SCHOOL NOTES.

The freshmen will give the Christmas literary program.

Miss Mildred Boodle, of Cassopolis, has been visiting her sister, Miss Nina Boodle.

Mrs. Martin has been ill several days. Mrs. Foote of Abdon, is taking her place in the school.

The fifth grade is studying the Southern States and have a fine exhibit of products and curios from these states.

Found—A good, soft, brown leather glove, lined. It is a man's glove and was found in the high school after the exhibit last week.

Remember the senior play Friday night. As the advance sale has been large, it has been decided to repeat the play Saturday evening.

The freshmen sent Mrs. Martin a lovely basket of fruit, nuts and candy, which pleased her very much. It is pleasant to be remembered so kindly when ill.

The vocabulary contest was closed last Wednesday. Mabel's side won Irene's side, according to the agreement, will entertain the winners Thursday evening, December 11.

The following children of the fourth grade stood one hundred per cent for the month of November: Kenneth Smith, LaVern Cook, George Meyers, Haron McMann, May Hamp, Gertrude Weinberg, George Griswold, Lorenz Wackerhut, Lucy Lewis, Nora Shihabery, Margaret DuPont, Arnold Steger, Charles Slocum, Paul Axtell, Dean Rogers, Goldie Slocum, Lucile Hesel-schwedit.

Beeman-Dykemaster Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Nina Beeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Beeman, of Lyndon, and Mr. John Dykemaster, took place at 12 o'clock Wednesday, December 3, 1919. Rev. E. E. Rhoads officiating. They were attended by Miss Carrie Dykemaster, sister of the bridegroom, and Mr. Lee Beeman, brother of the bride.

The ceremony was witnessed by guests from Jackson, Grand Rapids and the vicinity of the home.

Following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served. The young couple left after the dinner for a visit with relatives in Battle Creek. They will make their home in Jackson.

A Musical Event.

The coming to Ann Arbor of one of the world's greatest musical organizations, the New York Chamber Music Society, consisting of eleven virtuosos all of whom have won gold medals for their artistic perfection, will be an event of more than unusual importance in the musical life of the city and vicinity.

Under the direction of Carolyn Beebe, a famous pianist, this group of artists consisting of violins, violas, cellos, double bass, clarinet, flute, oboe, bassoon and French horn, have been assembled and for several years have been winning laurels in this important field of musical endeavor.

Music critics speak in glowing terms of their work and their repertoire of superlative adjectives is always exhausted when they are under discussion. The program chosen for their Ann Arbor debut will consist of numbers from Beethoven, Brahms, Gossens and Wolf-Ferrari, has been characterized as "serious, very fine and beautiful."

The wide spread interest in the event is attested by the number of orders for tickets from many localities which are being received each day at the office. Those interested should communicate with the secretary of the University School of Music.

Special interurban cars will be provided for the accommodation of out of town patrons.

Mrs. Silas R. Fenn.

Grand Lodge Independent: Mrs. Silas R. Fenn passed away at her home on East Jefferson street on Tuesday, November 18, after suffering a paralytic stroke a few days previous. Funeral services were conducted at the home Friday forenoon at ten o'clock. Rev. Lawrence Meade officiating. Burial in Oakwood cemetery.

Elizabeth Bush was born November 24, 1845, in Washtenaw county. She was married March 11, 1867, to Silas R. Fenn and to them were born three children, Mrs. Lucia Robinson of Onida, Mrs. Lillian Rhodes of Grand and Dr. Ernest R. Fenn of Potterville. She is also survived by six grandchildren, one great-grandchild and two half brothers.

Mr. and Mrs. Fenn spent the first years of their married life in Washtenaw county, coming to North Benton in 1875, where they purchased a farm and erected a beautiful home and lived until coming to this city seven years ago, locating on East Jefferson street. Mrs. Fenn has been an invalid for three years, but during that in days has always maintained her sunny disposition, which had endeared her to a large circle of friends. She loved her home, care and her children. Her husband passed away November 11, just a week preceding her death, and since that time she has gradually weakened until the end came Tuesday evening.

HEAVY WIND DOES DAMAGE SATURDAY

Chimneys Were Blown Down, Buildings Wrecked, Trees Uprooted.

During the high wind Saturday night considerable damage was done about town. The lighting circuit on the east side of the village was put out of commission, and the merchants on that side of town were compelled to use lanterns, oil lamps and candles, and the Princess theatre was put out of business completely.

A number of windows were blown in, outbuildings overturned and a number of trees were broken down. In a number of instances telephone service was put out of commission and yards and streets were littered with broken limbs from the trees. The tile cornice on the Consumers' Power Co.'s plant was blown off, and the electric car service went out of business until Sunday morning.

East of Chelsea telephone poles were blown down, apple trees uprooted, barn doors blown off and chimneys demolished. A barn on the farm of P. M. Broesamle, in Sylvan township, was blown down.

George Lindauer, of Lima, suffered considerable loss by the wind. The chimneys on his residence were blown down and his large basement barn was moved about six inches and the south wall of the basement was so badly cracked that it will have to be rebuilt.

Masonic Officers.

Olive Lodge, No. 156, F. & A. M., elected the following officers at the annual meeting Tuesday evening: W. M.—W. C. Boyd. S. W.—M. J. Baxter. J. W.—Harold Spaulding. Treasurer—J. L. Fletcher. Secretary—C. W. Maroney. S. D.—Lionel Vickers. J. D.—A. H. Schumacher. Tyler—Harry Serviss.

Buy Red Cross Christmas Seals.

The time is again here to show your great interest in the crusade against tuberculosis. It is needless to inform you of the splendid results obtained from the sale of the Red Cross Christmas seals. Much has been done, but we must do more. Resulting from the influenza epidemic, improper care and undernourishment due to the high cost of living, there were 3,125 deaths due to tuberculosis last year in the state of Michigan alone.

As in years past, the Business Girls' Club of Ann Arbor, will again sell the Red Cross Christmas seals for Washtenaw county.

Tuberculosis kills producers—chiefly men and women between the ages of 15 and 45.

It claims workers—active men and women in the homes, the office and the shop.

It causes 150,000 deaths in the United States every year.

It costs the United States in economic waste alone about $500,000,000 annually.

More than 1,000,000 persons in this country are suffering from active tuberculosis right now.

It menaces every community, every home and every individual.

And yet tuberculosis is curable and preventable.

It is spread largely by ignorance, carelessness and neglect.

The National Tuberculosis Association and its 1000 affiliated state and local organizations wage a continuous, winning war on tuberculosis.

The work of these organizations is financed chiefly by the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Drive the menace of tuberculosis from your door. Buy and use Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Silas R. Fenn.

Grand Lodge Independent: Silas R. Fenn died at his residence on East Jefferson street, Tuesday noon, November 11, and was buried in Oakwood cemetery Thursday afternoon. Deceased was born in Sylvan township, Washtenaw county, September 17, 1847, and lived in the county of his birth until 1875. On March 20, 1867, he was married to Elizabeth Bush and in the fall of 1875 they purchased the farm in North Benton where they erected a beautiful home and lived until they retired from the active care and duties of farm life seven years ago when they moved to Grand Lodge.

Mr. Fenn was one of the solid and substantial farmers of Benton whose word was as good as his bond, and whose judgment on matters pertaining to the farm was sought by many neighbors and friends.

He is survived by his widow, three children, six grandchildren and one great-grandchild. The children are Dr. A. R. Fenn of Potterville, Mrs. H. H. F. Fenn of Coral and Mrs. H. E. Robinson of Onida, a brother in Detroit and a sister in Chelsea also survive.

Dixboro Boys Winners.

In the junior live stock judging contest at the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago, which is now in session, the boys' team from the Dixboro Boys' and Girls' Club won fourth place in a group of twelve states. The order of the states winning are Iowa Texas, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Nebraska, North Carolina, Missouri, South Dakota, New Mexico and Colorado.

Each of these state sent a team of three persons to represent it in the contest. All of these are boys belonging to the boys' and girls' clubs of the different states. The boys at Dixboro won over all other teams from this state at the state fair and were thereby entitled to represent Michigan in the junior judging contest.

The boys have been working hard this fall getting in shape for the final contest. They are receiving many congratulations from their friends on the showing they made at Chicago Friday. The place that these boys won is a distinct honor to the state of Michigan, to Washtenaw county and to the Boys' and Girls' Club at Dixboro. These boys have been students in the agricultural course at the Ypsilanti high school and through their training there under Professor Walpole together with the practical experience and training that they have had this fall under the direction of E. F. Lyons, county boys' and girls' club leader, has enabled them to make such a fine showing at the Chicago exposition.

"EUGENE, MY SON! HE'S BEEN KIDNAPED!"

