Knights of Pythias Had Big Time.

Sixty members of Progress Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of Jackson were guests of Chelsea Lodge Monday evening. They came down on a special car on the interurban. They were met at the station by the local members, and headed by the life and drum corps, all marched up Main street as far as the Michigan Central railroad and counter-marched to the Maccabee hall, where the visitors gave the amplified third rank work to eight candidates, which was done in nearly perfect form.

After the work at Maccabee hall, all went to Castle hall, where lunch was served.

Following lunch, Arthur Kane, of Progress Lodge, was introduced as toastmaster. Rev. P. W. Dierberger gave some of his impressions of the order, after which "Sunshine" Jones of Jackson, gave several selections on the banjo, accompanied on the piano by Clarence Weller. Frank Titus, of Jackson, made his one-string violin talk, and also gave a whistling solo. Arthur Kane gave a vocal solo and a number of clever impersonations.

George Ward was called upon and had one of his stories ready for the boys. Win. Sterling, chancellor commander of Progress Lodge, thanked Chelsea for its entertainment, and Past Chancellor Blanchard, of Rowena Lodge, of Jackson, made a few remarks.

As it was getting late, the meeting, which was one of the best ever held by Chelsea Lodge.

American Legion to Make Push.

During the week of May 17-22 the Herbert J. McKune Post, No. 31, American Legion, will conduct a membership push, as is being done in the Legion throughout the United States.

Local Post officers have appointed a "push" committee, and during this week they hope to enroll every eligible man in the locality.

Since the American Legion makes no distinction between officers and enlisted men, or between men who served overseas and those who through accident or the course of their duty were forced to do service in this country, it is the logical organization for all the service men, no matter where they served or what their rank.

State Commander Ganser has appointed Clare H. Feen Washtenaw county chairman, and men desiring to join the local Post may enroll at Fenn's stores, Kempf Bank or at Drs. Palmer and Brock's offices.

Holds Travel Checks.

The war department is holding checks for payment of bonus and travel pay for about 180 former Michigan soldiers whose correct addresses cannot be obtained. These men applied for the bonus and travel pay and sent in their discharge certificates. The department granted the claims and sent out a letter containing these checks. Evidently the soldiers have moved as the letters were returned unclaimed. Discharged men who have made such claims should write Col. Fred W. Boschen, Zone Finance Officer, War Department, Washington, D. C., at once. They are entitled not only to the money, but what is more important they will want to get and keep possession of their certificate of discharge from the American army.

Change of Time on the D. U. R.

Time table changes will become effective on the D. U. R., Tuesday, May 18, according to announcement by Supt. A. H. Cady. West bound limited cars are particularly affected. Expresses will leave four minutes earlier east bound, or at 7:30 a. m. and every two hours to 7:30 p. m. The last local car through to Jackson will leave at 12:39 a. m. instead of 12:51 a. m. as at present. The last night car to Detroit will be at 10:25 p. m. and there will be a car at 11:52 p. m. for Ypsilanti only.

CHURCH CIRCLES.

What Are We Christians For?

By Rev. P. W. Dierberger.

If to be a Christian only means a place in the heavenly choir, I fear our Christianity will be a dead and passionless form. Some one said, "A Christian is a person whose great aim in life is a selfish desire to save his own soul, who, in order to do that goes regularly to church, and whose supreme hope is to get to heaven when he dies." Is this your reason for being a Christian? If so, you are poor one. Look at Jesus, "He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," and we are not saved for the purpose of having an easy life now, and finally to be "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease." We are saved for "good works" or for service. The best evidence of our own salvation is the effort we put forth for others. Of "The Puncher" in Harold Begbie's Twice Born Men it is said, "He was not content with the joy of having his own soul saved, he wanted to save others."

We are Christians for the purpose of revealing the Son of God. Thousands will not read the Bible and unless they see Christ in our lives they will never see Him. The Christians are the mightiest sermons either for or against Christ ever preached in Chelsea.

We are Christians for the purpose of revealing the fact that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish but have everlasting life."

We are Christians to reveal the passion of Christ for the souls of men. Forbid it, that we should disappoint those who are looking for the Christ spirit and the Christ life in us.

Red Cross Home Nurse Notes.

Owing to the fact that some people in the townships of Sylvan, Lima, Lyndon and Dexter do not understand or know that these townships provide a public health nurse, who is supported by the Red Cross in these townships, we are publishing a few articles which will explain more fully the duties of the nurse and by whom she may be employed.

Miss Ruth Howe, public health nurse, is located in Chelsea and can be found either at the Red Cross headquarters in the Wilkinson building, or at the residence of Mrs. Ella McNamara, phone 235-W.

Anyone living in the above mentioned townships, whether members of the Red Cross or not, may call on the nurse to help them at any time.

A fee of ten cents to $1 is charged for regular visits, and from $3 to $5 for obstetrical cases. All money paid to the nurse for services is put into the Red Cross fund.

The nurse is provided with an automobile, so that she can make country calls as well as in town.

After the car had been tipped against the bank on the roadside, the battery was broken, the license plates removed, the wiring cut and a number of the parts of the machine removed and taken away. Mr. Bahnmiller notified Deputy Sheriff Martin of his discovery, and on Sunday Arthur Faust and J. E. Weber brought the wreck to Chelsea, and it was placed in Mr. Martin's livery barn awaiting the arrival of the owner.

The VALLEY of the GIANTS

BRYCE AND JULES.

Synopsis.—Pioneer in the California redwood region, John Cardigan, at forty-seven, is the leading citizen of Sequoia, owner of mills, ships, and many acres of timber, a widower after three years of married life, and father of two-day-old Bryce Cardigan. At fourteen Bryce makes the acquaintance of Shirley Sumner, a visitor at Sequoia, and his junior by a few years. Together they visit the Valley of the Giants, sacred to John Cardigan and his son as the burial place of Bryce's mother, and part with mutual regret. While Bryce is at college John Cardigan meets with heavy business losses and for the first time views the future with uncertainty. After graduation from college, and a trip abroad, Bryce Cardigan comes home. On the train he meets Shirley Sumner, on her way to Sequoia to make her home there with her uncle, Colonel Pennington. Bryce learns that his father's eyesight has failed, and that Colonel Pennington is wishing to take advantage of the old man's business misfortunes. John Cardigan is despairing, but Bryce is full of fight. Bryce finds a burial mound hidden across his mother's grave. He goes to dinner at Pennington's on Shirley's invitation.

"I'm afraid I do, my dear," the Colonel admitted with his best air of hearty expansiveness. "I'm afraid I do. However, Mr. Cardigan, now that you have—at least, I have been so informed—taken over your father's business, I am hoping we will be enabled to get together on many little details and work them out on a common basis to our mutual advantage. We lumbermen should stand together and not make it hard for each other. However," he concluded, "let's not talk shop. I imagine we have enough of that during the day. Besides, here are the cocktails."

With the disposal of the cocktails, the conversation drifted into a discussion of Shirley's adventures with a salmon in Big Lagoon. The Colonel discoursed learnedly on the superior sport of muskellunge-fishing, which prompted Bryce to enter into a description of going after swordfish among the islands of the Santa Barbara channel. "Once I was fishing at San—"

The butler appeared in the doorway and bowed to Shirley, announcing that dinner was served. The girl rose and gave her arm to Bryce; with her other arm linked through her uncle's she turned toward the dining room.

Just inside the entrance Bryce paused. The soft glow of the candles in the old-fashioned silver candlesticks upon the table was reflected in the polished walls of the room—walls formed of panels of the most exquisitely patterned redwood burl Bryce Cardigan had ever seen. Also the panels were unusually large.

Shirley Sumner's alert glance followed Bryce's as it swept around the room. "This dining room is Uncle Seth's particular delight. Mr. Cardigan," she explained.

"It is very beautiful, Miss Sumner. And your uncle has worked wonders in the matter of having it polished. Those panels are positively the largest and most beautiful specimens of redwood burl ever turned out in this country. The grain is not merely wavy; it is not merely curly; it is actually so contrary that you have here, Colonel Pennington, a room absolutely unique. In that it is formed of hick-eye burl. Mark the deep shadows in it. And how it does reflect those candles!"

"It is beautiful," the Colonel declared. "And I must confess to a personal pride in it, although the task of keeping those walls from being marred by the furniture knocking against them requires the utmost care."

Bryce turned and his brown eyes blazed into the Colonel's. "Where did you succeed in finding such a marvelous tree?" he queried pointedly. "I know of but one tree in Humboldt county that could have produced such beautiful burl."

For about a second Colonel Pennington met Bryce's glance unwaveringly; then he read something in his guest's eyes, and his glance shifted, while over his benign countenance a flash spread quickly. Bryce noted it, and his quickly roused suspicions were as quickly kindled into certainty. "Where did you find that tree?" he repeated innocently.

"Rondeau, my woods-boss, knew I was on the lookout for something special—something nobody else could get; so he kept his eyes open."

"Indeed?" There was just a trace of irony in Bryce's tones as he drew Shirley's chair and held it for her. "You are fortunate to have such a woods-boss in your employ. Such loyal fellows are usually too good to be true, and quite frequently they put their blankets on their backs and get out of the country when you least expect it. I dare say it would be a shock to you if Rondeau did that."

There was no mistaking the veiled threat behind that apparently innocent observation and the Colonel, being a man of more than ordinary astu-ness, realized that at last he must play his cards on the table. "Yes," he said, "I would be rather disappointed. However, I pay Rondeau rather more than it is customary to pay woods-bosses; so I imagine he'll stay—unless, of course, somebody takes a notion to run him out of the country. And when that happens, I want to be on hand to view the spectacle."

