Our confidence in the Bellevue No. 10 Spreader is unlimited and we stand squarely behind its performance and our statements, backing both with our reputation for selling honest goods and selling at fair prices.

We Wish You a Happy New Year

HOLMES & WALKER

We Always Treat You Right.

Census Takers Begin Canvass Friday.
United State census enumerators will begin their work Friday, January 2, 1920.

All of the workers have received instructions to be courteous with the public at all times, and as the task is to be done for the federal government the people are requested to be courteous to the enumerators.

Identification cards will be provided, signed by the director of the census and by Elmer Kirkby, supervisor for the second district, and upon presentation of such cards the public may be satisfied that the caller is a duly accredited representative of the government.

Important schedules must be filled out in a neat and legible manner, and to do this work well, the enumerators should be seated at a table or a desk where they can write conveniently.

Enumerators have no right to disclose any information received by them and heavy penalties are inflicted should they do so. It is the duty of the public to answer freely all the questions, and people are urged to make answers promptly, to avoid delay of the work and trouble to themselves. In case one should refuse to answer a question the enumerator would report to Mr. Kirkby and in turn he would notify the government and a heavy penalty would be imposed.

Enumerators in the rural districts have the right to have some one accompany them, if they desire, for the purpose of driving them, but when accompanied by such person, they should perform their duties not in the presence of said person.

They Have "No Occupation."

She rises up at the break of day
And thru her tasks she races;
She cooks the meal as best she may
And scrubs the children's faces.
While schoolbooks and lunches, too,
All need consideration,
And yet the census man insists
She has "no occupation."

When breakfast dishes are done,
She bakes a pudding, maybe;
She cleans the rooms up one by one
With one eye watching baby.
The mending pile she then attacks,
By way of variation,
And yet the census man insists
She has "no occupation."

She irons for a little while,
Then presses pants for daddy;
She welcomes with a cherry smile
Returning lass and kiddie.
A hearty dinner next she cooks,
(No time for relaxation.)
And yet the census man insists
She has "no occupation."

For lessons that the children learn
The evening scarce is ample,
To "mother dear" they always turn
To help with each example.
In grammar and geography
She finds her relaxation,
And yet the census man insists
She has "no occupation."

For the Betterment of Chelsea.

The local post of the American Legion wishes to thank the people of Chelsea and surrounding towns for their patronage of the holiday ball, given Saturday evening, at the Welfare building. The Legion feels especially thankful to the out-of-town patrons and it is hoped that none left Chelsea feeling that they had not been shown every courtesy possible.

It is the ambition of the Legion to promote anything which it believes to be a benefit to the community and to the individual citizen. It is its belief that social gatherings tend to strengthen friendship with our neighbors, and thereby keep each one thinking of our town, our own friends and our own small part of our own great country.

The Legion has given dances and will continue to do so, and will be grateful for something new at all times. It has secured a dancing teacher for every Monday and Thursday night for six weeks to help those who so desire. It has also secured, through the courtesy of F. H. Lewis, the Hollier Band to give concerts during the remainder of the winter. Mr. Lewis has been fortunate in obtaining an entire new program, which he has promised to present through the Legion to the people of Chelsea.

Help us keep together for a bigger, better town and a bigger, better friendship.

THE AMERICAN LEGION.

Townsend Not to be Candidate.

That he will absolutely not become a candidate for the presidency has been the answer to many letters from Michigan republicans by Senator C. E. Townsend.

Senator Townsend stated to several of his friends and leading republicans had written him about the presidency, but that he did not like the idea a little bit.

Battle Creek—Bonds aggregating $100,000 have been sold to finance Battle Creek's new country club, on the shores of Lake Gogwin. The beautiful country home of Carroll L. L. Post was recently bought as nucleus for the new club, as well as adjoining shore line property.

The brothers had not met for years. Stewart failed to arrive on the train.

Battle Creek—When Salvation Army officials collected the deposits in their Christmas kettles they found them filled with greenbacks, where dimes and quarters have predominated in previous years. St. Clair—Two corner's jurists at Monroe have returned a composite verdict in the case of the killing of Carl Christlieb, P. Bruhniller and S. A. Sawyer, who was associated with him, had withdrawn from the case. Mr. Brown stated he had also withdrawn from the criminal case wherein the woman is charged with obtaining money under false pretense. "I publicly apologize to E. C. Bartlett for having started the damage suit against him," Brown said.

Pontiac—Under the plans for extensions announced by the Grand Trunk to be started at once, Pontiac manufacturing plants hope to be able to keep pace with the demand for their products, which has been impossible for many months because of freight congestion. The Oakland Motor Car company in particular has been unable to send out cars as fast as they could be sold, because of impossibility of getting freight cars on the Grand Trunk line. The Grand Trunk Motor Truck company has also been hampered in its business.

WEALTHY MACOMB MAN MURDERED

J. STANLEY BROWN SHOT DEAD
IN AUTO ON LONELY ROAD
NEAR MT. CLEMENS.

MOTIVE PUZZLES OFFICIALS

Cash and Valuables Are Untouched—
Is Third Member of Family to Die Violent Death.

Mt. Clemens, Mich.—The body of J. Stanley Brown, wealthy Mt. Clemens young man, was found December 24 in his automobile in a secluded spot on the Romeo plank road, near Dead Man's curve, about four miles from Mt. Clemens, with four bullet holes in his neck and a battered skull.

