansing by W. K. Prudden, a member of the state food preparedness committee, a suggestion was made by E. W. Banks, one of the farmers attending the banquet that will no doubt help save a lot of grain.

"Every year the threshers lose us a lot of good grain," said Banks. "Go through the country and look at the straw stacks. You will see grain of all kinds left in the straw. Your committee or the state or somebody should see to it that the threshing machines are inspected."

The suggestion of Banks struck former Gov. Warner, the head of the committee, with such force that he is going to make some move toward carrying it out. It is possible under a law passed by the last legislature compelling the threshers to make weekly reports, to have their machines reached and inspected at all times by the county agents.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Plans for placing a minimum price on farm products are evidently being carried out by Secretary Houston, of the national department of agriculture. W. J. Orr, of Saginaw, president of the Michigan Bean Jobbers' association, was called by the department over the long-distance telephone from Washington and asked what minimum price per bushel for 1917 beans would be satisfactory. He replied that $6 would be satisfactory, but that nothing less would get all of the Michigan farmers into the plant beans. Asked if $5.50 would do, Mr. Orr replied positively that it would not.

Attendance in the University of Michigan is 7,517, an increase of 303 students over that of last year, according to enrollment figures. The enrollment includes students from all states in the union except Delaware and from 34 foreign countries.

Boys at the Michigan school for deaf at Flint are taking up military training, although it is not expected they will ever be called into service. Sept. L. L. Wright decided upon the training to develop the students mentally and physically.

The Bryant Paper Co., of Kalamazoo announced increases in the general wage scale for its 1,200 employees, which will aggregate slightly more than $100,000 annually. The minimum for women employees will be $11.50 a week. The increase is the second in nine months.

Members of the Saginaw Rotary club and prisoners at the county jail will work adjoining tracts of land of 10 acres each.

Dr. Bernhard Friedlander, of Saginaw, who has received his commission as lieutenant in the medical staff of the officers' reserve corps, was born and educated in Germany, but declares he was American before he left there because of militarism. "I am willing to shed my blood, if necessary," he says, "to aid the United States in forcing a republican form of government upon Germany."

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Forty-six Flint young men have applied for training in the officers' reserve corps at Fort Sheridan.

Nearly 75 per cent of the automobiles manufactured in the United States are made in Michigan.

Geo. W. Fletcher, former Mt. Clemens hotel man, but more recently of Cheboygan, died in a hospital at Ann Arbor.

Hal H. Smith, Detroit attorney, has offered a half acre near a school in Ionia county to pupils for gardening purposes.

The four Kalamazoo M. E. churches were successful in their joint campaign to raise $50,000 to extend church work.

Mike Taylor of Cadillac, fireman and city weighmaster, was suspended for 30 days for giving incorrect weight on a horse to help a horse dealer.

Joe Badgley, 76, a veteran of '61, climbed a 50-foot pole and placed a rope through a pulley so Old Glory could be hung to the breeze at Clayton.

More than 2,000 Elks, with leaders from all parts of the United States, will hold a patriotic demonstration at the convention in Muskegon, June 20-23.

Canadian casualty lists give C. J. Parling, McCarron, Mich., as having died of wounds and W. Wildsmith, Kalamazoo, as having been killed in action.

Four men and one woman are under arrest, and the police say three of the men have admitted killing Max Schreiber, Detroit saloonkeeper, when they attempted to rob him of $10,000.

A. G. Fayban, Lansing fruit dealer, his wife and brother-in-law escaped without serious injury when their automobile plunged over an embankment into the Grand river, a drop of 25 feet.

Standing within hearing of his aged mother, Phinias Warren, 60, a Pres-tonville, Macomb county, farmer, placed a gun at his temple and shot himself. He was dead when his brothers reached him.

The Junction house, the oldest hostelry in Owosso, will close in a short time, because of the high cost of foodstuffs. It was founded when the Junction Central road was built through Owosso 48 years ago.

Porter W. Hill, of Ionia, bigamist, was sentenced to Jackson for two years. Hill is 75 years old. He broke down before the court, but it was shown that he had had eight wives without the trouble of divorce.

The police would like to find Cadillac's "lady thief." She has entered scores of homes among the wealthier class in Cadillac the past month, making away with hosiery, petticoats and other articles of feminine wearing apparel.

A branch of the Permanent Blind Relief fund has been started in Flint. Contribution boxes have been placed in hotels and stores to receive donations for the care of the American soldiers and sailors who may be blinded in battle.

