MRS. MARY J. WINANS.

Mary J. (Summer) Winans was born on August 27, 1839, at Tyre, Seneca county, N. Y., and passed away after a few weeks' illness at her home, 304 South street, Thursday, June 27, 1918, at the age of 78 years and 10 months.

She was married to Benjamin Winans, August 1, 1858. She was the mother of nine children, six of whom are left to mourn their loss, William H. of Lansing, Hon. Charles S. of Cienfuegos, Cuba, Albert E. of Chelsea, Michigan. She leaves six grandchildren, five great grandchildren, and two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Worden and Mrs. Nettie Briggs, and one brother, George Summer, all of Seneca Falls, N. Y. Mr. Winans died in 1894.

She was a member of the Congregational church, and although not able to attend in late years, her faith in Christ was strong and her hope for the future bright. She was a woman respected and loved by all who knew her and will be greatly missed.

The funeral will be held from her late residence on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. P. W. Dierberger officiating. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

CHELSEA HIGH ALUMNI

Wirt S. McLaren of Jackson Toastmaster at Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Chelsea High School Alumni association was held Friday evening at Maccabee hall. The usual banquet was eliminated, but a short program, followed by luncheon and dancing served to pass a very pleasant evening.

The hall was tastefully decorated with the association colors, American flags and flowers. Wirt S. McLaren of Jackson was toastmaster and toasts were given by Paul Niehaus, Herbert Vogel, Ransom Armstrong and Robert Lawrence. Music was furnished by Bates orchestra of Ann Arbor.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Robert Lawrence; vice president, Reuben Wagner; secretary, Jennie Ives; treasurer, Herbert Vogel.

MISS MARY WELSH.

Miss Mary Welsh, a former resident of Dexter township, died Tuesday, June 25, 1918, in Ann Arbor, where she had made her home during the past year. She was about 60 years of age. Miss Welsh had been a successful teacher for many years and up until about a year ago had taught in the Grand Rapids high school for 17 years, being obliged to resign that position on account of failing health.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. William Cassidy of Lyndon, and two brothers, James of Grand Rapids and John of Dexter.

The funeral will be held from St. Joseph's church, Dexter, Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Interment in the Dexter Center cemetery.

BURNED BY ACID.

Clayton Hoeselschwerdt was painfully burned about the face yesterday by the explosion of a sulphuric acid bottle. He was charging a fire extinguisher and the cork of the acid bottle stuck. He attempted to dig it out and so agitated the acid that a gas was generated and forced the cork out. A fine spray of acid was thrown over Clayton's face, but fortunately his glasses protected his eyes. His burns are painful, but not serious.

FRANCISCO.

Mrs. Henry Notten, Chester Notten and Mr. and Mrs. Erle Notten were visitors in Lima, Sunday, at the home of Emmet Dancer.

Milton Bohne of Camp Custer spent Saturday evening and Sunday with his parents here.

Henry Kalmbach and family spent Sunday at the home of Geo. Bohne, west of Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Harvey and family, Catherine Lehman, Henry Lehman and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mushbach spent Sunday at Camp Custer.

Mrs. Lillian Nothdurft and son Milton are spending a few days in Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Chas. Reimenschneider, Mrs. Fred Notten, Miss Ricka Kalmbach and Lawrence Reimenschneider attended the graduation exercises in Ypsilanti, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beeman and family and Joe Walz and family were entertained Sunday at the home of B. C. Whitaker.

Mrs. Elert Notten spent over Sunday in Detroit.

Walter Kalmbach of Ann Arbor spent Sunday at the parental home.

Miss Mabelle Notten is spending a few days in Chelsea with Mrs. Carl Mast.

Lyle Harvey returned home Sunday after spending some time in Detroit with his aunt, Mrs. Ashley Holden.

Mrs. Herman Fahrner spent a few days of last week in Detroit, with Mrs. Frank Riggs.

Children's Day exercises will be given Sunday evening, June 30th, at the Salem G. M. E. church.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for the many acts of kindness shown us during our bereavement.

STATE CONSTABULARY HERE

Twenty-Nine Mounted Men En Route to Monroe County.

A detachment of twenty-nine mounted men of the State Constabulary camped in Chelsea, Tuesday night, on the Holmes lot in the northern part of town.

The men were en route to Monroe county where they will patrol the highways leading into the state from Toledo in an effort to break up the importations of liquor from Ohio.

The men will be divided into three shifts and will be on duty day and night. They will stop and search all conveyances and vehicles as they see fit and if drivers do not stop on command, it is understood that the constabulary has orders to use force if necessary.

The detachment marched from Mason, Tuesday. They spent the noon hour in Stockbridge and camped over night here. Wednesday morning they were on the road by six o'clock and expected to make their noon camp about midway between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti.

GOODYEAR-LEEKE REUNION.

The annual reunion of the Goodyear and Leeke families was held at Clear lake, Wednesday, June 26th, guests numbering 106 being present from Ann Arbor, Waterloo, Grass Lake, Mason, Munith, Jackson, Dansville, Gregory, Stockbridge and Chelsea.

Mrs. Sarah Goodyear Smith of this place, 77 years of age, was the oldest person present, and Grace Mellen-camp of Grass Lake, two years old, the youngest. During the past year there have been two marriages, one death and one birth.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, E. A. Cronan of Grass Lake; vice president, O. Gorton of Waterloo; secretary, Mrs. Mac Rithmiller of Munith; treasurer, Fred Howlett of Stockbridge. The after dinner sports included the usual quoit pitching contest. The meeting next year will be held at Clear lake.

Those from Chelsea who attended the reunion were: Mrs. Sarah Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Stephenson and Fred Artz.

RED CROSS NOTES.

New members are: Mrs. A. K. Collins, Mrs. Frank Grieh.

The membership of the North Lake auxiliary has been increased from 28 to 40 members.