Brown, who was found by a farmer, had his hands on the steering wheel and his foot on the emergency brake, evidently having brought the machine to an abrupt stop before being shot. The bullets severed the spinal column at one point, two entering his brain.

Brown was the son of the late John H. Brown, millionaire cigar manufacturer, who died about six years ago in Detroit, leaving about $100,000 to J. Stanley. This was put in trust, settlements being made on certain birthdays, in accordance with the will.

About three weeks ago, an older brother of Brown dropped dead in Detroit after eating a florice drop. This incident in connection with the reported violent death of another brother five years ago, is believed by officers to indicate that the family has been pursued by a common enemy.

Mt. Clemens—That the slayer of J. Stanley Brown, wealthy and eccentric Mt. Clemens young man, was a woman who had not previously figured in the case, and that she was masquerading in the uniform of an American soldier when Brown was murdered, is the belief of Macomb county authorities.

This belief was the result of the return of Chief of Police Alan Straight, of Mt. Clemens, with two new witnesses detained in Battle Creek.

Chief Straight had in custody Harry Kendall, taxicab driver, whose name has been linked with the case at various times. Chief Straight now declares Kendall was in no way involved.

The witness regarded as most important, however, is Gladys Summit, 24 years old, who told Chief Straight that an intimate woman friend of hers had threatened to kill Brown's money, "even if she had to kill him," and who disappeared from Battle Creek Tuesday and was absent from that city until Wednesday at 1 o'clock.

According to the story told by Gladys Summit, her girl friend, whose name and two aliases she gave Chief Straight, said to Gladys:

"I'll get that money belt and ring of Brown's if I have to kill him."

THUGS HOLD UP TOLEDO JAIL

Six Men Overpower Deputies and Free Four Convicts.

Toledo, O.—The boldest jail delivery in the history of Ohio was staged here early Christmas morning in the Lucas county jail, when a convicted murderer and three other noted crooks gained their liberty and a deputy sheriff was shot, probably fatally.

Six men called at the county jail, exchanged Christmas greetings with three deputy sheriffs on duty, overpowered and locked them in a cell, took their keys then liberated the four prisoners.

The 10 men then walked leisurely out of the jail.

NEW SUBSTITUTE FOR GASOLINE

South American Demonstrates Motive
Power of Fluid.

London—A test was made at Nottingham recently of a new motor fuel, the invention of a South American named Andrade. The fuel is produced by mixing with water a compound known only to the inventor. On some of the liquid being poured on the ground it burned steadily and emitted no smoke. The odor does not resemble that of petrol. Half a bucketful of liquid was afterwards poured into the petrol tank of Mr. Ball's car, which travelled with perfect smoothness and at a high rate of speed. More water was then added, and this seemed to improve the running of the engine. Mr. Ball stated that the car traveled more than 30 miles on one gallon, and that if Andrade's assertions are true a gallon can be manufactured for 10 cents.

Aged Couple Buys Own Coffins.

Newark, N. J.—When firemen broke into the apartment of Mrs. Mary Toll-coaster to extinguish a small fire, they found two empty coffins. Mrs. Toll-coaster explained that her husband is 70 years old and a patient in the city hospital and that she is over 70 and not expecting to live long. They wanted to pick out their own coffins, she said, "and we did not want any expense to fall on any one when we died."

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

U. S. Damages More Than Offset German Claims

WASHINGTON—America's claims against Germany growing out of the sinking of the Lusitania and other vessels by submarines, and on account of other war damages, will more than offset the amount which will be due from the United States on account of the 100 German steamers seized in American ports when the United States entered the war, shipping board officials declared.

Under the peace treaty, the value of the vessels, estimated by board officials at from $130,000,000 to $140,000,000, will be credited to Germany on indemnities awarded by the allied reparations commission, but as the American claims before the commission will more than offset the value of the ships, officials asserted there was little likelihood that the United States would be called upon to make any payment to the commission.

Three vessels were war vessels—German commerce raiders—which took refuge in American ports before the United States entered the war and were interned, and their value will not be included with that of the vessels which were purely peaceful merchant craft.

Gridiron Club Unscrambles Scrambled Railroads

AT THE Gridiron club dinner the other night the railroad skit dealt with "unscrambling the railroads." The actors represented former Director General Mead, Director General Hines and an investor in the railroads.

Mead—The late Mr. Morgan said that you cannot unscramble scrambled eggs. He was wrong. By the exercise of a little magic, to which we modestly lay claim, we shall illustrate how the railroads of the United States may be scrambled and then unscrambled again. Can anyone lend me a silk hat? I shall return it promptly and entirely undamaged.

Mr. Investor steps forward with silk hat. Exceedingly realistic business by Mead, of filling the hat with an awful mess, accompanied by a more than vigorous stirring process.

Mead—Now we have the roads scrambled. This completes my part of the trick. I shall now pass the buck—I mean the hat—to my friend, Mr. Hines, who will, in his magic way, with a few passes produce the beautiful rabbit known as Government Operation and Control, and return the hat undamaged to my friend, Mr. Investor. (Investor groans.)

Hines (looks at the hat and glares at Mead)—I am deeply indebted to Mr. Mead for his trust and confidence. I wish he had finished the trick. He hates the limelight and likes to retire while the retiring is good. But to the trick, gentlemen. Let me first cover the hat for aesthetic and olfactory reasons. It is a little messy. (Covers hat with handkerchief, seizes wand.) I now make these mysterious passes—so—saying the cabalistic words—poocus—1920—brotherhoods—as taught me by Mr. Mead. Then I quickly raise the cloth and here we have—(starts back, looking nervous.) Ah, I see, Mr. Mead forgot something. Let me add the Plumb plan. (Drops three plums and breaks another egg. Investor groans and tears his hair.)

