

RAILROAD COMPANY WILL FIX SINK-HOLE

Propose To Raise Highway At Track-Pan About Five Feet.

An engineer and a claim agent of the Michigan Central railroad met with the Lina township board, Tuesday, at the sink-hole on the Chelsea-Dexter road, where that highway parallels the railroad's water station, and reached an agreement whereby the road will be repaired and an outlet provided by the railroad company for the overflow water from the track-pan.

It is said that the roadway at that point will be raised approximately five feet, necessitating considerable filling, and that a suitable ditch be built along the south side of the highway to carry away the overflow water.

Temporary repairs have been made by hauling in a quantity of cinders so that the sink-hole is now passable for most vehicles.

CELEBRATED BIRTHDAY.

A fine dinner was served Sunday at noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mohrlok of Lyndon in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Ed. Fennell.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Watts and daughter Ruby, William Harker, Mrs. Mary Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gilbert and son Robert, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Baird and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fennell.

PERFORM HEROIC OPERATION.

Mrs. Leo Merkel of Sylvan is recovering from a recent serious operation. About ten days ago she was taken suddenly ill and Dr. S. G. Bush decided that she had ruptured an abdominal artery and that heroic measures were necessary to check internal hemorrhages. The roads were almost impassable at that time and it would have been impossible to move the patient to Ann Arbor hospitals, so he summoned surgeons from that place and the operation was performed at the Merkel home by the light of automobile headlights, the machines being arranged so that the light was thrown through a window. It is said that a pint of blood was removed from Mrs. Merkel's stomach. The patient is now well on the road to recovery.

Brief Items of Interest in Chelsea And Vicinity. From Nearby Towns and Localities.

STOCKBRIDGE—W. A. Wilson, T. E. Robinson and Ed. Applegate have installed a sorghum mill at the farm of Mr. Wilson and will manufacture sorghum for commercial purposes, selling and grinding. They will grind and press cane and refine the product into syrup, also, for those who grow their own cane and wish it manufactured into syrup.—Brief-Sun.

FOULWILLE—The storm of wind, rain and hail that struck this vicinity about six o'clock Sunday evening, was severe enough to cause considerable anxiety upon the part of many, while all will perfectly agree that the hail stones were the largest ever seen here, several people finding some that measured six inches in circumference.—Review.

HOWELL—The Morans have arrived ready to commence putting in the concrete on the road west from Howell. With the grading largely done last summer the work should progress rapidly. There is certainly need when fourteen autos in one day were stuck in the mud just north of Malachi Roche's in making the detour.—Republican.

FIND THE CAUSE!

It isn't right to drag along feeling miserable—half sick. Find out what is making you feel so badly and try to correct it. Perhaps your kidneys are causing that throbbing backache or those sharp, stabbing pains. You may have morning lassitude, too, headache, dizzy spells and irregular kidney action. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands of ailing folks. Ask your neighbor!

A Michigan Case

Mrs. John McDonald, 1119 Fourth St., Escanaba, Mich., says: "Some years ago kidney trouble made my life miserable. My back was so sore that I couldn't straighten up to save my life and my whole body ached. My kidneys were weak and irregular in action and caused annoying. My hands and feet were swollen and if I pressed my fingers into the flesh a deep red mark remained for quite some time. Six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills soon cured me."

George M. Cohan was cross-examining applicants for parts in one of his new productions.

"Can you dance?" he asked of a young chap who had been waiting an hour.

"Sure," replied the candidate.

"Can you sing?" continued Cohan.

"Well," replied the other, "I can sing as good as you can."

"But I asked you," retorted Cohan, "can you sing?"

WAS BADLY RUN-DOWN FROM PNEUMONIA

Mrs. Washburn quickly regained her strength and flesh.

"I had gripe, followed by pneumonia. It left me with a terrible soreness in my chest, constant pain in my throat and so weak and nervous I could neither eat nor sleep. I had a chill every morning. "One day a young man told me how Mike Emulsion had got him out of bed and built him up after he had been reduced to a skeleton and given up by the doctors. So I tried it. I have gained in strength, appetite and flesh, sleep better than I have for years, am doing all my own work again and feel like a new person."

