Two Fire Alarms Turned In.

About 4:45 o'clock Tuesday morning the interior of Bagge & Parker's place was discovered to be on fire. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Boyd were aroused by the smell of smoke, which swept through the walls into their rooms, and turned in a fire alarm. The back-bar and fixtures of the saloon were destroyed by the flames, smoke and water. The blaze is thought to have been started from matches which were in one of the drawers of the wall case.

J. L. Burg, who has his cigar factory on the second floor of the building, had his stock of leaf tobacco, which is stored in the basement, somewhat damaged by water.

The building is owned by Mrs. Catherine Girbach and was damaged by smoke and water. All three losses are fully covered by insurance.

The second fire alarm was turned in about 12 o'clock Tuesday night, which was in the large barn on the south side of Washington street owned by George Ward. The fire started in the driveway and as the odor of kerosene oil was quite noticeable it is supposed that some one had made an attempt to burn the building. The blaze was put out with a few pails of water by Oscar Schettler, who discovered the fire. The members of the fire department were stopped before they left the engine house.

William S. Hart in "The Patriot." Thomas H. Ince production.
William S. Hart has rarely been seen in a type as virile as the "Patriot." As an American insurgent he shows all his usual fire, force and strength. Mr. Hart has become a sort of "institution." While he has not lost his personality, he is regarded by the American public as the embodiment and spirit of a type of Westerner in the "ideal" state.

Swindlers After National Army Men.

A new bunco game is being tried on drafted men and others going into the nation's service, according to reports made to the County Red Cross headquarters. Men are being approached in the name of the Red Cross and asked to buy various knitted articles needed in their equipment.

H. W. Douglas, county chairman, wants it distinctly understood that the Red Cross is standing behind no such tactics, and wishes every such case to be reported immediately at headquarters with as detailed information as possible.

It is the aim of the Red Cross to furnish all men going into service with whatever articles of the kind they need without charge. What ever attempts are being made to sell goods to the soldiers in the name of the society are unauthorized, and citizens throughout the county are asked to keep watch for any further swindles of this kind.

A Great Organization Coming.

Arrangements have been made for the appearance in Ann Arbor of the world famous "Kitties" band to give two concerts. They will introduce all their special features that have made them famous. The band is recognized as one of the best musical organizations in the world, presenting music of every type but of course they excel in music of the heather. Every member is a finished musician and a soloist and the ensemble of the band is so harmonious and so delightful that the music lovers will have a rare treat. J. Coates Lockhart is the singing feature of the band. Mr. Lockhart is Canada's favorite tenor and is now making thousands of friends in America. Mr. Lockhart appears at every concert of the "Kitties." At the Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, matinee and night, Monday, September 24.

"Very Good Eddie."

Theatregoers may safely look forward to the biggest musical comedy treat of many years when "Very Good Eddie" comes to the Majestic Theatre, Jackson, Wednesday, September 26.

This "classiest" of musical productions comes with a record of over a year at the Princess Theatre, New York, followed by a five months run in Chicago. The latter engagement was scheduled for only three months, and the show was booked to appear in Jackson last spring. But Chicago would not let the musical success depart until the summer was too far advanced to permit of a booking then. But theatregoers will be well repaid for their wait.

"Very Good Eddie" is one of the Marburg-Comstock "intimate" productions that have made the Princess Theatre the most popular playhouse in New York. It is a new type of comedy with music, produced in a swagger fashion, and with laughter, jingling melodies, bright dancing numbers and novel interpolations following each other in rapid succession. The cast boasts of such Broadway favorites as Donnan Maley, Georgie Mack, Harry Meyers, Florence Earle, Helen Raymond, Theodora Warfield, Lavinia Winn, Harry Linkey, Jean DeBriac, Blaine Ford, Ralph O'Brien and forty others, including the original Princess Theatre assemblage of youthful beauties. As for the music in the piece, composed by Jerome Kern, they have been dancing favorites for months, although their real quality can only be appreciated when played and sung by the folks who originally made them popular.

Every Farmer in Michigan Should Read This

Michigan Must Produce 20 Per Cent More Winter Wheat for 1918

Now is the Time to "Do Your Bit"

The Michigan farm-business man is now being put to the test.

To meet the most serious food situation the world has ever faced, our Secretary of Agriculture has announced that this Nation must produce ONE BILLION BUSHEL OF WHEAT IN 1918. An eighty-three million bushel rye crop is also part of the war agricultural program.

To do his utmost toward making this enormous yield a reality is the patriotic duty of every wheat and rye grower in the United States;

—a task imposed not upon our Nation as a whole—but an obligation resting upon every owner of wheat producing soil in the land.

Are you planning to do your share? Are you making a sincere effort to plant and raise more wheat—and BETTER wheat—than your acres have ever yielded before?

If so, your reward will not be limited to the thought of a duty done in a big national undertaking—for, the government guarantee of $2.00 per bushel for the 1918 harvest will also make your profits proportionally satisfactory. NEVER BEFORE HAVE THE COMBINED INCENTIVES—PATRIOTISM AND PROFITS—BEEN MORE HARMONIOUSLY BLENDED, OR MORE GENEROUSLY REPAID.

But if you have not yet realized the task ahead, the time is not too late. The course of action is plainly marked—divided into two broad aims:

First, can you put more acreage under cultivation? There must be 20 per cent more land sown to winter wheat in Michigan this fall if the Billion Bushel program be accomplished. MAKE EVERY ACRE DO ITS DUTY! The "fence corners," the "left over" spots—all should be productive.

Second, use nothing but the best of seed which has been cleaned and treated. The government two-dollar-a-bushel guarantee enables you to do this. Furthermore, good seed not only produces more abundantly, but it also weathers the winter better.

Also, labor shortage—the growing lack of man-power on our farms—makes necessary the utilization of every tractor, horse, or piece of farm machinery. FARM RESOURCES MUST BE MOBILIZED ON THE PRODUCTIVE FIELDS AT HOME BEFORE OUR FIGHTING MEN CAN "DO THEIR BIT" ON THE BATTLE FIELDS ABROAD.

We suggest a friendly inter-county rivalry. Find out the high mark of production for our county—and the ones next to us. "Hitch your wagon" to a figure 20 per cent still greater—and see if OUR country can't do even better.

