SUNDAY NIGHT FIRE WAS STUBBORN ONE

Gallagher's Bazaar Badly Damaged—
Cause of Fire Unknown.

The fire department was called out at ten o'clock Sunday night by a fire in the second story of the building on North Main street occupied by S. S. Gallagher's bazaar. The room where the fire started is used for the storage of surplus stock. Although the blaze was a stubborn one, the firemen succeeded in confining the flames to the second floor, but the goods and the floor and roof were badly burned. The stock on the first floor and in the basement was badly water-soaked.

The building is owned by C. Klein and his loss is fully covered by insurance. About forty feet of the roof will have to be replaced. Mr. Klein set carpenters at work at once to repair the damage to the building.

The Campbell & Wood building, occupied by Charles Todaro with a billiard hall, was considerably damaged, the walls and ceiling being water-soaked, and the second floor was badly damaged by smoke and water.

In the McKune building, the second floor of which is occupied by the Knights of Pythias, was damaged by the smoke. The latter organization recently completed the redecoration of their rooms.

The cause of the fire has not been ascertained.

The firemen wish to thank Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Armour for the hot coffee served to them, and also to the proprietor of the billiard room, which was kept open, giving them an opportunity to get warm and dry. Nearly all of the firemen were on duty all night.

For Ex-Servicemen.

Jerome B. Scott, national representative of the Federal board for vocational education, will be in Ann Arbor on Wednesday, February 4, to interview the disabled men of Washtenaw county. He is authorized to decide cases for training at once, and to place men in training the next day if desired.

All men incapacitated in service to such an extent that they are unable to return to their former occupation are requested to report to Mr. Scott for settlement of their cases. He will be at the Red Cross headquarters all day, and arrangements have been made for the necessary physical examination.

The name of all those who wish attention at this time should be mailed or telephoned to Miss Margaret Cooley, executive secretary, American Red Cross, by Monday, February 2. Telephone 2751, between the hours of nine and four.

Men applying for training must present their discharge papers and any other papers relative to their disabilities.

Big Farm Convention.

With programs finished and exhibits ready to be placed, plans for the big agricultural convention which is to be held at the Michigan Agricultural college during Farmers' Week, February 2-6, are nearing completion on the eve of the meeting.

Business will be mixed with pleasure by the delegates who attend the gathering, for while the meetings of various associations and technical work along agricultural lines will occupy a good share of the time, general meetings whose object is primarily entertainment and recreation will feature each day's program. Music, moving pictures and lectures by the most entertaining and interesting speakers in the country are scheduled for each afternoon and evening.

Eleven state agricultural associations will hold meetings during the mornings, to which the general public is invited. These meetings will take up various farm problems of importance and interest to rural men and women of the state.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The eighth grade had a sleighride party out to the home of Miss Helen Goetz. The teachers were invited. All report a fine time.

The sophomores loaded into two big hob sleighs, Tuesday night, right after school and rode out to Miss Ruth Hulce's home. At suppertime a "big feed" was enjoyed; games followed. The party left early.

First and foremost—the girls' and boys' basketball teams both won at Dexter last Friday evening. Our girls won 11-8; the boys, 32-24. Dexter entertained as royally. They gave the whole Chelsea crowd a fine supper, dancing before and after the games. Dexter certainly showed a fine spirit and we hope to do as well.

The Y. P. S. of St. Paul's church will hold their annual business meeting at the school house this evening at 7:30 o'clock. Lunch.

Your Best Hand Out for Year 1920

From Sunny California.

Santa Rosa, Calif., Jan. 21, 1920.

Dear Mr. Hoover: Now that we are at home in our new quarters away off in California, our minds go back to the friends at home, and as it is impossible to write to each and every one of them when we promised, will beg a little space in The Standard, knowing it will reach many of our friends.

In regard to our trip, we had a most enjoyable trip through beautiful scenery. As we passed over the Sierra Nevada range, we occupied seats in the observation car, which gave us a fine view of the mountains as we wound in and out, now and then through a tunnel. Our train consisted of fourteen Pullman cars, three diners, one observation car, drawn over the mountains by two engines. Nearly all in our coach were eastern people, some back as far as New York. All came through to Sacramento, where, with many handshakes, we each departed for our several localities.

As we reached Rawlin and began to climb over the mountains it was 30 below zero. As we passed over the Sierra Nevada range we reached an altitude of 7,017 feet above the sea level.

It was our pleasure to cross Salt Lake at sunset, a scene never to be forgotten, with its rainbow tints stretching far out over the water. We rode for forty miles on a trestle bridge, the train just moving at times.

We encountered very deep snow in the western part of Nevada and eastern California, it being four to five feet deep. We passed through forty miles of snow sheds, where otherwise it would have been impossible to get through.

After four days and three nights on the road we reached the beautiful town of Santa Rosa, the county seat of Sonoma county. It is twenty miles from the ocean, and sixty miles from San Francisco, and is a town of 15,000 population; the climate is nice, only need a little fire morning and evening; 60 to 70 in the shade in the middle of the day; flowers in bloom, fresh vegetables for dinner every day. They are plowing and sowing, pruning trees, raking yards, etc. There are two railroads and one electric line here.

Last Sunday we enjoyed a forty mile automobile ride to the ocean beach, where we had dinner on the bluffs overlooking the Pacific in all its grandeur.

I do not know how long we will stay here, so continue to send the Standard, as we look forward each week to its coming, and certainly enjoy and appreciate it very much.

The program follows: Song; current events; play, given by the ladies of the Grange; song; time for discussion, "What Shall We Do With Our Rural Schools?" opened by Fred Nottan; song.

Home Keepers to Have Conference.

Just as wide awake to the need of keeping posted on the latest developments in their work as are the men, and prepared to tackle weighty problems of the home, Michigan women will hold a home keepers' conference at Michigan Agricultural college during Farmers' Week, February 2-6.

While the men folks of the family are deliberating over questions of agricultural trend, the women will gather in their own meetings and consider the problems connected with their end of the co-operative business of farming.

Demonstrations on the renovation of clothing and hats, and a discussion of cleaning and cleaning equipment will be among the important subjects taken up by the women, in view of the emphasis present high prices have placed on the matter of prolonging the life of existing garments.

Specialists from Cornell and Johns Hopkins Universities, housekeepers of practical experience, and members of the home economics staff at M. A. C. will be in charge of the various meetings and demonstrations.

Most of the home keepers' conference meetings will be held in the morning, the afternoons and evenings being reserved for the general meetings at which both men and women will be present.

Which I thought I was—considering; but I didn't mean to let him see I thought so. Without waiting for any more compliments I finished, "You see, you'd discovered you couldn't get in while I was in, so if you wished to get in, you had to come while I was out—and I gave you the chance. Perfectly simple."

"A mere decoy—such as anybody might use," Billy tossed at him. "I hope you're convinced—it was a mere decoy," said I, pointing to the letter in his hand. "You have convinced me," he replied bitterly, looking at his hand-cuffs. "Permit me to congratulate you, madame. You are ze first person—man or woman—in Europe or America—who has caught De Ravenol in a trap. Madame, you are clever—you are brave—you are a so sagacious intellect. And now, madame, permit me to ask you, what are you going to do with me?"

It wasn't so much what he said as the way he said it that drove a sudden chill through my bones. I'd been asking myself that for several minutes; but as monsieur put it, it was—well—like pulling up a fishing line when you think you've got a bite and finding you've got a piece of a forest in tow. I had to say something, however, and this was the thing that seemed called for:

"Olive you up to the police."

Monsieur rose unsteadily to his feet and holding out his manacled hands to me—and he was really impressive in spite of his being so rumpled and sloppy—he slowly uttered: "Madame, before you call in ze police, I have something of great importance to yourself to communicate."

He paused. I nodded.

"ZOSE DIAMONDS WHICH HAVE BEEN STOLEN BELONG TO ZE EMPEROR OF GERMANY."

With those words monsieur actually turned the tables on us! It was at once his statement of our mistake and our misfortune. Billy says he "saw warships carving Atlantic waves." I saw an army with banners. And behind all their immediate significance, stood an ironical background that spelled determination. A minute before we had been dealing with a man; now we were dealing with a power.

I am free to admit that neither Billy nor I doubted the truth of the statement once it was uttered—there was an atmosphere about monsieur and his manacled hands that carried conviction; and while many details were still unexplained, his statement did explain the diamonds. Which was the main thing, for I'd always said they never belonged to any but a crowned head. There are some things in this world much too large for private parties to carry the responsibility of. And so completely was I captured by an adequately explained ownership that I was almost ready to yield the diamonds from their hiding place at the bottom of the sideboard drawer and send them back—per monsieur—to the Emperor William with my compliments, when Billy burst out, "Where's your proof?" in a way that struck me as irreverent, not to say rude.

Monsieur repressed a sneer and replied that certain proofs would be forthcoming at the proper moment; and that meanwhile, throwing himself upon our mercy and to illuminate the mistake we'd made, he would tell us everything—and would start with the legend of the so precious stones.

Once upon a time, about the fourteenth century, or so, there lived in one of the states comprising the now United Fatherland, a very powerful grand duke or kinglet, with two grown sons; and in another neighboring province the size of Greater New York lived another very powerful duke, who boasted a beautiful daughter.

Those were the days when war was cheaper than peace. But since a war between these two kinglets would inevitably lead to the total extermination of both parties and leave nothing to show for their prowess but heaps of fire-scorched stones and a few half-witted peasants—who had no right to be alive, anyway—these wise kinglets belabored them that by uniting their forces—and incidentally a son and a daughter—they could together conquer the surrounding territory for as much as ten square miles.

Now, Oscar, the prospective bridegroom, was busily engaged in a dramatic border war with a powerful duchy the size of Nantucket, so there was naught for it but to dispatch the handsome younger brother, Fritz, to plight his brother's troth by proxy.

The dates were set, and all seemed moving along its appointed course, when post-haste came a trusty messenger and delivers himself of the message he has ridden all day to bring—the helmet, thereby losing a nose, an upper lip and a chin; and was now in the throes of dissolution.

Consternation reigned in the castle, broken by the sobs of the fair Elfrieda, the shy glances of the bereaved brother—who would become the heir apparent—and the wise silence of the old kinglet.

It was not long before a decision was reached satisfactory to all persons—except Oscar, lying in his tent comforting himself with thoughts of the grief of his beautiful betrothed, whom he had never set eyes on; for the two young people, Fritz and Elfrieda, knowing that a marriage between the families was greatly to be desired, and warmed with a high sense of duty to the fast-departing Oscar—and it may be, a natural shrinking on the part of the lady from the embraces of a husband minus an upper lip, a nose and a chin, and plus some sixty various and sundry other wounds and scars to boot—hastened the ceremony and were united by the castle priest in the bonds of holy matrimony before the sun rose.

Imagine the messenger's feelings on arriving at the castle and finding Oscar. Instead of lying at peace in the family chapel with solemn candles at his head and his heels, making a fast recovery by the aid of his devoted mother in spite of his nose and his chin and his lip!

Still, the news of the unpremeditated marriage was a tonic all around—especially to the messenger. Oscar cut off his head and hung it out of the window to air and then promptly got well in a way that gave him grim satisfaction and his mother considerable uneasiness for her darling; and no sooner was Oscar able to sit his horse than he directed his attention and his army against her whom he was pleased to call "faithless" and the brother whom he designated as "an unholy bandit."

Then did the fair lady call unto her own private scribe and she indited a beautiful letter in her own hand handwriting, and in it she told the noble warrior that the mistake was hers—as she saw by his gloriously scarred face—and she took all the blame and offered herself and her blood as a sacrifice in the appeasing of his righteous wrath. Then she called her most faithful maid-of-all-work and said: "Lady-in-waiting, I deliver this into thy keeping. Now fetch me my golden goblet, lock the door and ask no questions."

And with this attended to, Elfrieda, stationing the lady-of-all-work in the proper attitude with the goblet in readiness to catch her heart's blood, plunged a dagger in her bosom and died.

