ARE INJURED WHEN AUTO IS WRECKED

Leonard Watkins and Sister Drive on Track Ahead of Train.

Another accident occurred on the dangerous crossing of the Michigan Central on the Kotten road, at 7:22 o'clock Monday evening, when an eastbound freight train caught Leonard Watkins and his sister, Mrs. Freer, in an automobile. They had been spending the day at the home of Miss Martha Riemschneider and were on their way to their home in Napoleon when the accident occurred. The automobile was carried on the locomotive several rods and is a total wreck.

Mr. Watkins had several ribs broken and is considerably bruised. Mrs. Freer had one of her wrists fractured, ribs broken, one of which is thought to have penetrated her lung. They were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Kotten, who reside near the scene of the accident, and it will probably be several days before they will be able to go to their homes.

They are brother and sister of Ira Watkins, who was killed in a runaway accident a few weeks ago.

The crossing where the accident occurred is one of the most dangerous between Chelsea and Jackson. A train coming from the west cannot be seen until it is nearly on the crossing, and as the D. J. & C. Ry. tracks are close to the Michigan Central, it makes the point doubly dangerous. Something should be done at once in regard to having the crossing safeguarded.

All-High Club Reorganized.

The reorganization of the All-High Club of St. Mary high school took place last Thursday. Hereafter it is to be known as the Regina Club. The officers elected for the coming year are: President, Philip Hoffman; vice president, George Eder; secretary, Anna Riedel; treasurer, Theresa Wolff.

The object of the club is to develop among the boys and girls an active interest in all that pertains to St. Mary's. A number of social events are to be given during the year, the first of which will be a Halloween entertainment for the members only, which they are beginning to plan at this time.

The St. Mary school has a splendid athletic association, a number of its members being experts in football and basket ball. The coming season they expect to play teams in the surrounding cities, and they hope to keep up the record of last season, which was an excellent one, inasmuch as they won nearly every game scheduled.

The former All-High Club has been a very successful feature in the social life of the school, and the pupils expect the Regina Club will continue the excellent work of former years.

Christian Gottlieb Leeman

Christian Gottlieb Leeman was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, July 10, 1831, and died at his home in Sharon township, September 10, 1919, after a brief illness.

He came to America in 1852 with his parents, John Adam and Verona Leeman, to seek a home in the land of Liberty. They immediately settled in Sharon, where he has since resided and been a loyal citizen.

He was married January 1, 1860, to Pauline Dorothy Merkle, to which union were born nine children. The wife and mother departed this life August 15, 1880. Two children died in infancy, Frank E., at the age of 24 years. The remaining ones are Miss Matilda, of Salt Lake City, Utah, Mrs. Carrie L. Brown of Detroit, Miss Emma, Miss Martha, Mrs. Mary V. Struthers and John C., the latter four all residents of Sharon.

He also leaves eight grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters.

He was converted in the winter of 1876 under the pastorate of Rev. D. R. Shier at Sylvan Center and united with the Methodist Episcopal church. When the Sylvan church was closed he transferred his membership to Chelsea, of which church Sylvan was a part. He remained a faithful member to the last.

The funeral was held at his home in charge of his pastor, G. Pearce, Friday afternoon in Maple Grove cemetery.

Will Protect Crossing.

Supervisor R. T. Wheelock of Lima township, met last Friday afternoon with Mr. Bice, a member of the Michigan Utilities Commission, and the two went over the Michigan Central crossing at the plant of the Michigan Portland Cement Co., near Four-Mile lake. This is probably one of the most dangerous railway crossings in this vicinity, as the view is almost shut off in either direction, especially so as the siding is nearly always filled with cars. The roadway over the crossing is on the "bias".

Mr. Wheelock received word Wednesday from the commission that a belt and wigway will be placed on each side of the crossing within sixty days.

CONFERENCE YEAR CLOSED SUNDAY

Methodist Episcopal Society Has Enjoyed Prosperous Year.

A large and enthusiastic congregation gathered last Sunday night at the Methodist church to hear Rev. H. G. Pearce preach the final sermon of conference year on the subject "The Joy of Life." It was a sermon of song and story, and several times the congregation broke into hearty applause.

Mr. Pearce this next year is to be Superintendent of Evangelism for the Detroit Area, which includes all of Michigan, the German work in Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, the Swedish, Norwegian and Danish work in Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Upper Peninsula. A great program of evangelism is already planned for next year which will involve a tremendous amount of travel and executive work. The local Methodist church closed the year in the best condition for many years. An increased membership, all financial obligations met in full and plans for the new year, already adopted, give promise of a successful future. Mr. Pearce left for the annual conference in Owosso Monday afternoon.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Mrs. Smith was a visitor in high school, Monday.

The high school chorus has an enrollment of about 75, consisting of both boys and girls.

