IN THE WATER SYSTEM

The Main From Wells to Reservoir is Too Small to Furnish Enough Water.

The fire in Freeman & Runciman's store Monday night did not get much of a start before it was discovered, but if it had started later in the night there is no telling where it would have ended, as there was a a serious shortage of water in the village reservoir.

On account of the extreme hot weather there had been such a demand for water that the tank was nearly empty.

There is plenty of water at the wells to take care of every demand that could be made upon them. The trouble is in the size of the main from the wells to the reservoir, which is too small. This is a matter that may easily prove serious, and should be looked after and remedied by the common council before it is too late.

For this, to her, was home-coming: she was returning, after a long sojourn in a strange far country, to the land which held first place in her heart.

To her immense relief there was no trace of hostillty in the greeting which Rodinan accorded her betrothed.

Mr. Pillsbury had grown up in more than physique in the course of ten years. The ability to mask his feelings with impenetrable dissimulation was only one of the accomplishments which he had acquired, and which fitted him so admirably to command at once the friendship and respect of the small army of employees who looked up to him as the local representative of the Channing interests-as, in short, rived from the East this afternoon." what Rodman Pilisbury really was, Petria's viceroy, ruling dominions of land and men-broader, if less populous, than many a European principal- your vigitance. While the hacienda slept in peace, that primitive oxcart pursued laboriously its patient, creaking way across the bridged arroyo and the desert country beyond toward a far-flung line of mountains which loomed against the horizon in serrated array like the Distancing the oxeart as fast as willing hoofs could run, a horseman who, leaving the station aimlessly shortly after the departure of Patria's party for the haclenda, had spurred his steed to its swiftest pace as soon as he felt secure from observation, arrived in the early evening at a straggling row of adobe huts which figured as the nearest Mexican village.

Twilight was still bright when he dropped from his fagged animal and sought one of the dwellings which wore a slightly less unkempt appearance than its fellows.

In the doorway of this hut, somewhat contemptuously watching the evolutions of a squad of listless Mexican infantry in the village plaza, stood a gentleman in the field uniform of an officer of the Japanese army.

Hearing the thud of harried footsteps in the deep dust of the street, the Japanese turned toward the approaching horse an expectant eye. "Well, Gomez?" he said in Spanish,

Fearing lest she be caught in this rush of horsemen, she jumped down and led her mount into the shelter of the roadside trees, then scouted on afoot for a little distance to a point whence she commanded a view of the fork in the roads.

"SKYLINE" LOGGING LATES

Modern Methods of Western Camps Said to Be Cheaper and More Effi-cient Then the Old Ways.

In the logging camps of Oregon and Washington a "Skyline" method of logging is proving much cheaper and more efficient than the former method of dragging out logs from the forest by donkey engine and cables operating on the ground, says Popular Mechanles Magazine. The skyline plan is to run a cable through blocks or pulleys suspended at a great height on giant trees, so as to form a sort of trolley line by which the logs are holsted into the air and then hauled over the tops of ordinary trees and other obstructions to the rollway, where they are oaded aboard freight cars for ship-

The donkey engine which operates the skyline has five drums, including two for main lines and two for trip lines. The top cable, from which the log is suspended, is one of the main lines, while the other is used to haul the log. In operation the top cable is lowered with its block, or trolley, directly over the log to be picked up; it is then pulled taut, raising the log With it by means of a "choker," or steel tongs. In the air a log can, of course, be moved much faster than on the ground.

"Oh-h! This is frightful," Alaire gasped. "I can't talk to you. Go-Let me go."

The man pondered for an instant, "Perhaps that would be better," he are unstrung. Very well! My affairs will have to wait. Take a few hours to think over what I have told you. When you have slept you will feel differently about me. You will meet me with a smile, ch?" He beamed hopefully.