The faithful lady-in-waiting obediently caught the blood as it fell—seven great drops. But, oh, miracle—when she looked into the golden goblet what did she behold? Seven drops, unmixed as when they fell from the gaping wound of her beloved mistress—seven glorious blood-red diamonds!

But she was strictly honest. The letter and the diamonds, still in the golden goblet, were conveyed to Oscar at the appointed hour, and at sunset the two brothers united their tears above the bier of the beautiful Elfrieda.

Such was the legendary origin of the most wonderful diamonds in the world—a collection created by miracle; and thenceforth, in keeping with their mystic origin, they assumed a peculiar role in the history of nations, binding bargains and sealing treaties of peace.

But now the later legends had endowed the stones with occult powers which were imparted to their possessors—the renewal of youth, wealth, untold energy of mind and spirit.

A century after the stones were taken to Venice and cut and their real glory was revealed to the world; and at last they excited the envy of Bismarck and came into the possession of the emperor, grandfather to the present William, thence to William the present.

To this legend Billy and I had listened with unblinking interest. Monsieur told it in the sustained manner of one tampered to secrets of state. It was he who broke the spell of our silence by asking me for a glass of water.

I carried the water to him and turned away my eyes while he held the glass with his two hands to his lips.

"That's quite a yarn," observed Billy, blowing out a cloud.

"Yarn?" questioned monsieur.

"Story—tale—narrative," Billy explained. "Une histoire," on which monsieur brightened and declared: "C'est une véritable histoire."

"True when it happened," translated Billy. "But what I don't see is, where you come in on the diamond deal."

"Yes—you; z I don't seem yet to see where you belong in this veritable histoire," returned Billy, looking about for an ash tray, but driving at his point—"I don't see what part you play in it at all? Granted that the diamonds belong to the Emperor William—now, then, what are you doing with them?"

"I?" again he looked at me. "I am trying to find zem for ze Emperor William."

"All right. But what are you doing with them—in America?" Billy's tone was severe. "That is what you have to answer."

Billy looked the man straight in the eyes, defiantly, and I thought, for just the fraction of a second, that he quailed under the boyish honest stare. "Yes, sir," continued Billy, as monsieur did not immediately reply, "there's quite a gap between the emperor's owning them and your having them. Very possibly I am lacking in imagination, but to be quite frank, I can't see the connection."

It was to me monsieur appealed. "Ah, madame, what more can I say? I am at your mercy—" and he held out his manacled hands.

I hardened under Billy's look at me and replied coolly: "I think you'd better tell us how you came by the diamonds. I can't see the precise connection between the Emperor William and yourself."

Monsieur appeared to choke back a number of emotions and then declared, "Madame must pardon me, but zose—are secrets—of state!"

He did it really magnificently—altogether the great man, the confident of kings, and that—on top of the rest—convinced me of his sincerity. Before I could reply, Billy pulled my sleeve and demanded: "Where's an ash tray?—I'm getting this stuff all over your best rug. Get me a plate or something out of the kitchen," and with his eyes he said: "Leave this man to me for a minute, will you?"

I stepped into the kitchen and heard Billy say to monsieur in a low voice: "I see I don't need to point out to you the position you're placing yourself in by refusing an explanation as to how you came to have these diamonds in your possession. There's only one thing left for me to think."

He paused and I thought, "Heavens! Is he going to accuse monsieur?" And he did.

"YOU STOLE THEM."

I was rooted to the floor. The reply came like a shot—"Monsieur!" and De Ravenol leaped to his feet. The two men had given and taken a mortal blow—for monsieur, in his single word, had returned as good as he got and they now measured each other.

"That's Quite a Yarn," Observed Billy.

Billy broke the silence and recalled me with: "Say—where's that ash tray?"

The scarlet that had leaped to monsieur's cheeks faded as I entered the room. He stood. He towered. Yet he spoke with humility.

"It is not as De Ravenol I explain how it is I am seeking ze diamonds zat belong to ze Emperor William—it is as ze emperor's messenger to ze court of Mexico. And yet—it is as plain De Ravenol—ze faze of Claire whom you know—zat I implore you to keep my confidence zat I give you now at ze peril of my life."

He paused, and we both felt constrained to assure him we would keep his confidence, and he proceeded.

"I have undertaken zis secret mission for which ze emperor have select me from all his friends—as he have select me, I may call myself his friend—and I have dedicate myself to it wis all my zeal."

"Since Napoleon I, Europe has seen no like der Kaiser Wilhelm—he is warrior and conqueror in his heart, even as ze were—we have now ze concert of powers zat prevent to one man to own ze whole of Europe any more."

"And ze emperor looks ahead for ze future of his people and he say: 'How do ze be fed in hundred years? Ze fields of all ze fazeiland—so science of all ze fazeiland will not do it. But wis money, my people may buy zeir food as ze will—beef and wheat from ze whole world. Wis industry—manufactures—commerce—we have ze money. But zat our commerce does us some valuable good, we must make some alliances for zis purpose. England have set her seal on India, her root in Africa and her hand on Canada; but she have not touch ze Latin nations—she owns not Mexico—she controls not yet ze some-day Panama canal. Zere we have great strategic point for future development zat England have not got hold of.' In Mexico, ze, ze Emperor William sees some bright future for ze fazeiland."

"Now ze madame president of Mexico is young; she have great beauty and she rule her venerable husband wis zat beauty—as have women at all times. So once she have hear ze legend of ze seven blood-red diamonds. Above all ozer sings in ze world she desire zose diamonds and she have communicate her wish to der kaiser and he have seen in her wish some way to his own for ze fazeiland."

"To zis end he have arrange treaty wis Mexico which make Mexico a sister state of ze great German alliance he have in mind. To zis end, also, he have commissioned me—"

The rest of what monsieur said just then was lost on me, for there had swooped on me a lightning stroke of understanding—the whole nefarious scheme of Germany and the emperor lay bare to my inner eye. Mexico—the Panama canal—these were the strategic points of a world conquest such as history had never witnessed. Germany in possession of Mexico, with half a million troops massed on our border—why, she could diplytly tread on the lion's tail any day and go to war and say to us: "Help England—and lose Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and California." With half a million troops in Mexico, Germany could speak us into almost anything!

And Mexico, with her almost untouched resources; with her hot-blooded troops under German discipline for twenty years—for ten—for five!

But I could set it! For the lever that was to set the scheme in motion was thumb-tacked to the bottom of my sideboard drawer—the seven blood-red diamonds!

Monsieur's voice had reached a stop. My resolve was taken.

"Never!" was the one impassioned word I uttered.

Billy echoed it—"Never!" His thoughts had flown with mine and had seen the impending calamity which we two, out of the world, could now prevent. Then, drawing himself to his full height, he gave forth our ultimatum to the nation at large: "You just go back and tell your Emperor William that he can never have Mexico or the Panama canal."

CHAPTER XIII.

Monsieur Appeals to Me.

The effect of our words on monsieur was the last thing we could have foreseen. He had been standing all this while. He sank heavily into his chair, buried his face in his hands—and wept! Billy raised disgusted eyes to the ceiling, inviting it to come down with a noise and end the unpleasant spectacle of a man crying tears on a rug. Then catching my commiserating eye, Billy communicated his ideas on the subject with a little sneer of his lip and a little shrug of his shoulder. The next instant, he had seized me by the arm and pulled me along the hall whispering: "While he's on the weep we can talk," and he thrust me inside the bedroom door, himself remaining on the sill with an eye to the dining room.

Monsieur continued to weep—possibly he thought we'd left him out of consideration for his emotion.

"Say—this is the very deuce of a hole," Billy began in a rapid whisper, "the very devil of a hole. What we must do is to go to Washington tomorrow—"

"But, Billy—"

"Well, tonight, then—we can catch the midnight train and be there the first thing in the morning."

"I won't. At least, not now. De please listen. I won't do anything till I've seen Mrs. Delario."

"What the good of wasting time seeing her?" he interrupted. "Here's a case where hours count—minutes—seconds, for all we know. How'll she help, anyway?"

"That's not the question. She's trusted them to me—so she's the one to take them back to first—and then if she says—"

"Oh, you know what she'll say," he argued. "Women are always that way—don't want any trouble. Now you take the bull by the horns—go to Washington tonight."

"No. I'm responsible to her."

"How can you be—when she only found them where the girl must have put them? He'll confess that, too, when he gets over his weeps."

"Oh, well, since you've got 'em, I suppose you'll do as you like for all of my advice," Billy said glumly, stuffing his hands in his pockets. "But if you'll take my advice, you'll not waste time over anything—it's too serious."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Furs and Feathers.

From the dawn of human history furs and feathers have been used to satisfy our taste and need for clothing and adornment. Our most primitive ancestors were connoisseurs in the plumage of birds and the pelts of animals and admired them for their possibilities in furnishing himself and his family with raiment and adornment, and so do we.

Keep Out the Moisture.

A very effective agent for moisture proofing wood has been found in an aluminum leaf coating. This coating practically insulates the wood against any change in atmospheric conditions, and is particularly valuable for use where accurate form and balance must be maintained, as would be necessary in an airplane propeller.

Animals Are Relatively Easy to Handle and Young Owner Gains Experience in Handling.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many junior dairy clubs favor the maintenance of bred heifers by their members, because these animals are relatively easy to handle while their young owner gains experience in feeding and caring for the young females before they calve. Subsequently he learns how to handle the calf, which constantly is increasing in value. Where mature cows are distributed among the junior dairy club members more risk is involved, as many of the youngsters are not experienced sufficiently to handle them properly.

The advantage of distributing calves among the next generation of stock breeders, according to specialists, is the low initial cost of the animal and the fact that its keeping involves less expense and care on the part of the attendant. On the other hand, it requires three years to complete the project. This may be considered undesirable, as interest of the club members will likely become lessened. In both the case of the bred heifer and the calf it is difficult to select the best animals which will prove to be profitable producers, while in the case of the cow, she demonstrates her worth if proper records of production and expenses are kept. The junior dairy club work develops potential breeders who will mature from raisers of a single heifer or calf into full-grown owners of extensive and quality herds.

LIBERAL FEEDING FOR COWS

Animals Starting into Winter in Thin Condition Need Extra Care to Nourish Calves.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Breeding cows that started into the winter in thin condition need extra care and liberal feeding at this time if they are to nourish their calves properly and maintain their own bodies satisfactorily. It is a mistaken idea of economy to starve through the winter a cow that is to drop a calf in the spring. Such practice not only reduces the vitality of the cow but dwarfs the growth of her offspring, because she is not able to nourish it properly.

The cow should be provided with a liberal amount of silage, or legume hay if no silage is available. A protein supplement in the form of velvet beans or cottonseed meal should be provided in addition to two or three pounds of grain. Corn stover or straw may also be used if available at this time of year.

ASSETS IN MILK PRODUCTION

Large Flow of Blood Indicates Digestive Organs and Heart Are Functioning Properly.

It is a well established fact that milk is produced from the elements carried to the udder by the blood. It seems reasonable, therefore, that the quantity of milk produced depends largely on the amount of blood which circulates through the udder. It is also self evident that a large flow of blood indicates that the digestive organs are functioning properly, and that the heart is strong. Both of these are very important assets in milk production, and in transmitting vigor to the offspring of the cow.

DAIRY NOTES

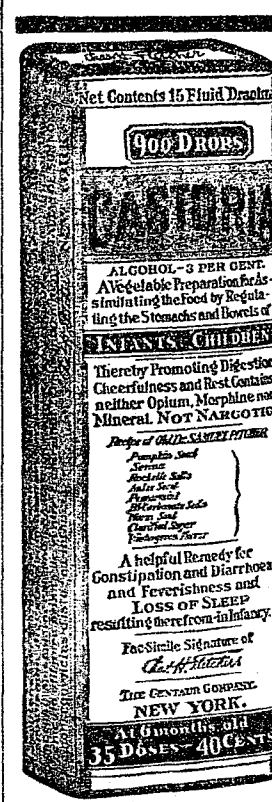

Fill the churn only half full and you will have better churning results.

