HEIRLOOMS AT POMONA

GRANGE MEETING

"Surprise Feature" Proves To Be Interesting Collection of Pioneer Relics.

Pomona grange met Tuesday at Macabee hall, Chelsea. At the business meeting in the morning it was voted to hold two Farmers' institutes, one in Ypsilanti under the supervision of R. J. Bird and the other in Chelsea under the supervision of N. W. Laird. Later in the day it was also voted to hold a fair in Ann Arbor some time next fall under the auspices of Pomona grange.

Dinner was served at noon and was followed by the afternoon program, including a recitation by J. L. Sibley, songs by Mrs. J. N. Dancer and the grange, a paper, "Democracy of the Grange," by Miss Flora Buell, reports of the delegates to the state grange, and a "surprise feature."

The "surprise feature" proved to be an exhibit of many old heirlooms and relics of pioneer days, some of the most interesting being as follows: A very large and impressive looking cap, with a high "stick-up" of red and white, which was worn by Elbert Nott's grandfather, also named Elbert, during the Black Hawk war in 1832-1833, also the sword he carried. A piece of hand-tack which William Laird carried during the Civil war. A china tea pot over 100 years old, belonging to Mrs. Philip Broesamle. A cow bell 100 years old, belonging to Mr. Laird. A paper fan formerly owned by Mrs. Olive Winslow's grandmother, who was born in 1769; also a white silk shawl, over 100 years old, formerly Mr. Winslow's mother's.

A wooden cradle, about 70 years old, which was used by several of N. W. Laird's relatives and later by himself. It was made by James Speer's grandfather. A musket carried during the Revolutionary war by Mrs. Laird's great uncle. A black shawl, 100 years old, worn by Mrs. George English's mother. A plate 100 years or more old, belonging to Mrs. N. W. Laird, and an heirloom in the McCoy family. There were also a number of other exhibits, all which proved of great interest and which claimed much attention during the noon hour.

WARREN HESELSCHWERDT

Grass Lake Boy Writes Interesting Letter to His Aunt, Mrs. Samuel Bohmet.

Under date of January 4th, Warren Heselshwerdt, formerly of Grass Lake, wrote to his aunt, Mrs. Samuel Bohmet, regarding his experiences at the South San Antonio aviation camp. The letter follows in part:

Your letter received a few days ago. I have been working in the kitchen lately and I am some cook. We have to feed about 300 men from our kitchen.

I like it here much better than I did. The weather has moderated; it's a lot warmer and I am getting sun burned. Have my hair cut real short and I look like a different fellow. I haven't used all of the soap yet; we don't get a good wash very often in the army. If you wash up twice a week you do pretty well and we have nothing to clean up for here.

This is a great country here. We had a sand storm yesterday and you couldn't see anything for two hours. Everything was all sand and our food in the kitchen was about spoiled.

Our kitchen is some different from yours. We have a tent, our stoves are outside and we cook the stuff in big pans. And you should see us do our washing! Mine looked worse after it was done than it did before. We have boxing matches every night, singing and lots of amusements to make the fellows forget about home.

I got a box of "cats." I was lucky to get it as the mail and packages are all mixed up. I think in a few days I will be in a permanent location where I will be more sure of getting things. I also got a box of "cats" from home and one from the Grass Lake W. C. T. U., so I'm not starving.

The Christmas bag the Red Cross gave me was made by Margaret Epler. I have written her and thanked her for it.

CHAPTER VIII.

Korak and Meriem.

For many months the strange life of the three went on unmarked by any unusual occurrences—at least without any occurrences that seemed unusual to the youth or the ape—but to the little girl it was a constant nightmare of horrors for days and weeks until she, too, became accustomed to gazing into the eyesockets of death and to the feel of the icy wind of his shroudlike mantle.

Slowly she learned the rudiments of the only common medium of thought exchange which her companions possessed—the language of the great apes. More quickly she perfected herself in jungle craft, so that the time soon came when she was an important factor in the chase, watching while the others slept or helping them to trace the spoor of whatever prey they might be stalking.

Akut accepted her on a footing which bordered upon equality when it was necessary for them to come into close contact, but for the most part he avoided her. The youth always was kind to her, and if there were many occasions upon which he felt the burden of her presence he hid it from her. Finding that the night damp and chill caused her discomfort and even suffering, Korak constructed a tight little shelter high among the swaying branches of a giant tree. Here little Meriem slept in comparative warmth and safety, while the Killer and the ape perched upon nearby branches, the former always before the entrance to the lofty domicile, where he best could guard its inmate from the dangers of arboreal enemies.