"The beauty about Mike Emulsion is that it doesn't wear out like most things, and is so pleasant to take. It is a food as well as a medicine and builds up the blood and tissues. It surely put new blood in my veins and I have the healthiest color I ever had."—Mrs. M. Washburn, El Centro, Cal.

It costs nothing to try Mike Emulsion. It will build you up more quickly, more surely than anything else. Mike Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, promotes appetite and puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are usually relieved in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Mike Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 50c and $1.00 per bottle. The Mike Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

IT'S THE OLD, OLD STORY

Tries Stock Market to Cover Up His Theft and Gets in Deeper—Parting With Wife and Child Hardest.

Chicago.—Six months ago Frank W. Belmont was one of the most contented men in Chicago. He was living with his wife and his daughter Ruth and his adopted baby son, Frank, Jr. He was getting $48 a week as head bookkeeper, putting something by, and teaching the baby to say "daddy."

Belmont, in jail, full of misery, told his story.

"A man named Peter Rush of Danville, Ill., Belmont said, 'came to my home one day and said he heard we wanted to adopt a baby. His sister, Julia, was in a hospital in Chicago, he said, and her son was just a month old and healthy and fat, but illegitimate. Wife Becomes Ill.

"We took him, gladly, and then one day we were told that the boy's mother had committed suicide by poison. The child was ours beyond dispute. And we were very happy."

It was shortly after this that Mrs. Belmont became ill. The doctor bills, Belmont said, wiped out the balance in the bank—and then it was necessary that an operation be performed to save his wife's life.

"I had to save her," Belmont said. "I had to pay for that operation. I had to have a nurse to mind that new son and Ruth, my eight-year-old daughter, while my wife was in the hospital."

"I took the company's money, Oh, I know now that it was criminal, but I intended to put it back. But I couldn't. It seemed that all the bills in the world were coming to me, and I had to pay them. I took more money."

"Then I thought I could get money on the stock market—enough to cover up what I had taken. Altogether I took $1,500. I lost it—and I was the most wretched man in the world. Well, I'm here in this cell in the detective bureau. I'm taking my medicine."

Finds Belmont's Note.

Belmont confessed when a note for $249 signed by Belmont was found in the cash box. He asked that his wife be left in ignorance. But the manager thought it better to tell her.

He did better than that. He advanced her funds enough to go to her sister's home in Missouri and take the daughter and the adopted son. Belmont went to the depot with them—just before Detective Thomas Slattery and Dan Gilbert led him to the detective bureau.

"And that was the hardest thing of all," the prisoner said, "that parting. My wife kissed me and cried. My daughter kissed me and laughed, and I hoisted her up the steps."

PLAN UNIQUE FOREST SYSTEM

New Yorkers Aim to Make County One Continuous Park, and Have the Trees Pay Taxes.

To make the leading acre work is the plan of Otsego county, New York, which has started a campaign to plant a forest of 100 acres on the waste lands in each of the 24 townships of that county.

The plans, says the New York Times, are to develop a county system similar to the city park plan, with its harmonized system of connecting boulevards. The project involves the development of a comprehensive highway system.

The forests will be located so that they will serve as green nature signboards along the highways, to advertise to the world that the county has its own forests, owned, planted and maintained by the public for the future generations.

As the trees mature they will provide in the future an income which will mean an actual cash return to serve as an offset against taxation. European towns often pay the cost of operation of their government from their forests, having no taxes, but this requires a greater area of forest than is proposed for Otsego.

It was a dark night and the car was speeding homeward at a terrible rate.

"What road have you taken, James?" cried Mrs. Blithers, as the car jolted her high in the air.

"The regular boulevard, Mrs. Blithers," returned the chauffeur.

"But I never noticed all these thank-you-marks on the boulevard before," protested Mrs. Blithers.

"Oh," laughed the chauffeur, "those were not thank-you-marks, Mrs. Blithers! They were just a few people who couldn't get out of the way."

Whereupon Mrs. Blithers laughed, too. What a droll mistake it was, to be sure!—Pittsburgh Sun.