Thoroughly cleanse and sterilize the cooler, cans, pails, strainers and other milk utensils.

The cow barn is a dirty place in the winter months unless the proper methods of handling are exercised.

The cow-testing association is apt to start many a boarder cow on a sight-seeing excursion with the return ticket lost.

Good, clean corn stover is excellent for part of the roughage feed. Silage is especially good and should be fed at the rate of three pounds of silage per 100 pounds live weight.

THE CENTURY COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

THEATER'S "GOOD OLD DAYS"

Example of Rough-and-Ready Methods of Stock Companies of the Olden Time.

David Belasco said at a theatrical supper in New York:

"I hear a lot of praise bestowed on the old stock companies. Well, the old stock companies were all right in their rough-and-ready way. They'd hardly go down with us nowadays."

"Once in the '80's I dropped in at a stock performance in a western town. The company had a score of plays in its repertoire, and this play I had dropped in on went very raggedly."

"In the third act climax the hero forgot his part, and after an embarrassing silence of about two minutes hissed audibly to the prompter:

"What's the line?"

"What's the play?" the prompter hissed back from his little box, as he grabbed up a stack of two or three dozen books and began to run through them feverishly."

Artificial Scents.

The great bulk of perfumes are chemical productions. The Wall Street Journal says the commercial problem is whether the American perfumer of the future is to be an artisan or an artist. Shall he deal with the fragrance of flowers or chemical odors and scents? The idea of the layman is that the cosmic chemist seeks the odor of flowers; but as a matter of fact synthetic chemistry not only crowns his work with the crushed oil of roses, violets and jessamine, but seeks to rival the fragrance of flowers with superior scents originating wholly within the laboratory and trademarked as such.

A Quick Customer.

"A new germ has been discovered which makes it almost impossible for people to talk."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Mr. Meekton. "Where do you buy it?"

A New Style. "Does that author burn the midnight oil with his toll?" "No, but he burns the roads with his 'gas.'"

To Have a Clear Sweet Skin. Touch pimples, redness, roughness or itching. If any, with Cuticura Ointment, then bathe with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Rinse, dry gently and dust on a little Cuticura Talcum to leave a fascinating fragrance on skin. Everywhere 25c each.—Adv.

The Difference. "A traveler relates that in Peking if a wife dies and the husband follows her remains to the grave he is not permitted to marry again. 'That's not permitted to marry again,' dictated by state Professor Fats. 'That's stays at home it is an intimation that he has further matrimonial ambitions. Here in America if the bereaved husband weeps all the way to the cemetery and then it requires the united efforts of several strong men to keep him from precipitating himself howling onto the grave the experienced on-lookers allow that in less than three months he will be stepping about the girls and declaring that a man is only as old as he—ee-hee! hee!—feels.'—Kansas City Star.

Suspicious Youngsters. "I got to admit," said Sol Mannheim, theatrical manager, "that I've been handed one."

"How's that?"

"I gave a hundred dollars apiece to my three nephews today. They inherited it under a will that I was executor of. I took the money up to them in nice new bills, and after I'd passed it out, I said:

"Now, boys, I've given each of you a hundred dollars, which is your own to do as you please with. I want you to tell me what's the first thing you're going to do with it." And they all said: 'Count it.'—Cincinnati Times-Star.

THE BLOTTING PAD

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

"You won't mind, if I put you in here during Mr. Jerome's absence," Josephine's cousin asked. "It really is the most pleasant room in the house, and that's why Fred insists upon keeping it sacred to his friend. You know, Joe, that Fred and Judson Jerome were chums at college. Jud was Fred's best man when we were married, and throughout our married life, their David and Jonathan friendship has flourished. It seems a pity, that Judson prefers bachelorhood; he is such a fine character. But then, he is contented as a student and so wrapped up in books, that when he visits us, we have to sound the dinner gong at his very door. You should have had the guest chamber, had not the Blahs arrived at the last inopportune moment. However, make yourself comfortable in Mr. Jerome's sanctum; there is no chance of his coming to claim it. He is down South," Josephine closed the door after her hostess, and stood looking about the room with its dark impressive furniture. One long table was almost covered with books, while a square of blotting paper lay across one broad end. Her cousin's friend was evidently a penman of legible fineness, for the blotting pad was plainly stamped with even, well-formed lines of writing.

Joe walked to the mirror, where hung a memorandum, its pages covered with the same distinct cigraphy. Then her attention centered upon a speaking photograph of Judson Jerome, the scholar himself. A neat autograph beneath the picture, proclaimed its identity.

Joe, in one of the whimsical moods which characterized her, greeted the picture each morning, or waved to it a laughing farewell as she left the room.

Cousin Ned was vastly amused. "Don't breathe a word to Joe," she secretly admonished her husband. "I am going to write Judson, asking him to stop over on his return trip. I will explain that for a night or two he will have to put up with your den as a sleeping place."

"No hope of matchmaking where Jud is concerned," her husband warned her.

His wife merely smiled. She knew her Joe well. And when the scholar was duly installed in Fred's den, for once books were forgotten. No longer was it necessary to seek him out for meals. Judson Jerome was always on hand. Incidentally, always at Joe's right hand. Eagerly, she watched the girl, a new hopeful expression upon his face. Joe, it was, who turned perverse; Joe, who lingered in her borrowed room until the last possible moment; Joe, who persistently turned a cold shoulder to the original of the portrait with which she had commended.

Her cousin was in despair. "He loves her," Ned disconsolately told her husband, as Judson Jerome for a second time postponed his departure, "and fears to lose his chance by going away. And Joe loves him, I know it."

"Then what the deuce is the matter with her?" the husband asked. His wife shook her head. "I can't imagine," she replied.

Judson Jerome met his host later in the hall. "I am going away, Fred," he said jerkily. "That little cousin of yours seems to have a secret antipathy to me, and I will not annoy her longer with my presence."

"Judy," his friend said slowly, "well, tells me that Joe sits weeping before your picture, when alone. Is the antipathy so strong, do you think, that it causes her to moon over you? Or is mooning supposed to have another significance?"

Judson was already far down the hall in a cozy nook at its end where he had spied Josie. Anticipating her movement toward flight, he barred the door. "I love you," the scholar burst out breathlessly. "I love you more than life. I want you for my wife. Oh! why will you not let me try to teach you to care, Joe?"

With flashing eyes the girl faced him. "You dare say that to me," she cried, "while you write, as you do, to another woman? I thought there had been no sentiment in your life, until I read that horrid blotter in your room. It was an accident at first. The words flashed up into the mirror of my handbag, as I happened to hold it open above it. Love passages are not included in articles of scientific research, are they? Well," commanded Joe, and dashed up the stairs. When she returned she bore in her hands not only the familiar blotter, but a hand glass as well.

"Read that," said Joe, and in the glass he saw reflected a precisely written line:

"What shall I do with all the days and hours until I see thy face?"

Over the troubled features of the student came an illuminating light. "It was a quotation," he hastened to explain, "which your cousin wished me to look up for her. She wanted to slip it into Fred's pocket when he went away. I copied it."

For a moment Joe sat silent. "Judy," she said at last meekly, "Nell tells me that you are leaving. Joe held out her hands. "What shall I do with all the days and hours," she repeated softly, "until I see thy face?"

Adrift with Humor

AN AWFUL THOUGHT.

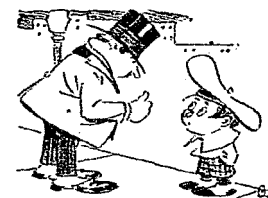

"I believe in obeying the law to the letter."

"So do I," said Mr. Mookton earnestly. "So do I. But you can bet I'm glad I don't live in a state where they have those old blue laws still on the books that permit a man to discipline his wife with a switch as large as his finger."

A Hopeless Undertaking.

"There's no use arguing with Bligh," said the opinionated man.

"Can't you make him understand?" "He doesn't want to. He simply paws the air and shouts. The only way to get him to listen to anything would be to chloroform him and then he'd miss all the intellectual benefit."

VIOLATE FOOD RULES

Illicit Trade Is Spreading in Germany.

Smuggling and Usury Increase—Courts Broken With Those Who Break Laws.

Coblenz.—Illicit trade in food, with its attendant evils of smuggling and usury, is on the increase throughout Germany, according to newspaper accounts.

The rationing system has never been abandoned even in the occupied areas of the Rhineland, and some of the newspapers contend that the average individual cannot subsist on the amount of food issued. The authorities are making every effort to check the illegal traffic in foods of all kinds, and the courts are crowded day after day.

Smuggling of potatoes is being carried on this winter in all parts of Germany on a scale greater than in war time. Germany produced an excellent potato crop this year, and the authorities are trying to save it from falling into the hands of the speculators.

Well-to-do people have been going to Bavaria from Prussia, Wurttemberg and Thuringia to buy potatoes, eggs and fats, for which the farmers charged exorbitant prices. This worked a hardship on the poorer people, who could not compete with them.

Living appears to be cheaper in Bavaria than elsewhere in Germany. Butter has been selling there at 30 marks a pound, compared with 25 pfennigs each, while in Berlin they cost 1.75 marks apiece. Eggs in the occupied area have been bringing from 2 to 2.50 marks each this winter, but are very scarce at any price.

Meat is also reported as fairly plentiful in Bavaria, although in all other states this form of food is virtually unobtainable by housewives through regular channels excepting once or twice each month, when the authorities permit a few ounces to be distributed by the card system to the individuals.

Most of the hotels throughout Germany continue to serve meat three or four days each week, however. The proprietors say they obtain this from Holland and that this does not violate the food regulations.

Popular California Beach Was Once Used by Prehistoric Herd, Says Scientist.

Winetroot made a special trip to California to investigate a report that an elephant's track measuring nearly two feet across had been discovered in solid rock buried two feet under mud and sand just off the Alameda beach. The discovery of the track was made last July by a party of bathers at a time when the tide was out. Among the bathers was Allan Lewis of New Jersey, a former student of Winetroot.

FATES ATTEND BABY'S BIRTH

Peculiar Superstition That Has Strong Hold on the Poorer Classes of Greece.

Almost every nation has some particular superstition or belief about babies, and these result in notions which vary all the way from the utterly absurd to the terrible tragic. The peasantry of Greece firmly believe that the future of every child is determined by three fates, known as the Moral. In the popular mind these fates are three old women, whose habitation is a mountain cave and they come together to a house where there is a newborn child. In preparation for them, all furniture is set aside, that their tottering footsteps may not be impeded, and refreshments to the shape of honey, bread, cakes and wine are set out for them. Important though invisible guests. Money, too, is placed on the table, as a bribe, for it is believed that in the gift of these fates are all good things as well as bad. Under no circumstances must a child's beauty be alluded to while the Moral may be in the house, or they will certainly make its good looks disappear.

HEADACHE

Often Caused by Acid-Stomach

Yes, indeed, more often than you think. Because ACID-STOMACH, starting with indigestion, heartburn, belching, food-regurgitating, bloating and gas, if not checked, will eventually affect every vital organ of the body. Fever, vomiting, splitting headaches are, therefore, of frequent occurrence as a result of this upset condition.

Take EATONIC. It quickly banishes acid-stomach, with its sour blast, pain and gas. It aids digestion—helps the stomach get full strength from every morsel of food you eat. Millions of people are miserable, weak, sick and ailing because of ACID-STOMACH. Poisoned by pain, by undigested food charged with acid, are absorbed into the blood and distributed throughout the entire system. This often causes rheumatism, bronchitis, eczema of the liver, heart trouble, ulcers and even cancer of the stomach. It takes its victims to their health, underlies the attack of the most violent.

If you want to get back your physical and mental strength—the full of vim and vigor—must first rid the body of acid stomach. In EATONIC you will find the very best you need, and it's guaranteed. County Beekeepers' School.

The County Beekeepers' Association has just completed arrangement for the two-days school to be held at the Court House, Ann Arbor February 2 and 3. The details of the program have just been sent out to the beekeepers of the county.

The program will start each morning at 9 o'clock, central standard time, and it is planned to be through by 3:30 p. m. This will give ample time for beekeepers living at a distance to attend the entire program.