Hines—Now we have it. Hocus—poocus—1920—presto. (Takes up handkerchief, looks—starts back, rushes to Mead, saying: "My God, Mac, I can't do the trick.")

Mead—That's your affair—not mine. Investor—My hat—my hat! Mead and Hines—Take it up to congress. They'll fix it for you. (Both link arms and go off.)

Imagine Congress With No Congressional Record

CONCULASTIC Senator Thomas of Colorado! Incredible as it may seem he actually talked the other day of the possibility of stopping the publication of the Congressional Record. Senator Jones, being prodded by New Mexican newspapers short of print paper, introduced a bill providing for an increase of postal rates by five times the present rate on daily papers exceeding 24 pages in size.

Senator Smoot of Utah then said he thought the time had arrived to stop publishing in the Congressional Record articles, telegrams and addresses sent to senators. Every page of the Record costs the government nearly $30. It had men now scouring the country daily in order to pick up paper wherever they can at almost any price that is asked for it. In order to secure enough paper to publish the Congressional Record daily.

Then the vice president said: "The vice president will be very glad to ask the senate, if the senator desires him to do so, whether the publication of the Congressional Record shall not be suspended during the famine in print paper." Then Senator Thomas capped the climax by saying: "Mr. President, I was going to suggest that the senator from Utah does not go far enough. I think it would be a very good idea to quit printing the Record altogether. My impression is that that would be one way in which we could curtail the output of senatorial oratory; in fact, I do not know of any other way in which it can be done."

Congress without the Congressional Record! The congressman without a chance to revise and extend and print and circulate his little speech for home consumption! Perish the thought!

Chicago Waterway Projects Not Entirely Satisfactory

THE rest of the country may love Chicago to distraction, but apparently it does not care much for its commercial waterway projects. Objection to the issuing of a permit to the state of Illinois for the construction of what is known as the "Illinois waterway" to connect the great lakes with the Mississippi river has been filed with Secretary Baker and the chief of the army engineers by Edward T. Cahill. He nets for Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, charging that Chicago now takes water through the drainage canal to such an extent that Lakes Michigan, Huron, Erie and Ontario have been lowered so much that extra harbor facilities had to be built by other states.

American and by Canadian cities. The protest also declared that treaty relations with Great Britain are at issue and "it is questionable if we are not bound to submit these matters to the international joint commission created under the treaty between Great Britain and the United States concerning boundary waters, proclaimed May 13, 1910."

Chicago and its commercial projects came in for harsh criticism during a discussion of the proposed improvement of the St. Lawrence river for ocean traffic before the national rivers and harbors congress. Two members of the St. Lawrence project are urged by the western speakers would make Chicago an ocean port, opening the way for the loading of deep-sea vessels at Chicago, and their passage through the lakes and out into the Atlantic through the Welland canal and the St. Lawrence river.

Diversity in Matched Sets

The season has brought out a great many matched sets made up of collar and muff, with hat to match, or neck-piece and muff with cuffs or bag to match, or simply of neckpiece and muff. The selection of articles in the set depends upon the character of the fur or the fur fabric used and the individual taste of the wearer, and fur fabrics have made an exercise of individual taste much less difficult than it used to be, for the difficulties in sewing and matching furs are eliminated where fur fabrics are used.

Matched sets will interest the woman who likes garments that are out of the ordinary and that will reflect her own taste, as well as the thrifty ones who wish to make over garments that have outlasted the styles in which they were made. The handsome and rich-looking set shown above, whose deep cuffs help to make it so cozy-looking, presents no difficulties that the average needlewoman will fear to face, even if a fur is used for it. In a fur fabric it is easy sailing for the home dressmaker. This set is made of keratin, one of the most beautiful of those marvelous fur fabrics that are the glory of the looms.

We have become accustomed to fur fabrics that deceive the eye, and take them as a matter of course. In keratin the mimicry of nature goes below the surface, for the pile has a bronzy background below its black tip. This brown is glimpsed through the black when the pile is down, after the manner of great and mighty nature in the pelts of animals. Pattern makers in all the standard pattern concerns provide patterns for neckpieces and cuffs, and retail shops carry muff beds already lined, in various sizes and shapes, for the convenience of those who undertake the making of sets at home.

Keratin resembles broadtail—a fur that shares honors with ermine and sable for elegance—and excels all others in dignity. It has a glossy surface, reflecting the light unevenly, according to the direction of the hairs (or "pile" in a fabric), affording an incomparably beautiful play of light and shadow. Owing to its origin many women are averse to wearing it, but the manufactured fur fabric relieves one from qualms of conscience.

Pretty Things Made of Ribbon

There are such enticing things on display at the ribbon counters that one would like to photograph all of them and divide the joy of looking at them with many other people. But there are articles enough to fill a book, so only the most attractive and practical can be selected for the brief space allotted the picture in a newspaper article and a series of pictures is needed to present examples of the many different sorts of things made of ribbons. There are so many kinds of bags that this one theme is inexhaustible. Next in importance come ribbons in lingerie, both for making and adorning garments, then hair bows and then household articles, pillows, picture frames, boxes and things of that kind. But these divisions do not include everything useful and ornamental made of ribbon.

