CONFIRMED LARGE CLASS AT ST. MARY

Bishop Gallagher Present at Confirmation of Class Numbering 76

Bishop Gallagher, of the Detroit See, of the Catholic church, made his first appearance in Chelsea Monday, when he administered the rites of confirmation at 12:30 o'clock in the afternoon, at St. Mary church, to a class of 76, consisting of young men and women. The class was about equally divided. The last confirmation was held in the church about four years ago, when Bishop Kelly presided. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Father Bon-Lowisky of Detroit. The other priests who assisted in the services were: Rev. Fathers Cook, Plagens, Skazyski of Detroit, Burke of Battle Creek, Rochford, chaplain at Camp Custer, Hackett of Manchester and Vandylke, pastor of St. Mary church. The musical numbers were in charge of the Sisters of St. Dominic and the church choir. The impressive services were attended by a large congregation of the parents and friends of the class. The visiting clergymen were the guests of Rev. Father Vandylke during their stay in Chelsea.

Stapish-Sheff Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Winifred Stapish, youngest daughter of Mrs. Clara Stapish of Dexter township, and Mr. Ernest P. Sheff, of Detroit, took place at 6 o'clock Monday morning, September 29, 1919, in St. Mary church. Rev. Father Vandylke, celebrating the mass. The couple were attended by Miss Zita Foster of Grass Lake, and Mr. Walter Hummel, both of whom are cousins of the bride.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to eleven guests at the Crescent hotel, the Misses Anna Schanz and Doris Gauntel acting as waitresses.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheff left for a wedding trip after the breakfast, and will be at home after November 1, at 1192 Helen avenue, Detroit.

Eder-Dorer Wedding.

At 6:30 o'clock this morning, in St. Mary church, the marriage of Miss Katherine Eder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Eder of Taylor street, and Mr. August Dorer, took place. Rev. Father Vandylke officiating. The couple were attended by Miss Berta Eder and Mr. John Eder, Jr., sister and brother of the bride.

Following the marriage ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to immediate members of the families of both of the young people. After a short wedding trip through the east, Mr. and Mrs. Dorer will make their home in the Greening residence on Grant street.

For the last five years the bride has been employed as an operator in the Chelsea telephone exchange, and the bridegroom has been an employee of the Lewis Spring & Axle Co. for four years.

Geraldine Farrar at Ann Arbor.

The Ann Arbor concert series is attracting a great deal of attention throughout the state on account of the exceptionally brilliant array of musical talent which is to participate.

Geraldine Farrar, the wonderful star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who has also become famous as a film artist, will open the series on Saturday evening, October 18, (the evening of the day of the Michigan-M. A. C. football contest). At her Ann Arbor debut she will be assisted by Arthur Hackett, the young American tenor who has attracted so much attention, and Rosita Renard, the Chilean pianist whose concerts in the United States last year were loudly acclaimed. This combination of musicians have prepared a program of song which will please the average layman as well as the skilled musician.

Later in the year five other big numbers will be given, including two concerts by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of its distinguished conductor, Ossip Gabrilovitch, and recitals by such artists as Jascha Heifetz, the young Russian violinist, whose remarkable performances have been nothing short of sensations, Josef Hoffman, the well known pianist, and Riccardo Stracciari, the distinguished Italian baritone, whose stellar work with the Chicago Opera Company has attracted so much attention.

For the accommodation of out of town attendants special interurban cars will leave both east and west at the close of all concerts.

Those desiring copies of the concert prospectus may secure them at the Standard office.

Only two of the persons who were to be naturalized yesterday, appeared Friday evening for instruction at the county clerk's office. One of these two drove twenty-five miles in order to avail himself of the opportunity to see the instruction.

REV. A. A. SCHOEN RESIGNED AS PASTOR OF ST. PAUL'S

Will Accept Call to Emmanuel Church at Manchester

Rev. A. A. Schoen, who has been pastor of St. Paul's church here for nineteen years, tendered his resignation to the congregation last Sunday. During his pastorate here the membership of the society has increased each year, from 125 at the start until it now numbers 325. The property has been greatly improved during administration. His many friends regret his decision to leave, and their best wishes will go with him and his family to the new charge as pastor of Emmanuel church in Manchester.

An Excellent Report.

Auditors Alvin D. Baldwin and O. C. Burkhardt of Chelsea Branch, No. 1, of the Washtenaw County Co-operative Association, on Friday made an examination of the transactions of the organization since it started last spring.

There is a membership of 180. On September 26 the total shipments from the start amounted to $130,041.08, at an expense of 58 cents per 100 pound, which includes freight, insurance, commissions and all other expenses. The gross amount is from the Detroit weights. Before the organization of the association the average expense was from one and one-half to two cents per pound on live stock shipments.

The association has a cash balance on hand of $128.69. The auditors were very complimentary in their praise of manner in which Secretary-treasurer O. D. Luick has kept his books. G. W. Coe is general manager of the association.

Pre-School Clinic.

Another pre-school clinic is to be held at Red Cross headquarters in Chelsea, beginning at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning, October 8, and continuing through until evening. A specialist from Ann Arbor will be in attendance.

On Monday afternoon, September 29, a meeting of the Chelsea public health nursing committee was held at Red Cross headquarters. Miss Hovey, supervising nurse, of Ann Arbor, attended the meeting.

American Legion Elects Delegates.

The first convention of the American Legion of Michigan will be held at Grand Rapids October 13, 14 and 15. Every Post in the state will be represented according to membership, and over a thousand delegates are expected.

At the last regular meeting of Herbert J. McKune Post, No. 31, Clare 11, Fenn and Dr. A. A. Palmer were elected delegates.

Among the important things to come up at the convention is the matter of additional bonuses for our soldiers. One of the plans that the boys favor is the giving of a fifty dollar bond of a special issue for every month they were in the service. It is practically assured that the Canadian government will give twenty-five hundred dollars to each of their soldiers the additional bonus that they deserve. Our government should grant our soldiers the additional bonus that they ask.

The different land bills that are up before congress now are to be commented upon and several changes suggested.