Prominent beekeepers will be present to take part in the program. Messrs. Ewell, Sharrow, Markham and Kindig will discuss the important phases of bee management and honey production. Such subjects as "Making a Start in Beekeeping," "Queen Rearing," "Comb and Extracted Honey Production," "Wintering Colonies," "Making Increase," "Transferring," "Feeding," "Bee Diseases," "Marketing and Grading Honey," and "Beekeepers' Organizations," will occupy a prominent place upon the program.

A number of these schools have already been held in different parts of the state and considerable interest has been manifest. It is anticipated that the people of Washtenaw county who are interested in beekeeping will take advantage of this chance to get accurate and up-to-date information from well known authorities of the bee industry. Every person interested should plan to be present.

Service at St. Paul's church Sunday morning will be conducted by Rev. F. O. Jones at the usual hour. Sunday school at 11 o'clock.

EATS IN PECULIAR POSITION

Flamingo Forced to Contortions Because Its Upper Jaw, Not the Lower, Is Movable.

Nature has so created the beautiful flamingo that he does some things both backwards and upside down. For one thing, he eats with the crown of his head on the ground, in the bottom of some shallow stream. From one glance at his jaw one would think it was badly broken. Instead, his bill is in perfect working order, only things are reversed with it, and his lower jaw is securely fixed, while his upper jaw is movable. Both portions of his big beak are arranged in a series of thin plates, like the bills of all members of the duck family, so that he can easily sift the nice squirming things he likes from the soft mud.

Flamingoes frequent salt marshes, and when these become dry will then go long distances to find others. Florida used to be the birds' happy hunting ground and many lovely members of the family could be met in other countries. Very few of them are left now, and those surviving are very shy of the hunter, and seldom seen. Very few are left in this country, and bird lovers predict that in a few years more they will become extinct.

Still Use Dogs in Alps.

Although the tunnels which now connect Switzerland with Italy have greatly decreased the importance of the St. Bernard and other passes, especially during the eight months of snow, it is still deemed advisable to employ St. Bernard dogs. It is no longer customary, however, to send out the dogs alone with baskets of food and drink; a man always accompanies them. These dogs are not really of the famous old St. Bernard breed. That originated in the fourteenth century, through a cross between a shepherd dog from Wales and a Scandinavian dog whose parents were a Great Dane and a Pyrenean mastiff. The last pure descendant of this tribe was buried under an avalanche in 1816. Fortunately, there were found subsequently at Martigny and on the Simplon pass a few dogs which by crossing with mates from Wales yielded the modern St. Bernard dog, which is physically even stronger than his medieval namesake, and shares most of his traits.

Horse Lore.

It is found that there is a very definite connection between the coat color of horses and the frequency with which white markings occur. Thus the latter are by far the most commonly associated with the chestnut color. And not only are they the most prevalent in chestnut horses, but it is also, of course, a well-known fact that the markings are apt to be more extended in nature in the case of this color than in that of any other. Chestnut, therefore, apparently possesses, so to speak, a special affinity for these markings. They rank next as regards the degree of frequency with which white markings appear in horses of this color, although it comes a good way behind chestnut in this respect. Then follows brown, while the white marks are met with less frequently among black and roan-colored horses—Indianapolis News.

CHANGED HER MIND

By ELEANOR C. KENYON.

"Why, Marcia, I cannot understand your yawning at such a delightful story. One would think to look at you that you were being led to the slaughter instead of reclining there so comfortably and indulging in your favorite pastime," exclaimed Judith Arnold to her friend, Marcia Allen.

"Yes, Judith, I must confess that I am bored, and the story that you consider so delightful has proven to me just the contrary."

"Why, dear, I cannot understand—you have been such a bookworm."

"But Judith, I must confess that I have grown so tired of reading about beautiful heroines with skins of alabaster whiteness and soulful eyes, likened to great pools, and the wonderful heroes with figures of Adonises, heads of Apollos, and their beautiful white hands, Judith, I wish I could read descriptions as they really are."

"Now, Marcia, just imagine reading about little 'Miss Platinoid' with straight hair instead of the curly locks and with an ordinary complexion instead of one compared to a rose, and an ordinary mouth instead of the beautifully arched lips, likened to a Cupid's bow—and imagine a hero with big rough hands."

"Yes, I think I would find it very interesting. I would just love to read of a hero with big rough hands, then I would be sure that I were reading about a real man—not a drawing card or a tailor's fashion plate."

"But Judith, it was the big rough hands and the brawny muscles that have accomplished so much—where would the country be if it depended on the mince and the drawing room post?" wrathfully spoke Marcia. "And you may be sure Judith," she added, laughingly, "if 'Mr. Right' should ever come along I hope he will have big rough hands."

"Well, dear, I wish you luck, but not for me. I would much prefer the author's description," replied Judith. "But, Marcia dear, I must not forget my errand. Aunt Louise has written, inviting us up."

"You know Hugh has returned from service—quite ill so Auntie writes, and has brought two friends with him, all semi-invalids. One chap, Lieutenant Frederick Parker, who is all alone in the world, and Captain Howard Mason, whose home is in the West. So the dear soul is just bubbling over with delight at having Hugh home, and she wants us to come and help her cheer up the boys."

"Isn't that splendid of her," rejoined Marcia. "Of course I'll go. I am glad of the opportunity to do something for Mrs. Raynor—and besides, it will be a good chance to demonstrate our achievements in nursing. I am glad, Judith, that we attended the class. Perhaps it will come in handy."

A few days later found them in the comfortable home of Aunt Louise, whose face was wreathed in smiles as she greeted them most affectionately while Hugh still quite weak from his long confinement in a hospital, was elated at their coming.

"Mother insists that I am ill, but I am feeling fine," he answered to the solicitous questioning of Judith. "I am sure that under Marcia's and your skillful hands, Judith, that the boys will soon recover. But you must meet your patients," as he led the way to the veranda where his two friends were eagerly awaiting their arrival.

After the usual introductions were over and the girls had refreshed themselves after their journey, it seemed as if it were a reunion of old friends, as the boys told of their experiences.

During the delightful days that followed while Marcia and Judith assisted in the care of the invalids, "Pan Cupid" was having the time of his life.

Taking a lesson from his many blunders in the mistaking of couples, he worked slowly and deliberately, every arrow sent with a directness which pierced and caused a strange fluttering in the hearts of his victims. Nature, with the help of careful nursing, had worked wonderful changes. The winter of ill health had been replaced by the springtime of love, and as the time grew nearer when separations seemed inevitable, when Captain Mason told Marcia many things. He told her of his home in the West and of the little mother awaiting him there. He told her how dear she had grown to him during the weeks past and then he spoke of his going home.

But as he gazed at the face upturned to his as he spoke of their separation, he knew that his love was returned. (Copyright, 1919, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Metal Saws.

Not long ago the discovery was made that metals could be sawed easier and quicker with rapidly revolving smooth discs of steel than with toothed circular saws. It was found that the cutting was done by the heat generated by the friction of the edge of the disc against the metal, says Popular Science Monthly. The metal is melted at the point of contact, while the steel of the disc, being cooled by the air, does not reach the melting point. The discs need no sharpening and do not wear out so quickly as the toothed saws heretofore used for cutting metal. The faster the disc revolves, the greater the amount of heat generated, and the easier the job.

MISSED THAT DAY OF REST

Tim Herlihy Naturally Dissatisfied at His Loss of That Much-Prized "Vacation."

"Now, I don't think Timmy'll be staying long on this new job he's took up wid," said Mrs. Herlihy. "Tis too hard for him. Sure he gets no rist at all from Monday mornin' till Saturday night, and 'tis not what the man's used to."

"He has his Sundays to rist in," hazarded the caller, boldly.

"An' what o' that?" said Mrs. Herlihy. "On Sunday he has to go to church, an' tak the children to their grandmamma's an' visit wid his cousins an' all—'tis no rist at all."

"Twas wan day out of ivery fortnit he had wid the ould job, wa'n't it?" queried the caller.

"It was," said Mrs. Herlihy, "an' 'twas a grand vacation he had. I'd save ivery bit o' the washin', an' he'd wring it out fine, an' hang it on the line for me; thin he'd saw 'n' shplit wood enough to last till the next vacation day, an' he'd lute ivery mat in the house an' shine up the faucets an' the 'tiller, an' wash the windys, an' there'd always be some little extra help, drivin' nails or the like, he cud give me."

"An' thin he'd go to his bed at night he'd never fail to say to me, 'Well, Celia, my vacation day is over, but I feel like it's made me ready to go back to wurk to-morrow,' he'd say."

GIRLS HELPED BY DANCING

English Medical Officer of Health Makes Significant Statement in a Recent Report.

That twice as many girls as boys squint is one of the conclusions arrived at by Dr. W. H. Hamer, medical officer of health.

In his report on London school children, he attributes girls' poorer eyesight to sewing classes in school in the late afternoon while the light is at its worst, and when, in the winter months, artificial light has to be used.

Girls, however, according to Dr. Hamer, have better teeth than boys, due to the fact that it is easier to persuade the former to use a toothbrush than the latter. Girls suffer, because of lack of outdoor games and sports, more than boys from heart defects and anaemia.

But, in spite of all these disadvantages, the police and department of London girls is superior to that of boys. Country boys and girls both fall short of the London girl in this respect.

Particularly noticeable is the graceful arch of her instep, due to her love of dancing. This, and the teaching of dancing, is said to have greatly helped, if it has not saved, the situation in regard to physical development.—London Tit-Bits.

Money in Seaweed.

All along the coast of Norway seaweed is gathered and burned. This seaweed grows in veritable forests, and is not of the common grass variety. In fact, there are actual trees of it five or six feet high, with stems like ropes and leaves tough as leather. They begin to sprout early in the year and cover the ocean bed with a dense, impenetrable brush.

As a source of income the seaweed industry now surpasses the fisheries, and it is more valuable than agriculture, even in one of the leading farming districts of Norway. Owners of land abutting on the seashore reap a great harvest.

After the weeds have been burned the ashes are exported to England, where valuable chemical substances are extracted from them. The most important of these products is iodine.

Detour When Necessary.

Many people flatly refuse to take detours. The consequence is they remain right where they are. Either they do not possess the necessary patience and energy or they have an inflated notion that they can disregard life's laws. Of course you can sit down and fossilize wherever you want to so long as you don't impede the progress of others. But people who want to get on in life take the detours and make the most of them. They are no fonder of life's grades and dangerous ditches than other people, but they want to get somewhere. So they make the venture. And when they keep their eyes and ears open, and keep control of their progress there is little danger of falling in safe conduct. Meanwhile they are adapting themselves to circumstances and getting a grip on the world. They are learning how the people who always live on the detour have to struggle to get along. The knowledge will be helpful in the days that are to be.

Lost Honors Magellan Won.

An astronomer deprived Roy Falcior, the famous Spanish astronomer, of sharing joint honors with Ferdinand Magellan in the discovery of the Pacific ocean and the straits of Magellan. He had joint contract with Magellan from Charles V under which the two were to have one-twenty-fifth of the clear profits of the journey as well as governorship of all the lands discovered on the trip, with the rank of adelantado. This was to be theirs for life and then handed down to their heirs forever. Before the date of sailing Falcior had his horoscope cast. The astronomer said that this told him the trip would be fatal, and Falcior stayed behind when Magellan and his five ships sailed from Seville, Spain.

IN DAYS TO COME

By DORA MOLLAN.

Mary Flarity's thoughts were on the substance of the note rather than its form when she wrote the date, April 22, 1930. It did occur to her that it was not strictly necessary to date a note to one's own father informing him of one's intended elopement when one purposes to depart from the ancestral roof-tree that very day, and the enlightening communication was bound to be found soon after. But it was down, and time was precious.

Her plane was waiting. The head mechanic of the Flarity hangar had finished overhauling it not an hour ago, assuring Mary that, with her driving, he would buck it to outly any machine her father owned.