Excitement seems to be in evidence in the senior class. Is it the class play? Watch and see.

Athletic association dues are now due. Pay up, be loyal, make this 100 per cent high school on dues.

High school girls have volunteered to furnish music, in turn, for noon and night dismissal. This is appreciated by all the pupils.

Monday night the freshmen class organized and elected the following officers: President, Alvin Vail; vice president, Anna Rogers; secretary, Ella Knapp; treasurer, Harold Davis. The class elected Mrs. Martin for their adviser.

The members of the high school library staff for this year are Irene Vail, Marjorie Mapes, Clarabell Roberts, Dorothy Satterthwaite, Dorothy Speer, Ella Finkbeiner, and Florence Vogel. These girls have charge of the library in the order that the names are given, in the seven periods of the day. Clarabell Roberts is chairman of the committee.

Last Friday evening about 8 o'clock a jolly group of young people gathered in the League room of the M. E. church. Leaguers, school teachers, high school pupils and friends met in exciting "Field Meet." After this pleasure came a delightful lunch, served by the Leaguers in honor of the guests. But ask some of the boys about the fun of wiping dishes.

Last Sunday evening the teachers and high school pupils were invited to the Congregational church for the service and a social gathering afterward. The sermon was one well worth hearing and seconded by all present. A very pleasant social hour followed. Miss Froelich favored the gathering with a few well selected rendered selections. A few minutes followed. It was, indeed, a fine time and an opportunity created by the teachers.

SUGAR SHORTAGE IS NOT ACUTE HERE

Chelsea Has Been Well Supplied Other Places Have Been Short.

The Chelsea merchants have been fortunate enough so far this season to supply their customers with sugar, except one or two dealers who were out for a day or two. Jackson and Ann Arbor people have been coming here to get sugar and in most instances the Chelsea merchants have been able to supply their wants, but for a few days past the amount sold to any one customer has been limited to fifty cents worth. From present indications the supply from the wholesale dealers will be equal to all demands in about two weeks. Probably Jackson has been the hardest hit of any place near here, as there has been very little sugar in that city for the last three weeks, but the situation there was greatly relieved the first of the week when a supply was received at the Edgar distributing house in that city. The local merchants are handicapped in freight receipt over the Michigan Central, as the local freight is run only every other day, but on the D. U. R. there is a daily service from both east and west and most of the Chelsea stores have sugar in transit over one or both of the lines.

Vehicle Right-of-Way.

There are many automobile drivers who do not understand the new right-of-way law which went into effect last month. This law, which covers all county highways in the state, also the streets in all villages and cities in the state where there is no special ordinance contrary thereto, gives you the right-of-way over vehicles coming from the left. But "Watch out to the right." If you see a vehicle approaching from your right that is to arrive at the street intersection about the same time you will, hold up, because that driver has the right-of-way, and if a collision results you are responsible for the damages.

This law applies in a great majority of the villages and cities of Michigan. Do not try to cut in ahead of autos coming from the right and it may save you trouble. Firemen's cars, fire trucks and ambulances have right-of-way at all times.

George J. Spiegelberg.

George J. Spiegelberg was born in Lorain, Ohio, June 13, 1843, and died at his home on South street, Chelsea, Thursday evening, September 11, 1919, after an illness of over three months.

He was united in marriage with Miss Kate Kraushaar at Amherst, Ohio, March 15, 1868, and for many years they made their home in Dexter township. Several years ago they sold their farm and since that time they have resided in Chelsea. Mr. Spiegelberg was a member of the German Evangelical church and had a wide circle of friends.

The surviving members of his family are his wife, two sons, John and H. C. Spiegelberg, of this place, one daughter, Mrs. Hattie Spiegelberg, of Dexter township, six grandchildren and one brother and sister.

The funeral was held from the home at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, Rev. Schleicher, of Manchester, officiating. The remains were taken to Dexter village for burial.

Soldiers to Grand Rapids

The state convention of the American Legion will be held at Grand Rapids, Oct. 13, 14 and 15. All ex-service men of the world war are invited to this gathering, regardless of whether they are members of the legion. At least 3,000 men who wore the uniform during the late war are expected at Grand Rapids at this, the first state wide reunion of the soldiers.

Matters of interest and of importance to every soldier will be discussed. At the same time there will be many entertaining features during the three days. Special provisions have been made for the accommodation of all visitors. Among the speakers expected are Theodore Roosevelt and others of national reputation.

The American Legion already has become a tremendous factor in the nation. Local organizations are being formed everywhere. The state convention at Grand Rapids will be one of the biggest held anywhere this fall. All local associations of soldiers who have not yet arranged to attend this convention are asked to get into communication with Howard C. Brink, Grand Rapids.

