Chairman Wheeler was unable to get two soldier boys to attend the banquet at Ann Arbor, Tuesday night, as they are all working away from home.

A goodly number of our democratic friends remained through the Republican caucus Monday evening after adjournment the democratic nominees for treasurer and clerk asked Wheeler if he was going to put up the cigars this year. Wheeler replied that he thought some of having an oyster dinner. This was agreed to by the aforesaid Walsh and Gardner, who said, "We are in on that," and appointed a committee of one to assign each their share of the furnishing. Wheeler made the following allotments: Walsh to furnish the oysters, Gardner to furnish the crackers, Wheeler to furnish the water, Fischer to furnish the salt, Reade to furnish the pepper. Reade said he would furnish the pepper all right and on April 5th his opponent would think it was all white pepper. "Go it," said Carr, "I will use cayenne."

SALINE.—Some winter we have passed through. Since November 29, up to March 10, there have been just two mornings at the hour of 6 o'clock when the mercury registered above the freezing point, and those two just barely passed the mark. December 12th the register was 32, and March 10 it stood 34.—Observer.

MILAN.—What promises to be one of the most interesting circuit court cases of the March term is scheduled to begin Saturday when the case of E. W. Flegel versus the Milan council, board of health, health officer, assistant health officer, and the superintendent of schools comes up for a hearing. Flegel has brought action against the defendants, charging that his daughter was kept from attending the Milan high school when she refused to have her throat examined following the influenza epidemic in February. WATERLOO NEWS.

Bernard Beeman of Detroit spent the week-end at his grandparents' home here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dykemaster of Jackson spent over Sunday with relatives here.

The Francisco and Waterloo A. O. O. G. held a union meeting Thursday in the basement of the Salem M. E. church, near Francisco.

The Social club surprised Alva Beeman, Wednesday evening, in honor of his birthday.

Rev. and Mrs. Rhoades took their youngest son, Paul, to Ann Arbor, Thursday, for an examination. Something has gone wrong with one foot and an ankle of the baby.

Mrs. Rose Frinkle held an auction Tuesday.

John William Barber, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Barber, was born in Waterloo, October 25, 1909, and departed this life March 11, 1920, at his parents' home, aged 19 years, four months and 16 days. He leaves to mourn their loss his parents, one brother Milton, a sister Reva, an aged grandfather, and many other relatives and friends.

It was an honest young man of sterling qualities; the beautiful floral offerings and the great concourse of people attending the funeral services being witness of the high esteem in which he was held in this vicinity.

Funeral services were held Sunday, March 14, Rev. Rhoades officiating. Interment in Waterloo cemetery.

Facts for Sick Women

Reliable Information

All American women know of the great success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in restoring to health women who suffered from ailments peculiar to their sex, yet there are some who are skeptical and do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true—if they did, our laboratory would not be half large enough to supply the demand, though today it is the largest in the country used for the manufacture of one particular medicine.

The Facts contained in the following two letters should prove of benefit to many women:

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I suffered with organic inflammation and displacement. When hitting I had such pain and bearing down that I was not able to stand up, and it hurt me to walk or go up or down stairs. I was going to a doctor without any results and he said the safest thing would be to have an operation. I met a lady who told me she had had three operations and was not well until she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I felt better after taking two bottles of Vegetable Compound and I kept on with it until I was cured. I always use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and they are fine. Everything used to turn sour on my stomach and the Liver Pills relieved that."—Mrs. A. R. Rogers, 613 Fargo Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sacramento, Calif.—"I had organic trouble and had such terrible pain and swelling in the lower part of my side that I could not stand on my feet or even get the bed clothes to my side. I gave up my work, thinking I would not be able to go back for months. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it had cured her life as one time, and it put me in a wonderful condition in a couple of weeks, so I can keep on working. I work in a department store and have to stand on my feet all day and I do not have any more pain. I surely recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Bertha J. Parker, 3320 M St., Sacramento, Calif.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record sustained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do. Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends. Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Too Much Appetite may be as dangerous as too little

When the skin is sallow or yellow, the eyes dull, the head aches or sleep broken and unrefreshing, the back aches, or there is a pain under the right shoulder blade—it is an indication that the body is being poisoned by poorly digested and imperfectly eliminated food-waste. A WELL-KNOWN INSTITUTION.

