Farmers Planting Soy Beans.

Considerable interest is being manifested among the farmers of the county in planting soy beans with corn for silage. The County Farm Bureau interested a number of farmers in this combination last season, and most of the fields were successful. Considerable increase in acreage will be planted this year, so much so, that the seed dealers are co-operating by keeping an available supply of soy bean seed. There are quite a number of different varieties of soy beans and considerable of the difficulties previously experienced by farmers who have tried the crop, was due to the fact that they did not plant the proper variety. Instead of getting the full growing varieties, they planted those which made only a short growth and therefore were difficult in harvesting. A number of the seed dealers in the county have been able to secure the variety Hollybrook, which is the most desirable one to plant where a combination crop is desired. Inoculation is essential for the best growth of the soy bean crop. Culture for this purpose can be secured at the County Agent's office, in the court house at Ann Arbor. Eight to ten pounds of seed is sufficient to plant one acre. Care should be used to keep the beans and corn thoroughly mixed during the planting in order to have an even distribution of plants.

Look Out For Fraud.

Attempts have been made in various parts of the state to raise money by using the name or emblem of the Red Cross. In some instances, cards have been sold asking the buyer to give twenty-five cents apiece for them and stating that the proceeds will go towards helping the Belgians.

Of course, all who are familiar with the methods of the American Red Cross will know that no expedients of this kind are authorized. The organization owes it to the public, however, to take prompt measures to stop any efforts made by individuals or organizations to enrich themselves by the use of the name or symbol.

If anyone should come to you with anything of this nature, prompt report of the same should be made.

Airplane Was Compelled to Land.

Friday several airplane passed over Chelsea on their way from Selfridge Field to Jackson. From Jackson they made trips to other places. On Sunday Fred H. Lewis received a promise that one of them would land here that afternoon if a suitable landing place could be secured. It was decided to take a field on the Hutzel farm, just east of town, and it was marked with a large white cross so that the aviator could see it.

The word was passed along and many were present to witness the coming of the plane. About 3 o'clock it was seen in the western sky, and after a few changes in direction it passed over the field, which it circled several times, but failed to land, and then started back to Jackson.

It was afterward stated that the aviator thought that the field looked rough, but such was not the case.

But we were not to be cheated out of the landing of a plane, and when the flock started back to Selfridge Field they passed over Chelsea and one of them was seen to be in distress, and it was compelled to make a landing in a field on the G. W. Coe farm, east of town. The plane was in the charge of Lieut. McOmber, who was accompanied by a mechanic. The trouble was caused by a broken valve on the motor, which occurred just west of the village. Shortly after the landing a large number of people visited the scene and had an excellent view of the bird.

Monday forenoon an auto truck and trailer came from Selfridge Field and the plane was taken apart and made an ignominious trip back home.

Two Dangerous Wheat Diseases.

The office of the County Farm Bureau has just received notice concerning two new wheat diseases, which have been identified in several of the winter wheat producing states. These diseases are "Take-all" and "Flag-smut." Specialists in plant diseases from this state have had occasion to investigate these diseases in one of the central states and found that considerable damage had been done. The plant specialist examined one field of eighty acres which was rendered practically worthless, not only for this year's crop, but for all future wheat, barley, rye and possibly oat crops.

"Take-all" is a fungus root rot which until now has not been known in the United States. It is extremely prevalent in Australia and is undoubtedly their worst wheat disease. In its attack on wheat it causes the plants to remain stunted, the diseased stools sprouting on the ground and looking like quack grass. Instead of producing a normal head the shoots are replaced by wiry spindling outgrowths, which never amount to anything. It is characteristic that the diseased parts are discolored and rotted. A mahogany brown color is characteristic.

"Flag-smut" is another Australian disease, so far unknown in the United States. This disease is readily recognized by the black streaks along the leaves of the wheat plant.

It is extremely significant that the two diseases were found together in the same fields in a nearby state. It is evident that the two diseases were brought in on the seed at the same time.

The plant disease specialists of the department of agriculture as well as the Michigan Agricultural College are bending their efforts to find how extensive these troubles have become. The stunting of wheat plants caused by water-logged soil, frost injury, etc., should not be confused with these diseases.

