TWO CHELSEA WOMEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Leap From Automobile Just As Speeding M. C. Train Crushes It.

Mrs. R. A. Sanborn and Mrs. H. D. Litteral narrowly escaped a terrible death yesterday afternoon when the former's runabout was struck by a fast Michigan Central passenger train on the "east" Guthrie crossing, 2½ miles west of Chelsea. Only their quick action in abandoning the car saved their lives. The automobile was completely wrecked.

The two women were en route to Mrs. Litteral's old home, the Michael Schenk farm in West Sylvan, at the time of the accident. Mrs. Sanborn slowed the car down as they approached the crossing and both looked for trains and saw none were in sight. They then started to cross the tracks, when suddenly Mrs. Litteral saw an eastbound train approaching. They were then nearly on the eastbound track and the car was under way and moving about five or six miles an hour. Mrs. Litteral jumped from the side of the car and Mrs. Sanborn, who was driving, believes she must have vaulted over the rear of the seat, the top being down. Instantly the car was struck and crumpled into a mass of twisted steel and splintered woodwork.

The train which hit the car is a Grand Rapids—Detroit passenger known as No. 108 and due in Chelsea at 2:17 p. m. The Wolverine follows it six minutes later. Both trains were running several minutes late yesterday.

The locomotive of No. 108 stopped about a half mile east of the crossing, opposite the Cavanaugh lake road fork, where the wrecked automobile was lifted from the pilot. It was necessary to flag westbound train No. 31, as some of the debris overhung the westbound track.

Mrs. Sanborn lost her pocket-book, but it was found by some automobile tourists and returned to her. Her watch, at first reported lost, was later found at her home, West Middle and Grant streets.

A beautiful library table was presented to them. The best wishes of their friends go with them to their new home.

MRS. L. K. HADLEY.

Mrs. L. K. Hadley died Sunday night about 12 o'clock at the family home in Lyndon. She had been in her usual health and had attended church service in the morning. She suffered a stroke of apoplexy while at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. E. Clark, who lives just across the road from the Hadley home, early in the evening and never regained consciousness.

Mrs. Hadley was born in Livingston county, her maiden name being Sarah J. Buhl, January 5, 1847, and was 70 years, seven months and 15 days of age. She was united in marriage with Lyman K. Hadley in 1869. For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Hadley resided in Inoco township, Livingston county, but had resided in Lyndon since 1884.

She is survived by her husband and three children, Mrs. L. E. Clark of Lyndon, and Mrs. Charles Hart-suff and Emmett Hadley, of Unadilla; also by one sister, Mrs. Harriet Smith of Corona, California, and one brother, George Buhl of Unadilla.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at one o'clock from the house, Rev. Ellis conducting the service. Interment at Unadilla.

DRAFTED MAN HID FIVE WEEKS IN STRAW STACK

Found Near Webberville, Sunday, in Pitiable Condition and Died Next Day.

Just five weeks after he disappeared from sight Frank Milet of Genoa township, Livingston county, was found in a straw stack near Webberville, Sunday morning in a helpless condition, more dead than alive. He was found by a man passing through the field and taken to the McPherson farm and given nourishment and medical attention, but pneumonia set in and he died Monday night about ten o'clock. He was 26 years of age.

Five weeks ago Frank Milet of Genoa township was drafted and called to Howell to be examined. He put his horse in the ten cent barn and reported at Dr. Brown's office and as his number had not yet been reached he was asked to come back about eleven o'clock. He went away and that was the last heard of him until Sunday morning when he was found almost famished in the straw stack at Webberville.

After taking a little nourishment he came to and talked with his mother, Mrs. John Milet, and that conversation revealed something as to his mental condition.

The straw stack was about twenty rods from Grand River road and near by was a wind mill. He told his mother that he got all the water he wanted but the last time he was at the well he could not connect the windmill as he was too weak. He said he did not suffer so much from hunger after the first few days, that he got some fruit and that he tried to but could not walk, and he did not dare to ask any one to bring him as the officers might get him, and besides he was ashamed to return after doing as he had done.

It appears that he went up a ladder and made a hole in the top of the stack where he hid and he probably went out for water after dark as no one seems to have seen him. The last few days he made his bed beside the stack as he was too weak to climb the ladder and that is where he was found. The money that he had when he went away was on his person when found.