State officers will be elected, also delegates to the national convention which will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., November 11, 12 and 13. Col. A. P. Gansser, who spoke here Victory Day, is one of the candidates for state commander. The Colonel is very popular among the ex-soldiers in the state and they expect to see him elected by a large majority.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

At a regular meeting of Herbert J. McKune Post, No. 31, American Legion, on September 25, 1919, resolutions of appreciation were passed to show the members' gratitude to all citizens of Chelsea and vicinity, who helped make Victory Day, September 8, such a splendid success. Nothing but the same quality of untiring zeal and industry as displayed during the war to the boys both at home and abroad, made it possible to have a celebration absolutely unmarred by an unpleasant incident.

It was a day to be forever remembered by each participant, from the parade in the morning to the close of the dance at night.

We ask you now to help make this Post a center of civic pride and the headquarters of one hundred per cent Americanism.

Citizens of Chelsea and vicinity, we thank you.
HERBERT J. MCKUNE POST,
NO. 31, AMERICAN LEGION.

CAN SLEEP AN HOUR LATER OCTOBER 26

Hands of Clocks of the Nation are to be Turned Back

The nation will get up one hour later on October 26. At 2 o'clock on the morning of October 26, the last Sunday in October, the hands of the United States will be set back one hour, marking the finale of the daylight saving law. The law will die by act of congress at the overwhelming demand of farmer and winter interests, and with protests from cities and industrial centers.

To repeal the daylight saving law, which was inaugurated March 19, 1918, as a war measure, congress had to override President Wilson's veto of the first repeal measure.

She is survived by two sons, Lewis Geyer, of Freedom, and Charles Geyer, of Pittsfield; one daughter, Mrs. Henry Feldkamp, of Freedom, and several grandchildren.

The funeral was held Monday from St. John's church, Rogers Corners, Rev. F. W. Krueger and Rev. A. A. Schoen conducting the services. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Washtenaw Boy Enters Contest

Ivan Galpin of Ypsilanti, winner of the high score for dairy judging among boys' club members at the state fair last month, will uphold the honor of Michigan in a big sectional judging contest at the National Dairy Show in Chicago, October 6. Galpin, a member of the Dismora Pig Club of Ypsilanti, won the honor of representing the state in competition with local winners from all over Michigan.

Six states, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, and Michigan will compete at the Chicago show. Prizes of $100, $85 and $75, respectively, will be given the three highest, while the three lowest boys in the contest will win $65 prizes, enough to pay their expenses, win or lose.

Galpin was trained in his judging work by E. F. Lyon, county boy's club leader of Washtenaw county.

Hog Cholera Still Spreading.

During the past week several new cases of hog cholera have been discovered. Most of the cases that have been diagnosed are located on the Manchester road west of Saline.

Vaccination is the only known preventive of hog cholera, and in order to prevent the spread of the disease, hogs should be treated before they are sick, as very few hogs recover when treated after the symptoms of the disease appear.

No medicines or tonics advertised have any value as a cure or preventive for hog cholera, although most of these may have some merit as a conditioner.

Extreme care is necessary to prevent the further spread of the disease. The germ of cholera can easily be carried by animals, people and vehicles. Streams passing through infected farms may also carry the germs to other farms perhaps miles away. Carcasses of dead animals which have not been properly disposed of may serve as a source of infection, and parts of these are often carried considerable distances by dogs. Buzzards and crows may also carry the germs of the disease to clean farms. On farms having cholera where exchange of labor is necessary, such as filling silos and threshing, extra precautions should be used to prevent the spread of the disease.

It is only by prompt report of all farms where sick hogs appear that the proper precautions can be taken to prevent the further spread of the disease. The best method of procedure to follow is to vaccinate all well herds in the neighborhood and report any cases where hogs are observed to be "off feed." In order to prevent the spread of the disease, the co-operation of every farmer is needed.

"By the way, dear king," I said, assuming a casual manner, "do you happen to have a son?"

"No," he answered, "Calypso is my only child."

"Very strange!" I said, "we met a whimsical lad in our travels whom I would have sworn was her brother."

"That's odd!" said the "king" impatiently, "but no! I have no son," and he seemed to say it with a certain sadness.

Then Calypso came in to join my audience, having, meanwhile, taken the opportunity of twining a scarlet hibiscus among her luxuriant dark curls. I should certainly have told the story better without her, yet I was glad—how glad!—to have her seated there, an attentive presence in a simple gown, white as the sea foam—from which, there was no further doubt in my mind, she had magically sprung.

I gave them the whole story, much as I had told it in John Saunders' snuggery—John P. Tobias, Jr., dear old Tom and his sucking fish, his ghosts, sharks, skeletons, and all; and when I had finished, I found that the interest of my story was once more centered in my pocket-marked friend of "the wonderful works of God."

"I should like to meet your pocket-marked friend," said King Alcinoos, "and I have a notion that, with you as a bait, I shall not long be denied the pleasure."

"I am inclined to think that I have seen him already," said Calypso, using her honey-golden voice for the base purpose of mentioning him.

"Impossible!" I cried, "he is long since safe in Nassau jail."

"Oh, not lately," she answered to our interrogative surprise, and giving a swift embarrassed look at her father, which I at once connected with the secret of the doubloons.

"Seriously, Calypso?" asked her father, with a certain stern affection, as thinking of her safety. "On one of your errands to town?"

And then, turning to me, he said: "Sir Ulysses, you have spoken well, and your speech has been that free, open-hearted speech that wins its way at once among the hyperboreans that dwell in frozen twilight near the northern star, and those dwarfed and swartly intelligences that blacken in the fierce sunlight of that fearful axle we call the equator. Therefore, I will make return to you of speech no less frank and true."

He took a puff at his cigar, and then continued: "I should not risk this confession, but that it is easy to see that you belong to the race of Eternal Children, to which, you may have realized, my daughter and I also belong. This adventure of yours after buried treasure has not seriously been for the doubloons and pieces of eight, the million dollars, and the million and a half dollars themselves, but for the fun of going after them, sailing the unknown seas, coral islands, and all that sort of blessed moonshine. Well, Calypso and I are just like that, and I am going to tell you something exciting—we too have our buried treasure. It is nothing like so magnificent in amount as yours, or your Henry P. Tobias'—and where it is at this particular moment I know as little as yourself. In fact it is Calypso's secret."