R. V. R. C. will meet with Mrs. Hoag, Monday evening, September 22.

BREVITIES

Grass Lake. The basement of the Baptist church has been remodeled and Miss Nina Hinton, who teaches the third and fourth grades of the public schools, will occupy the same. The school building is overcrowded and this room was fitted up for that purpose.

Manchester.—The continued dry spell has pulled the old Basin river down so that it's hard for the boys to find a hole big enough to swim in, the old accustomed spots have lost their cooling depths. 'Tis said the Sharon mill pond is but a shadow of its former self, being not much more than a rivulet between wide banks.—Manchester Enterprise.

Manchester.—J. E. Seckinger, who has been suffering from toothache and quinsy for some time, finally decided that the best thing to do was to go to the sanitarium at Ann Arbor, which he did with the result that after submitting to an operation he came home weak but feeling much better and in hopes that the loss of a tooth or two and his tonsils will be all that is necessary to give him good health hereafter.—Manchester Enterprise.

Brighton.—The huckleberry season is about over and so far as we are able to learn B. S. Miller takes the prize as the champion berry picker of this vicinity and perhaps of the state. During the season he picked a little better than 75 bushels of huckleberries and sold over three hundred and sixty-eight dollars' worth. His biggest day's work was six bushels and a peck. If there is any person who has a better record we'd like to hear of it.—Berrien Argus.

Saline.—A group of young fellows, driving a decorator's truck from Detroit to Jackson Friday, stopped at The Observer office to get water for the radiator. We let them help themselves, and they did a good job, not only getting what water they needed but the publisher's watch as well. Inasmuch as they promised to call on us again the next time they go through town we anticipate they'll want to take our typesetting machine with them when they leave, but if we're here they can't have it, by heck.—Saline Observer.

Manchester.—Louis Lonier, one of the most prominent business men of this locality, died in a hospital in Detroit, Monday, following an operation. Mr. Lonier and Mr. Hoffer came to Manchester in 1900 and bought the flouring mills and the business soon became, under their efficient management, one of the largest and most important in the town. The firm has been a popular one, noted for fair and upright dealing, and their co-operative and helpful spirit in village affairs. They have drawn trade to Manchester from long distances, and a feeling of personal loss is felt by the entire community now that the firm is broken.

Grass Lake.—A plot to rob the bank here by a gang of Detroit bank robbers last Wednesday has been made public by Sheriff Larrabee, following a message Friday from Detroit that the alleged gang had been captured. Only bad roads between Detroit and Grass Lake prevented the raid by the gang and they had started out only to turn back when they became stuck in the mud about half way between the two places. According to Sheriff Larrabee he received a tip Tuesday from a source that he refuses to reveal that a gang of Italians in two high powered cars were going to enter the Grass Lake bank Wednesday, under pretence of changing a bill and then hold up the cashier at the pistol point and take the money in the cage. If he refused to give out the money he was to be shot dead.

Huge Human Document.

"The Heart of Humanity" is not a war film but a huge human document with the war as a background.

This description of Allen Holubar's newest multi-reel film, the picture that has given Dorothy Phillips the Opportunity of her career for superb acting—an opportunity of which she has made the most—is that of Mr. Holubar himself.

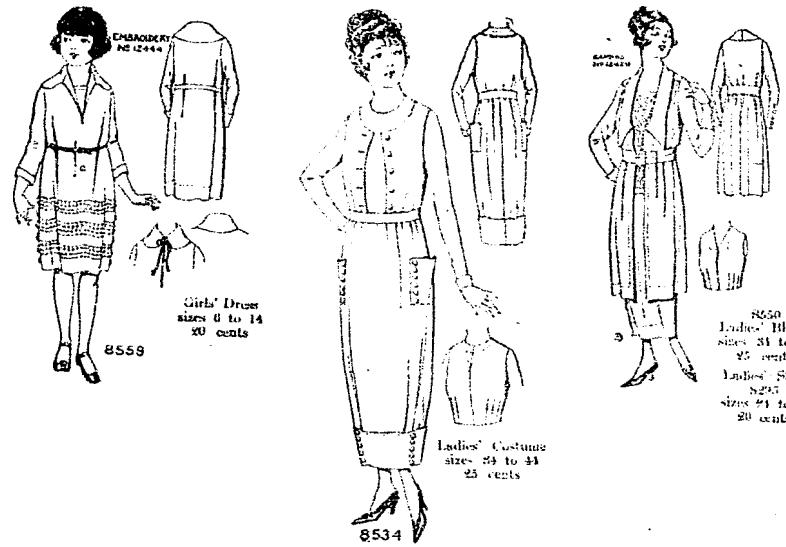

Mr. Holubar objects to having his production, which indubitably expresses the greatest work this master-cinema-dramatist has yet achieved, classed with other war spectacles. It is his contention that "The Heart of Humanity," which soon will present to the world what probably will prove to be the most poignant tale yet pictorialized of mother love in its relation to world strife, is above all an exposition of "the 75 per cent of all sacrifice and of all service that the women of the world have given to the Crusade of Humanity."