The Michigan Agricultural College and other agricultural institutions are working for and with you. Both your baker and the millers have volunteered to help you get special seed wheat if you apply for it.

The market is assured—the demand cannot be over-reached no matter what the output.

A hungry world is knocking at our door—eager to pay a price which means good profits.

YOUR part is strictly up to you.

Do your share! Now!

I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Fenn's Drug Store, and they helped me wonderfully. They banished the pains in my back and regulated my kidneys."

Over Three Years Later Mrs. Arnold said: "My cure has been permanent and I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit. Price 60¢ at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Arnold has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

"Any policy of public regulation of railways that does not stimulate the production of transportation by attracting new capital savings is manifestly an uneconomic policy and opposed to the public interest."
Outlook, July 25, 1917

An Economic Necessity

THE country's business is growing faster than its railroads. It has been so for 15 years. This cannot continue without irreparable injury to commerce and industry.

The New York Central Lines

"America's Greatest Railway System"

are looking and planning ahead. Expenditures by these lines involving hundreds of millions of dollars will be necessary in the next few years to meet the demand for increased transportation facilities. The money may come partly from earnings; but most of it must come from public investment.

The public will invest only when assured a reasonable return. Governmental regulation must therefore be such as to attract new capital savings.

The railroads must be permitted to charge rates that will earn a return sufficient to cover the constantly mounting costs of operation, pay interest on bonds, reasonable dividends on stock and provide a surplus for equipment, improvements and extensions.

OFFICERS SCHOOL OPENED AT CUSTER

ARMY MAKES PROMISE GOOD TO GIVE PRIVATES CHANCE TO BECOME "NON-COMS."

FIRST CLASS IS TEMPORARY

No Permanent Appointment Will Be Made Until Late Arrivals Have Chance to Show Ability.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—The army made good its promise to the new recruits when the 329th infantry opened a non-commissioned officers' school for the enlisted men.

Lieut. Col. Major, in taking over the class, informed the men that their place was only temporary.

"You are seeing here," he said, "the fulfillment of the promise that capable, earnest men would be promoted. This is the first trial. Whether you succeed depends on yourself. We have no time to waste. Men who have not mastered the work which has been taught them in the past two weeks will not be retained in this school."

The names of those selected will not be given out by captains of companies at present, owing to the fact that there will undoubtedly be a number of changes. No permanent appointments will be made until the latest arrivals in camp have had a chance to show their ability.

ABLE DRAFT MEN GET CHANCE

Reorganization Opens Field for Men From Ranks to Advance.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—With the announcement of plans for the reorganization of the depot brigade, a component part of the Eighty-fifth division, and a much talked of but little understood unit, comes the knowledge that in spite of the officers' training camps and promotions in the regular army, the department is still amazingly short of commissioned officers.

The result will probably be numerous promotions among the officers now in the junior commissions, and will open an unlimited field for selected men, whose merit is of a nature which demands advancement.

It is clearly stated that there is an open field in the commissioned ranks for any private soldier who is capable of leading men or directing executive affairs.

Organization of the brigade commenced with the arrival of the second quota of selected men.

The depot brigade is made up of 27 battalions of four companies each. It will receive 50 per cent of the selected men to come. Its purpose is to train men on exactly the same lines as in the other units. It will be used to fill gaps in the ranks of the division caused by casualties or promotions.

It will accompany the division to the field, and while it may not get into action the first day, many of its members will see action as soon as they might wish.

LITTLE WAR TALK AT CUSTER

Talk in Barracks Touches Nearly Every Subject Except War.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—If you want to "forget the war" go to Camp Custer.

It is a phenomenal fact that at a day when war is published by every press and discussed by every pulpit and proclaimed in every assembly, and argued in every private conversation, one place exists where a man may roam for a week and hardly hear the great struggle mentioned. And that, of all places, a military encampment where men are being prepared for war.

In barracks, the talk touches every subject except the war. One day, when a newspaper announced that the boys would be in the trenches by Christmas, there was an hour of questioning as to how false the report was, but even then, the subject of the war was not unloosed.

It simply isn't being talked about. There it is, looming ahead in every soldier's thoughts, but the pressure of other work keeps it always in the background.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMPCUSTER

No autos are allowed to park within 20 feet of any building because of the fire hazard.

Better roads are promised in a short time, county authorities and camp officials having started work which they hope to finish before cold weather.

There is need of an express office in camp, as officers and men complain that packages shipped them are not delivered sometimes for ten days.

A young lieutenant gave a husky from Milwaukee an order the other day. "All right, kid, I'll do it," was the answer of the Milwaukeean. Now he is doing 15 days' kitchen police.

The first aid department of Porter Brothers, contractors, cares for several hundred accidents daily, mostly of a minor nature. The most common accident among the carpenters is driving a nail through a finger.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Seventeen young men were ordained to the ministry at the annual conference of the M. E. church held at Traverse City.

Edward Mentor of Mt. Clemens, on the first day of his employment with the Detroit Edison Co., was killed when he touched a live wire.

Canadian casualties list contains the names of the following Michigan men: Killed in action: R. G. Lutaer, Blanchard; accidentally wounded: F. E. Shorley, Jackson.

Repeated calls from the government for radio operators and the increasing demand for more telegraphers has caused the Detroit Young Women's Christian association to include a new course in telegraphy in the work offered by the educational department this winter.

Captain Ole Peterson, an aged inmate of the Marquette poorhouse at Menominee, had an experience which nearly cost his life, but one from which he will recover. He became caught in a barbed wire fence near the farm and was held fast for 36 hours, not having the strength to release himself. He was badly scratched in his unsuccessful attempts to work himself free.

Andrew Williams, an Indian, and Henry G. Bacon, a civil war veteran, were killed at the track at Mt. Pleasant by a car skidding through the fence on which the men sat. The car was driven by J. W. Smithers, who was tucking it up for the races. In turning out to pass a team hauling a roller Smithers lost control of his car. Williams was killed instantly. Bacon lived about two hours. Thousands of persons attracted by the races saw the accident.

On the theory that it takes 11 2/3 bushels of corn to make 100 pounds of live-weight pork, an attempt to fix the price on pork will be made, according to D. D. Aiken, of Flint, president of the Holstein-Friesian association, who recently returned from Washington where he was called by the secretary of agriculture and food director to consider how to increase animal production. He said that it was demonstrated at Washington that milk was one of the most economical foods and will produce fat at a cost lower than any other food substance. Government statistics show that 29 per cent of all dairy animals were slaughtered last year for beef.

