AUTOMOBILE WRAPPED AROUND TREE

Roy Miller's Speedster Skids Broadside Against West Middle St. Maple.

A big speedster automobile owned by Roy Miller of West Sylvan was badly wrecked about four o'clock yesterday afternoon when Mr. Miller lost control of it on West Middle street and the car skidded for about 100 feet west from Grant street and finally landed broadside against a big maple shade tree nearly in front of Albert Cuthrie's residence. Mr. Miller escaped with several severe cuts and bruises, a sprained wrist and a badly wrenched right leg.

The car was travelling west at the time of the accident, witnesses say at 30 miles per hour or better. When Mr. Miller turned out to the left to pass a rig travelling in the same direction, the car skidded on the wet roadway at the intersection of Grant and West Middle streets.

The right-hand side of the car struck the tree, just between the steering wheel and the driver's seat, the machine being bent around the sturdy tree in a U shape.

Miller was alone in the car and it is considered fortunate that he was not more seriously injured. The car is a wreck.

Battles Which Made the World

TRAFALGAR

The Sea Fight Which Cost Britain Her Great Admiral, but Which Wrecked the Plan of Napoleon for the Invasion of England.

By CAPT. ROLAND F. ANDREWS

(Copyright, 1917, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Napoleon ever believed that Trafalgar cost him England. Not until the day of his death on St. Helena did he cease to berate the unfortunate Admiral Villeneuve, who lost the day, lost his fleet and in losing the latter lost for Napoleon all chance of transporting safely across the channel the great French army which lay at Boulogne ready for the crossing in flatboats the moment the menace of the British navy could be removed.

Nelson, having chased the allied French and Spanish fleet to the West Indies and back, was doing watchdog duty off Cadiz wherein lay the French and the Spaniards, 34 sail of the line and 7 frigates. Villeneuve was distrustful of the skill of his crews and the equipment of his vessels. Napoleon was in a rage at Villeneuve, whom he denounced for "excessive pusillanimity" and to replace whom he started Rosily for Cadiz. Villeneuve, hearing of his intended successor's approach and possessing certain discretionary orders which directed him to proceed to Naples, fighting the English should he encounter them in inferior number, put to sea, leaving one of his ships behind him. Thereupon Nelson, with 27 sail of the line and four frigates, sprang at his throat.

The action was fought on the twenty-first of October, 1805. Nelson, coming on deck at daylight, could see the enemy in line of battle 12 miles to leeward. His captains already possessed his memorandum of battle, which called for attack in two columns, one led by Collingwood in the Royal Sovereign and one by Nelson himself in the Victory. Nelson, however, was far too able a man to expect rigid adherence to any rule of thumb program. His memorandum made broad provisions. "No captain," he wrote, "can do wrong if he places his ship alongside that of an enemy."

To meet the attack Villeneuve formed in double column, his line curving something after the fashion of a crescent. Nelson observed this disposition with approval. Attack at once, he directed, and hoisted his famous last signal: "England expects every man to do his duty."

To cut the enemy's escape, Nelson's column was headed about two points farther north than was Collingwood's. In consequence it was this latter officer in his fast-sailing flagship who first came into action. The Royal Sovereign plunged into the enemy line just astern of the Spanish Admiral Alava's craft, the big three decker, Santa Anna, which caught the Sovereign's starboard broadside.

Collingwood was in his element. "What would Nelson give to be here!" he cried to Rotherham, his captain. Nelson for his part called Collingwood a "noble fellow," as the Victory, flying every battle ensign her flag locker would yield, plunged into the fighting. The admiral headed for his old acquaintance, the Santissima Trinidad, a huge craft of no less than four decks, which greeted him with a terrific blast from her tiers of cannon. Scott, the admiral's secretary, fell at the first fire. A double-headed shot mowed eight marines, drawn up with the guard close by the Admiral's side. Another shot whizzed between Nelson and Hardy, the Victory's commander. "Warm work," said Nelson; "Too warm to last long."

In the tops of the enemy's ships soldier riflemen were busily at work. To them Nelson, in his admiral's uniform, with four stars of the orders with which he was invested on his left breast, was a shining mark. Beatty, the Victory's surgeon, and Scott, her chaplain, begged him to remove these decorations, but Nelson answered: "In honor I gained them and in honor I will die with them."