Synopsis.—While in the little Swiss town of Vevey, where the "staid, proper spinster" who tells the story is spending a vacation, she is asked to allow a young girl, Claire de Ravencourt, to be her companion back to the United States. Although forming an attachment to the girl, the heroine takes a dislike to Monsieur de Ravencourt, Claire's father, and declines. On the boat she finds Claire in the care of a casual acquaintance, Mrs. Delario, whom she had met while she was purchasing a pair of slippers, exactly alike, which figure largely in subsequent events. When they reach New York, where Claire was to have been met by her mother, the latter does not appear, and Claire perforce goes to Mrs. Delario's home. In the confusion at the custom house, the spinster carries off one of Mrs. Delario's slippers. Through that happening she learns later that someone unknown to her has been in her flat, calling on Mrs. Delario, that lady shows her some remarkable gems, believing them to be rubies, but which are really blood-red diamonds, and easily worth a million dollars. Mrs. Delario admits the gems were smuggled, but offers an explanation. While they are talking, a pounding on the door throws them into consternation. The caller asserts he is an officer of the law, with a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Delario's son on a charge of stealing the diamonds. She outfits him and persuades the spinster to take the gems to her home for safe keeping. Next morning, realizing the responsibility in her possession of the diamonds, the spinster takes them back to Mrs. Delario, who begs her to keep them a while longer.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

"Haven't you some way of hiding them? Really I don't see how I can take the responsibility—suppose I'm robbed!"

"You won't be."
"But you don't know. I may have been followed home last night."
"You were not—that man was working alone."

It was on the tip of my tongue to tell her my real reason was that I didn't like being mixed up in a smuggling affair; but out of pity—and common human decency for a woman in trouble—I refrained, and she hurried on. "You needn't fear about losing them—I see the word 'safe' in yellow letters over your head and I know, absolutely—they'll be safe with you."

To me that wasn't convincing, and I made a last effort to rid myself of the incubus and suggested, "Your son—couldn't he find means to hide them?"

"Eugene!" Her face clouded with fear. "I don't even know where he is this morning—he hasn't telephoned me, or anything, since I telephoned him last night to hide—and every time I think of him I get the impression of 'trouble.' There isn't a living soul I can appeal to now but you. Oh, please—a day—two days—until I can decide what to do. Help me now, and I swear to you that I will explain everything."

The telephone bell suddenly rang out from the upper hall. Her hands flew to her heart, as they had the night before when the house bell rang; but without a word she hastened upstairs to answer the call.

While she was gone I had a few minutes to think, and I took my stand, once for all. I'd help her through thick and thin. I therefore slipped the box back where I'd taken it from, and was preparing to leave with it as soon as I could say good-by to her, when she reeled into the room, looking as if she'd had the shock of dreadful news.

"Eugene. My son! He's been kidnaped!" and with that she fainted.

I caught her as she fell and led her up to the floor as gently as my strength would allow, and I was considering whether to try to find the bathroom upstairs and get some water, or to search the lower regions for the wild-eyed Swede and send her for the nearest doctor, when I heard Mrs. Delario's voice: "Save my diamonds—save my son. Go—go at once!"

I didn't go—in fact she held me so I couldn't—and somehow, between us, she managed to get up on the sofa, where she released my hands, imploring me to save the diamonds.

"Those men are coming," she urged. "In five minutes it may be too late—you'll be caught—I'll lose everything—my future—Lila's future—everything—do you go instantly!"

It was incoherent, but rapid; terribly earnest. She gave me a feeble push, and, hardly knowing what I did, I fled the house—for the second time in twenty-four hours with a million dollars' worth of diamonds in my stocking.

I had dashed down the steps expecting to encounter—and escape from—a pair of dark-browed villains; I actually did encounter a delivery boy hopping off his wagon, who almost knocked me over with his basket and then berated me soundly for getting in his road and not looking where I was going.

My bumping into the grocery boy dislocated the alarm in which I had left Mrs. Delario, and it didn't seem to occur to me on the return trip that I might be followed, or that I should take at least some small precautions to elude a possible shadow. My mind was engrossed with Mrs. Delario and what had happened to her son that I really quite forgot I had the diamonds myself! I bought a bunch of hyacinths at a florist's and left an order at a grocer's, and it wasn't till I was inside my flat that the thought really struck me, "I'm the one who is shadowed—I have the diamonds!" and I was too late for me to find out if I was shadowed home or not.

My depression was prostrated by a mood of elation—
I was en-own sake. On I had hoped to have off by night.
I hastily made a cup of chocolate,
slapped together a few sandwiches,

women can be, sometimes. For if I meant to hide the diamonds where they'd be safe, why didn't I take them instantly to my bank and put them in a safe-deposit box? A mere man would have done it on the spur of the moment without stopping to think about it, and the idea never entered my head. So I let slip my one chance of something brilliant and did what ninety-nine out of a hundred other women would have done under the same circumstances: I HID THEM IN MY FLAT. And in that one act I pitched myself against the most subtle intelligence, amazing complications and overwhelming odds that a quiet, respectable, middle-aged woman of my profession ever had to reckon with outside of the ink bottle. I got both a revolver and a dagger ready for me—only I didn't know it at the time.

I have always prided myself on the way I hid these diamonds—since I was stupid enough to do it at all. As I say, I had bought a bunch of hyacinths—Kommu hyacinths—when after sitting in my big chair for a good half-hour thinking, I got up to put them in water, the brilliant idea came to me to hide the diamonds there.

Water wouldn't hurt the diamonds; but who would ever think that anyone would be silly enough to put them in it? So I got a glass—a common white glass that would show the stems—set the hyacinths in the middle of the table and poked the diamonds down among the stems. The raffia string held everything in place, and—there you are!

My real trouble was in disposing of the box. I could have burned it and been done with it, but to keep it as so much more sportsmanlike; to enjoy my excuse—as I was feeling it just then—I saw I must, above everything, be sportsmanlike. To this end, therefore, I must disguise the box, put it where Mr. Thief—or Mr. Detective—or Mr. Chief of Police, when he came, might take it in his hand and cast it from him as a thing of naught in his search for Mrs. Delario's diamonds.

With an odd bit of shiny blue paper I happened to find in the drawer where I keep odds and ends of paper, and my scissors and library paste, I transformed that box so the fairies wouldn't know it. After that I filled it up with pens and set it conspicuously on the tray with my pencils, penholders and other things of the sort. I set it so you could not help seeing it if you tried! As a last touch—which it seemed to require for art's sake—I cut a part of a pen advertisement out of a magazine and pasted it on the lid.

For the first time, then, I took note of the clock—it was twenty minutes past two—I'd frittered away almost an entire day on some one else's affairs instead of my own bread and butter, and there lay the pile of proof, not half done, that I had hoped to have off by night.

I hastily made a cup of chocolate,
slapped together a few sandwiches,

and, reading as I munched, I tried to make up for lost time; and it was not till I had finished eating that I remembered to put away my coat and hat that I had thrown off on the divan.

I carried them to my bedroom and pulled open the wardrobe door. In the bottom of it lay the three turquoise-headed slippers!

My coat and hat fell out of my hands on the floor and I sank down on the bed. I was not merely mystified—I was frightened. How had they come there?—and when? They were not there when I took out the coat in the morning to go to Mrs. Delario's—to that I knew I could swear, for in my hurry to be rid of her diamonds I had snatched the coat out and dropped it, and I couldn't have missed seeing the slippers then, any more than I had missed seeing them now.

Now, under ordinary circumstances, finding the three slippers in my wardrobe wouldn't have upset me—I should very likely have thought it a lapse of memory and let it go at that; but I was by way of keeping tabs on them and I knew I couldn't have put them in the wardrobe, because the last thing I knew of them they were gone out of the flat entirely. I could only stare and feel horribly creepy.

If this were not a manifestation, then somebody had access to my flat. But who? And why slippers? I jumped up at this thought and began digging into my bureau drawer—I had five hundred dollars cash buried there that had been paid over to me in the settlement of an estate and I'd not had a minute to take it to the bank.

The cash was safe. Everything else was safe, as far as I could see; not a chair was out of place; nothing had been moved or touched since I left the flat—only three slippers. And why slippers? The more I thought the more disturbed I became, it was all so unnatural. One thing was clear to me, though—whenever came in to monkey with the slippers came while I was out.

"I'll get a new lock as my next move in the game," said I, and this I prepared to do immediately, not by going out and leaving the diamonds—oh, no!—I was too really scared by the slippers to leave the diamonds now alone in the flat—but by finding a locksmith in the telephone book and inviting him to call; and I was diligently pursuing him thus when my telephone rang and I threw down the book to answer it. And in response to my "hello!" I recognized the voice of Monsieur de Ravencourt.