I looked across at Calypso, but her eyes were far beyond capture, in unsummoned seas.

"I will show you presently where I found it, among the rocks near by—now a haunt of wild bees."

"Can you ever forget that passage in the Georgics? It makes the honey taste sweeter to me every time I taste it. We must have some of it for dinner, by the way, Calypso."

I could not help laughing, and so, for a moment, breaking up the story. "The dear fellow! Was there any business of human importance from which he could not be diverted by a quotation from Homer or Virgil or Shakespeare? But he was soon in the saddle again."

"Well," he resumed, "one day, some seven years ago, in a little cave below the orange trees, grubbing about as I am fond of doing, I came upon a beautiful old box of beaten copper, sunk deep among the roots of a fig tree. It was strong, but it seemed too dainty for a pirate—some great lady's jewel box more likely—Calypso shall show it to us presently. On opening it—what do you think? It spilled over with golden doubloons—among which were submerged some fine jewels, such as this ring you see me wearing. Actually, it was no great treasure, at a monetary calculation—certainly no fortune—but from our romantic point of view, as belonging to the race of Eternal Children, it was Ni Dorado, Aladdin's lamp, the mines of Peru, the whole-stolen Spanish Main, shimmering fifty fathoms deep in mother-of-pearl and the moon. It was the very Secret Rose of Romance; and, also, mark you, it was some money—oh, perhaps, all told, it might be some five thousand guineas, or—what would you say?—twenty-five odd thousand dollars; Calypso knows better than I, and she, as I said, alone knows where it is now hid, and how much of it now remains."

He paused to relight his cigar, while Calypso and I—Well, he began again: "Now my daughter and I," and he paused to look at her fondly, "though of the race of Eternal Children, are not without some of the innocent wisdom which Holy Writ countenances as the self-protection of the innocent—Calypso, I may say, is particularly endowed with this quality, needing it as she does especially for the guardianship of her foolish talkative old father, who, by the way, is almost at the end of his tale. So, when this old chest flashed its bewildering dazzle upon us, we being poor folk, were not more dazzled than afraid. For—like the poor man in the fable—such good fortune was all too likely to be our undoing, should it come to the ears of the great, or the indignant criminal. The 'great' in our thought was, I am ashamed to say, the sacred British treasury, by an ancient law of which, forty per cent of all 'treasure-trove' belongs to his majesty the king. The 'indignant criminal' was represented by—well, our colored (and not so very much colored) neighbors. Of course we ought to have sent the whole treasure to your friend, John Saunders of his Britannic majesty's government at Nassau, but—Well, do didn't. Some day, perhaps, you will put in a word for us with him, as you drink his old port, in the snuggery. Meanwhile, we had an idea, Calypso and I—"

He paused—For Calypso had involuntarily made a gesture, as though pleading to be spared the whole revelation—and then with a smile, continued: "We determined to hide away our little hoard where it would be safe from our neighbors, and dispose of it according to our needs with a certain tradesman in the town whom we thought we could trust—a tradesman, who, by the way, quite naturally leaves a little tin upon us for his security. No blame to him! I have lived far too long to be hard on human nature."

"John Sweeney?" I asked, looking over at Calypso with eyes that dared at last to smile.

"The very same, my Lord Ulysses," answered my friend.

And so I came to understand that Mr. Sweeney's reluctance in selling tale that doubloon was not so sinister as it seemed. We were to have a little hoard where it would be safe from our neighbors, and dispose of it according to our needs with a certain tradesman in the town whom we thought we could trust—a tradesman, who, by the way, quite naturally leaves a little tin upon us for his security. No blame to him! I have lived far too long to be hard on human nature."

CHAPTER IV.

In Which the "King" Dreams a Dream—and Tells Us About It.

The afternoon, under the spell of its various magic, had been passing all too swiftly, and at length I grew reluctantly aware that it was time for me to go. King Alcinoos raised his hand with a gesture that could not well be denied. That led me—his invitation being accepted without further parley—to mention the idea I had conceived as I came along of exploring those curious old ruined buildings.

"Tomorrow," he announced, "tomorrow we shall begin—there is not a moment to lose. We will send Sanson with a message to your captain—there is no need for you to go yourself; there is too precious—and in a week, who knows but that Monte Cristo shall seem like a pauper and a penny gaff in comparison with the fantasies of our fearful world."

So, for that evening, all was laughingly decided. In a week's time, it was agreed, we should have difficulty in recognizing each other. We should be so disguised in cloth of gold, and so blinding to look upon with rings and ropes of pearls.

When we met at breakfast next morning, glad to see one another again as few people are at breakfast, it was evident that, as far as the "king" was concerned, our dream had lost nothing in the night watches. On the contrary, its wings had grown to an amazing span and billows.

Calypso, it transpired, had certain household matters—of which the "king" of course was ever divinely oblivious—that would take her on an errand into the town. Those disposed of, we two eternal children were at liberty to be as foolish as we pleased. The "king" bowed his uncrowned head, as kings, from time immemorial have bowed their diadems before the quiet command of the domesticities; and it was arranged that I should be Calypso's escort on her errand.

So we set forth in the freshness of the morning, and the woods that had been so black and bewildering at my coming opened before us in easy paths, and all that tropical equator that had been foisted with sweat and insects seemed strangely vernal to me, so that I could hardly believe that I had trodden that way before. And for our companion all the way along—or, at least for my other companion—was the Wanderer of the World, the beautiful strangeness of living, and that marvel of a man's days upon the earth, which lies in not knowing what a day shall bring forth. If only we have a little patience with Time—Time, with those gold keys at his girdle, ready, at any turn of the ways, to unlock the hidden treasure that is to be the meaning of our lives.