No less than 60 men aboard the Victory had been killed before she fired a gun. Then she was laid along side the Redoubtable, her guns touching the French ship through the timber of which their shot went crashing. Her larboard battery, meanwhile, was busily engaged with the Bucentaure, Villeneuve's flagship, and the Santissima Trinidad. Harvey, who saw her thus engaged from the Temeraire, declared afterward that she seemed to belch fire. All the other British ships were similarly occupied. The cannonade was terrific, the slaughter dreadful. The French and Spanish, who for the most part had gone into action without flags, were now producing them in order to surrender. Villeneuve's fleet was being knocked to pieces about him.

Twice Nelson gave the order to cease firing upon the Redoubtable, believing she had struck, but it was from this vessel that he received his death. An infantryman in her mizzen top took careful aim at the gallant figure on the Victory's quarterdeck and sent a musket ball through the epaulet on his left shoulder. He fell upon his face in the pool of blood left by Scott, his dead secretary. Adair and his marines sprang to the stricken admiral's side. "They have done for me at last, Hardy," he said. "My backbone is shot through."

covered his face and his stars with his handkerchief that neither the enemy nor his own gallant seamen might know who it was that was dying.

In the cockpit, where he waved away the surgeon, declaring that time spent on him was but wasted, when it might save the life of some other man, the admiral could hear the crew of the Victory cheering as ship after ship in the enemy line hauled down her colors.

"I hope," said the dying leader, "no English ship has struck."
"No fear," answered Hardy.
"Then I am satisfied," whispered Nelson. "Thank God I have done my duty."

A little later he asked the sorrowing Hardy to kiss him. Afterward he commended to the care of his nation Lady Hamilton and his daughter, Horatia. Then three hours after he had sustained his wound and with the splendid triumph wrought by his skill and bravery all about him, he died.

Of the allied fleet no less than 18—Nelson had predicted 20—surrendered to the English. Four of the van who escaped subsequently fell victims to the squadron of Sir Richard Strachan. Only 11 craft of the squadron limped back into Cadiz where they lay quieted under Rosily until they forced surrender to the Spaniards by the outbreak of the Peninsular war. Napoleon's plan for the invasion of England could no longer possess existence.

HE TRIED TO QUIT TOBACCO

Tokyo Lawyer, After Months of Abstinence, Resumed Smoking on "Doctor's Orders."

A prominent Tokyo barrister-at-law, Mr. Masuo Soeda, has long been a lover of tobacco and so have the members of his family, says East and West. Most of the servants in his household were likewise addicted to "the weed." One day last winter Mr. Soeda unexpectedly issued an anti-tobacco proclamation! He assembled the entire household and delivered a tirade against the poisonous effects of nicotine upon the human system. From the viewpoints of physical welfare, moral well being and national economy, he commanded his domestic auditors to follow his example by ceasing the use of tobacco. All pipes, ash trays, cigars, cigarettes and humidors were burned or destroyed. The struggle was difficult for some of the family, but they were strengthened by the example of the master of the house. On June 1, however, Mr. Soeda was seen to light a cigar while seated in his library. A cynical friend, who had grumbled about the lawyer's prohibition of tobacco, exclaimed:

"So, you've been smoking on the sly, despite your resolution!"
"Not at all; this is my first cigar in five months," was the reply. "My physician thinks he has detected symptoms of fatty degeneration of my heart and has recommended tobacco as an antidote. Therefore, I have begun taking my medicine. That's all."

Many Indian Languages.
Before you write the government or the Smithsonian institution and request it to send you the Indian name for this or that thing, bear in mind that there is no one American Indian language, says the Popular Science Monthly. On the contrary, there are no less than one thousand languages in the two Americas and practically five hundred distinct Indian languages north of Mexico. Thus, it is impossible to give the Indian word for any English equivalent. If you do receive an answer to your inquiry, the word given is probably chosen from the language of the tribe which once inhabited the particular part of the country from which the request comes.