"Why, how do you do, monsieur?" I exclaimed, thinking instantly he had some scheme on for getting me to take charge of Claire for him, since Mrs. Delario wouldn't keep her.

"I am as always, thank you, but it is our friend, Madame Delario, I wish to speak with you about."

"Mrs. Delario!" I cried, thrown off my guard by this unexpected name. "What about her?"

"She meets with an accident and wishes to see you immediately."

"An accident!" I was dismayed and thought, "Poor woman, what next for her?" but I called back, "What sort of an accident?" and before he could tell me I added, "When did it happen?"

"My daughter and I are just now calling on her to pay our respects and Madame faints and falls, striking severely her head. I call at once as physician and she says zero may be necessary an operation. She refuses—until she can speak with you about some private matters. I shall tell her you will come?"

For a moment I wondered if she had given him a hint of the "private matters," and I asked him point blank, "Do you know what she wishes to see me for?"

"She asks only that I send for you immediately, and I obey her instructions. I tell you only what she says she has told me—and ask me to send for her best friend. She says it is yourself and she must see you. You will come immediately?"

"Yes—immediately. I'll be there in about twenty minutes."

I rushed to her, buttoning my coat as I ran downstairs, and it was not until I had taken my seat in the subway that I remembered I had left her diamonds in my flat!

CHAPTER VI.

Monsieur Drops His Mask.

The wild-eyed Swedish maid let me in. The scene room door opened and M. de Ravencourt stepped out and came to greet me.

Monsieur advanced with outstretched hand but no smile. We spoke in whispers.

"Where is she?"

He pointed up, to indicate her bedroom, and whispered, "I must speak with you before you see her," and moved out of the vestibule, motioning me to follow.

I took two steps and stopped. "Zis way, if you please," said he, pointing to the scene room.

I took two more steps and stopped again, in front of the reception room door. I had the strongest feeling come over me that I didn't want to go into the scene room with him—that I simply could not go—that my feet refused to budge another inch in that direction.

As I hesitated—for there was such a rattly look in his face that he repelled me—he added, "Pardon, madame, but I have for ze present ze responsibility. It was merely zat I wish beforehand to acquaint madame with ze nature of ze disaster zat have overtaken her friend zat I ask for some words in private—" he made a gesture toward the basement stairs, and dropping his voice, finished, "One never knows but ze most trusted servants in one's employ are spies."

Thinking of the wild-eyed one, I smiled. He shrugged. "Madame, we are wasting precious time zat may mean everything to Madame Delario. Permit me to beg of you—"

And I followed him at once to the scene room, the door of which he pushed open, standing aside and saying in French, "Permettez moi . . . Approz vous, madame," to let me enter ahead of him.

To my surprise the room was brilliantly lighted with all the electric bulbs in full bloom; and I turned just in time to see him lock the door on us and pocket the key!

He did it so swiftly, so silently, that under ordinary circumstances I shouldn't have known I was locked in with him. I believe now that the brilliant light into which he'd thrust me out of the dim hall was especially designed to confuse me should I turn on him sooner than he had calculated I would. But the very instant I crossed the threshold I knew he was going to lock the door, and I wheeled—just one second too soon. Had I taken four more steps into the room I should have been none the wiser about the key—the lime came.

But having caught him in the act I let him know it.

"What, monsieur," I demanded haughtily, "is the object of that precaution, may I ask?"

"It was necessary," he returned coming toward me and searching my face with his beady eyes.

Neither of us spoke for several seconds. Where was Mrs. Delario, and had anything really happened to her? Was this merely a precaution on his part against spies, or did he mean my some harm? Well, if he did, I had a couple of good stout batons with me.

"Monsieur, you will kindly unlock that door immediately."

"In one moment—when I have said what I have to say," he replied, in a smooth attempt to keep up appearances. "I have something of importance to ask madame."

"And I have nothing to say to monsieur—behind locked doors," I interrupted angrily. "If monsieur is a gentleman he will instantly unlock that door."

"He took a step toward, as it to show me he had no intention of taking orders from me. He'd open the door when he got ready to."

I thought he meant to lay hands on me. I whipped out my hatpin and confronted him, my eyes blazing and my teeth set so hard I heard them grit.

My act brought him to his senses and he began to apologize—said he was sorry he had "alarmed" me—that on his word of honor he meant me no harm whatever—a whole lot of palaver like that, designed to get the hatpin where it came from and me into an amenable frame of mind and once more at his mercy.

I listened to the palaver coolly—with the hatpin in my hand I felt perfectly safe, and I didn't put it back I hardly thought he was armed himself, or he'd have drawn when I did, and the hatpin in my firm clutch gave me a sense of immense advantage in dialogue.

I actually, in a minute or two, had several thrills of joy. I had more thrills when he said, "I implore madame to consider ze position she puts me in—a gentleman—by standing zere with a weapon in her hand."

Holiday Fun With Shadows for Youngsters

By A. NEELY HALL

Every boy likes to give home entertainments, and probably the best time of the year is right now during the holidays when grandmother and grandfather have come to visit, and an appreciative audience is at hand. There are so many things for a boy to do during this vacation, however, that there is little time to prepare an entertainment, so I shall show you how to give a shadow exhibition, as this can be arranged in a short time.

It requires only a few minutes to get the knack of shadow making, and after you have tried out the forms in the accompanying illustrations you will find it easy to devise others.

The shadows must be cast upon a sheet, and the audience must be seated on one side of this, and the operator stand on the other side. It is best to hang the sheet in a doorway so the light by which the shadows are made can be confined to the screen, because the room in which the audience are seated must be dark. By hanging a dark cloth over the upper and lower portions of the doorway the area of the picture screen can be reduced to just the size necessary, and the covered lower portion will conceal the shadow of the boy performer's body (Fig. 1). The light for projecting shadows must be placed about five feet in back of the screen.

Fig. 1 and 2 show a rabbit shadow, and how the hands are held to produce it. Interlock your little fingers, then slide the back of your left hand over on to the back of your right hand. Form the nose and head by doubling back the first finger of the left hand, and the ears by extending the second and third fingers, and extend the thumb and first three fingers of the right hand for the feet. By wiggling the first finger the rabbit can be made to nibble.

The alligator shadow (Fig. 3) is a one-hand shadow with the aid of two pieces of cardboard notched along their edges to form teeth (Fig. 4). Fig. 5 shows how the teeth are held between the extended fingers, and how the alligator's eye is formed by light passing through an opening between the first and second fingers. With your free hand give the alligator things to eat. His eating will greatly amuse your audience. With modifications, a snake's head can be formed with your arm extended for its body.

Fig. 6 shows a wolf's head, and Fig. 7 a donkey's. Both are formed by placing the palms of the hands together, with thumbs up for ears, the first fingers drawn in for the forehead, and the little fingers dropped for the lower jaw. These shadows are a good example of how different figures are produced by extending or bending the fingers.

Duck of Santa Head. The duck's head (Fig. 7) is a simple one-hand shadow. By dropping and raising the little finger the duck appears to open and close its bill. It can be made to snap at flies very naturally.

Santa Claus' profile (Fig. 8) requires the head of a small doll (Fig. 2), and a small "cat" basket (Fig. 3). The doll's head must be fastened to the basket in such a way that it can be removed easily for putting a new ball inside of the basket, so the best method of attaching it is with bands of ribbon, passing these around the doll's neck and shoulders, and around the basket, and tying the ends in bows. Cut a strip of pretty colored silk of the proportions shown in Fig. 4, run a thread through a hole made in one edge, for a gathering string, and by means of this thread gather the silk about the doll's head to form a ruff and sleeves. Add a neck ribbon. Fig. 5 shows how the twine or crochet cotton is pulled out through one of the sleeve openings.

PRETTY CHRISTMAS GIFTS THAT ANY GIRL CAN MAKE.

By DOROTHY PERKINS. Most of the material required for the gifts in the illustrations can be picked up at home, which will be appreciated by every girl who has many to remember at Christmas time and small means to procure gifts with. Besides, these gifts are quickly made.

A Fancywork Basket. You will not make a mistake in providing a handy workbasket like that in Fig. 1, for mother. Its end pockets for needles, thread, scissors and other small articles, are constructed outside of the basket, which leaves the entire inside space for work. A grape-basket, or any basket of about its size, may do used. Figure 2 shows the start of an end pocket. Cut a piece of cardboard of the shape of A (Fig. 3), and hinge it to the basket bottom by means of strip B. With both pockets started, cover the basket with cretonne, running it around the cardboard ends to form sides to the pockets (Fig. 3). Conceal the handle by wrapping a strip of cretonne around it.