In the picture above, two camisoles, a breakfast cap, and a lingerie bow are shown, with a carriage band and a celluloid rattle held by a narrow striped ribbon, for the baby. The camisoles are among the simplest of these displayed, in many of which lace plays a role as important as ribbon. A very wide ribbon in light weight and colored taffeta is used for the camisole shown at the left of the group. One must take a length equal to one and a fourth times the bust measure for making this model, finishing one edge with an insertion and edging of lace or the other with a casing for a flat elastic band. The fastening and edging are joined by a narrow heading which carries a length of baby ribbon that serves to gather up the top of the camisole and adjust it to the figure. The shoulder straps are simply lengths of narrow taffeta or satin ribbon; usually satin is used for these.

In the camisole at the right a wide satin ribbon is edged with a broad band of fine white net, doubled and sewed to the ribbon at one edge. A row of stitching in the net, near the top edge, forms a casing which carries a very narrow satin ribbon that serves to draw the camisole up and ties in at a bow with two long ends at the front. These ends terminate in little bows. The same narrow ribbon serves for shoulder straps with small bows on the shoulders.

Satin ribbon laid in single box plaits, forms the breakfast cap pictured. Plain ribbon is sewed to the plaiting along one edge and gathered at the center to form the crown, where a little bow is posed. Little ribbon flowers set close together make a pretty finish and satin ribbon forms the lone bridle that hangs from the sides of the cap. Narrow satin ribbon is used for making the lingerie bow and is shirred over flat elastic for the baby carriage band. To join the rattle to the little wrist band that holds it, it is merely shirred.

THE MAN WAS MONSIEUR DE RAVENOL.

Synopsis.—While in the little Swiss town of Vevey, where the "maid, proper spinster," who was the story is spending a vacation, she is asked to allow a young girl, Claire de Ravenol, to be her companion back to the United States. Although forming an attachment to the girl, the heroine takes a dislike to Monsieur de Ravenol, Claire's father, and declines. On the boat she finds Claire in the care of a casual acquaintance, Mrs. Delario, whom she had met while each was purchasing a pair of slippers, exactly alike, which figure largely in subsequent events. When they reach New York, where Claire was to have been met by her mother, the latter does not appear, and Claire performs guest to Mrs. Delario's home. In the confusion at the custom house, the spinster carries off one of Mrs. Delario's slippers. Through that happening she learns that that someone unknown to her has been in her flat. Calling on Mrs. Delario, that lady shows some remarkable good, believing them to be stolen, but which are really blood-red diamonds, and easily worth a million dollars. Mrs. Delario admits the gems were smuggled, but offers no explanation. While they are talking, a pounding on the door throws them into consternation. The caller asserts he is an officer of the law, with a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Delario's son on a charge of stealing the diamonds. She outfits him and persuades the spinster to take the gems to her home for safe keeping. Next morning, realizing the responsibility in her possession of the diamonds, the spinster takes them back to Mrs. Delario, but while there she learns that that lady's son has been kidnapped, supposedly on account of the gems, and agrees to keep them for a while. She hides them in a bunch of hyacinths and has the back of her door changed and a chain-belt added. Over the telephone De Ravenol informs her Mrs. Delario has met with an accident and urges her to call at once. Hastening to her friend, and leaving the gems, the heroine is met by De Ravenol, who claims the diamonds are his, stolen from Claire on the boat. He accuses Mrs. Delario or her friend the spinster of the theft, and demands their return. She denies De Ravenol, who threatens her with a revolver, and escapes. Alarmed for her personal safety and almost believing De Ravenol, the heroine fears to return to her flat, and while uncertain what to do meets an old-time friend, Billy Rivera, newspaper reporter. They spend the evening at a theater, and Rivera accompanies her home. There they find the flat has been thoroughly searched but nothing taken. She does not confide in Rivera. Next morning Mrs. Delario, with woman and general caretaker, comes to do the weekly cleaning. The spinster has not dared to look if the diamonds are safe, and Mrs. Delario throws the faded bunch of hyacinths away. They are rescued in time, but before the spinster can look to see whether the diamonds are safe a telegram comes from her brother asking her to come to Philadelphia.

CHAPTER IX—Continued.

The third queer thing was that there was no business of mine he could be needing to see me about, and if it were business of his, he'd ask it as a favor. It was then that my eye slid up to the date and I saw it had been sent from New York. Well, if he were in New York, why hadn't he telephoned me or come up to the house?

I wish I could say I rushed over me indignantly that this was a decoy designed to get me into Monsieur's clutches, but it didn't flash at all—I thought it queer, and I was puzzled; but I am free to confess that if it had been an ordinary business man's message, I should have packed my suitcase, put the diamonds in my stocking, and taken the train specified. But while I was still wondering what my brother could be wanting me for in this peremptory way, Mrs. Jimmon brought me the special delivery letter, which, with triumph and pleasure in her face, she said she had found under the set tub.

I pulled it out of the envelope and read: "Madame was seen by two witnesses to carry away the package containing the jewels referred to. If Madame desires to return them to their owner, telephone Hotel Imperial at 9 a. m. The owner gives Madame this one opportunity to rectify her mistake without further trouble or publicity. Failure to comply with the request to telephone will prove Madame's intentions and necessitate active measures for the recovery of the jewels."

"Oh, you don't say!" I sneered. "Well, I wonder what next!" And by that letter I knew I still had the diamonds!

So I was to telephone at nine o'clock! By rights—and Monsieur's calculations—I should have received the letter before the first delivery; instead, it had come after and by accident I hadn't read it till noon. The telegram was timed nine forty-five.