The L. O. T. M. has formed an auxiliary. Mrs. George Runciman is chairman and Mrs. Roy Harris is inspector.

Donations of two pairs of gray knitted socks from Mrs. Thomas McNamara and daughter, Miss Beryl, and a cash donation from Mrs. James Killam, are gratefully acknowledged.

Mesdames Warren Daniels and Warren Boyd have each completed 72 hours service in the surgical dressings department and are now entitled to wear a red cross on their coats.

Miss Ella Barber has volunteered to assume the duties of Red Cross secretary during the absence of Mrs. Beale on her vacation. All donations, memberships, and renewals will be received and recorded by Miss Barber.

The Red Cross auxiliary of the Chelsea schools has sent the following articles to headquarters in Ypsilanti: 104 Belgian quilts, 4 knitted afghans, 15 complete layettes, box trench candles, 7 boxes snips for pillows, 75 muslin shot bags.

PAYING OUR DEBT to FRANCE

"LAFAYETTE, we are here!"
In these simple words, General Pershing gave eloquent expression to the thought that America today is but paying her debt to France.

The words of General Pershing were spoken as he stood at the tomb of Lafayette, French aristocrat by birth but democrat at heart, who gave his own services and fortune to the cause of American independence and was instrumental in bringing from France the aid that turned the tide in favor of the revolutionists.

Those of the present generation who are not familiar with early American history are apt not to realize the magnitude of the debt which the United States owes to France and to the memory of the gallant Lafayette. In the dark hours before the dawn of freedom for America, France poured forth her men and money in quantities that were in those days most impressive.

It is not generally remembered that France furnished more troops than America at the battle of Yorktown, where final victory was won for the struggling colonists. In that battle there were engaged 3,500 militia under Gen. Thomas Nelson, 5,500 continentals under Generals Washington, Lafayette and Alexander Hamilton and 7,000 French under Rochambeau, besides the French fleet of nineteen ships at anchor in the York, commanded by De Grasse. Altogether, the total military, naval and transport service which France sent to our aid in the American revolution amounted to 47,000 men and 90 vessels of war and transports.

Gave Money as Well as Men.
France, moreover, advanced to the depleted treasury of the revolutionists the equivalent of $50,000,000, without interest, a loan or gift which she has never claimed. Furthermore she agreed, and adhered absolutely to the compact, that she would ask no share in such territory or booty as might be incident to victory. This agreement was the more remarkable in view of the fact that England had but a short time before taken the richest of French possessions—the Dominion of Canada.

And it was almost wholly due to Lafayette that this invaluable aid was given by France to the new republic. At the time of the declaration of independence of the United States, Lafayette was only in his nineteenth year. His life had been one of ease and luxury. His family was among the most eminent in France. He was a nobleman with the title of marquis. He never had encountered those influences that usually lead people in the fight for democracy. But, as if it were a vision calling him Lafayette saw the new spark of liberty struck in the West. The greatest fight of the world was being fought for the greatest ideal in the world.

The youth of nineteen realized this, and in the fight he was determined to take part. He made known his intention, but he was forbidden by royal command to leave France. He escaped to Spain, and from there aboard a vessel he had purchased himself sailed for America. He landed in Charleston and set forth immediately to congress, which was then in session at Philadelphia.

Congress at First Lukewarm.

His name and fame had preceded him, yet such was the unsettled state of affairs that when Lafayette went to Philadelphia congress was at first lukewarm concerning him. Some of the members could not sense the zeal and devotion of a man who had come 3,000 miles to fight in a cause not his own. There had been a contract signed in Paris through which Lafayette was to have the rank of major general in the American army. Even the wise Franklin, however, did not realize to the full the worth of Lafayette at this time, for in a letter of advice he speaks of the distinguished rank and family of the young soldier and hints that on account of the fact that he had a lovely wife and had left such surroundings at home that it would be well not to place him in any danger unless there should be some unusual emergency.

When the meaning of the self-imposed mission of Lafayette did dawn upon our forefathers recognition soon came. The rank of major general was conferred and it proved no empty title. Washington had gone to Philadelphia to consult with congress, and he and Lafayette, meeting for the first time at a dinner, began that friendship as proverbial as the affection between David and Jonathan.

Lafayette was then not of age, boyish in appearance, and had never studied English until he began his seven-weeks' voyage across the Atlantic. His zeal for liberty was such and there was such fire in his eye and such determination in his manner that Washington at once welcomed him to his staff. As soon as the opportunity offered the leader of the Continental army put Lafayette in command of large bodies of men and that judgment was well justified. The marquis was severely wounded at Brandywine without being aware of it for a time, so intense was his devotion to duty. When he recovered he renewed his activities at the right hand of General Washington, and lost no opportunity to serve the nation which was then coming into being. He was with the great leader at Valley Forge, where he conducted himself with such sympathy and understanding that he was soon as beloved by all the officers as by the commander himself.

The portrait painters of the time put the generals and colonels of the day in fine uniforms of blue and buff, but very often some of the ablest had only nondescript clothes, and some were even ragged.

Washington once remarked to Lafayette that to one accustomed to being with French troops the appearance of the soldiers of the colonies must indeed have seemed unusual.

"I come not here to teach, but to learn," was the reply of Lafayette.

Enlisted Aid of France.
Part of the year 1779 was spent by Lafayette in France, where he did so much to get substantial aid from the French government, which was then in actual war with Great Britain.

This victory ultimately rested upon the American standards was largely due to those activities in Paris, for the coming of the French fleet was a deciding factor in the long and unequal struggle for American independence.

Lafayette was received with affection and admiration by those who had so bitterly opposed his going from France, and he gained support even from the powerful Noailles, father of the Marquis. On Lafayette's return to America Washington sent him in 1781 to operate against Benedict Arnold in Virginia. After Cornwallis came with 5,000 more men Washington showed his confidence in the young general by continuing him in the command. Lafayette was near Richmond when Cornwallis started for him.