Already two suspicious cases in Michigan have been reported to the state plant disease specialist. Any suspicious fields in Washtenaw county should be immediately reported to the Farm Bureau office, so that immediate steps can be taken to have these inspected. Special precautions ought to be taken where fields have been planted from seed of an unknown origin, purchased through seed dealers. It is hoped that the farmers of the county will co-operate with the County Farm Bureau in keeping these two dangerous diseases out of Washtenaw county.

One man was wounded in the battle, which began when Tony Mesek attempted to run down Deputy Cook when Mesek was ordered to halt. Cook fired through the side door of the car, and the bullet, glancing off the clutch, pierced Mesek's foot, nipping off one of his toes. Mesek immediately jumped from the car and dove into the river, swimming across. He gained a start on the deputy and his man, who went around by the bridge near where the capture took place, and led the men in a merry chase over fields and fences until captured two miles from his start. In the meantime, Alex Kempinsky and John Dueriski, also of Detroit, who were driving in a car behind Mesek, fled from the scene, and it was only after another exciting chase after these two that the trio were rounded up.

"I AM A PRISONER HERE."

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy young New Yorker, on a walking trip in New England near the Canadian border, is given a lift in an automobile by a mysterious and attractive girl bound for a house called Green Fancy. At Hart's tavern Barnes finds a stranded troupe of "burn-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Rushcroft is the star and "Miss Thackeray" the leading lady. He learns Green Fancy is a house of mystery. That night Andrew Roon and his servant, guests at the tavern, are shot near Green Fancy. Barnes comes under suspicion and stays to help clear up the double murder. He gets into the Green Fancy grounds; meets the mysterious girl, who gives him the cut direct, and is politely ejected by O'Dowd, an interesting adventurer. Later at the tavern another man of mystery, Sprouse, "book agent," Barnes visits Green Fancy with the sheriff and stays to dinner. Later still another mysterious personage, "Loeb," secretary to Curtis, owner of Green Fancy, who does not appear because of illness. Barnes again meets "Miss Cameron," the mysterious girl, who is a ravishing beauty in evening dress.

CHAPTER X.

The Prisoner of Green Fancy, and the Lament of Peter the Chauffeur.

He envied Mr. Rushcroft. The barn-stormer would have risen to the occasion without so much as the blinking of an eye. He did his best, however, and, despite his eagerness, managed to come off fairly well. Anyone out of earshot would have thought that he was uttering some trifling inanity instead of these words:

"You may trust me, I have suspected that something was wrong here."

"It is impossible to explain now," she said. "These people are not my friends. I have no one to turn to in my predicament."

"Yes, you have," he broke in, and laughed rather hoarsely for him. He felt that they were being watched in turn by every person in the room.

"Tonight—not an hour ago—I began to feel that I could call upon you for help. I began to relax. Something whispered to me that I was no longer utterly alone. Oh, you will never know what it is to have your heart lifted as mine—but I must control myself. We are not to waste words."

"You have only to command me, Miss Cameron. No more than a dozen words are necessary. Tell me how I can be of service to you."

"I shall try to communicate with you in some way—tomorrow. I beg of you, I implore you, do not desert me. If I can only be sure that you will—"

"You may depend on me, no matter what happens," said he, and, looking into her eyes, was bound forever.

"I have been thinking," she said. "Yesterday I made the discovery that I—that I am actually a prisoner here, Mr. Barnes, I—Stupid! Say something silly!"

Together they laughed over the meaningless remark he made in response to her command.

"I am constantly watched. If I venture outside the house I am almost immediately joined by one of these men. You saw what happened yesterday. I am distracted."

"I will ask the authorities to step in and—"

"No! You are to do nothing of the kind. The authorities would never find me if they came here to search. It was hard for him to smile at that! It must be some other way. If I could steal out of the house—but that is impossible," she broke off with a catch in her voice.

"Suppose that I were to steal into the house," he said, a reckless light in his eyes.

"Oh, you could never succeed!"

"Well, I could try, couldn't I?" There was nothing funny in the remark, but they both laughed back and laughed heartily. "Leave it to me. Tell me where—"

"The place is guarded day and night. The stealthiest burglar in the world could not come within a stone's throw of the house."

"If it's as bad as all that, we cannot afford to make any slips. You think you are in no immediate peril?"