Mary had answered, "Keep mum on that score to dad, Oscar," at the same time slipping him a trifling tip of fifty.

For Mary was under no delusions as to what her father's attitude might be toward this step she was about to take. His wealth was great, his social position unquestioned. He had always been kind to her and she loved him. It was only a matter of loving Adrlon Longfellow more—much more. So well she was entirely willing to give up all the luxury to which she had been born, to live in poverty and social ostracism with the man of her choice.

With a sigh at the unpreparable perversities of life, Mary walked out of the Flarity mansion, stepped into her plane and flew straight for the college town where Adrlon, unfortunate inheritor of his father's temperament, and nothing else, drew his meager salary.

Adrlon was waiting at the appointed spot. It was his unlikeliness to the young men of her own set that had attracted Mary in the first place. They were big and strong; Adrlon was undersized. They talked to her only of sport, social matters and money; how much they earned in how few hours a day. Adrlon could talk well on a hundred subjects: books and flowers, music and the great outdoors.

But this man chosen from outside her own world by Mary to be her husband possessed a fine sense of humor. He felt it his duty to inquire for the last time whether she fully realized what she was giving up for his sake.

"My dear," he questioned, "have you thought that we won't be able to keep this?" placing his hand on the delicate wings of the artificial bird which bore them so swiftly aloft. "My salary couldn't stand the hangar fee, to say nothing of the upkeep. I did hope we might have one of the four-hour servants, but alas," Adrlon paused to sigh. "I read only this morning that they are striking for more pay and fewer working hours."

Just at that moment Mary turned into a much traveled air-lane and carefully guided her plane in and out among the traffic. "Don't worry, Adrlon; my grandmother did her own housework when she was first married; and what one woman has done, another can. The only thing that bothers me now is that something may happen to delay us and give father a way. She's doing two hundred miles an hour now and I'll keep her there till we get out of the crowd; after that the sky is the limit."

Mr. Flarity arrived home that evening during an interval between the departure of the fourth relay of servants and the arrival of the fifth. It was when the latter had been on duty an hour that one of the maids brought Mary's note to him. She had discovered it while preparing Mary's room for the night.

What he read sent Mr. Flarity flying—literally. He took his fastest plane and even had the forethought to carry along two bags of gold with which to bribe the air-traffic cops or pay fines, as the need might be. Mary's plane was distinctive, it bore her private emblem, its course was not hard to trace, but the gold bag was nearly depleted when Mr. Flarity alighted in front of a roadside inn somewhere in the northern Alaska. "No," the clerk informed him, "there is nobody by the name of Flarity registered here. Yes; there is a Mr. Longfellow—and a Mrs."

Mary was not one bit surprised when her father was announced, and remarked to the husband of her choice that they had best have him up and get it over with. "I know just what he will say, Adrlon dear, and I know he won't rest till he does say it. Let's be kind to him and give him his chance now."

Mr. Flarity's face was purple with anger added to high living. "How dare you—you—shrimp!" he bellowed, as soon as he faced the guilty pair. "You little whippersnapper son of a common ordinary college president, and nothing but an humble professor yourself, to entice my daughter—the daughter of a master plumber, before him? You who toll five hours a day for your bread and butter, and she could have married a carpenter with the social standing and unlimited means of his kind! It's my money you are after, you swine! But you get none of it either of you, after bringing this disgrace upon my family name!"

Adrlon was mute; he had no cause to plead. Mary, though, decided that her forbearance had lasted long enough. "Father," she interrupted, "I've married a man of humble station and obscure birth. He tolls long hours. It is true, for his petty recompense. But he'll spend his evenings at home—he belongs to no union!"

Until further notice visitors will not be allowed at the prison. This move is taken to avoid any possibility of influenza germs being carried into the institution.—Jackson News. Better watch your step, though, as the above would not be taken literally if you broke the law.

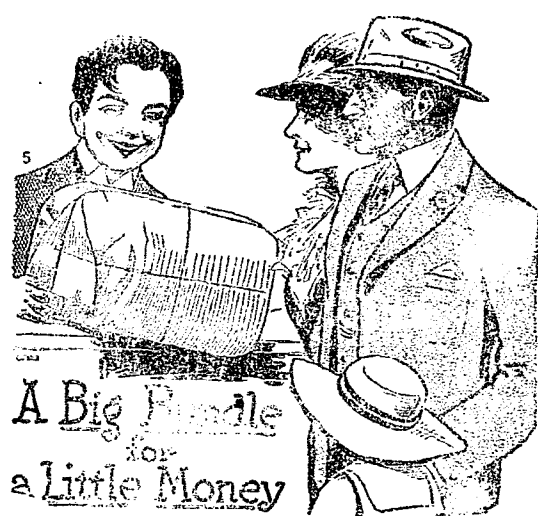

A sleighload of about twenty young people from Chelsea and vicinity, with their old tin pans and other musical instruments, went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Walz Friday evening and gave them a surprise. The evening was spent with music and games. Refreshment were served, and at a late hour they departed, leaving behind a number of pretty and useful gifts.

At a meeting of the board of education, Tuesday evening, the teachers' salaries for the coming year were fixed at a minimum of $1,000 and a maximum of $1,250. All teachers must be either graduates of the U. of M. or the State Normal college. The board also expelled two pupils for misconduct, and several others were given an opportunity to improve their behavior.

Married, on Saturday, January 24, 1920, at 6 o'clock p. m., in Ann Arbor, Miss Erma Ruth Isham of Chelsea, and Mr. Frank Carl Brantz, of Ann Arbor, Rev. E. C. Stelthorn performing the ceremony. The attendants were Miss Alma Brantz, sister of the bridegroom, and Mr. Howard Walz, of Chelsea. For the present Mr. and Mrs. Brantz will reside in Chelsea.

The Central America Marimba Band which has been playing in Jackson, Lansing, Muskegon and Grand Rapids for the largest dances this year, is to play in Chelsea, Thursday, February 5, for the American Legion dance. This band has received extensive fame playing for the Victor and Columbia companies, making dance records. Due to a conflicting date in Jackson the band has been secured to play here on the above date. After their present booking in Jackson they go to fill their contract in Chicago for sixty days.

Edward Nolan was born in New York City April 28, 1883, and died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young, on North street, Wednesday, January 28, 1920, from an attack of pneumonia. The young man had been a resident of Chelsea for about eight years, being employed nearly all of that time by the Michigan Central railroad, but for the past five months he had been working at the Chelsea Roller Mills. He had no relatives, so far as can be ascertained. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Young, under the auspices of Chelsea Lodge, I. O. O. F., of which he was a member. Interment at Oak Grove cemetery.

Michigan News Tersely Told

Albion—An American Legion woman's auxiliary will be formed here to aid Patrick Leo Hanton post.

Ionia—Bernard Shay, of Ionia, had a tooth pulled last week and bled to such an extent that he died. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Shay, of Orange, and had been working in Portland.

Grand Rapids—Lyman A. Lilly, for five years secretary and treasurer of the West Michigan State Fair association, defeated Dr. S. D. Dodson, a candidate to succeed himself as president of the association.

Rochester—Ella Wintersine, bookkeeper for the Edison Co. at Rochester, was killed when the auto in which she was riding with George Thompson was struck by a D. U. R. limited. Thompson escaped.

Grand Rapids—Miss Gertrude Felling, 44, school teacher in this city, died at her home in this city, of sleeping sickness. She had been ill two weeks. This is the first fatal case reported in Grand Rapids.

Owosso—While the state Beet Growers association is preparing for a series of meetings to enlist farmers in the fight to obtain what they term a fair price for their beets for 1920, the Owosso Sugar company has announced it has contracted for 22,500 acres of beets for next year, virtually all it can handle.

Grand Rapids—A constitutional amendment which would permit the federal government to return to the respective states a portion of the income tax which it collects, was recommended by William S. Linton of Saginaw, a member of the state tax commission, in an address to the Kent county board of supervisors.

Bay City—Claude Holdbrook is in jail awaiting trial on the charge of having liquor in his possession, the police alleging he had a three-gallon jug of "home-run." Officers went to the "small farm, Holdbrook's home, and found the two-story building had burned since Holdbrook's arrest. They claim they found parts of a still in the ruins.

Owosso—As a result of the alleged refusal of the sugar manufacturers of the state to grant conferences with the growers over contracts for 1920, the directors of the Michigan Sugar Beet Growers' association voted at a meeting here to go to the mat with the manufacturers. The growers say they will insist on an increase in price per ton or will raise no beets.

Ann Arbor—Immediate compromise ratification of the Peace treaty was favored by 1,116 students and faculty of the University of Michigan. The Lodge reservations were favored by 774; unconditional ratification received 714 votes, and 245, including nine members of the faculty, registered absolute opposition. Seventy-eight of the faculty favored a Senate compromise.

Port Huron—Pleading guilty to murder in the first degree, Leo Paquette told in circuit court here how he killed John La France, Fair Haven, Vermont, for his money. He said he and Harry Bonnie planned to get La France's money, and told how he fired the fatal shots on the night of Dec. 28. Bonnie's plea of guilty, made previously, was changed to not guilty by the court, and he will stand trial.

Bay City—R. A. Bostwick, of Traverse City, and L. E. Ellsworth, of Alpena, deputy fish and game wardens, have concluded their investigation of conditions surrounding the killing of fish in Saginaw river, but give no conclusions. City Chemist Harrison is analyzing water with the idea of discovering the nature of the pollution, which it is alleged came from sugar factory refuse. Hundreds of tons of fish have been killed by the poison.

Battle Creek—Brigadier General Arthur Johnson, who has commanded Camp Custer for the last several months, received telegraphic notification that he had been relieved from duty at Camp Custer and assigned to Camp Upton, Yaphank, Long Island, where he will assume command. By virtue of seniority, Joseph P. O'Neill, commanding officer of the Tenth Infantry, will assume command of Custer until the arrival of Major General John Riddle.

Hillsdale—Ed. Friesdorf, of Hudson, who was here to attend the annual meeting of the First State bank, may not be able to beat the high cost of living, but he boasts that he has a cinch when it comes time for his funeral. Mr. Friesdorf says he has in his possession a contract made a dozen years ago, providing for a $15 funeral. He has long been against expensive funerals, and wanted to be consistent, he said. He expects the contract to be carried out, he said.

Port Huron—James McCready is looking for some banner crops on his farm near Crosswell next season following the bursting of the settling reservoir of the Crosswell beet sugar factory Saturday. The reservoir contained lime water, the lime from which was intended for distribution among the farmers in the spring. The season's accumulation escaped from the reservoir and covered 40 acres of the McCready farm, with the result that the soil will be benefited by a considerable quantity of soil-enriching elements.

Caro—Sol Burso, foreman of the boiler room at the Caro plant of the Michigan Sugar company, fell dead.

Ann Arbor—In a raid 14 Greeks, who claimed to be celebrating the Greek new year, were arrested on the charge of gambling. When arraigned in justice court each was fined $3.45.

Ann Arbor—Funeral services for James O'Kane one of the four original letter carriers appointed here 33 years ago, were held. In all these years he had never lost a day because of sickness.

St. Johns—Clinton county board of supervisors passed a resolution condemning the state constabulary as a needless expense and ordered a copy of the same forwarded to Representative Hunter and State Senator DeLoe.

Lansing—Construction of a new city electric light and power plant to cost from $500,000 and $800,000, on a plan which eventually will mean the development of a $2,000,000 city concern, will be recommended by the electric light and water board.

Lansing—The first candidate for the presidential elector in this state to file petitions asking that his name be placed on the ballots at the presidential preferential primary to be held on April 5, is William G. Simpson, of Ferndale, giving his postoffice as Highland Park.

Grand Rapids—David Dunlap, 55, Plainfield township farmer, was burned to death in his farm home when the structure was destroyed by fire. He was fighting the flames on the second floor of the house when the brick chimney toppled over, burying him beneath it.

Port Huron—Mrs. Julia Odette, St. Clair county pioneer and believed to be the oldest woman in the state, died at her home in Avoca, aged 103. Mrs. Odette was in possession of her faculties up to within a few days of her passing. She is survived by one son, Louis Odette, himself an aged man.