BURGLARS IN PINCKNEY.

The stores of Murphy & Jackson, Chas. Ingersoll and the Teeple Hdw. Co. were broken into Wednesday night, but nothing of any great value taken. The store of Mr. Ingersoll was entered through the cellarway, where $4.00 in cash was taken and a large quantity of ice cream and soft drinks were done away with. Entrance was made to Murphy & Jackson's store through a window, a pry from Ingersoll's store being used. Here a number of pairs of shoes were taken, and it is thought some cigars. In the Teeple Hdw. store the back window was smashed in and the safe was open and the drawers all out on the counter, but as there was no money left in the safe, the would-be burglars failed to realize anything from this source at all.—Dispatch.

DEXTER TOWNSHIP.

Three white frosts, then a rain.

Corn, beans, potatoes and buckwheat on the low flat land were injured some but on the upland the effects of the frost are hardly noticeable.

Supervisor Gilbert Madden, with the help of some of his neighbors, drew his new silo home from Chelsea, Monday.

William Valentine of Hamburg was at K. H. Wheeler's, Tuesday, to buy a brood sow.

Mr. and Mrs. K. H. Wheeler were in Jackson, Wednesday, attending the Jackson county fair. They report a big attendance and a better fair than the state fair.

Washtenaw county has added another thousand dollar herd of Holstein cows to its tax roll. This time it is A. E. Satten and S. S. Stout of Manchester. These cows were purchased at parties near Howell and taken home last Monday.

The Baptist Ladies Aid met with Mrs. John Harper, Wednesday afternoon.

Gerhart Lesser was the first to begin wheat sowing last Tuesday.

Bernard Doody was showing a real estate man around the county last week. They took in west of Ann Arbor to the Base line.

Experience the Best Teacher.

It is generally admitted that experience is the best teacher, but should we not make use of the experience of others as well as our own? The experience of a thousand persons is more to be depended upon than that of one individual. Many thousands of persons have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs and colds with the best results, which shows it to be a thoroughly reliable preparation for those diseases. Try it. It is prompt and effectual and pleasant to take.—Adv.

One of the most effective forms of advertising is in the "liner" or classified column where an investment of a few cents is certain to give prompt results. Tribune liner ads are always run in the same position on the front page where they are easy to find and invariably catch the eye. Only five cents the line for first insertion, 2½ cents the line for each subsequent insertion. Next time you want to buy something, or have something for sale or rent, try a Tribune liner.

THE GIRL WHO HAD NO GOD

BORODAY, THE RUSSIAN,
HAS AN UNCOMFORTABLE INTERVIEW WITH THE POLICE CHIEF.

Synopsis—For years old Hilary Kingston lived with his daughter, Elinor, in a beautiful home on a hill in the suburban village of Woffingham. The neighbors knew nothing about the establishment, except that the father was quite wealthy, and the daughter very good looking and gentle. In reality Kingston was head of an anarchist band, composed of Huff, Boroday, Talbot and Lethbridge, that robbed the rich and gave to the poor and oppressed. One day Old Hilary was shot dead, and the course of life changed abruptly for his daughter. The Rev. Mr. Ward, a young bachelor, began to take an uncommon interest in Elinor.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

Ward had risen. He towered far above Elinor. Because of his heavy shoulders, he never looked his full height. Boroday, in the corridor, stole a moment from his anxieties to find the young clergyman every inch of a man, and to throw him the grudging admiration of defeated middle-age for youth and vibrant life.

"Then I shall not send for the doctor?"

"Please, no."

"Is there anything at all that I can do?"

"Do the—the police know about this?"

"Surely. I suppose you have been told what happened."

"They will tell me nothing."

There was a car coming up the hill. That would be it. Boroday eased his aching arm. He did not dare a sling, but the hand was thrust in the pocket of his coat. If only the hemorrhage did not start again! He braced himself and watched.

"It was a robbery, you know that?" said Ward, in the library. He picked his words carefully. "As I got the story, a taxicab on its way to the bank was held up near the Record office. Your father had stepped to the curb to hail the taxi, and—it happened then, a—stray bullet from one of the bandits' guns."

Boroday, eyes on the car, heard the statement, and, with the chief coming up the steps from the road to the garden, took the time to repudiate it.

"Pardon!" he said. "It was not a weapon in the hands of the bandits. It was the revolver of the bank messenger."