"I am in no peril at all unless I bring it upon myself," she said significantly.

"Then a delay of a day or so will not matter," he said, frowning.

"Leave it to me. I will find a way." "Be careful!" De Soto came lounging up behind them.

"Forgive me for interrupting, but I am under command from royal headquarters. Peter, the king of chauffeurs, sends in word that the car is in an available mood and changing to be off. So seldom is it in good humor that he—"

"I'll be off at once," exclaimed Barnes, arising. "By love, it is half-past ten. I had no idea—good night, Miss Cameron."

He pressed her hand reassuringly and left her.

She had arisen and was standing, straight and slim by the corner of the fireplace, a confident smile on her lips.

"If you are to be long in the neighborhood, Mr. Barnes," said his hostess, "you must let us have you again."

"My stay is short, I fear. You have only to repeat the faintest sign that I may come, however, and I'll be here in my seven-league boots before you can utter Jack Robinson's Christian name. Good night, Mrs. Van Dyke. I have you all to thank for a most delightful evening."

The car was waiting at the back of the house. O'Dowd walked out with Barnes, their arms linked—as on a former occasion, Barnes recalled.

"I'll ride out to the gate with you," said the Irishman. "It's a winding, devious route the road takes through the trees."

They came in time, after many "hair pins" and right angles, to the gate opening upon the highway. Peter got down from the seat to release the padlocked chain and throw open the gate.

O'Dowd leaned closer to Barnes and lowered his voice.

"See here, Barnes, I'm no fool, and for that reason I've got sense enough to know that you're not either. I don't know what's in your mind, nor what you're trying to get into it if it isn't already there. But I'll say this to you, man to man: Don't let your imagination get the better of your common sense. That's all. Take the tip from me."

"I am not imagining anything," O'Dowd said Barnes quietly. "What do you mean?"

"I mean just what I say. I'm giving you the tip for selfish reasons. If you make a badly fool of yourself, I'll have to see you through the worst of it—and it's a job I don't relish. Ponder that, will ye, on the way home?"

Barnes did ponder it on the way home. There was but one construction to put upon the remark: It was O'Dowd's way of telling him how that he could be depended upon for support if the worst came to pass.

O'Dowd evidently had not been deceived by the acting that masked the conversation on the couch. He knew that Miss Cameron had appeared to Barnes, and that the latter had promised to do everything in his power to help her.

Suspecting that this was the situation, and doubtless sacrificing his own private interests, he had uttered the vague but timely warning to Barnes. The significance of this warning grew under reflection. Barnes was not slow to appreciate the position in which O'Dowd voluntarily placed himself. A word or a sign from him would be sufficient to bring disaster upon the Irishman who had risked his own safety in a few irretrievable words. The more he thought of it, the more fully convinced was he that there was nothing to fear from O'Dowd.

Peter drove slowly, carefully over the road down the mountain. Responding to a sudden impulse, Barnes lowered one of the side seats in the forenoon and moved closer to the driver.

"How long have you been driving for Mr. Curtis?"

"Ever since he came up here, more'n two years ago. Guess I'm going to get the G. R. for long, though. Seems that he's getting a new car an' wants an expert machinist to take hold of it from the start. I was good enough to fiddle around with this second-hand pile of junk an' the one he had last year, but I ain't qualified to handle this here machine he's expectin', so he says. I guess they've been some influence used against me. If the truth was known, this new secretary he's got ain't stumblin' me."

"Why don't you see Mr. Curtis and demand—"

"See him?" snorted Peter. "Might as well try to see Napoleon Bonaparte. Didn't you know he was a sick man?"

"Certainly. But he isn't so ill that he can't attend to business, is he?"

"He sure is. Paralyzed, they say."

"What has Mr. Loeb against you, if I may ask?"