"Sleep? You expect me to sleep?" "Please," he begged. "Beauty is like delicate flower, and sleep is the dew that freshens it. Believe me, you can rest in all security," for no one can come or go without my consent, You are cruel to postpone my delight; nevertheless, I yield to your feelings. But, star of my life, I shall dream of you, and of that little priest who waits with the key to Paradise in his hands."

He bowed over Alaire's cold fingers, then stood erect until she and Dolores had gone.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Priest From Monclova.

That was a night of terror for the women. Although Longorio's disci- valuables, his school closed; he himline was in some ways strict, in others it was extremely lax. From some miracle, During his flight toward the quarter his men had secured a supply of mescal, and, forgetful of Felipe's and finally Longorio had intercepted unhappy fate, they rendered the hours hideous. There were singing and quarreling, and a shot or two sounded from the direction of the outbuildings. Morning found both Alaire and Dolores sadly overwrought. But they felt some relief upon learning that the general had been unexpectedly summoned from his bed at daylight, and had ridden to the telegraph office. Profiting by his absence, Alaire ventured from her room, racking her brain to devise some means of escape. But soldiers were everywhere; they lolled around the servants' quarters; they lozed in the shade of the ranch buildings, recovering from the night's debauch; and an armed sentinel who paced the hacienda road gave evidence that despite their apparent carelessness, they had by no means relaxed their vigilance. A round of the premises convinced Alaire that the place was actually guarded, and showed her the futility of trying to slip away. She realized, too, that even if she managed to do so, her plight would be little better. For how could she hope to cover the hundred miles between La Feria and the Rio Grande when every peen was an enemy? She was standing in one of the open. sashless windows when her former protector, the old lieutenant, bade her good morning and paused to smoke a cigarette. "Well, it was a great night, wasn't it?" he began. "And we have great news this morning. We are going to fight you gringos,"

"I hope not." "Yes; it will probably go hard with rou. Tell me, this city of Washington is a fine city, and very rich, is it not?"

"Oh, yes." "It's full of loot, eh? Especially the president's palace? That is good. One can never believe all one hears." "Why do you ask?" Alaire was cu-

"Surely he wouldn't harm you?" The father shrugged, "What am I? An obscure priest. Many of my brothers are buried in Mexico. However, I shall do as you wish."

As the day wore on Alaire realized even more clearly the fact that she was Longorio's prisoner. His men, in spite of their recent debauch, kept very good watch over her, and it was plain that they would obey his orders, no matter how extreme. It occurred to her finally that he was staying away purposely, in order to give her a fuller appreciation of her position-so that she might beat her wings against the cage until exhausted.

Afternoon came, then evening, and still Longorio did not return. Father O'Malley could give scant comfort;

Half distracted, Alaire roamed how to fight. If it were not for Texas, through the house, awaiting her cap of them were drunk and wouldn't be we would have the United States at our mercy." Well, Longorio is found herself yearning for him with adobe walls of the house, yet sudden a great one for schemes; he is talking a yearning utterly new. His love had over the telegraph with somebody at supported her through those miserable days at Las Palmas, but now it was a torture; she called his name wildly, passionately. He knew her whereabouts and her peril-why did he not come? Then, more calmly, she asked herself what he, or what anyone, could do for her. How could she look for succor when two nations were at war?

Night had come before she finally gave up and acknowledged the hopelessness of her situation. She had fought bravely, but with darkness her fears grew blacker. She was on the verge of her first breakdown, when, in the early dusk outside, she heard voices and the stamping of horses' hoofs. The sounds were muffled by the heavy wooden shutters she had taken pains to close and bar, but they told her Longorio had returned. Since It was futile to deny him entrance, she waited where she was. Old Pancho's voice sounded outside; then there came a knock upon the door of the room in which she stood. "Come in," she said tensely.

The lieutenant thrust his head in ind, removing his hat, announced, There is someone here to see Gencho's aid. Alaire begged him to fetch eral Longorio on important business He says you will do."

Leaf Disease Strips Foliage From Trees in Many Orchards.

LIME-SULPHUR IS REMEDY

Applied as Dilute Spray, It Will Control "Leaf Spot," Plant Pathologist Declares.