Probably no institution in America is more widely known than Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. Although established many years ago it is today a modern sanitarium, having all the latest facilities for the correct diagnosis of diseases and their successful treatment through medicine or surgery.

It was Dr. Pierce, its founder, who over 50 years ago gave to the world that wonderful stomach tonic and blood purifier, "Golden Medical Discovery," and that famous non-alcoholic medicine for women, "Favorite Prescription."

In his early professional career, Dr. Pierce realized that every family, but especially those who live remote from a physician, should have at hand an instructive book that would teach them something about "First Aid, Physiology, Anatomy, Hygiene; how to recognize different diseases, how to care for the sick, what to do in case of accident or sudden sickness, etc., so he published that great book, the "Medical Adviser," an up-to-date edition of which can be procured by sending 50 cents to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

Later, Dr. Pierce added another link to his chain of good works by establishing a bureau of correspondence to which any one can write for medical advice, without any expense whatever, and if necessary, medicines especially prepared in Doctor Pierce's Laboratory will be sent by parcel post or express for use at home, at a reasonable cost. Thus those who have symptoms of disease need not suffer mental agony fearing that they have some serious ailment, but can have a diagnosis made free by a physician of high professional standing. Write to Dr. Pierce relating your symptoms if you need medical advice for any chronic disease. All letters regarded as confidential.

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

FINDING WEAR OF HIGHWAYS

Instrument Recently Designed and Made to Determine Wear of Concrete and Other Roads.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every user of concrete and other improved highways will be interested in an instrument which has recently been designed and made in the research division of the bureau of public roads, for measuring wear of concrete and other surfaces. It is anticipated that from readings made with this instrument a large amount of valuable data may be collected not only regarding concrete roads, but also concerning brick, macadam, and other types of surfaces. The instrument consists essentially of two bearing plates each 2 inches in diameter, pivoted on uniform joints to a spanner 11½ inches long. In the mid point is mounted a micrometer whose plunger has a travel of 1 inch and whose dial is graduated to read to one one-thousandth of an inch. In order to form a base to which measurements can be referred from year to year, brass plugs are set in the pavement where readings are desired. Readings are taken by resting the bearing plates on the road's surface and allowing the plunger to rest on the base plate of the plug. The instrument is plumbed with the aid of a level and the spanner bar is held parallel to the center line of the road. Other readings may be taken with the bar at right angles to the center line of the road.

An important advantage of this instrument is that accurate data can be acquired rapidly and without interrupting traffic. The base plate in the pavement is protected between readings by covering it with cotton waste and tamping with putty. The brass plugs are readily set in any pavement while it is being laid, and at any future time by drilling holes with star drills and setting the plug in cement grout.

PAY ATTENTION TO ROADSIDE

It Should Be One of First Places by Which Appearance of the Farm Is Improved.

Some farmers evidently consider the roadside along their farms as distinctly separate from and wholly outside of their jurisdiction, and any time or labor expended in keeping it up as so much gratuitously donated to the public. Every farmer should consider the roadside along his farm as deserving as much of his attention as the farm itself. He should consider the road the "front way" to his farm, and instead of its receiving secondary attention, it should be one of the first places by which the appearance of the farm is improved.

MOVEMENT TO BETTER ROADS

State of Maine Votes to Increase Bonded Indebtedness From $2,000,000 to $10,000,000.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Maine, by an overwhelming vote, recently increased the bonded indebtedness of state highways from $2,000,000 to $10,000,000, giving an additional $8,000,000 to be spent on the state road system. This is one of the instances showing a country-wide movement for better highways, as reported to the United States department of agriculture, which administers the federal aid road act.

Roads Not Developed.
That the roads in this country, although greatly improved since the coming of the automobile, are not yet universally developed to the point where they should be was demonstrated during the stress of war.

Save Truck Owners Money.

Truck owners know that good roads not only save them money but the shipper and public as well, because they can make faster time and at a saving in operating expense.

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Frezzone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic!

DOCTOR ADVISED CHANGE OF CLIMATE

Run Down and Lungs Hurt—Stayed Home and Gained 22 Pounds.