"Well, it's like this. I ain't in the habit of 'bein' ordered around' as if I was just 'bein' at all, so when he starts in to cuss me about somethin' a week or so ago, I ups and tells him I'll smash his head if he don't take it back. He takes it back all right, but the first thing I know I get a call-down from Mrs. Collier. Course I couldn't tell her what I told the sheeny, 'ceptin' as she's a female, so I took it like a lamb. Then they gets a feller up here to wash the car. My gosh, mister, the darned ole rattle-trap ain't with a bucket of water all told. So I sends word in to Mr. Curtis that if she has to be washed, I'll wash her. Then's when I hears about the new car. Next day Mrs. Collier sends for me an' I go in. She says she guesses she'll try the new washer on the new machine when it comes, an' if I kow to stay on as washer in his place she'll be glad to have me. I says I'd like to have a word with Mr. Curtis. If she don't mind, an' she says Mr. Curtis ain't able to see no one. So I guess I'm goin' to be let out."

An idea was taking root in Barnes' brain, but it was too soon to consider it fixed.

"You say Mr. Loeb is new at his job?"

"Well, he's new up here. Mr. Curtis was down to New York all last winter betin' treated, you see. He didn't come up here till about five weeks ago. Loeb was workin' for him most of the winter, gittin' up a book or something, I hear. Mr. Curtis' mind is all right, I guess, even if his body ain't."

"I see. Mr. Loeb came up with him from New York."

"Kereet. Him and Mr. O'Dowd and Mr. De Soto brought him up 'bout the last of March. They was up here visitin' last spring an' the fall before. Mr. Curtis is very fond of both of 'em."

"It seems to me that I have heard that his son married O'Dowd's sister."

"That's right. She's a widder now. Her husband was killed in the war between Turkey an' them other countries four or five years ago."

"Really?"

"Yep. Him and Mr. O'Dowd—his own brother-in-law, I know—was fightin' on the side of the Boogarians and young Ashley Curtis was killed."

"Was this son Mr. Curtis' only child?"

"So far as I know. He left three little kids. They was all here with their mother jest after the house was finished."

"They will probably come into this property when Mr. Curtis dies," said Peter.

"She's a Widder Now. Her Husband Was Killed in the War."

Barnes, keeping the excitement out of his voice.

"More'n likely."

"Was he very feeble when you saw him last?"

"I ain't seen him in more'n six months. He was fella' then. That's why he went to the city."

"Oh, I see. You did not see him when he arrived the last of March?"

"I was visitin' my sister up in Haverhill when he come back unexpected-like. This fella' Loeb says he wrote me to meet 'em at Spanish Falls but I never got the letter. Like as not the dern fool got the address wrong. I didn't know Mr. Curtis was home till I come back from my sister's three days later. I wouldn't 'a' had it happen for fifty dollars." Peter's tone was convincingly doleful.

"And he has been confined to his room ever since? Poor old fellow! It's hard, isn't it?"

"It sure is. Seems like he'll never be able to walk ag'in. I was talkin' to his nurse 'bout the other day. He says it's a hopeless case."

"Fortunately his sister can be here with him."

"By gosh, she ain't nothin' like him," concluded Peter. "She's all fuss an' feathers an' he is just as simple as you or me. Nothin' duffy about him. I can tell ye." He sighed deeply. "I'm jest as well pleased to go as not. I went on. 'Mrs. Collier's got a lot o' money of her own, an' she's got high-falutin' New York ideas that don't seem to jibe with mine."

Long before they came to the turnpike, Barnes had reduced his hundred and one suppositions to the following concrete conclusion: Green Fancy was no longer in the hands of its original owner for the good and sufficient reason that Mr. Curtis was dead. The real master of the house was the man known as Loeb. Through O'Dowd he had leased the property from the widowed daughter-in-law, and had established himself there, surrounded by trustworthy henchmen, for the purpose of carrying out some dark and sinister project.

"I suppose Mrs. Collier has spent a great deal of time up here with her brother."

"First time she was ever here, so far as I know," said Peter, and Barnes promptly took up his weaving once more.

With one exception, he decided, the entire company at Green Fancy was involved in the conspiracy. The exception was Miss Cameron. It was quite clear to him that she had been misled or betrayed into her present position; that a trap had been set for her and she had walked into it blindly, trustingly. This would seem to establish, beyond question, that her capture and detention was vital to the interests of the plotters; otherwise she would not have been lured to Green Fancy under the impression that she was to find herself among friends and supporters. Supporters! That word started a new train of thought. He could hardly wait for the story that was to fall from her lips.