How should I try to express what it was to walk by her side, knowing all that we both knew—knowing, or giddily believing that I knew, how her heart, with every breath she took, vibrated like a living flower, with waves of color, changing from moment to moment like a happy, trembling dawn. To know—yet not to say! Yes! we were both at that divine moment which hangs like a dewdrop in the morning sun—ah! all too ready to fall. Oh! keep it poised, in that miraculous balance, 'twixt time and eternity—for this crystal made of light and dew is the meaning of the life of man and woman upon the earth.

As we came to the borders of the wood near the edge of the little town we called a counsel of two. As the outcome of it we concluded that, having in mind the "king's" ambitious plans for our cloth-of-gold future, and for other obvious reasons, it was better that she went into the town alone—I to await her in the shadow of the mahogany tree.

As she turned to leave me she drew up from her bosom a little bag that hung by a silver chain, and opening it drew out, with a laugh—a golden doubloon!

I sprang toward her; but she was too quick for me, and laughingly vanished through an opening in the trees. I was not to kiss her that day.

Calypso was so long coming back that I began to grow anxious—was, indeed, on the point of going down into the town in search of her, when she suddenly appeared, rather out of breath and evidently a little excited—as though, in fact, she had been running away from something. She caught me by the arm with a laugh.

"Do you want to see your friend Tobias?" she said.

"Tobias? Impossible!"

"Come here," and she led me a yard or two back the way she had come, and then looked through the trees.

"Gone," she said, "but he was there a minute or two ago—or at least someone that is his photograph—and of course he's there yet, hidden in the brush, and probably got his eyes on us all the time. Did you see that seven-year apple tree move?"

"His favorite tree," I laughed.

"Hilarly strong enough to hang him on, though." And I realized that she was King Alcinoos' daughter.

We crouched lower for a moment or two but the seven-year apple tree didn't move again, and we agreed that there was no use in waiting for Tobias to show his hand.

"But what made you think it was Tobias?" I asked, "and how did it all happen?"

"I could hardly fail to recognize him from your flattering description," she answered, "and indeed it all happened rather like another experience of mine. I had gone into Sweeney's store—you remember—and was just paying my bill."

"In the usual coinage?" I ventured. She gave me a long, whimsical smile—once more her father's daughter.

"That I'm afraid, was the trouble," she answered, "for as I laid my money down on the counter I suddenly noticed that there was a person at the back of the store."

"A person?" I interrupted. "Yes! Suppose we say 'a pocket-marked person' was it?"

"Well! I took my change and managed to whisper a word to Sweeney—a good friend, remember—and came out. I took a short cut back, but the 'person' that had stood in the back of the store seemed to know the way almost better than I—so well that he got ahead of me. He was walking quickly this way and so slowly that I had at last to overtake him. He said nothing, just watched me as if interested in the way I was going—but, I'm ashamed to say, he rather frightened me! And here I am."

"Well, then," I said, "let's hurry home and talk it over with the 'king.'"

The "king," as I had realized, was a practical "romantic" and at once took the matter seriously, leaving—

"This time of the year is filled with such sunbathing days, and even warm ones, that it is well to keep to the lighter foods and simple repeats until the first chilly days which give the appetite a zest and vigor."

The oyster now has come again to his own and is served fresh, preferably, though in a stew, fried, creamed or escalloped will always be popular with many.

Creamed Fresh Beef.—Chop one pound of beef from the round; put into a hot pan and stir until all is seared. Add one tablespoonful of butter and, as soon as it is melted, dredge the beef with one tablespoonful of flour; stir until the flour is browned. Add one cupful of cream, boil up, season with salt and pepper and serve on hot toast.

Delmonico Hash.—Take a pound of finely chopped meat from the top of the round, put it into a hot frying pan with two tablespoonfuls of butter, one small shredded onion and cook until the beef is nicely browned; add one-half cupful of hot water; or, better, soup stock, and eight chopped potatoes, previously cooked. Season with salt, paprika and chopped parsley.

Cheese and Olive Canapés.—Cut stale bread into one-quarter-inch slices. Shape with a small oblong cutter with rounded corners. Cream butter and add an equal quantity of soft, rich cheese; season with salt. Spread on the bread and garnish with one-quarter-inch border of finely chopped olives and a piece of red and green pepper cut in fancy shapes in the center of each.

Moravian Apple Pie.—Core and pare six even-sized apples. Place in a covered pan, with a teaspoonful of lemon juice, a little of the yellow rind, a cupful of sugar and water enough to cover the bottom of the dish. Stew until tender. Line a deep pastry plate with rich pastry; place the apples in it, fill the centers with peach marmalade and put strips of pastry over the top. Bake in a quick oven and serve with cream.

Russel Sandwiches.—Take an equal amount of cold boiled chicken and tongue, a dozen olives and six hard-boiled eggs; mix all together and chop as fine as possible. Work into a paste by the addition of mayonnaise dressing, then season and spread on buttered bread.

THE SEASONABLE WORD.

In the autumn, when there is such an abundance of vegetables, the frugal housewife will provide for winter, when there is less of a choice.

Olives Oil Pickles.—Take 100 small cucumbers sliced thin, leaving on the peeling, three pints of small onions also sliced thin, three ounces of white mustard seed, one ounce of celery seed, one ounce of white pepper, two scant cupfuls of olive oil. Add one and two-thirds cupfuls of salt, and add to the cucumbers; let stand three hours. Let the sliced onions stand in cold water three hours. Drain well, and mix the onions and cucumbers with the oil and the spices. Put into jars, and fill the jars with good vinegar. Keep in a cold place. Good in ten days.

Corn Relish.—Cut corn from twelve ears, chop one small head of cabbage, sprinkle salt over the cabbage, mix well and let stand three hours. Drain off the water and put corn and cabbage together; add one cupful of sugar, two quarts of vinegar, one-half cupful of mustard, four small red peppers chopped. Cook all until tender, then put into sterile cans and seal.

Piccalilli.—Take two gallons of green tomatoes chopped fine, eight large onions also chopped, three quarts of vinegar, six tablespoonfuls of mustard seed, one tablespoonful each of cloves, allspice and mace, one tablespoonful of celery seed and two pounds of granulated sugar. Let the tomatoes and onions stand over night, sprinkled with salt; drain in the morning and mix with the spices and boil until tender.