THERE is an art in making flapjack pancakes, griddle cakes or waffles, call them what you will. But it is an art very easily and quickly acquired if you follow the right recipes.

Here are some recipes for a variety of breakfast cakes that will make grandmother envious. The secret, of course, is Royal Baking Powder.

Royal Hot Griddle Cakes
2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1 1/2 cups milk
2 tablespoons shortening

Mix and sift dry ingredients; add milk and melted shortening; beat well. Bake on slightly greased hot griddle.

Griddle Cakes with Eggs

The MAN NOBODY KNEW OF HOLWORTHY HALL

"ANGELA KISSED ME!"

Synopsis.—Dick Morgan of Syracuse, N. Y., a failure in life, enlisted in the Foreign Legion of the French army under the name of Henry Hilliard. He is disgraced by a photograph of himself in a picture postcard bearing the radiant face of Christ. The surgeons do a good job. On his way back to America, he meets Martin Harmon, a New York broker. The result is that Morgan, under the name of Hilliard and unrecognized as Morgan, goes back to Syracuse to selling a mining stock. He is determined to make good. He tells people of the death of Morgan. He finds in Angela Cullen a loyal defender of Dick Morgan. He meets Carol Durant, who had refused to marry him. She does not hesitate to tell him that she had loved Morgan. Hilliard finds he still loves her and is tempted to confess. Hilliard tempts Cullen, his former employer, with his mining scheme.

"A good principle, too, but—" Mr. Cullen glanced at his watch. "It's dinner time, and more too. We'd better get along up to the house, or the first thing you know, we'll have servant troubles in our midst. And you didn't bring up that subject anyway—I brought it up." He took Angela's arm paternally. "Just as a matter of fact," he said, clearing his throat. "As a matter of fact, Mr. Hilliard—whereabouts did you say this property is located?"

Shortly after dinner Angela, who had fled to the telephone in answer to a peremptory summons, came back complacent.

"Dinner at the Durants' on Sunday," she announced. "All three of us. Very quiet, Carol said. So I accepted—and that means you've got to stay with us two days more anyway, Mr. Hilliard. Do you mind very much?"

"Mind?" Hilliard had risen half out of his chair. His tremendous yearning to see Carol again, and his violent reaction at the prospect, had greatly influenced his voice, which was strident, explosive. The Cullens were laughing aloud at his confusion.

"He's blushing!" cried Angela. "Look at him! Look at him!"

Indeed, he was crimson to the temples. Sunday—forty-eight hours! How he had suffered from that moment until now! To see her again... merely to see her! Business was business, and the farce must go on; no matter what else happened, he must hew out his success; he had ceased to love her, and he had come prepared for guerrilla warfare... but to see her again! To hear her voice! To watch that smile of hers, and remember the tears she had shed for Dick Morgan!

Sunday—forty-eight hours! The Cullens were still laughing at him, and in Angela's soprano there was a note of feminine resentment, but Hilliard's ears were suddenly stone deaf.

CHAPTER VII.

Since Friday night, Hilliard had lived only for Sunday; his whole existence had been turned to Sunday, and when at last the morning dawned, his greatest fear was that he might not live until dinner-time.

On reaching Carol's side, he was both awkward and incoherent; and he failed to derive encouragement from the realization which gradually stole over him, that the Durants had asked a number of other guests to dinner. Armstrong was waiting patiently in the aisle, and keeping closer to Carol than Hilliard liked, and there was also a bright-faced boy of nineteen or twenty who had promptly attached himself to Angela—his name was Waring, and he was the grandson of the patriarchal clergyman, with the head of Moses and the spirit of youth, who presently came down to join the little group, and complete it. So that altogether there were nine people who finally sat down to table; and Hilliard's dream of quiet progress and harbored conversation was shattered in a twinkling.

It was all very homelike, and all very friendly, but to Hilliard, sitting there between Carol and her mother, the occasion was peculiarly acute. He had long since discarded any residuum of his active fears; he was confident in his disguise to the point of recklessness, for he had covered the windings of the trail by an infinite variety of methods; and yet without having any tangible facts to grasp, he was subtly warned to remain on sentry duty over his pose.