Bryce sprinkled a modicum of salt in his soup. "I'm going up into Township nine to-morrow afternoon," he remarked casually. "I think I shall go over to your camp and pay the incomparable Jules a brief visit."

Again the Colonel assimilated the hint, but preferred to dissimulate. "Oh, you can't steal him from me, Cardigan," he laughed. "I warn you in advance—so spare yourself the effort."

"I'll try anything once," Bryce retorted with equal good nature. "However, I don't want to steal him from you. I want to ascertain from him where he prepared this burl."

"He wouldn't tell you."

"He might. I'm a persuasive little cuss when I choose to exert myself."

"Rondeau is not communicative. He requires lots of persuading."

"What delicious soup!" Bryce murmured blandly. "Miss Sumner, may I have a cracker?"

The dinner passed pleasantly; the challenge and defiance between guest and host had been so skillfully and gracefully exchanged that Shirley hadn't the slightest suspicion that these two well-bred men had, under her very nose, as it were, agreed to be enemies and then, for the time being, turned their attention to other and more trifling matters. A sprightly three-cornered conversation continued for an hour. Then the Colonel, secretly enraged at the calm, mocking, contemplative glances which Bryce ever and anon bestowed upon him, and unable longer to convince himself that he was too apprehensive—that this cool young man knew nothing and would do nothing even if he knew something—rose, pleaded the necessity for looking over some papers, and bade Bryce good-night. Foolishly he proffered Bryce a limp hand; and a demon of devilry taking possession of the latter, he squeezed it with a simple, hearty earnestness, the while he said:

"Colonel Pennington, I hope I do not have to assure you that my visit here this evening has not only been delightful but—er—instructive. Good-night, sir, and pleasant dreams."

With difficulty the Colonel suppressed a groan. However, he was not the sort of man who suffers in silence; for a minute later the butler, leaning over the banisters as his master climbed the stairs to his library, heard the latter curse with an eloquence that was singularly appealing.

CHAPTER VII.

Colonel Seth Pennington looked up sourly as a clerk entered his private office. "Well?" he demanded brusquely. When addressing his employees, the Colonel seldom bothered to assume his pontifical manner.

"Mr. Bryce Cardigan is waiting to see you, sir."

"Very well. Show him in."

Bryce entered. "Good morning, Colonel," he said pleasantly, and drizzled throat out his hand.

"Not for me, my boy," the Colonel assured him. "I had enough of that last night. We'll just consider the hand-shaking all attended to. If you please, have a chair; sit down and tell me what I can do to make you happy."

"I'm delighted to find you in such a generous frame of mind, Colonel. You can make me genuinely happy by renewing, for ten years on the same terms as the original contract, your arrangement to freight the logs of the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company from the woods to tidewater."

Colonel Pennington cleared his throat with a propitiatory "Ahem-um!" Then he removed his gold spectacles and carefully wiped them with a silk handkerchief, as carefully replaced them upon his aristocratic nose, and then gazed curiously at Bryce.

"My dear young friend! I must protest at being asked to discuss this matter. Your father and I have been over it in detail; we failed to agree, and that settles it."

"I did not expect you to agree to my request. I am not quite that optimistic," Bryce replied evenly. "I thought that possibly, if I reopened negotiations you might have a reasonable counter-proposition to suggest."

"I haven't thought of any."

"I suppose if I agreed to sell you that quarter-section of timber in the little valley over yonder" (he pointed to the east) "and the natural outlet for your Squaw creek timber, you'd quickly think of one," Bryce suggested pointedly.

"No, I am not in the market for that Valley of the Giants, as your idealistic father prefers to call it. The possession of that big timber is an advantage I expect to enjoy before I acquire many more gray hairs. But I do not expect to pay for it."

"Do you expect me to overpay you as a bonus for renewing our hauling contract?"

The Colonel snapped his fingers. "By George," he declared, "that's a bright idea, and a few months ago I would have been inclined to consider it very seriously. But now—"

"You figure you've got us winging, eh?" Bryce was smiling pleasantly.

"I am making no admissions," Pennington responded enigmatically. "—nor any hauling contracts for my neighbor's logs," he added.

"I suppose I'll have to abandon logging in Township nine and go back to the San Hedra," Bryce sighed resignedly.

"If you do, you'll go broke. You can't afford it. You're on the verge of insolvency this minute."

"I suppose, since you decline to haul our logs, after the expiration of our present contract, and in view of the fact that we are not financially able to build our own logging railroad, the wisest course my father and I could pursue would be to sell our timber in Township nine to you. It adjusts your holdings in the same township."

"I had a notion the situation would begin to dawn upon you," the Colonel was smiling now; his handsome face was gradually assuming the expression pontifical. "I'll give you a dollar a thousand feet stumpage for it."

"I'm afraid I can't accept that offer. We paid a dollar and a half for it, you know, and if we sold it to you at a dollar, the sale would not bring us sufficient money to take up our bonded indebtedness; we'd only have the San Hedra timber and the Valley of the Giants left, and since we cannot log either of these at present, naturally we'd be out of business."

"That's the way I figured it, my boy."

"Well—we're not going out of business."

"Pardon me for disagreeing with you. I think you are."

"Not much! We can't afford it."

"My dear boy, my very dear young friend, listen to me. Your paternal ancestor is the only human being who has ever succeeded in making a perfect monkey of me. When I wanted to purchase from him a right of way through his absurd Valley of the Giants, in order that I might log my Squaw creek timber, he refused me. And to add insult to injury, he spouted a lot of rot about his big trees, how much they meant to him, and the utter artistic horror of running a logging-train through the grove—particularly since he planned to bequeath it to Sequoia as a public park. I will not renew your logging contract. That is final, young man. No man can ride me with spurs and get away with it."

"Oh, I knew that yesterday."

"Then why have you called on me today, taking up my time on a dead issue?"

"I wanted to give you one final chance to repent. I know your plan. You have it in your power to smash the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company, acquire it at fifty per cent of its value and merge its assets with your

"I Will Not Renew Your Logging Contract."

Laguna Grande Lumber company. You are an ambitious man. You want to be the greatest redwood manufacturer in California, and in order to achieve your ambitions, you are willing to ruin a competitor; you decline to play the game like a thoroughbred."

"I play the game of business according to the rules of the game; I do nothing illegal, sir."

"And nothing generous or chivalrous. Colonel, you know your plan of a shortage of rolling-stock is that the contract for hauling our logs has been very profitable and will be more profitable in the future if you will accept a fifty-cent-per-thousand increase on the freight rate and renew the contract for ten years."

"Nothing doing, young man. Remember, you are not in a position to ask favors."

"Then I suppose we'll have to go down fighting?"

"I do not anticipate much of a fight."

"And I'll begin by running your woods-boss out of the country."

"Ah-h!"

"You know why, of course—those burl panels in your dining room. Rondeau felled a tree in our Valley of the Giants to get that burl for you, Colonel Pennington."

Pennington flushed. "I defy you to prove that," he almost shouted.

"Very well. I'll make Rondeau confess; perhaps he'll even tell me who sent him after the burl. Upon my word, I think you inspired that dastardly raid. At any rate, I know Rondeau is guilty, and you, as his employer and the beneficiary of his crime, must accept the odium."

The Colonel's face went white. "I do not admit anything except that you appear to have lost your head, young man. However, for the sake of argument, granting that Rondeau felled that tree, he did it under the apprehension that your Valley of the Giants is a part of my Squaw creek timber adjoining."

"I do not believe that. There was malice in the act—brutality, even; for my mother's grave identified the land as ours, and Rondeau felled the tree on her tombstone."

"If that is so, and Rondeau felled that tree—I do not believe he did—I am sincerely sorry, Cardigan. Name your price and I will pay you for the tree."

"You can't pay for that tree," Bryce burst forth. "No pitiful human being can pay in dollars and cents for the wanton destruction of God's handiwork. You wanted that burl, and when my father was blind and could no longer make his Sunday pilgrimage up to that grove, your woods-boss went up and stole that which you knew you could not buy."

"That will be about all from you, young man. Get out of my office. And, by the way, forget that you have met my niece."

"It's your office—so I'll get out. As for your second command," he snapped his fingers in Pennington's face—"foxy!"

When Bryce had gone, the Colonel hurriedly called his logging-camp on the telephone and asked for Jules Rondeau, only to be informed by the telephone operator that Jules was in the green timber with the choppers and could not be gotten to the telephone in less than two hours.

"Do not send for him, then," Pennington commanded. "I'm coming up on the eleven-fifteen train, and will talk to him when he comes in for his lunch."

At eleven o'clock, and just as the Colonel was leaving to board the eleven-fifteen logging-train bound empty for the woods, Shirley Sumner made her appearance in his office.

"Uncle Seth," she complained, "I'm lonesome. The bookkeeper tells me you're going up to the logging-camp. May I go with you?"

"By all means. Usually I ride in the cab with the engineer and fireman; but if you're coming, I'll have them hook on the engine. Step lively, my dear, or they'll be holding the train for us and upsetting our schedule."

By virtue of their logging-contract with Pennington, the Cardigans and their employees were transported free over Pennington's logging railroad; hence, when Bryce Cardigan resolved to wait upon Jules Rondeau in the matter of that murdered Giant, it was characteristic of him to choose the shortest and most direct route to his quarry, and as the long string of empty logging-trucks came crawling off the Laguna Grande Lumber company's log-dump, he swung over the side, quite ignorant of the fact that Shirley and her precious relative were riding in the little caboose in the rear.

At twelve-ten the train slid in on the log landing.

"Where's Rondeau?" Bryce asked. The engineer pointed to a huge, scowling man approaching across the clearing in which the camp was situated. "That's him," he replied. And without further ado, Bryce strode to meet his man.