"The boy can't escape me," said the English general. Lafayette promptly retreated, made a junction with 1,000 of the Pennsylvania troops, and was reinforced by the militia from the Virginia mountains. With 4,000 men he gave battle to Cornwallis at Albemarle and sent him in retreat to Yorktown. The surrender of Yorktown soon followed, and Lafayette stood by the side of Washington when the British forces laid down their arms. He received the thanks of congress for his part in this campaign, which brought triumph at last to the cause of American independence. He returned to his native land with the love and respect of a people who revered him as second only to Washington himself.

Throughout the eventful years in which France was forming the ideals of republicanism on the ruins of an order which had passed from earth the marquis was one of the architects of this new fabric. To his native conceptions of liberty he had added ideals of freedom.

His first declaration of rights owed its first draft to him. To him also drawn in the revolution. To him also owed its tricolor flag, the same red, white and blue as that which glories our own Stars and Stripes, under which Major General Lafayette, U. S. A., fought for the existence of a nation of American freemen.

In the present struggle for the wresting of the world from the grip of an avaricious, selfish, and greedy few, French and American are shoulder to shoulder at the front. How our General Lafayette would have enthused and gladdened at the thought! The quarrel of the American colonies, many historians show, was not with the people of England but with a Hanoverian king who acted against the counsel of the wisest statesmen of British birth. The instinctive love of fair play which is implanted in the Englishman rebelled at the thought of a colonial taxation without representation.

Lafayette's attitude to the English was revealed when, while visiting his uncle, the Marquis de Noailles, then ambassador to the Court of St. James, he declined all invitations to visit arsenals and shipyards, believing that by so doing he would be taking an unfair advantage of a nation which was to be his foe through the stupidity of a ruler who could not and would not understand.

His home in Paris after the close of the war of the revolution became a place of rendezvous for both English and Americans.

"Since the war is over and we have won it," he wrote to General Washington in 1786, "I have, I confess, an extreme pleasure in meeting English people. Either as a Frenchman, or a soldier, or an American, or a mere individual, I find myself without embarrassment in the presence of that proud nation."

There could have been no gentler acts of courtesy than those which he did when Cornwallis had surrendered at Yorktown, for he had the highest opinion of the British commander as a man, and, as he modestly wrote Cornwallis, "held him in high esteem."

Long before there were hands stretched across the sea between this country and England, Lafayette, the American general, was doing much to bring about a reunion of the two nations which are brothers of one blood.

INSANE MAN CUTS UP HIS FAMILY

Chloroforms Wife and Children Then Seriously Slashes Them With Razor.

London.—The Health association recently discovered one of the queerest cases of insanity in Canadian medical annals. As a result, Frank Bolton, a former regimental bandman, now is in an asylum for the insane, while his wife and two children are in a hospital, recovering from starvation and wounds inflicted upon them by the insane man.

Bolton's insanity manifested itself in a novel form. He labored under the delusion that he was a famous British surgeon, and his mania led him to "keep his hand in practice" by operating on his wife and children.

Bolton obtained a bottle of chloroform and, mounting an ironing board on the backs of chairs, he put his wife to sleep for the purpose of operating for the removal of an imagined cancerous growth. The woman did not explain why she submitted, but when found by investigating nurses she was suffering from incisions made in three places. A dangerous wound had been inflicted in her abdomen, another in her hip and the third in her right leg.

Bolton, after cutting his wife, had taken his eight-year-old daughter and had operated upon her, making numerous incisions with a crude collection of old razors.

"Why did you do it?" he was asked in court.

"I am a noted surgeon," he replied, "I operated to scrape the bones."

A younger child, a boy of four years, was just recovering from an anesthetic when the nurses arrived. He, too, had been operated upon.

ALARM CLOCK DRAWS FIRE

American Patrol Leader Strung It on Wire in Front of German Trenches.

Paris.—Americans who had been trying to draw the fire of certain German batteries used an alarm clock to fool Fritz and caused the Germans useless expenditure of large quantities of machine gun and rifle ammunition. In order to fool the Germans an American patrol leader tucked an alarm clock under his arm and crept into "No Man's Land" in the darkness, fastening the clock to a wire.

Soon the alarm rang, whereupon the Germans opened fire. The alarm had been so arranged that the clock cut loose intermittently, and each time drew a violent fire from the enemy. Meanwhile the Americans rested in their trenches and enjoyed a hearty laugh.

BOY'S INITIALS ON INSTEP

Girl's Love Changes and She Now Finds Tattooing Is Embarrassing.

Oakland, Cal.—A pretty Oakland maiden who thought her romance with a soldier would be a lifelong love affair had his initials tattooed across her instep. She is now in grave distress.

The bathing season is here. She has forgotten her first love in spite of constant reminder and is now infatuated with a sailor whose initials unfortunately are different. Wardell Martin, Oakland tattooist, has been appealed to in an effort to remove the tell-tale initials. Martin says he will try to cover them by working in two flags on a blue ground.

Offers to Buy Powder for Own Execution

Memphis, Tenn.—Otto Dohrmann, a German arrested as a dangerous enemy alien, asked the jailer to shoot him. The jailer told him he was not worth the powder and lead that would be necessary to kill him. "Here," said Dohrmann, as he extended a dollar bill through the bars of the cell, "take this. Shoot me. That will pay for the ammunition."

Raise German Tanker

Five long, woolen muffers aided in floating the German tanker "Gut Heil," after spending five years on the muddy bottom of the Mississippi river off Baton Rouge, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. When the ship was finally floated and towed to a bank, where an examination could be made, it was found that the machinery was in far better condition than had been expected.

Yards For Chickens

Prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture

Free Range Is Best for Chickens, but They Can Be Kept Successfully in Small Yards in the City.

In most places where poultry is kept it is necessary to have yards inclosed by suitable fences which will confine the birds. When it is possible, however, to allow the chickens to have free-range, this is the best and most economical way of keeping them.