It was then that I began to see through a hole in a stone. I had not telephoned—which proved I meant to keep the diamonds. My next move, obviously, would be to get them out of the city—to my brother's, of course. The telegram gave me the excuse for doing it; also told him by what train and station I should leave, for he had set a day train! Why not at night? It puzzled me at first until I saw his reason—I could disappear out of a day-light crowd about four times easier than out of a night crowd. Who could notice, among hundreds of women going through the Pennsylvania station, a woman so simply dressed as I, carrying a common suitcase? Probably no one.

I confess I was so much disturbed as I thought what might so easily have happened had I acted on the telegram, that it was some time before I got my wits together. One thing was clear to me, however—Monsieur was going to act with great rapidity and secrecy—secretly—that was the main point; for if he were sure I had the stones, he had only to get a search warrant and he'd have the stones.

Mrs. Jimmon came to my study while I was pondering all this and asked me: "What about lunch?" I sent her round to the delicatessen and told her to buy everything she thought I'd like to have.

place, I tore open the bunch of hyacinths. The diamonds were there. "Good Lord!" I said as I saw them. The things were a calamity.

I rolled them up again, but I must get a new bunch of hyacinths; I must do something—I must act—I must get the stones home to Mrs. Delario—I must at least ask her what she wanted done with them and tell her how unsafe they were with me.

I tried the telephone, but got no answer, and while I was checking at it Mrs. Jimmon came home from the delicatessen and I had to hang up. "What a life, my mind went like a hammer. How could I get the diamonds out of the house? To whom could I entrust them? Not a living soul, so far as I could see—unless I could get them back to Mrs. Delario herself, which didn't seem likely in the present state of the case."

You see just how the man had me at his mercy. If I'd been a person accustomed to sneaking round and making quick getaways, I'd have known what to do and how to do it. In the next place, I hadn't the least idea of the number of people I was pitted against—the strength of the opposing forces. At that time, I hadn't the dimmest suspicion that he was playing practically a lone hand in the game and had only one hired detective and he didn't know what he was watching Mrs. Delario and me for. But as a result of my thinking, the idea came to me to find out if I were now watched and followed.

Telling Mrs. Jimmon to wait till I came back, and though it was raining hard, I went out for an investigatory walk around the block.

A man sat in the lower hall as I stepped out of the elevator. His back was toward the light of the front door. I think the devil himself must have got into me then; for without looking at Mr. Man, except the glance I gave him as I left the car, I walked straight into him and stepped on his toe, hard.

He said: "Ouch!" I said: "Oh, I beg your pardon! Did I hurt you very much?" "No—not very much," he replied, and looked glum.

Now, I had calculated this way—to pass him in the net of stepping on him and make him turn when he answered me so the light would fall on his face. I got the look at him I wanted and went out.

I walked past my house to the end of the block. As I turned north, I saw Mr. Man snubbing along in my direction. I stepped into a florist's and bought a fresh bunch of hyacinths. By the time I had them paid for, Mr. Man had reached the store and was looking in the window, pretending not to see me.

"Did I hurt you very much?" I asked sweetly.

"No—not very." He touched his hat and I thought he looked amused.

I sprinted along ahead of him and turned at One Hundred and Forty-fifth street. I fancy Mr. Man had to do a little sprinting himself on his poor lame foot. I had vanished into a toy shop and was buying a doll for my niece when he discovered me—and pretended he didn't see me. He walked on ahead, but I caught up with him.

"Did I hurt you very much?" I asked.

I sprinted away and turned south on Amsterdam. There, I went into a stationery store and bought an ink eraser. Mr. Man passed the door and glanced in. I motioned him to wait, but he pretended not to see. He was some distance ahead when I came out. I ran after him and caught up.

"Did I hurt you very much?" I asked. "No—not very," he answered, eying me narrowly. "I'm afraid you're giving yourself too much concern over a little accident." He was, I saw, beginning to wonder which of us was following which!

"No," said I quietly, "I'm not giving myself the least concern over your stepping on toe—I'm simply using it as an excuse to get a good look at you in various lights so I'll know you again in any possible disguise you may assume."

I have always regarded that episode—and those last words—as a stroke of genius on my part, if I do say it! It came to me on the spur of the moment without thinking about it, and nearly bowed Mr. Man over. Before he had decided what to say, or what to do to allay my suspicion of him, I bolted across the street, diagonally, ducked between two trolley cars, one of which hid me from view long enough for me to get into the corner drug store where I dashed into the telephone booth and called up Mrs. Delario.

I had considerable difficulty in getting her and I felt every second was precious. My detective man was lurking about somewhere looking for me, and I rather guessed she had one watching her. My suspicions seemed confirmed, for the moment she recognized my voice she said, "I can't talk to you," in a tragic determined sort of way and I felt her in the act of hanging up.

"Wait!" I shouted peremptorily. "Why can't you talk to me? Are you watched? Is everything you say overheard?"

"Yes." "All right—then I'll do the talking. You can answer yes and no, can't you?"

"Yes." "Well, we're both in the same boat—I'm watched too—followed by a detective. This is the first chance I've had to get you and I don't know how soon I'll be able to get you again. Is your house watched?"

"Yes." "Could I run the blockade?"

"No!" "This was fairly shouted at me."

"Is there any way I could get those articles back to you today?" "No—none whatever now. No—not under any consideration."

"Couldn't you come up and get them?"

"No—of course not." "Couldn't you send up?"