"Are you Jules Rondeau?" he demanded as he came up to the woods-boss. The latter nodded. "I'm Bryce Cardigan," his interrogator announced, "and I'm here to thrash you for chopping that big redwood tree over in that little valley where my mother is buried."

"Oh!" Rondeau smiled. "Wiz pleasure, M'sieur." And without a moment's hesitation he rushed. Bryce backed away from him warily, and they circled.

"When I get through with you, Rondeau," Bryce said distinctly, "I'll take a good man to tend you to your meals. This country isn't big enough for both of us, and since you came here last, you've got to go first."

Bryce stepped in, feinted for Rondeau's jaw with his right, and when the woods-boss quickly recovered, ripped a sizzling left into the latter's midriff. Rondeau grunted and dropped his guard, with the result that Bryce's great fists played a devil's tattoo on his countenance before he could crouch and cover.

"This is a tough one," thought Bryce. His blows had not, apparently, had the slightest effect on the woods-boss. Crouched low and with his arms wrapped around his head, Rondeau still came on unflinching, and Bryce was forced to give way before him; to save his hands, he avoided the risk of battering Rondeau's hard head and sinewy arms.

Already word that the woods-boss was battling with a stranger had been shouted into the camp dining room, and the entire crew of that camp, abandoning their half-finished meal, came pouring forth to view the contest. Out of the tall of his eye Bryce saw them coming, but he was not apprehensive, for he knew the code of the woodsman: "Let every man roll his own hoop." It would be a fight to a finish, for no man would interfere; striking, kicking, gonging, biting, or choking would not be looked upon as unsportsmanlike; and as Bryce backed cautiously away from the huge, lithe, active, and powerful man before him, he realized that Jules Rondeau was, as his father had stated, "top dog among the lumberjacks."

Rondeau, it was apparent, had no stomach for Bryce's style of combat.

He wanted a rough-and-tumble fight and kept rushing, hoping to clinch; if he could but get his great hands on Bryce, he would wrestle him down, climb him, and finish the fight in jig-time. But a rough-and-tumble was exactly what Bryce was striving to avoid; hence when Rondeau rushed, Bryce side-stepped and peppered the woodsman's ribs.

Suddenly two powerful hands were placed between Bryce's shoulders, effectually halting his backward progress; then he was propelled violently forward until he collided with Rondeau. With a howl of triumph, the woods-boss's arms were around Bryce, swinging him until he faced the man who had forced him into that terrible grip. This was no less a personage than Colonel Seth Pennington, and it was obvious he had taken charge of what he considered the obsequies.

"Stand back, you men, and give them room," he shouted. "Rondeau will take care of him now. Stand back, I say. I'll discharge the man that interferes."

With a heave and a grunt Rondeau lifted his antagonist, the pair went crashing to the earth together, Bryce underneath. And then something happened. With a howl of pain, Rondeau rolled over on his back and lay clasp-

"Rondeau Will Take Care of Him Now."

ing his left wrist in his right hand, while Bryce scrambled to his feet. "The good old wrist-lock does the trick," he announced; and stooping, he grasped the woods-boss by the collar with his left hand, lifted him, and struck him a terrible blow in the face with his right. But for the arm that upheld him, Rondeau would have fallen. To have him fall, however, was not part of Bryce's plan. Jerking the fellow toward him, he passed his arm around Rondeau's neck, holding the latter's head as in a vise with the crook of his elbow. And then the battering started. When it was finished, Bryce let his man go, and Rondeau, bloody, sobbing, and semi-conscious, sprawled on the ground.

Bryce bent over him. "Now, damn you," he roared, "who felled that tree in Cardigan's redwoods?"

"I did, M'sieur. Enough—I confess!" The words were a whisper.

"Did Colonel Pennington suggest it to you?"

"He want ze burl. By gar, I do not want to fell zat tree."

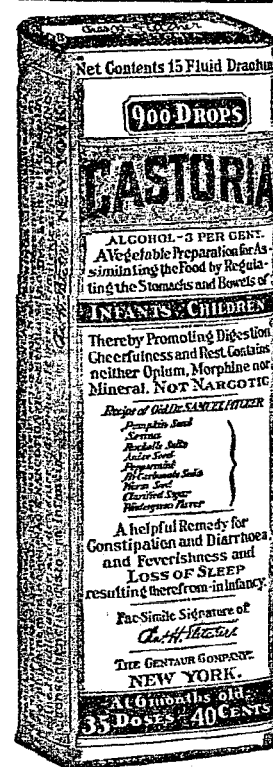

"That's all I want to know." Stooping, Bryce seized Rondeau by the nape of the neck and the slack of his overalls, lifted him shoulder-high and threw him, as one throws a sack of meal, full at Colonel Pennington.

"You threw me at him. Now I throw him at you. You damned, thieving, greedy, hypocritical scoundrel, if it weren't for your years and your gray hair, I'd kill you."

"You coward! To hurt my uncle!"

Great Wine Cellar in Roumania. The most capacious wine cellar in the world is owned by the Roumanian government. A railway tunnel 2,000 feet long could not be used for the purpose for which it was intended because of inferior construction, so it was leased to a wine dealer, who turned it into a storehouse for wines.

NOVEL HOUSES OF WORSHIP

One Missionary to Eskimos Made Use of Seal-skins and Another Employed Only Snow.

One of the queerest churches ever known was built by a missionary on Blackhead Island, in Cumberland sound. Finding that the Eskimos had no place in which they could meet for religious services, the missionary started to build a church of the skins of seals, no wood being available. The skins were sewn together and stretched over "siders" of whalebone, empty provision tins serving as seats.

The cold at one time became so severe that for many days the Eskimos of Blackhead Island were unable to procure food for themselves or for their animals. One night dogs made their way to the strange church edifice and began consuming it, with the result that when morning came there was not a skin left. The whalebone ribs alone remaining to show that there had ever been a church.

Another missionary in charge of the spiritual welfare of the Eskimo tribe, built his church entirely of snow. Sent, pulpit, altar and interior equipment were made of snow, and in the matter of warmth no stone-built church could beat it.

The Wild Cat Eighty-first division, from Florida and North and South Carolina, was moving up to the front line trenches. An engineer from another division stood by the roadside trying to figure out the instincts of their left shoulder. Unable to stand the suspense any longer, he called, "Hey, buddy, what's that thing on your arm?"

"That's a wild cat," shouted back a mountain buck, "and we're prowlin' for Jerries tonight."

A few days later the same prowling buck was on his way back and was again asked about his zoo insignia.

"That's a wild cat," he murmured, "but, personally, I'm a d—tame one."—The Home Sector.

HE REMEMBERED THE LAW

Boy Scout's Explanation Somewhat Disconcerting in That It Implied So Much.

The boy scouts were telling their scoutmaster of some of the good turns they had done during the last week. He was having this done for the benefit of one of the city school teachers who was visiting the meeting. One of the little scouts said, "I helped an old lady across the street."

The next little scout looked at the visiting teacher, who happened to be his teacher, and who also was in the early thirties. "I brought my teacher a pitcher of well water when she was not feeling well," he told the scoutmaster.

The teacher smiled. "Why didn't you say you helped another old lady?" she asked.

The retort that came back staggered her. The little scout said sweetly, "A scout is courteous."—Indianapolis News.

Demonstration for Suffrage in Japan

GARDEN OF EDEN WANTS NURSES

American Church Crusaders Are Hampered by Lack of Medical Skill.

CALL FROM "GARDEN OF RACE"

Arabs Show Willingness to Accept What Formerly They Fought—Mesopotamia Is Completely Changed by World War.

New York.—Wanted: Doctors and nurses for the Garden of Eden. The call comes from the "Garden of the Race," the land watered by the Tigris and the Euphrates—Mesopotamia. And the need stands between American crusaders and the answer to their prayers for 30 years.

For decades the Garden of Eden and all the vast expanse of desert, steppe and fertile coast land that is Arabia have flamed with the fanaticism of pagan and of Moslem tribes. For 30 years the mission workers among these Arabs, notably the Arabists of the Reformed Church of America, have prayed for a means to penetrate this barrier and reach these wild tribesmen. And they have prayed for a change in the spirit of the people.

Prayers Are Answered.

To both prayers have come answers. An economic, social and religious study of the country now being conquered by the Interchurch World Movement as a means to making practicable a closer co-operation of American Evangelical churches in their common tasks, shows that Mesopotamia has been completely changed by the world war and that all Arabia has been affected. The survey shows, too, that medical work is the best and in many cases the only possible method by which the initial contact may be established between the pagans and Moslems, on one side, and the crusaders of the cross, on the other.

And now, when the Arabs show a willingness to accept what formerly they fought—when unparalleled opportunities for service are offered the crusaders—they are helpless for lack of doctors and nurses.

The finest hospital of the Reformed church mission is standing idle, reports the Interchurch World Movement survey.

And the survey reveals more than the need of medical men and women. There is a shortage of workers, both foreign and native.

Large Unexplored Territory.

Arabia, the survey shows, contains the largest unexplored territory in Asia—possibly in the world. It has a total area of 1,230,276 square miles and it lies in the southeastern part of the great peninsula. The crusaders of the cross have been limited to the eastern coast and the vicinity of Eden.

Hajaz, the Moslem "holy land" where lie Mecca and Medina, has no missionaries. Hadramaut, with a population of 500,000, is untouched. There is not a single mission station far inland.

At the hour of opportunity, created by the world war, the call comes from the crusaders, through the Interchurch

World Movement survey; first for more doctors and nurses for the Garden of Eden and the Arabian interior; and then for more workers.

On the basis of what the survey has revealed, the Interchurch World Movement is shaping a program for the co-operative effort of the Protestant churches in America to win the mount tribes of Arabia, and the present dwellers in the garden, to the ideals of Christianity.