Fences dividing the land into yards increase the cost of equipment, labor and maintenance, and there should be as few fences as possible, as land can be cultivated and kept sweet more easily if not fenced, and the value of fresh, sweet land for poultry can hardly be overestimated. A grass sward can be maintained on good soil by allowing 200 to 250 square feet of land per bird (217 or 174 birds to the acre), while more space is necessary on poor or light land. A larger number of fowls are usually kept to the acre where double yards are used, and the land is frequently cultivated. Plymouth Rocks and the heavy meat birds in small yards require fences five to six feet high, while a fence six to seven feet high is necessary for Leghorns. The upper two feet of the fence for the latter may be inclined inward at an angle of 30 degrees, or a strand or two of barbed wire may be used on top of the regular wire to help keep them confined, while it is sometimes necessary to clip the flight feathers of one wing of those birds which persist in getting out. It is not advisable to use a board or strip along the top of the fence, as hens will often fly over one so constructed.

Produce Food, Mr. Town Man

Get Plastered and a Clean Conscience

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Speaking of food—how much of what you eat do you help to produce by your own work? Farms need labor. The difficulty is not an insufficiency of actual man power. There are plenty of men to supply the farms with help. But that man power is applied to other things and the farms will not be adequately supplied with help unless men turn temporarily from their present business or employment and work on farms in their county during the rush periods of cultivation and harvest.

If we were not at war you might feel free to disregard this as your personal duty. But we are at war; this is a war need, and you are not free to disregard it.

It is the duty of every strong man of farm experience or of farm aptitude, who is not now engaged in work of war value, and not engaged in work to which his personal attention is constantly indispensable, to go to farms in the agricultural territory adjacent to his town when farm labor needs are urgent and help produce the food crops which are essential to war winning.

You eat every day. Some man's hard work produced that food. Our soldiers in France must eat and somebody's hard work must produce that food. If you are so situated that you can help produce this food it is your duty to do so.

Get in touch with the county agent of the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural college or write the state agricultural college if you cannot get in personal touch with nearby farmers who need help. Lay off your present job or get away from your present business for a few days or a few weeks as you are needed. You'll lose money and weight. You'll gain blisters, sore muscles and a clear conscience.

British Food Experts Tell How Potato Butter Is Made

Butter, which formerly was an exclusive product of the cow, will in future be made from nuts and potatoes. The latest substitute to compete with the bovine nectar of the meadow and the slo has been announced by the conservation department of the United States food administration to be potato butter.

From the home of the "magna charta" comes a recommendation by the British ministry of food that potato butter can be made for ten cents a pound. Here is the modus operandi:

"Peel the potatoes. Boil until they fall to pieces and become floury. Rub them through a fine sieve into a warmed basin. To 14 ounces of potatoes add two ounces of butter or margarine and one tablespoonful of salt. Stir until smooth. Mold into rolls. Keep in a cool place. Use butter coloring to improve the appearance. If intended to be kept more than a few days, use butter preservative."

OUR LITTLE HOUR

Our little hour—how swift it flies
When poppies flare and lilies smile;
How soon the fleeting minutes die,
Leaving us but a little while
To dream our dream, to sing our song,
To pick the fruit, to pluck the flower,
The gods—they do not give us long—
Our little hour.

Our little hour—how short a time
To wage our wars, to fan our hates,
To take our fill of armored crime,
To troop our banners, storm the gates,
Blood on the sword, our eyes blood-red,
Blind in our puny reign of power,
Do we forget how soon is sped
Our little hour?

Our little hour—how soon it dies;
How short a time to tell our beads,
To chant our feeble litanies,
To think sweet thoughts, to do good deeds,
The altar lights grow pale and dim,
The bells hang silent in the tower—
So passes with the dying hymn
Our little hour.

Ways With Vegetables.

We tire of certain vegetables because they are served so often in the same way, until we grow to dislike them. "Variety is the spice of life," and every housewife should endeavor to put a little of this spice into everything she does. The individual is unfortunate who has been spoiled by a monotonous diet, for enjoying all kinds of foods, especially vegetables, which are so valuable to keep the body in good health.

Simple Cabbage Salad.

Shred a small cabbage, add a small amount of celery and a bit of chopped onion and pour over the cabbage the following dressing hot: Beat two egg yolks, add two tablespoonfuls of water, a tablespoonful of butter melted, a dash of salt and cayenne, and a quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Cook this over hot water and pour over the cabbage, stirring it over the heat until well heated, then serve hot.

Onions Stuffed With Rice.

Parboil a sufficient quantity of onions of even size, remove the centers and chop fine; mix the chopped onions with cooked, seasoned rice, season with butter and salt with a few dashes of cayenne, stuff the onions and bake, basting with good stock or butter and water. Serve as a garnish around a platter of chops. Any sweet butter substitute may be used in place of butter, in cooking. Sausage, leftover meats of various kinds, bread crumbs and nut meats, as well as cheese, all make good filling for stuffed onions.

Cabbage cooked with an onion finely chopped and served with a white sauce, is a good dish to add to ways of serving vegetables.

Onions and cabbage have the largest share of abuse given to the ordinary vegetables, as there are some who fail to digest them, while others object to their strong flavor. They are both rich in mineral salts, and acids, give bulk to food, as the roughage is necessary to aid in digestion, and are all-around desirable foods to serve, worthy of more attention.

Stuffed Cabbage.

Remove the heart of a small cabbage head, drop into boiling water and cook until tender. Cut in to the center in triangular pieces and pour over the well-drained vegetable a white sauce made rich with a cupful or more of finely chopped rich cheese.

Flunky Wastes Own Time as Well as That of Others

The feeling that idleness is a crime under present conditions is rapidly spreading all over the country. A sheriff in Sherman, Tex., recently announced that every man in his jurisdiction would either go to work or go to jail. The Ku Klux Klan, recently reappeared in Birmingham, Ala., with a warning to all idlers. Several states have recently passed laws providing that every able-bodied man must work so many hours a day, and many towns and cities have begun to enforce laws to the same effect.