"Let me tell you how I got my idea for the 'Heart of Humanity,'" said Mr. Holubar. "When I was making 'The Talk of the Town,' with Miss Phillips as my star, I had an assistant camera boy by name of Crisp, who came to me from France with 24 shrapnel wounds in his body. He told me he was one of a family of five youths who had gone to war from Canada. And the only one to return by the way. He explained how his mother suffered from heartache and was at the brink of death from the agonies of contemplating the fate of his brothers.

"The n I thought to myself how the mother's sufferings would have been alleviated had there been brought home to her the glory of her sacrifice; the beauty of the thought that her boy had died in defense of their sisters and brothers in Belgium and France.

"Her sacrifice showed me the extent of the tragedy of the mothers of America, of Canada and of the world. Then Mrs. Olga Linek Scholl went to work with me on the script of the story. The result is 'The Heart of Humanity.' It will present to the world, I hope, the spirit of the work of the Red Cross, recruited from the mothers and sisters of the civilized countries which have suffered at the hands of the Hun."

"The Heart of Humanity" will be shown at the Princess Theatre on Wednesday, September 24.

BEING THE AUTHENTIC NARRATIVE OF A TREASURE DISCOVERED IN THE BAHAMA ISLANDS—IN THE YEAR 1903—NOW FIRST GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC.

By Richard Le Gallienne

COPYRIGHT BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY

A SHAPE OF WITCHCRAFT.

Synopsis.—The man who tells the story—call him the hero, for short—is visiting his friend, John Saunders, Bahama Islands, Charlie Webster, a local merchant, completes the life of friends. Saunders produces a written document purporting to be the death-bed statement of Henry P. Tobias, a successful trader made by him in 1859. It gives two chests where two millions and a half of treasure were buried by him and his companions. The execution of the three friends is overruled by a post-marked stranger. The document disappears. Saunders, however, has a copy. The hero determines to seek the buried treasure, charts a schooner. The post-marked man is taken on as a passenger. On the voyage somebody empties the gasoline tank. The hero and the passenger elude the passenger leaving a manifesto bearing the signature, "Henry P. Tobias, Jr." The hero lands on Dead Men's Island. There in a night, which is followed by general funerals. The hero finds a cave containing the skeletons of two pirates and a massive chest—eight yards for a few pieces of empty material on the bottom. The hero returns to Nassau, and by good luck learns the location of Short Sheriff Island. Webster buys the yacht Flamingo, and he and the hero set for Short Sheriff Island. As the Flamingo leaves the yacht a young fellow, "Jack Harkaway," jumps aboard and is allowed to remain. Jack proves an interesting and mysterious passenger. The adventures capture Tobias. "Jack Harkaway" proves to be a girl and disappears. The hero sails to Short Sheriff Island, sees an entrancing girl with a Spanish dialect.

My presence seemed at once to put her on her guard. The music of her voice was suddenly hushed, as though she had hurriedly, almost in terror, thrown a robe of reticence about an impulsive naturalness not to be displayed before strangers. As for the storekeeper, he was evidently a familiar acquaintance, the had known her—she said after she was gone—she was a little girl.

While he spoke, my eyes had accidentally fallen on the coin still in his hand, with which she had just paid him.

"Why," I said, "this is a Spanish doubloon!"

"That's what it is," said the Englishman emphatically.

"But doesn't it strike you as strange that she should pay her bills with Spanish doubloons?" I asked.

"It did not," he answered; and then, as if annoyed with himself, he was attempting to retrieve an expression that carried an implication he evidently didn't wish me to retain, he added: "Of course, she doesn't always pay in Spanish doubloons. I suppose they have a few old coins in the family and use them when they run out of others."

It was as lame an explanation as well could be, and no one could doubt that, whatever his reason for so doing, he was lying.

"But haven't you trouble in disposing of them?" I inquired.

"Gold is always gold," he answered, "and we don't see enough of it here to be particular as to whose head is stamped upon it, or what date. Besides, as I said, it isn't as if I got many of them; and you can always dispose of them as curiosities."

"Will you sell me this one?" I asked.

"I see no harm in your having it," he said, "but I'd just as soon you didn't mention where you got it."

"Certainly," I answered, dissembling my wonder at his secretiveness. "What is it worth?"

He named the sum of sixteen dollars and seventy-five cents. Having told him that amount I had him good-night, glad to be alone with my eager, glowing thoughts. These I took with me to a bit of camp beach, made doubly white by the moon, rustled over by giant palms, and whispered to by the faint living jewel of the sea. I took out my strange doubloon and flashed it in the moon.