After the construction of the shelter the activities of the three became localized. They ranged less widely, for there was always the necessity of returning to their own tree at nightfall. A river flowed near by. Game and fruit were plentiful, as were fish also. Existence had settled down to the daily humdrum of the wild—the search for food and the sleeping upon full bellies. They looked no further ahead than today.

If the youth thought of his past and of those who longed for him in the distant metropolis it was in a detached and impersonal sort of way, as though that other life belonged to another creature than himself. He had given up hope of returning to civilization, for, since his various rebuffs at the hands of those to whom he had looked for friendship, he had wandered so far inland as to realize that he was completely lost in the mazes of the jungle.

Then, too, since the coming of Meriem he had found in her that one thing which he had missed before in his savage jungle life—human companionship.

The little girl idolized him, as she might have idolized an indulgent brother had she had one. Love was a thing unknown to either. But as the youth neared manhood it was inevitable that it should come to him, as it did to every other savage jungle male.

As Meriem became proficient in their common language the pleasures of their companionship grew correspondingly, for now they could converse, and, aided by the mental powers of their human heritage, they amplified the restricted vocabulary of the apes until talking was transformed from a task into an enjoyable pastime.

When Korak hunted Meriem usually accompanied him, for she had learned the fine art of silence when silence was desirable. She could pass through the branches of the great trees now with all the agility and stealth of the Killer himself. Great heights no longer appalled her. She swung from limb to limb, or she raced through the mighty branches, sure footed, lithe and fearless. Korak was very proud of her, and even old Akut grunted in approval where before he had growled in contempt.

A distant village of blacks had furnished her with a mantle of fur and feathers, with copper ornaments and weapons, for Korak would not permit her to go unarmed or unadorned in the use of the weapons he stole for her. A light spear and a long knife were her weapons of offense or defense.

Her body, rounding into the fullness of an early maturity, followed the lines of a Greek goddess, but there the similarity ceased, for her face was beautiful.

As she grew more accustomed to the jungle and the ways of its wild denizens, fear left her. As time wore on she even hunted alone when Korak and Akut were prowling at a great distance, as they were sometimes forced to do when game was scarce in their immediate vicinity. Upon these occasions she usually confined her endeavors to the smaller animals, though sometimes she brought down a deer and once even a lion, the lion, a great tusker that might have made even Sheeta think twice before attacking him.

After Korak had left the village of the blacks following his last thieving expedition the screams of women and

NATURALLY, AFTER THEY TRAVEL TOGETHER AWHILE, LOVE DEVELOPS BETWEEN JACK AND MERIEM

Synopsis.—A scientific expedition off the African coast rescues a human derelict, Alexis Paulvitch. He brings aboard an ape, intelligent and friendly, and reaches London. Jack, son of Lord Greytroke, the original Tarzan, has inherited a love of wild life and steals from home to see the ape, now a drawing card in a music hall. The ape makes friends with him and refuses to leave Jack despite his trainer. Tarzan appears and is joyfully recognized by the ape, for Tarzan had been king of his tribe. Tarzan agrees to buy Akut, the ape, and send him back to Africa. Jack and Akut become great friends. Paulvitch is killed when he attempts murder. A thief tries to kill Jack, but is killed by Akut. They flee together to the jungle and take up life. Jack rescues an Arabian girl and takes her into the forest.

children had brought the warriors in from the forest and the river. Great was the excitement and hot was the rage of the men when they learned that the white devil had again entered their homes, frightened their women and stolen arrows and ornaments and food.

Even their superstitious fear of this weird creature who hunted with a huge bull ape was overcome in their desire to wreak vengeance upon him and rid themselves for good and all of the menace of his presence in the jungle.

And so it was that a score of the fleetest and most doughty warriors of the tribe set out in pursuit of Korak and Akut but a few minutes after they had left the scene of the Killer's many depredations.

The little party of warriors was led by Kovodo, the chief, a middle aged savage of exceptional cunning and bravery. It was he who first came within sight of the quarry which they had followed for hours by the mysterious methods of their almost uncanny powers of observation, intuition and even scent.