But the idea that superfluous and unnecessary work is worse than idleness does not seem to have made so much progress. Yet it is potentially true, writes Frederick J. Haskin, in Springfield Union. The flunky wastes not only his own time but often also the time and money of those he serves. The man who takes a job that a woman could hold is not only neglecting the work he should do, but is depriving some woman of the independent income that might release another man.

Automobiles Climb Fences.

In many parts of the West and Southwest where automobiles are numerous it is becoming common to drive one's car over a fence instead of stopping to open a gate, drive through, and then shut it. The new and quicker method is made possible by the construction of inclines which make it an easy matter to mount to the top of the barrier and then descend on the other side. The inclines are usually composed of two tracks, set the proper distance apart for automobile wheels and supported by posts.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Soap and Fertilizer From Insects.

Locusts are plentiful in Uruguay and the farmers of that republic are compelled to keep up a constant war against them. Millions of these destructive insects are killed every year. Recently it was learned that soap, fertilizer and lubricating oil may be obtained from the dead locusts, and in the future they will be utilized.—Popular Science Monthly

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

His niece was expecting him. She had anticipated his visit and was prepared for it. From the emotion caused by his departure after the eventful birthday she had entirely recovered or thought she had. Stephen's ridicule and Mrs. Corcoran Dunn's congratulations on his return from the "encumbrance" shamed her and stilled the reproaches of her conscience. Mrs. Dunn, as always, played the diplomat and mingled just the proper quantity of comprehending sympathy with the congratulations.

"I understand exactly how you feel, my dear," she said. "You have a tender heart, and it pains you to hurt any one's feelings, no matter how much they deserve to be hurt. You feel that you may have been too harsh with that guardian of yours. You remember what you said to him and forget how hypocritically he behaved toward you. I can't forgive him that. I may forget how he misrepresented Malcolm and me to you—that I may even pardon in time—but to deceive his own brother's children and introduce into their society a creature who had slandered and maligned their father—that I never shall forget or forgive. And—you'll excuse my frankness, dear—you should never forget or forgive it either. You were a brave girl, and if you are not proud of yourself I am proud of you."

So when her uncle was announced Caroline was ready. She entered the library and acknowledged his greeting with a distant bow. He regarded her kindly, but his manner was grave.

"Well, Caroline," he began, "I got your letter."

"Yes, I presumed you did."

"Um-hm. I got it. It didn't surprise me what you wrote, because I'd seen the news in the papers, but I was hopin' you'd tell me yourself, and I'm real glad you did. I'm much obliged to you."

"I—I gave you my reasons for writing," she said. "Although I do not consider that I am in any sense duty bound to refer matters other than financial to you; and, although my feelings toward you have not changed—still, you are my guardian, and—and—"

"I understand. So you're really engaged to Mr. Dunn?"

"Yes."

"And you're callin' to marry him?"

"One might almost take that for granted," impatiently.

"Almost, yes. Not always, but generally, I will give in. You're goin' to marry Malcolm Dunn. Why?"

"Why, because I choose, I suppose."

"Um-hm! Are you sure of that?"

"Am I sure?" indignantly. "What do you mean?"

"I mean are you sure that it's because you choose, or because he does, or maybe because his mother does?"

She turned angrily away. "If you came here to insult me?" she began. He interrupted her.

"No, no," he protested gently. "Insultin' you is the last thing I want to do. But, as your father did put you in my charge, I want you to hear with me while we talk this over together. Remember, Caroline, I ain't bothered you a great deal lately. I shouldn't now if I hadn't thought 'twas necessary. So please don't get mad, but answer me this: Do you care for this man you've promised to marry?"

Enough to live with him all your life and see him every day and be to him what a true wife ought to be? See him, not with his company manners on or in his automobile, but at the breakfast table and when he comes home tired and cross maybe? When you've got to be forbearin' and forgivin' and—"

"He is one of my oldest and best friends," she interrupted. Her uncle went on without waiting for her to end the sentence.

"I know," he said. "One of the oldest, that's sure. But friendship, 'ordin' to my notion, is something so small in comparison that it hardly counts in the manifest. Married folks ought to be friends, sure, but they ought to be a whole lot more'n that. I'm an old bach, you say, and ain't had no experience. That's true, but I've been young, and there was a time when I made plans. However, she died, and it never came to nothin'. But I know what it means to be engaged, the right kind of engagement. It means that you don't count yourself at all, not a bit. You're ready, each of you, to give up all you've got—your wishes, comfort, money and what it'll buy and your life, if it should come to that, for that other one. Do you care for Malcolm Dunn like that, Caroline?"

She answered defiantly.

"Yes, I do," she said.

"You do. Well, do you think he feels the same way about you?"

"Yes." With not quite the same promptness, but still defiantly.

"You feel certain of it, do you?"

She stamped her foot. "Yes, yes, yes!" she cried. "Oh, do say what you came to say and end it!"

Her uncle rose to his feet.

"Why, I guess likely I've said it," he observed. "When two people care for each other like that they ought to be married, and the sooner the better. I knew that you'd been lonesome and troubled, maybe, and all I can say is that I'm awful glad for you. God bless you, my dear! I hope you'll be as happy as the day is long."

His niece gazed at him, bewildered and incredulous. This she had not expected.

"Thank you," she stammered. "I did not know—I thought—"

"Of course you did—of course. Well, then, Caroline, I guess that's all. I won't trouble you any longer. Good-by."

He turned toward the door, but stopped, hesitated and turned back again.

"There is just one thing more," he said solemnly. "I don't know's I ought to speak, but—I want to—and I'm goin' to. And I want you to believe it! I do want you to!"

"What is it?" she demanded.