But, brightly as it shone, it hardly seemed as bright as it would have seemed a short while back; or perhaps, it were truer to say that in another, newer aspect it shone a hundred times more brightly. The adventure to which it called me was no longer single and simple as before, but a gloriously confused goal of cloudy splendor, the burning core of which suddenly raying out, and then lost again in brightness—were the eyes of a mysterious girl.

CHAPTER II.

Under the influence of the Moon. My days now began to drift rather aimlessly, as without apparent purpose I continued to linger on an island that might well seem to have little attraction to a stranger—how little I could see by the mystification of the often gone astray, had risen the creature of shape of moonlit marble! O! holiness of this night of moon and stars and sea!

Yes, I was in love. Yet I hoped, and think that the reader will not resent this unspiced inspiration into the realm of sentiment when he considers that my sudden attack was not like most such sudden attacks, an interruption in the robust course of events, but, instead, curiously in the direct line of my purpose. Because the eyes of an unknown girl had thus suddenly outshined me, I was not, therefore, to lose sight of that purpose.

On the contrary, they had suddenly shown out on the pathway along which I had been blindly groping. But for the accident of being in the dirty little store at a psychological moment, bending his strangely familiar voice, and catching sight of that mysterious doubtless as well as those mysterious eyes, I should have set sail that very night and given up John P. Tobias' second treasure in final disgust. As it was, I was now warmly on the track of some treasure—whether his or not—with two bright eyes further to point the way. Never surely did a man's love and his purpose make so practical a combination.

When I reached my lodging at last in the early morning following that night of wonders my eyes and heart were not so dazed with that vision in the cave that I did not vividly recall one important detail of the strange picture—those streams of gold that had suddenly poured out of the mouth and hands of the lovely apparition.

Without doubting the evidence of my senses, I was forced to believe that, by the oldest piece of luck, I had stumbled upon the hiding place of that hoard of doubloons, on which my fair unknown drew from time to time as she would out of a bank.

But who was she?—and where was her home? There had seemed no sign of habitation near the wild place where I had come upon her, though, of course, a solitary house might easily have escaped my notice hidden among all that foliage, particularly at night.

To be sure, I had but to inquire of the storekeeper to learn all I wanted; but I was averse from betraying my interest to him or to anyone in the settlement—for, after all, it was my own affair, and hers. So I determined to pursue my policy of watching and waiting, letting a day or two elapse before I again went out wandering with my gun.

I left the craggy bluff facing the sea and plunged into the woods. I had no idea how dark it was going to be, coming out of the sun, I was at once bewildered by the deep and complicated gloom of massed branches overhead, and the denser darkness of shrubs and vines so intricately interwoven as almost to make a solid wall about me. Then the atmosphere was so close and airless that a fear of suffocation combined at once with the other fear of being swallowed up in all this savage green life, without hope of finding one's way out again into the sun. I fought my way in but a very few yards when both these fears clutched hold of me with a sudden horror, and the perspiration poured from me; I could no longer distinguish between the way I had come and any other part of the wood! Indeed, there was no way anywhere!

I must have battled through the veritable inferno of vegetation for at least an hour—though it seemed a lifetime. Clouds of particularly unpleasant midges filled my eyes, not to speak of mosquitoes, and a peculiar kind of persistent stinging fly was adding to my miseries, which at last, begrimed and dripping with sweat, I stumbled out, with a cry of thankfulness, on to comparatively fresh air and something like a broad avenue running north and south through the wood. It was indeed dimly overgrown, and had evidently not been used for many years. Still, it was comparatively passable, and one could at least see the sky and take long breaths once more.

Still there was no sign of a house anywhere. Presently, however, as I stumbled along, I noticed something looming darkly through the matted forest on my left, that suggested walls. Looking closer, I saw that it was the remains of a small, stone cottage, roofless, and indescribably swartened up in the pillbox scrub. And then, near by, I described another such ruin, and still another—all, as it were, sunk in the terrible gloom of the vegetation, as sometimes, at low tide, one can discern the walls of a ruined village at the bottom of the sea.

Evidently I had come upon a long-abandoned settlement, and presently, on some slightly higher ground to the left I thought I could make out the half-submerged walls of a much more ambitious edifice. Looking closer, I noted, with a thrill of surprise, the beginning of a very narrow path, not more than a foot wide, leading up through the scrub in its direction. Narrow as it was, it had clearly been kept open by the not-infrequent passage of feet. With a certain eerie feeling, I edged my way into it, and after following it for a hundred yards or so, found myself close to the roofless ruin of a spacious stone house with something of the appearance of an old English manor house. Multitoned windows, finely masoned, opened in the shatterd wall, and an elaborate stone staircase, in the interstices of which stout shrubs were growing, gave, or once had given, an entrance through an arched doorway—an entrance now stoutly disputed by the glittering trunk of a gum-cedar tree and cadent matted ropelike roots of giant vines and creepers that writhed like serpents over the whole edifice. Forcing my way up this staircase, I found myself in a stone hall some sixty feet long, at one end of which yawned a huge fireplace, its flue mounting up through a finely carved chimney, still standing firmly at the top of the southern gable.