Ward turned in surprise. Boroday's eyes were fixed on Elinor's, with reinsurance in their depths. The assistant rector was not subtle, but he had a curious feeling of something behind all this. He was uncomfortable.

"I trust," he said earnestly, "that these various outrages will be at an end now. Surely the police—"

"Possibly." The anarchist's gaze wandered to the garden, where even then the chief was making his way toward the house. "Of course, these bandits are trained men of unusual intelligence. If the police were of intelligence to cope with them—"

"Yes?"

"They would not be on the force, at meager salaries and petty graft. They would be—he shrugged his shoulders—"bandits themselves, very possibly."

Ward left after that—left with an uncomfortable feeling of having got nowhere. He was convinced of one thing, death, which for him was an open gateway, was for this girl a closed and fastened door. And he knew something else. No other woman had ever so profoundly impressed him as this girl who without hope in her grief met it with a high head and courageous eyes.

He felt a certain comfort in one thing. Elinor had made a concession, and Hilary Kingston, lavish giver to the parish poor, was to be buried from Saint Jude's.

The chief met Mr. Ward on the terrace and took off his hat. Boroday, in the dim hall, felt a certain sense of content. Nothing could have been more auspicious, could have set his stage better for his little drama, than the presence of the young clergyman. The whole scene gained tone, decorum.

The chief's visit was short. They had followed the bandits' car and lost it, and finding himself in the neighborhood—

"Be assured," he said to Elinor, in his best manner, "that we'll not rest until this thing is cleared up. The community—the cleared his throat—"the community will not lose one of its best citizens without a violent protest."

With the coroner he went up the stairs and into old Hilary's room. The chief glanced about while the hasty examination was being made.

"Nice room," he said. "But a jolly lot of good it does the old gentleman now! Nice little girl downstairs, too. I've seen that chap in the hall somewhere."

The coroner drew the sheet over old Hilary's peaceful face.

"The preacher? They all look alike. It's the vest and the collar."

"The other man, with the accent. German, I take it, or—Russian."

Boroday was waiting for them at the foot of the staircase. In the library was a tray, with drinks and sandwiches. The shades had been lowered.

The chief ate and drank. And as often as he raised his glass he looked at the Russian over it. At last:

"Haven't we met somewhere, Mr. —"

"Boroday. I rather think not."

"You remind me of someone—I'll place you, or the person you resemble, pretty soon. I have a slow mind. It's like an Alredale dog; it's a long time getting started, but when it begins it hangs on like the devil."

The drinks were cold, and the house cool. The prospect of starting out in the heat and dust did not allure the two men. Sitting there at his ease, the chief ran over the points of the outrage.

"In several ways," he observed comfortably, the affair resembles one that happened in St. Louis several years ago. There's the same quality of audacity—and there are other things."

Quite suddenly a light came into his eyes.

"Ah!" he said, bending forward toward Boroday. "I told you I'd get it. It was in St. Louis I saw you!"

Their glances clashed, the chief's intent, the Russian's cool, amused.

"The dog," said Boroday, "holds on well, but—to the wrong throat."

"You have never been in St. Louis?"

"Never."

CHAPTER IV.

Elinor lived alone after the funeral. Henriette, who had now a chance to practice her favorite vice of thrift, was for sending away the other servants.

"I can manage," she said. "For all you eat—"

But Elinor protested.

"I shall want to keep up the Saturday dinners. Let things stay as they are for a time."

It had been old Hilary's custom to have such members of the band as Huff, following Elinor out onto the terrace, told her he loved her.

The starlight above, and those nearer stars that outlined the streets below, threw a soft radiance over her. She was dressed in white; old Hilary had disliked mourning garments. Elinor was looking down into the village. The great spire of Saint Jude's towered above the town. Huff, young and ardent, thrilled to the girl's presence close beside him.

"You are very aloof tonight," he said. She smiled up at him.

"Not that surely. I was only thinking."

"Of what?"

"Oh, of different things—of the people down there in their houses—their lives, the things they believe; we think they are narrow, but I wonder, after all, if you and I, who believe none of those things, are not the narrow ones."

Huff was not subtle. Possibly he would not have understood, had not the Saint Jude's chimes rung just then.

"Symbols like that seem to mean so much to them," said Elinor, and fell silent.

In the warm silence, Huff felt for and found her hand.