"Why—why, just this, Caroline. This is a tough old world we live in. Things don't always go on in it as we think they ought to. Trouble comes to everybody, and when it looks right sometimes it turns out to be all wrong. If—if there should come a time like that to you and Steve, I want you to remember that you've got me to turn to. No matter what you think of me, what folks have made you think of me, just remember that I'm waitin' and ready to help you all I can. Any time I'm ready—and glad. Just remember that, won't you, because— Well, there! Good-by, good-by!"

He hurried away. She stood gazing after him, astonished, a little frightened and not a little disturbed and touched. His emotion was so evident, his attitude toward her engagement was so different from that which she had anticipated, and there was something in his manner which she could not understand. He had acted as if he pitied her. Why? It could not be because she was to marry Malcolm Dunn. If it were that she resented his pity of course. But it could not be that, because he had given her his blessing. What was it? Was there something else—something that she did not know and he did? Why was he so kind and forbearing and patient?

All her old doubts and questionings returned. She had resolutely kept them from her thoughts, but they had been there, in the background, always. When, after the long siege, she had at last yielded and said "yes" to Malcolm she felt that that question at least was settled. She would marry him. Had not Mrs. Dunn told her over and over again what a good son he was and what a kind heart he had and how he worshiped her? Oh, she ought to be a very happy girl! Of course she was happy. But why had her uncle looked at her as he did? And what did he mean by hinting that when things looked right they sometimes were all wrong? She wished Malcolm was with her then; she needed him.

She heard the clang of the elevator door; then the bell rang furiously. She heard Evans hasten to answer. Then, to her amazement, she heard her brother's voice.

"Caroline!" demanded Stephen. "Caroline! Where are you?"

He burst into the room, still wearing his coat and hat and carrying a traveling bag in his hand.

"Oh!" he exclaimed, "you're all right then! You are all right, aren't you?"

"All right? Why shouldn't I be all right? What do you mean? And why are you here?"

"Why am I here?" he repeated.

"Yes. Why did you come from New Haven?"

"Why, because I got the telegram, of course! You expected me to come, didn't you?"

"I expected you? Telegram? What telegram?"

"Why, the—Good Lord, Caro, what are you talking about? Didn't you know they telegraphed me to come home at once? I've pretty near broke my neck, and the taxicab man's getting here from the station. I thought you must be very ill or something worse."

"They telegraphed you to come here? Who—Edwards, you may take Mr. Warren's things to his room."

When they were alone she turned again to her brother.

"Now, Steve," she said, "sit down and tell me what you mean. Who telegraphed you?"

"Why, old Sylvester, father's lawyer. I've got the message here somewhere. No, never mind; I've lost it, I guess. He wired me to come home as early as possible this morning. Said it was very important. And you didn't know anything about it?"

"No, not a thing."

Steve hastened to call upon Sylvester and from him learned sufficient to grasp the fact that he and Caroline were practically penniless. This he imparted to his sister, but unknown to her he visited the captain and talked over with him the probable effect the situation would have upon the Dunns. He was anxious that Malcolm should be kept to his promise.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Unmasking of the Dunns.

CAROLINE sat by the library window, her chin in her hand, dreading watching the sleet as it beat against the panes and the tops of the park trees lashing in the wind.

Stephen uttered an exclamation. "Some one's at the door," he explained. "It's Sylvester, of course. I'll let him in."

It was not the lawyer, but a messenger boy with a note. Stephen returned to the library with the missive in his hand.

"He couldn't get here, Caro," he said excitedly. "Wants us to come right down to his office. Come! Rush! It may be important!"

The cab made good time, and they soon reached the Pine street offices.

"Hope he doesn't keep us waiting long," Steve fumed. "I thought, of course, he was ready or he wouldn't have sent for us."

"Ready?" His sister looked at him questioningly. "Ready for what?" she repeated, with sudden suspicion. "Steve, do you know what Mr. Sylvester wishes to see us about?"

Her brother colored and seemed a bit disconcerted.

"See here, Caro," he said, "maybe I do know something, or I can guess. Now, whatever happens, you've got to be a sensible girl. Somebody in the family must use common sense, and when it comes to holding a person to a promise then—confound it, Sis, we can't starve, can we?"

"What do you mean?" She rose and advanced toward him. "What do you mean by a promise? What have you been doing?"

"I haven't done anything," he grumbled. "That is, I've done what any reasonable fellow would do. I'm not the only one who thinks. Look here, we've got a guardian, haven't we?"

"A guardian! A guardian! Stephen Warren, have you been to him? Have you—was that where you were last night? Why did you go to him? What did you say?"

"I said—I said—never mind what I said. He agrees with me, I can tell you that. You'll thank your stars I did go before very long. I—well, here's Sylvester!"

The door of the room opened. The person who entered, however, was not the lawyer, but the very man of whom they had been speaking, Captain Elisha himself. He closed the door behind him.

"Hello, Steve," he said, with a nod to the boy. Then, turning to his niece, he stepped forward and held out his hand. "Caroline," he began, "I don't doubt you're surprised to see me here, but I—Why, what's the matter?"

The faces of the pair led him to ask the question. Stephen's face was red, and he looked embarrassed and guilty. Caroline's was white, and she glanced from her brother to her guardian and back again with flashing eyes.

"Captain Warren, my brother has hinted—he has said—What does he mean by holding some one to a promise? Answer me truthfully."

"I shouldn't answer you any other way, Caroline. Steve seems to be worried about the young man you're engaged to. He seems to calibrate that Mr. Dunn may want to slip out of that engagement."

His niece looked at him. Then she turned to her brother. "You went to him and—Oh, how could you?"

Stephen would not meet her gaze. "Well," he muttered rebelliously, "why wouldn't I? You know yourself that Mal hasn't been near you since it happened. If he wasn't after—if he was straight, he would have come, wouldn't he?"