SCOTCH GO WILD ON U. S. RYE

Constable Says Late Boze Importations Are of the "Shock" Variety.

Greenock, Scotland.—American rye whisky now being imported into this country is said to be of the "shock" variety by the chief constable here.

The effects of prewar whisky, he says, even when it has been bottled for three years before being sold at retail, was nothing in character to those of some of the present-day whiskies, which only recently made their appearance here.

"Whatever their composition is," the officer declares, "their effects are terrible. They not only poison, but madden, and leave persons nervous and depressed after the intoxicating effects have passed away."

These whiskies are known locally as "snake-bite."

LONDON WOMEN DRINK

Common Sight to See Them Imbibe Liquor in Public.

Many Under 21, Without Any Escorts, Test Merits of Restaurant Wine Lists.

London.—It is no unusual sight in London nowadays to see a young girl with her hair in a plait ordering wine in restaurants or in public houses, or venturing into a wine house for sherry or burgundy. London blames this condition on the war, when London women, deprived of male escorts, had to go on exploring trips alone and discover the merits of the wine lists.

By this it should not be imagined that it is a usual thing with all the young girls of London to drink wine with their meals or to drink it at all. However, it is only necessary to make a survey of the restaurants, the wine houses and public houses in the West End to discover many girls less than eighteen years of age there taking stout or wine. Many of these places discourage custom from girls who are unattended by men or older women, and this is sending them into the restaurants, where they can obtain wine with their meals. Indeed, in London today girls of eighteen may be seen drinking liquors which not very long ago one seldom saw a woman under thirty years of age drinking.

A social worker discussing this situation in the Daily Chronicle declared that it should be made impossible for a woman under twenty years old to buy liquor.

"Probably the desire of young girls for wine arises from bad feeding," she said. "Many business girls arise so late in the morning that they have not time for a good breakfast before they start for work. At luncheon time they feel tired and out of sorts, and then they think that they need a stimulant. What they really need is better food, outdoor exercise and plenty of rest. Perhaps I am old-fashioned, but I don't like to see girls with their hair down ordering wine in restaurants."

New Leg While You Wait.

Cincinnati.—While George Alexander, aged seventy, was watching a parade he slipped and fell, breaking his leg. The police patrol was called and he was removed, not to a hospital, but to an artificial limb factory, where a new leg was fitted.

Home in Chicken Coop O. K. After Life in Flat

Chicago.—Discovery of a family of nine persons living along with their fowls in a chicken coop—all that the tornado left of their home—was made in Belvidere. When Ted Cross of Belvidere started to move them to more habitable quarters, the family raised walls of protest.

"We don't mind living in our chicken coop," explained Gustav Kraft, head of the family. "You see, we lived in a Chicago flat once."

Now the touts and trinket sellers and ragged bootblacks approach their prey with marked diffidence. A single sharp refusal usually suffices to turn them off. They drop the trail immediately they see that no business is to be done.

Food for the Judicial Intellect.

London, Ky.—Should fathers of girls have their rocking chairs strong enough to hold two people? That was the question involved in a $6 suit here. A father sued a young man for that sum for wrecking a rocking chair when the girl sat on her beau's lap. The father recovered damages in the magistrate's office, but Judge Laker reversed the decision, holding the chair was not as strong as it should have been.

Church Dodgers Take Notice.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

All common things, each day's events. That with the hour begin and end. Our pleasures and our discontents, Are rounds by which we may ascend. —H. W. Longfellow.

QUICK BREADS.

Hot muffins, gems, biscuits or griddle cakes are enjoyed at almost any meal.

Corn and Rice Muffins.—Take two cups of buttermilk, one cup of white cornmeal, one teaspoonful of soda, a half teaspoonful of salt, one egg, one-half cup of cream and cold boiled rice. Mash the rice, add salt, egg, cream, then the buttermilk mixed with the soda, then the meal. Bake in buttered muffin pans in a hot oven.

Fruit Corn Muffins.—Take two cups of yellow cornmeal, one cup of flour, two tablespoons of sugar, a pinch of salt, two tablespoons of baking powder, one teaspoonful of melted butter, two eggs well beaten, one and one-half cups of milk, and one cup of fruit. Dates, prunes, eggs or other fruits may be used. The fruit should be cut fine. Bake in well-greased muffin pans twenty minutes.

Butter Bread.—Take two cups of sweet milk and buttermilk, one cup of white cornmeal, half a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of melted butter and three beaten eggs. Boil the milk, add the meal very slowly, then the salt and butter and cool. Add the eggs and a tablespoonful of milk in which the soda is dissolved. Bake in buttered pan in a moderate oven.

Popovers.—Take one cup of flour, one egg unbeaten, one cup of milk and a pinch of salt. Butter the gem pans and place in a hot oven. Mix all the ingredients together, stirring hard with a wooden spoon. When the pans are hissing hot pour in the batter. Fill each half full. Bake in a hot oven until well puffed and golden brown. Cover with a paper and finish baking. This recipe makes a dozen popovers. These may be made for dessert by dropping a piece of banana, a few blueberries, fruit or jam into each cup of batter, which will rise and cover the fruit in baking. Serve with sirup or fruit sauce.

Charleston Muffins.—Beat together one cup of sugar and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Add two eggs beaten very light, a half teaspoonful of salt, a grating of nutmeg, and one cup of milk. Sift in two cups of flour and three teaspoonsful of baking powder. Bake in hot buttered muffin tins in a hot oven.

A Half-Pound Cake.—As a pound cake is large for the small family here is one which cuts the quantity in half: Take one scant cup of butter, one and three-fourths cups of sugar, two cups of flour sifted three times with one-half teaspoonful of baking powder. Cream the butter, add the sugar and a whole egg unbeaten, beating well; then add four more in the same manner. Beat well and bake in a slow oven. Use care in measuring the butter. It should not be packed in the cup.

Peanut Butter Biscuit.—Sift three cups of flour with six teaspoonsful of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt; add half a cup of butter substitute, one cup of peanut butter and one cup of evaporated milk. Sift the flour with the dry ingredients and cut in the fat, then add the milk slowly until the dough is ready to handle. More milk may be needed, depending upon the flour. Roll and cut with a small biscuit cutter. Brush the top with milk and bake in a hot oven fifteen to eighteen minutes.

"Say did you ever hear Nightingales sing. Hear them at twilight make wood and glades ring; Hear them as high in some treetop say, did you ever hear Nightingales sing?"

WHAT TO HAVE FOR BREAKFAST.

Medical authorities recommend a glass of water taken the first thing on rising and if the alimentary canal needs extra flushing—a pint of hot water with half a teaspoonful of salt will be found especially beneficial.

A normal salt solution is not absorbed and passes through the body in an hour or less, removing impurities in its wake.

A cheap, wholesome and especially nutritious dish for growing children is whole wheat. Take it fresh from the granary, wash and soak over night then cook until it is reduced to a gelatinous mass. Serve with top milk and sugar. Enough of the wheat may be cooked for several days if kept in a cool place. There is something very appetizing about this dish; young and old ask for it again and again.

Griddle cakes, muffins, gems and hot breads of various kinds are all popular breakfast breads.

"Little by little the time goes by— Short if you sing through it, long if you sigh. Little by little—an hour, a day, Gone with the years that have vanished away; Little by little the race is run, Trouble and waiting and toil are done."

TWENTIETH CENTURY HASH.

Have six medium-sized potatoes baked. With a spoon carefully remove the potato, leaving the rest of the skin unbroken. Season the potato with one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of cream; salt, pepper to taste, stirring lightly with a fork; do not mash the potato. Add one cupful of any kind of chopped beef that has been moistened with gravy, stock and Worcestershire sauce. Fill the skins with this mixture, letting it rise a little above the top. Put a piece of butter on each and heat in the oven. Grated cheese may be used instead of the meat.

Surprise Biscuits.—Make a biscuit dough as soft as can be handled, put it lightly, roll into a thin sheet, and cut with a biscuit cutter. Have ready one cupful of well-seasoned meat that has been moistened with gravy, stock or milk. Form into sandwiches by spreading the meat lightly on half of the biscuits and cover with the other half, pressing them together at the edges. Bake twenty minutes in a hot oven. This recipe will make nine sandwiches. Pour over a brown gravy and serve hot.

Minced Beef With Potato Border.—To two cups of well seasoned mashed potato add the yolks of two eggs. Beat until light and creamy. Form this mixture into a border on a chop plate or flat baking dish. Score the top. Season two cups of any kind of cold chopped beef with a teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of minced parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Add enough stock to moisten well, place the meat inside the border and brown lightly in a hot oven.

Roast Beef, Mexican Sauce.—Reheat slices of cold roast beef, cut very thin, in the following: Cook one onion finely chopped in two tablespoonsful of butter five minutes. Add one red pepper, one green pepper and one clove of garlic, each finely chopped; add two tomatoes or the same bulk canned. Cook fifteen minutes, add one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, celery salt and salt to taste.

"Just buckle in with a bit of a grin. Then take off your coat and go to it. And start in to sing, as you tackle the thing. That couldn't be done—and you'll do it."

WAYS WITH CHEESE.

Cheese is such a concentrated food, with little or no waste, that it is, even at a high price, cheaper than less expensive protein foods.

Hot Cheese Sandwiches.—With a biscuit cutter cut circles from very thin slices of close-textured bread. Lay very thin sliced pieces of cheese between the bread to form sandwiches. Brown lightly in hot butter in a frying pan. Serve hot.

Luncheon Biscuits.—Have ready some very thin slices of cheese. Bake a pan of baking powder biscuits and, immediately on taking them from the oven, break open and spread lightly with butter and lay a slice of cheese between each. Cover with a warm napkin and serve promptly. It is necessary to have everything ready and work quickly so that the heat in the biscuit will melt the cheese.