"All this time, when I couldn't see you," he said unsteadily, "I've been thinking of you here alone, and in trouble. Sometimes I thought I couldn't stand it, that I'd have to come out and see you, if only for five minutes."

"I have always been more or less lonely. Sometimes I think if I had been sent away to school, had known other girls, it would have been better. I have never had any friends—except you, and the others."

Huff released her hand and faced her.

"I don't want to be your friend, Elinor. I want to be much more."

She was rather shocked at first. She stood, looking up at him, her lips slightly parted.

"? You—you—want—"

"I love you. I want you to marry me, dear."

There was no doubt of the boy's sincerity. It rang true. He stood with his arms out, and after a moment she went into them. Except for the father who was gone, this was the first love that had come into her life. She took it hungrily. In the starlight she led up her lips like a child for his kiss....

thinking about it ever since—for some time. The first thing, of course, is whether we are going to hang together or not."

Talbot had rather a weird sense of humor. He suggested that the word "hang" be changed to "remain."

"We've been doing well. We'll do all right again, too, as soon as this thing blows over. It was unlucky, but we've been pretty fortunate. Now we can do one of two things. For Elinor's sake, I suggest the first."

"And that is—?" Elinor's voice was unsteady.

"Send Boroday to Paris to dispose of your jewels. Then get a conservative lawyer to invest the money."

"And after that?"

"Forget you ever knew any of us."

Huff, across the table from her, went white, but said nothing.

"You said there was an alternative?"

Elinor was white, too. The room was profoundly still.

"To keep on as we are at present, with you, Elinor, acting in your father's stead, receiving and transmitting messages, and—keeping the vault in charge."

Boroday was on his feet in a moment, protesting. He would take the jewels and send them abroad. It was risky, but it could be done. But this outrageous arrangement that had been suggested—

"What we are, we are by choice," he finished. "You have never had a choice, and now it is given to you. For God's sake, child, go away now, while you may."

Elinor's reply, when it came, was unanswerable.

"Where could I go? I know in all the world only you four, and old Henriette, and a governess of mine who has gone into a convent in France. I shall stay here with you all."

So it was settled.

That was an eventful evening, with Elinor, misty-eyed, moving into her father's chair at the table, and the bare swearing the simple oath of allegiance which held them together. And when they had moved from the dining room, Walter Huff, following Elinor out onto the terrace, told her he loved her.

The starlight above, and those nearer stars that outlined the streets below, threw a soft radiance over her. She was dressed in white; old Hilary had disliked mourning garments. Elinor was looking down into the village. The great spire of Saint Jude's towered above the town. Huff, young and ardent, thrilled to the girl's presence close beside him.

Elinor, the Beautiful, finds solace in an ardent love affair, but her life is complicated by circumstances of appalling proportions.

Aerial Postal Service.

Plans are now on foot in Europe to utilize for postal service, after the war, a great number of the airplanes which the various nations have acquired for military purposes, as well as the services of the many skilled aviators who have been trained since the war began. In France, a large civilian committee, of which M. d'Aubigny of the chamber of deputies is chairman, has had this subject under consideration since the first of the year. Similar plans are being discussed in Spain, and the Spanish minister of posts has begun negotiations with a view to securing some of the surplus aircraft of France for use in the Spanish postal service.—Scientific American.

Dutiful.

Our idea of a dutiful daughter crystallized into definite form yesterday when we saw a blooming young matron of this neighborhood stand by with an air of quiet resignation and exemplary patience while her mother did undoubtedly kindly intended things to the baby.—Columbus (O.) Journal

Fine Example of Tailored Suit

In the styles so far presented for fall and winter there are no radical departures from those of the passing season. Usually when the time comes to buy new clothes, the attention of the feminine public is almost wholly centered on incoming styles. But just now other absorbing interests are taking so much time that women are best suited with conservative ideas in dress. They are readjusting their lives in order to become helpful in time of war.

The most noticeable difference between the tailored suit for fall and those of last spring is in the length of coats. In coat suits the coats are longer. But a plain three-quarter length even if it did service last year, will find itself much at home among the plain suits just turned out. Besides added length the fall coats present a new feature in placing of trimmings. In many of them decoration appears only at the sides of the coat, where short bands of fur or braid or stitching find a place.