Saginaw—The Consumers' Power Co. plans to expend approximately $5,000,000 for the erection of a steam electric generating plant at Zilwaukee, a mile from the Saginaw limits. If the $500,000 bond issue and its consolidation plans with the Michigan Light Co. are approved by the state utilities commission.

Charlotte—Eaton county has a war chest fund of $50,000 and does not know how to dispose of it. According to petitions being circulated, Charlotte proposes to turn its share over to the Irvia Greenwell American Legion post, while Benton township wants to use the township funds for a community house at Pottersville.

Kalamazoo—Basing his action on Judge Root's decision holding the city commission was elected by an unconditional method, Charles Struble, former chief of police, has notified the commission he will make a fight to reclaim the office from which he was dismissed a month ago by Harry Freeman, city manager.

Film—Plans for the erection of new factory buildings and extensions to the Buick plant in Flint to cost approximately $7,500,000 were announced following the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Buick Motor Co., at which H. H. Bassett was elected president and general manager to succeed Walter P. Chrysler, resigned.

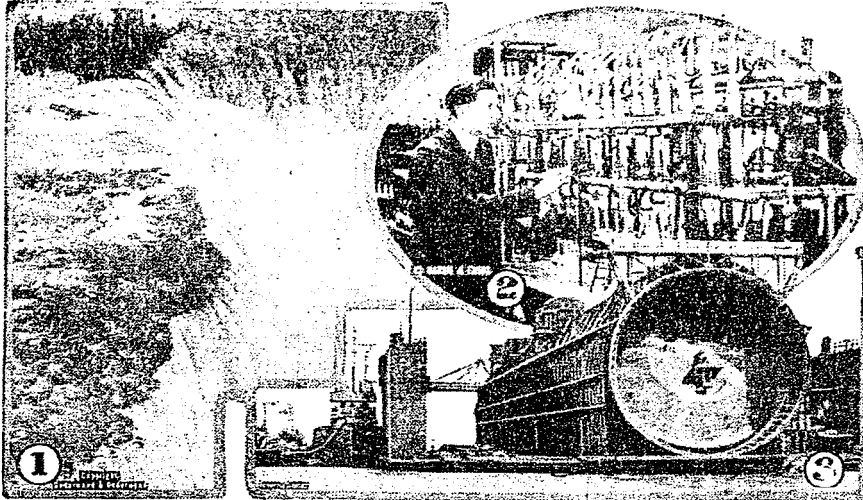

Kalamazoo—A full congregation saw the inauguration of a motion picture feature as a regular part of the week. It was the first Presbyterian church, one of the biggest in the city. If the experiment continues successful, motion picture shows will be given in the church several nights every week. Films will not be confined to religious production.

Albion—Flora A. Bruce, of Elmira, N. Y., former Albion fireman and at present representing a big fire apparatus concern in Tokyo, Japan, was the hero of a fire which recently occurred in the Imperial hotel in that city. According to a dispatch received here, Bruce rescued three women from a window and was injured when debris hit him on the shoulder.

Ann Arbor—Adoption of a standard plan whereby pupils of public schools of Michigan can be gauged in physical fitness, was made by state physical directors. The "pulse recovery" test, in which the subject runs "in place" 15 seconds, then rests for a two-minute period, after which the pulse is supposed to be normal, was devised for girls. A more strenuous test was planned for boys.

Big Rapids—Investigation into the death of 17-year-old Grace Enyart, at the private hospital of Dr. Albert Patterson, of Chippewa Lake, has been begun by the authorities. The girl had been at the hospital since the middle of December, at which time the doctor says she presented herself for treatment. The authorities believe that an illegal operation had been performed some time before the girl went to Dr. Patterson's hospital for treatment.

Lansing—Action was deferred until February 3, by representatives of the Michigan League of Municipalities gathered here in the circulation of initiative petitions to submit to Michigan voters at the election next November, of a proposed constitutional amendment giving municipalities control, even to fixing rates, over public utilities operating in respective municipalities. The reason given for the delay was the small number of cities represented, only Detroit, Lansing, Battle Creek, Port Huron, Kalamazoo, Adrian and Jackson.

1—Remarkable airplane photograph of Niagara Falls taken from an elevation of 330 feet. 2—Stills owned and operated by the government as part of the laboratory for testing the alcoholic content of drinks. 3—Great German submarine testing tank that is now owned by the British.

Britain Hurrying to Put Up a Barrier Against Bolsheviks in the Caucasus.

MAY REQUIRE 200,000 TROOPS

Holland Unwilling to Surrender Former Kaiser for Trial—Admiral Sims' Sensational Charges Against Navy Department—Administration Organ Booms Hoover for President.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Soviet Russia's threat against Persia, and consequently against all of southern Asia, as was foreseen, has so alarmed the British that they are hurrying to the defense of their great interests in that part of the world. Naval forces from the Mediterranean already have been sent into the Black sea and troops, probably about 10,000 of them at first, may be dispatched to the Caucasus at once. Batum, at the eastern point of the Black sea, is their first objective, and from there they will undertake to occupy and hold the line of the Tiflis-Baku railway running to the Caspian. Georgia and Azerbaijan, the two new republics which make up the peninsula between the inland seas, have asked assistance against the soviet forces, and the barrier against Trotsky's armies must be built there. According to dispatches from Paris the supreme council believes that ultimately at least 100,000 troops will be needed in the Caucasus, and perhaps the estimate will be doubled later. France, of course, because of her interests in Syria, is concerned only in a lesser degree than is Great Britain in the advance of the bolshevik toward Asia Minor. As her share, it is understood, France will relieve the British of all participation in the military work in the plebiscite area in Germany, the official announcement by Marshal Foch being that the British troops are "not ready." They had been waiting at Cologne for months for this duty, however, so it is fair to presume that they will be hurried to the near East.

The British already have small forces in Persia and have begun the organization of the Persian army, but the native troops cannot yet be counted on to any great extent. Aside from protecting her broad avenue to the Indian frontier, Britain is vitally interested in saving the immensely valuable oil fields of which Baku is the center. Moreover, under the secret treaty negotiated last summer, Great Britain is bound to protect Persia.

Another move to check the bolshevik is reported from Warsaw, where it is rumored that the Roumanians are preparing to occupy Odessa and organize its defenses against the soviet forces.

Preceding these developments came the news that the supreme council had lifted the trade blockade against soviet Russia, and the bolshevik leaders hailed this as a sure sign that the allies were about to make peace with them. Their belief appears to be unfounded, though the disposition to withdraw from all intervention within the boundaries of Russia is growing mightily. Even the Japanese announce that they are about to quit Siberia, where, however, their protégé, General Semenov, has just declared himself supreme ruler because Admiral Kolchak has disappeared. The Czechs are still along the trans-Siberian railway in the Lake Baikal region and bloody conflicts between them and the Semenov troops are said to be frequent.

The essential weakness of the Kolchak-Semenov opposition to the bolshevik, as of the movements led by Denikine, Yudenitch and others, lies in the fact that all these leaders are recognized as representatives of the reactionary and monarchistic elements. Thus they cannot hold the support of the great mass of the people, who, if not bolsheviks, are social revolutionists and social democrats. For this reason, too, the presence of the Japanese in Siberia has been a constant source of trouble. Correspondents pay high tribute to General Graves for the way in which he has handled the American troops in Siberia in all this mixup.

The conference of the Baltic nations closed with the appointment of a commission to work out a plan for a defensive alliance against soviet Russia. Contrary to expectations, there was not even discussion of the question of making peace with the bolshevik. Lithuania wanted to form an alliance with Estonia and Latvia against Poland, and when this was rejected the Lithuanians virtually withdrew from the conference. It is intimated that Lithuania may make alliances with both soviet Russia and Germany, which would make the position of Poland even more uncomfortable than it now is.

Jugo-Slavia, at this writing, is standing pat on its claims to Fiume and its consequent refusal to accept the settlement of the Adriatic question adopted by Great Britain, France and Italy. It will hold to this position, said a Serbian diplomat, as long as President Wilson supported it, and would then be willing to submit the entire question to the League of Nations. The supreme council on Tuesday sent a note to Belgrade which, it was said, gave the Jugo-Slavs four days to reconsider their refusal, and threatened that if they persisted the principles set forth in the pact of London would be applied to the territories in dispute. This is more even than Italy now is asking.

The long awaited demand on Holland for the surrender of the former German emperor was dispatched by the allies, and near the end of the week the reply was received by the supreme council. Though at this time the reply had not been made public, it was generally understood that in it Holland refused to give up the refugee for trial, considering that this is her international duty and bearing in mind the fact that the Dutch constitution forbids extradition. The Dutch president has feelings of sympathy or antipathy have anything to do with the course adopted by the government. If the sanctity of William's refuge is to be preserved one wonders how Lloyd George can carry out his pre-election promise to bring him to justice. The possibility of trying and condemning him by default has been considered.

Politics, especially in a presidential election year, seizes on nearly everything for its own uses, and that is the fate that has befallen Admiral Sims' scathing criticism of the navy department and its chief, Secretary Daniels. It is being treated as a partisan matter by the senate, whose naval affairs committee has it in hand. The Republicans—excepting Senator Borah—are supporting the admiral, and the Democrats by the same token have rallied to the defense of Daniels. The most sensational charge made by Sims was that on his departure for England a high official of the department said to him: "Don't let the British pull the wool over your eyes. It is none of our business pulling their chestnuts out of the fire. We would as soon fight the British as the Germans."

Secretary Daniels flatly denies having said this, or anything like it, and the admiral said he would tell only the committee the name of the man who did. More important was the general charge that Sims never was given whole-hearted and efficient support by the department in the prosecution of the war at sea, and that the cost of Daniels' policy, or lack of policy, was the loss of many lives and much shipping. All of this was contained in a letter from Admiral Sims to the department, which the admiral made public at the demand of the senate subcommittee investigating the matter of naval decoration awards. The whole scandal will be given a thorough airing, and the Republicans will not overlook the additional material it may give them for the campaign.

The sensation of the week in domestic politics was the announcement of the New York World that it was for Herbert Hoover for president, on any ticket, "on a platform representing the kind of government which Mr. Hoover has exemplified in his public career."

Since the World has been the leading metropolitan organ of the Wilson administration this aroused great interest and some excitement in the Democratic camp. The important question, of course, was whether or not it meant that Mr. Hoover was the choice of Mr. Wilson. No one could answer this officially. Some of the Southern Democrats said they would not favor Hoover because they considered him a Republican; some of the members of the party from the West thought the farmers would oppose him because he put a fixed price on wheat and left cotton soar. Mr. Hoover himself maintained a dignified silence. The secretary of the Bryan league says Colonel House is responsible for the Hoover boom. There has been some talk of Edward I. Edwards, the wet governor of New Jersey, as the Democratic nominee, and there, too, Mr. Bryan comes to the front. He says he would oppose any such movement and would not be a delegate to the convention if Nebraska should instruct for Edwards. Furthermore, if Homer S. Cummings favors Edwards he will never again be national chairman of the Democratic party if Bryan can prevent it. So there!

While the federal prohibition agents are seizing millions of dollars' worth of liquors and the bootleggers on the borders and the moonshiners everywhere are making small fortunes, one wisp of hope is held out to the wets. The Supreme court of the United States has granted to Rhode Island permission to institute in that court original proceedings to test the validity of both the prohibition amendment to the Constitution and the Volstead enforcement act. The suit is brought by direction of the Rhode Island legislature, which refused to ratify the amendment. It is alleged that the amendment is an interference with the state police powers and a violation of the fifth constitutional amendment, and is "unconstitutional and void."

A generally overlooked feature of the prohibition law which is of immense interest to thousands of property owners was brought to public attention last week. This section imposes a fine of not more than $2,000 or a prison sentence of not more than two years on the owners of property upon which are displayed signs or posters advertising liquors which are intoxicating.