Cottage Cheese Salad.—Take any quantity of cheese needed, season well with onion juice, salt, cayenne and paprika; add a finely shredded or minced green pepper and serve on lettuce with a thick boiled dressing.

Cheese With Brussels Sprouts.—Make a cupful of white sauce; add one cupful of cooked sprouts and, when well heated, add one-half cupful of grated cheese. Remove from the fire as soon as the cheese is melted. Serve on squares of buttered toast.

Tomato Rarebit.—Strain the seeds from a cupful of stewed tomatoes, pressing through all the pulp, and simmer until reduced to half a cupful. Melt a tablespoonful of butter; add one-half cupful of grated cheese and stir until the cheese is melted. Add salt and cayenne to the tomato and blend this mixture with the egg before adding the hot cheese. Remove from the heat as soon as the egg is stirred in and serve on slices of toasted rye bread.

Cheese and Celery Salad.—Cut crisp white bits of celery into small pieces, sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and serve on lettuce with French dressing.

Griddle cakes, muffins, gems and hot breads of various kinds are all popular breakfast breads.

GIVEN PRIVILEGE IN WAR

Channel Islanders for Centuries Were Not Forced to Take Part in Britain's Conflicts.

For over two centuries the Channel Islands were allowed to remain neutral in any war that England might undertake. This singular privilege was granted to them by Edward IV, and was not revoked till the reign of William and Mary. It was granted as a reward for the loyalty of the islanders, whose commerce with the neighboring coasts of Brittany and Normandy was constantly being interrupted by the numerous wars. Even the pope joined in enforcing the right, and by a bull dated 1483, Sixtus IV threatened to excommunicate any one who violated the order. On the whole, it was fairly rightly observed, and when a Guernsey vessel was taken in the channel by a privateer of Mordak, the islanders with their boat were released, but a few Englishmen on board, with their merchandise, were captured. The privilege does not seem to have been of any great commercial value, for when it was withdrawn the islanders made more money than before by selling their vessels out as privateers.

New Test for Dyes.

The fading effect of light has been standardized and is made use of in a new invention for the testing of coloring made use of in textiles, wall paper and similar materials. A powerful lamp is made use of with specially designed electrodes consuming about 2,800 watts. Provision is made for testing about 40 samples at one time and as the samples are being exposed a portion of each is shielded for the purpose of comparison after the test.

CHASTENED BY THE WAR

Old Travelers Find Port Said Much Changed City.

Gateway to East Has Been Cleaned Up and Is Now Safe and Nearly Respectable.

Port Said.—Old travelers come ashore and smile sadly. New travelers plunge into the straggle of curio merchants with surprise and disappointment. Port Said, like the rest of the world, has been changed by the war. Port Said, to be quite frank, has been cleaned up.

Time was when a brief saunter through the ramshackle bazaar meant a terrific battle with touts. Shady gentlemen of all nationalities, most of them known to the police of two continents, piled their disreputable trades with impunity. An incredible amount of rubbish was carted away by tourists in memory of a few hours' stay. Murder was a pastime after dark, and many sinister stories were told in the smoking rooms of departing liners of Port Said's wicked inhabitants.

Now this gateway to the East is safe and nearly respectable. The hand of the A. P. M. has been laid in no uncertain manner on the underworld which was the real Port Said. Deportations ended the town of its international rogues and vagabonds. A passport control second to none in effectiveness keeps a tight grip on the polyglot population. Murder, even routine robbery, which was a staple industry on steamer days, is discouraged by the representatives of British rule.

Gone, too, is the atmosphere of piracy and pillage maintained by drunken guides and other varieties of profiteers. They were wont to seize on amiable and inquisitive tourists with the persistence of a leech. They would extract money by entreaties, argument, threats, even violence.

TO SMILE OR NOT TO SMILE.

A writer in a New York paper having expressed a dislike for the habit of wearing a continuous smile, newspaper discussion has arisen over the subject. A general preference for smiles is indicated. One enthusiast insists that the smile should be cultivated, saying, "It is one of those things that will make life worth living and will make one bear up among the manifold ills and troubles that infest this sordid world around us." Each of these persons is right within limitations. To a good many people the perpetual smile, the "smile that does not rub off," is exceedingly irritating. They refuse to consider it expressive of the inward feeling of its wearer, for it is not truly human. In their belief, to be forever cheerful and the smile must at times, at least, be an affectation, an outward pretense. Moreover, even if genuine it does not always harmonize with their own feelings, and habitual smilers are sometimes passed by on the other side with even more readiness than the gloomy citizen is avoided, says Indianapolis Star. On the other hand, a bright, sincere smile is likely to meet the common approval.

These are changing times. Many years ago men went from the buggy repair business into the bicycle business. Later they went from the bicycle business into the automobile business, and now they are going from the automobile into the truck business, and after a while they will go from the truck business into the dying machine business. We note that one of our old-time railroad station agents has resigned his position to become the manager of a company which will do truck transportation in and out of Memphis. It is a great country for change and yet every change is an index of marvelous development.

The war department announces the military strength of the United States to be 19,000,000 men. The military weakness of the United States may be found in the orgy of culture-like profiteering that the entire country revels in when it faced a life-and-death crisis, says Houston Post. This nation needs a kindergarten course in "Money; Its Nature and Its Functions."

Like the accommodating chameleon, which changes its color to that of the fabric on which it is placed, the public daily has to readjust itself to new and strange conditions. It is to be hoped, however, that the public will not suffer the fate of the chameleon which "bit itself" when placed on a piece of Scotch plaid.

Changing ships to oil burners is already in progress to the extent of a saving of 249,000,000 tons of coal a year. Straws show the direction of the wind. Men who throttle the life of the nation will ultimately find that the nation is not helpless.

The United States imported 49,235,179 pounds of wool valued at $21,573,569 in September. Chief among the many countries contributing to this total was Argentina, which shipped 25,156,412 pounds valued at $10,934,358 to the United States.

Paris is making plans to use the power of the Rhine in supplying it with electric lights. What could be more of a humiliation to the Germans than to have the glorious German Rhine harnessed as the commercial slave of their bitter foe?

Government investigation shows that overcoats, suits and heavy underwear ought to be cheaper this year than last. We know they ought to be. Our only kick is that they're not, and the investigation doesn't help us a bit.

The Scotch rallied to the support of the wearing of the kilts when new uniforms were suggested, with vigor and success. Certainly, the military picturesqueness of the day would suffer if the kilts were removed from it.

One of a labor leader's most difficult responsibilities arises when a number of his followers start for a strike and he feels in all conscience and good sense bound to lead them the other way.

Another thing that the old man doesn't understand is why he has a sore throat and can't speak above a whisper while his daughter who faces a blizzard with a bare chest hasn't a sniffle in her sniffer.

The former emperor and empress of Austria, who are reported to be financially embarrassed, are living in an apartment. Thus doth the lack of kale make the whole world kin.

The woman who constantly imagines that some wicked man is going to flirt with her is in the least danger of all.

BREVITIES

Jackson—Jackson has a new policeman, Robert Good, having been appointed to the force last week. We refrain from making any comments on the appointment of a man with that name.

Jackson—Among the applicants for a marriage license Saturday was Isaiah Chandler, aged 81, a farmer of Millbrook, Mich. He has been previously married four times, but has the courage to embark again on the matrimonial sea, with Mattie Reynolds, 54, who has been married once before. —Jackson News.

Hillsdale—Taxpayers of Hillsdale have been notified of a six-mill assessment to assist the American Legion in raising $25,000 for the purchase of one of the handsome homes in the city and to aid in remodeling it to make it a community center. The taxpayers are advised of their assessments, but the payment is voluntary, the assessment being made in order to save an canvass and spread the drive more equitably over the city.

Ann Arbor—Official census figures, given out in Washington, concerning Ann Arbor's population show there are 19,516 residents there at this time. This figure does not, however, include the student population, estimated this year at close to 10,000. The net gain for the city in the past ten years when the last census was taken, is 4,699, regarded as a healthy, substantial growth. The 1910 census gave Ann Arbor a population of 14,817, the gain being 31.7 per cent at this time.

Jackson Not all of our boys are devoid of a sense of the olden time gallantry, though it does seem at times as if it was entirely extinct. I witnessed, Wednesday, a manifestation of this and it was as exhilarating as it is rare. A youth, on his way home from the high school, came down Jackson street, whistling merrily, without a thought or care. As he reached Main street he came to an old lady feebly struggling with two heavy suitcases in her effort to reach an east-bound car which she had signalled to stop while the automobiles and heavy trucks barred her passage. Instantly the boy dropped his school books onto the sidewalk, rushed to her side and lifting his cap politely, raised his hand to stop a reckless auto driver, seized the grips, deposited them on the car platform and graciously took the lady's arm and assisted her aboard. The grateful, bewildered woman with a smile that shone tried to find words to thank him, but the boy again touched his hat, renewed his whistling, gathered up his books and serenely proceeded homeward. It was beautiful. —Saturday Evening Star.

It's moved into a restricted neighborhood we have. One of those neighborhoods where ye have to build a $10,000 house? Not so bad as that. But we had to get rid of the goat.

PROOF FROM JACKSON

Jackson Citizens Speak Out Publicly.

In Jackson we find that people are praising Doan's Kidney Pills as highly as here in Chelsea. Being so near by, the statement of a Jackson resident is of particular interest. Chelsea people will do well to profit by the experience of J. McAllister, city fireman, 207 N. Waterlon Ave., Jackson, Mich. He says: "I suffered from dull, nagging backaches and soreness across the small of my back. My kidneys acted irregularly and the secretions were unnatural. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and the backaches and other troubles soon left me."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. McAllister had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Stiff? Sore?