Soft surfaces, like wool velours, and quiet colors, are characteristic of the season. Colors most popular are those classed as "the fur colors" including taupe, gray, brown castor, beige. Dark wine and the shades of amethyst in the richest tones relieve a range that would otherwise be too grave. Dark blue is good as always.

One of the new fall suits is shown in the picture and is a model which looks well in any of the popular wool materials. The skirt has a panel with two plaits at each side down the back, which correspond to plaits in the coat. It is otherwise plain.

The coat is semitailored with two straps of the material across the back at the waistline. Below these is a straight panel like that in the skirt. A panel finished with three rows of braid at the bottom is set in at each side below a long side body which fastens over it with a button.

The pointed muller collar is a new development of this admirable and popular style in collars. From every standpoint this is a fine example among well-tailored suits.

The performance of the Canadian soldiers in the great war will reflect glory on their country and race, as long as history lasts. But their record is matched by that of the women of Canada who have thrown themselves heart and soul into war work of all kinds. They have shown energy and endurance and bravery equal to that of their men. There is no calculating the value of the services they have given and the sacrifices they have made.

The same disposition to help shows itself among women all over this country. There are few among us so dense as to fail to see that it is disgraceful to be a slacker in times like these.

The government cannot do all the work that must be done for the soldiers and for those he leaves when he goes out to war. The soldier must be provided with clothing, socks, underwear, shirts, sweaters, mufflers and mitts, when on duty. These things wear out and must be replaced. Hospitals must be supplied with sleeping garments, slippers, bandages, dressings, and an endless stream of surgical supplies must flow into them, besides sheets, pillow cases and other things that are made by women. Comfort kits are to be furnished for every fighting man, and every one is entitled to messages from someone back home, whether he has relatives and friends there or not.

Prisoners and the men in hospitals are to be remembered with letters and provisions, when possible. And besides all this, for the soldiers, there is the work of looking after the welfare of the poorer families left at home.

All these things require the volunteer work of women, money and more money. Women are showing themselves equal to the task set them. The thing for each one to do is to decide what part of the service she will enter, and to enlist in that and serve as long as she is needed. Social distinctions count for nothing; all are working together in churches, clubs, societies, to furnish supplies of all kinds, money and to do the work at hand whatever it is.

Batik Work.

Batik work, which first made a general appearance in our shops a few months ago, has been adopted as we usually adopt good ideas, and may be used in the future. Various fabrics are now treated with this process, which produces such unusual and interesting designs, and batik flowers are a not unusual form of trimming on afternoon frocks.

Corded Yokes.

When making a smock or a blouse that is to have a corded yoke, it is advisable to finish the yoke completely and when attaching the blouse section simply slip the pieces under the corded part and stitch right above the cording. All you will then have to do is to trim the under edges and roll them up.

Huge Silk Bags Match Suits.

Huge moire or other silk bags, in suit colorings and mounted on frames are being carried by New York women. They are something entirely new in handbags. While not really knitting bags, they are long enough to hold the needles and large enough to every way.

Helps Keep Shape.

One of the striking midsummer suits of rajah silk shows a four-inch fringe of silk about the bottom of the coat. It not only is attractive to look at, but it is quite useful, for it is heavy enough to act as a weight to keep the skirt of the coat hanging straight and wrinkleless.

"MURDER ROOM" NOW IS BRIDAL CHAMBER

Man Acquitted of Killing Wife Returns With New Bride and Occupies House.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The room in which Mrs. Harriet Moss McDaniel was murdered a year ago became a bridal chamber last week.

Oscar D. McDaniel, former prosecuting attorney of Buchanan county, who was arrested and later acquitted of the charge of murdering his wife, returned this week from a honeymoon trip through the East with his new bride and occupied the house in which Mrs. McDaniel was murdered.

The marriage of McDaniel and Miss Zora Cook, twenty-one, one of the leading society girls of the city, last week, furnished another link in one of the most mysterious murder cases in the history of the country.

Beginning with the murder of Mrs. McDaniel a year ago, continuing with the trial and acquittal of her husband, then adding more tragedy when John E. Krueker shot and killed his wife and committed suicide, the case now takes a new turn with the marriage of the principal figure.

Mrs. Krueker had been called "the woman in the case." Miss Cook is the daughter of C. A. Cook, manager of the Bell Telephone company here. He was one of the two men arriving first at the McDaniel home after the murder.