"In November, 1911, I had a severe cold and a gripe, which left me with a bad cough. My lungs and shoulder blades hurt so I couldn't sleep and I finally had to give up my job and was ordered to change climate. In April, 1912, I began taking Mils Emulsion. On the second bottle I could see a change. My appetite was better and I commenced to gain strength and weight. Now (August 23, 1912) I have used 23 bottles, have increased 22 pounds in weight and believe I am permanently cured."—W. F. Bourland, Route 5, Wolf City, Texas.

Mr. Bourland was fortunate in commencing to use Mils Emulsion when he did. A run-down system invites disease. Mils Emulsion costs nothing to try. Mils Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a powerful medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Mils Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Mils Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if kidneys feel like lead or bladder bothers.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a deliciously effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

The Man Nobody Knew

By HOLWORTHY HALL

"EVEN STEPHEN"

SYRACUSE.—Dick Morgan of Syracuse, N. Y., a failure in life, enlisted in the Foreign Legion of the French army under the name of Henry Hillard, distinguished by shrapnel. The French surgeons ask for a photograph to guide them in restoring his face. In his rage against life he offers in derision a picture postcard bearing the radiant face of Christ. The surgeons do a good job. On his way back to America he meets Martin Harmon, a New York broker. The result is that Morgan, under the name of Hillard and unrecognized as Morgan, goes back to Syracuse to sell a mining stock. He is determined to make good. He tells people of the death of Morgan. He finds in Angela Cullen a loyal defender of Dick Morgan. He meets Carol Durant, who had refused to marry him. She does not hesitate to tell him that she had loved Morgan.

It was perhaps five minutes before that door was reopened, and during the interval, Hillard had an opportunity to wonder if the doctor had revised his office hours; otherwise, he should now be down in the Physicians' building, receiving patients. It occurred spontaneously to Hillard that both Carol and her father were conceivably harassed by contrition, but as he estimated the extent to which their sorrow might go . . . Judging by Carol's distress of last night, and the potential tragedy of the doctor to-day—he was possessed of gripping emotions. Had they cared so deeply for him, then? Angela and Carol had said so; but he had doubted what he most wanted to believe. Was this additional proof? Had the doctor cared so deeply that in order to hold converse with Dick Morgan's sole executor, he would interrupt the sacred routine of his practice? Too late! Too late to care, too late to sympathize, only the winter garment of repentance was left for them! Hillard couldn't comprehend why, when he had risen this morning so refreshed in mind and body, he should now be so unutterably wearied in both.

Carol returned, followed by a gentleman of sixty; and as the doctor entered, the room was suddenly permeated by an atmosphere of calm, and kindly peace. He was a large man, large of feature, and large of instinct; his forehead was that of an intellectualist; his eyes were those of a dreamer; his chin denoted rugged capabilities, and the stubbornness of unswerving ethics.

"Mr. Hillard?" His voice was pitched low, but its resonance was striking. Thirty years ago the doctor had been a famous baritone; and there was still one church in town which dated its musical supremacy from the choir he had organized and directed.

"Doctor Durant?" The two men clasped hands firmly. Hillard, experiencing the dreaded sinking sensation which came upon him as often as he exposed himself to yet another old acquaintance, hardened as he perceived no recognition in the doctor's eyes. The inevitable reaction left him momentarily weak.

"It was good of you to take this trouble, Mr. Hillard. I appreciate it." Hillard's denial was highly courteous; it was harder to hate the doctor than he had planned.

"No, doctor—it would only have been blameworthy if I hadn't."

"I insist that it's good of you. . . . You knew Dick intimately, I understand."

Hillard nodded.

"Very intimately, sir, considering the length of time." He perceived that Carol was holding the letter lightly folded in her hands; she intercepted his glance, and colored proudly.

"It . . . it did belong to me," she said, subdued. "And I can never thank you enough . . . never."

"My daughter," said the doctor, presently, "has told me the one great fact." He paused, then went on gravely. "I accept it, and it needs very little comment. What most concerns me now is to know the lesser facts. I have some hope, Mr. Hillard, that you can make the lesser seem the greater; and the greater, the less. I want you to clear up the one cloud that still dims our knowledge. I hope you can tell us something about Dick's reasons for doing this thing—for going abroad at all, and for enlisting, and for—"

Hillard winced; the doctor's autopsy on his character was considerably more disconcerting than Mr. Cullen's had been.