Bert Hazard, near Adrian, sold the hogs he raised this summer for $8.350.

The official flag pole of Camp Custer, which will stand near the camp headquarters, is the gift of citizens of Battle Creek.

More than 130 U. of M. students have asked to be enrolled in the ordinance course to be taught this year by Leslie F. Merch.

Michigan coal miners, who held a two-day convention at Saginaw adjourned without taking any action on the proposed wage increase demands.

A. A. Prentiss, 35, of Chicago, met an old friend in the Scott hotel, Hancock. "Let's go and have a drink," he suggested. As he turned to enter the bar he dropped dead.

Jane Adams, Hull house, Chicago, has been secured as the principal speaker at the annual convention of the State Federation of Women's clubs, to be held at Traverse City in October.

Declaring that it can no longer produce gas at the rate of 35 cents a thousand feet, the Port Huron gas company will submit a proposition to the voters asking permission to raise its rates to $1 a thousand feet.

The wholesalers' department of the A. C. of Grand Rapids, will not hold the annual trade extension excursion in October because of inability to secure a special train. Train equipment is being taxed by military demands.

Mrs. Gilbert Archambeau, wife of a farmer near Bay City, after preparing breakfast went out of doors to ring the bell which calls the men to the house. The bell, weighing 50 pounds, fell, striking on her head and fracturing her skull.

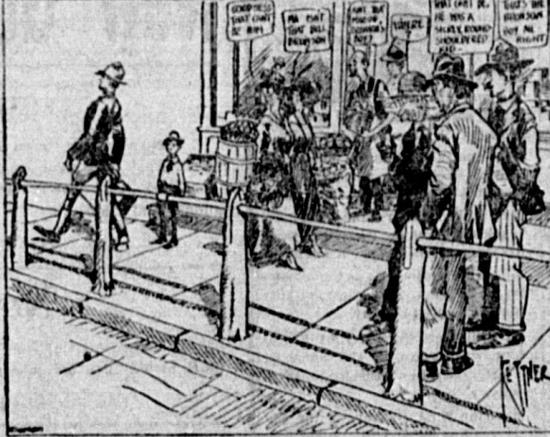

Ten minutes after he had married Emerson Russell and Mrs. Edith Mallison. Justice Gould of Hastings fined the man $10.50 for drunkenness on a charge preferred by the former Mrs. Mallison. To insure a happy honeymoon the judge made the groom sign a 60-day pledge.

Efforts to obtain a fair share of the Camp Custer business are now being made by the Kalamazoo chamber of commerce. Arrangement are already under way for a direct interurban line between Kalamazoo and the camp. Work on this line will begin within a few weeks. Already the officers who have longer leaves of absence from the camp are beginning to make their homes here. Nothing to make Kalamazoo attractive for the Camp Custer soldiers is being left undone. Fraternal organizations are opening their headquarters for the use of the soldiers and merchants have adopted a "no price raise" business policy.

On the suggestion of Governor Sleeper, George A. Prescott, of Tawas City, former secretary of state and state senator, has been selected for food administrator of Michigan under the general direction of Herbert C. Hoover.

The appointment has been sent to President Wilson for approval. Mr. Prescott will be to Michigan what Food Director Hoover is to the nation. His chief duties will be to study production costs and marketing problems.

Reincarnation

ALL DRAFT MEN TO BE EXAMINED NOW

BOARDS TO CONTINUE PHYSICAL TESTS SO ALL REGISTERED WILL KNOW STATUS.

WILL RELIEVE UNCERTAINTY

Many Will Welcome Tests So That Uncertainty of Physical Fitness Will Be Ended.

Lansing—Judging from the official telegrams and regulations which are now coming from the office of Provost Marshal General Crowder, the government is going to continue the physical examination of all men who registered June 5. To this end the present system of local boards will no doubt be continued indefinitely.

With the selection of this week's quota and that for Oct. 3, the work of the local boards for the first call will have been completed. The government estimates that this work will exhaust practically 3,000,000 names of registrants. This will leave 7,000,000 to be handled if there is need of a second call from the president. That a second call will come is certain, but the indications are that it will be several months before it does.

In the meantime, it is now the intention of the government to have the local boards leisurely examine the remaining men, with a view to having their eligibility lists ready for a second call when it comes. In many respects, too, it will relieve the minds of thousands of men, who, without completion of the list of registrants, would not know "where they are at."

They cannot enter any business with a reasonable security from draft, but if they should be examined and found physically unfit, they can be assured of no trouble hereafter.

The government, too, as indicated in word received here, is not unmindful of the hard work that has already been done by the local boards. Many of the members of these boards have neglected their business for weeks, and a continuation of such force employment by the government might work a great hardship.

In the examination, however, beyond the quota limit as needed now, the boards will be told to take their time, either devoting only a couple of hours a day to the work, or else one or two days a week. In this way the work could be expeditiously done and at the same time neither the boards nor the registrants subjected to any great inconvenience.

THIRTY-SECOND IN TEXAS CAMP

Long Step to France Taken By 1,800 Michigan Boys.

Graying—Taking a long step toward France and the trenches, 1,800 Michigan boys in the Thirty-second infantry regiment and field hospital No. 1, left Grayling Sunday for Camp McArthur, Waco, Tex. "And we won't come back till it's over—over there," the band kept insisting.

The boys are carrying south a different spirit than they carried last year, when they went down to curb the unruly Mexicans. The sentiment of the band, "We won't come back till it's over—over there," seemed to be written on every face.

A magnificent tri-color of France was presented Sunday to the Thirty-first by Dr. Victory M. Seymour. He instructed the boys from Detroit to present the colors to France when they arrived there.

U. S. SUBMARINE SUNK IN PORT

Cause Not Determined—No Lives Reported Lost.

Washington—A United States submarine sank at her dock at an Atlantic port Saturday morning, the navy department announced. There was no loss of life.

The announcement said it was expected that the submarine would be raised within a few days when a full report of the accident would be made to the department. For military reasons the name of the submarine and the port were withheld.