How had this almost baronial magnificence come to be in this far-away corner of a desert island? At first I concluded that here was a relic of the brief colonial prosperity of the Bahamas, when its cotton lords lived like princes, with a slave population for retainers—days when even the bootblacks in Nassau played pitch-and-toss with gold pieces; but as I considered further, it seemed to me that the style of the architecture and the age of the building suggested an earlier date. Could it be that this had been the home of one of those early eighteenth century pirates who took pride in flaunting the luxury and pomp of princes, and who had perhaps made this his headquarters and stronghold for the storage of his loot on the return from his forays on the Spanish Main? This, as the more spirited conjecture, I naturally preferred, and, in default of exact information, decided to accept.

The more I pondered upon this fancy and remarked the extent of the ruins—including several subsidiary outhouses—and noted, too, one or two choked stone staircases that seemed to descend into the bowels of the earth, the more plausible it seemed. In one or two places where I suspected underground cellars—dungeons for unhappy captives, or strong vaults for the storage of the treasure—I tested the floors by dropping heavy stones, and they seemed unmistakably to reverberate with a hollow rumbling sound; but I could find no present way of getting down into them. As I said, the staircases that promised an entrance into them were choked with debris. But I promised myself to come some other day, with pick and shovel, and make an attempt at exploring them.

Meanwhile, after poking about in as much of the ruins as I could penetrate, I stepped out through a gap in one of the walls and found myself again on the path by which I had entered. I noticed that it still ran on farther north, as having a destination beyond. So leaving the haunted ruins behind I pushed on and had gone but a short distance when the path began to descend slightly from the ridge on which the ruins stood; and there, in a broad square hollow before me, was the welcome living green of a flourishing plantation of coconut palms! It was evidently of considerable extent—a quarter of a mile or so, I judged—and the palms were very thick and planted close together. To my surprise, too, I observed, as at length the path brought me to them after a sharp descent, that they were fenced in by a high bamboo stockade, for the most part in good condition, but here and there broken down with decay.

Through one of these gaps I presently made my way and found myself among the soaring columns of the palms, hung aloft with clusters of the great green nuts. Fallen palm fronds made a carpet for my feet—very pleasant after the rough and tangled way I had traveled, and now and again one of the coco nuts would fall down with a thud amid the green silence. One of these, which narrowly missed my head, suggested that here I had the opportunity of quenching very agreeably the thirst of which I had become suddenly aware. My chapskife soon made an opening through the tough shell, and, sponging on the ground, I set my mouth to it, and, raising the nut above my head, allowed the "milk"—cool as spring water—to gurgle deliciously down my parched throat. When at length I had drained it, and my head once more returned to its natural angle, I was suddenly made aware that my punching had not gone unobserved.

The DAIRY

VALUES OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

Leaders in Fight Against H. G. L. Judged From Economy and Nourishment Furnished.

Since the high cost of living is still a problem and since New York is one of the two foremost dairy states of the union, the workers in dairying and home economies at the state college at Ithaca, N. Y., are calling renewed attention to the relative cheapness and high food values of dairy products.

To cut these products is to increase the prosperity of the state and to decrease the drain on the pocket-book, because, the folks at Ithaca say, there is a double advantage to the New York housewife. From the viewpoint of economy and of nourishment, it she makes a larger use of them in the family diet.

Not only do these foods contain the growth-promoting substances needed by children, but they are among the cheapest foods of animal origin in respect to protein and lime content. Whole milk, skin-milk, cottage cheese and American cheddar, or common "store" cheese, are good, cheap foods and the workers at Cornell advocate their use.

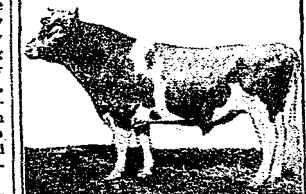

BETTER TO KEEP GOOD BULLS

Farmer Sold Registered Holstein for $50 That Afterwards Proved to Be Worth $5,000.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When a certain farmer a few years ago sold his registered Holstein bull to his local butcher no records had been made by any of the bull's daughters. Within a year 11 of the daughters freshened at the ages of two and three. Records were then made of milk and butterfat production, and to the astonishment of everybody the average milk production was 14,502 pounds and the average butterfat production was 572 pounds.

But before these records were available the bull was dead and his hide had become leather. Because there were no records, a $5,000 bull had been sold for $50. The cow-testing association tests the dams and daughters, and the bull association makes it practicable to keep a bull until his daughters have been tested. These two associations would have saved that bull.

Registration alone cannot guarantee production. Registered dairy bulls should be backed by good production records. Without record backing they may be very well bred, but there is nothing to prove it.