The white youth and the white maid stood alone in the jungle when they were discovered by Kovodo's band. Akut had been made king of his ape tribe, and Korak, to Akut's sorrow, had left him to dwell with Meriem in the jungle. One of Kovodo's men leaned close to the ear of his chief.

"Look!" he whispered and pointed to something that dangled at the girl's side. "When my brother and I were slaves in the village of the sheik my brother made that thing for the sheik's little daughter. She played with it all ways and called it after my brother, whose name is Geeka. Just before we escaped some one came and struck down the sheik, stealing his daughter. If this is she the sheik will pay you well for her return."

Korak's arm had gone around the shoulders of Meriem. And then from behind him broke a hideous bedlam of savage war cries, and a score of shrieking blacks were upon them.

Korak turned to give battle, Meriem with her own light spear stood by his side. An avalanche of barbed missiles flew about them. One pierced Korak's shoulder, another his leg, and he went down.

Meriem was unscathed for the blacks had intentionally spared her. Now they rushed forward to finish Korak and make good the girl's capture. But as they came there came also from another point in the jungle the great Akut and at his heels the huge bulls of his new kingdom.

Snarling and roaring, they rushed upon the black warriors when they saw the mischief they had already wrought. Kovodo, realizing the danger of coming to close quarters with these mighty apes, seized Meriem and called upon his warriors to retreat.

For a time the apes followed them, and several of the blacks were badly mauled and one killed before they succeeded in escaping. Nor would they have got off thus easily had Akut not been more concerned with the condition of the wounded Korak than with the fate of the girl, upon whom he had always looked as more or less of an interloper and an unquestioned burden.

Korak lay bleeding and unconscious when Akut reached his side. The great ape tore the heavy spears from his flesh, licked the wounds and then carried his friend to the lofty shelter that Korak had constructed for Meriem. Further than this the brute could do nothing. Nature must accomplish the rest unaided or Korak must die.

He did not die, however. For days he lay helpless with fever, while Akut and the apes hunted close by that they might protect him from such birds and beasts as might reach his lofty retreat.

Occasionally Akut brought him juicy fruits which helped to slake his thirst and allay his fever, and little by little his powerful constitution overcame the effects of the spear thrusts. The wounds healed and his strength returned.

All during his rational moments as he had lain upon the soft furs which lined Meriem's nest he had suffered more acutely from fears for Meriem than from the pain of his own wounds. For her he must live; for her he must regain his strength that he might set out in search of her. But it was many a day before strength returned to him.

Meriem, bound and under heavy guard in Kovodo's own hut, had no doubt but that Korak would come back and still less that he would easily free her.

So now as she lay waiting for him she dreamed of him and of all that he meant to her. She compared him with the sheik, her father, and at the thought of the stern, grizzled old Arab she shuddered. Even the savage blacks had been less harsh to her than he.

Not understanding their tongue, she could not guess what purpose they had in keeping her a prisoner. She knew that man ate man, and she had expected to be eaten, but she had been with them for some time now, and no harm had befallen her.

She did not know that a runner had been dispatched to the distant village of the sheik to barter with him for a ransom. She did not know, nor did Kovodo, that the runner had never reached his destination; that he had fallen in the wilds of the desert.

Malibin and with the Valk-utiveness of a native had unfolded his whole mission to two black servants of the two Swedes. These had not been long in retailing the matter to their masters, and the result was that when the runner left their camp to continue his journey he had scarce passed from sight before there came the report of a rifle, and he rolled lifeless into the underbrush with a bullet hole in his back.

A few moments later Malibin strolled back into the encampment, where he went to some pains to let it be known that he had had a shot at a fine buck and missed. The Swedes knew that their men had been told that an overt act against Kovodo would quickly be carried to the chief at the first opportunity. Nor were they sufficiently strong in either guns or loyal followers to risk antagonizing the wild old chief.

The next day the Swedes set out for Kovodo's village, bent on securing possession of the person of the white girl whom Kovodo's runner had told them lay captive in the chief's village. How they were to accomplish their end they did not know. Force was out of the question, though they would not have hesitated to use it had they possessed it.

In former years they had marched roughshod over enormous areas, taking toll by brute force even when kindness or diplomacy would have accomplished more. But now they were in bad straits—so bad that they had not shown their true colors since twice in a year, and then only when they came upon an isolated weak village.

Kovodo was not of these, and though his village was in a way remote from the more populous district to the north, his power was such that he maintained an acknowledged suzerainty over the thin thread of villages which connected him with the savage lords to the north.