"PULL" KILLED IN DRAFT APPEAL

President Will Consider No Evidence Not Given to District Boards.

Washington—President Wilson has given notice to governors of all states that, in hearing claims for exemption coming up from the district boards, he would consider only evidence already submitted to the boards and nothing else, unless the boards recommend it.

The effect of the president's action is absolutely to shut out all appeals of a political nature or those which may be brought by interested friends "with pull." It confines consideration of the cases to the evidence.

The gist of the telegram sent to governors by Provost Marshal Crowder reads:

"Regulations prescribed by the president provide for appeal from the decision of the district board of agricultural and industrial claims, but the claim for appeal must be filed with the district board, which will send all evidence and other matter considered in the case to the president for his consideration.

"If, after the decision of the district board, it is desired to submit new matter, the district board may reopen the case, consider such new matter and, if it adheres to its original decision, forward such new matter to the president.

"Matter not presented to the district boards cannot be considered on appeal to the president.

22,000 PLANES READY BY SPRING

U. S. Pushing Construction—Liberty Motor Perfected.

Washington—With the perfection of the Liberty motor for airplanes, official announcement of which is made by Secretary Baker, the work of carrying out the mammoth air program of this government is being pushed with the idea of having 22,000 planes ready for use before spring.

This airfleet which is expected to "put out the eyes of Germany" and turn the tide of the war for the allies, is in course of construction, and it is learned that the present board of the council of the national defense, can see no obstacle to its successful consummation by spring.

From unofficial but reliable sources, it is learned that the Liberty motor bids fair to revolutionize aeronautics and that the statement concerning it issued by Secretary Baker was most conservative. With the motor standardization manufacture in large quantities can proceed with speed. Power and minimum weight are the qualities which are expected to make it superior to any foreign motor.

The engineers have reduced the weight to one and three-quarters pounds per horsepower, which means that a 250-horsepower motor will weigh less than 500 pounds.

Details are held back, but it is learned that already American planes, equipped with the Liberty motor have reached a maximum speed of 210 miles an hour. By multiplying the motors used this speed can be increased indefinitely and the carrying power of the plane can be increased accordingly. Two, three and even more motors may be used in the big battle planes.

U. S. TO SEIZE COAL SUPPLY

Will Requisition Enough to Supply Domestic Consumer.

Washington—The United States fuel administration will requisition enough bituminous coal to supply the domestic consumer. Dr. Harry A. Garfield, fuel administrator, said it probably would be necessary to take over 25 per cent of the output of the mines to supply the spot demand for domestic consumption.

In many cases it will be necessary for the coal operators to abrogate contracts when the government requisitioning orders go into effect this will be done by government order for the benefit of the domestic consumer at a sacrifice to the larger consumer.

Each state fuel administrator will submit an estimate of the amount of coal needed in his territory to keep factories going and homes warm. The coal will then be requisitioned and apportioned accordingly.

After the domestic consumer has been provided for, transportation systems, manufacturing industries and public utilities will then be considered.

U. S. SHIPBUILDING TIED UP BY STRIKE

APPROXIMATELY 28,000 WORKERS QUIT WHEN RAISE IN PAY IS REFUSED.

OVER 100 PLANTS AFFECTED

Walkout Characterized As the Most Extensive in History of the Pacific Coast.

San Francisco—Approximately 28,000 iron workers and metal trades mechanics engaged in war emergency construction in shipyards of San Francisco and bay cities went on strike at 9 a. m. Monday, following rejection of their demands for a 50 per cent increase in wages. The walkout in more than 100 plants was carried out without a hitch, it was reported.

Fervish eleven-hour efforts to avert the strike by employers and representatives of the United States shipping board failed. Proposals to arbitrate on a basis of ten per cent increase offered, had been rejected by the conference committee of the iron trades council, composed of 25 unions, on whose authority the strike was declared.

The walkout affected more than $150,000,000 in government shipbuilding and engine construction contracts and automatically tied up other construction works.

Settlement of the strike, which is characterized as the most extensive in the history of the Pacific coast, is entirely in the hands of the federal government, employers announced.

Conferences between representatives of the men and the employers continued despite the strike in the hope that a settlement could be reached.

The working agreements of unions affiliated with the Iron Trades council expired Saturday. The men demanded a minimum wage of $5 a day.

14,400 GO TO CAMP THIS WEEK

Shipments Divided Over 5 Days and Can Be More Easily Handled.

Battle Creek—Approximately 14,400 young men of Michigan and Wisconsin started going "over the top" Wednesday into Camp Custer.

A war department suggestion has been sent out that selected men come to Camp Custer with a bundle containing toilet accessories, a suit of underclothing, etc., but no baggage. Those who've been through the mill don't agree to the wisdom of this program. They say to bring an old suitcase with as much comforts as can be conveniently carried, but with the understanding, of course that when uniforms are issued the extra clothing can be sent home in the suitcase.

Fortunately not all the 14,400 men will report in one day, as had been planned originally. Wednesday brought 4,195, Thursday 1,851, Friday 3,250, Saturday 2,037 and Sunday 766. The Sunday delegation is an exclusive Detroit shipment.

For several weeks Camp Custer will hold little of frivolity for the selects and mothers at home need not sing "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" with any morbid notion that he's hanging around a den of iniquity. The only wandering he will do will be toward his bank, when tattoo sounds at 9 o'clock, and when the bugle blows at 9:15 chances are he will be asleep.

TOPROTECT SOLDIERS PROPERTY

Bill in Congress Would Prevent Suits Against Enlisted Men.

Washington—Legislation to protect the civil and property rights of soldiers, in effect a moratorium for the duration of the war, in behalf of men who are serving their country on the firing line, may be placed upon the administration's program for this session of congress as a necessary element of the raising of a citizen army.

The "soldiers' and sailors' civil rights bill," to carry out this purpose, already has been introduced in both houses, having been framed in the office of Judge Advocate General Crowder.

To save soldiers and sailors from all kinds of legal injustices during their absence from home, the measure would join the carrying out of certain civil court actions until after the close of the war, and establish as a legal excuse for failure to carry out certain contracts the fact that a man is in the military service.

It is proposed that creditors' suits, against officers or men, may be held up and judgment by default denied, the framers of the bill recognizing that a man in the army or navy would have no opportunity to make his defense in person, or to arrange for his proper hearing through counsel.