A lame back, a sore muscle or a stiff joint often is considered too lightly by the sufferer. It should be remembered that backache, rheumatic pains, stiffness, soreness, sallow skin and puffiness under the eyes are symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble—and these certainly should not be neglected.

Foley Kidney Pills

help the kidneys eliminate from the system the poisonous waste and acids that cause these aches and pains. They act promptly and effectively to restore weak, overworked or diseased kidneys and bladder to healthy, normal condition.

J. E. Simmons, 400 E. 5th St., Portland, Ore., writes: "I was troubled with back ache and urinary trouble. I tried Foley Kidney Pills and will say that I highly recommend them to any one troubled in that way, as they are excellent."

An Interesting Story

The evolution of the telephone pole, once a seedling, then a towering tree in the wilderness and now bearing the wires that carry the messages of millions, is material for more than an every-day story. The cutting, the trimming, the hauling, rafting and drifting over the white rapids and across still lakes, all this is unusually interesting.

This year we will use thousands of these towering trees—straight cedar poles—and thousands of crossarms to help maintain and expand your telephone service. Does the lifting of the receiver bring to you the thought of what all this means in money and effort? In 1915 these poles cost $5.43 each and today they cost $13.05.

The hire of the woodman and white-water burler, the tools they use, the hauling to the railroad, the freight charges, the setting up and equipping of the pole for your service, all cost greatly more now than in 1915.

This is only an instance of how our costs have grown out of all proportion to our income. These poles, the crossarms, the wire and the labor, by the way, are Michigan products and your service is operated by a Michigan company, headed by Michigan men. Michigan business is largely dependent upon the telephone.

Stranger Injured at Francisco.

Tuesday, when the 12:23 limited cars, running a double header, passed through Francisco, a stranger from Freeport, Ill., driving a new Ford touring car, ran into the front car of the limited and was whirled back, the automobile turning turtle with the driver pinned beneath. Men ran to rescue the stranger, who was found to be quite badly cut up, but it was not thought he was seriously injured. He was taken aboard the limited car to a hospital in Ann Arbor. No blame was attached to anyone, as the driver of the car could not see the interurban car on account of buildings and strangers have little chance of seeing the street car track until fairly upon it. The driver had slowed down for crossing the Michigan Central tracks when the limited, not under full momentum from its stop at the switch just west of the road crossing came from behind buildings just in front of the automobile. The motorman stopped his car just three pole lengths from where his car was struck by the automobile. The interurban crossing is a bad one for people acquainted with the ground, and still worse for strangers who do not know of the two roads running parallel. There is a danger sign but no hell at this crossing of the D. J. & C. Railway.

USE OF CAVALRY IN BATTLE

Roman and Greek Charioteers Were Formidable Foemen—German Tribes Disdained the Saddle.

In the old days when the Romans and Greeks fought furious battles, the charioteers drove their cars in all directions, hurled their javelins, and by the din and clatter of horses and wheels commonly threw the ranks of the enemy into disorder, and, making their way among the squadrons of the enemy's cavalry, leaped down from their chariots and fought on foot. The charioteers then withdrew, little by little, from the fight, and placed their chariots in such a way that if they were hard pressed they could readily retreat to their own side. Thus in battle they afforded the mobility of cavalry with the steadiness of infantry. Daily practice enabled them to pull up their horses when going at full speed on a steep slope, or run out on the pole and stand on the yoke, and to get nimbly back into the chariot.

With the introduction of cavalry in the later Iron age came larger horses, but their use for this purpose seems to have been restricted to isolated areas. There is no doubt that the west German tribes, as late as the campaign of Caesar in Gaul, used only the shaggy pony. It is said in cavalry actions they held it disgraceful and slothful to use any kind of saddle, and instead of charging in squadrons they dismounted and fought on foot. As far as England is concerned, the art of riding seems to have been introduced by the Normans. The Saxons appear to have been but indifferent horsemen.

NOT A FEMINE ATTRIBUTE

Idea That Skirts Especially Pertain to the Weaker Sex Is Completely Misleading.

If there is one thing presumably certain on this earth, in the opinion of most of us, it is that skirts are essentially feminine, and that the special feature of masculine attire is a bifurcated garment. But nothing is further from the truth. To this day the majority of the male element of the human race, so far as it wears clothes at all, is skirted. And in past times, not so very long ago, a gown down to the feet was the correct wear of respectability in civilized Europe. An anecdote told of St. Louis, king of France, illustrates this well. That monarch was the stoutest of warriors, a man whom no one knowing anything about would dream of accusing of being effeminate, but on one occasion he seriously offered to exchange costumes with a richly dressed female relative who had blamed him for wearing the unpretentious garments he usually affected, which she said were unsuitable to a king. But she thought his gown was too plain for her, so declined the offer. Now, it is impossible to imagine a man like Louis even suggesting such a thing if the dress of men and women had not been practically identical, except for war and hunting. Indeed a glance at old pictures confirms this impression.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

State Preferential Primaries Fail to Settle Presidential Nominations.

WOOD HAS MOST DELEGATES

Johnson's Popular Vote the Largest—Knox, Whose Peace Resolution, Is Up in Senate, Talked of as Compromise Candidate—Poles Defeat Bolsheviks.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

The state presidential primaries have nearly all been held; the feverish race for delegates is about over. And now every one is free to guess who will be the nominees of the national conventions, and there is not much more to base guesses on than there was before.

On the Republican side two developments stand out: Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood has captured more instructed delegates than any one else, and Senator Hiram Johnson has been accorded the largest popular vote. Running a fairly strong third in both particulars is Governor Lowden of Illinois. But the deliberate plan of the party managers has been carried out, and no candidate will go to the Chicago convention with anywhere near enough votes pledged to nominate. The result in the Coliseum will be brought about by skillful dickering, unless the convention can be stampeded, which is improbable.

The two most important primaries of the past week were in California and Indiana. In the former Johnson won a sweeping victory, his majority over Herbert Hoover, his only competitor, being something like 100,000. Mr. Hoover expressed himself as surprised by the showing he made, considering the inadequacy of his campaign arrangements. His supporters on the coast charged that a deal was made with the Phelan machine in San Francisco to deliver the Democratic vote to Johnson.

Indiana's primary law requires that a candidate must secure a majority of all votes cast in order to gain complete control of the state's delegation. This General Wood failed to do, though his plurality over Johnson was about 6,000. Wood's managers said they would insist that the state convention instruct the solid delegation for the general, but this aroused bitter opposition in the other camps. On the face of practically complete rout, the Wood people claimed 20 of the district delegates and the four delegates-at-large. The steel workers in the Calumet region piled up a big majority for Johnson and he also carried Evansville, but Wood won in Indianapolis and other cities. Lowden, who was strong in the rural districts, got about half as many votes as Johnson, and Harding about half as many as the Illinois governor. The results in Indiana really were not satisfactory to any one of the candidates, but they quite suited the political managers of the state, who plan to have Indiana hold the balance of power in the convention.

Maryland Republicans turned out in small numbers and gave Wood the state's preference by a vote of about two to one over Johnson.

The Johnson managers felt that the Michigan state convention did not give the senator the full fruits of his victory in the primary. It instructed the delegation to vote for him as long as he has a chance of winning the nomination, but refused to endorse him, leaving it to the delegates to decide when to switch to another candidate. Of the big four elected, two are Johnson men and two are said to favor Wood.

One of the few delegations that will go to the Democratic convention in San Francisco with instructions as to its vote will be that from Kentucky. The state convention voted for nominations for Governor Cox of Ohio, a would not surprise astute politicians.

The great drive of the Poles and Ukrainians against the soviet forces in the Ukraine has resulted in sanguinary battles in which the Poles seem to have had the best of it. At last accounts they had pressed forward as far as the bridgehead of Kiev and the fight for that city was desperate, continuing day and night. Reports received at Berne said two soviet armies had been routed and virtually destroyed, and Warsaw announced the capture of Kiev, a bolshevist stronghold, by the Polish cavalry.

From Vladivostok and Tokyo came the news that in eastern Siberia the Russians had signed a protocol yielding to all the demands presented by the Japanese military authorities, including withdrawal for a distance of 30 kilometers from districts occupied by the Japanese.

A correspondent in Berlin says that from authentic sources in the foreign office and the ministry of finance he learns that Germany will flatly refuse to pay a hundred billion marks indemnity, and that the offer of such a sum, made when the treaty of peace was signed, is to be withdrawn and figures startlingly low substituted when the conference at Spa takes place. Premiers Millerand and Lloyd George are to meet before the Spa session begins and doubtless will come to a complete understanding as to what will be demanded from Germany.

An interesting statement concerning the trial of war criminals has been made by Dr. Andreas Blumck, German minister of justice. He says the German government has been for some time in readiness to try the accused and the attorney general has instituted 317 prosecutions, but that nothing more can be done until the allied nations furnish the evidence which they promised. Not a word has come from any of them since the Berlin government three months ago, asserts the minister.

Carranza's hold on Mexico apparently is weakening so rapidly that the old man must be decidedly alarmed. The revolt, of which General Obregon is the recognized leader, is spreading daily and the federal armies lose large numbers by desertion to the rebels. If the bewitched president had any plans for fleeing from the country, it is likely he has too long deferred their execution, for the ports on both east and west coasts are closed to him by the operations of rebel units along the connecting railways and highways. However he may yet escape into the United States or Guatemala. According to a story that came across the border, all the rebel leaders have agreed on a plan to force the abdication of Carranza on May 15 and to name Alfredo Robles Dominguez president-pro tempore.