To have antagonized him would have spelled ruin for the Swedes. It would have meant that they might never reach civilization by the northern route. To the west the village of the sheik lay directly in their path, barring them effectually. To the east the trail was unknown to them, and to the south there was no trail.

The Swedes buy Meriem from Kovodo, and in fighting over her Malibin kills Jensen.

Superstitions About Salt.

It is a curious fact that, from the earliest times, many superstitions have clung about the use of salt. There is much evidence in Holy Writ for ceremonial uses of it. The Mosaic law commands that every oblation of meat offered shall be seasoned with salt, a command that is given, with variations, in various books of the Bible, such as Leviticus 2:13 and Ezekiel 46:4. In the old days salt was put into a child's mouth in baptism, and in some countries to this day the custom is followed of throwing a pinch of it into holy water to ward off the evil spirit.

If a baby had the appetite of a young potato beetle it would eat from fifty to a hundred pounds of food every 24 hours.

WORMS IN HOGS ARE INJURIOUS

Infected Animals Develop Into Pot-Bellied Runts.

SUCH PIGS DO NOT THRIVE

Mixtures Containing Charcoal, Copras, Etc., Are Believed to Be of Value as Preventives—Santonin Is Scarce.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Intestinal worms are common in hogs and are particularly injurious to growing pigs. Insufficiently fed, neglected pigs living in dirty pens and yards, fed from filthy troughs, drinking contaminated water, bathing in old hog wallows, and rooting and sleeping in manure piles and stack bottoms soon become infested with worms. Such pigs do not thrive, but develop into pot-bellied, profitless runts. Pigs should be kept clean and dry and the manure frequently removed.

Mixtures containing charcoal, copras, etc., are believed by some to be of value as preventives and destroyers of worms, but their usefulness probably depends upon their general effect on the condition of the pig and not upon their action on the worms. Other things being equal, a pig in good condition is better able to resist the attacks of worms than one that is not in good condition. Mineral mixtures may, therefore, by helping to balance the ration, tend to increase the powers of resistance to the ill effects of worms and other parasites. They should, however, be classed as tonics or conditioners rather than as worm preventives or destroyers.

Santonin, which was formerly widely used as a remedy for worms in hogs, is practically unobtainable at the present time owing to foreign trade conditions.

Effective Treatment.

The following treatment has been

SUCCULENT FEED IN WINTER

Acres of Corn Can Be Placed in Silo at Cost Not Exceeding That of Shocking and Husking.

Silage is the best and cheapest form in which a succulent feed can be provided for winter use. An acre of corn can be placed in the silo at a cost not exceeding that of shocking, husking, grinding and shredding. Crops can be put into the silo during weather that could not be utilized in making hay or curing fodder. There is less waste in feeding silage than in feeding fodder. Silage is very palatable and like other succulent feeds silage has a beneficial effect on the digestive organs. More stock can be kept on a given area of land with silage.

GUARD AGAINST HIGH PRICES

One of the Best Ways to Grow as Much Food on Farm as Facilities Will Permit.

One of the best ways to be insured against high prices for food is to raise as much of it on the farm as facilities will permit. Both meat and bread will be important next year. When we think of the importance of milk, pork, poultry, eggs, butter, beef, mutton and other foods derived from animals we are sure to be impressed with live-stock raising.

MORE AND BETTER PASTURES

Good Results Obtained by Clipping at Ohio Station—Ripening of Weed Seeds Prevented.

More and better grasses were noticed to result from clipping pastures after harvest in a survey made by the Ohio agricultural experiment station. Briers are removed and the ripening of weed seeds is prevented, so that the grasses and clover have greater chances for growth. Where the mowing machine cannot go, a scythe may be used.

IMMENSE LOSS BY INSECTS

Agricultural and Horticultural Interests Suffer Big Loss Annually by Pests.

One-tenth of the agricultural and horticultural interests of the United States are destroyed annually by insects, and our greatest safeguard is the destruction of these by the wild birds. The birds are our country's greatest aids to food conservation.

found to be very effective in expelling intestinal worms in experiments conducted by the zoological division of the bureau of animal industry:

Withhold all feed and water for 24 hours, then give each pig from 1 to 2 ounces of castor oil to which has been added oil of American wormseed as follows: Pigs weighing less than 50 pounds, one-half teaspoonful; pigs weighing 50 to 100 pounds, one teaspoonful; large hogs, two teaspoonfuls. Each pig should be dosed separately if the best results are to be obtained. Castor oil should always be given with oil of American wormseed. Other laxatives are not satisfactory.