A Whisk-Broom Holder. Either a man or woman will appreciate this convenient article. A stationery box forms its foundation.

Animal Shadows. Figs. 1 and 2 show a rabbit shadow, and how the hands are held to produce it. Interlock your little fingers, then slide the back of your left hand over on to the back of your right hand. ## THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Came to this Woman after Taking Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound to Restore Her Health

Ellensburg, Wash.—"After I was married I was not well for a long time and a good deal of the time was not able to go about. Our greatest desire was to have a child in our home and one day my husband came back from town with a bottle of Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound and wanted me to try it. It brought relief from my troubles.

I improved in health so I could do my housework; we now have a little one, all of which I owe to Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. O. S. JOHNSON, R. No. 3, Ellensburg, Wash.

There are women everywhere who long for children in their homes yet are denied this happiness on account of some functional disorder which in most cases would readily yield to Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such women should not give up hope until they have given this wonderful medicine a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. Finkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of 40 years experience is at your service.

Sympathetic Neighborhood.
"How do you go about locating a will in these parts?" asked the stranger.

"Be you a revenuer?" asked the ancient mountaineer.
"Oh, no! I'm a newspaper man, spending my vacation up here in the hills."
"Is that so? Well, I never yet learn tell o' one o' yer paper fellows that didn't have a powerful thirst. You just set around a spell, sonny, an' some o' th' boys'll git so burned sorry fur you they'll come right up an' offer to lead you to a still."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Lessons Out of School

By GERALD ST. ETIENNE

The stay on the farm movement carried no appeal to John Peters. Not that John disliked farm life, but his soul craved for something bigger and better. Education to him was the most wonderful thing in life. Graduating from the country school with the highest marks in the county had been his first intimation that there were big things in store for him in the educational world and he had gone to high school in the city with big aims stored up in his heart.

It was in the first term he had discovered how different country people were from city people. Gradually it had dawned upon him that there were little colloquialisms in his speech that the city pupils lacked, and straightway he had set to work correcting himself.

Twenty-one found John back on the farm for the vacation season, but ready to break into university the next year. The two years he had been teaching had only made his longing for more education stronger. Up to this time John had confined his corrections in speech and deportment to himself, but apparently the teaching bug had got into his veins, for he had not been at home many weeks before he was correcting every member of the family.

"See here, John Peters," his father had declared, at last worn out by the everlasting corrections. "If this farm and the manners of us that is on it is too all-fingly small for your high-toned notions, then you know what you can do. All I can say is that education has made a dum fool of you, and the time is come when you will have to make a choice between us and it. If you are willing to settle down here, this big farm that requires 24 hands to work it and nets me an income something over $10,000 a year, is half yours now and all yours when I get too old to take an interest in it. If not, you had better leave now."

John left. It was necessary for him to teach school seven long years more before he had the coveted sum to complete his education, but he stuck to it admirably. At the end of the seventh year he decided that he could manage his way through university. Every vacation since the one that had ended in his leaving home he had worked in the city, but now the longing for the big outdoors came over him. Somehow he found his way up in the lumber camps and his services were engaged as timekeeper.

John had met ignorance in his day, but never such ignorance as he found among those lumberjacks. Why, he was about the only man there that could speak a correct sentence of English. It had not been for Jean his existence would have been unbearable. But in her he found a companion worth having. Seeing that Jean was the daughter of the superintendent of the camp, it is only to be expected that she was different from the others. That is why John took such a liking to her.

"Something should be done to improve the education of the men here," John confided to Jean one night when they were out on the lake in her canoe. "I wonder if they would attend school."
"Why not try them and see?" she suggested. "I was reading a novel today about a sky pilot that worked wonders in a lumber camp."
"My dear girl, you don't read novels, do you?" John asked, a mingling of surprise and horror in his tone.
"Why certainly," she answered in wonder. "Don't you?"
"I read nothing but the classics," he told her proudly. "You don't know what you are missing."
"Oh, I don't know," she smiled, "the very name classics worries me out here—they are so heavy, so hard to wade through."

"They are wonderful," he tried to assure her. "Let me go over some of them with you."
"Please don't," she pleaded.
Nevertheless, from that day John started to work out plans to make Jean acquainted with the classics. On canoe trips, indoors on rainy evenings, before the big camp fires when the nights were chill, he managed to make some reference to them or tell her parts of some of his favorite pieces of fine literature. Gradually Jean seemed to fall in line with his plans; she began to soak in what he told her of the master writers. Once or twice she had quoted Shakespeare; more than once or twice she had referred to Bacon. Indeed she was an apt pupil.

As the vacation season neared its end and the changing of the leaves reminded John that university was soon to open, a great longing came over him. It was a different longing than the old one. This time it wasn't learning he longed for, but love. Yes, in spite of the "old masters" Cupid had squeezed in his work.
It was just a week before John was to go back. They were on the lake probably for the last time. The autumn moon was casting glows over the water as the canoe glided to and fro among the shadows. John dropped the oars and, without causing as much as a ripple in the water, found a place by Jean's side. Just as if it belonged there, his arm slipped about her waist. As if in answer to his touch her head nestled against his shoulder.
"Dear little girl," he began, "I have been wanting to say something tonight, but I haven't had the courage."
She looked up at him and smiled.

A LAST WORD ABOUT CHILDREN'S CLOTHES

"Our doubts are traitors, making us lose what we often might win by fearing to attempt," she quoted.

John looked at her in surprise. "Why, that's Shakespeare—a quotation you never got from me either!" he exclaimed.

Somewhat that seemed to have knocked the wind out of his sails, for he did not finish what he had begun. The next day Jean left for the East. At the station John held her hand until the time for the train to depart arrived. He did not think it his right to inquire where she was going; she had not thought it necessary to tell him. "Goodby, little girl, and don't forget to study the classics," he told her. As the train shot out of sight John looked after it longingly. He had sacrificed his only chance for happiness at the altar of learning, for he had restrained himself from proposing to Jean because it would have meant the end to his plans for a university course. What a fool he had been! Right there he made a resolve, and a telegram that was waiting him back at the camp decided definitely for him. "Come home, I need you," and it was signed "Father."

For two weeks John stayed at the bedside of his father, without any other thought but the sick man before him. At last the crisis was reached and the danger passed. From then on John devoted himself to the farm—the great big stretch of God's country that called out to him for cultivation and responded so nobly to his efforts. Jean was not forgotten. It was for her he was working. Some day, somehow, he would find her again and bring her to a home of great prosperity, he told himself.

The Christmas holidays brought John's sister Flora home from college with a guest—her teacher of English and literature. John had displayed no interest in the expected arrival, but when Flora brought some one to him and he looked into two big, familiar eyes and saw a familiar smiling, blushing face, he was almost swept off his feet with surprise.

"Jean!" he cried in surprise.
"John!" she echoed in his tone.
Explanations did not come until after supper when they were alone in the library. She had found John with head in his hands.
"I was a fool," he confessed himself severely. "I might have known that your education was far superior to mine. Why, you were a university graduate, while I was just a common public school teacher; I should never have left the farm."
"If you had not you would never have met me."
"And what good has it done me—just made me miserable. Oh, my lesson has been a severe one; I have learned it well."
"And I have learned a lesson, too—a wonderful lesson, the most wonderful lesson in life."
There was something in her tone that brought his heart to a quicker beat. He looked up eagerly. "What—what do you mean?" he muttered weakly.

"Oh, John, are you going to make me say it, say what you started to say that night on the lake—that night that Shakespeare had to spoil it?" She was almost in his arms; there was a wonderful expression on his face. He gathered her up in one great hug.
Right there he discovered how useless language is.

SYMBOL OF FRENCH PROWESS
Martial Bird Placed in Prominent Position on Pont de Kehl, Over the River Rhine.
A Gallic cock now adorns the Pont de Kehl on the Rhine at Strasbourg, where but only the other day sat erect the griffin of Baden, symbolizing the iron heel upon Alsace. The idea of the setting up of the Gallic cock was that of the French general, Comesson, the first officer in charge of the engineering in a freed Strasbourg. The scheme was put before General Hirschauer and was immediately adopted. The sculptor chosen to carve the emblematic bird was the Alsatian Schultz. Since the peace treaty gave France possession of the entire length of the Rhine bridges, the Gallic cock in bronze has been placed along the right bank of the Rhine. It has an air, that bird, the air of the king of the barnyard lustily crowing at dawn. It may be halting peace, but the cock is naturally a martial bird and this particular one with its eye fixed on Germany certainly commands respect. It had been the intention to use the bronze of a Kaiser statue in the casting of the Pont de Kehl cock, but the statue of William I before the palace in Strasbourg was found to belie its appearance and to be merely composition.