The first cargo of radicals deported from the United States was landed in Finland and on Monday of last week the reds crossed the border into Russia, where they were greeted by brawling crowds of their brother bolsheviks. Emma Goldman and Berkman were the last to cross the frozen river between the two countries. Preparations to send over a lot more of that ilk are proceeding and arrests are of daily occurrence. In Chicago William Bross Lloyd, the millionaire communist, and 34 of his fellows were indicted for conspiracy to overthrow the government.

Despite the severest kind of criticism from many eminent citizens of all parties, the majority in the New York assembly insisted on the suspension of the five Socialist members-elect, and they are now on trial before the assembly judiciary committee, charged with disloyalty. Some of the best lawyers the Socialist party can boast are engaged in the defense, but the committee excluded the New York City Bar association committee, headed by C. E. Huxley, from independent participation in the proceedings. That association was among those that condemned the action of the assembly. Morris Hillquit, chief counsel for the defendants, said if the decision was against them it would "let loose the violent revolution which the Socialists have always endeavored to stem."

Defeated for the presidency of France by Paul Deschanel, M. Clemenceau has retired from public life with the plaudits of his associates of the allied nations ringing in his ears. Millerand, a strong man, succeeded him as premier and as president of the peace conference. Clemenceau's downfall was not surprising, for, despite his splendid conduct of affairs during the war, he had a host of bitter enemies in France. The new government does not hold out to Germany any hopes of more lenient treatment than did the old.

MICHIGAN MAN IS SHIP'S HERO

TRAVERSE CITY DOCTOR PRAISED BY SUFFERERS ON SHIP IN DISTRESS.

Members of Wrecking Crew Come From Different Parts of State.

New York.—For his self sacrificing devotion to the half-frozen passengers and crew of the storm-tossed leaking transport Powhatan, Captain George A. Holdday, Traverse City, Mich., was hailed as the outstanding hero of the latest drama of the sea by men, women and children who were taken off the disabled vessel and landed at Hoboken from the rescue ship Northern Pacific.

Working day and night with little sleep, Captain Holdday, who was the only doctor aboard the Powhatan, not only prevented disease breaking out, but he kept those aboard in good spirits by organizing lolly-pop parties, for the children and "sings" for the grown-ups, according to stories by today's arrivals.

Captain Holdday was not among those brought to port on the Northern Pacific. Instead, he stayed aboard the Powhatan to care for the crew. The last word of the ship received here was that a towline from the Canadian steamer Lady Laurier which was towing her to Halifax had snapped and progress is stopped.

Among the passengers landed here that were aboard the Powhatan five days and four nights without heat, light or water were two Detroiters, Paul A. Flanders, of the Pasadena apartments, formerly a lieutenant in the navy, and Lester E. Sapp, an advertising man who formerly had an office in the Chamber of Commerce building. Both men were loud in their praise of work performed by Dr. Holdday.

Two Michigan men also figured in the rescue duty as members of the Northern Pacific crew. One of them, Joseph E. Barr, Detroit and Wiscom, Mich., formerly a lake seaman, was in a lifeboat that was lowered in a choppy sea in the hope of getting to the Powhatan, but weather conditions forced the Northern Pacific to recall the boat before it had gone far.

William McClement, Petoskey, Mich., was among the seamen that lifted the exhausted Powhatan women and children from their boats to the Northern Pacific.

GERMANY WILL HELP ALLIES

Ready Now to Join Hands With Old Enemies to Put Down Soviet Rule.

Berlin.—German troops will be offered to the allies for use against the Russian bolshevik forces if a certain group of Wilhelmstrasse officials succeed in bringing the cabinet around to their way of thinking, according to information secured from authoritative source.

It is said, but without official confirmation, that the definite proposal has been made to the government that it notify the allies that German troops are ready "to fight shoulder to shoulder" with the entente troops against the bolshevik.

Before his forced departure from Germany, Karl Radek, former bolshevik envoy to this country, told friends that he had information that the British were willing to discuss an alliance of forces with Germany to fight the Russian soviet army. According to Radek, the operations, if undertaken at all, were to begin within three months.

Radek boasted that it would not be necessary for the Russians to attack the Poles. He claimed that Poland would become bolshevik of her own accord and that the soviet forces could "walk right through and attack Germany."

Germany is said to be watching the British-Russian policy with some trepidation. It is feared that recent developments indicate that the British may make peace with the soviet government.

Wants Them to Hung.

Ossining, N. Y.—"I am ready to go and I wish they would quit fussing," declared Gordon Fawcett Hamby, the bank robber "with the cold steel nerves," as he paced his cell in the death house at Sing Sing. Hamby is under death sentence for the murder of two clerks in the East Brooklyn Savings bank December 13, 1918, when the institution was held up. Hamby said he would not allow his counsel to ask Governor Smith for a reprieve or a new trial.

Too Much Ice.

Port Huron.—The Great Lakes Towing company tug A. C. Harsing, which has been at Sarnia since January 2, breaking ice for the Pere Marquette car ferry international, has been laid up and the ferry international is using a clear channel from either side of the river. Ice conditions on St. Clair river have been worse this winter than they were when the tug Merick broke ice for the Grand Trunk railway 30 years ago and as bad as two years ago.

Cured of Dropsy, Bronchitis and Erysipelas

Bronson, Mich.—"I wish to acknowledge the great benefit I have received from the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, thinking some one else may try it and be cured as I have been. In Jan. 1877, I was so badly afflicted with bronchitis, dropsy and erysipelas that my doctor had given up hopes of helping me. I was induced by a friend to try the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and after taking it for some time I was entirely cured of all my ailments, and am very grateful."—MRS. MAGGIE A. DEEDS, Route 6.

Lame-Back and Liver Trouble

Eagle, Mich.—"I gladly say I have taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets, all with good results. At one time a few years ago I was in California and I was taken with spinal and liver trouble. I called on a physician and he gave me some medicine but he did not help me. I took Golden Medical Discovery and it helped me so I started for home, which was in Grand Ledge, Mich. I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicines several times since, especially while going through middle life, and I always get relief. Then last spring I was taken with a lame back, it didn't bother me in day-time but I could hardly stand it to lie in bed all night; it was something new for me, I never have the backache. I got a bottle of the 'Favorite Prescription' and a vial of 'Pellets' and before I had taken half my backache left me and I haven't felt any more of it. I recommended the 'Prescription' to my daughter-in-law and she has taken it and says it helps her. Dr. Pierce's medicines are all they are claimed to be, I like them, any way; they always help me."—MRS. J. P. HANER, R. R. 2.

Constipation and Bad-Blood

Adrian, Mich.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. I used the 'Pellets' for a very bad case of constipation, which was so I was troubled for a long time. They cured me, so I am never bothered any more. I used the 'Golden Medical Discovery' for my blood, and found it a splendid medicine as well. I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines."—MRS. JULIA BECKS, 610 Chestnut St.

A New One.

They were still out in the conservatory and Tom had just asked Sally to marry him. She had said, "I don't care if I do," and thus they were engaged. "Tom, dear," she began, "am I the only girl?" "Now, look here, Sally," he interrupted, "don't ask me if you are the only girl I ever loved. You know as well as I do—" "Oh, that wasn't the question at all, Tom," she answered. "I was just going to ask if I was the only girl that would have you?"

Dried Snow.

Little Mary Louise saw snowflakes falling and said to her mother, "Let's hurry and put up our Christmas decorations, it's Christmas." In a little while she went outside to play, but soon returned to the house, for the air was so cold. Her mother noticed something that looked like clay on her shoe, and said to her: "What is that on your shoe, dear?" "The snow dried on there," answered the five-year-old.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

"Heavy strains on my back and being exposed to all kinds of weather, weakened my kidneys," says John S. Shelton of St. Charles, Mo. "The misery in my back was constant and I had to get up several times during the night to pass the kidney secretions. I got no rest night or day and lost twenty-two pounds in weight. My eyes burned as if there were fire in them. I also had dizzy spells and would feel as if I were going to pitch forward. Sharp catches would take me in my back as if someone were driving a sharp knife into my back. My kidneys were so weak I had no control over them and the secretions I was scanty and burned in passage. I had pains in my bladder too. I was discouraged. I tried different remedies but received no benefit. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills and when I did so I was soon relieved of my misery. DRESSING THE SCHOOL GIRL

IT IS a lucky thing for the American public that the women whose intelligence raises them to the responsibility of buying for the great department stores and mail order houses are gifted in several directions. Intelligence in the selection of good styles is a necessary part of their equipment. They cultivate a "sense of clothes" which is another way of describing the art of dressing appropriately—the fine art of dressing correctly. It is true that they must consider in their purchasing a following that will not buy their most tasteful merchandise. But when they make their display and match up their choice of clothes with that of other buyers, we may be fairly sure of seeing the best things that money will buy.

The arbiters of fashion insist that the schoolgirl should be dressed as a schoolgirl. That dress should occupy a very small part of her time and attention while she is in school. That her clothes should be simple and inconspicuous, and that utility and neatness are their important requisites. It goes without saying that they are attractive, for there is a charm about the simple schoolgirl clothes that belongs to them alone.

A fine example of schoolgirl styles for the coming spring is shown in the picture given here, in which a cotton voile with colored satin stripe makes a delightful dress for a junior miss. It has a pretty bodice with a shawl collar edged with narrow lace, a vestee of the voile, three-quarters length sleeves with turned back cuffs. The plain skirt is gathered into the bodice and a short tunic is suggested in it by the simple means of a wide tuck set in on a slope. A wide sash of the voile with bow and ends at the back finish up a dress in which the young girl will look sweet when summer comes. These pretty cottons, simply made, have a freshness and youthfulness that belongs to nothing else. It is best to copy such dresses just as they are, for the things that make them so pleasing to women of the finest taste are subtle things. Accept them, and do not presume to change them.

Negligees Odd and Colorful

She who wanders through the shops in search of negligees is sure to be surprised, interested and tempted. Surprise will follow the discovery of the very wide variety of styles there is to choose from. They prove very interesting to the woman who has not experimented with them; she has a chance to see herself in the trousers and coats of the women of the far East, interpreted in silk, satin, georgette and chiffon, the trousers and jackets of Turkey, the kimonos of Japan and coats of China, the long, graceful draperies of the Empire period and styles from every quarter of the globe.

As it happens the airiest and most delicate of sheer fabrics are less fragile than they look. Crepe, georgette and wide net top lace are used for making many negligees, with the georgette in two plain colors and the lace in cream color. A pretty specimen of this particular style of negligee appears in the picture above.

Just as pretty as these colorful and sheer affairs are coats of taffeta in gray colors, more or less long, to be worn over lace petticoats. They are trimmed with ruchings of ribbon or of frayed taffeta. Very much the same character of negligee appears in very fine cotton crepes from Japan, embroidered in silk floss material matching them in color; they are something between a kimono and a coat. Mandarin coats and silk kimonos, gayly embroidered, hold their place among the luxurious apparel that blooms in the privacy of home.

Speaking of ribbons and laces will naturally lead one to discuss boudoir caps and camisoles. A very handsome specimen of each of these is shown above and they are so well pictured that it will not take long to describe them. The cap is made of chiffon, with puffed crown. A shaped and wired band is extended into two points over the ears.

The camisole of wide lace has a band of light ribbon about the top, veiled with chiffon gathered into a frill and similar bands over the shoulders. Straps of the ribbon pointed at the ends are applied to the lace, and a narrow banding accommodates the ribbon that draws it up at the waist line.

The KITCHEN CABINET

No king or nobility or other person or class can give a government which is best for the people, simply because nobody can give you what is best for you, for that which is best for you is what you work out for yourself. A benevolent monarch can give his subjects everything except the one thing needed—responsibility. The most precious, God-given privilege of a man is his right to make his own mistakes, to stub his own toes and burn his own fingers. Only so he learns and grows.—Dr. Frank Crane.

MISCELLANEOUS DESSERTS.

How to keep the house attractive, the table supplied with appetizing viands, and the members of the household in perfect health has been a problem since the days of Eve. With the increasing scarcity of domestic labor, the question of getting the necessary work done is becoming acute. Good cookery and dainty meals are of vital importance, but no woman who "has a soul above buttons" cares to spend the best part of her time cooking. To simplify our living at less cost of energy without too great loss of the seemingly important things is the need of the day.