Dangerous to Drench Hogs.

Drenching hogs is dangerous, as they are liable to get the remedy into the lungs. With sufficient assistance pigs may be held, the mouth kept open by means of a couple of loops of wire or rope, or leather straps, and the medicine given in a tablespoon or a large kitchen spoon. By this method, though it is troublesome, one may be certain that each pig gets his proper dose. After dosing with the above mixture pigs may be fed and watered. Repeat the treatment in ten days.

Change Pastures Frequently.

Healthy hogs become infested with intestinal worms from feed, water and soil which have been infested by the droppings from infected hogs. Frequent change of pasture is one of the best means of reducing worm infestation to a minimum. Hogs, however, should not be allowed to run at large on open range, as this favors the spread of hog cholera.

Swine can be raised when they are confined in limited quarters if the quarters are kept clean, but they will do much better and stay in better health if they have plenty of pasture. Divide the pasture into convenient areas, so that the hogs can be shifted from one pasture to another. This not only provides fresh pasture, but affords an opportunity to disinfect the pastures by plowing and reseeded or by exposure to the sun and weather.

CURING AND STORING SEEDS

Soy Bean Spoils Rather Easily Unless Properly Handled—Avoid Heating and Molding.

Soy bean seed spoils rather easily if not properly handled, and care should be used in curing and storing. After threshing the beans should be watched carefully to avoid heating and molding. When good and dry there is no such danger. A good plan is to spread the beans out on the floor immediately after threshing and shovel them over from time to time until they are thoroughly dry, then they may be safely be put into sacks or bins. The storeroom should be dry and have a free circulation of air. Soy bean seed loses vitality very rapidly and it is not safe to hold seed for planting purposes for more than two seasons.

ADD TO OUR MEAT SUPPLIES

Quickest and Cheapest Way Is to Increase Poultry and Egg Production—Eat Less Meat.

The quickest and cheapest way of adding to our meat supplies is to increase poultry and egg production. To double this production next year will give us 6,500,000,000 pounds of meat food in the form of poultry and eggs. By having this amount of poultry food for domestic consumption we will eat less pork and beef, and can send almost that many pounds of meat to Europe. We cannot increase any of the meat animals as rapidly or economically as poultry.

PLENTY OF SHEEP ROUGHAGE

With Supply of Red Clover or Alfalfa Hay Animals Can Be Carried Until Nearly Spring.

With plenty of roughage, such as red clover or alfalfa hay, sheep can be carried until nearly spring with little grain. Corn silage can be used to furnish succulence, although some losses and a good deal of trouble have resulted from improper feeding of silage.

RATS ARE QUITE EXPENSIVE

With Increased Price of Feed One Costs Eight Dollars Each Year—Better Keep Sow or Ewe.

Statistics used to tell us it cost $5 to feed a rat for one year on the farm. With increased grain prices, it costs $8. One can keep a profitable sow or ewe for the price of a few rats.

ATTORNEY TRIES CASE BY PHONE

Latest Plan to "Conserve" Results in First Court Trial By Wire.

Brighton, Colo.—With food, fuel and other commodities subjected to intensive saving campaigns, "conservation" is the popular watchword in the Rocky Mountain region. The latest plan to "conserve" has resulted in the first "court trial by wire" on record.

"Conservation of time, money, energy and fees" is what District Attorney Samuel W. Johnson terms the new wrinkle. Johnson's jurisdiction extends over several counties adjacent to Denver, and he experiences considerable difficulty in being present in the various towns of the counties when several cases are set for the same day in different courts. So the busy prosecutor decided to use the telephone.

Sitting in his main headquarters in Denver, with a telephone receiver to his ear, Johnson listened to counsel for defense plead before a judge in the local court here for the discharge of his client, a woman charged with "bootlegging." When Attorney Michael Waldron had finished his case for the defendant, Johnson picked up the transmitter and presented evidence over the wire of sufficient weight to convict the defendant, who was fined $100 and costs.

Johnson declares his new method of handling cases will also result in the saving of much gasoline, as he can avoid traveling from town to town in the "buzz wagon."