"By the way, Peter, it has just occurred to me that I may be able to give you a job in case you are let out by Mr. Curtis. I can't say definitely until I have communicated with my sister, who has a summer home in the Berkshires."

"I'll be much obliged, sir. Course I won't say a word. Will I find you at the tavern if I get my walkin' papers soon?"

"Yes. Stop in to see me tomorrow if you happen to be passing."

Barnes said good night to the man and entered the tavern a few minutes later. Putnam Jones was behind the desk and facing him was the little book agent.

"Hello, stranger," greeted the landlord. "Been fashayin' in society, hey? Meet my friend Mr. Sprouse. Mr. Barnes. Sit down, Sprouse! Give him the Dickens!" Mr. Jones laughed loudly at his own jest.

Sprouse shook hands with his victim.

"I was just saying to our friend Jones here, Mr. Barnes, that you look like a more than ordinarily intelligent man and that if I had a chance to buzz with you for a quarter of an hour I could present a proposition—"

"Sorry, Mr. Sprouse, but it is half-past eleven o'clock, and I am doctored. You will have to excuse me."

"Tomorrow morning will suit me," said Sprouse cheerfully. "If it suits you."

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Sprouse Abandons Literature at an Early Hour in the Morning.

After thrashing about in his bed for seven sleepless hours, Barnes arose and gloomily breakfasted alone. He was not discouraged over his failure to arrive at anything tangible in the shape of a plan of action. It was inconceivable that he should not be able in very short order to bring about the release of the fair guest of Green Fancy. There was not the slightest doubt in his mind that international affairs of considerable importance were involved and that the agents operating at Green Fancy were under definite orders.

Mr. Sprouse came into the dining room as he was taking his last swallow of coffee.

"Ah, good morning," was the bland little man's greeting. "Up with the lark, I see. Mind if I sit down here and have my eggs?" He pulled out a chair opposite Barnes and coolly sat down at the table.

"You can't sell me a set of Dickens at this hour of the day," said Barnes sourly. "Besides, I've finished my breakfast. Keep your seat." He started to rise.

"Sit down," said Sprouse quietly. "Something in the man's voice and manner struck Barnes as oddly compelling. He hesitated a second and then resumed his seat. 'I've been investigating you, Mr. Barnes,' said the little man, unsighingly. 'Don't get sore. There are a lot of things that you don't know, and one of them is that I don't sell books for a living. It's something of a side line with me.' He leaned forward. 'I shall be quite frank with you, sir. I am a secret service man. Yesterday I went through your effects upstairs, and last night I took the liberty of springing upon you, so to speak, while you were a guest at Green Fancy.'

"The World's Finest Army. The men who marched in '05 composed what historians have called the most efficient body of troops the world had known at that time. They were the victorious veterans of four years of desperate fighting; injured to hardship, experienced in horror and welded with discipline."

Washington's school children were assembled at the north end of the capitol, the girls in white on the stairs and the boys in white trousers and blue jackets on the terrace. The outburst of patriotic songs in childish voices was continuous. Across the front of the capitol on a huge banner was the legend:

"The Only National Debt We Can Never Pay Is the Debt We Owe the Victorious Union Soldiers."

Upon the drapings of the flags on the president's stand were inscribed the names of the 15 important battles and campaigns of the war: Atlanta, Wilderness, Stone River, South Mountain, Shiloh, Vicksburg, Savannah, Richmond, Petersburg, Bentonville, Donelson, Gettysburg, Chattanooga, Antietam and Spotsylvania.

Sheridan Not There. Sheridan's cavalry led the way, but the brilliant commander was absent.

It was a weak, slow procession.

There were cheers and tents from the crowd.

Fifty-four years ago it took the army two days for review. In 1915 it took less than four hours. Several sections gave their battle cries as they passed the president; cries that were hollow and lacking in volume. Others sang the war songs of 50 years ago in quavering voices. One section sang "Marching Through Georgia" with a brave show of spirit. They were Sherman's men.

A fife and drum corps passed playing "Hail Round the Flag, Boys," and many of those in the president's stand joined in the chorus. The veterans cheered again. As each contingent came along there would be a burst of applause.