Feed the Fighters! Win the War!!

Harvest the Crops—Save the Yields

On the battle fields of France and Flanders, the United States boys and the Canadian boys are fighting side by side to win for the World the freedom that Frisianism would destroy. While doing this they must be fed and every ounce of muscle that can be requisitioned must go into use to save this year's crop. A short harvest period requires the combined forces of the two countries in team work, such as the soldier boys in France and Flanders are demonstrating.

The Combined Fighters in France and Flanders and the Combined Harvesters in America WILL Bring the Allied Victory Nearer.

A reciprocal arrangement for the use of farm workers has been perfected between the Department of the Interior of Canada and the Departments of Labor and Agriculture of the United States, under which it is proposed to permit the harvesters that are now engaged in the wheat fields of Ohio, Kansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin to move over into Canada, with the privilege of later returning to the United States, when the crops in the United States have been conserved, and help to save the enormous crops in Canada which by that time will be ready for harvesting.

HELP YOUR CANADIAN NEIGHBOURS WHEN YOUR OWN CROP IS HARVESTED!!!

Canada Wants 40 000 Harvest Hands to Take Care of its 13,000,000 ACRE WHEAT FIELD.

One cent a mile railway fare from the International boundary line to destination and the same rate returning to the International boundary.

High Wages, Good Board, Comfortable Lodgings.

An Identification Card issued at the boundary by a Canadian Immigration Officer will guarantee no trouble in returning to the United States.

AS SOON AS YOUR OWN HARVEST IS SAVED, move northward and assist your Canadian neighbour in harvesting his; in this way do your bit in helping "Win the War".

Announcing THE Fall Opening

DEAR SIR:
Some men have to catch a couple of severe colds and pay a doctor bill before they are reminded of the necessity of Fall and Winter Clothing.

Then they hasten to some store and find that the choicest styles and patterns have already been selected by those who were wise enough to make early selections.

So you will understand that there is both health and happiness in the early buying of your Fall and Winter Apparel.

Next of importance is the announcement that we are now ready to show the Fall and Winter models of Suits and Overcoats.

"Teddy" would say, "They're bully," but we'll just mention that they're the smartest, cleverest lot of Suits and Overcoats it has ever been our good fortune to have in our store.

Of course the ideas of young chaps predominate, for the trend of the times is toward the young man's views, his ideas of dress are pretty near O. K. and most Dads are more than willing to take a few years off of their appearance by following them.

But if your ideas are conservative ones, we can fit you out with equal exactness, for our stock embraces refined, subdued models that are strictly in keeping with quiet tastes.

And before we say "Very truly yours," let us add that from a price standpoint, we're just about the best value store in this town.

Announcing THE Fall Opening

DEAR SIR:

Some men have to catch a couple of severe colds and pay a doctor bill before they are reminded of the necessity of Fall and Winter Clothing.

Then they hasten to some store and find that the choicest styles and patterns have already been selected by those who were wise enough to make early selections.

So you will understand that there is both health and happiness in the early buying of your Fall and Winter Apparel.

Next of importance is the announcement that we are now ready to show the Fall and Winter models of Suits and Overcoats.

"Teddy" would say, "They're bully," but we'll just mention that they're the smartest, cleverest lot of Suits and Overcoats it has ever been our good fortune to have in our store.

Of course the ideas of young chaps predominate, for the trend of the times is toward the young man's views, his ideas of dress are pretty near O. K. and most Dads are more than willing to take a few years off of their appearance by following them.

But if your ideas are conservative ones, we can fit you out with equal exactness, for our stock embraces refined, subdued models that are strictly in keeping with quiet tastes.

And before we say "Very truly yours," let us add that from a price standpoint, we're just about the best value store in this town.

LOUISE SEEMS TO HAVE REACHED THE POINT WHERE SHE DIDN'T CARE WHAT HAPPENED TO HER— AND THEN JOHN STRANGEWAY CAME INTO HER LIFE

Synopsis—On a trip through the English Cumberland country the breakdown of her motorcar forces Louise Maurel, famous London actress, to accept the overnight hospitality of Stephen and John Strangeway, reclusive woman haters, who own a great farm. Before she leaves she stirs the interest of John Strangeway and is in turn interested by him. Three months later John, on impulse, takes a train for London, and immediately renews his acquaintance with Louise. He is warned by her friend, Sophy, not to be puritanical in his regard for Louise.

CHAPTER VII.

The first few minutes that John spent in Louise's little house were full of acute and vivid interest. The room that he was so eagerly studying confirmed his cloudy impressions of its owner. There was, for a woman's apartment, a curious absence of ornamentation and knickknacks. The walls were black and white; the carpet was white; the furniture graceful in its outline, rather heavy in build, and covered with old-rose colored chintz. There were water-colors upon the wall, some small black-and-white fantasies, passing to John, who had never even heard the term futurist. A table, drawn up to the side of one of the easy chairs, was covered with books and magazines, some Italian, a few English, the greater part French; and upon a smaller one, close at hand, stood a white bowl full of pink roses. Their odor was somehow reminiscent of Louise, curiously sweet and wholesome—an odor which suddenly took him back to the morning when she had come to him from under the canopy of apple-blossom. His heart began to beat with pleasure even before the opening of the door announced her presence. She came in with Sophy, who at once seated herself by his side.

"We have been making plans," Louise declared, "for disposing of you for the rest of the day."
John smiled happily.
"You're not sending me away, then? You're not acting this evening?"
"Not until these weeks next Monday," she replied. "Then, if you are good, and the production is not postponed, you may seat yourself in a box and make all the noise you like after the fall of the curtain. These are real holidays for me, except for the nuisance of rehearsals. You couldn't have come at a better time."
Sophy glanced at the clock.
"Well," she said, "I must show my respect to that most ancient of adages by taking my departure. I feel—"

"You will do nothing of the sort, child," Louise interrupted. "I want to interest you in the evolution of Mr. Strangeway. We must remember that it is his first night in London. What aspect of it shall we attempt to show him? Don't say a word, Sophy. It is not for us to choose."