LEAVES "WAR BABY" AND NOTE AT DOOR

Tacoma, Wash.—Whatever the fortune that left a war wolf on the doorstep of Mrs. George W. Wagner, in this city, it was not the mother's lack of love for her infant.

A little advertisement which she left to be inserted in a Sunday paper reads:

"To the kind people who adopted my war baby: He was born October 2, 1917. For any particulars concerning him address 6033, this paper."

The child will have love and devotion, as Mrs. Wagner feels it is her patriotic duty to care for it.

FINDS HE WASN'T LOVED

But It Takes Policeman, Police Judge and $50 Fine to Convince Him.

Kansas City, Mo.—It took a policeman, a police judge and a $50 fine to convince Guy Wycoff of Kansas City, Kan., that Mrs. Dessie Brown, a pretty young stenographer, did not love him. They are employed by the same firm and were engaged for some time.

Finally Mrs. Brown decided she did not want to marry Wycoff. She told him so, but he still kept paying attention to her. Then she called a policeman and had him arrested.

In court Wycoff stated, "I thought she really loved me, but didn't know it." In order to impress on his mind that he had lost out the judge assessed Wycoff $50.

KISSES WIFE BY MISTAKE

Error Costs Husband $200 When Mate Learns Carass Was Intended for Another.

Chicago.—When Vernon Hooker gave his wife a warm embrace in a darkened room the recipient of his affections was well pleased. When, however, he asked "Where's Charlotte?" Mrs. Charlotte Hooker realized that her husband thought she was someone else. She had the erring husband arrested and he was fined $200.

A red kimono caused Hooker's downfall. Miss Catherine Bell owned the kimono and Mrs. Hooker was wearing it. Thus Hooker mistook his wife for Miss Bell and gave her what she said was "a big hug and the nicest kiss I've had in some time."

HEALTH WAS WRECKED

Nothing Brought Relief Until Doan's Was Used. Wonderful Improvement Was Effected.

"I had such awful cutting pains in the small of my back and hips, I often had to cry out," says Mrs. Ernest Wiethe, 550 Madison St., St. Charles, Mo. "The pain was knife-like and I couldn't turn in bed, in fact I was almost helpless. My feet and ankles swelled badly, my hands were puffed up and there were swellings under my eyes."

"I often got so dizzy I had to sit down to keep from falling and my health was completely broken down. The kidney secretions poured terribly in passage and in spite of all the medicine I took, I kept getting worse until I was a wreck."

"By chance I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and bought some. After I had used half a box there was a change and I continued to improve; the pains, aches and swellings left and my health returned."

Storn to before me. W. M. R. VOLTIER, Notary Public. ALMOST TWO YEARS LATER, Mar 25, 1917, Mrs. Wiethe wrote: "I think as highly of Doan's as ever. Whenever I have used them, they have benefited me."

MODIFIED TYPE FOR CITIES

Design Which Has Little of Elaborate Ornamentation, May Be Used to Advantage With the Average Surroundings.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

The never-ending desire for something "new" which is a characteristic of the American people, has its effect on architecture by bringing into use in this country the distinguishing characteristics of nearly every successful type of architecture which has ever been used in any part of the world. One of the attractive architectural adaptations which American architects have brought about is modeled after the Swiss chalet. The Swiss architecture is usually associated with rugged landscape. There are various places in the United States where the surroundings are suitable for the adaptation of this style of architecture. Many country estates in localities where the topography is characterized by abrupt changes in elevation with exposed rock surfaces, where the growth of trees and other natural features are agreeable, have been planned after the Swiss style to produce beautiful results. The house very often is built on the very edge of an abrupt cliff and the effect is all the more beautiful if nature has provided a clear stream which winds through the estate and passes at the base of this cliff.

Occasionally a beauty spot of this type is found within the boundaries of

He built his home closely to the Swiss model and placed it almost on the edge of the cliff. It is a decidedly rustic building with low pitch roof, wide balconies, distinctive windows and all of the details of ornamentation common to this style. During the summer months the "Swiss Cottage," as it is commonly called in Rockford, forms a beautiful picture in the background of which there are impressive oaks and many other trees, a mass of shrubbery and the contrasting colors of many flowers.