"Stop!" She cut him short imperiously. "Don't make me hate you. And you," turning to her uncle, "did you listen and believe such things? Oh, I know what you think of my friends! I heard it from your own lips. And I know why you think it. Because they know what you are, because they exposed you and—"

"There, there! Caroline, you needn't go on. I've heard your opinion of my character afore. Never mind me for the minute. And, if you'll remember, I ain't said that I doubted your young man. You told me that you thought the world and all of him and that he did of you. That's enough—or ought to be. But your brother says you wrote him two days ago and he ain't been near you."

"I misdirected the letter. He didn't receive it."

"Um-hm. I see. That would explain."

"Of course it would. That would be the reason. Do you suppose if he were as poor as—as I am that I would desert him? You know I wouldn't. I should be glad—yes, almost happy—because then I could show him—could—"

Her voice failed her. She put her handkerchief to her eyes for an instant and then snatched it away and faced them, her head erect. The pride in her face was reflected in Captain Elisha's as he regarded her.

"No, no," he said gently. "I never supposed you'd act but in one way, Caroline. I knew you. If Malcolm's what he'd ought to be, I said, he'll be glad of the chance to prove how much he cares for you. But Steve appeared to have some misgivings, and so it seemed to me that his doubts ought to be settled. And," rising as there came a tap at the door, "I callate they're goin' to be."

He walked briskly over and opened the door. Sylvester was standing without, and with him were Mrs. Corcoran Dunn and Malcolm.

They were past the sill before Captain Elisha's greeting caused them to turn and see the three already there. Mrs. Dunn, who was in the lead, stopped short in her majestic though creaking march of entrance, and her florid face turned a brighter crimson. Her son, strolling languidly at her heels, started violently and dropped his hat.

Mrs. Dunn had come to the offices of Sylvester, Kuhn & Graves at the senior partner's request to be told, as she supposed, the full and final details of the financial disaster threatening the Warren family. If those details should prove the disaster as overwhelming as it appeared, then—well, then, certain disagreeable duties must be performed. But to meet the girl to whom her son was engaged and her brother and her guardian thus unexpectedly and unprepared was enough to shake the composure and nerve of even such a veteran campaigner as Mrs. M. Corcoran Dunn.

But of the three to whom the meeting was an absolute surprise—Caroline, Malcolm and herself—she was characteristically the first to regain outward serenity.

"My dear child!" she cried. "My dear girl! I'm so glad to see you! I've thought of you so much! And I pity you so. Poor Malcolm has—Malcolm," sharply, "come here! Don't you see Caroline?"

Malcolm was groping nervously for his hat. He picked it up and obeyed his mother's summons, though with no great eagerness.

"How d'ye do, Caroline?" he stammered confusedly. "I—I—it's a dance of a surprise to see you down here. The matter and I didn't expect—that is, we scarcely hoped to meet any one but Sylvester. He sent for us, you know."

He extended his hand. She did not take it.

"Did you get my letter?" she asked quickly.

"Yes—er—yes, I got it, Caroline. I—by Jove, you know!"

Captain Elisha stepped forward.

"Excuse me for interruptin', ma'am," he said, addressing the ruffled matron, "but Mr. Sylvester told me you and your son had an appointment with him for this afternoon. Now, there was something that we—or I, anyhow—wanted to talk with you about, so I thought you might as well make one job of it. Sylvester's a pretty busy man, and I know he has other things to attend to, so why not let him go ahead and tell you what you come to hear, and then we can take up the other part by ourselves. Ain't that a good idea?"

"You got my letter?" she cried.

"I—I—we did have an appointment with Mr. Sylvester," Mrs. Dunn admitted reluctantly, "but the business was not important. And," laughingly, "I do not care to discuss it here."

The captain opened his eyes. "Hey!" he exclaimed. "Not important? 'Twas about the rent size of your father's estate, Caroline," turning to the girl. "I thought Mrs. Dunn and Mr. Malcolm must think 'twas important, for I understand they've been telephoning and askin' for appointments for the last two days. As to discussin' it here, we went on with bland innocence, 'why we're all family folks, same as I said and there ain't any secrets between us on that subject. Heave ahead, Mr. Sylvester."

Mrs. Mary Hammond spent the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Theodore Wolff and family.

Cholera Morbus.
This is a very painful and dangerous disease. In almost every neighborhood someone has died from it before medicine could be obtained or a physician summoned. The right way is to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house so as to be prepared for it.

Mrs. Charles E. Enyeart, Huntington, Ind., writes: "During the summer of 1917 two of my children were taken sick with cholera morbus. I used Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy and it gave them immediate relief."—Adv.

Mrs. R. M. Hoppe left Wednesday for Chicago for a month's visit with her mother and sister.

Mrs. George P. McMahon and son Harold, of Detroit, are guests of Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Schmidt.

The Chelsea Steel Ball Co. has been closed down this week on account of being out of steel.

Miss Margaret Dunn of Ann Arbor has been visiting her sister, Mrs. F. E. Belser, for a few days.

Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Avery and son, Arthur Avery and wife, spent Sunday with relatives in Plymouth.

Robert Foster is making a two months' visit with relatives in Owosso, Mt. Pleasant and Rosebush.

Jack Staffan of Ann Arbor has been spending a few days with his grandmother, Mrs. Michael Staffan.

Mrs. W. B. Ewing of Jonesville has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Russell, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Baird of Dexter township attended Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Dierberger and family Sunday.

Misses Lena and Margaret Miller have been visiting their sister, Mr. Mary Ignatius, O. S. D., of St. Clair, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Derbyshire and son of Jackson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Mayett at the Crescent hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kanteleher and little son, of Flint, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kanteleher, the first of the week.

The Aid society of the North Lake church will hold an ice cream social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Thomas this evening.

Misses Jennie and Louise Ives gave a silver shower Tuesday morning in honor of Miss Minola Kalmbach. A dainty breakfast was served.