"I'm afraid there isn't any choice," John declared, his face falling. "I haven't any clothes except what you saw me in."
"Hoorsy!" Sophy exclaimed. "Off with your smart gown, Louise! We'll be splendidly Bohemian. You shall put on your black frock and a black hat, and powder your nose, and we'll all go to Guido's first and drink vermouth. I can't look the part, but I can act it!"
"But tell me," Louise asked him, "did you lose your luggage?"
"I brought none," he answered.
They both looked at him—Sophy politely curious, Louise more deeply interested.
"You mean," Louise demanded, "that after waiting all these months you started away upon impulse like that—without even letting your brother know or bringing any luggage?"
"That's exactly what I did," John agreed, smiling. "I had a sovereign in my pocket when I had bought my ticket. The joke of it was," he went on, joining in the girls' laughter, "that Mr. Appleton has been worrying me for months to come up and talk over investments, and take control of the money my uncle left me; and when I came at last, I arrived like a pauper. He went out himself and bought my shirt."

"And a very nice shirt, too," Sophy declared, glancing at the pattern. "Do tell us what else happened!"
"Well, not much more," John replied. "Mr. Appleton stuffed me full of money and made me take a little suite of rooms at what he called a more fashionable hotel. He stayed to lunch with me, and I have promised to see him on business tomorrow morning."
The two girls sat up and wiped their eyes.

"Oh, this is a wonderful adventure you have embarked upon!" Louise exclaimed. "You have come quite in the right spirit. It is your first night here, Mr. Strangeway, so I warn you that Sophy is the most irresponsible and capricious of all my friends."

Sophy made a grimace. "Mr. Strangeway," she begged earnestly, "you won't believe a word she says, will you? All my life I have been looking for a single and steadfast attachment. Of course, if Louise wants to monopolize you, I shall fall into the background, as I usually do; but if you think that I am going to accept hints and let you go out to dinner alone, you are very much mistaken. Tonight, at any rate, I insist upon coming!"
Louise shook her head.
"We shall have to put up with her," she told John with a little grimace.
The door of the room was suddenly opened. The parlor maid stood at one side.
"The prince of Seyre, madam," she announced.

Louise nodded. She was evidently expecting the visit. She turned to John.
"Will you come back and call for us here—say at seven o'clock? Mind, you are not to bother about your clothes, but to come just as you are. I can't tell you," she added under her breath, "how much I am looking forward to our evening!"
Sophy sprang to her feet.
"Won't you drop me, please, Mr. Strangeway?" she asked. "Then, if you will be so kind, you can pick me up again on your way here. You'll have to pass where I live, if you are at the Milan. I must go home and do my little best to compete."

Louise's frown was so slight that even John failed to notice it. Upon the threshold they encountered the prince, who detained John for a moment.
"I was hoping that I might meet you here, Mr. Strangeway," he said. "If you are in town for long, it will give me great pleasure if I can be of any service to you. You are staying at a hotel?"
"I am staying at the Milan," John replied.
"I will do myself the pleasure of calling upon you," the prince continued. "In the meantime, if you need any service that a Londoner can offer you, be sure to let me know. You will easily find my house in Grosvenor Square."

"We Shall Have to Put Up With Her," She Told John With a Little Grimace.

"It is very kind of you indeed," John said gratefully.
Sophy made a wry face as the prince entered the drawing-room.
"Didn't some old Roman once write something about being afraid of Greeks who brought gifts?" she asked, as they descended the stairs together.
"Quite right," John assented.
"Well, be careful!" she advised him. "That's all."

John handed Sophy into the taxi and took his place beside her.
"Where shall I put you down?" he asked.

"It's such a terribly low neighborhood! However, it's quite close to the Milan—10 Southampton street."
John gave the address to the man, and they started off. They were blocked in a stream of traffic almost as soon as they reached Hyde Park Corner. John leaned forward all the time, immensely interested in the stream of passers-by.

"Your interest in your fellow creatures," she murmured demurely, "is wonderful, but couldn't you concentrate it just a little?"

He turned quickly around. She was smiling at him most alluringly. Unconsciously he found himself smiling back again. A wonderful light-heartedness seemed to have come to him during the last few hours.

"I suppose I am a perfect idiot," he admitted. "I cannot help it. I am used to seeing, at the most, three or four people together at a time. I can't understand these crowds. Where are they all going? Fancy every one of them having a home, every one of them struggling in some form or another toward happiness!"

"Do you know," she pronounced severely, "for a young man of your age you are much too serious? I am quite sure you could be nice if you wanted to," she continued. "How much are you in love with Louise?"
"How much am I?"
"In love with Louise?" she repeated. "All the men are. It is a perfect cult with them. And here am I, her humble companion and friend, absolutely neglected!"

"I don't believe you are neglected at all," he replied. "You are much too—" He turned his head to look at her. She was so close to him that their hats collided. He was profuse in his apologies.

"Too what?" she whispered.
"Too attractive," he ventured.
"It's nice to hear you say so," she sighed.
She was unlike any girl John had ever known. Her hair was almost golden, her eyes a distinct blue, yet some trick of the mouth saved her face from any suggestion of insipidity. She was looking straight into his eyes, and her lips were curled most invitingly.

"I wish I knew more about certain things," he said.
"Oh, why didn't you come before?" she exclaimed. "Fancy Louise never telling me about you. I hope you'll ask me to lunch some time."
"I'll have a luncheon party tomorrow, if you like—that is, if Louise will come."

She looked up at him quickly.
"Isn't Louise going to Paris?" she asked.
"Paris? I didn't hear her say anything about it."
"Perhaps it is my mistake, then," Sophy went on hastily. "I only fancied that I heard her say so."

There was a moment's silence. John had opened his lips to ask a question, but quickly closed them again. It was a question, he suddenly decided, which he had better ask of Louise herself.
"If Louise goes to Paris," Sophy whispered disconsolately, "I suppose there will be no luncheon-party?"

For a single moment he hesitated. She was very alluring, and the challenge in her eyes was unmistakable.
"I think," he said quietly, "that if Miss Maurel goes to Paris, I shall return to Cumberland tomorrow."

For a time there was a significant silence. Then Sophy raised her veil once more and looked toward John.
"Mr. Strangeway," she began, "you won't mind if I give you just a little word of advice? You are such a big, strong person, but you are rather a child, you know, in some things."
"This place does make me feel ignorant," he admitted.