The Rolling Stone
Whatever may be your estimate of the man we call a rolling stone, it is well to recognize that he is incorrigible. No consideration of the temporal prosperity that perseverance in things unpleasant may bring has the slightest power to influence him. Reprove his restlessness, shut him up with a ledger in your office, you will not make him content. He has no fear of being set adrift in the world without resources, for of his chief resource—his readiness to seek adventures brave and new—no man can ever deprive him. He cannot be fitted to our ordinary measures. His delight is set upon a different kind of life.—Exchange

Happiness and Pleasure.
Ignorance confounds happiness with pleasure. Pleasure comes from without, happiness from within. People may be very gay and profoundly miserable. By the same token they may be really rich, yet actually poor. In either case their condition is due to the fact that the happiness which they sought, they sought for themselves. Therein is the poignant error of life. People who seek happiness for themselves fail to find it. But they who succeed in securing it for others, discover that on them also it has been bestowed.—Edgar Saltus.

The Navy league is in need of comfort kits for the men in the navy and so far has only half the number asked for. Church societies, clubs, and individuals are invited to interest themselves and take this matter up at once. The kits are made of blue denim, bound with a strong braid, and have compartments for carrying all the things needed by our sailor boys to keep themselves and their clothing fit and "nifty." They are small but compact and carry an unbelievable number.

The kits ready to be fitted with toilet requisites, etc., can be bought ready made for $1.00, and fitted by the individual. A fitted kit costs $2.00. But the Navy league is more anxious to get sewers to make them than to provide them ready made. A denim pattern, ready to make, costs 40 cents, and the cut material costs 30 cents. Societies or individuals may buy the materials as they choose and with a pattern to guide them cut and make the kits. Any information needed may be obtained by addressing the Kit department, Woman's section, Navy league, 1402 Stevens building, Chicago, Ill.

Fittings for the kits may be bought through the Navy league. For over fifty kits they will cost $1.10 each; for under fifty $1.25 cents. A club making fifty kits can usually get contributions from druggists and merchants in the way of supplies for them. Each of the kits contains the following: A comb, toothbrush, nailbrush (which is a small scrubbing brush), talcum powder, soap in a soap box, petroleum jelly, dental cream, shoestrings, pencil with eraser, corncob pipe, tobacco, needles, black and white thread, row of pins, bone buttons, safety pins, bachelor buttons, and six postcards.

The Navy league is in need of sewers to make these kits, and those who are willing to do their bit by contributing time to do this work should inform the kit department at once.

Designed for the Sportswoman

If anything were needed to add to the allurement of life out of doors during the days of Indian summer it could be found in the outfits that have been designed for the sportswoman this fall. Costumers appear to have put their minds earnestly on this matter and it has come to the place where she can demand style, and lots of it, along with comfort and convenience, in her life-in-the-open-air togs.

We have come to trousers, whether it is to tramp or camp or hunt or fish, or even to motor, when the talk is of sports clothes. All the signposts of fashion point trousers-ward, wherever skirts are in the way. We can bid them good-bye without a regret—to change them for something as smart and "nifty" as the hunting suit shown above.

Julia Bottomley

Mohair Is Favored.
Among the new dress fabrics for autumn serge and mohair stand out prominently. Mohair in particular seems to be enjoying a favor unprecedented. There is an English mixture of mohair with wool threads that is both beautiful and distinctive in texture and quality. The material has a handsome sheen and possesses excellent draping qualities. It comes also in very desirable shades. Broadcloth will be used for formal tailor-mades, but is not so popular for frocks, unless combined with satin. All frocks must suggest softness of lines now, and while broadcloth is rich and distinguished, it has a more or less heavy suggestion not compatible with indoor modes for this year.

Veils for Mourning.
Heavy crepe veils have almost been abandoned with mourning garb. The modern veil is of Brussels net—silk net, of course—and has a deep or narrow crepe border, according to the taste of the wearer or the period of mourning. The veil is supposed to be worn over the face for the first six months, and thrown back from the face during the second six months. After that a plaited veil is worn at the back and a bordered face veil supplements it. But if crepe veils have gone out of fashion, crepe as a trimming has not; quantities of crepe are used in mourning frocks of black hennette, black chiffon, black crepe de chine and black mohair. A very beautiful mourning fabric is black mohair and worsted mixture, which has a handsome, dull luster. If one may use the two, duals in juxtaposition, and a very rich texture.

Colored Crepe de Chine Chemises.
Crepe de chine chemises in lemon pink and palest cyclamen have supplanted the white, which have so long been popular. This is probably due to the fact that linens are scarce and crepe de chine as a substitute is infinitely prettier, although its wearing qualities leave something to be desired.