He was gratified that the conversation, after one natural enough ebb, was whirled away from the vicissitudes of Dick Morgan, for he had talked his fill on that particular subject. For a time, he amused himself by watching Angela and Waring playing their world-old game across the table; after that, he paid a little polite attention to Mrs. Durant, and to the clergyman; and then snatching an opportunity unlooked for, he gave his kindest smile to Carol, and for an instant took the monopoly from Armstrong. And he had hardly looked down once into her October-brown eyes before the mystery of his restlessness was as clear as crystal, and Hilliard was thoroughly dumfounded, and confused.

It had come upon him, a quarter of an hour ago, as they exchanged their first superficial sentences, that he was lonelier than he had ever imagined, but he hadn't realized, until this immediate contingency, that this sensation had carried over until now. He was prevented, by the very limits of the project which had brought him here, from releasing any of his sincere thoughts; he hadn't comprehended, until he had learned the truth just now by actual experience, that loneliness is nothing but an aggravated state of self-repression. Never in all his life, not even when he had lain for months in hospital in France, had he been as lonely as today, and at this moment, when he was surrounded by people he knew intimately, and when he was enjoined from sharing in their community of mind.

Carol, looking up at him with what wasn't exactly a smile, but was at least a cousin to it—that well-remembered flash of sympathetic interest—Carol spoke to him under cover of the general conversation.

"A penny for your thoughts!" she proffered.

"They aren't worth it," said Hilliard. "I was thinking about myself." He continued to regard her steadily, and he was alarmed to discover that he was losing one of the abilities which had made him so sure of himself. He continued to hold that she had treated him shabbily, mercilessly; but notwithstanding that, as he gazed at her, and perceived the sweet naturalness which was developing out of last week's shock, he was secretly perturbed. In spite of himself, he began to see, as though by camera obscura, dim visions of the past; he was righteously annoyed that they should rise to torment him, and still the visions came.

"But after all that you've been through," she said, "I should think your thoughts about yourself would be extremely interesting!"

"I'm afraid they're rather gloomy. Miss Durant, whenever they touch on what I've been through. And when anything like this gathering here today builds up a comparison... I'm sorry, but I can't always master it."

"You mean the difference between a family over here and a family over there?"

"Exactly," he said. "Down to the last detail—what we eat, and where we live, and what we talk about, and what we think about—everything."

"I've thought of that, too," she said soberly. "But I'll have to confess that it wasn't until you came—it wasn't until after that first night at Angela's—that the great difference came home to me. It's made me feel that it's almost wrong—almost unendurable—that we should be so warm and comfortable, and well-fed, when over on the continent... well, I wonder whether we won't have to pay for this some time?"

It was at this juncture that Mrs. Durant rose; and Hilliard, with keen foresight, cannily guided Carol after her mother into the living room, under for a familiar piece of furniture and pre-empted it; it would seat two people, and no more—there wasn't the slightest use in Armstrong's loitering disconsolately in the neighborhood; it had a maximum capacity of two. Furthermore, it was removed by several feet from the nearest listening post.

He was so close to her that their sleeves touched; he looked into the beautiful eyes which were so clear, so unseeing, and his will swayed perilously. Had he prepared so long and savagely for his requital, only to lose his impetus at almost the first glance of those brown eyes? He reflected that there was nothing to prevent him from being a good salesman, and from renewing his predilection for Carol at the same time. The idea of courting her again, in his false character, was highly dramatic.

"I know you won't misunderstand me," he said, his heart shaking, "and I hope that you won't consider it as too presumptuous—but—the other day you spoke of Dick Morgan as a very dear friend of yours. Miss Durant, I want to do everything in the world I can for you, and he was my dear friend as well as yours. I'm not disloyal to him, or to you, or to myself—but I should like more than I can ever tell you to feel that I had done my utmost to take his place. No one can do that literally—I am not so vain—but I feel, and I have felt from the time we met each other, Dicky would have wanted us to be friends."