Little Willie.
Little Willie was entertaining the visitor till his sister was ready.
"I say," asked Willie presently, "are you engaged to my sister, or are you not?"
"I am—am not," answered the caller, blushing. "but I would like—to be."
"Come out from behind that door, Mary," called Willie. "I knew I'd see that shilling!"
"So you enjoyed your vacation?"
"I certainly did. In fact, I had the time of my life."
"Good! Here comes a man I don't want you to meet. He would spoil your disposition."
"Why?"
"He has worked for the same firm for twenty-five years and it is his proud boast that he has never missed a day."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

"Finis" is written by the manufacturers of children's clothes, so far as the winter season's offerings are concerned. They must busy themselves now for spring, even though winter has just begun, and have ready in January dresses, made of cotton materials, because the new cotton fabrics are put on display at that time. January brings a demand for styles as well as materials, and for ready-made children's clothes. Foresighted mothers prefer to get the children's spring sewing out of the way early and the first two months in the year find them engaged with children's clothes and undergarments—events which the stores all over the country prepare for. Therefore the little coat for a kindergarten and the woolen dress for a little school girl, presented here, make their bow and then their exit, the last to join a host of winter companions. Their places are soon to be filled by harbingers of spring—frocks of gingham, chambray and the like.
A heavy, double-weave cloth, plain on one side and plaid on the other, is the sort of material to choose for a warm school coat like that shown in the picture. It is equal to all requirements of its little wearer, with its pretty collar of beaver plush and buttons and pocket flaps to match. And the same thing is true of the hat of castor clipped beaver, worn with it. Serge, trefine or any good wool material is used for dresses like that at the right of the picture. It has a plaited skirt joined to a body that opens at the left front, and fastens with loops over round buttons covered with the cloth. A soft belt of the material has diagonal slits in it at the front that open into small, square pockets suspended from the under side. These pockets are bound with a fancy silk braid, and the same braid appears as a band on the sleeves and in a neck bow. Altogether this little dress bespeaks careful attention on the part of an expert designer and the very clever management of the pockets is enough to make any small girl determine to wear it every day—or until something else equally unusual and pretty fills her soul with satisfaction.

RIBBONS FORECAST CHRISTMAS TIME

"Like bees about the honeysuckle," women have begun to swarm about the ribbon counters in the big stores, where there are so many beautiful dress accessories on display. Christmas time is harvest time for the ribbon department and already the stores are showing enticing articles made of ribbons in order to point the way to using them. There are whole flocks of gay ribbon hair bows for the younger generation, and there are dance caps and breakfast caps for young and old, corsage flowers and bouquets, hummer-like bags for all sorts of purposes and lovely girdles and sashes. Vestees and hat crowns suggest uses for the richest broadest ribbons and many shopping bags are made of these.
Ribbons for lineneer have a story of their own which it is important to know at Christmas time as they furnish the most acceptable and least costly of ribbon gifts. And there are the pretty no-kwark faucets and the house-furnishing pieces, all meriting attention of the Christmas shopper.
But it is not possible to describe all of these ribbon articles at one time. In the group of dress accessories shown here there appear three corsage ornaments, a dance cap and a party bag, any one of them a gift that any woman will enjoy. Of the corsage ornaments one is a rose made of dark red satin ribbon; the other rose is of velvet ribbon in rose pink and the small cluster of little roses in several light colors forms a little bouquet that will find a place for itself in many toilettes. The dance cap is not difficult to make. Millinery wire and the advice of the milliner are needed for it and are usually forthcoming when the materials are bought. Narrow satin or taffeta ribbon, gathered with scant fullness along one edge, is sewed in rows to form the crown. Taffeta has stiffness enough to stand up well enough, but satin may need a supporting crown of eroline. The brim—a scant fill of gold or silver lace—and the crown are sewed to a silk-covered bonnet wire that encircles the head, and a very fine silk-covered wire is run in the lace trim near its edge. A small spray of ribbon or millinery flowers and a little cape of the lace falling at the back complete this fascinating dance cap.
Ribbons, wide and narrow, with lace and net are used for breakfast caps and they need, ordinarily, no wire support. Small chiffon or ribbon flowers, rosettes, bows and ends embellish them.
To make ribbon roses one must have heavy wire for the stems and millinery foliage. The petals of ribbon are wound to the stems with the wire and the stems flantly wound with narrow green ribbon.
"They say I'm in very close." "Close? Why he wouldn't even spend a vacation."
Both the bride and the groom may be timid, yet they always stand up for their rites.

CARRIES WEALTH IN MOUTH

Boathead Whale Worth Much Money If Only That Part of Its Anatomy Were Usable.

A full-grown boathead whale is worth $15,000 merely for the whalebone it carries in its mouth. This is the species that furnishes the bulk of the commercial supply of whalebone, which is now worth $7.50 a pound. It is a denizen of the arctic seas.
The boathead, like other whalebone whales, has no teeth. Instead, its jaws are furnished with a series of long, tapered slabs of a horny substance called baleen. Of these slabs, which are the whalebone of commerce, there are as many as 600.
The biggest of them are 10 to 12 feet long, and they are inserted in the gum of the upper jaw, from which they hang. They serve as a sieve to strain out the whale's food. Swimming alone, it takes a huge mouthful of squid and other pelagic small fry. Then the huge trap is closed and the slabs entering and fitting into grooves in the lower jaw, the water is expelled.
Speaking of Gradies.
Mrs. Benson—I see that 4,000 women are included in the membership of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' association.
Mr. Bacon—Well, I see no reason why women should not become acquainted with the cranle.
Several explanations have been given of the meaning of the word "foolscap" as applied to a certain class of paper. One of the explanations is that when Charles I of England found his revenue short, he granted certain privileges, amounting to monopolies, and among these was the manufacture of paper, the exclusive right to which was sold to certain parties, who grew rich and enriched the government at the expense of those who were obliged to use the paper. At this time all English paper bore, in watermarks, the royal arms. The parliament under Cromwell made a jest of this law, and among other indignities to the memory of Charles it was ordered that the royal arms be removed from the paper and the fool's cap and bells substituted. These were in their turn removed when the Rump parliament was dissolved, but paper for the size of the parliament's journal still bears the name of "foolscap."
Penurious.
"They say I'm in very close." "Close? Why he wouldn't even spend a vacation."
Both the bride and the groom may be timid, yet they always stand up for their rites.

FAIR PLAY.

The clipping below came to our attention some days ago, and seemed to be such a reasonable statement of the obligations of each one of us towards the rest of us that we reproduce it here in the hope that it may help us all to see our obligations a little more clearly, and keep us from doing or saying extravagant things:

"Modern society is necessarily co-operative. The population of this country cannot make a living as a primitive people by hunting and fishing. They must supply their wants by means of organized industry, exchanging goods and services with each other. That kind of peaceful, progressive society is only possible upon the basis of respect and consideration for each other's rights. There must be an honest desire to give and take on terms that are mutually fair. The idea that the social groups shall take advantage of any strategical position which they may hold to get the better of each other is repugnant to the whole idea of co-operation, and in the long run no such advantage will be tolerated."

Ann Arbor - Furs valued at $15000 were taken from Grind Swedding, furrier, early Tuesday morning, by four unidentified automobile thieves. Patrolmen Solt and Kiehl of the local police force, pursued the thieves as far as Dearborn, where trace was lost of them in the early morning traffic. According to the proprietor of the fur store, none of the stolen furs were insured. The robbery was carried out boldly, the automobile being placed nearby and the thieves carrying the furs out through a rear window.

Jackson Claude Anderson, 21 years old, of 255 Oak Hill avenue, was found in a semi-unconscious condition on the pilot of a freight engine which puffed into Jackson from Grand Rapids Tuesday morning. He was taken to the office of the round-house and later to the police station. He said that he had gone for a walk in the country and became lost. After the train started he was unable to get off and was nearly frozen to death when the engine arrived at the Junction. Jackson News.

Manchester Our townsman J. H. Kingstey, while making an official visit to Ionia Chapter, R. A. M., visited the court house in company with Lawyer Nichols, his host while in the city, and in descending the stairs looked up to view the ceiling, mistook his footing on the circular steps. His head struck the newel post cutting a deep gash over the right eye. In an attempt to save himself he put out his left hand and the next to the little finger was broken so that the bone protruded through the flesh. He was taken to the hospital where the finger was amputated and several stitches taken to close the wounds over the eye. He was of course considerably bruised and shaken up but was able to return home Friday afternoon. Manchester Enterprise.

The Spirit of Unrest

Reaction from the stress of war, the High Cost of Living, and the disturbed conditions in industry throughout the world have combined to lower the morale of workers in many lines.