WASHINGTON. Photoplay Depicts the Fall of the Romanoffs.

"Theophrastus the Black Monk" is an important attraction connected to every person who is interested in the things that are making history. This great photoplay tells the story of the Russian revolution and the fall of the Romanoffs.

GARRICK. Return of "Very Good Eddie," Last Season's Big Hit.

That bright musical comedy, "Very Good Eddie," Detroit had the first opportunity to pass on the merits of "Very Good Eddie" for it was presented here ever before. It was taken to New York, where its fall was so emphatic that it ran there 13 months. And now "Very Good Eddie" comes back with a splendid cast, believed to be even better than on its previous visit.

With a list of assisting soloists that represents the most famous of musical celebrities the series of fourteen Friday afternoon and fourteen Saturday evening concerts of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will dominate musical life during the coming season in this section of the county.

All of these concerts will be held in the Detroit Armory, the former home of musical events in Detroit, because of both its splendid acoustics and its superior accommodations for large audiences. According to present indications these concerts will serve to eclipse all past records so far as attendance and box office receipts are concerned.

It is only necessary to mention the names of such famous artists as Mme. Amelia Galli-Curi, the vocal and instrumental colossus of the Chicago Opera Company; Mme. Alma Gluck, the most popular of American songbirds, and Fritz Kreisler, the distinguished violin virtuoso, to show the renewed interest attaching to the activities of this organization. The programs announced are also of particular interest in that they will serve to introduce many novelties in orchestral music.

The first concert of the season will take place on Friday afternoon, October 19, with Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, leading mezzo soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, in a program made up exclusively of new compositions by Wagner. The same program will be repeated Saturday evening, October 20, with the assistance of the orchestra in the Kresge Building, Detroit.

How Vessels Touch Bottom.

Vessels often touch bottom in harbors where there is apparently water enough to float them with several feet to spare. The government some time ago made experiments touching this matter, and its report says that such a vessel makes all vessels "squat" and more so in shallow water than in deep. This action makes all the way from a few inches to three feet difference in the draft of the vessel. It must be taken into account in dredging harbors.

ELINOR FINDS HERSELF THE OBJECT OF WALTER HUFF'S FIERCE JEALOUSY AND IS FRIGHTENED WHEN THE YOUTH THREATENS TO "GET" WARD, WHO ALSO IS TORN BY JEALOUSY

Synopsis—For years old Hillary Kingston lived with his daughter, Elinor, in a beautiful home on a hill in the suburban village of Woffingham. The neighbors knew nothing about the establishment, except that the father was quite wealthy, and the daughter, very good looking and gentle. In reality Kingston was head of an anarchist band, composed of Huff, Boroday, Talbot and Lethbridge, that robbed the rich and gave to the poor and oppressed. One day Old Hillary was shot dead, and the course of life changed abruptly for his daughter. The Rev. Mr. Ward, a young bachelor, began to take an uncommon interest in Elinor. Young Walter Huff of the gang confessed his love for her and she accepted it. Then Boroday was arrested on suspicion and his companions perpetrated a country club hold-up to get funds for his legal defense, but were sadly disappointed in the amount secured. Huff burned the parish house, hoping to steal funds that would be raised immediately to rebuild it. Elinor became more interested in the assistant rector after he nearly lost his life in the fire.

CHAPTER VII.

Ward brought her a cup of coffee, and stood by with satisfaction while she drank it. In his eyes there was a mixture of depression and joy. The parish house was gone, and this girl before him was to marry another man. But they would build another parish house, and who knew—

He drove her up the hill in his small car. At the top of a rise he stopped the car and looked back. The night's devastation showed clearly, a black wound in the smiling heart of the valley.

Elinor watched him.

"It means a great deal to you, doesn't it?"

"It's rather a face— Of course we will build again, but there are things that could not be replaced. That isn't what troubles me. The fact is, I am afraid I'm responsible.

"I was there last night, alone. I have a bad habit, when I have a mental problem to worry out, of walking up and down a room and lighting one cigarette after another. I am reckless with matches."

"Then perhaps, after all, Walter had not done it!"

The car climbed slowly. Ward kept his eyes straight ahead. Elinor cast little shy glances at his profile.