"That's—that's wonderfully thoughtful of you," said Carol, softly. "And... and I think he would have wanted that... if he'd known..." Her eyes were suspiciously dim and Hilliard's loneliness dissolved into a great spasm of longing which held him and shook him and left him weak with impotence.

"Then I'll stay in Syracuse," he said abruptly. "Provided—provided you won't be offended if I do have to wait to know you for yourself—just a little selfishly. I'm afraid that isn't very clear—it's difficult to separate it—but you see—"

"Don't try to explain," she said, subdued. "I know how hard all this must be for you—and I think perhaps you need my friendship as much as I need yours."

Before he could reply, there was a flutter of indescribable gracefulness before them. Angela was courtesying in mock obeisance to the floor. Behind her, Waring was watching her possessively.

"If your majesties will wake up half a second," she said, "everybody's going to walk up around the Sedgwick farm tract to get some fresh air. Coming!"

As they stood together, drenched with regret for the confidences that might forever remain unsaid, a maid appeared in the doorway.

"Please, ma'am," she said breathlessly. "It's the Western Union—for Mr. Hilliard."

"Right in my study," called the doctor, hurrying. "Just across the hall. There you are!" and ushered him into the sanctum and considered closed the door.

Despite the urgent summons which the average person feels under such circumstances Hilliard was astonishingly tardy in sitting down to the receiver. For one thing he was still vibrating from his recent stress of passion; for another he knew pretty certainly what the message was going to be, and for a third, he was somewhat emotionally under the spell of the doctor's room. Hilliard had spent a hundred hours in it—pleasant hours, so that involuntarily yielding to its kindly atmosphere, and all that the atmosphere implied, he took time to survey all four walls before he took up the receiver. And after he had listened to the telegram, and ordered a copy mailed to him in care of Mr. Cullen, he took time to survey those walls again, more closely; and this was partly for their intrinsic significance, and partly because his feelings were so fresh and tender that he dreaded to return at once to the gathering which, as a whole, couldn't be expected to defer to them. His eyes fell upon the doctor's desk, wandered and suddenly focussed hard and piercingly. He went over to the desk and slowly put out his hand and lifted up a small photograph in a metal frame.

"Well, I'll be damned!" said Hilliard, just above a whisper. The turning of the doorknob roused him; he wheeled with the photograph still in his hand.

"Hello!" said Doctor Durant, cheerfully. "Get your message all right? What's that you've found? Oh, yes—Dick's picture."

Hilliard gawgled hard, and found that his voice was queerly out of control.

"It's—it's the same one—" "Yes—it's the same as the one you brought back. I've had it there ever since he gave it to me."

He took it gently from Hilliard's hand; replaced it on the desk. "How that boy would have made good if he had lived!" said the doctor, in an undertone. "Well—they're waiting for us."

Hilliard, following him outside, encountered the two Cullens in the hall, and at sight of his florid host, he collected his wits, and resumed his part in the play.

"Oh!" he said. "I—I—that was from one—that was a telegram from the manager of the syndicate, Mr. Cullen; he said it's decided not to try to syndicate any stock, but to hold it ourselves for the long pull—everything's put off for three or four weeks anyway. I'm having a copy mailed to the house—there's some news in it I thought you might like to see."

"Good! That leaves you free, doesn't it? You'll stay on with us then? Don't any no, I insist on it!" "No, I couldn't do that! It's awful kind of you, but—"

"You talk to him, Angela!" laughed Mr. Cullen. "You make him stay."

You've got more influence over him than I have, anyhow. And don't you dare to let him get away without a promise—understand?" He passed on, and left them together.

"You walk along with me, sir!" said Angela, imperially. "And you'd better behave yourself—I'm fierce!"

At the same moment that he looked yearningly toward Carol, who was ahead by the doorway was already captive to the wily Armstrong, young Rufus Waring was glaring belligerently toward Hilliard.

The masquerader smiled in defeat, then smitten with sudden realization of the woman-child clinging to him. He squeezed her arm out of sheer affection.

"Your gallant cavalier'll cover me with horrid welts and bruises for this!" he said warningly. "Don't make him jealous, now!" They were now bringing up the rear of the procession in the hallway.