In the factory, in the mill, the high degree of pep and enthusiasm is lacking and production lags. Even domestic service has caught the contagion, as every housewife knows.

We think the claim none too broad that employes of the Bell System have been less affected by the spirit of unrest than the majority of other workers. Yet its effects have been felt and will continue to be felt until the world begins to swing back to normal.

The telephone management is doing all in its power to remedy conditions and restore service to pre-war standards. It asks the patience and co-operation of the telephone users.

CAMELS are in a class by themselves—easily the most refreshing, the most likable cigarette you ever smoked. You can prove that! Simply compare Camels puff-by-puff with any cigarette in the world at any price! Put quality, flavor and cigarette satisfaction to the utmost test!

Made to meet your taste, Camels never tire it, no matter how liberally you smoke them! The expert blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos makes Camels delightful—so full-bodied, yet so fascinatingly smooth and mellow-mild. Every time you light one you get new and better enjoyment!

Freedom from any unpleasant cigarette after taste or any unpleasant cigarette odor makes Camels as unusual as they are enjoyable.

In fact, Camels appeal to the most fastidious smoker in so many new ways you never will miss the absence of coupons, premiums or gifts. You'll prefer Camel Quality!

Mr. and Mrs. Burnett Steinbach moved their household goods to Jackson the last of the week, where they will make their home.
Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Waltrous will move from their farm home to Mrs. F. E. Storms' residence on West Middle street, for the winter.
The Congregational church will conduct the annual every-member canvass and parish visitation on Sunday, afternoon, December 14.
Chelsea experienced a touch of real winter Tuesday night when local thermometers registered all the way from five below zero to five above.
O. D. Luick left Tuesday night for Chicago to attend the International Live Stock Exposition, as a delegate from the Chelsea Branch, No. 1, Co-Operative Association.
Saturday was the birthday of Elmer Hammond and Gilbert Clark and they celebrated by entertaining a number of young people at the home of Mr. Hammond, on Madison street.
The Lewis Spring & Axle Co. shut down this morning owing to a shortage of coal, and will probably remain closed for the remainder of the week, if not for a longer period.
Mr. and Mrs. Tint Champlain, of Little Valley, N. Y., will arrive in Chelsea the last of the week from Hot Springs, Arkansas, to spend a few days. Mrs. Champlain was formerly Mrs. Nellie P. BeGole.
Mr. and Mrs. Otto Toney and family and Mrs. Daniel Strieter of Ann Arbor, Mr. and Mrs. George Strieter and family of Saline, and Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Strieter of Scio, spent Thanksgiving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Strieter.

Bahnmiller of Chelsea, Mrs. Barbara Weinmann and Walter Girard of Lakeland, Mr. and Mrs. August Lesser and son Reuben and daughter Ruth of Dexter township, and Alton Lesser of Detroit, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Garry Lesser of Dexter township.
The fuel administration on Wednesday confiscated five carloads of coal that were on the track at the plant of the Michigan Portland Cement Co. The loss of this coal places the company in a position where they will have to close the plant in two or three days, and General Manager N. S. Potter jr. is unable to state when he will be able to resume operations at the plant.
Several of the farmers of Sylvan and Lyndon townships who have had sheep killed by dogs recently, were in Ann Arbor Monday, where they filed their claims with the board of auditors. Under the new dog law, the taxes are collected by the township treasurer and the funds are turned over to the county treasurer. The last day for the payment of dog tax is January 10, when the returns have to be made.
Measures to prevent home manufacture of intoxicating liquors have been taken up by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Prohibition enforcement officers have been directed to visit all persons, firms and corporations engaged in advertising and selling formulas for making intoxicating liquors in the home and to advise them that they will be subject to prosecution if their formulas are used by the purchaser.
Elias Policht, aged 11 years, of Chelsea, was locked up early Wednesday morning by Deputy Sheriff Elliott, who found him wandering on the streets. The lad ran away from St. Francis' home for boys in Detroit, and was making his way back to Chelsea. He is considered to be the worst juvenile criminal in Washtenaw county by officers, having been caught in a number of larceny cases. While in the detention room at Ann Arbor he is said to have taken $10 from one of the prisoners. Carranza Refuses to Release
Jenkins and Hostilities With Mexico Impend.

ARMY AND NAVY ARE READY

Government's Efforts to End Coal Strike by Negotiation Fail, Miners Rejecting Garfield's Offer of 14 Per Cent Wage Increase.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

It appears that this writing that the breaking point with Mexico has been reached at last—or should one say again? Carranza's government, defying the United States, has flatly refused to release Consul Agent Jenkins in response to the demand made by our state department. Since that demand was in the nature of an ultimatum, threatening unpleasant consequences, it would seem either Washington or Mexico must back water, or hostilities will result.

The Mexican foreign office said the demand of the United States was not based on any legal foundation or principle of international law; that the executive department cannot under Mexican law intervene now in an affair that is strictly in the hands of state courts; that the imprisonment of Jenkins was neither arbitrary nor unjustified, and that he is preventing his own freedom by refusing to give him, Mexico's assertion that Jenkins, as a consular agent, was not immune from arrest is not contested in Washington, but Secretary Lansing has stated that his department has more information bearing on this case than has been made public, and presumably it is this information that led to the demand for the release of Jenkins.

Reports from Mexico that have come through official channels show that the Mexicans have done all possible to discredit Jenkins. The court at Puebla refused to hear witnesses who would refute the story that he was seen in conference with members of the gang that kidnaped him; and according to the correspondent of a newspaper of Mexico City, a number of peons declared the judge and police inspector had exercised pressure on them to testify against Jenkins.

It was believed in Washington that the administration would maintain its firm stand in the crisis. Otherwise, said the well-posted, congress would take up the matter promptly after convening, call for all the facts in the case and proceed to frame a definite policy. In both house and senate, it was asserted, the great majority was in favor of a showdown with Carranza, who for years has flouted the United States and in innumerable ways displayed his open hostility. There is no forgetting or forgiving his attitude and actions during the war, which the government knew all the time and with which the public is becoming better acquainted every day.

Should armed intervention be necessary, we are in good condition for quick action, for the army has had this possibility in mind for some months. Along the border these forces are now available. Both wings of the aviation service, including 15 aero squadrons, ten balloon companies, five regiments of field artillery, ten of the 13 regiments of cavalry remaining in the army organization, three regiments of engineers, one brigade of infantry, with four mobile column companies in the central department, 19 motor transport companies, one field battalion and two telegraph battalions of the signal corps, 23 or more pack trains and all the additional force of supply to care for an army of that size.

The marine corps is ready for the emergency, and so is the navy. With a fleet in the Pacific as well as the Atlantic, forces could be landed on both coasts. If the navy needs more men the reserve force can be called on, and that includes a large part of the extra personnel in service during the war. Besides looking on the arrest of

ELECTION PROBE

CHARGES INVOLVE SIX COUNTS OF ALLEGED VIOLATIONS OF FEDERAL LAWS.

MERE POLITICS DECLARES KING

Unlawful Expenditures, Conspiracy, Fraudulent Reports Among 35 Specific "Overt Acts" Listed.

Grand Rapids—The Federal Grand Jury has named 135 men in blanket indictment returned Saturday.

United States Senator Truman H. Newberry, his brother, John S. Newberry, both of Detroit, and 133 others were named.

Aside from the names of Senator Newberry and John S. Newberry, only 12 names have been announced, these being as follows: Allan A. Templeton, Paul H. King, Harry O. Turner, Marc T. McKee, Milton Oakman, Frederick P. Smith, Charles A. Floyd, all of Detroit; Frank McKay, Grand Rapids; Judd Yelland, Escanaba; Dr. James B. Bradley, Eaton Rapids; Gladstone Bentlie, of Paw Paw; H. A. Hopkins, St. Clair.

The names of others are withheld pending serving of warrants. In addressing the jury, District Judge Clarence W. Sessions, declared that the evidence indicated that from $500,000 to $1,000,000 had been expended in the Newberry campaign, when the commodore was returned a victor over Henry Ford.

Special Prosecutor Dalley, who has directed the investigation, said that all defendants would be permitted to post bonds wherever warrants are served. Date for arraignment in federal court here will be set later.

One of the indictments involves six counts, charging unlawful expenditures of money during the primary and election campaigns. The other has to do with alleged false reports made to the senate by the Newberry campaign committee.

The first indictment charged that both federal and state laws were violated in that sums far in excess of legitimate expenses were used in the campaign. The second indictment cited the affidavit which Senator Newberry made while serving at the Brooklyn navy yard in which he swore that no campaign money had been spent by him or with his knowledge.