Mint Vinegar.—Put into a quart jar enough fresh mint, carefully washed and dried, to fill it loosely, fill up with vinegar and let stand well covered for three weeks. Strain, bottle and cork, and the flavored vinegar will keep for years. Tarragon, chervil or any other herb may be used in the same manner.

Mushrooms make fine catsup. Arrange in layers in salt and let stand overnight. Drain and cook with spices as one's taste desires.

My limbs and back felt as though they were crushed. I had little control of the kidney secretions and the passages were painful. My head ached a great deal and I was dizzy. A friend told me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial, and eight boxes cured me."

Old saying slightly mixed

Familiar "Before You Could Say Jack Robinson" Does Not Convey the Right Idea.

Opinion differs as to the proper duration of a social call. "Anywhere from ten minutes to a half hour," says the woman who has a social secretary and whose daily job is "calling" to the tune of tea and wafers. "All afternoon," says the housewife, who takes along her knitting and sits down to coffee and cake. "And then," say some, "it depends upon the call. On some occasions and with different people we stay longer than others."

But Jack Robinson's calls never varied. He never stayed long enough to wear out his welcome. In fact hardly had he been announced, hardly had the servant who admitted him spoken aloud his name than he was gone.

So, as you see, "before you can say Jack Robinson" has no reference to the time it takes to say it. "As long as you can see Jack Robinson" would be more in order with its origin and significance.

Could Understand Them.

REALLY NOT WAITER'S FAULT

Mr. Green's Perfect Mastery of the French Language Evidently Was Too Much for Him.

Mr. Brown and Mr. Green were taking their long-talked-of holiday in France. For three months Mr. Green had been learning French—by correspondence—and thought he had mastered the language.

One afternoon the pair went into a cafe to have tea, and Green, who always insisted on doing all the talking, gave the order to the waiter. When, however, the tea things were brought, he noticed that something was missing, and spoke angrily to the waiter about it.

"My dear fellow," objected Brown, "what on earth are you saying?" "Will you kindly refrain from making your absurd criticism of my use of the French language?" retorted Green.

"Oh, certainly!" answered Brown. "Only it seems rather a waste of time to ask the waiter to bring you a teaspoon!"—London Tit-Bits.

Lost Opportunity.

"It is a pity those people who need to fast for weeks couldn't get the public interested in their theory."

"Why so?"

"Because if the idea had been taken up and practiced, the ultimate consumer could be striking now."

Too Loud.

Hewitt—"This is a pretty dead place. Jewitt—I should say so; a still alarm would be considered a violation of the ordinance against undue noises."

Rich and Warm for Winter

The Fashion Show, which is more correctly called a style promenade, is an established institution now. Garments for all the seasons—spring, summer, autumn and winter make their debut at these promenades, when practiced and keen eyes pass upon their merits and the acid tests of the buyers send them on their way to success—or relegate them to oblivion. New fabrics, new silhouettes, new style features have their tryouts at these promenades and the questions, as to what is to be presented to the public, are settled by those who seem to have an intuition in the matter of coming fashions.

Two striking garments that challenged comparisons at a recent style promenade in New York, are shown above. They invite attention to new style features that have made a success and have an assured future. Wool velvet, which goes by several names, with fur for trimming, is the fabric used in them and their lines indicate what is acceptable to American women. At the left of the picture there is a handsome top coat in a very dark gray with cross-hairs in white, which is a new adventure in velvet coatings. A photograph cannot convey the smartness and richness of this material, but it sets forth plainly the style of the luxurious and practical garment. It has a wide muffer collar and deep cuffs of earned fur and a narrow belt of the velvet that buttons at the sides in the most unobtrusive manner. Aside from the interest that centers in the novelty of the material used in this coat, the wide, bias band of the goods which appears to be buttoned around the front of it about eight inches above the bottom, seized the attention of spectators and was credited with being a fine bit of cleverness in designing.

Paris took kindly to tailored suits this season and has furnished us with models that have a distinctly French flavor. They are less plain and less simple than the usual American creations and of our own designers have adopted the French lines. But Paris devoted the very short skirt and America rejected it, and for once Paris changed its decree. We agree on longer skirts and two-third length coats and have a fine example of these features in the velvet suit shown at the right of the picture. It is at least reminiscent of the Russian blouse, having all the verve and style of that persistent inspiration.

Fine Feathers Are Back

The powers that be in the world of millinery have made a league in favor of feathers for trimming winter hats. Having decided that the mid-winter hat should be characteristic of the mid-winter season and bear little resemblance to its predecessors for fall, the designers have evidently settled on feathers as the great feature of the styles. Ostich has come back and endless wings, cockades and fancy feathers are fluttering across the millinery horizon.

Ostich, curled and uncured, reappears to such advantage that we all wonder how fashion could ever have banished it. Yet it was absent for several seasons. Soft quills and long sprays of artificial algeas sweep and swirl about brims. There is a great vogue for shaggy, ragged effects, with coque feathers and burnt goose in turbulent, unsymmetrical arrangement about brims and crowns. Then there are single long feathers and the most brilliant and precise wings to contradict what seems the careless placing of the shaggy feathers. It will take a season to tell all the story of feathers.

Most sure of welcome from many quarters are the beautifully made wings and montures like those shown in two of the hats pictured above. Besides those there are some smaller shapes entirely covered with feathers and among them appear turbans in which groups of tiny wings spring out about the hat like small bouquets of feathers.

The hat at the center of the group has a narrow drooping brim covered with shaggy velvet and a coronet of the same across the front. A pair of wings joined by a breast make an effective ornament set in behind the velvet coronet and sweeping in graceful lines backward. The feather band, terminating in wings, in the hat below, is used on velvet or feather covered turbans. In this case the turban is covered with small, soft feathers and the wing at the left side is considerably larger than that at the right. These hats, made of or trimmed with rich feathers, placed in many eccentric ways, are suited to matrons and mature women.