A canvass of most of Oakland county shows the farmers will plant an acreage of beans this year increased by 25 per cent over last year, but that the potato acreage will fall perhaps 15 per cent under the normal. Many farmers are buying their seed potatoes.

Gov. Sleeper was wired by Saginaw's food preparedness committee to urge on all Michigan cities the adoption for this summer of Eastern standard time. This would give those cultivating preparedness gardens an extra hour of daylight each day to work in their gardens.

Sebastian S. Kresge, of Detroit, chain store merchant, was the subject of one of the most radical revisions in tax returns which the state board of review has returned in recent years. The amount of his personal property on which he will be called to pay taxes was raised from a nominal sum to $2,000,000.

Captain Cleary, of the Thirty-first infantry machine gun company, will upon invitation of Professor Alfred H. Waite, of the department of chemical engineering of the University of Michigan, deliver a lecture before the class at Ann Arbor Thursday evening May 24, his subject being "Machine Guns." He will take with him a machine gun and the following day will give practical demonstrations to the interested students.

Calvin college, Grand Rapids, the Dutch theological seminary, will close three weeks earlier this year on account of the war. Theological students are desirous of serving the country. Scores are going to work on farms, while others are going to the training camp at Fort Sheridan, Ill. Several have enlisted. Special dispensations are made, enabling students to serve their flag without danger of losing their standing in theological work.

Members of the Saginaw Rotary club and prisoners at the county jail will work adjoining tracts of land of 10 acres each.

Dr. Bernhard Friedlander, of Saginaw, who has received his commission as lieutenant in the medical staff of the officers' reserve corps, was born and educated in Germany, but declares he was American before he left there because of militarism. "I am willing to shed my blood, if necessary," he says, "to aid the United States in forcing a republican form of government upon Germany."

DAVE LAW AND ALAIRE AUSTIN MEET AGAIN AND SPEND THE DAY TOGETHER — LAW RECEIVES WARNING FROM AN AVENGER BUT LAUGHS AT THE DANGER OF DEATH

SYNOPSIS.—Mrs. Alaire Austin, handsome young mistress of Las Palmas ranch, lost in the Texas desert, wanders into the little camp of David Law, state ranger, waiting in ambush for a Mexican murderer. She is forced to stay 24 hours, until Law captures his man, kills another and escorts her home. "Young Ed" Austin, drunken wastrel, berates his wife and makes insulting insinuations about the ranger. Law discovers that Austin is secretly in league with Mexican rebels and horse thieves. Mrs. Austin encounters Gen. Luis Longoria, Mexican federal, when she goes to La Feria, her ranch in Mexico to collect war damages, and Longoria, a bad man, falls in love with her. Dave Law kills a cattle thief and comes into unpleasant contact with Austin.

There was a murmur on the on-lookers; someone cried, "Viva Longoria!"

The general bowed smilingly; then, taking Alaire's arm, he waved the idlers out of his path with a magnificent gesture.

When, later in the day, Mrs. Austin came to say good-by and thank the Mexican for his courtesies, he humbly begged permission to pay his respects that evening at her hotel, and she could not refuse.

As the coach went bounding across the International bridge, Dolores said, spitefully: "It will take more than the pardon of poor Juan Garcia to unlock heaven for that bandit. Do you notice the way he looks at you? It is enough to damn him for all eternity."

Upon her arrival at the hotel Alaire received an agreeable surprise, for as her vehicle paused at the curb David Law stepped forward, hat in hand.

"What bloodthirsty business brings you to Pueblo?" she queried, when they had exchanged greetings.

Law smiled at her. "I came to offer free board and lodging to a poor Grenser. But he ain't here. And you, ma'am?"

"When Dave learned that she was counting upon General Luis Longoria's aid in securing justice, he regarded her with some curiosity as he inquired:

"Isn't Longoria the very man who robbed you?"

"Yes." "Mexicans are peculiar people," Law said slowly. "At least we don't understand their business methods or their habits of mind. From my experience with them, I wouldn't put much confidence in this Longoria's word. I say this, and I'm supposed to have a little Mexican blood in me."

During this brief conversation they had entered the hotel, and she gave her hand to Law.

"I hope we shall see each other again," she murmured.

"That's more likely; I'm located in your neighborhood now," he informed her. "I'm leaving for Jonesville in the morning."