There were six counts in the first indictment. The first four were devoted to charges of excess campaign expenditures. The fifth alleged conspiracy to violate the federal corrupt practices act of October, 1918, which penalizes payment of money to voters. The sixth count to which Frank C. Dalley, special assistant to the attorney general, attached especial significance alleged that the mails were used "to defraud all the people of the state of Michigan."

This sixth count charged that not only were all voters of the state defrauded but that honest campaign contributors were also victims in that they were misled into believing that the legal limits of expenditures had not been exceeded.

Politics Says King. "Political in its inception, and designed for political effect in the coming campaigns," is the characterization of the grand jury action given by Paul H. King, manager of the Newberry campaign committee. Furthermore, Mr. King, who was among the first named in the indictments, declares he is proud of his achievement in adding the senator to a seat and that he isn't a bit worried over the developments at Grand Rapids.

"The return of judgments against myself and others does not disturb me in the least," said Mr. King. "They are not well founded and therefore cannot be sustained."

"Subsequent developments in the courts will show that the agents of the department of justice employed outrageous methods in their efforts to bring about the desired results, which, as all indictments are, are only one-sided. The whole thing is political in inception and designed for political effect and campaign purposes."

"I am proud of the fact that I helped Truman H. Newberry to get a seat in the senate of the United States, and helped keep Henry Ford out of it. I believe I rendered a service to the state and to the United States by so doing."

MICROBES HAVE LONG LIFE

Neither Time Nor Heat Seem to Have Much Effect on Some Micro-Organisms.

Eternal youth seems to have been accorded in full measure to some microbes. Before the French Academy of Science Prof. Yves Delage read a paper reporting discoveries by Doctor Gallipe, who is credited with finding in century-old paper organisms still living. According to this report, these organisms resisted heat of 248 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Time no more than heat seems to have had effect on these little organisms, as Doctor Gallipe has found living ones in paper of the fifteenth and eighteenth centuries," said Professor Delage. "They are capable of cultivation and of movement."

"More than that, Doctor Gallipe has found in fragments of paper of Chinese manuscript dating before the age of printing micro-organisms still living and able to move and that multiplied under suitable methods of culture."

TRAPPING AND SELLING FURS CAN BE MADE PROFITABLE FARMING SIDE-LINE

Four Grades of Skunk Fur—Other Things Being Equal the Pelt With the Least White in the Fur is the Most Valuable and That With the Most White is the Least Valuable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the approach of cold weather the thrifty farmer in almost any section of the country soon can undertake some form of fur trapping with profit. A knowledge of the fur-bearing animals found in his vicinity and how to treat their pelts reveals a source of income often overlooked.

For the boy in the country nothing offers a more delightful diversion than a trapping expedition, particularly if it entails a money reward. Where the fur itself affords little opportunity for trapping, an accessible stream or wooded tract is generally to be found nearby where fur-bearing animals can be caught. While the fur resources of the country have been diminishing steadily, prices have been rising. The war also has been an important factor in this upward trend.

Wait Until Fur is Right.

The person about to engage in pelt gathering must understand at the outset the necessity of postponing trapping until the animals' fur is at its best. The pelt of a mink, for example, killed in September might be worth more than 50 cents, as if the same animal were killed in November or December, its pelt might bring $10. Speaking generally, trapping should not begin until cold weather has set in, that is, until late November or December, for most sections of the country. Two principal exceptions to the rule are the muskrat and beaver, whose fur is not at its best until February or March.

In addition to the widely distributed fur-bearing animals mentioned below each region has many others to lure the pelt collector. The prices given here are necessarily only approximations. Each trapper must bear in mind that the size and condition of the individual pelt, as well as other factors, will have much to do with the sum it will bring.

Skunk Pelt Valuable.

The skunk, one of the most common fur bearers, is found in every state of the Union. Large skunk skins probably will bring the trapper from $1 to $5 this season, while the pelts of the little spotted skunk will bring from 10 to 50 cents. The weasel, of one variety or another, is to be found in practically all sections of the country. Formerly the brown pelts were considered worthless, but with the rise in fur prices brown pelts should net the trapper from 10 to 25 cents each, while the white pelts will bring from 50 cents to $1.50.

Many persons, particularly city dwellers, may be surprised to learn that many foxes still are trapped in this country.

Red fox pelts, obtainable in widely distributed areas in the Northern states, should bring from $10 to $30 each this season, while the gray fox found in the Southern states will bring from $1.50 to $3 a pelt.

An example of returns that can be secured from fur resources long overlooked is found in the fact that the people of Oregon netted approximately $50,000 from mink skins last year, following trapping demonstrations by representatives of the biological survey of the United States department of Agriculture. The demonstrators showed that while millions of European mink skins were used by fur manufacturers in America before the war, the skins of some American moles, especially the large, common variety of western Washington and Oregon, are larger and have better texture than those from Europe. Farmers' Bulletin 832, published by the United States department of agriculture, describes the best kinds of mole traps, how to set them, and gives other information. The methods discussed are especially adapted to the Pacific coast states, but with modifications will apply to all localities where moles are found.

Muskrats Still Numerous.

While muskrats, raccoons, and skunks have become somewhat scarce in certain localities, muskrats have not diminished in numbers except in places where the marshes have been drained. These animals multiply much more rapidly than many other fur bearers, and because of their aquatic retreats and their habits are better fitted to maintain their numbers under reasonable protection. Muskrat pelts this season should bring from 75 cents to $2 each. Though the price of cottontail rabbit skins is low—15 cents to 35 cents a pound for dry skinned skins—this source of income should not be overlooked by the trapper-farmer, as frequently a large number of these animals can be caught in the course of the winter. There is frequently a good market for the rabbit meat also.

Handing the Fur.

If the farmer who temporarily turns trapper is to realize the best prices for pelts, he must learn the proper methods of handling them. Most skins should be "cased" for the market. A cased skin is one removed from the carcass after skinning the hind legs but not the belly of the animal, thereby leaving a tubular shaped pelt. The skin is left with the fur turned in, and dried on a stretcher made of thin board sharpened to a point, or of heavy galvanized wire.

The biological survey of the United States department of agriculture furnishes on application information regarding the trapping of fur-bearing animals, laws relating to the subject, and the preparation of pelts. It also supplies inquirers with lists of buyers for various kinds of pelts.

HONEY IS PROFITABLE CROP

Product is Always in Good Demand and Some Home Club Members Have Made Good Profits.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is always a ready sale for good honey, the members of home clubs organized by the department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges have discovered. Some members have made a remarkable success of the work. One in Morgan county, Kentucky, is known as the "Bee Woman," not only because of the size of her enterprise but because of her ability in handling the swarms. She had 150 hives of bees last summer. From 75 of them she has harvested 500 pounds of honey in six months. The home-demonstration agents teach up-to-date beekeeping to any women in their counties who are interested in bees. Often the difference between a money-making swarm and a hive which barely supplies its own needs is lack of knowledge.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Soy beans are rich in protein.

A farmer must be a business man before he can prosper.

Clean fence rows add 25 per cent to the appearance of a farm.

Time and tide wait no man, but time and care applied to farm tasks pay any man.

Dodder is a very difficult plant to destroy, and when a field is badly infested it is almost a hopeless task.

ADVERTISING IS OF GREAT VALUE

Problem for Farmer Is to Know What Kinds Are Best Suited to His Needs.

DIRECT APPEAL TO BUYERS

Because of Tremendous Increase in Automobile Travel Various Simple Means Are Offered—Bulletin Boards Are Useful.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Most certainly, advertising pays for the farmer, as for the business man, but the problem for the farmer is to know the kinds suited to his particular needs—the kinds that will bring him money.

To many people advertising means only large display-type announcements more or less expensively illustrated. But for the farmer there are scores of other ways he can be advertising his products every day, and in many cases, at a cost small indeed compared with the returns. The suggestions offered herewith by marketing specialists of the United States department of agriculture are designed particularly for the farmer who is in a position to meet a staple demand for given grades of goods. Eggs, butter, fruit, vegetables, dressed meat, dressed fowls, sausage, are among the items the sale of which can be promoted by consistent advertising.

There are various comparatively simple means of direct appeal to buyers which are particularly profitable because of the tremendous increase in automobile travel. Today that farm is remote, indeed, which is not passed by town or city motorists many times a week. A count on many a so-called quiet country road will show that scores, often hundreds, of vehicles pass daily. A large number of these carry possible customers for farm products. The farmer interested in attracting such trade should look well to the appearance of his place. Perhaps old, unsightly features of which he is not conscious exist, but the passer-by is keen to discern these signs of farm management and hesitates to purchase at a place showing neglect.

Bulletin Boards Useful.