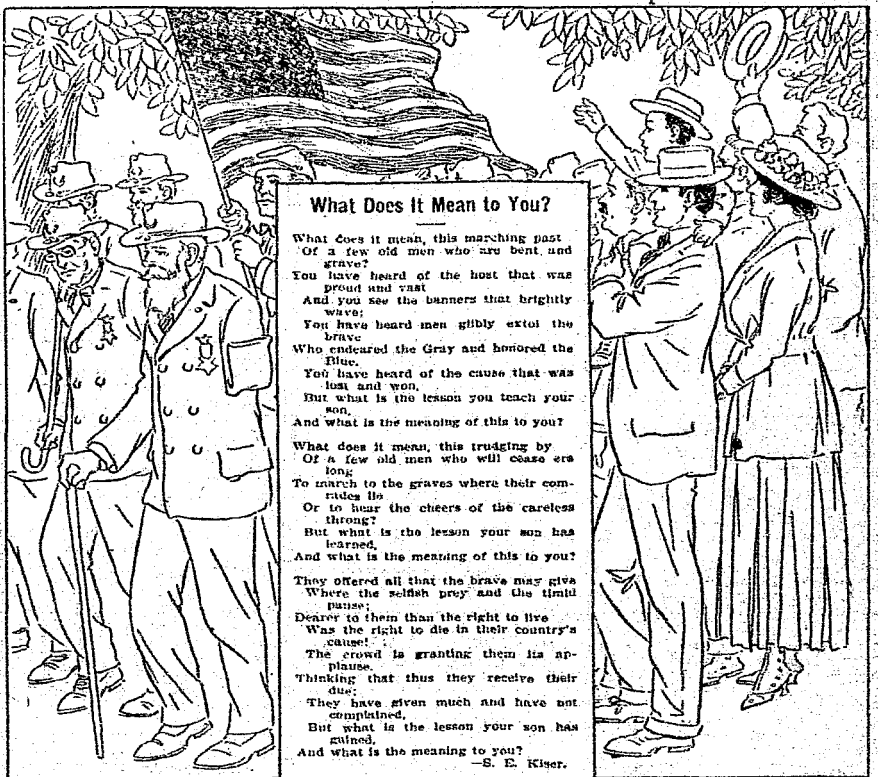

It was a tired pageant by the time the president's reviewing stand was reached after a march of a mile from the capitol to the White House. The men appeared exhausted when they passed. The president stood throughout the entire review, removing his hat whenever the American flag passed.

The president stood on the same spot from which President Johnson viewed the mighty host. A chilly wind tempered the sun and the sky was cloudless. It was the last Grand Review.

Memorial Day

What Does It Mean to You?

What does it mean, this marching past Of a few old men who are bent and gray? You have heard of the host that was proud and vast And you see the banners that brightly wave; You have heard men glibly extol the brave Who endeared the Gray and honored the Blue. You have heard of the cause that was lost and won, But what is the lesson you teach your son, And what is the meaning of this to you?

What does it mean, this trudging by Of a few old men who will cease ere long To march to the graves where their comrades lie Or to hear the cheers of the careless throng? But what is the lesson your son has learned, And what is the meaning of this to you?

They offered all that the brave may give Where the selfish prey and the timid pause; Dearer to them than the right to live Was the right to die in their country's cause! The crowd is granting them its applause, Thinking that thus they receive their due; They have given much and have not complained, But what is the lesson your son has gained, And what is the meaning of this to you?

THE GRAND REVIEW AND THE LAST PARADE

Few of the Veterans Who Marched Down Pennsylvania Avenue in 1865 Were Present at the Last Parade Over the Same Route, in 1915.

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE GORDON MEADE, attended by a brilliant staff, rode at the head of the column that trooped through Pennsylvania avenue and past the president's stand. For two days, May 23 and 24, 1915, the stream of war-weary veterans marched.

It was the Grand Review.

Two hundred thousand men and boys in faded blue followed their ragged war flags in the long line that numbered past the stand near the executive mansion, from which President Johnson, his cabinet, General Grant and American and foreign notables viewed the procession.

The Army of the Tennessee and the Army of Georgia were assembled for the last time before they were mustered out and the men sent back to their homes. The war was over.

The fiftieth anniversary of the review was celebrated in 1915 in Washington. President Wilson wept as he watched the 20,000 survivors of the Grand Review follow by.