COVERING FOR CREAM CANS

Great Part of Value Is Lost if Product Is Exposed to Sun While Being Hauled.

A great part of the value of keeping cream cool on the farm and at the station or creamery is lost if the cream is exposed to the direct rays of the sun while being hauled from the farm to the point of sale. Far too few people stop to realize the importance of covering their cream cans when bringing them to town. Expensive jacketed cans are not a necessity to keep the cream cool. In summer weather just an ordinary piece of wet burlap thrown over cans will keep the temperature of the cream as much as 20 degrees below what it would rise to if left uncovered while being transported over the average hauling distance.

DRYING UP COWS NEGLECTED

Some Animals Inclined to Keep Up Heavy Milk Flow Until Calving Time—Care Is Needed.

Some cows are inclined to keep up the heavy milk flow until calving time, and the dairyman is apt to neglect drying them up. Some cows dry themselves while others must be dried up by the milker. Care must be taken or the udder will be injured. The best practice is to cut off the grain feed, giving no grain at all, and in some cases giving less of other feeds. The cow should be milked only once a day for a few days, and then the period lengthened until only once in four or five days. This should be kept up until the cow has entirely ceased.

OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs. This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and life prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person.

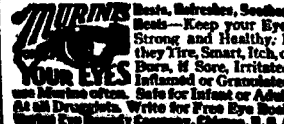

Do not wait until old age or disease has settled down for good. At the first sign that your kidneys are not working properly, go to your druggist and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Hairless Oil Capsules. Three sizes. But remember to ask for the original imported water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. When completely restored continue taking 2 capsules or two each day. GOLD MEDAL Hairless Oil Capsules will keep you in health and vigor and prevent a return of the disease.

Too Much Appetite may be as dangerous as too little

When the skin is sallow or yellow, the eyes dull, the head aches or sleep broken and unrefreshing, the back aches, or there is a pain under the right shoulder blade—it is an indication that the body is being poisoned by poorly digested and imperfectly eliminated food-waste. JOHNSON DECLARES WILSON A DICTATOR

Californian Introduced to St. Louis Audience by Democrat.

TALKS TO INDIANA PEOPLE

Johnson, Borah and McCormick Reply to Recent Speeches of President—Want American People to Know the Facts.

St. Louis, Sept. 13. Introduced by Dr. John H. Simon, former Democratic candidate for mayor, to one of the largest audiences that ever filled the Coliseum, Senator Hiram Johnson of California pounded home argument after argument against the League of Nations until the vast assemblage was brought to its feet cheering time and again.

Blames H. C. L. on President. Indianapolis, Sept. 12.—Undeniedly the people of Indianapolis are concerned over the arguments for and against ratification of the League of Nations covenant.

Cheer for American Troops. Senator Johnson provoked a demonstration when he referred to the American forces finally stopping the great German drive on Paris.

Picking Pockets to Poison Mind. Senator Borah declared the people's taxes during the last few years had been spent on propaganda dedicated to telling them how powerful the people in power have been.

Californian Is Sarcastic. "I have followed, just as you have doubtless followed," Mr. Johnson said, "the utterances of the president in his recent speaking tour."

"I felt, just as you doubtless felt, that the confinement in Washington, of which he complained, for a few days over a month had torn his soul and made his spirit rebel at the restraint put upon it."

As to Contemptible Quitters. "The other day at St. Louis, in a frenzy of anger, Mr. Wilson said, 'Let them show how they will prove that, having gone into an enterprise, they are not absolutely contemptible quitters if they do not see the game through.'"

Your game? The game of the American people? Not at all.

"The American people play their game. They played it when they sent their sons abroad to the number of 2,000,000 and those boys valiantly upheld the traditions and honor of this country."

"That was the American people's game, but it is not the American people's game to safeguard the territorial acquisitions of England or of France or of Italy or of Japan."

"Now, the American people never have been quitters. They never have in any contest, either in their own behalf or in the behalf of humanity quit the game. They have ever seen it through. Mr. Wilson began his game at Paris, and let's see who quit in that game and who it was that forgot the American rule."

"You remember, just as I did, that he had certain celestial phrases, certain idealistic statements and certain specified principles upon which he went across the water to play his game, and my friends, I might say to you something that we learned long, long ago in the West. In our unorganized day, before we were as civilized as you are here in this great state, there was a saying that ripened into a proverb: 'Never sit in the other fellow's game.'"

"He started off, as you recall, with open overtures of peace openly arrived at. You and I echoed the sentiment. All America applauded. Who quit? Who was the quitter?"

"We indorsed vociferously the freedom of the seas and the British lion growled. Who quit?"

"He talked of removal of all economical barriers and we all yielded a ready assent. But economic barriers were forgotten. The American people didn't quit. Somebody else quit."