"You said you had something to worry out?"

He drew a long breath.

"I have had an offer to go to New York to a big church. It's rather a wonderful opportunity."

Elinor made no sign except to clutch her hands as they lay unglued in her lap.

"Then you will be leaving—us?"

"No," he said. "I shall not be leaving you."

"You like it here?"

"Very much." He turned and looked down at her. It was unwise. He realized that at once. So frail she looked, so softly, tenderly feminine! And because he knew that, after the night, he had not yet got control over himself, the merest hand-clasp as she got out of the machine was all he dared. But at the top of the steps Elinor turned.

"You will never know just how sorry I am," she said, and went through her garden to the house.

From that Friday morning until the evening of the following day Elinor was quite alone.

Hour after hour she spent pacing the terrace, looking down into the valley. On Friday night, unable to sleep, she threw a negligee over her shoulders and went down to her garden. The village slept quietly, but there was a light in Hillary's small window near the church. She remained on the terrace until the light was extinguished.

At dinner that Saturday Boroday's empty place cast a gloom over the meal. Walter Huff came a little late. Under the ease of his greeting there was a touch of uneasiness as he met Elinor's eyes. When the servants left the room, Talbot leaned forward to Walter.

"Now tell us about it," he said.

Huff was frankly triumphant, but he still avoided Elinor's eyes.

"It's working out exactly as I knew it would," he explained. "Having once had a parish house they cannot do without it. The vestry carried only about a third enough insurance. And there's another point in our favor—the rector's away. He's got rheumatism. They are going to take up an additional purse to send him to Baden-Baden."

"When?"

"Tomorrow morning. And tomorrow being Sunday, the assistant rector, Elinor's friend, will have it in charge until Monday morning."

"I shall warn him," said Elinor suddenly.

There was silence for a moment. Talbot smiled. Lethbridge looked astounded. Huff, leaning forward with his arms out before him on the table, confronted Elinor squarely.

"That's it, is it?" he said.

"I asked you not to do—what you have done. The children used it all the time. They played basketball there. Besides, my wish should mean something to you."

Huff shrugged his shoulders.

"If I had burned a tenement full of people—"

"A man was nearly killed. He was on the ridge-pole of the church and they turned the full strength of the water on him. I saw it. I—almost fainted."

"You saw it?"

"Yes," said Elinor quietly.

Huff rose angrily.

"You were there! And who was it who almost fell off the roof? Your parson, I suppose."

Talbot silenced the boy. It was Lethbridge who took up the argument. He understood her position and sympathized, he said. The fire was a mistake. But now that it was done—

He spoke of Boroday's critical condition, of their safety that depended on his, and finding her attitude to be unyielding, took refuge in her father's memory.

"If anything comes out, it will all come out," he reminded her. "It seems to me, Elinor, that you owe it to your father not to interfere. This isn't a new plan. Four or five years ago when the parish house was first built we talked it over here. And it isn't as though we mean to hurt this fellow Ward. It will be three to one; he'll make no resistance."

"Yes," she said. "Three to one. That is the way we fight. Oh, I'm one of you, I know that—but it sickens me, sometimes."

The men were astounded, frankly uncomfortable.

The conference got nowhere. Elinor acknowledged their duty to the Russian, offered all her jewels, in fact, for his defense. But she stubbornly refused to countenance the attack on Mr. Ward. Huff lapsed into sullen silence, his eyes on her. The other men found every argument met by silence, except for one passionate outburst.

"He is my friend," she cried. "I have never had any friends, except once, years ago, a girl. It was Boroday then who used my friendship for her. It was the Rutherford matter. Walter would not remember, but the rest of you—I tell you, I won't do this thing."

Talbot tried a new method. "It's a wealthy congregation," he explained. "It is not much for them, and it's safety for us. If we let Boroday go up, and he thinks what he will about us, he can make it bad for all of us."

Elinor turned on him.

"I don't care a rap for the congregation. Do you think he will let that money go without a struggle? The moment it goes into the offertory it ceases to be money and becomes a divine trust to him. He'll fight and—someone will be killed."

It dawned even on Talbot after a time that her solicitude was for none of them. When he realized it, at last, he sat back with folded arms and frowning brows. Here was mockery, for sure; old Hillary's daughter, reared on pure violence, and in love with a parson!—old Hillary's daughter and successor, defying the band to its hour of need, and quoting a divine trust, in extenuation!