"Don't idealize anyone here," she begged. "Don't concentrate all your hopes upon one object. Love is wonderful and life is wonderful, but there is only one life, and there are many loves before one reaches the end. People do such silly things sometimes," she wound up, "just because of a little disappointment. There are many disappointments to be met with here."

He took her hand in his.
"Little girl," he said, "you are very good to me, and I think you understand. Are you going to let me feel that I have found a friend on my first evening in London?"
"If you want me," she answered simply. "I like you, and I want you to be happy here; and because I want you to be happy, I want you to come down from the clouds and remember that you have left your hills behind and that we walk on the pavements here."

"Thank you," he whispered, "and thank you for what you have not said. If I am to find sorrow here instead of joy," he added, a little grayly, "it is better for me to stumble into the knowledge of it by myself."
"Your hills have taught you just that much of life, then?" Sophy murmured.

The prince of Seyre handed his hat and stick to the parlor maid and seated himself upon the divan.
"I should be very sorry," he said politely, as the maid left the room, "if my coming has hastened the departure of your visitors."

"Not in the least," Louise assured him. "They were leaving when we were announced. Sophy and I are taking Mr. Strangeway to a Bohemian restaurant and a music hall afterward."
"Fortunate Mr. Strangeway!" the prince sighed. "But, forgive me, why not a more dignified form of entertainment for his first evening?"

"The poor man has no clothes," Louise explained. "He came to London quite unexpectedly."
"No clothes?" the prince repeated. "It is a long journey to take in such a fashion. A matter of urgent business, perhaps?"
Louise had risen to her feet and was busy rearranging some roses in the bowl by her side. She crushed one of the roses to pieces suddenly in her hands and shook the petals from her long, nervous fingers.

"Today," she said, "this afternoon—now—you have come to me with something in your mind, something you wish to say, something you are not sure how to say. That is, you see, what Henri Grallot calls my intuition. Even you, who keep all your feelings under a mask, can conceal very little from me."
"My present feelings," the prince declared, "I do not wish to conceal. I would like you to know them. But as words are sometimes clumsy, I would like, if it were possible, to let you see into my heart."

She came over and seated herself by his side on the divan. She even laid her hand upon his arm.
"Eugene," she expostulated, "we are too old friends to talk always in veiled phrases. There is something you have to say to me. You are displeased because I have changed my mind—because I feel that I cannot take that little journey of ours?"

"You mean that you cannot now, or that you cannot at any time?"
"I do not know," she answered. "You ask me more than I can tell you. Sometimes life seems so stable, a thing one can make a little chart of and hang up on the wall, and put one's finger here and there—Today I will do this, tomorrow I will feel that—and the next morning comes and the chart is in the fire. I wish I understood myself a little better, Eugene!"

"I believe that I understand you better, far better, than you understand yourself," he declared. "That is why I also believe that I am necessary to you. I can prevent your making mistakes."
"Then prevent me," she begged. "Something has happened, and the chart is in the fire today."
"You have only," he said, "to give me this little hand, and I will draw out a fresh one which shall direct to the place in life which is best for you. It is not too late."

She rose from beside him and walked toward the fireplace, as if to touch the bell. He watched her with steady eyes but expressionless face. There was something curious about her walk. The spring had gone from her feet, her shoulders were a little hunched. It was the walk of a woman who goes toward the things she fears.
"Stop!" he bade her.

She turned and faced him, quickly, almost eagerly. There was a look in her face of the prisoner who finds respite.
"Leave the bell alone," he directed. "My own plans are changed. I do not wish to leave London this week."
Her face was suddenly brilliant, her eyes shone. Something electric seemed to quiver through her frame. She almost danced back to her place by his side.

"How foolish!" she murmured. "Why didn't you say so at once?"
"Because," he replied, "they have only been changed during the last few seconds. I wanted to discover something which I have discovered."
"To discover something?"
"That my time has not yet come."

She turned away from him. She was oppressed with a sense almost of fear, a feeling that he was able to read the very thoughts forming in her brain; to understand, as no one else in the world could understand, the things that lived in her heart.
"I must not keep you," he remarked, glancing at the clock. "It was very late for me to call, and you will be wanting to join your friends."

"They are coming here for me," she explained. "There is really no hurry at all. We are not changing anything. It is to be quite a simple evening. Sometimes I wish that you cared about things of that sort, Eugene."
He blew through his lips a little cloud of smoke from the cigarette which he had just lit.

"I am not of the people," he said, "and I have no sympathy with them. I detest the bourgeoisie of every country in the world—my own more particularly."
"If you only knew how strangely that sounds!" she murmured.

"Does it?" he answered. "You should read my family history, read of the men and women of my race who were butchered at the hands of that drunken, lustful mob whom lying historians have glorified. I am one of those who do not forget injuries. My estates are administered more severely than any others in France. No penny of my money has ever been spent in charity. I neither forget nor forgive."
She laughed a little nervously.
"What an unsympathetic person you can be, Eugene!"

"And for that very reason," he replied, "I can be sympathetic. Because I hate some people, I have the power of loving others. Because it pleases me to deal severely with my enemies, it gives me joy to deal generously with my friends. That is my conception of life. May I wish you a pleasant evening?"
"You are going now?" she asked, a little surprised. "When shall I see you again?"
"A telephone message from your maid, a line written with your own fingers," he said, "will bring me to you within a few minutes. If I hear nothing, I may come uninvited, but it will be when the fancy takes me. Once more, Louise, a pleasant evening!"

He passed out of the door, which the parlor maid was holding open for him. Crossing to the window, Louise watched him leave the house and enter his waiting automobile. He gave no sign of haste or disappointment. He lit another cigarette deliberately upon the pavement and gave his orders to the chauffeur with some care.

As the car drove off without his having once glanced up at the window, she shivered a little. There was a silence which, it seemed to her, could be more minatory even than accusation.

CHAPTER VIII.

The little room was gaudily decorated and redolent with the lingering odors of many dinners. Yet Louise, who had dined on the preceding evening at the Ritz and been bored, whose taste in food and environment was almost hypercritical, was perfectly happy. She found the cuisine and the Chianti excellent.

"We are outstaying everyone else," she declared, "and I don't even mind their awful legacy of tobacco smoke. Do you see that the waiter has brought you the bill, Mr. Strangeway? Prepare for a shock. It is fortunate that you are a millionaire!"
John laughed as he paid the bill and ludicrously overtopped the waiter.