"Doctor Durant, I can't think it's fair to put Dick's motives under the microscope like that! Why not forget everything but the attending circumstances to the one great fact, He—"

"I'm not unfair," said the doctor slowly. "I've never been unfair if I could help it, and certainly not to this man, above all others. Here is a case in which a man who left us most unheroically comes back to us, in spirit at least, as a hero. The particular thing he did is a fact. I'm proud of him for it—and so far, for that, and for that only. But it isn't true that by itself alone it made him a hero. And when I said that I'm interested in the lesser facts, I mean that Dick's reasons for going into the war at all may be the proof that he was a hero—and that any physical bravery he may have shown has nothing whatsoever to do with it. Please don't misjudge us. We're not trying to belittle anything Dick did; it's neither fitting nor possible. But what we want to know is where the credit lies—with Dick, a reasoning, inspired, determined man, or with Dick, intoxicated by danger. In the latter case, his heroism would appeal to us as a detached incident, having no relation to his earlier life or to our own; it would be something to bring us pride for that, but for nothing else. In the other case, the knowledge of the why, in addition to the what, would bring us . . . But about Dick?"

"You can be happy, then," said Hillard unhesitatingly, "because he went over, I believe, in the firm conviction that every man has two countries—his own and France."

"Yes!" The doctor sat down abruptly.

"As long as you're interested in what he did before he was wounded—"

"And afterward, Mr. Hillard."

"Rather than that he was hurt, let me assure you that as far as I know, from the first day he landed, I don't believe he thought once about his own misfortune. He had them, I know. But if you've got any manhood in you, you can't think of your own troubles, over there, it's too fearful. The Carrel-Dakin solution heals all sorts of wounds, Doctor Durant, all but the worst wound of all—and that's what every man who has any humanity and any sympathy about him gets when he first sees France. His heart is torn clear out of him. He can't sleep, he can hardly live with his own thoughts. And that quiet resolution you speak about—it's enough if it comes to a man there! I don't care what he had in his mind when he left you; I don't care what it was that led him to go overseas; I don't care what his purpose was when he sailed; I know that when he stood on French soil there wasn't an atom of selfishness or self-pity in him. It wasn't a question of adventure; it wasn't a question of drowsing his sorrows; it was a question of his doing anything and everything he could to help out. Let me tell you something." Hillard sat on the edge of his chair. "It's possible that you never thought of Dick Morgan either as a martyr or a fatalist. Nor do I think he was. But when he was brought to Nonilly there was among his papers a little sort of field diary—I'm sorry it was lost, so I haven't it to show to you, but I saw it often—and under the date of his first tour of duty in the front line trenches was scribbled this, quoted from Rousseau: 'The dead carry to the grave, in their clutched fingers, only that which they have given away.' Doctor Durant, Dick went into this war in the belief that the only way to reclaim his life was to sacrifice it. Does that answer your question?"

There was an utter stillness. It had been a superb action, but Hillard, thinking obliquely of Angela, was only partly content of his business.

"Thank you," said the doctor, and glanced at his daughter. "Yes. He had the making of a splendid man. I knew his parents and his grandparents. His career in Syracuse hadn't nothing to do with his heredity, Mr. Hillard; it was the result of badly chosen environment. He chose it himself, and he had all a young man's interest in competition. But when those temptations were removed, when he was free to revert to his family traditions, why then he could—"

"It would please me a great deal more, doctor, if you looked at him independently and maybe a little less neurologically—if you didn't go so far beyond the actual facts."

"How do you mean?"

"Why," said Hillard, "for one thing, in saying so much stress on his grandparents, Dick was the one who went overseas; his grandparents didn't. And his grandparents didn't go into action on the western front since Stevenson's 'Requiem' at the top of their lungs and knowing that it was mighty appropriate, as Dick did."

"What?" said Carol, straightening.

"What's that?"

"No." The doctor's negative was quiet, but decisive. "A man doesn't rise to heights of glory without some reason for it, Mr. Hillard. But a man can resist his inheritance for a good many years, and suddenly stop resisting and revert to his family type. He can do it voluntarily or involuntarily. It's what we call atavism." He paused and smiled sadly. "The pity of it," he said, "is that in spite of his having failed in everything he tried to do in Syracuse, he would have made us proud of him, sooner or later, if he had stayed on here. I'm positive of that."