The latest big accession to the rebel forces was Francisco Villa who, with 2,000 men, joined the revolutionary army in Chihuahua. It was said he would bring 10,000 men to the support of Obregon. In Torreon the federal garrison raised the flag of revolt and arrested their commander.

After several requests from the state department, the navy department dispatched a flotilla of destroyers to Key West, whence they will be able to reach the Mexican ports on the east coast within a few hours. So far they have not been greatly needed to protect American interests there. Agents of our government have reported that the rebel leaders give assurance of the adoption of a more friendly attitude toward foreigners than has been maintained by Carranza, but of course the United States is not taking any hand in the struggle.

Secretary of Labor Wilson surprised and dismayed the department of justice men who are carrying on the proceedings to rid the country of dangerous aliens. He ruled that membership in the Communist Labor party does not constitute ground for deportation because that party does not advocate resort to force. Some time ago Mr. Wilson held that as members of the Communist party, which advocates the overthrow of the existing government by force, might be deported. In the opinion of Assistant Attorney General Garvan the new ruling means that the campaign to deport the alien Reds must collapse, since the Communists can easily join the Communist Labor party without abandoning their theories or purposes. It may be Secretary Wilson's action will save from impeachment Assistant Secretary Post, who has canceled 1,400 deportation warrants.

The great drive of the Poles and Ukrainians against the soviet forces in the Ukraine has resulted in sanguinary battles in which the Poles seem to have had the best of it. At last accounts they had pressed forward as far as the bridgehead of Kiev and the fight for that city was des-

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have used for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents. Also mention this paper. Large and medium bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Keeping Up With H. C. L.

Bert asked his grandpa for a job and was told he could throw down hay for the horses. For this chore he had always received a nickel; but as the candy bar he was in the habit of buying had advanced in price, he coolly informed his grandparent that he would have to have a raise in wages.

"How much?" asked grandpa, amused.

"Oh," replied the little laborer, "enough to keep up with the high cost of candy."

There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be removed, and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. POOR POLICY TO KEEP STOCK "AS GOOD AS AVERAGE" WHEN AVERAGE IS LOW

A Piney Woods Rooter and an Example of What the Use of Purebred Sires Can Accomplish in Two Generations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"What is the use of all this noise about 'Better Sires and Better Stock'?" It was one of the well-to-do farmers of the county who was talking. "Look at those steers over yonder. No purebred sires among their ancestors so far as I know. But they are good enough for me. I tell you, Bascom," he said earnestly, coming over to the fence beyond which the county agent sat in his driver. "I admit we've got a lot of help in a seedlike way from the information you've brought us, but on this stock proposition it's different. I believe in good stock, of course, and take a reasonable pride in my animals, but what is the use of overdoing it? We better leave alone the way we have been for the past 20 years, I say. Sometimes we get some poor animals, of course, but the creatures on my place suit me pretty well. My father, on the old farm back East, never worried about purebred sires and he made a fair living. What was good enough for father is good enough for me."

"Hold on a minute," said the county agent, stopping his motor and coming over to the fence. "You're always listening to what I have to say in the past and I want you to listen to the now, for the simple reason that it means dollars and cents to you. It's nothing in my pocket, but it will mean more profits for you when you sell your live-stock products."

"Now here is the dope, as the boys say: United States department of agriculture men, other animal husbandry specialists, poultry specialists, and all the rest have figured this thing out on a broad basis. There are no two ways about it. Better sires mean better stock; that means better marketable products, and that means better profits!"

Boy Converts His Father.

For an hour Bascom, the county agent, and Sam, the farmer, talked over the better-sires campaign, the county agent skillfully citing examples from his own personal knowledge and from reports he had read. He told, for instance, of a New Jersey boy who was induced to buy a high-grade cow for $155, quite to the disgust of his "practical" father who owned five cows, which he claimed, and truthfully, were "as good as the average in the neighborhood." On freshening, the boy's cow gave 24 quarts of milk, and kept it up for a long period, while none of the father's cows was able to make any such record. Finally the father saw the point and confessed that it was a deal more profitable to expend his labor and feed on well-bred animals than on his so-called average cow.

The incident set the county agent's friend to thinking, and the former lost no opportunity to press his point home.

Breeding Counted.

"Sam," he went on, "you don't begin to realize what this thing will mean on your place. Right breeding counts every time. The United States department of agriculture tells of an Oklahoma farmer who owned two registered Shorthorn yearling bulls that he prized highly for breeding purposes. A butcher saw those bulls and on asking the price learned that they were registered and that it would take $200 to buy the two. What did he do but pay the $200, and when he killed them he said they were the cheapest cattle he had bought for a long time, because they cut the better kinds of beef, and more of it. My private opinion is it was too bad to deprive the community of the use of those purebreds, even though the butcher was willing to pay the price. But this is the big point: Breeding counts in dollars and cents in that case, and it does every time."

Hogs Pay Despite High Price.

Turning from the subject of cattle to hogs, the county agent told of what North Carolina boys had been doing. "Even though hogs had never been so high," he said, "hundreds of boys bought purebred pigs with the expectation of selling their offspring. Those lads were not disappointed. Through their county agents, the pigs were sold at splendid prices and more than one of their dads was converted by the experience to the use of purebred sires."

"See here," said the county agent, pulling two photographs from his pocket. "These were taken down in Mississippi. This one here—indicating one of the photographs—shows a typical Piney Woods rooter. You know this kind of razorback, Sam. Now look at this picture," handing over the second photograph. "There is what two generations of breeding with purebred sires brought. There's some pretty good Berkshires, Bellevue me, when the owner, standing back there, takes those hogs to market, he'll appreciate the money value of the 'Better Sires—Better Stock' campaign."

The county agent paused a minute as if to let the thought sink in. "Says, you better sign up. This thing will mean a lot to you—even more next year than this—because you'll have more good animals on your place."

"You will again, Bascom. Times have changed. We have got to progress or we lose out. Count on me in the campaign."

TWO BIG FACTORS IN EDUCATION OF HORSE

Future Value and Usefulness Depend on Training.

Broken Colt Is One That Is Safe to Handle in Stable or on Road and Will Promptly Obey Orders of Driver or Rider.

The breaking and training of colts is of prime importance, says the United States department of agriculture, because their future value and usefulness depend to a great extent on whether or not they are well broken. By a broken colt is meant one that is safe to handle in the stable or on the road and that will promptly obey the orders of the driver or rider.

Memory and habit are the two main factors with which we have to deal in training horses. A horse acts through instinct and habit, and one of its greatest characteristics is uniformity of conduct. What a horse is once trained to do he will nearly always do under like conditions.

The first thing in training a horse is to get his attention. The second is to make him understand what is wanted. The education of the horse is based on reward and punishment. The reward, a pat on the neck, etc., should immediately follow the act of obedience. The punishment, to be effective, must immediately follow the act of disobedience.

Few horses are inherently vicious. Many horses are made vicious and unmanageable by the carelessness or unnecessary brutality of their trainers. If a horse kicks because the harness hurts him, or stiles at something of which he is afraid, punishment is not justifiable. If, however, after being stopped, a horse starts before receiving the command to do so, he should be punished. Horses are naturally obedient, and when thoroughly trained their conduct is uniformly good.

A horse should be trained so that he thinks there is no limit to his power to do the things required of him, and believes that he has no power to do that which is against the wishes of his driver. Above all, never ask of a horse something he is unable to perform, and then punish him because it cannot be done. If during the first year of his work a colt is hitched only to loads he can pull, he will develop into a good work horse, while if he is overloaded a few times he may become balky and worthless.

SUITABLE TAFFETAS FOR SUMMER WEAR

THERE are so many pretty taffetas dresses this season, made up in so many ways, that it seems almost an entire wardrobe might be assembled from among them. If all other fabrics were barred. Then, to add to their diversity, designers have hit upon combinations of taffeta and organdy, tulle, and net, and tulle and lace.

An example of original and beautiful designing, the dress at the left of the two shown above will interest every lover of taffeta. Its bodice is cut on kimono lines but departs from them with a wide flare in elbow sleeves and its fastening at the back. It has a round neck and extends six or eight inches below the waistline. The skirt at the front forms a panel extending a little way above the waist and merging into the bodice in a "V"-shaped opening outlined with embroidery in silk. In the back it terminates at the waist line.

The bodice forms a narrow yoke at each side over the hips and the skirt is fastened to the yoke in a series of

For Matrons—Brilliant Hats

MODERATE and costumed may make clothes in greater variety and quantity for young women than for matrons, but it is the matron's outfitting that gives them most concern. In the province of millinery the designing of matrons' hats is of such importance that gifted men and women give all their time to it. In the group shown here four semi-dress hats are pictured.

The hat at the top of the group is a spirited shape of brilliant black straw that recalls the Napoleon. The high tuster of the brim and the lines in the shape, are both contributors to the smart style of this model, which is less trimmed than any of its companions. It has an ornament made of long glycerine ostrich feathers and celophane foliage.

The handsome turban of black moire ribbon and a jet ornament at the left of the group is a Russian inspiration in which very rich ribbon is very cleverly draped over a frame. This is a handsome hat, with plenty of character that might be made in any rich color or in black. Facing it a faint

JUST KIDS

By JENNIE LITTLE.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As the car swung round the curve and stopped, the motorist almost thought he was seeing double, for beside the white post stood a small boy and girl, as like as two peas in a pod. The conductor, snarling from the sarcastic comments of an old lady whom he had carried past her street, changed his scowl to a grin as he swung them up with a "Well, well, look who's here! Does your mother know you're out?"

"No, cause we're visiting Grandma," piped up the feminine portion of the party, who was the acknowledged spokesman in public, for Bobs was the victim of a most unmanly lisp.