By DR. G. H. COONS, Plant Pathologist Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lansing, Mich.-Bare cherry and plum trees, flying scarce as many leaves as Eve was wont to wear, can be found in numerous Michigan orchards this season-though the condition is more or less an annual one. These trees, stripped as clean as a whistle of their leaves in extreme for building should be made early, for cases, are the victims of a disease known as "leaf spot." It gives warn- materials, and still more allowance ing of its unwelcome presence early in the season by causing the foliage to struction. become yellow, or take on a ragged, shothole appearance.

But before discussing remedies, a few words about the nature of the trouble may not be amiss. "Leaf spot" is caused by a parasitic fungus. This fungus is a tiny plant so small that it requires a microscope to bring out the height also is a great advantage from details of its form, and like all parasites, it steals its living from its host. Because of its small size the fungus is able to enter the plant through the leaves, and when it has done this it grows in the tissues and produces brown, dead spots. Sometimes these spots become dry and brittle and are eventually whipped out by the wind, making the leaf look as though it had been peppered with a shotgun. In teenth of an inch in diameter are formed on the leaves, causing them to turn yellow as a result of the invasion. White or pinkish, gummy masses may be noticed. These are made up of the small, seed-like reproductive bodies of the fungus-the spores. When this the water and are splashed about, lodging on new leaves and in turn infecting them. This explains why the disease is most severe in seasons of abundant rainfall.

The general effect of the parasite is to cause a "casting" or dropping of the leaves. Upon these It lives through work in the following spring. But even if the leaves are not entirely destroyed by the parasite, they are great- ity 68 tons. ly crippled. As all the starch and sugar found in the fruit is manufactured in the leaves, anything which damages them cuts down the fruit crop. "Leaf spot" commonly appears realize the loss which it brings about, for its greatest effect is not felt by the tree until the next season. This following crop is always mediocre, and the fruit is liable to ripen unevenly and be small and poorly flavored. Another effect is to render trees which have lost their leaves very susceptible to winter injury, for a tree which goes into the cold months poorly nourished and without sugar stored in its twigs will not resist a hard winter.

But fortunately the disease is readfly controlled by summer sprays of dilute lime-sulphur. The common commercial lime-sulphur, used in the proportion of one part to forty parts of water, is usually employed in Michigan orchards and is applied according to the following schedule:

First-Just before the buds open, Second-Immediately after the blossoms fall

Third-Ten days or two weeks later. Fourth-Every two or three weeks, depending upon the weather conditions, throughout the growing season. In the first two sprays 21/2 to 3 pounds of arsenate of lead should be added to every 50 gallons of spray. This poison controls curculio. With Japanese varieties of plums, selfboiled lime-sulphur mixture should be substituted for the commercial lime-

In addition to this control measure, plowing under the leaves from the preceding crop, before infection of the new leaves in the spring can take sanitary measure and gets rid of most of the sources of infection. NEED IS FOR MORE SILOS

Late Season May Mean Much Frosted Corn This Fall-Can Be Saved in Siles.

By PROF. H. H. MUSSELMAN, Department of Farm Mechanics, Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lansing, Mich. - Conditions prevalent this season may lead those Michigan farmers who haven't already acquired one of these aids to progressive agriculture to do more thinking about silos than has been their custom heretofore. In many sections of the state corn was seeded late and it is a week or more behind schedule. A favorable summer and fall may counteract these delays, but if Michigan is not so blessed-and of all things the weather is least to be trusted-there is a chance that much of the crop may be caught by the frost or of necessity harvested before it is ripe. In either emergency there is nothing better than a silo to reduce losses to a minimum. Immature or frosted corn can be cared for in no better way than by storing in a well built silo.