For young women and girls the two of velvet shown at the left of the picture has a place in all representative displays of millinery.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the coils which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of being with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL DISEASES

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Danger is in sight.
First of all, what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pains in the back, wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. There are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate and be converted into uric acid and other poisons, which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.

WARM COATS

--- FOR ---

Fall Weather

We are displaying a big stock of newest models for Fall and Winter. These have been bought of several of the best New York City makers, and no other store owns their Women's Ready-to-Wear Garments at lower prices than this store.

Our selling costs are much lower in Chelsea than any city store, so we can well afford to sell you your Fall Coat at a great deal less than our city competitors.

We visit the New York market several times each season, and have access to all there is offered in the way of styles or values. The same styles shown in our department will be seen in all good city stores.

These coats include models in Melton cloth, Velour, Silvertone, Pebble and Cheviot. Some with and some without fur trimming, and with plush collars. Some are full silk lined, some lined but to the waist.

About one-half of our stock are exact reproductions of imported French models, and each garment carries the name of the French maker who originated the model. Some of the styles are quite novel and striking.

Prices Are $25.00 to $90.00

We call especial attention to our garments offered at $25.00 to $35.00. There will be no more of these at these prices after this lot is sold.

All of the most successful auction sales last season in this locality were advertised sales. Besides getting out the usual bills the proprietors used liberal advertising space and got corresponding results. An auction used to be just a neighborhood affair, but now buyers come from much longer distances, with very little trouble. But they need to be told about the sale and all the details. Everybody knows what a difference a few buyers will make, and there are never too many. The better your advertising is done the better the results. The Standard is ready to help you get results.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

Chelsea People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Disordered kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions may be dark, contain sediment.

Passages are sometimes frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is often present day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells may occur.

Weakened kidney should receive quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys, backache and urinary disorders.

Chelsea evidence proves their worth.

Glenn H. Barbour, barber, S. Main st., Chelsea, says: "I suffered from dull pains across my back and kidneys, brought on by constant standing. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and caused me annoyance. Doan's Kidney Pills regulated my kidneys and put a stop to the pains in my back."

Mr. Barbour is only one of many Chelsea people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches, if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for kidney remedy, ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the name that Mr. Barbour had, the remedy backed by home testimony, for sale at all stores. NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Indications That Union Labor
May Get the Worst of the Great Steel Strike.

SENATE STARTS AN INQUIRY

Many Workers Said to Be Returning to the Mills—Status of the Peace Treaty Contest—D'Annunzio's
Raid Precipitates Crisis in Italy.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Developments of the week in the great strike of steel workers indicated that this, perhaps the severest test to which union labor in America ever has subjected itself, would result adversely to the unions.

At the beginning many thousands of men in the United States Steel corporation's numerous plants scattered throughout the country quit work regardless of whether or not they were members of the unions. W. Z. Foster, general organizer, claimed that 242,000 had gone out before the week was half over. This was not directly disputed by the corporation officials, but they declared the tide already had turned and that the men were coming back to the mills in large numbers seeking their old jobs. A great many of the plants were closed down at the beginning of the week, but in some of the districts these were being reopened gradually with increasing forces of workers. In the Pittsburgh district the employers asserted they were increasing production in all the important plants; the Gary and Indiana Harbor mills resumed partial operation; the strikers at Canton, O., and Birmingham, returned to work. On the other hand there was virtually a complete tie-up in the Mahoning valley, the Colorado district and at other points.

Though the union officials had declared the strike would be conducted without violence on the part of the men, rioting started promptly in some regions, especially in Pennsylvania. Several deaths and many injuries resulted. The state constabulary got into action promptly and effectively, breaking up all assemblies and in general restoring order. Sabotage was in evidence in various plants.

The strike leaders were earnestly endeavoring to expand the strike into a walkout of allied crafts, which include the men in 25 unions. On the Great Lakes it appeared likely the seamen and marine firemen who transport iron ore would go out, and switchmen on railroads that especially serve steel plants were reported to be ready to quit.

The senate committee on education and labor began an inquiry into the strike and the first witness was John Fitzpatrick, chairman of the committee on organization of the steel workers and real leader of the strike. It was announced that Mr. Gary would appear before the committee later to present the case for the employers.

Fitzpatrick admitted to the committee that there had been no demand from the steel workers for unionization, but that the Federation of Labor considered it necessary because the steel industry was a "hot spot" in the industrial situation and that the conditions prevailing in it led other large employers to consider imposing similar conditions on their employees. He told at length of the vain efforts to induce Mr. Gary to confer with his committee, and said that even if the steel corporation should now consent to meet the union representatives it would be too late to stop the strike, as the men "are going to demand decent justice of the United States government."

However, Fitzpatrick said, the unions would call off the strike if the steel corporation would agree to submit the issue involved to arbitration by a commission to be named by President Wilson. When this was told to Mr. Gary in New York, he replied that, speaking for himself, he believed the board of directors could not negotiate with Fitzpatrick and his associates as union labor leaders and that questions of moral principles, such as are involved in this struggle cannot be arbitrated nor compromised.

Samuel Gompers, testifying before the senate interstate commerce committee, gave the steel strike his approval though he said he would have preferred to have postponed it until after the industrial conference in October. He laid all the blame for the strike on Mr. Gary for his refusal to deal with the union chiefs. As a matter of plain fact, the whole contest hinges on the question of the open or the closed shop and its outcome will go far to determine the power and right of the unions to organize industries that have not asked such action and to enforce their closed shop policy everywhere.

Mr. Gompers also appeared before the senate committee on the District of Columbia, where he maintained the right of policemen to organize, but said they should not go on strike. "Private employees," he said, "can quit work, while policemen have no such recourse." At the same time he defended the policemen of Boston by asserting that the trouble there was not really a strike but a lockout. As for the constabulary of Pennsylvania, he declared the events of recent days have proved they are nothing but Cossacks, and they would not be admitted to the Federation of Labor.