Miss Cook gave testimony for McDaniel. Following the trial rumors that the pair were to be married were persistently denied by both. Miss Cook is a graduate of St. Joseph Central High School and is noted for her beauty and musical accomplishments.

Directly across a narrow hall from McDaniel's office is the office of Bart M. Lockwood—the man who as special prosecutor caused McDaniel's arrest on the murder charge.

KILLED MOSQUITO, BROKE HIS NOSE

Ole Bergstrom Has Prospered in Alaska Despite His Many Disasters.

OFFERS NO COMPLAINT

Thinks All Accidents Are Work of Providence—Seward Physician Only Surprised When He Shows Up Intact.

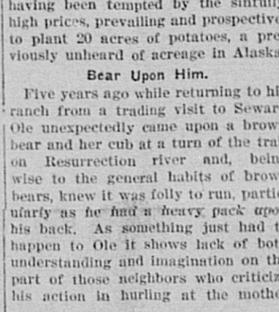

Seward, Alaska.—Ole Bergstrom is an intensely religious homesteader who has lived in Alaska for twenty years or more and prospered both financially and spiritually despite the fact that the misfortunes he has endured make Job's numerous troubles trivial and inconsequential by comparison.

The whole period of Ole's residence in Alaska is plastered over with a network of overlapping and interlocking ills such as cloudbursts, destructive windstorms, stock diseases, depredations of wild animals and other disastrous incidents which would drive the ordinary man to distraction, but which Ole accepts without complaint and in the firm conviction that they are visitations from Providence in punishment for sins of commission or omission; although if Ole ever committed a really wrongful act in his life it is unknown to his neighbors.

Recently a mosquito perched unexpectedly on Ole's nose, whereupon a well-directed blow from his ham-like palm effectually disembodied the spirit of the mosquito, but unfortunately broke Ole's nose. Dr. J. H. Romig, the physician in attendance, says that Ole will be about his business again in a few days, but with a nose robbed of its original symmetry, and a firm conviction that the peculiar misfortune was a direct rebuke from providence for his aversion—Ole having been tempted by the sinfully high prices, prevailing and prospective, to plant 20 acres of potatoes, a previously unheard of acreage in Alaska.

Bear Upon Him.

Five years ago while returning to his ranch from a trading visit to Seward Ole unexpectedly came upon a brown bear and her cub at a turn of the trail on Resurrection river and, being wise to the general habits of brown bears, knew it was folly to run, particularly as he had a heavy pack upon his back. As something just had to happen to Ole it shows lack of both understanding and imagination on the part of those neighbors who criticize his action in hurling at the mother bear the bundle of papers he was carrying in his hand. Ole merely beat the bear in the start of the affair by a shade, for, according to his own vision, the bear was upon him before his arm was lowered from the throw.

Some time later Harry Hoben and Jim Davis came along the trail and were greatly surprised when they finally discovered that Ole's heart was still beating, and more surprised an hour later when he regained consciousness. These two good Samaritans rigged up a kind of litter and packed Ole into Seward to Doctor Romig's office. Doctor Romig was not surprised at Ole's arrival; never is save when Ole arrives intact.

Possibly the most peculiar of the innumerable accidents which have befallen Ole occurred last summer on the ranch of Erick Lucas. Lucas was having some land cleared and Ole was on the job in pursuance of a work-swapping agreement with Neighbor Lucas, when he sank his double bladed axe in a spruce log in an effort to split it. The log did not split and the axe was so deeply imbedded that the handle was useless in removing it. Whereupon Ole picked up a club to knock it out and succeeded at the first blow. Unfortunately the axe glanced against the side of an adjacent tree, rebounded to another tree, and then boomeranged back to Ole, striking him on the side, and besides cutting him severely, again broke one of those four ribs Doctor Romig fixed up after the bear episode.

Women's Footwear Eclipses Past Efforts Of Shoe Trade

Wonderful lines, shades and colorings Characterize New Fall Offerings.

Those of our readers who have had occasion to visit Detroit recently, and respond to the invitation of the Walk-Over Shoe company to visit and inspect their stores and displays, have beheld something well worth going far to see.

Especially is this true of the women, who, as a rule, are more interested in style and variety of footwear than are men.