While it must be admitted that the true beauty of the Swiss chalet depends upon its surroundings, yet the characteristics of this style may be variously modified and applied to a house designed for average surroundings. An example of a house designed in this way is presented in the accompanying perspective view. There is little of the elaborate ornamentation which is found on the typical Swiss chalet. The use of heavy exposed timbers, which is a strong feature of this style, is suppressed considerably in this house, but enough has been retained to secure the rustic appearance which is necessary if the dwelling is to carry any resemblance at all to the basic style.

The exterior wall surfaces of the first floor are finished with gray stucco finished fairly smooth. The surfaces above this are covered with a city. An excellent example is found in Rockford, Ill., a city located near the north boundary of the state and about midway between the eastern and western boundary lines. The Rock river flows toward the south through this city and one of its tributaries, Kent creek, named after one of the two men whose names are found in the early history of this city, enters the river from the west in the section the city known as South Rockford.

First Floor Plan.

The prevailing rock formation underlying this section is yellow limestone and it happens that some force of nature during the past ages formed a jagged break in the surface of the earth starting at a point a few hundred yards from the mouth of the creek and extending roughly along its course until it is finally smoothed out toward the north and west. For about three hundred feet in its course the creek flows along at the base of the cliff, which is perhaps 60 feet high at this point. The land adjacent to this cliff, on either side of the creek, very fortunately came into the hands of a man who has devoted his entire life to the study and practice of landscape architecture. He saw here the possibility of working out a beautiful plan following the Swiss style.

GOOD ROADS

IMPORTANCE OF WAGON ROAD

One Drawback to Fall of Rain Is That Roads Are Made Impassable for Several Days.

But for one fact, all of us could rejoice in this rain, meaning as much as it does to the growing crops. The one drawback is the unfortunate fact that the rain will make the roads almost impassable for several days. But the rain is not to blame for this state of affairs. We are. We ought to have roads on which the only effect of rain would be to wash them clean—just as it does with the city pavements. And it's not for the joy-riders alone that we need such roads, says Wichita Eagle. If we had good roads, farmers, who can't work in their fields after a rain, could do their hauling on such days. Now the rain that prevents working the fields prevents hauling to market, except light loads, and at a prohibitive cost. The wagon haul of agricultural products is infinitesimal in distance, as compared with the rail and water haul, yet it costs actually more, according to government statistics. For the benefit of the farmer we need good roads.

MAINTAIN ROADS WITH DRAG

No Better or Cheaper Way of Keeping Highways in Good Order Than by Using Implement.

Road dragging is so simple an undertaking, providing the road to be dragged is first graded, drained and shaped properly, that a summary of its benefits cannot be presented too often, writes George B. Harrison in Farmers Mail and Breeder. Anyone can make a drag and even a boy can keep a piece of road in good shape with the proper instruction at the beginning. A 10-inch or 12-inch log between 8 and 9 feet long or two 3 by 12 planks with 2 by 6 reinforcing strips of the same length, four cross sticks, a chain, boards for the platform and a metal wearing strip are certainly procurable anywhere.

The theory in road dragging which has proved practicable for road improvement is to smooth and shape up the puddled earth of a road to fill the ruts and holes and force the water off the roadway. "Puddled" earth on a road is the wet earth which has been worked up by traffic so that it is dense and when compacted will not let the water seep away. If this compacting is done without any direction ruts and holes appear and hold the water and make a bad road. But if the puddled earth be spread smoothly over the surface of the road with somewhat of a rounded effect it dries firm and hard.

Road Drag Hitch.

and the water, instead of standing in the road and making the holes deeper, must run off to the side—and the traveler has a good road.

The road dragger, or "dragman," as he usually is called, is like a clay worker when he shapes up the puddled earth and smooths the road. He puts the surface in condition and gets the standing water off, and the roadbed dries in that condition instead of holding the water and letting the traffic work the ruts deeper. The dragman could not shape this up with dust any more than the clay worker could fashion his lump with dry dirt. But if he gets out right after a rain, while the earth is puddled, he can work his road and the traffic will help him, for the water will be forced out and off the surface. That is why it is so important to drag when the roads are not too dry to puddle or compact. Perhaps the traffic is sufficient to cut up the road after it is dragged, and this discourages the man who does the dragging. But in that case he should follow over the road and do it again if necessary and win the fight for a good road. If he waits until the road is dry because the vehicles rut up his dragged road he will simply plane off the surface and not remove the trouble. If he drags a second or perhaps a third time he will work toward a hard surface, impervious to water and with a minimum of dust, which is the evidence of a well-dragged highway. Perhaps, if the vehicles cut a road when it is first being dragged, the drivers may be persuaded to drive by the side, if that is feasible, while the road is first drying out or freezing.