The resentment of the public, which of course is always the "goal" in industrial disputes, is being reflected in congress. Senator Thomas of Colorado leads the fight in the upper house against tyranny by union labor, and last week introduced a resolution condemning the closed shop principle as un-American and calling for the repeal by congress of the special immunity it has granted to labor unions from prosecution for violation of the anti-trust laws. In the lower house Representative Cooper, who is from the Youngstown district and is himself a union labor man, uttered a warning against the danger of organized labor being misled by such a "revolutionary leader" as William Z. Foster, secretary of the steel workers' committee. Foster is the author of a book on syndicalism and secretary of the Syndicalist League of North America and in his book defends the syndicalist methods of violence, sabotage and lawlessness to win strikes. Congressman Kahn of California, asked Attorney General Palmer if Foster could not be prosecuted in connection with deaths and injuries caused since the steel strike began, but Mr. Palmer said he thought any such action should be brought by the various states rather than by the federal government. Mr. Gompers and other "conservative" union labor leaders must enjoy their close relation with Foster and his like.

If anyone supposed President Wilson would compromise with the reservationists concerning the peace treaty, he seemingly was mistaken. The president, on his way back from the Pacific coast, delivered himself of speeches that showed his spirit was, if possible, more uncompromising than ever, and he rather plainly intimated that if the pact were not ratified as it stands he would pigeonhole it for the present and make it the issue of next year's presidential campaign. To his audience in Cheyenne he said if the proposed reservation to article ten were adopted by the senate he would regard it as rejection of the whole treaty, and that it would mean the negotiation of a separate peace with Germany, which would turn the whole world against us. He predicted that without the League of Nations covenant, including article ten unchanged, the world would be plunged into a war far more horrible than the conflict just ended.

Mr. Wilson also continued to defend the arrangement by which the British empire has six votes to one for the United States in the league assembly. The proposed amendment to this article was causing both sides in the senate considerable worry, and they dodged a vote on it for the time being. The proponents of the covenant wanted to wait until after the president returned in the hope that he might be able to bring some pressure to bear, and the opposition were not at all sure of their strength. The mild reservationists hoped some way might be found to avoid the direct issue.

The French chamber of deputies in which the government was pressing for ratification of the treaty, was much exercised by the hostile attitude of the American senate and the government was called on for explanations. Tardieu said he was satisfied the senate would ratify the treaty, and Pichon said even without the United States the League of Nations could exist, legally speaking. Barthou replied that France wanted political, not legal guarantees. Premier Clemenceau then said:

"Should the United States reject the League of Nations, two treaties of alliance between France and Great Britain and France and the United States exist. Nevertheless it was precisely because we felt that the League of Nations was an insufficient guarantee for some years to come that those treaties were drawn up. The League of Nations for the present has nothing to do with the Franco-British-American treaties, which constitute sufficient guarantees for France."

Italy was in the midst of a tremendous crisis, brought on directly by the seizure of Fiume by D'Annunzio and blamed by the Italians themselves on the great powers which refused to carry out all the promises in the treaty of London. Foreign Minister Tittoni was compelled to resign, and the peace conference in Paris was deeply concerned by the situation. The Italian government asked the allies to oust D'Annunzio and his followers, but at this writing nothing in that line had been started. The post-soldier was still defiant and his forces were increasing in strength. Other Italian leaders, like Spalato, Sabonico and Tran, towns on the Dalmatian coast which have been under the domination of the Jugo-Slavs. In Fiume, near the Montenegrin frontier, there was a veritable reign of terror. There are rumors, also, that the Italians are planning to restore King Nicholas to the throne of Montenegro. He is the father of the queen of Italy.

Late advices from Spalato by way of Copenhagen said an American destroyer appeared at Tran and landed marines, compelling the Italians to leave, after which the Jugo-Slavs took over the town from the Americans.

Officials of the state department at Washington admit that the president has agreed with the allies on a plan to give support to Kolchak and Denikine in their fight against the bolsheviks. The United States is to supply the former with the things he needs, and Great Britain and France will take care of the latter. Presumably this arrangement means that the American troops now in Siberia will not be brought back for some time. Both these Russian leaders have been scoring considerable success against the bolshevik lately, and it may be the recognition of the Omsk government by the allied powers will not be much longer delayed.

The bolshevik government, while willing to make peace with the Baltic states, is laying its plans to conquer the rest of its foes. Trotzky, speaking recently in Petrograd, said his army would continue their methods of beating their enemy singly, taking Kolchak first and then Denikine. "If Finland wants war," he said, "it will be necessary to begin against her a campaign of extermination such as hitherto has been unknown to history."

Lenine, it is said, is anxious to be at peace with all the world. There was a report in Paris that he had been assassinated. If this were true Trotzky probably would be more powerful than ever, and the peace he seeks is founded on the destruction of his enemies.

The king and queen of the Belgians are on their way to visit the United States. Before his departure Albert said he had much to learn in this country owing to the "excellent relations existing between capital and labor" here. Can it be that Albert was spoofing us?

STEEL STRIKE IS STILL DEADLOCKED

SECOND WEEK OF BIG LABOR
STRUGGLE LEAVES RESULT IN DOUBT.

BOTH SIDES CLAIMING GAINS

Bethlehem Plant Is Partly Crippled—
West Virginia Mill Forestalls
Strike By Shutting Down.

Pittsburg—Results of the great offensive and counter-offensive scheduled to usher in the second week of the steel strike, by means of which both capital and labor hoped to break the deadlock developed after the first few days remained in doubt this week.

In the Pittsburg and Chicago sectors—the strategic points on the industrial front—both sides made determined efforts to push forward, one with the hope of resuming full operation, the other of crippling new plants. The chief struggle, however, was waged for control in the mills of the Bethlehem Steel company, whose 10,000 employees had been commanded by union leaders to join the ranks of the strikers.

Here are the reports issued from rival headquarters dealing with the Bethlehem objective: The employees reported to work Monday morning in such numbers as to provide for practically a full operation of all plants.—E. C. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel company. Charles M. Schwab's big plant at Bethlehem completely crippled.—William Z. Foster, secretary of the strikers' national committee.