In view of her attitude, there seemed to be nothing to do.

"We'll give it up, of course," said Lethbridge, after a pause.

There had never been any drinking in old Hillary's house. Only abstainers were ever taken into the band. But it was the custom of the two older men to remain at the table over their cigars, giving Walter and Elinor a half-hour together. That night, when Elinor rose from the table, Huff, although he rose with the others, made no move to follow her. She looked back from the doorway, a slim, almost childlike figure, with beseeching eyes.

"You must all try to think kindly of me," she said wistfully. "I care for you as much as I ever did. You are all I have, you three. It is only that I—have been thinking."

For the first time since the organization of the band, there was quarreling that night in old Hillary's paneled library. At the end of an hour Walter Huff flung out of the door, white with fury. He stumbled through the garden toward the garage, muttering as he went. In the rose alley he met Elinor.

"I was waiting for you," she said simply.

Huff stood before her, and the anger left his face.

"You're the one thing in all the world I felt sure of." His voice was heavy with despair.

"I've been thinking about Boroday—"

"Elinor, how far have things gone between you and this man at St. Jude's?"

She recoiled.

"I hardly know him."

"You think about him."

She looked down into the valley.

"I think of the thin, the stands for. It just seems to me that, when a man like that, not a dreamer at all, but human and—and keen, when he believes all that he does—"

"It was Ward on the ridge-pole, the one who nearly fell?"

"Yes."

"And you were frightened?"

"It made me sick. I—"

Quite suddenly he crushed her to him. It was as if he meant to drive away this barrier between them by sheer force of his love for her. But although she held up her face for his kiss, he released her as suddenly, without it.

"You're crazy about him," he said thickly. "I'm not blind. I'll get you for this!"

CHAPTER VIII.

Saturday evening it was the custom of the Bryants to entertain the rector at dinner.

Now, in his absence, it was the assistant rector who dined in the paneled Jacobean dining room of the Bryant house, swallowing much unctuous dictation as to church policy with his dinner.

Not that Ward was mild. But he had an easy way of listening to the advice of his various influential parishioners and then going ahead and doing as he liked. In nonessentials he always yielded. To him the church was so much bigger than his ritual.

That evening Mrs. Bryant had taken up the question of women in the choir. "Frankly, Mr. Ward," she said, ignoring her fish. "I do not approve of it. It's the feminist movement, I tell you. Before long they'll want to be on the vestry."

Ward glanced up, half smiling. The pear-shaped pearl, which usually hung at his hostess' withered throat, was, naturally, not there. From the pearl to the parish house, from the parish house to Elinor—thus in two leaps of Ward's mind he was far from the subject in hand.

"As president of the Chancel society," said Mrs. Bryant, "as honorary president of the Woman's guild, I protest against women in the choir."

Back to the choir with a jump came Ward's errand mind.

Elinor finds her relations with Huff and Ward becoming daily more difficult. But her problem is solved very suddenly and in an unexpected manner.

Love Hides the Scars.

"Love covers a multitude of sins." When a scar cannot be taken away, the next kind office is to hide it. Love is never so blind as when it is to spy faults; it is like the painter who, in drawing the picture of a friend, having a blemish in one eye, would picture only the other side of his face. It is a noble and great thing to cover the blemishes and to excuse the failings of a friend; to draw a curtain before his statures, and display his perceptions; to bury his weaknesses in silence, but to proclaim his virtues from the housetops.—Exchange.

A Wise Fish.

When a fish, a tiny creature that prefers a home close to shore, gets a desire to rove away from home, he gives his tail a lazy little wiggle and says: "Why swim, when I can ride?" So he fastens himself to a piece of floating seaweed or driftwood and rides away, sometimes far out to sea. He is a member of a very large family of various sizes, shapes and names. He's called the bienny.

ADAMS.

For the week starting Monday night, October 1, the Vaudeville Glasse company will present for the first time in Detroit, a farce-comedy, "The Seven Sisters." The story concerns a family which consists of seven unmarried daughters. Six of the girls are at the home of their mother, the widow of an army officer, and the other is at a convent. This girl, by far the best looking and the way into her older sisters have secured six wives. A thunderbolt is cast into the sky of domestic happiness by the appearance of this fourth daughter who calmly announces that she has been dismissed from the convent. "This strikes terror to the heart of the widowed mother as she does not believe there will now be a chance to marry the other girls with the most attractive one at home."