"I'll make 'em well again," said Angela. "I'm a good nurse, aren't I?"

He was convulsed by her air of conquest.

"By the old-fashioned method?" He could hardly believe that this was the girl he had taught to climb trees, and make slingshots.

"I'll—!" She stopped and blushed. The others were all on the steps; these two were in the dusky vestibule. Waring was frotting impatiently outside.

"Would you?" asked Hilliard. He intended only to tease her; but all at once her head came up, and his could see that her eyes were big and soft and frightened. She was hardly seventeen, and to Hilliard she had never ceased to be the child of two years ago. He bent and kissed her; her lips were trembling, expressive.

"Now we've got to hurry," he said. "Coze dear!"

It was the tone he would naturally use to a child, but he had an uneasy feeling that he had used it to a woman. Children's lips aren't expressive.

And he had another intuition—still more upsetting to him—which was that he had been observed. For on the threshold of the outer door Carol and Armstrong and Rufus Waring, as though turned back to inquire into the cause of Hilliard's and Angela's delay, were standing.

He could not tell, of course, whether they had actually seen him. It was possible that in the dusk of the hallway he had escaped; certainly there was nothing in the manner of any one of the three, when Hilliard joined them, to convince him one way or the other. But he knew that he was in a critical situation; he knew that to any reasonable person who had seen him at that spontaneous little outburst of sentiment, his motives wouldn't appear to be very opaque.

No, the manner of those three who had stood on the threshold was astonishingly casual. Perhaps too casual.

Hilliard frowned, and tried to glimpse their various expressions. Ah! Waring, striding stiltedly ahead, had thunderclouds on his forehead, and as for Carol—

She turned to speak to Armstrong, and Hilliard knew.

For the remainder of the first stage of that walk, he spoke not a word to Angela, who trailed along by his side with God knows what tumults in her bosom. He thought not of Angela, nor concerned himself with the storm he had stirred within her. He was absorbed solely with the puzzle which lay before him, which was to detach Carol as soon as possible, and to explain himself. Otherwise, his reputation was ashes even now.

And, to his unbounded joy, the opportunity came soon—at the end of the road, where the party halted for a moment, to take a referendum as to the route. Armstrong strayed a yard or two too far, and on the instant Hilliard was at Carol's elbow. She said nothing, nor did he; but when the march was resumed, he was beside her—and beating his brains for an introductory remark. He had to convince herself he had been trifling with neither herself nor Angela, and he walked a good furlong before he could devise so much as an opening sentence. At length he cleared his throat.

"I've just decided," he said, "that I'm growing old."

"Yes!" She was immeasurably sweet and distant, and Hilliard's courage faltered.

"I have indeed. I've made a most touching discovery. . . . Do I look grandfatherly, Miss Durant?"

"No; I'd hardly say that."

He made a gesture of gratitude.

"You've earned my permanent thanks. But I am growing old. How do I know? Didn't you ever read Leigh Hunt?"

"Just a little." There was a trace of warmth creeping into her voice. Hilliard held his breath:

Say I'm weary, say I'm sad; Say that health and wealth have missed me; Say I'm growing old, but add— Angela kissed me!

He had spoken the lines magnificently, with the precise humor and pathos which go to make them immortal. "I'm glad she fits into the meter," he said thoughtfully, "because I can understand just how Leigh Hunt felt about Jennie."

"And—how do you think that was?" "Very sensitive," said Hilliard, "and perhaps a little repressed and—decrepit." He smiled reminiscently. "I suppose there are very few things in life that make a man feel more mindful of his own credulity and general worthlessness than to have a child's spontaneous affection." It was the testing venture. She looked at him sidewise.

"More than if it weren't a child?"

"I think so." His tone was faultless. "A woman can make a man feel like Romeo, but it takes a very young girl to make him feel like Lancelot—at my age."

"She is adorable, isn't she?" His heart jumped at her cordial acceptance of his statement. "Only—she's seventeen, Mr. Hilliard."