"Whom could I send? Impossible—totally impossible." Her tone was so emphatic that I knew there was nothing to be hoped for in that quarter.

I felt she was about to ring off and leave me with that and shouted at her: "Here—hold on! I don't know what to do—you'll have to advise me."

"But I can't! You must do as you think best—you understand it."

"I don't! That's just the trouble. Listen. There are some things I've got to know about. You keep on answering yes and no—that isn't going to give anything away at your end, and I'm in a drug store and I don't think anything will get out from this end."

You knew I was at your house yesterday?"

"Yes—after you had left."

"You knew I was accused? And that I denied everything?"

"I thought it happened that way—I wasn't sure."

"Were you accused, too?"

"Yes." "Of the same thing?"

"I presume so."

"You denied everything?"

"Absolutely."

"Now I really must know this—did you bring those articles in yourself?"

"Yes."

"You said a friend did."

"Well—I didn't feel I could explain at the time. There were circumstances connected with it."

"At the time we crossed together—this last trip?"

"Yes. Can't you see how things have been worked? If I'd followed my intuitions, I shouldn't have allowed—"

"The girl to come with you?"

"Yes. It was planned."

"Wait! There's another thing I want to know."

"I'll tell you later."

"No—now. How did they get through the—"

"I can't tell you."

"But I must know—it's a matter of great importance to me."

"One of those slippers we bought in Paris is lost."

"No! Isn't—I have it. Please answer my question—how?"

"Good-by."

That was all. I couldn't get another word. She'd rung off. Just as I was trying to get her back, I saw Mr. Detective Man slip into the drug store. He saw me in the booth. Then he quickly slipped away again. I hung up and stepped out; but I looked back as I opened the street door—Mr. Detective Man was just sliding into the booth to find out what number I'd called!

I went quietly home feeling I had gained forward one step at least—Mrs. Delario had admitted her smuggling—which I didn't consider any of my affairs—and she had confirmed my suspicions that De Ravenol was trying to rub her. "All right, let's see him do it!" thought I; but now—if she hadn't told him—and she said she hadn't—and of course she wouldn't—how under the heavens did he know, or even suspect that I had her diamonds?

Let's see my next move. These are mons my trip through the hall to the elevator was noiseless. The elevator car was up, and as I heard it coming down I did not ring. I was standing with my back to the shaft, facing the door of the rear flat—I stood at most three feet away from that door.

Without the slightest sound of footsteps from the hall of the flat, that door opened—a man's face looked out—looked at me—and the door noiselessly closed.

It happened in a flash, so silently, that had my back been turned, had I been watching the descent of the car, I should have been none the wiser.

The man who opened the door was Monsieur De Ravenol.

I could not possibly be mistaken. The main hall light shone full on his face. He was hatless. And what was more—he recognized me and knew I had recognized him!

I was stupefied! The man was evidently living in the same house with me!

The rattling elevator recalled me to my senses as George, smiling and talkative, opened the door for me to get in. How much did George know? The car slid up.

"Who is the gentleman living in the rear flat?" I asked with as much unconcern as I could. "The French gentleman—foreigner—I don't know if he's French or what. What is his name?"

"His name?" George considered this past another floor, and I repeated the question.

"I don't know his name—he ain't been here long."

"When did he take the flat?"

"Well, now I don't know just which day it was, but it was before you came home—maybe two days, maybe a week, an' he ain't really moved in yet—only a bed an' some chairs. He say he got furniture comin' from the other side an' he don't want to buy no more here than he can help."

"Naturally. Did he speak to you about me?" I put the question boldly as the car stopped at my floor. George hesitated and then admitted:

"Well, he did say he thinks he knows you." He appeared reluctant to discuss Monsieur.

I broke out in a new line. "The gentleman is very rich, George. I hope he tipped you well."

"George was instantly enthusiastic."

"He done that! He gimme ten dollars."

"He's good for another ten, George, if you work him right," I affirmed. "Oh, you needn't be so shy! He asked you a lot of questions about me and you don't want me to know it. You told him everything you knew—"

"Well, that's right," George broke in sheepishly. "He did ask me some questions, but honest to goodness, I ain't tell him anything bad—I tell him I don't really know much about you. That's what I tell him, honest to goodness."

"He really paid you for telling him every time I went out or came in didn't he?"

But George was suspicious and on guard at once. He threw open the car door without answering.

"Oh, all right," said I carelessly, but not stepping out as I saw he wished me to. "You needn't give it away, but I know, all the same, so it doesn't matter whether you tell me or not."

"What you suppose he so particular to know for?" asked George, ingenuously feeling he was guarding his secret while gratifying his curiosity.

"How should I know? Maybe he wants to hang flowers on my door. He's very rich, I understand."

George grinned, interested and sympathetic. He scented romance and it explained all to him as adequately as it had to Mrs. Jimmon.

I unlocked my door as quickly as I could—I didn't mean to let George think I attached any importance to Monsieur. I knew enough. The man was a fellow tenant in the same house, in the flat directly under mine, and George was his paid spy. As I shut the door, I asked myself, "What next?"

I had a fleeting idea of keeping Jimmon with me for the night; but I couldn't think of any explanation for so unusual a request. I could not take her into my confidence—if she stayed, I could hardly keep her out of it. She was anxious to go home—she said that and I didn't blame her; and I was anxious to be alone and think, and I felt only relief as I saw the last of her faded slippers, her faded slippers, and I said good-by to her heartily, little realizing that she was the one human being who stood between me and Monsieur's machinations and that when she closed her self out, she closed me in—a prisoner.