"He talked, my friends, of adequate guarantees given and that armaments would be reduced. No armaments were ended. None will be reduced, admittedly, under the League of Nations. Self-Determination Forgotten."

"He said to us as he went abroad that no people can be forced to live under a sovereignty under which it does not wish to live. But Japan, with an immobile countenance, shook her head and the American people didn't quit, but somebody else quit."

"They required no League of Nations to do it," he exclaimed. "I have heard of men placing themselves in the hands of their creditors, but I have never yet heard of a man placing himself in the hands of his debtors. There is just one going solvent national concern in all this world, and it is your country and my country. Why does the greatest solvent national concern on earth have to enter into a partnership with four bankrupts?"

"Just think of it, my friends, in the assembly of the League of Nations, the United States, your country and mine, the most powerful on the face of the earth, the richest in all the world, is given one vote to Great Britain's six votes."

"My friends, do you realize what the president was up against? I think I do, and he did not. His good intentions did not protect him from the European diplomancy. He used beautiful phrases while they sat with their pockets bulging with the contracts signed, sealed and delivered for carrying the world. When they got all through he had his beautiful phrases and they had the countries and the peoples for whom they had bargained long before we entered the war. He brought home just what was wanted to him."

"Now, our honored president has said in his appeal at Columbus, O., that if you have not time to read the treaty for yourselves, that he feels that you are under obligation to take the view and construction of those who wrote the treaty." Senator Borah continued. "That, my friends, it seems to me, is open to legitimate objection. In the first place, there are no two men who helped to write the treaty that now agree as to what it means."

PAT EVIDENTLY MADE GOOD

News From America Seemed to Prove Irishman Had Not Miscalculated His Capacity.

Pat Finnegan had left his wife in Ireland and gone to America to try his fortune and establish a home for his family in the new world. It was some two or three weeks after Pat's departure that his wife stood in the meager garden in front of her home, looking down the road her man had gone, and moodily speculating on his success. She was rudely startled by the harsh voice of Mrs. O'Leary calling her over the fence.

"Have you heard the news from America, Mrs. Finnegan?" "Faith, an' O! have not."

"'Tis in the paper this mornin'. Read it for yerself. 'America gone dry. Last alcoholic drink sold at midnight, June 20.'"

Mrs. Finnegan looked doubtful for a minute; then, swelling with pride and casting a triumphant glance at Mrs. O'Leary, she shouted back: "Faith, an' Pat always said, give him two weeks an' there was not a country in the world he couldn't drink dry."

FINE AVIATORS' CLUB

Largest Establishment of Its Kind Opened in England.

Women Are Eligible to Membership, and Both Sexes Are Taught to Fly.

London.—What is perhaps the largest and most ambitious club for aviators has just been opened at Hendon. Not the least interesting feature of the club is the American bar.

The London Flying club is a social and country sporting club to promote and give instruction in flying and aerial activities of all kinds. Women are eligible to membership.

A special feature of the clubhouse is an immense ballroom and concert hall, accommodating about two thousand persons. More than fifty sleeping rooms, equipped in the most modern way, are provided for men. The library contains a complete set of books on aviation.

Passenger airplanes are kept in constant readiness for the use of members for long or short flights at special terms. If one wishes to make a quick trip to a distant point he has merely to call up the club from his office in London, and by the time he reaches the field everything is in readiness for the hop off. The airplanes used in this service are specially designed touring craft, with silenced motors and saloon bodies. Fast single seaters and two seaters are available for sporting and service pilots.

U. S. CLEANS MINE FIELDS

Five Thousand Men Are at Work Destroying $50,000,000 Worth of Explosives.

London.—More than half of the mines laid by the American navy in the North sea, in a field 250 miles long and 30 miles wide, from the Dogger bank off the Dutch coast to the Scandinavian waters, have been destroyed by an American mine-sweeping fleet.

If good weather continues, the work will be finished before winter; if not, the mine sweeping will extend long into 1920. The operations are under the direction of Admiral Strauss, who has his headquarters at Inverness.

Seventy-five ships with a total complement of 6,000 men are cleaning up the mine fields, destroying all the mines, which it cost more than $400 each to lay. The total cost of laying the American mine field was nearly $50,000,000.

PARIS KEEPING HER BEAUTY

Plans to Solve the Problem of Congestion by Means of Sub-surface Construction.

Paris.—French cities, particularly Paris, wish to grow without becoming ugly. Hence they're going to build down, instead of up.

Where New York, Chicago, Kansas City and other big American cities have solved their problem of congestion by building skywards, Paris hopes to preserve her beauty by sub-surface construction.

Paris has just reopened her national competition in beautifying the city that was interrupted by the war. Underground building is one plan widely accepted. The necessity for this is due to the fact that buildings are limited to six stories. Paris designers believe beauty of municipal architecture is enhanced by streets that present a long vista with an even skyline.