"Pity!" Hillard straightened. This was the third time in two days that he had caught the intimation that he could have come home decently and humbly and been forgiven.

"Not that I pity him for what he accomplished, or what it cost him," warned the doctor. "I don't; I was very fond of the boy, Mr. Hillard, but I wouldn't for the world have had him do anything else than what he did. No—but I do pity him because he can never know what we think; because he can never know how much we gladly forget; because he can never know why we are proud of him."

Hillard's pupils were distended.

"You were rather harsh with him, doctor, as I—"

"We were just, Mr. Hillard."

"But if you recall the gist of Portia's speech . . ."

"I do." The doctor regarded him peacefully. "And it's very seldom that mercy is asked to temper justice except after it's become evident that justice is actually going to be just. Let's not deceive ourselves. And let's not put each other in the position either of attacking or defending Dick. It's not the time for that now. He's done all that any man can do, and he was a most lovable boy—most lovable."

Hillard nervously addressed himself to Carol.

"I hope you agree with your father, Miss Durant—that eventually he'd have succeeded in Syracuse?"

"I never doubted it," she said loyally.

And then the three of them fell simultaneously to musing, and for the space of a minute or two there was quiet; the sort of quiet which comes just after the benediction. It was the benediction which Carol had bestowed upon a wretched sinner who sat there wondering how he could ever escape from the tolls of his own cleverness.

"How long are you to be in town, Mr. Hillard?" inquired the doctor, irrelevantly.

"That I can't say, sir. I had no other errand than this."

"You've never been here before? That is, you haven't friends here?"

He had expected this question and prepared for it.

"Several years ago," he said casually. "I came to Syracuse half a dozen times one winter—on business. I suppose I could find my way around even now, if I had to. But comparatively speaking, I'm a stranger."

"You're a business man, Mr. Hillard?"

"I told you he was, dear," said Carol.

Hillard nodded.

"Yes, Doctor Durant. That is—I was. I have no business connections now. That's why my plans are so uncertain."

Again a heavy silence. Hillard was cursing the impetuous haste which had caused him to lie himself into an invulnerable network.

"I'm sorry," said the doctor, rising abruptly, "but I've a consultation at half-past twelve. Thank you again, Mr. Hillard, for coming to us; you've lightened my heart tremendously. I hope we shall see you again before you go."

"I hope so," said Hillard, dutifully. He was whipping his brain to find a way out; but how could he explain those manifold, cruel falsehoods which once he had thought to be his rehabilitation?

The doctor gave him a cordial smile, a parting pressure of the hand, and went out directly, leaving the two young people quite alone.

Hillard, impelled to go and equally constrained to stay, dithered in his vacillation. He was uncomfortable and unhappy, yet curiously enough he had no inclination to depart. He assured himself that he cared not for the snap of his finger for Carol Durant; on the contrary, he was intolerant of her very presence; still he lingered, wishing that he hadn't stultified himself.

"And you really came all the way up here just to be kind to us?" she said.

"Just to be kind to Dick," he corrected.

Carol was winking hard; Hillard sprang to his feet. He could never hear to see a woman cry; it was immaterial to him who she was, or what the circumstance; he was powerfully affected—distracted. His single aim was to console her—it was a selfish aim designed primarily to relieve himself.

"But it's easy to see," he said desperately. "Why he was so anxious to have me come. . . . I have twice as many reasons to envy him now, Miss Durant. . . . I really have. And . . . and, unlike your father, I can pity him, too, for—"

"Oh!" she said, smiling tremulously up at him through the misty veil of her tears. "But you see, Mr. Hillard . . . you're quite mistaken. . . . I wasn't pitying Dick; I was pitying me!"

He bit his lip sharply. No reproach could have gone deeper.

"That was your letter, you said?"

"Oh, yes," she said. "It couldn't have been for anyone else! Thank you so much . . . for bringing it . . ."

He was trying to analyze the emotions which stirred him. He had told himself over and over again that his love for her was numb; and yet here he was . . . unsteadily balanced . . .