Prof. and Mrs. J. P. Everett and family, of Kalamazoo, were guests at the home of the Spaulding brothers of Sylvan over the week-end.

F. A. Mayett of the Crescent hotel has a pair of unique pets; two young skunks, which are kept in a cage on the north side of the hotel. Mr. Mayett found the baby skunks in the road while out driving and was obliged to stop his car to avoid running over the little chaps. They seem to be quite tame and enjoy the petting of curious visitors.

Miss Gertrude Kreidler of Tecumseh and Mr. Roy Tobias of Detroit were married Saturday afternoon at one o'clock at the Methodist church personage in this place, Rev. G. H. Whitney officiating. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Collier of Tecumseh. The bride attended the M. E. church in Tecumseh and sang in the choir when Rev. Whitney was pastor of that church.

$100 REWARD, $100.
The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Medicine that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY, Toledo, Ohio. Sold by all Druggists, 75¢.—Adv.

Better Service to You

We don't want you to think of the Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank just as a place to deposit your money although of course we are glad to have you keep as large a balance with us as is possible.

It is our desire to render our patrons every service and accommodation that can reasonably be expected of us.

The Burroughs Bookkeeping Machine, which we have just added to our equipment, makes it possible for you to give you better service than ever before in the handling of your account.

By the machine method, your account is kept in balance all the time. If, as sometimes happens, you want a statement of your balance in a hurry, we can give it to you, including today's checks and deposits, in less than five minutes.

A neatly printed statement made out on the Burroughs goes to each depositor every month. The statement shows all checks and deposits and gives the balance of your account to date, taking the place of the tedious and unsatisfactory plan of calling in and balancing pass books.

The machine affords absolute protection against errors in figure handling. It can't make a mistake. You can always be sure that your machine-figured balance is correct.

The increased speed, accuracy and protection of this mechanical bookkeeping system, added to our thorough knowledge of good consistent banking and business methods, make it possible for us to offer you an improved service that is equal to that furnished by the country's most progressive banks.

Mrs. Clair Dancer, nee Miss Vivian Klingler, graduated from the University of Michigan yesterday. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klingler, attended the exercises.

Clyde Gildart, son of W. B. Gildart of Albion and well known to many Chelsea people, has been promoted from captain to major and ordered to Camp Custer. He is only 30 years of age.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gildart died at Thayer, Kansas, Sunday, June 16. Mrs. Gildart was a sister of S. J. Heselschwerdt, Mrs. M. M. Campbell and Mrs. D. N. Rogers, of Chelsea, and Conrad Heselschwerdt, of Ann Arbor.

Sour Stomach.

This is a mild form of indigestion. It is usually brought on by eating too rapidly or too much, or of food not suited to your digestive organs. If you will eat slowly, masticate your food thoroughly, eat but little meat and none at all for supper, you will more than likely avoid the sour stomach without taking any medicine whatever. When you have sour stomach take one of Chamberlain's Tablets to aid digestion.—Adv.

Dr. H. J. Fulford received word this morning that his uncle, George Fulford of Lebanon, Mo., was instantly killed yesterday by lightning while riding on a load of hay. A daughter of the deceased, Miss Kate Fulford, formerly made her home here and attended the Chelsea schools.

A very welcome rain storm relieved the drought in this vicinity last evening. The storm was accompanied by a high wind and lightning and the limbs were blown off a number of trees about town. The wind was especially severe in the vicinity of John Frymuth's home, just north of town, and the roadway was partially blocked by the debris from the trees.

The annual fish supper of the Congregational Brotherhood was held Tuesday evening at the Storms cottage at Cavanaugh lake. About 60 were present to enjoy a portion of "brain" food. As the company was preparing to return to Chelsea, William Davidson, accidentally backed his boat into the lake, occasioning considerable excitement, but no serious damage.

NORTH LAKE.
Miss Mildred Daniels of River Rouge returned home Friday and expects to spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Daniels.

Miss Gency Fuller and Stephen Santure spent the week-end with friends in Norvell.

Claude Burkhardt of Crystal Falls is at the home of his mother, Mrs. Ella Burkhardt, for his summer vacation.

Harold Hay of Norvell is spending his summer vacation with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George Fuller.

Miss Backus is assisting Mrs. O. P. Noah with her household duties.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Moulton of Addison spent over the week-end with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fuller.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Boyce and children of Chelsea visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Noah, Sunday.

DEMENTED MAN IN DEXTER.
An unfortunate man who gave the name of Dalsey Douglas was found in an out-of-the-way barn in Dexter village, Monday night by the village marshal, Fred Wyman. When found the man was wearing a part of his underclothing on the outside and it was plainly evident that he was not in his right mind. He was taken to Ann Arbor to be cared for at the county jail until friends might be located.

You are now asked to pledge yourself to save to the utmost of your ability and to buy W. S. S. that there may be more money, labor, and materials with which to back up those who fight and die for you. When you do this be sure to remember that in being allowed to do it you are granted a great favor. Others give their lives.

LESLIE—The Leslie bank was robbed Monday night of $2,000. Stamps and postal cards comprised the bulk of the loot. A futile attempt was made to blow the new vault.

STOCKBRIDGE—Saturday about noon an electrical storm passed over this village but no rain fell. A large willow tree near the barn of H. W. Morgan was struck. From the tree the lightning followed the telephone wires and many phones around town were put out of commission. At the home of E. B. Ostrander the lightning entered his bedroom on the light wire, burning holes in the spread rug and bureau scarf.—Brief-Sun.

HOWELL—Glady's Milton, aged 14, and Jennie Hana, aged 13, alleged runaways from Lansing, are detained here. According to the story they told Howell officers, they walked to Waynesville, Saturday, slept in the woods, continued their hike to Webberville, Sunday, where they slept in a vacant house, and Monday walked to Fowlerville, where they had slept in a lumber yard, coming to Howell, Wednesday noon. The girls had a 22-caliber revolver.