MAY STUDY MERITS OF HORSE AND TRACTOR

The Tractor Is Supplanting the Horse Entirely—It Is Proposed to Make a Careful Study of This Tendency.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the chief means of effecting increased and more economic production on the farms of this country, and consequently of reducing high cost of living to a considerable degree, is a more efficient and complete utilization of farm power, according to the report of a special committee recently appointed by the secretary of agriculture. This report gives formal expression to the conclusions arrived at in a conference recently held in Chicago at the invitation of the secretary. This gathering included representatives of farmers, horse breeders, tractor and implement manufacturers, saddlery manufacturers, feed producers and workers from the farm management, animal husbandry and agricultural engineering departments of agricultural

Will Such Scenes Become a Thing of the Past?

FEEDING POULTRY FOR EGGS

Most Important Matter After Making Careful Selection of Hens Kept During Winter.

(By E. J. PETERSON, North Dakota Agricultural College.)

When a careful selection of the flock has been made, the next important thing is feeding. In order to make hens lay in winter we must duplicate summer conditions. To take the place of grasshoppers, worms and bugs obtained in the late spring and summer, the fowls must be provided with animal food. After the frost has killed the bugs and worms, high-grade meat scraps offer a convenient form of animal food. Fresh green bones make one of the very best animal foods. Half an ounce per hen daily will be sufficient. When this amount of green bone is fed, no other animal food is required. Skim milk is also very good.

PIGS NEED MINERAL MATTER

Excellent Practice to Place Mixture of Charcoal, Lime and Salt in Self-Feeder.

Pigs kept in confinement, which is usually the case when they are being fattened for the market, are generally not fed enough mineral matter and in order to satisfy their craving for minerals it is an excellent practice to place a mixture of charcoal, lime and salt in a separate compartment of the self-feeder. Some add sulphur and wood ashes to this mixture.

COMPOST SAVES FERTILIZER

Good Means of Supplying Needed Organic Matter for Soil—Expense of Pile Is Small.

The compost pile is one means of supplying needed organic material for the farm. The materials which can be used are ordinarily wasted, and the expense of making the pile is slight when compared with its fertilizing value.

ACCURATE RECORDS OF MILK

Only Way of Knowing Just What a Cow Is Producing—Study Details Before Discarding.

There is only one way of positively knowing that a cow is a profitable milk producer. It is by keeping accurate records of production. It is not enough to condemn a cow before these records are made.

colleges, as well as representatives of various divisions in the federal departments, including the bureau of animal industry, the rural engineering division of the bureau of public roads and the office of farm management.

Merits of Horse and Tractor.

Studies which should be made to show the relative merits of horses and tractors for use in various capacities on the farm was the central theme of discussion. The conference recommended that a series of studies and investigations relating to five principal subjects be undertaken under the auspices of the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with state agricultural colleges.

Under "farm power requirements" it was suggested that attention be given to the farmers' needs in various field operations, in hauling and in the operation of heavy belt-driven machinery and in small power operations.

Under the topics "animal power" and "mechanical power" the recommended field of investigation includes a study of the preferable size of animal and mechanical power units, costs of maintenance, total utilization of power units and the quality of work done by each.

Classed under the subject "relation of forms of farm power to man labor" the themes listed for consideration include seasonal demand for labor, the effect of time and weather limitations, the cost of man labor, the quality of work required and so on.

The fifth topic, "Influences of various types of power units" on farm organization and operation," covers such items as the size of the farm, the size of fields, the topography of the farm, intensity of culture and total farm products.

Money for Studies.

The conference recommended that appropriations be made for these fundamental studies of farm power problems and that when such appropriations become available the investigations be planned by a committee of the ablest men available.

PREPARATION OF HERD BOAR

Animal Will Require Heavier Feeding Than During Idle Summer Months—Supply Mineral.

An essential point in herd management is preparation of the boar for the breeding season and his care during that time. Naturally he will require heavier feeding than during the idle summer months. A ration of milk, ground oats and wheat middlings fed in a thick slop will be palatable and nutritious. An ear or two of corn added will help it. Enough to keep him looking right and active should be fed. Two sows a day to aged boars and one sow to young ones are all that should be allowed. One service on the second day of heat will be found to settle the largest percentage of sows. Of course, supplying a mineral mixture and plenty of good grass at this time ought not to be neglected.

MIXTURE TO FATTEN TURKEYS

Best Feed Is Good Dry Corn and Liberal Supply of Fresh Milk—Do Not Pen Fowls.

The best feed for fattening turkeys is a mixture of good dry corn and a liberal supply of fresh buttermilk or fresh skim milk with other grain such as wheat, buckwheat and a little barley by way of variety. It usually does not pay to pen turkeys to fatten as they do not take to confinement readily though some people have been successful in confining turkeys in small yards or even in fattening batteries.

LACK OF BUSINESS SYSTEM

No Greater Cause for Loss and Drudgery on Farm—Good Judgment Helps Wonderfully.

There is no greater cause for loss and drudgery on the farm than a lack of business principles. System and good sense make long days shorter, hard work easier, mortgages lighter and the family life more easy and free.

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT FOR HENS

Does Not Make Fowl Lay Two Eggs in Day, But Does Hasten Spring Work Conditions.

Artificial light in the poultry house in winter does not make a hen lay two eggs a day, as some people seem to think, but it does make conditions such that she does not have to wait for spring to begin her laying work.