"The New Styles First" is the policy and practice of the Walk-Over stores, and never before have women's new creations in Fall footwear been more beautifully displayed than now—in the Walk-Over stores.

The styles themselves are alluring—fascinating—striking. The designers have evidently put forth extra efforts to develop something new—from shapes to colorings.

The lines of the new fall Walk-Over boots are what is known as "flowing" from tip to top the new lines proclaim harmony and rhythm.

In colorings, former seasons' efforts in this direction have been completely outdone. There seems no limit to the variety of pretty shades, colors and combinations of colors in solids and various designs. It would be hard for one enjoying and appreciating beauty in footwear to disregard the offerings of the Walk-Over stores.

And in addition to all, is the known, dependable quality, universally respected, of the Walk-Over product—men's, women's and children's shoes.

Another feature of interest to our readers, is the fact that the Walk-Over stores prepay parcel post on mail orders to any point in Michigan, and guarantee satisfaction.

NEW ADAMS THEATRE.

Romance of the sweetest Southern quality is presented in "Bonnie" a new play by Maravene Thompson, which Vaughan Glaser has brought to Detroit for his second week at the Adams theatre.

"Bonnie" does not pretend to be anything but a love story, in which respect it more than fulfills expectations. It is pitched in a pretty Southern atmosphere. A young Northern man, who has been injured in an automobile accident and is convalescing in the home over which Bonnie Adair presides, becomes infatuated with Bonnie, and to be near her constantly he feigns to have suffered a brain disturbance in the accident which makes it impossible for him to speak or show any intelligence. But he always answers to the name of "Dearest." Bonnie has been engaged for four years to Alvin Collins and is preparing for her wedding journey to California. She is anxious to take all her relatives as well as all the afflicted pets on the estate, and when Alvin departs, she suddenly comes to the conclusion that she doesn't love him and returns his ring. Then is the time for "Dearest" to end his bluff and declare his love. So, Vaughan Glaser has the part of Roy MacQueen, "Dearest" and Miss Courtney, of course, is Bonnie.

DETROIT.
"Turn to the Right," the reigning success of New York and Chicago is to be presented at the Detroit Opera house next week by one of the original companies exactly as it has been played in those two great theatrical centers during the last year. The play is in a prologue and three acts and the stage settings are of exceptional beauty.

GARRICK.
Alice Nielson returns to light opera at the Garrick theatre Monday, September 17, in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs." Miss Nielson is supported by an exceptional cast of musical players. Among them are Pauline Hall, Sidonia Espino, Juanita Fletcher, Ray Willesby, Eleanor James, Doris Faithful, Edward Stevens, Frank Westerton, John Phillips, Jackson Hines, Ten Eyck Clay, George Callahan, William Reid and others.

MADISON.
Mae Marsh Stars in "Polly of the Circus," "Polly of the Circus," an elaborate screen presentation of Margaret Mayo's drama of circus life, the first of the many discussed Gaiety productions, will be the feature attraction at the Madison theatre for this week. Mae Marsh is the star.

WASHINGTON.
"The Bar Sinister" Heads This Week's Attractions.
Another dramatic photoplay has a week's engagement at the Washington theatre this week, when "The Bar Sinister," a story of the modern south, is presented.

ARRESTS SELF WITH HIS OWN HANDCUFFS

Indianapolis, Ind.—Abe Brown is a most accommodating man; he handcuffed himself and made his arrest a simple matter.

Brown had visited the home of James Fleming frequently. Several articles were missed and suspicion pointed to him. He gathered with the family one evening for a friendly chat and proudly exhibited a pair of handcuffs he had purchased.

"Show us how they work," said Mrs. Fleming.
"Simple, just like this," said Brown, and he accidentally locked them.

"We'll call the police to unlock them for you," said Mrs. Fleming.
"Fine, thanks," answered Brown, jovially.

And when the police came, Mrs. Fleming told the police not to unlock them until she had put a charge of larceny against Brown.

SHOT SELF WHILE ASLEEP

Girl Believed to Have Been Dreaming When She Placed Revolver Against Head and Firing.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Miss May Wilson, twenty-five years old, is believed to have been asleep when she placed a revolver against her head and fired a fatal shot. She had often told how she was moved by dreams, and her friends declare she must have been having a nightmare when she fired the shot.

Miss Wilson lived with her father, James R. Wilson, and always kept a revolver under her pillow. She was found on her bed with the revolver laying beside her. Only one shot had been fired and no one heard it.