He watched her and slowly the blood burned in his cheeks! He tried to order his thoughts, to select his action . . . if he still loved her, he was there to console her; if not . . . ought in all humanity to console her just the same, even if it took another of those inexpressible deceptions. For an instant he was on the point of succumbing to a wild impulse to blurt out the truth and take the consequences . . .

He started; for she had motioned to him—motioned him away. He hesitated . . . was it love, or repentance, or only his desire to see a woman cry? She motioned again, hysterical—Hillard's brain snapped. Syracuse had sung its praise too late. The doctor with his lungs and dissections was too late—Carol herself was too late with tears. His jaws came together; he glanced at her once more and then, in obedience to her gesture, he turned and tiptoed quietly from the room. The front door closed quietly behind him. The danger of succumbing was over now; he believed, permanently; and yet . . .

"Even Stephen!" he whispered as he went down the steps.

CHAPTER VI.

Ordinarily Mr. Cullen was satisfied to bring a single evening paper home with him and when he laid it on the hall table it was generally creased down the financial page; but tonight he brought two, and each of them had wrinkles across the market reports and were folded so as to feature the departments devoted to local news. The Journal had heaped the Herald by two sticks and a subhead, but the Herald had honored Dick Morgan with a kindly editorial and both papers had stated explicitly where Hillard was making his headquarters. Mr. Cullen would have been seriously offended if he hadn't been mentioned at least once in each paper; and this is no more a reflection upon his vanity than the fact that he cherished a lively anticipation for what the Post-Standard was going to say about the case tomorrow morning.

Nevertheless, there was a fly in the ointment—not very much of a fly, to be sure, but still appreciable; and after all, it isn't the size of the invader that counts. Mr. Cullen was generous; Mr. Cullen was hospitable; but Mr. Cullen was also the blindest bit of a snob—not a carping, contemptuous, supercilious snob, but a healthy, hearty, open-spirited snob, frank in his liking for the things he liked—and one of them was to be somebody, and have the neighbors know it. He liked to fraternize with important men; he liked to see his name in the paper now and then; he liked to feel superior—just one harmless little degree more consequential—than his next-door neighbor. And the neighbor, of course, had to share this conviction, or there wasn't any purpose in it.

And Mr. Cullen, with all his ingenious weaknesses for prominence, hadn't known until the evening papers told him so, hadn't even suspected (although now he was trying busily to persuade himself that he had suspected it all along, from one thing and another) that his guest was a mining engineer of international reputation, and independently wealthy to boot. It was enough to annoy any man, whether nervous or not, who prided himself (and most of us do) that he had unusual discernment, and was a Good Judge of Human Nature. And so, when he met Hillard and Angela at the head of the garden he began to fire away pointblank at Hillard; and this was barely after the greetings, and a question as to the state of Hillard's health, and before Angela had found an opportunity to get a word in edgewise.

"Understand you're a mining man, Mr. Hillard," he said, pleasantly. "I used to be," said Hillard. "I've retired. I thought I told you so the first night I was here."

"Oh, yes—you did say something about it, but—" Mr. Cullen laughed with the fullness of one who has uncensored secrets. "It took some of our bright young newspaper crowd to ferret out the facts. You're too modest—that's what's the matter with you!"

As Hillard smiled in deprecation Angela, crowing triumphantly, snatched for the papers.

"Where is it?" she cried. "Where . . . oh!" And relapsed into beatific calm, devouring the none too conservative paragraphs with all her might. The cold-typed repetition of the well-known story soothed her considerably; still, it was for Hillard's and her father's names that she glowered; and as for the panegyric of Morgan, that was only an added garland to the wreath which was already his.

"Russian and English syndicate wasn't it?" asked Mr. Cullen.

"Yes," said Hillard. "English and Russian."

Mechanically, he began to rehearse the technical subtleties which he hadn't expected to find use for within a brace of fortnights. It was well, however, to be prepared; and the time to plant the seed of desire is when the prospect is willing.

He began to fire away.

"Mighty interesting game—mining," said Cullen. "Let's wander down by the fountain; shall we? . . . I don't know why it is, but it sort of fascinates me—guess it does everybody. More romance in it than most lines." Here Angela looked up sharply, and gurgled with wicked satisfaction, and sent a lifted eyebrow signal across to Hillard.