It is possible to have wholesome food and attractive desserts made with but little time. As expense must enter into the account of 75 per cent of the American housewife's plans it is not so easy to have things good, inexpensive and easy to prepare, together with variety.

A steamed pudding, which may be made just before dishing up the dinner and allowed to steam 15 minutes, is:

Fifteen-Minute Pudding.—This pudding meets all of the qualifications, is good, attractive in appearance, not expensive and is easy to prepare. Sift a cupful of flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt; add half a cupful of milk; beat well and drop a spoonful into buttered custard cups; add a tablespoonful of two of canned cherries, juice and all, or any juicy rich fruit; add another spoonful of the batter and place the cups in a pan. Pour in boiling water to come up halfway on the cups, cover and cook 15 minutes without uncovering. Serve with cream and sugar, poured round the unmolded pudding.

"It's terrible brave to try to save a girl on a runaway horse: You could do that of course; But did you ever think of trying To keep from crying When you're tired and hungry and cross; You couldn't do that of course."

POTATO DISHES.

Beginning with soup and ending with dessert, one may have potatoes in every course in the meal. One would hardly care for such a meal, but it is interesting to note how valuable the potato is as a food.

Potato Cream Soup.—Take a cupful of boiled mashed potatoes; scald one quart of milk, and two slices of onion in a double boiler. Rub the potatoes through a sieve, and add the milk, removing the onion; put into a double boiler to heat. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, mix and pour some of the hot mixture over the thickening, and cook until smooth. Add to the soup with a little chopped parsley.

Hashed Potatoes.—Chop cold boiled or baked potatoes into small bits. Season with salt and pepper and chopped parsley. For one quart of chopped potatoes, add three tablespoonfuls of butter. Beat the butter and turn in the potatoes; stir until they begin to brown, then add one-fourth cupful of this cream, and set back to brown on the back of the stove. Fold like an omelet, and serve with the brown crust on top. Garnish with parsley. Do not put potatoes through a meat chopper for this dish, as the bits should not be at all mushy. A good hash should always be chopped in the chopping bowl. Meat loaf is much better done so, rather than ground in the meat grinder.

Potato Cake.—Cream together one cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter substitute; add the yolk of an egg and beat again; add one cupful of hot mashed potato, half a cupful of sweet milk or cold water alternately with two cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix two squares of grated chocolate in the hot potato before adding it to the mixture. Add one-third of a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, cloves and grated nutmeg and one-third of a cupful of chopped walnuts. Fold in the beaten white of the egg. Bake in a loaf or in layers. This cake will keep moist for weeks.

Potato Candy.—Bake two medium-sized potatoes, and while hot remove from their skins into a warm mixing bowl. Mash until all the lumps are removed, then add three pounds of powdered sugar, a half cupful at a time. The amount of sugar will depend upon the size of the potatoes. When thick enough to mold add flavoring, nuts, fruit or any color.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENT WITH PASTURE CROPS FOR PRODUCING WOOL AND MUTTON

Sheep Relish Frequent Change of Fresh Forage Crops.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The old dictum of making two blades of grass to prosper where one formerly succumbed has been applied to sheep farming in an experiment conducted by specialists of the United States department of agriculture. A field of 30 acres has been used exclusively during the past four seasons, for producing forage crops to be harvested by sheep. The field is divided into ten plots, and during the recent season every portion grew at least two different crops, while on some of the unit areas three crops were grown and grazed.

Oats and Peas Follow Wheat.

Fall-sown wheat provided the earliest available pasturage in the spring, and after this was exhausted the sheep were shifted to an early spring sowing of oats and peas. Thence they moved to another tract of oats and peas, which they grazed luxuriantly and well until the supply of green stuff was curtailed, when they were transferred to alfalfa and rape pasturage. This medley mixture of green feed furnished good grazing until about the middle of July, when the soy beans were available for pasture purposes.

As a consequence of the intensive utilization of pasture crops for mutton and wool production, this field of 30 acres furnished sufficient feed for 70 ewes and 60 lambs for a 200-day period. The best grazing resulted from a patch of three acres of soy beans, which carried 60 sheep for 30 days with satisfactory results. The system of management followed was to move the lambs and, as far as possible, the old ewes at regular intervals of not less than two weeks from one patch of green feed to another. This practice of moving the sheep frequently to fresh ground, as well as the plan of plowing the land for the subsequent crop, eliminated the danger of loss from stomach worms.

Although the system requires some extra preparation of the land and seeding, as well as shifting of the sheep from one plot to another and providing plenty of water for the mutton makers, it nevertheless, is believed worthy of trial, especially in sections of high-priced farming land where a maximum return must be realized from every acre used.

The Results Applied.

On the basis of the results in this experiment a flock of 200 breeding ewes would require 50 acres of forage crops. It would require the services of two men and one team to produce 50 acres of forage crops, in addition to caring for the sheep. Winter feed for such a flock, together with that for horses, would require 35 acres of similar land, making a total of 115 acres of farm land necessary for the maintenance of a 200-ewe flock under this system. On the basis of the 1919 market prices, the gross income from a reasonably well-managed ewe flock handled in this way would be about $3,000. This figure represents the return of the ewes on 115 acres of land and a year's work of two men and four horses.

There would be a higher expense for seed than in ordinary farming, but the amount of labor required and its distribution throughout the year would afford a very marked advantage in favor of sheep farming as compared with other agricultural activities producing an equal revenue.

HOG STYLES CHANGED IN SOUTHERN STATES

Apparent Aim Is to Expedite
Growth in Best Type.

Farmer Should Not Be Influenced by Fads or Fancies in Selecting and Maintaining Breeding Stock—
No Best Breed.

South of the Mason and Dixon line hog styles are changing, the underlying idea apparently being to eliminate extravagance, to effect intensive economy, to expedite growth in the most profitable types of porkers, to amalgamate, as soon as possible, the good points of the most profitable producers and to concentrate them in the majority of southern herds.

It is undeniable that some breeds of swine do better under certain conditions and with certain feeds and methods of feeding than do others, although there is no outstanding breed which excels, report specialists of the United States department of agriculture. No fads and fancies should influence the farmer in selecting or maintaining foundation breeding stock. Primarily the farmer breeds hogs for profit and accordingly he should work only with utility animals of the most desirable type.

In every breed of hogs there are certain lines of breeding that are deservedly popular because they have been built through generations of careful selection by master breeders who have been successful in establishing the more fundamental qualities. The farmer should keep these facts in mind and should continue such improvement by close culling and proper feeding. The farmer's popular hog should be of a breed that is liked by both feeders and packers, animals that are adapted to all sections of the country and which will thrive and fatten on a large variety of feeds. It is essential that such porkers produce the maximum weight at the minimum cost; that they mature early to the greatest weight consistent with quality and that they inherit the ability to produce an abundance of frame and to make rapid growth.

Broad, high backs with good spring of ribs and full, deep hams denote carrying ability and high-priced cuts. Good strong feed and heavy bone are essential for the support and production of great weight. Long, deep and roomy bodies denote prolific qualities and plenty of pork. Deep chests and bright, open eyes are signs of vigor and energy. Size spells more meat for the hungry world and more money for the southern hog producers who raise and market animals of the type described above.

WINTER WORK FOR FARMERS

Wood Cutting in Cool Weather Does
Not Interfere With Field Crop Operations.

Farmers, as a rule, have too much to do at certain times of the year and not enough at others. Many farmers are unprofitable because their owners have little or nothing planned for winter. Wood cutting can be done at any time, but cool weather favors the rate of production, and in the winter the work does not conflict with that on regular field crops. If cut in winter logs are not subject to rapid drying, nor to deep checking at the ends of the logs, which often occurs in summer-cut logs and appreciably reduces their sale value.

Because of injury from the southern pine bark beetle in the hot season, it is practically necessary to cut pine in the fall and winter months. Damage and loss in summer often come from wood-rotting fungi, including the "bluing" and other staining of wood. For these reasons a good many farmers turn profitably to logging and sawmilling for a few fall or winter months each year. Nearly every kind of wood product can be satisfactorily handled in winter, according to the forest service of the United States department of agriculture.

BEEKEEPERS GO TO SCHOOL

Short Courses Are Now Being Conducted in Several Western States—Others to Follow.

The beekeepers of several states which boast of large honey production are going back to school. Under the direction of representatives of the United States department of agriculture short courses for commercial beekeepers are now being conducted in Idaho, Washington, California and Texas. During the first two months of the new year similar instruction will be given in Ohio, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and New York. There is particular need this season that owners of apiaries have all possible assistance because the shortage of sugar promises to make it difficult to carry the swarms through the winter.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Stock feeding provides steady employment to the farmer.

No animal on the farm succumbs more quickly to disease than sheep.

It is important that the calf pens be placed to avoid too great variations in temperature.

Calves should not be crowded—more than four in each pen. Provide a stanchion for each calf.

The Most Reliable Harvesting and Haying Machines

The Most Efficient Tractors and Power Machines

The Most Popular Plows and Tillage Implements

You know these trade names. Your father and grandfather knew three of them. They knew in their time, and you know today that these names stand for the highest quality farm machinery in the world. McCormick built the first practical reaper, Deering sold the first binder twine and was a good-twine pioneer, and William Parlin was one of the first steel plow pioneers. The lines of harvesting machines and plows started by these farm machine builders have been growing and developing ever since. Other machines have been invented and developed by the same manufacturers, and every new machine and implement has had built into it the years of manufacturing experience and farm knowledge accumulated by McCormick, Deering, Parlin and their successors. Now all these machines and implements have been merged into one line—the International Harvester. The reputation of every machine and implement in this line is the same.

We Sell the International Line

What does this mean to you as a farmer? It means, first, of all that you can buy any farm machine or implement you may need, right here in this town, without taking chances on experiments or implements that might be termed "orphaned" one or two years after you buy them because of the manufacturer going out of business. You can always get repairs for any machine or implement in the International line because the Harvester Company will never go out of business. You are assured of reliable machines because every machine in the Harvester line is tried out and tested under actual farm conditions, before being offered for sale to the farmer. The Experimental Department of the Harvester Company is the most thorough and active institution of its kind.

It means, second, that you can get repairs and repair service on all of these machines through one concern—us. You don't have to go to the bother and inconvenience of trying to get repairs and service from a half dozen or more different companies. You won't be taking chances on expensive delays waiting for repairs during the busy seasons because we are going to carry a big stock of repairs on hand and any repairs that we might not have we can get for you in a hurry by a phone call to the International Harvester branch house.

Tack this advertisement up in your machine shed so that whenever you need repairs for any of your International machines you will know where to go. Also, you will know here to go when you are in the market for new machines or implements of real quality and the highest operating efficiency.

"BORN OF FIRE AND BLOOD"

Officer Tells of Circumstances Under Which Colonel McCrea Wrote "In Flanders Fields."

"In Flanders Fields," to quote the words of Major General Morrison, was composed by the brigade to which Lieut. Colonel McCrea was attached at the time, "was literally born of fire and blood during the bitter phase of the second battle of Ypres."
"My headquarters were in a trench on the top of the bank of the Ypres canal; and John had his dressing station in a hole dug in the foot of the bank. During periods of the battle men who were shot actually rolled down the bank into his dressing station. Along from us a few hundred yards was the headquarters of a regiment, and many times during the 16 days of the battle, he and I watched them burying their dead whenever there was a lull. Thus the crosses, row on row, grew into a good-sized cemetery."
"Just as he describes, we often heard the larks singing high in the air, between the crash of the shell and the reports of the guns in the battery just beside us. I have a letter from him in which he mentions having written the poem to pass away the time between the arrival of batches of wounded, and partly as an experiment with several varieties of poetic meter."
"The unit with which McCrea served was the most advanced of all the allied guns by a good deal, except one French battery, which stayed in a position yet more advanced for two days, and then had to be taken out."