If you are considering putting up one of these structures, preparations considerable time is required to secure must be made for the work of con-

This question naturally presents itself: "How big a silo should be built?" With the increasing use of the masonry silo, the height has been gradually extended. This can be safely done, because the heavier type silos are less liable to blow over. The increased the standpoint of capacity. It may be stated that a silo 40 feet in depth has nearly three times the capacity of a silo 20 feet in depth. The increased capacity is due to the greater packing secured with the increased height.

In calculating the size of silo it is customary to allow 35 pounds per day for each 1,000-pound dairy cow for a period of six to eight months. For a period of seven months this requires practically 31/2 tons for each animal. If ten animals are to be fed, a silo of at least 40 tons capacity will be required. To prevent spoilage of silage at least two inches must be fed off each day in warm weather. Increasing the height of silo, therefore. rather than its diameter, is of advantage in that it increases the depth which may be fed daily. As a rule a silo may be profitably used with ten cows. It is not advisable to build with a diameter of less than ten feet. A good rule for height is to make the height at least three times the diameter. Thus it will be seen that a 10 by 30 foot, 12 by 35 foot, or 14 by 40 foot will be about the right proportions to build. 1 Remembering that each full-grown animal requires about 31/2 tons of silage per year and that the silo should be at least 30 feet high, the size of silo may be very easily determined. The approximate capacity of silos of varying diameters and heights is as follows: Diameter 10 feet-Height 40 feet. capacity 70 tons; height 35 feet, capacty 58 tons; height 30 feet, capacity ic tons; height 25 feet, capacity 35

Standard Requires That Dozen Must Weigh at Least Twenty-Four Ounces.

By PROF. C. H. BURGESS, Department of Poultry Husbandry, Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lausing, Mich.-The old notion that "an egg is an egg," and being such must be no more, has fallen into disrepute in city markets. If eggs are shipped into a city of any size they are subjected to examination and classified into different grades. This is a fact with which many poultrymen are well acquainted, but there are others perhaps who are still unaware that such grading is practiced. First of all, the eggs must be up to weight. East of the Mississippi a dozen of eggs must weigh 24 ounces. Next is color. Some markets demand a certain color. It is not in the mind of the writer to enter into a discussion of the merits and demerits of this point. The nutritive value of white eggs and brown eggs is the same. New York markets, for instance, demand the white egg; the Boston markets demand the brown. A 26-ounce egg is an ideal egg. If a dozen exceeds this amount they are hard to ship without breaking. The eggs must also be fresh. To be classed as "firsts" they must be newly laid, must be clean, and must have a strong. smooth shell. The air cell must be small, and the egg must be free from cracks. "Checks" are fresh eggs which possess all of the qualities above stated but are cracked. They must not leak, place, is strongly advised. This is a however. "Leakers" are like the above except that they have lost part of their contents.

DETROIT WOMAN GAINS 15 POUNDS

Neither Health Resorts Nor Serum Treatments Gave Her Any Relief.

HAD TO GIVE UP HOME

"I Honestly Believe Tanlac Has Saved My Life," Says Mrs. Matilda

"I have gained fifteen pounds since taking Tanlac and I honestly believe the medicine saved my life," said Mrs. Matilda Simich, whose husband is a trimmer for the Studebaker Motor company, residing at 21 Fremont place, Detroit, Mich. "I suffered with rheumatism and stomach trouble four years," continued Mrs. Simich, "and for the past sixteen months, I spent most of the time in bed with my arms and limbs so swollen I couldn't move to put the cover over myself. My husband took me to Mount Clemens and I had the full treatment of twenty-four baths and came home in as bad shape as when I left. I also had a serum treatment, with the same result. We spent so much money trying to get me well, that we had to give up our home at 1282 Fisher avenue, to meet the expenses, and nothing helped me any. "One day my husband suggested that I try Tanlac and I did it just to please him. Well, I have now finished my seventh bottle and my improvement has been so remarkable that actually my friends hardly recognize me when they see me on the street. I have gained fifteen pounds and am like a new woman in every way. I now get around as much as I please and tomorrow I am going to a picnic at Sugar island, and my husband and children are delighted over my recovery.