"Yes," said Hillard, "but there's more tragedy, too. I suppose that's the law of compensation getting to work. Big profits call for big risks."

This was for sand in Cullen's eyes; and it had its effect.

"Oh, but the ratio's the same in almost any business, Mr. Hillard, isn't it? It's about the same theory. Savings banks pay three to four per cent, but they never made a man rich yet. But copper has!"

The fascination of a mine for a man.

Uncultivated Philippine Land.

Surveys of the Philippine islands have shown that of the total of 120,000 square miles, the cultivated area is only 14,000 square miles, the remainder embracing 106,000 square miles of commercial forests, 11,000 of non-commercial forests, 14,000 of uncultivated and small islands, and various areas promising mineral products. The cultivated lands include 2,180,000 acres of rice, 1,288,000 of banana or Manila hemp, 880,000 of coconuts, 440,000 of sugar cane, 145,000 of tobacco, 18,000 of mahogany, 28,000 of cacao, and 2,000 of coffee.

On Genius.

Genius gets the world's praise because its work is a tangible product, to be bought, or to be had for nothing. It bribes the common voice to praise it by presents of speeches, poems, statues, pictures, or whatever it can please with. Character evolves its best products for home consumption; but, mind you, it takes a deal more to feed a family for 30 years than to make a holiday feast for our neighbors once or twice.—Holmes.

OUCH! LUMBAGO PAIN! RUB BACKACHE AWAY

Instant Relief With a Small Trial Bottle of Old "St. Jacobs Oil."

Kidneys cause Backache? Not! They have no nerves, therefore can not cause pain. Lateral! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil."

Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" from your druggist and liberally use. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache or lumbago pain.

Tub old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" whenever you have sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism or sprains, as it is absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.—Adv.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people died from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. For the last fifty-three years Boschree's Syrup has been used for coughs, bronchitis, colds, throat irritation and especially lung troubles. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectation in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

in Bay City and to have picked up the boy near Flint. They claimed to be on their way to Chicago, but they were practically penniless, which circumstance aroused the suspicions of I. G. Palmer when they stopped at his garage for gasoline. They were taken to Ann Arbor for investigation.
Several persons have recently inquired regarding the fire districts in Chelsea. The village is divided into four districts and when alarms are given the location of the fire is indicated by one, two, three or four short blasts of the fire whistle following the siren alarm. The dividing streets are Main and its intersections with Park and South streets. Territory to the northeast of that street intersection is in district No. 1; territory to the southeast is in No. 2; to the southwest in No. 3; and to the northwest in No. 4. Thus Freeman's store is in district No. 1; Loeffler & Boy's market in No. 2; A. VanTine's residence in No. 3; and the office of the Michigan Portland Cement Co. in No. 4.
There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable.
Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co.,
Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional rem-

THIS IS LEONARD WOOD

The Man Who Won the Unqualified
Endorsement of Theodore Roosevelt, Greatest American of His Time.

—and the man who should get your vote in the Primaries, April 5th

A vote for Leonard Wood is a vote for Roosevelt's principles, for the very same things that Roosevelt would be advocating if he were alive today.

A vote for Wood is a vote for a candidate whose backers have pledged themselves to see that the voice of the people of Michigan is heard in the state and national conventions. Wood is fighting for the nomination, not merely to gather up delegates to be transferred to some other candidate when the party leaders decide that the psychological moment has arrived.

General Wood, in his public utterances, has shown a thorough understanding of the farmer's problems and a warm sympathy for the farmer. He says: "Our stability rests largely in the agricultural population. The red flag never flies over the house of a farmer who owns his farm. If the American farmers had not played the game as they did, we would have lost the war, because we would not have been able to feed our Allies in the field as well as ourselves. If the American farmers had struck, the Germans would have won the war. The farmers sent their sons to war, and in spite of the shortage of labor they, by tremendously increasing their efforts, gave the world the biggest crop in history. Agriculture is not only the principal source of our wealth, it is the groundwork of our most stable citizenship.

"We must have a department of agriculture conducted for the farmer by men who really know farming from the furrow to the crop. It should be the intention of the national government at Washington to make farming conditions such that there would be fewer tenant farms and more owned farms."

Theodore Roosevelt said of Leonard Wood: "He has made all good Americans his debtors by what he has done."