"I know," he said gravely. "And that's why I'm so conscious of my own senility. Because all that beautiful innocence and ignorance is doomed, Miss Durant—who knows that I'm not the very last person to see it? Today, I'm only a much older man, some one she likes; tomorrow, I may be a man without the 'only,' and the more she liked me, the less she'd show it. But there's been mighty little of that sort of thing for me in the last few years from anybody, and I do appreciate it, and I'm not ashamed of it, either."

"No," she said, "you couldn't be. You're too human." She smiled at him, and he was transported at the proof of her sympathy. "If I were in your place, I'd want to feel the same way about it."

He thanked her in his heart. He had saved both Angela and himself, and held his pristine advantage.

But there was no disputing the fact that he had made an active enemy of Waring, and an alert rival out of Armstrong. He smiled grimly as he looked at the man ahead.

"Mr. Armstrong seems to be very nervous," he said. "Not that I can blame him for wanting to be in my place. On the contrary, I'm sorry for him."

"That shows a very good disposition," she said demurely.

"Perhaps it does, and perhaps it doesn't. I believe every man owes it to himself to get what he wants. If he does, he's a success; if he doesn't—it's his own fault."

As he said this, they came abreast of the others, and Armstrong, who had heard the final sentence, whirled toward Hilliard.

"Regardless of methods?" he demanded.

"Why—to some extent," laughed Hilliard. "Why not?"

Armstrong delayed, so that the two men were a few paces behind the rest of the group. "Is that your regular creed, Mr. Hilliard?"

"My creed isn't composed of words, Mr. Armstrong, but of actions."

They had spoken so quietly that no one perceiving them would have remotely suspected that a challenge had been offered and accepted.

"Actions do speak louder, of course." "Mine," said Hilliard, "will give you no offense. But—I generally get what I want."

"So do I. Shall we shake hands on it?" Armstrong was very affable, but tremendously in earnest.

"With pleasure. I can count on your generosity, I see."

"And I on your courtesy."

"Thank you." He went complacently forward; but inwardly he was steeped in perturbation. The man was so deadly sure of himself. Could it be that he was tacitly engaged to Carol, in spite of what Angela had said, or so nearly on the road to an understanding with her that Hilliard was only making a fool of himself?

Armstrong laughed gently. It was like a dagger thrust in Hilliard's heart.

"One chance in a thousand!"

Walk That Tells Character.

A peculiar walk is that of the long stride with the decided swing of the shoulders. This walk is generally to be seen in authors, actors and artists, and is characteristic of the art world, the man who has ideas of his own, and is quite untrammelled by convention. It denotes independence and, if accompanied by an emphatic planting down of the left foot, a stamp in fact, resolution and determination.

High Prices in Early New York.

During the British occupation of New York in Revolutionary days, the method was to sell in wholesale lots at public auction and to lease revenue licenses to retailers. The best flour then sold for $14 a barrel, bacon at 32 cents a pound and beef at 15 cents a pound. Wages were less than 60 cents a day.

MAY BE BONES OF HEROES

Uncertainty as to Human Relics Recently Found Near the Famous Alamo at San Antonio.

Recently workmen have unearthed in a portion of the Alamo grounds at San Antonio bones which may be those of the heroes of Texas whose bodies were cremated by the victorious hordes under Santa Anna.

No effort was made to gather the bones nor to remove them to the inclosure of the Alamo. They were permitted to remain where they were found; and a garage is to be built over the spot, the ground where the discovery was made being outside the walls and a part of the property which has gone to commercial use.

The bones were found some 200 feet south of the wall of the Alamo; and the inquiry made has not fully developed whether they were those of the Texans or whether they were those of the Indians who were used to build the ancient mission and who formed the colony which the friars gathered about them to till their fields and to provide the food and the feed they required.—Houston Post.

Useful Kerosene.

Homeselves, with but few exceptions, do not properly value kerosene. As a lubricant a drop or two will set things going which refused to go before. As a cleanser it can often be used with great advantage in place of soap and water. Floors can be more quickly and more thoroughly cleaned with a well-oiled mop than with soap and water, leaving a bright, shining surface.