Wilson saw the aged and bent. Johnson saw the erect and strong, despite four years' struggle that tired and invigorated them simultaneously.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. In such cases the kidneys often need help.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble—they are recommended by thousands. Can residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a citizen of this locality?

H. E. Steinko, painter and paper-hanger, 711 W. Jefferson st., Ann Arbor, Mich., says: "I had occasion to use a kidney medicine about two years ago and as I had heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills I took them. They proved perfectly satisfactory, entirely relieving me. I gladly recommend Doan's to anyone subject to a weak or lame back or any other trouble from the kidneys. They cured me and I know they are a good, reliable kidney medicine."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Steinko had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

It is unwise to neglect the slightest symptom of kidney trouble. Give the kidneys the help they are calling for.

Foley Kidney Pills
Tune up weak, inactive, sluggish kidneys and help rid the body of poisons. With kidneys and bladder properly functioning, appetite is restored, refreshing sleep is possible and health, strength and energy come as a natural result.

C. F. Reynolds, Elmira, N. Y., writes: "Three months ago I was sick in bed with kidney trouble. My back ached so severely I could not get up. We read of Foley Kidney Pills, so I sent for some and commenced taking them. In a few days I was up out of bed and upon keeping the treatment up for some time I was able to go to work. Since then I have had no more back-aches and no trouble with my kidneys."

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. Godden, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

Whence "Dutch." The name Dutch is derived from Dietsch, meaning the vernacular, as distinguished from Latin. It is the same word as the German Deutsch. Dutch belongs to the Frankish division of the Low German, and is closely related to the Flemish, with which it is now practically identified in its written form. ## VOLCANO WIPES OUT 20 VILLAGES

ISLAND OF JAVA VISITED BY DISASTROUS ERUPTION OF MOUNT KALUT.

NEARLY 16,000 PEOPLE KILLED

London Reports Indicate Tragedy May Rival That of Mount Pelee in 1902.

London.—Between 15,000 and 16,000 persons were killed and 20 villages were wiped out by an eruption of the Volcano Kalut on the island of Java in the Dutch East Indies, said a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam May 26. Seventeen other villages were partially destroyed.

The island of Java with a population of about 30,000,000, has frequently been visited by disastrous eruptions, there being numerous active and extinct volcanoes in its mountain chain. The best known volcanoes on the island are Tengger and Galunggung. In Galunggung's eruption in 1822 many thousands lost their lives.

There are about 65,000 Europeans on the island. The casualties from this latest disaster probably were largely among the natives inhabiting mountain villages.

Reports indicate that this latest disaster may rival the ones caused by the eruption of Mt. Pelee, which destroyed St. Pierre, Martinique, with a death list of 30,000, May 8, 1902, and the volcanic earthquake which virtually wiped Messina off the map, Dec. 29, 1908.

Kalut is one of the smaller volcanoes in the western end of the island. In May, 1901, it broke into eruption after a period of inactivity lasting several years, enveloping towns 150 to 250 miles distant, killing about 200 persons and destroying the sugar crop of the entire western end of the island.

There are 14 active volcanoes in an area 25 by 35 miles in this immediate vicinity. In 1886, the Rangkhit, one of the loftiest of the group, blew off most of its peak and in a series of internal explosions that followed more than 10,000 persons were killed.

LIBEL SUIT TESTIMONY BEGUN

Ford-Tribune Case May Continue All Summer.

Mt. Clemens.—Five "lies" and six "libels" are contained in the six-inch editorial in the Chicago Tribune of June 23, 1916, calling Henry Ford an anarchist, according to Mr. Ford's attorneys.

If the Ford attorneys carry out their announced program of proving the Tribune to have been animated by sordid financial and pro-German motives at the time it was urging the United States to protect its border by armed intervention in Mexico, and if the Tribune wins the right to introduce its mass of evidence showing the conditions on the border and elsewhere, which it declared constituted a situation under which it was anarchistic for Henry Ford to take his attitude toward military preparedness, it is likely to be a legal summer in Mt. Clemens.

ASKS BILLION FOR RAILROADS

Director-General Says Operating Deficit Was Due to War.

Washington.—Appropriation of $1,200,000,000 in addition to $500,000,000 already provided, for use of the railroad administration during 1918 and 1919, has been requested by Director General Hines.