"You are so convincing!" Sophy murmured. "But remember that your future entertainment is in the hands of two women, one of whom is a deserving but struggling young artist without the means of gratifying her expensive tastes."
"My children," said Louise, rising, "we must remember that we are going to the Palace. It is quite time we started."

They made their way down two flights of narrow stairs into the street. The commissionaire raised his whistle to his lips, but Louise stopped him.
"We will walk," she suggested. "This way, Mr. Strangeway!"

They passed down the long, narrow street, with its dingy foreign cafes and shops, scarcely one of which seemed to be English. The people who thronged the pavement were of a new race to John, swarthy, a little furtive, a class of foreigner seldom seen except in alien lands. Men and women in all stages of dishevelment were leaning out of the windows or standing on the door steps. The girls whom they met occasionally—young women of all ages, walking arm in arm, with shawls on their heads in place of hats—laughed openly in John's face.

"Conquests everywhere he goes!" Louise sighed. "We shall never keep him, Sophy!"
"We have him for this evening, at any rate," Sophy replied contentedly; "and he hasn't spent all his fortune yet. I am not at all sure that I shall not hint at supper when we come out of the Palace."

"A pity he fell into bad hands so quickly!" Louise laughed. "Here we are! Stalls, please, Mr. Millionaire. I wouldn't be seen tonight in the seats of the mighty."
John risked a reproof, however, and was fortunate enough to find a disengaged box. They devoted their attention to the show, Louise and Sophy at first with only a moderate amount of interest, John with the real enthusiasm of one to whom everything is new. His laughter was so hearty, his appreciation so sincere, that his companions found it infectious, and began to applaud everything.

"The bioscope," Louise at last decided firmly, "I refuse to have anything to do with. You have had all the entertainment you are going to have this evening, Mr. Countryman."
"Now for supper, then," he proposed. "Luigi's," Sophy declared firmly. "The only place in London."
They drove toward the Strand, John looked around him with interest as they entered the restaurant. Luigi, who came forward to welcome Sophy, escorted them to one of the best tables.
"You must be very nice to this gentleman, Luigi," she said. "He is a very great friend of mine, just arrived in London. He has come up on purpose to see me, and we shall probably decide to make this our favorite restaurant."
"I shall be very happy," Luigi declared, with a bow.
"I am beginning to regret, Mr. Strangeway, that I ever introduced you to Sophy," Louise remarked, as she sank back into her chair. "You won't believe that all my friends are as frivolous as this, will you?"
"They aren't!" Sophy proclaimed confidently. "I am the one person who succeeds in keeping Louise with her feet upon the earth. She has never had supper here before. Dry biscuits, hot milk, and a volume of poems are her relaxation after the theater. She takes herself too seriously."

"I wonder if I do!" Louise murmured, as she helped herself to caviar. She was suddenly pensive. Her eyes seemed to be looking out of the restaurant. Sophy was exchanging amenities with a little party of friends at the next table.
"One must sometimes be serious," John remarked, "or life would have no poise at all."
"I have a friend who scolds me," she confided. "Sometimes he almost loses patience with me. He declares that my attitude toward life is too analytical. When happiness comes my way, I shrink back. I keep my emotions in the background, while my brain works, dissecting, wondering, speculating. Perhaps what he says is true. I believe that if one gets into the habit of analyzing too much, one loses all elasticity of emotion, the capacity to recognize and embrace the great things when they come."

"I think you have been right," John declared earnestly. "If the great things come as they should come, they are overwhelming, they will carry you off your feet. You will forget to speculate and to analyze. Therefore, I think you have been wise and right to wait. You have run no risk of having to put up with the lesser things."
She leaned toward him across the rose-shaded table. For those few seconds they seemed to have been brought into a wonderfully intimate communion of thought. A wave of her hair almost touched his forehead. His hand boldly rested upon her fingers.
"You talk," she whispered, "as if we were back upon your hilltop once more!"

He turned his head toward the little orchestra, which was playing a low and tremulous waltz tune.
"I want to believe," he said, "that you can listen to the music here and yet live upon the hilltops."
"You believe that it is possible?"
"I do indeed," he assured her. "Although my heart was almost sick with loneliness, I do not think that I should be here if I did not believe it. I have not come for anything else, for any lesser things, but to find—"

For once his courage failed him. Far once, too, he failed to understand her expression. She had drawn back a little, her lips were quivering. Sophy broke suddenly in upon that moment of suspended speech.
"I knew how it would be!" she exclaimed. "I leave you both alone for less than a minute, and there you sit as grave as two owls. I ask you, now, is this the place to wander off into the clouds? When two people sit looking at each other as you were doing a minute ago, here in Luigi's, and a supper, ordered regardless of expense, on the table before them, they are either without the least sense of the fitness of things, or else—"

"Or else what?" Louise asked.
"Or else they are head over heels in love with each other!" Sophy concluded.
"Perhaps the child is right," Louise assented tolerantly, taking a peach from the basket by her side. "Evidently it is our duty to abandon ourselves to the frivolity of the moment. What shall we do to bring ourselves into accord with it? Everybody seems to be behaving most disgracefully. Do you think it would contribute to the gaiety of the evening if I were to join in the chorus of 'You Made Me Love You,' and Mr. Strangeway were to waltz the young gentleman at the next table, and throw a roll, say, at the portly old gentleman with the highly polished shirt-front?"
"You ought to be thankful all your life that you have met me and that I am disposed to take an interest in you, Sophy remarked, as she moved her chair a little nearer to John's. "I am quite sure that in a very short time you would have become—well, almost a prig. Providence has selected me to work out your salvation."

"Providence has been very kind, then," John told her.
"I hope you mean it," she returned. "You ought to, if you only understood the importance of light-heartedness."

John finds himself in love with the actress and discovers that he has a powerful rival in the prince of Seyre.

"Oh, poor boy!" said the fond mother. "A pity I couldn't have been there to look after you. I'd have boiled it lovely for you!"

"She can never remember anything," said he. "It's awful!"
"My wife was just as bad," said Brown, "till I found out a capital recipe."
"What is it?" asked Jones, eagerly.
"Why," said Brown, "whenever there's anything particular I want the missus to remember I write it on a slip of paper and gum it on the looking glass."