"By train?"

"No. I'm going to follow the river road if I can get an automobile."

Mindful of the ranger's courtesy to her on their previous meeting, Alaire said: "Won't you go with us? We intend to start early."

Dave was nearly speechless with delight, and when the mistress of Las Palmas had gone upstairs he felt inclined to pinch himself to see if he were dreaming. He had pursued, a fruitless quest during the past few days, and his resentment had grown as he became certain that Tad Lewis had sent him on a wild-goose chase; but the sight of Alaire miraculously restored his good spirits, and the prospect of a long, intimate ride in her company changed the whole trend of his thoughts. His disappointment at not seeing her upon his visit to Las Palmas had only served to enhance his memories of their first meeting, and time now had deepened his interest.

Yes, she was "The Lone Star," the estrella brillante of his empty sky. There could be no doubt about his feelings; he was more than romantically interested, the mere sight of her had electrified him. The discovery distressed him, and he very properly decided that the affair should end here, since it could lead to nothing except disappointment.

At the time of this story, relations between the United States and the established government of Mexico were such that a hostility had sprung up between the troops fronting each other along the Rio Grande, and in consequence their officers no longer crossed the boundary, even when off duty. It created a flurry of suppressed excitement, therefore, when Luis Longoria, the autocrat of the Potosista forces, boldly crossed the bridge, traversed the streets of Pueblo, and entered the Hamilton hotel.

From his seat in the lobby Law heard the general inquire for Mrs. Austin, and then saw him ascend in the direction of the parlor. He rose and strolled restlessly about the hotel. A half-hour passed and Longoria did not reappear; an hour dragged by, and then Dave took occasion to go to his room. A glance through the open parlor door showed the foreigner in closest conversation with Mrs. Austin. They were laughing; they were alone; even Dolores was nowhere to be seen. He showed several cigars viciously before realizing that he was jealous—yes, madly, unreasonably jealous.

So! His divinity was not as unapproachable as he had imagined. Doubtless Longoria was mad over her, which explained the fellow's willingness to help her exact reparation from his government. Fine, dolours for a respectable married woman! It was wrong, scandalous, detestable!

Had Dave only known the truth, he would have gained a grim comfort from it, for Alaire Austin was not enjoying herself that evening. Her call-er stayed on interminably, and she became restive under the flow of his conversation. For some reason or other, Longoria was not the romantic figure he had been; in his citizen's clothes he was only a dandified Mexican gentleman like any number of others. The color was gone from the picture; this quixotic guerilla hero, this elegant Luis Blas, was nothing more than a tall, olive-skinned foreigner, whose ardor was distasteful. Longoria was tiresome.

CHAPTER X.

Jose Sanchez Swears an Oath.

Jose Sanchez made use of the delay at Pueblo to institute further inquiries regarding his missing cousin, but nowhere could he find the slightest trace. Jose swore an oath that he would learn the truth if it required his whole lifetime, and if it should turn out that his saluted relative had indeed met with foul play—well! Jose told his friends that could judge, by looking at him, the sort of man he was. He proudly displayed Longoria's revolver, and called it his cousin's little avenger. The weapon had slain many; it had a duty still to perform, so he said.

Jose intended to confide his purpose to Mrs. Austin, but when it came time to start for Las Palmas there was a fourth passenger in the automobile,

"Do you still believe in chivalry?" Alaire turned her eyes upon the questioner, and there were no girlish illusions in them. "Do you?" she queried, with a faint curl of her lip.

"Why—yes." She shook her head. "Men have changed. Nowadays they are all selfish and sordid. But—I shouldn't generalize, for I'm a notorious man-hater, you know."

He nodded, whereupon she eyed him speculatively. "Let us see. You are a man—how far would you go for the woman you loved?"

"The limit!"

Mrs. Austin frowned at this light-seeming answer. "I suppose you mean that you would make any sacrifice?"

"Yes; that's it."

"Would you give up the woman herself, if you considered it your duty?"

"No. There couldn't be any duty higher than love—to my way of thinking. But you shouldn't take me as a specimen. I'm not a good representative of my sex."

"I think you are a very good one," Alaire said quietly, and Dave realized that no flattery was intended.

Despite the rough roads, they made fair time, and the wiles of cactus and scrawny brush rolled swiftly past. The morning sun swung higher, and by midday the metal of the automobile had become as hot as a frying pan. They stopped at various goat ranches to inquire about Adolfo Urbina, and at noon halted beside a watercourse for lunch.