Follow the Good Road. Follow the good road and it will lead to a good town and by many a good farm.

Dragging Public Roads. It is not difficult to prove that dragging the public roads regularly at the proper time probably is the most economical method of highway improvement.

Road Dragging Is Ahead. Even at maximum costs road dragging is ahead of other maintenance both as to results and for economy.

Use Full Width of Road. Get the traffic to use the full width of the roadway.

DAY OF TRIUMPH FOR YOUNG MEN

Vast Opportunities Offered to Those With Foresight to Grasp Them.

GREATEST HOURS IN HISTORY

Thrilling Moments of History Nothing Compared With Epoch-Making Events That Are Taking Place Today.

By FRANCIS TREVELYAN MILLER, LL. D.

What a day of triumph this is for young men!

What vast opportunities are offered themselves to young men who have the foresight to grasp them!

What an opportunity this very moment to be something, to be somebody, to make your life known and heard throughout the world. A year ago we were unimportant even in our own little towns; today the whole world is calling us.

We, who are living today, are living in the greatest hours of the world's history. Never before in the annals of mankind has the world been thrown wide open for every young man to test his valor and prove his worth.

As a youth, I longed for the days when great events were in the making. I wanted to live when new civilizations were being born; when soul-stirring heroes were treading the earth; when men were gods.

Dream Has Come True.

And here we are—in just such an age. The dream has come true. Romance and chivalry have returned from the past ages. Today we are all knights settling forth on the grandest crusade in the whole noble adventures of the human race.

What would you not give to have been a soldier under Alexander the Great in his conquest to destroy Thebes at twenty-one, to conquer Babylon at twenty-five, and to die master of the world at thirty-three years of age?

Or of Hannibal on his march across the Alps with his 90,000 foot-soldiers, 12,000 horsemen, and 40 elephants.

Or to have ridden with the helmeted hosts of William the Conqueror into the battle of Hastings when King Harold lost his life and his kingdom—and England was born?

What would you not give to have followed the heroic Joan of Arc into the battle of Orleans—to save France?

Or with the duke of Marlborough in the cavalry charges on the battle ground at Blenheim?

Or with Washington and his victorious army at Yorktown when Cornwallis surrendered—and the American nation was born—what a glorious moment?

Or with the duke of Wellington at Waterloo—to have been one of the soldiers who conquered the mighty Napoleon; to have stood at attention as he passed down the lines into exile and death at St. Helena?

What thrilling moments are these—and yet they are nothing compared with the epoch-making events that are taking place today. And to think that you are a part of them! That you are an important factor in their outcome! That you can march to victory with the mightiest armies in all human history!

Yesterday, you were unknown and insignificant; there was no opportunity for you to assert yourself; you were destined to live and die an ordinary, inconsequential life. Today—the world is calling you.

The Trumpet Call.

I can hear the beat of the drum. And the call of the bugle. Thirty million men are on the battle grounds. Over their heads fly the blood-stained standards of the nations of the earth. What a glorious vision—the strong men of the earth in battle array to storm the citadels of autocracy; to free the human race from despotism; to carry the flag of liberty and democracy to all the peoples of the globe.

I can hear the trumpet call. It is calling—me!

I can hear the cries of women and children trodden down by the brute heel of the invaders. I can hear the kings blaspheming as their thrones totter and fall.

I can hear the voice of humanity calling—calling to—me!

Who speaks? Who tells me to turn a deaf ear? Who tells me I am a coward and a fool? Think you I have no manhood within me? Think you I am weakling or knave? Think you I have neither a human heart or soul—nor even a glimmer of reason within me?

Mother of men, I hear you calling me! Women and children of Belgium! Starving babes of Siberia! Suffering Poland! Weary Russia! Heroic France! Chivalrous Italy! Noble Britannia! Bruised Roumania! My heart is bleeding for you. I see your upturned faces and your outstretched arms.

Men of the earth, I hear the tramp of your marching feet! And I am coming—coming to stand beside you, shoulder to shoulder; coming to be with you the greatest moment in the world's history; coming to write my name with yours on the pages of immortality; coming to save civilization; to "make democracy safe for the peoples of the earth"; to be one of God's noblemen!

I am coming, comrades, coming