MADISON.

A screen comedy that will prove a most effective antidote for the blues or any other family-resembling ailment is "Hastings' Pops," a fascinating film version of Wallace Irwin's own Japanese school-boys stories which are so familiar to readers of the magazines and newspapers of the country. This attraction is noted for the week of September 30.

Fusuzo Hayakawa, celebrated Japanese screen actor, will impersonate the amusing young Jap.

Driven from his native land by the wife of a treacherous brother, the young Baron finds himself compelled to take a position as "hippy boy" on a boat bound for America.

WHY SACRIFICE QUALITY FOR "THE SAME PRICE?"

Don't be tricked into buying something you may soon wish you didn't own. Keep an ever watchful eye on the QUALITY of the clothes you buy this fall and see to it that you GET QUALITY—not PROMISES. "The Same Price" will have no appeal for you if you find you cannot get the SAME QUALITY. Raw wool, which formerly sold at 18c per pound, is now 50c to 60c. There was a time when all-wool fabrics were only $1.25 to $1.50 per yard. NOW they cost DOUBLE THAT. Linings that sold for 25c to 30c are NOW 55c. So you can understand why ALL clothing dealers who have MAINTAINED their quality standard have RAISED their prices.

BOND'S CLOTHES will appeal to the thinking man, who wants real quality at a nominal price. We now number among our REGULAR patrons men who thought it necessary to have their clothes tailor-made; they've found out this is NOT necessary. Others of our regular patrons paid a retailer at least $10 more than Bond's price for clothes that were in no way BETTER than Bond's. It is such men as these who APPRECIATE BOND QUALITY.

A Wonderful Assortment of New York Fashions

Bond's Clothes are New York styles and New York made—and when it comes to exclusive models, we show three to any other store's one. This because our designer, an authority on men's fashions, is ever on the alert to create something different.

Bond's show windows look like a section taken from the shopping district of Fifth Avenue. Here you see new styles—and better styles, and you'll find them here months before any other stores show them.

It doesn't matter what your size or shape may be—you can be fitted at Bond's. Our stocks include models for the short, stout man, the tall, thin man, the man who "has a waist line" and the man who hasn't.

IT IS NOT A HAY: IT IS A LEGUME AND BELONGS TO THE SAME PLANT FAMILY as the pea, bean, peanut, etc. Less than an acre was first planted, but the yield for 1916 was valued at $160,000,000, and there is now seven million acres under cultivation. It has been proven unquestionably that the same nutritious and medicinal properties of ALFALFA that produce such wonderful results in animals that are fed upon it are equally beneficial to man. Experts say that ALFALFA contains a greater percentage of nutritive and medicinal properties than any other cereal.

700 DEALERS IN THE STATE OF MICHIGAN ARE NOW SELLING ALCERCO PRODUCTS. LAST YEAR THEY SOLD 7,000 quarts of ALFALFA table syrup, 6,000 dozen packages of ALFALFA GUM, 5,000 GALLONS OF "FALFAY," the soda fountain drink, 22,000 lbs. of ALFALFA TEA, 40,000 lbs of KISSES.

This business was all done without a dollars worth of advertising so you can see the possibilities of our products with a thousand boosters and a big advertising campaign already under way.

HERE ARE A FEW INSTANCES OF WHAT $100 HAS DONE.

$100 Invested in "EGG O SEE" Company in 1905 Increased to $ 1,000

$100 Invested in "CREAM OF WHEAT" Increased to 7,000

$100 Invested in "POSTUM CEREAL CO." Increased to 54,000

An investment in the stock of the ALFALFA CEREAL CO. has greater possibilities than any of the above for this reason. We make five products that are all as important as any of the above. Our stock is now selling at $12.50 per share, cash with order, or $13.00 per share on the payment plan, $3.50 with application and $2.50 per month until paid.

THE MICHIGAN SECURITIES COMMISSION HAVE GIVEN US PERMISSION to sell 4,500 shares of our six per cent preferred stock and to the first thousand buyers, we will give one share of common stock with each two shares of preferred.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh, Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J.