Elsewhere results of the economic battle were equally obscured by conflicting claims. The independent plant of Jones & Laughlin company in Pittsburgh is "50 per cent out of action," according to Foster, but according to company officials, it is little affected. The Carnegie Steel company and other concerns in the crucial Pittsburg salient claimed men were returning "in goodly numbers," while unionists heralded failure of the United States Steel corporation to "stamp" their forces.

From Chicago came reports that the struggle for control in that center was being equally stubbornly contested, without apparent material gains for either side.

The Weirton Steel company suspended operations at its plant in Clarksburg, W. Va., posting notices that the mills would be closed indefinitely for repairs. This shut-down was characterized by labor leaders as a lockout.

FARMER BRUTALLY KILLS WIFE

Calmly Waits Until Morning to Get Permit For Burial.

Detroit—"I killed my wife last night. I want to get a permit so I can go back and bury her tomorrow."

Martin Bobrowski, 53 years old, farmer and blacksmith on a lonesome place in the southwest part of Sumpter township, entered the prosecuting attorney's office Monday noon, Sept. 29 and made the announcement to Assistant Prosecutor Joseph A. Popiel as calmly as if he had slaughtered a sheep.

Sunday evening, Bobrowski, who, according to his children, had been acting strangely for two days, made a demand on his wife, Anna, for $300 she had obtained from the sale of produce and stock. When she refused, he seized a light stove poker, and drove the woman into the yard, striking her on the head and face, while she struggled with him, screaming for help that was half a mile out of hearing.

The four children, Theodore, a husky boy of 17, but cowed by his father; Celis, 15; Dewey, 13, and Frank, 9, ran panic-stricken into the fields.

Around and around the lonely yard, the man chased the woman, slashing at her with the iron rod until her face was a mass of raw flesh. When she finally sank down, he placed ropes around her hands and feet and dragged her into the house.

He washed the bruised body, placed the woman's best green dress on it, stretched it on the floor in a repulsive condition with the hands crossed over the breast, and remained with it until early in the morning. Then he called for his son to drive him eight miles to Belleville and took the train to Detroit, announcing that he would be back in the afternoon and that there would be a funeral the next day.

BETTY'S VACATION

By MARION C. LEESAM.

Betty Saunders listened eagerly while two of the other stenographers of the little firm of Brown & Co. talked eagerly about vacations. One of the girls was going up on the cool Maine shore, while the other was contemplating spending her two weeks on the edge of the New Hampshire hills.

Betty's eyes filled with tears as she tried hard to concentrate her mind on the transcribing of her notes and, as her fingers skimmed lightly over the typewriter keys, she pictured the kind of a vacation she was going to have. Her mother was an invalid. It had been a hard pinch for Mrs. Saunders to let Betty go through school, but she was now reaping the benefit, as Betty, having studied hard, now held the position of private secretary.

Being young and pretty, good times appealed to Betty, but many an invitation had been turned down with regret, as she disliked leaving her mother alone.

Her thoughts were suddenly interrupted by the sound of a buzzer summoning her to the president's office. She hastily wiped away all trace of tears and, taking her notebook, walked across the hall into the private office. Seated beside Mr. Brown was a tall, fair-haired chap in khaki. He arose as Betty entered and Mr. Brown introduced him.

"Miss Saunders, this is my son who has just returned, having spent eight months in France. Instead of going back to his last year at college he is going to start in here and learn the business. You will take his dictation now, and any inside lines on the work that you know about I will trust you to make clear to him."

Jack Brown, Jr., was so interested in watching Betty he hardly heard what his father was saying, and as she left the room he seemed a little more interested in the idea of starting his business career than he had a few hours before.

As the days passed on Betty spent much more of her time in the office of the young Mr. Brown, and realized more and more how Mr. Brown, Sr., was relying on his son and by degrees relieving himself of some of the burdens he had been bearing alone. The time passed very quickly to Betty and before she knew it the time came when she was to close up her typewriter and leave for two long weeks. Usually Betty had a half-holiday on Saturday, but today she worked overtime in order to get things ready for the girl who was to substitute for her. Jack Brown, although he didn't show it, was quite annoyed at the thought of her being away from a business standpoint, and then he couldn't quite picture anyone else sitting in her place.

It was a very warm, sultry afternoon and as Betty worked she felt happy at the thought of a vacation. Even though she couldn't go away, she could at least rest in the shady hammock at home, away from the rush and turmoil of the city.

While she was getting ready to go home Mr. Brown, Jr., came over and wished her a pleasant vacation. "Where are you going, Miss Saunders, seashore or country?"

Betty flushed and quietly told him of her mother's illness and how she was unable to go away. She was too proud to let him know she couldn't afford to take her mother away.

"That's a shame," said Jack, inwardly kicking himself for being the cause of her embarrassment. "You work so hard here in the office you deserve a little recreation."

After Betty had gone he thought over the situation and his face lightened as he thought of a plan. At 7:30 that evening the telephone at Betty's house tickled and Mr. Jack Brown was on the line.

"I thought you might like to take a little motor ride. It's such a warm night, that is if you have no other engagement."

Betty's heart jumped. "I would just love to, but—"

"And, of course, your mother will accompany us. I think a ride along the seashore would do her good."

"That settled it for Betty, and Mrs. Saunders was just as pleased, for a change for her away from the house was a great treat."

Many happy times followed during the two weeks. There were picnic parties and drives through the cool green country or other rides along the shore, and when Betty returned to the office she was a very happy girl.

The following spring came with all its brightness and soon vacation time was again being discussed at Brown & Co. Betty listened to the chatter of the girls and thought of all the changes that happened in one year.

"That night she and Jack took a long ride. When he stopped his car at Betty's house, on their return, he tenderly took her hand.

"Well, little girl, where are you going on your vacation this year?"

"I don't know," said Betty, her thoughts far away.

"I do," said Jack. "You're going to marry me and we're going on a month's honeymoon." He slipped a sparkling ring on Betty's finger and then kissed it reverently.

"How is that for a vacation?"

Betty was too happy to answer, but Mr. Brown, Sr., did a good deal of nodding while his son was away that month, and quietly mourned the loss of his secretary forever.