A well-designed bulletin board near the front gate is a big asset in attracting buyers. Just as big commercial houses know that it pays to use skill in preparing a display "ad," so the farmer in many a progressive community has learned to take pains in preparing his bulletin board. It may be only a blackboard that is used, but it should be neat and its message easily read. In addition to the name of the farm or the farm owner, there should be stated in large type the kinds of produce offered for sale. It is generally advisable to add the prices also. On some farms supplementary boards are placed a considerable distance on either side of the main bulletin, calling attention to the latter. A good sample of the wording on these follows:

FAIR VALLEY FARM.

READ MARKETING BULLETIN AHEAD.

But the bulletin board is not the only effective standing advertisement for the farmer. His place will be better remembered by passing strangers if its name appears in neat lettering above or beside the entrance. The custom of naming farms, popular in so many parts of the country, has proved of financial as well as sentimental value.

LEARNING TO KEEP RECORDS

Boys and Girls in Club Work Taught to Keep Accurate Tab on Their Various Projects.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Boys and girls in club work learn to keep accurate accounts from day to day of their projects. In annual feeding, for example, their records contain such items as cost of feed, cost of hired labor, if any, value of club member's time or labor, receipts from sales or value at end of feeding period, and profit. Aside from the value of the work to the boy or girl in the project itself, there is a training and educational value in complete and accurate record keeping and a benefit from actual ownership, which will be helpful to these future farmers when they assume larger responsibilities.

Value of Letterheads.

Printed letterheads are a real asset for the farmer who is selling to either wholesale or retail trade. Very naturally he seeks to reduce his correspondence to a minimum, but for such business letters as he does write, the printed letterheads will almost surely repay their additional cost. Five hundred or one thousand letterheads and envelopes will last the ordinary farmer a year or longer and their cost is relatively small. The following simple form is suitable for the average farmer. A good printer will be able to suggest styles of type and an arrangement that is distinctive and at the same time dignified.

two or more colors in printing these adds to the expense but often is justified by results. Others who do not feel they can afford printed wrappers may find it worth while to have neatly printed business cards for insertion in each package sent out. Another simple means of advertising is printed gummed labels for use on the outside of packages sent by parcel post or express. A suggested wording is given below:

THREE OAKS FARM.

John Brown, Proprietor.
Blank, Missouri.
EGGS, PERISHABLE.

The farmer who has a display at the county fair can, unless regulations forbid, use some form of display advertising in connection with his own exhibit, thus attracting attention to his personal business in a dignified, effective manner.

Local, and in some cases metropolitan, newspapers offer a direct medium for publicity, particularly for a farmer not too far from his customers. A limited number of city papers have a special department among classified "ads" for parcel post advertising. Where there is such a column it enhances the value of the "ads" published.

Advertising in Press.

To obtain satisfactory results from advertising in a newspaper, the paper selected must have a circulation among persons to whom the advertisement will appeal. Advertisements should be short and should give a description of the goods with the prices, and the name and address of the person advertising. In some cities the Sunday edition of a newspaper gives better results than the daily edition. The person who advertises must offer a product that is wanted by the persons who read the paper at the time the product is advertised, in the places where the paper has a circulation. In other words, he must know what to advertise, when to advertise, and where to advertise. The following are suggested forms for parcel post classified advertising:

Fresh Eggs direct from farm. Send — for three dozen delivered by parcel post prepaid. Fair View Farm, Blank, Va.

Butter direct from the dairy. Fresh, clean and sweet. Send — for two pounds delivered postpaid by parcel post. Fair View Farm, Blank, Va.

THE ONION.

The odoriferous bulb is one of our choice flavored vegetables and a touch of onion in many dishes gives just the appetizing flavor needed. The onion is also wholesome served as a main dish.

Onions With Cheese.

Cook until tender a half dozen even-sized onions. Drain and place a layer in a buttered baking dish, cover with a well-seasoned white sauce and sprinkle generously with a rich strong cheese. Cover with another layer of onions and sauce and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until the crumbs are brown. The secret of this delicious dish is having the cheese between the layers protected from the heat, but hot enough to melt it.

Cream of Onion Soup.

Heat a quart of milk, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and two of flour cooked together and two cupfuls of cooked onions. Mash and put through a puree strainer. Season with salt, cayenne and sprinkle with minced parsley and a bit of grated cheese.

Onion Sandwich.

Chop a half cupful of Spanish onion, add olive oil, salt, pepper, vinegar and mix to the consistency for spreading. Place on well-buttered slices of bread and serve for lunch Sunday night, after church.

One avoids going abroad among people after eating fresh onions. When it is necessary eat a sprig of parsley which will absorb the odor to a great extent.

Onion Salad.

Slice a Spanish onion quite thin, cover with French dressing, adding a teaspoonful of tomato catsup, salt and cayenne to the oil and vinegar. Sprinkle with minced parsley and serve. One large onion will serve several.

During the "flu" epidemic physicians, who were most successful, used a chopped onion poultice on the chest of the patient—a remedy most effective but not especially pleasant to take.

Onion slip made by baking onions and sugar is one of the best of cough cures.

The fragrance of a thought may rise To nobler life and subtler guise As with a violet by the brook— A thing too rare to set in books. Or engrave in song. —Richard E. Day.

EASY LUNCHEON DISHES.

A dish or luncheon which is not too hearty but sufficiently sustaining will be found in the following:

Curried Salmon.

Chop a small onion fine and fry brown in one tablespoonful of butter. Mix one teaspoonful of curry powder with one tablespoonful of flour and a pinch of salt. Stir into the butter. Add slowly one cupful of hot water, stirring briskly. When the sauce is thick add one cupful of flaked salmon and cook until the whole is thoroughly hot.

Salt Fish Hash.

Use salt mackerel, herring or codfish left from breakfast. Mix with an equal quantity of cold mashed potato and warm in the frying pan with a little butter, adding a bit of grated onion for seasoning. The fish and potato may be made into flat cakes and fried brown in butter, or the hash may be baked in ramekins, filled two-thirds full and an egg broken into each dish. Bake in a hot oven until the egg is set.

Breaded Tongue.

Slice cold cooked tongue very thin; dip the slices in beaten egg, then in bread crumbs and cook in deep fat. Serve with tomato sauce.

Stew of Oysters and Celery.

Dissolve a teaspoonful of beef extract in two cupfuls of boiling water. Add two cupfuls of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and mace for seasoning. Add a cupful of finely cut celery and simmer until the celery is tender. Add a cupful of oysters, parboiled in their own liquor and half a cupful of cracker crumbs. Bring to a boil and serve at once.

Baked Sardines.

Skin twelve large sardines; bring to a boil in a little water, reserving the oil which was drained from the fish. Add a cupful of water, a teaspoonful each of Worcestershire, made mustard and vinegar, with salt and pepper to taste. Arrange the fish on a platter which will bear the heat of the oven, and bake. When the sauce is boiling hot add a beaten egg yolk and stir until thick. Pour the sauce over the fish and serve at once.

Unusual Preservative.

The leaves of the fern plant, which grows almost everywhere, are excellent preservatives for packing food, fruit and even meat. Potatoes packed in fern leaves are as fresh in the springtime as when they were first dug in the winter.

Mr. Knight Was Down With Kidney Complaint; Found Dean's the Remedy Needed.

"Kidney trouble put me in a bad way," says Thomas A. Knight, Retired Insurance Agent, 624 N. Ninth St., East St. Louis, Ill. "It came on with pain across my back and the attacks kept getting worse until I had a spell that laid me up. Morphine was the only relief and I couldn't move without help. The kidney secretions were scanty, painful and filled with sediment. I was unable to leave the house, could not rest, and became utterly exhausted. The only way I could ease was by bolting water. For three months I was in that awful condition and the doctor said I had gravel. Dean's Kidney Pills brought me back to good health and I have gained wonderfully in strength and weight!"

Large Audience Mystified

Tries Vainly to Detect Difference Between Voice of Famous Baritone and RE-CREATIONS by Edison's New Phonograph

Those present at the Methodist church recently saw Glen Ellison walk onto the stage. They saw him take his position next to a beautiful cabinet. They saw his lips give voice to the opening lines of Roaming in the Gloaming. Then suddenly his lips were still—but the song kept flowing on.

How came this? They were hearing Mr. Ellison's voice, yet Mr. Ellison was not singing. The entire audience gasped as it slowly realized that it had been unable to distinguish between Mr. Ellison's voice and the RE-CREATION of that voice by the New Edison.

That was the daring test undertaken by Thomas A. Edison. He sought to prove that no difference exists between the voice of the living artist and its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. The musically cultured of Chelsea were invited to pass judgment. No test could have been more exacting.

Glen Ellison made comparison after comparison. The mystified audience tried vainly to catch a difference between the original rendition and its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. No one could tell one from the other.

It was a triumph whole and complete for the New Edison.