Revengeful.

The storm was over, the sun shone brightly and a beautiful rainbow appeared in the sky. Six-year-old Oscar asked his mother to explain the origin of the rainbow, and mother told him how the earth was first destroyed by a flood and that God sent forth the beautiful rainbow to assure people the rain was over, but that the earth would be destroyed by fire the next time.

Oscar asked, "Will everybody burn up?"

"Yes, son," was the reply. "Will our backyard be burned up?"

"Yes, everything in the world."

"Oh, goodie, goodie; then my school teacher will burn up, too."

Important to all Women

Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be dependent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Ad.

His Intention.
"I was eighty-three years of age this year last fall," admitted old Emory Umphs. "I have never accomplished anything of special importance during my somewhat extended career. I have tried my hand at most everything, one time and another, and fallen down more or less flat at nearly all of it. And now, having been practically a failure all these years, I am going to live on my son-in-law, and divide my time about equally between criticizing the way everything is done nowadays and telling the rising generation how to make overwhelming successes of their lives."—Kansas City Star.

Pussy Had Qualifications.

There was company for dinner. Baby wanted to sit with the guests. His father said: "No, when you have whiskers, my lad, you can eat at the table with the company." So he gave the baby a bowl of crackers and milk and baby sat on the floor and started to enjoy himself, when the cat came along and started to help herself to baby's milk. Baby pushed the cat to one side, saying indignantly: "Go and eat with the guests; you've got whiskers."—Exchange.

It is not strong enough to control their actions and hold them to the right path. But it is too strong to let them walk the wrong way in peace.

May Upset Things.

Washington.—A hint that the settlement which the government made with the coal miners may be upset by action of the senate was given by Senator Prolinghuyesen, Republican, of New Jersey. "I feel the committee investigating the coal situation will not approve or permit any move that will result in the increase in the price of coal to the consumer," he said. "The administration must come to some plan for getting to its work."

ARE RULED BY SUPERSTITION

Almost Every Act of a Roumanian, From the Cradle to the Grave, is Thus Guided.

Roumania is one of the favorite homes of superstition, where superstitions accompany life literally from the cradle to the grave. Before a child is christened it must undergo the important ceremony of its first bath, given in a huge wooden bowl, which also serves as its cradle, at the home of its godmother. If it is a boy there must be poured into the bath a symbolic mixture of corn, wine and honey; if a girl the bath must contain feathers from the wings of a dove and petals of a rose to serve as a prayer to the Three Spinners, believed to be weaving the child's destiny, that her footsteps through life may be as soft as a dove and her face as fair as a flower. A book, a loaf of bread and a rod are offered a boy. If he chooses the book he will be a scholar; if the bread, he will be a thrifty, practical, successful man of affairs; if the rod, which is laid on his back, he will be a soldier or a man of war.

When a man dies there must be placed in his coffin a comb, a bit of soap and a coin to pay the fee due Charon, to ferry him over the River Styx.

Great System.
"I understand Miss Grabcohn never rises before noon."

"Ahem! What does that signify?"

"The possession of wealth, which the family would not be now enjoying if years ago old Mr. Grabcohn hadn't acquired the habit of bounding out of bed at five o'clock in the morning, sticking his head under a pump, gulping down a plate of flapjacks and a cup of coffee and getting back on the job."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Pugilistic Turn Necessary.
Mr. Rafferty says it's got so you're obliged to start a bit of a fight sometimes in order to make the minutes of the previous meeting worth the trouble of being read.

He Voted, Did Andy.
Andy, a negro porter at a Broadway theater, belongs to a lodge. The other night the lodge met to vote on the question of changing meeting rooms, but Andy didn't get there. Yesterday we met him on Broadway and he said the organization was to have new quarters.

"Did you vote for a change?" we asked.

"I wasn't at de meetin'," replied Andy, "but I voted by proxy."—New York World.

A vast amount of work now remains to be done which the intervention of war has necessarily delayed and neglected, and the result is that a very large capital expenditure is required to be made to make up for the interruption of the work, and to prepare the railroads to carry adequately the increased traffic throughout the country.

WALKER D. MINES,
Director General of Railroads.

Work more—
Produce more—
Save more—

But we can't continue increasing our production unless we continue increasing our railroad facilities.

The farms, mines and factories cannot increase their output beyond the capacity of the railroads to haul their products.

Railroads are now near the peak of their carrying capacity.

Without railroad expansion—more engines, more cars, more tracks, more terminals—there can be little increase in production.

But this country of ours is going to keep right on growing—and the railroads must grow with it.

To command in the investment markets the flow of new capital to expand railroad facilities—and so increase production—there must be public confidence in the future earning power of railroads.

The nation's business can grow only as fast as the railroads grow.

Public Trustee

Revenue is to the corporation what blood is to the body, reduce or thin it and the corporate body at once shows financial anemia, physical impairment, operative inefficiency.

A corporation engaged in the Telephone business, upon which the public is so vitally dependent, must have ample revenues in order that the equipment shall be of the latest and best type; that the lines shall be kept in perfect condition; that the personnel shall be contented and alert on account of liberal compensation and attractive working surroundings, and that bond interest and a reasonably good dividend rate shall be secure, in order that new capital for extensions and improvements may be readily obtainable.

The source of these revenues is the charge to the public for the service rendered.

Under present conditions higher rates and good service are interdependent. The Telephone Company is the Trustee of the public for the receipt and expenditure of funds devoted to the service of the public.