The girl was of a sunny disposition, had perfect health and no trouble. The stress of a dream is the only possible explanation of the tragedy.

Every Farmer in Michigan Should Read This

Michigan Must Produce 20% More Winter Wheat for 1918

Now is the Time to "Do Your Bit"

The Michigan farm-business man is now being put to the test.

To meet the most serious food situation the world has ever faced, our Secretary of Agriculture has announced that this Nation must produce one billion bushels of wheat in 1918. An eighty-three million bushel rye crop is also part of the war agricultural program.

To do his utmost toward making this enormous yield a reality is the patriotic duty of every wheat and rye grower in the United States;

—a task imposed not upon our Nation as a whole—but an obligation resting upon every owner of wheat producing soil in the land.

Are you planning to do your share? Are you making a sincere effort to plant and raise more wheat—and better wheat—than your acres have ever yielded before?

If so, your reward will not be limited to the thought of a duty done in a big national undertaking,—for, the government guarantee of a minimum price of $2.00 per bushel for the 1918 harvest will also make your profits proportionally satisfactory. Never before have the combined incentives—Patriotism and Profits—been more harmoniously blended, or more generously repaid.

But if you have not yet realized the task ahead, the time is not too late. The course of action is plainly marked—divided into two broad aims:

First, can you put more acreage under cultivation? There must be 20 per cent more land sown to winter wheat in Michigan this Fall if the Billion Bushel program be accomplished. Make every acre do its duty! The "fence corners", the "left over" spots,—all should be productive.

Second, use nothing but the best of seed which has been cleaned and treated. The government two-dollar-a-bushel guarantee enables you to do this. Furthermore, good seed not only produces more abundantly, but it also weathers the winter better.

Also, labor shortage—the growing lack of man-power on our farms—makes necessary the utilization of every tractor, horse, or piece of farm machinery. Farm resources must be mobilized on the productive fields at home before our fighting men can "do their bit" on the battle fields abroad.

We suggest a friendly inter-county rivalry. Find out the high mark of production for our county—and the ones next to us. "Hitch your wagon" to a figure 20 per cent still greater—and see if our county can't do even better!

The Michigan Agricultural College and other agricultural institutions are working for and with you. Both your banker and the millers have volunteered to help you get special seed wheat if you apply for it.

The market is assured—the demand cannot be over-reached no matter what the out-put.

A hungry world is knocking at our door—eager to pay a price which means good profits.

Your part is strictly up to you.

Do your share! Now!

THE MILLERS

THE MILLERS have been in this style creating work for twenty years, visiting every city of importance, returning to the same stores again and again.

Miller and Miller will cut and fit to your measure any fabric or material, bought in this store for $1.00 a yard or more, absolutely without charge to you.

They measure, cut, fit and pin the materials so that the sewing is simple. Each piece of material even to trimming and buttons is pinned in the proper place, ready for sewing. Instructions are given for finishing the garment.

In addition to the cutting service, Madame Miller will gladly answer any questions as to styles, fabrics, trimmings. She will originate designs or copy any style shown in Fashion magazines.

Special attention is given to the hard to fit. The personal service rendered in this fitting of garments cannot be emphasized too strongly.

Last March at this store the Millers were busy—orders were turned away. They will be busier this time. Make your appointments early.

People Speak Well of Chamberlain's Tablets.

"I have been selling Chamberlain's Tablets for about two years and heard such good reports from my customers that I concluded to give them a trial myself, and can say that I do not believe there is another preparation of the kind equal to them," writes G. A. McBride, Headford, Ont. If you are troubled with indigestion or constipation give them a trial. They will do you good.—Adv.

Order of Publication.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw, ss.: At a session of the Probate Court for said county of Washtenaw, held at the Probate Office in the city of Ann Arbor, on the 20th day of August, in the year one thousand nine hundred and seventeen.

Present, Emory E. Leland, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Ernest E. Shaver, deceased.

On reading and filing the duly verified petition of Martha E. Shaver, widow, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Martha E. Shaver or some other suitable person, and that appraisers and commissioners be appointed.

It is ordered that the 19th day of September next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate Office, be appointed for hearing said petition.

And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Chelsea Tribune, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Washtenaw.

Emory E. Leland, Judge of Probate.