WIND CAVE NATURAL MARVEL

Wind Cave National park, South Dakota, containing 10,500 acres, consists of a series of long, narrow passageways having variations in height and width, and opening into irregular chambers at intervals. There are three principal divisions, the first into which the entrance descends, being a long, narrow tunnel leading southeast. It extends 390 feet lower than the entrance and 230 feet below the surface of the ground above.

The trail then ascends by stairway to the upper level of the cave, and thence through other chambers to the Garden of Eden, the end of this route. From the crossroads on this division there is a branch passage leading to the northeast. Here it joins the third division, northwesterly to the Pearly Gates, parallel to the entrance passage. There are several branches, the largest leading upward into the Fair Grounds, 100 feet higher than adjoining portions of the cave. It is reached through a hole in the roof of a passageway. In the game reserve are buffalo, elk and deer.

The Snyder's have the contract to do the grading on the new road from the Snyder-Lima town line east to the end of the present paved road.

And now we hear considerable "singing" for Leonard Wood will spend too much money in his campaign. This probably originates with the other aspirants who are flooding the country papers with their own political dope which they are asking the publishers to publish free as a matter of general information, and we notice that some of the papers are falling for this cheap scheme of advertising.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured

with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrh Medicine was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years. It is composed of some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrh Medicine is what produces such wonderful results in catarrhal conditions. Send for testimonials, free.

How Diphtheria is Contracted.

One often hears the expression, "My child caught a severe cold which developed into diphtheria," when the fact is that the cold had simply left the little one particularly susceptible to the wandering diphtheria germ. If your child has a cold when diphtheria is prevalent you should take him out of school and keep him off the street until fully recovered, as there is a hundred times more danger of his taking diphtheria when he has a cold. When Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given it quickly cures the cold and lessens the danger of diphtheria or any other germ disease being contracted. Adv.

LEONARD WOOD in asking your support makes a FRANK STATEMENT of where he stands on ALL of the vital issues of the day, not merely on one or two. Read over these twenty-four points in his virile, All-American platform and see whether YOU agree with him on the great majority of them.

WOOD'S PLATFORM

1. National economy at Washington. A budget system.
2. The federal government behind expansion of honest business at home and abroad.
3. Federal suppression of all dishonest business.
4. More friendship and a square deal between capital and labor; capital to pay well, labor to work well; each to be fair toward the other.
5. Removal of the excess-profit tax that is strangling business.
6. More producing, less spending; a saner cost of living.
7. A longer term of years to pay the war debt.
8. America to have a bigger hand in the trade of the world. A powerful merchant marine.
9. More careful sifting of immigrants at Ellis Island and on the other side.
10. Deportation of all the anarchistic Reds.
11. Better housing conditions, to make better family life.
12. Abolishment of child labor.
13. Political equality of women with men.
14. A short term of universal training of youths for national service—not to make America a country of soldiers, but a country of finer citizens.

15. A higher standard of physical morality in men, for happier American homes and healthier children.

16. Fairer pay for school teachers.

17. A national department of public health, at its head a medical man who shall be a member of the cabinet.

18. A national department of agriculture, administered for the farmers by men who really know farming from the furrow to the crop.

19. Fewer tenant farms, more owned farms.

20. The protection of the American government behind an American wherever he may be.

21. A diplomatic service which shall command confidence at home, demand it abroad.

22. Law and order supreme; security of the rights of property; no class legislation.

23. A League of Nations covenant with reservations which will preserve to America the right to exercise in any crisis which may arise the voice of the American people.

24. For ourselves and toward the world: One Flag, one language, one loyalty.

A Vote for Leonard Wood is a vote for a candidate who does not evade any issue. It is a vote for a man whose backers will continue to support him at the National Convention as long as he remains a candidate. Don't waste your ballot on a complimentary vote for a candidate whose support will be switched to some other candidate now unknown to you—One candidate whose name is not on the ballot in Michigan, and about whom you consequently will have no opportunity to express an opinion is acknowledged by Republican Leaders to be the strongest opponent Leonard Wood will encounter at Chicago.

This advertisement is paid for by the Leonard Wood League of Michigan. Fred M. Alger, Pres.; Walter C. Piper, V. Pres.; C. A. Weissert, Sec. & Treas.