The estimate revealed that there had been an operating deficit of $236,184,940 during the last calendar year and of $250,000,000 during the first four months of 1919.

Of the total of $1,700,000,000 appropriated and requested Mr. Hines said that $1,214,000,000 eventually would be returned to the government.

TOLEDO HAS LAST WILD NIGHT

Passing of Booze in Ohio Marked by "Grand and Glorious" Orgies.

Toledo, O.—Toledo last Saturday engaged in the wildest orgy of her history—the celebration that marked the farewell to John Barleycorn in Ohio.

Smuggled Chinamen are jailed. Ann Arbor.—Five Chinese believed to have been smuggled over the Canadian border at Detroit were captured in a shack on the McMullen farm in York township and taken to the Washtenaw county jail. Two men believed to be in charge of the smuggling were arrested at Adrian when they drove there in a car bearing a Canadian license. It is believed the Chinese were smuggled across to Belle Isle where an auto was waiting for them.

DAIRY

FOUNDATION FOR DAIRY HERD

Excellent Results Obtained in Starting With Grade Calves From Good Producers.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Young calves from good dairy cows are a satisfactory foundation for starting a dairy herd. Ordinarily the method advocated is to grade up common cows with a pure-bred bull, requiring a number of years of patient selection and breeding—a period sometimes discouraging to an energetic dairyman. Frequently this causes farmers, who want results too quickly, to change breeds.

It is expensive to buy mature dairy cows that are free from disease, that have good breeding and show desirable productive ability. Often, especially in new dairy sections, a farmer buys untested stock without being properly prepared to care for it, and many discouragements follow. To a great extent most of this difficulty can be avoided by buying good grade heifer calves from herds of well-selected milk production. In some dairy regions it is a common practice to sell the heifer calves for veal. These calves, while only grades, are usually from good producing ancestors and carry a productive ability much greater than common cows.

The buying of such calves to start dairy herds has been tried in several states with excellent results. Of course the cost of small calves is much less than mature animals and the danger of disease is also greatly lessened. In general, shipping is simpler. Calves may be shipped by express at from two to four weeks old, depending upon the distance, with good results. If they are properly cared for upon arrival.

In buying it is important to deal only with dairymen. Do not buy from men who purchase calves at stock yards to ship back to the farmers, because it is not always possible to determine the breeding of the calves, and calves that are physically unfit may be shipped.

In some cases shipments are made C. O. D., which enables the buyer to see the calves before paying for them. A man who sells calves in this way makes a special effort to please his customers. It seems desirable, especially in sparsely settled sections, that more attention be given to perfecting a satisfactory system of distributing dairy calves to farmers.

Advantages in buying small calves as a foundation for a dairy herd are summarized as follows:

Small investment.
Better breeding.
Greater freedom from disease.
In case of accident loss is small.
Raising calves stimulates interest and in consequence causes better care of live stock.
A satisfactory herd can be established more rapidly than by grading up common cows.

SOLUTION OF FOOD PROBLEM

Dairymen Should Make What They Have Go Further—Not Necessary to Slaughter Cows.

Dairymen can solve the feed shortage by the more method that people are using to solve the food shortage: They can make what they have go further. If food economies can result in feeding more people, the same feed can feed more cows.

No one advocates the killing of part of the people in order to provide an abundance of food for the rest. It is not more necessary to kill large numbers of dairy cows because of a short feed supply. Such action, moreover, taken in the face of our national need for dairy products, would be calamitous.

BABCOCK TEST VERY USEFUL

By Its Use Together With Lactometer Composition of Milk Can Be Determined for Solids.

The Babcock test is a device for determining the fat content of milk or cream. With this test and a milk scale one can determine the best cows in the herd. By using the Babcock test and the lactometer together the composition of the milk can be determined for total solids.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine.

A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Love's Labor Lost. "What did Mr. Cummings say to you last night, Clara, when he was trying to button your glove?" queried the anxious mother.

"Why," replied the daughter, "he said that my firm making gloves as hard to button as mine ought to quit the business."

"Well, my dear," continued the a. m., "take my advice and don't waste any more time in that direction."—Brooklyn Citizen.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.