Dave was refilling the radiator when he overheard Jose in conversation with Mrs. Austin.

"Nowhere a trace!" the horse-breaker was saying. "No one has seen him. Poor Rosa Morales will die of a broken heart."

Alaire explained to her guest: "Jose is worried about his cousin Panfilo. It seems he has disappeared."

"So! You are Panfilo's cousin?" Dave eyed the Mexican with new interest.

"Yes!" "You remember the man?" Alaire went on. "He was with that fellow you arrested at the water-hole."

"Oh, yes. I remember him." With steady fingers Dave shook some tobacco into a cigarette paper. He felt Alaire's eyes upon him, and they were eloquent of inquiry, but he did not meet them.

Jose frowned. "No one at La Feria has seen him, and in Pueblo there was not a word. It is strange."

"Panfilo was in bad company when I saw him," Law finished rolling his cigarette and lit it, still conscious of Alaire's questioning gaze. "He may have had trouble."

Dave smiled absently. "There's a wonderful book about a near-sighted old Frenchman who saw a cat big as a penguin island. He saw the big birds walking around, and thought they were human beings."

"How did you happen to read Anatole France?" Alaire asked, with a sharp stare of surprise.

The ranger stirred, but he did not meet her eyes. "Well," said he, "I read most anything I can get. A fellow meets up with strange books just like he meets up with strange people."

"Not books like—that." There was a brief silence. "Mr. Law, you went to school in the East, didn't you?"

Where? The man hesitated, at which she insisted, "Where?"

Dave reluctantly turned upon her a pair of eyes in the depths of which there lurked the faintest twinkle.

"Cornell," said he.

Alaire gasped. After a while she remarked, stiffly, "You have a peculiar sense of humor."

"Now don't be offended," he begged her. "I'm a good deal like a chameleon; I unconsciously change my color to suit my surroundings. When we first met I saw that you took me for one thing, and since then I've tried not to show you your mistake."

"Why did you let me send you those silly books? I dare say you've had a fine laugh at my expense?"

"No!" gravely denied the man. They had come to an arroyo containing a considerable stream of muddy water, and Law was forced to get out to plug the carburetor and stop the oil intake to the crank-case. This done, Alaire ran the machine through on the self-starter. When Jose's "Carabinas" and Dolores' sturds had subsided, and they were again under way, Mrs. Austin, it seemed, had regained her good humor.

"You will receive no more of my favorite authors," she told Dave, spitefully. "I'll keep them to read, myself."

"Do you still believe in chivalry?" Alaire turned her eyes upon the questioner, and there were no girlish illusions in them. "Do you?" she queried, with a faint curl of her lip.

"Why—yes." She shook her head. "Men have changed. Nowadays they are all selfish and sordid. But—I shouldn't generalize, for I'm a notorious man-hater, you know."

ANN ARBOR—The dental college of the University of Michigan will offer a course in dental surgery for year to all its graduates and students during the last two weeks in the college year. The course will be absolutely free. Michigan, it is thought, the first college to offer such a course, and to make it free to all alumni and students.

MILAN—A man by the name of Baker carried big ads in large city papers endeavoring to interest the unwary in a co-operative farming scheme, promising the impossible in return for what money he could secure from his victims. He gave his address as Milan, but he's been hanging out in Adrian for some time. In addition to the scheme above related he has been caught in other shady transactions and is now in limbo.

DOUBT DISAPPEARS

No One in Chelsea Who Has a Bad Back Should Ignore This Double Proof.

Does your back ever ache? Have you suspected your kidneys? Backache is sometimes kidney ache. With it may come dizzy spells, Sleepless nights, tired, dull days, Distressing bladder disorders, Doan's Kidney Pills have been endorsed by thousands.

Are recommended here at home. You have read Chelsea proof. Read now the Chelsea sequel.

Renewed testimony: tested by time. Mrs. W. D. Arnold, E. Middle St., Chelsea, says: "I suffered greatly from dull, nagging backaches and distressing pains across my kidneys. My kidneys gave me a great deal of annoyance. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Fenn's Drug Store, and they helped me wonderfully. They banished the pain in my back and regulated my kidneys."

Over Three Years Later Mrs. Arnold said: "My cure has been permanent and I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Arnold has twice publicly recommended. Foster-McIlburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.