As they passed down the aisle of the hot car, the listless or grumpy expression on the other passengers' faces changed as if by magic. They squeezed into a vacant space beside a mother trying vainly to amuse her fretting baby, who promptly stopped his wailing, and with a gurgle of mischief made a pass at Betty's curls.

"How long have you had him?" she asked, with a delighted giggle.

"He had his first birthday last week," smiled the mother.

"Oh, say, hasn't he lasted good?" was the admiring remark, as she cast a most unfavorable look of comparison at the battered features of a doll held tightly under one arm. "I only got Bella last Christmas. We've got a new baby brother home."

Bobs burrowed deep into newly acquired back pockets, the pride of his heart, taking as much time as possible, that none might overlook the existence of said pockets.

"Two marbles!" he announced briefly.

Just then a young man stepped on the car, and Betty hailed him as an old friend.

"The twin terrors, as I'm alive!" he exclaimed, his eyes searching eagerly about for a third party. "You're not alone?"

"Yes," said Betty, "but it's all right. It hasn't been a nice day at Grandma's. Aunt Alice cried hard last night when she thought I was asleep, and she hasn't laughed or played with us today. Bobs was bad, and when he upset the milk bottle in the refrigerator, Grandma said, 'Children I'masperated. Go out and amuse yourselves till I call you.' So we started to water the lawn, and how did we know Gramma was coming round the corner just as we turned the hose that way? Then he told us to go straight off the lawn, so we took a walk down the street."

"We stopped to speak to a big moody-cow looking through the fence, and she blew both her old horns at us. So we thought we'd ride a little way, till it's time for Gramma to want us home."

Poor Jack Barnes was as uncomfortable as a mere man could be under this running fire of explanation, and, red of face, signalled for the next stop. "You'll go right back now," he said, firmly, and marshalled them off, followed by the delighted smiles of Betty's audience.

"I hope you are not going to be cross, too," said the engaging young singer. "Guess everybody got out the wrong side of the bed this morning. Why didn't you come to see Aunt Alice last night? Then maybe she wouldn't have cried."

When they reached the gate, three distracted relatives came rushing from as many directions, but Jack turned to the grandparents.

"I found these twinsters having a joy ride on a car, so I made them about-face in case you wanted them."

"The little rebels," cried the old gentleman; "they ought to be spanked for giving us the scare of our lives." But Grandma thankfully folded them to her heart.

As they went to the house, Jack turned stiffly to the young lady, who, after her first cry of welcome, had not spoken.

"I didn't intend to force myself upon you again, after what happened last night, but I really would like to hear your reasons for letting that end Hastings take you to the dance after you had promised me. If it was just a way of letting me down easy, why all right, of course."

"Well," answered that young person, coldly, "when I saw you an hour before devoting your time to a beautiful stranger, I certainly didn't think you needed my company, and the roadster will not accommodate three."

"Daylight breaks over me," cried Jack. "My sister arrived on the 5:30, and I was showing her about town a bit, and telling her about the finest girl in the world, who had so often written to meet her. And you thought—oh, Alice Camden, I guess it's up to you to ask me to go to supper and begin where we left off before this big mistake."

That night as the young adventurers were being put to bed, Alice led Jack to the foot of the stairs, where Betty's voice floated down—"and bless mamma and Daddy, and the new baby, and make Bobs a better boy tomorrow." Even a worm will turn, and from the next room came a defiant challenge: "Mind your own blittheeth. I can pray for myself!"

There was a pause, fraught with great possibilities, then the prayer was concluded with a voice of Pharisaical sweetness:

"I'm going to be good, anyway. Lord, but you can help me a little if you feel like it!"

U. S. DESTROYERS SPEED TO MEXICO

CAUSE OF FLOTILLA'S DISPATCH CONCEALED BY NAVY CHIEFS.

1200 MARINES ORDERED SOUTH

Force Taken to Key West To Be Ready for Possible Service in Mexico.

Washington—Four destroyers have left Key West for Tampico, Mexico, the navy department has announced. The remaining two destroyers of the six sent south from New York will also proceed to Tampico as soon as minor repairs are completed.

The department made no explanation of its decision to rush the ships to Mexican waters. Those en route are the Isherwood, Putnam, Dale and Cuse. The Reid and Flusser are at Key West. It was indicated that the tender Black Hawk, with Captain Long, senior officer of the flotilla, aboard, also would proceed to Tampico.

Official confirmation of the occupation of Mexico City by rebel forces has been received by the state department from the American embassy. There was no disorder and no foreigners were interfered with, the message said.

Information has been received by the state department, that Tampico is in the hands of revolutionists. The federal general, Orozco, has taken refuge on the Mexican federal gunboat Jalisco and the revolutionary authorities at Tampico had given assurances of guarantees there.

The department's advisers also told of the capture by revolutionists of Torreón and Monclova in the state of Coahuila, and of Aguas Calientes, in the state of that name. Telegraph communication had been restored between Chihuahua and Torreón and Aguas Calientes, the messages said.

Ramon P. De Nigri, formerly the Mexican consul general at San Francisco, arrived here in his new capacity as "commercial representative of the government of Sonora." He issued a statement placing the blame for the revolution on the advisers of Carranza.

Marines Ordered South.

Washington—A force of approximately 1,200 marines was ordered to proceed on the transport Henderson from League Island to Key West, Fla., to be held for possible service in Mexico.

Secretary Daniels, in announcing that the marines had been ordered to Key West, explained that it was a precautionary measure for protection of Americans, and that they would not be sent into Mexican territory unless the necessity warranted.

GERMANS SEEK 2 YEARS' GRACE

Ask For Delay in Delivering Ships to Allied Nations.

Berlin.—The German peace delegation at Paris has been instructed to hand the Allied reparations commission a note requesting two years' grace for Germany in the delivery of ships under the peace treaty.

A revision of the total weight of tonnage involved is requested at the end of this period. The note sets forth that it is impossible for Germany to fulfill the reparations clauses of the treaty if confiscation of her shipping is carried out.

Premier Millerand is expected at Frankfurt, now occupied by French troops, according to the Telegraphen Union, which says that he is coming to attend the industrial exposition and to feel out German industrial conditions.

COURT FREES YARDMEN'S CHIEF

No Hearing While Unemployed, Rail Board's Ruling.

Detroit.—On request of the prosecutor, the case against William C. Chapoton, president of the Detroit Yardmen's association, was dismissed by Judge Stein. Chapoton was arrested recently, the police alleging that he had violated the state syndicalist act. The assistant prosecutor informed the court that evidence sufficient to warrant holding the labor leader longer had not been presented.

The attorney for the yardmen received a communication from the United States railroad labor board which outlined the procedure necessary for the men to obtain a hearing. As previously indicated, the rules of the board require men to be employed at work before a hearing will be granted.

Officers Urge Aviation Allotment

Washington.—Maj.-Gen. Charles T. Mencher, director of the Air Service, and Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell, director of military aeronautics, urged the Senate Military Committee, which is considering the Army Appropriation Bill, to recommend appropriation of $50,000,000 for aviation for the year beginning July 1. Both officers declared that the United States soon would be without airplanes unless provision was made for new equipment immediately.

MUCH ADO

Like a luxurious kitten, Doris Lee sat curled upon the bed, watching her hostess, Marion Keith. Suddenly Doris gave a sidelong glance at her companion and said lazily: "Have you heard about Phil Sawyer, Marion?"

"What about him?" asked the other, as she turned toward the speaker.

"Why haven't you heard, really?" In her excitement Doris fairly bounced up on the bed. "They say he's engaged to Mabel Bradley! Of course, we don't know for certain that it's so, but he's been seen with her a lot and we all think it's terrible, if it's so, because everybody knows he's been going around with you for perfect ages—and—"

"I don't believe it," broke in Marion, and slipped out, closing the door behind her.

Across the hall Marion was on her knees by the bed. Over and over she was whispering, her head bowed on her tightly clasped hands. "Oh, it can't be so! Phil's not like that—I know," but no peace came. She remembered how little she had seen Phil lately—not since their last dance when he had come in late and had danced only twice with her. But she had thought that he looked tired—still, hadn't he danced with Mabel more than that? Back and forth waged the battle of doubt and loyalty, until the girl was worn out. At last she climbed wearily into bed, to stare for long hours into the dark, thinking—thinking.

A week went by with no word from Phil. Perhaps he was away, but he always wrote or telephoned to her. He was not ill, or she would have heard. She felt that her friends all pitted her. She would prove to them that she did not care! And so Marion ran to the telephone and called up her cousin, Harry, who was only too glad to find her in such a responsive mood. For days she motored with him, canoed with him, danced with him, laughed with him and did her best to quiet the persistent ache in her heart, but with little success.

Then came the club dance. For three years Phil had taken Marion to the club dance, but it was Harry who came for her tonight, and found her looking very lovely in a chiffon dress, like a rose cloud. Her heart was a whirl of emotions. Would Phil be at the dance? What would she say or do if he were?

As they entered the great hall together Marion's eager eyes looked quickly about, and instinctively she shrank back against the wall; for there was Phil, dancing with Mabel and looking down into her upturned, laughing face with a smile.

"Come on, let's dance!" said Harry, happily, and swung Marion into the crowd.

The fifth dance found her again with Harry. Suddenly she heard a gay "Hello, Marion!" and looked up to see Doris smiling at her, and above the golden head, Phil's gray eyes looking straight into her own.

She missed her step and Harry looked at her curiously. "What's the matter, tired?" he asked.

"A little," said Marion. "Let's go out on the balcony; it's so cool and quiet there."

Suddenly the girl heard footsteps coming toward her. The thought that perhaps it was Harry came to find her caused her to look up, and there stood Phil. Marion sat very still, while her heart ticked off the seconds.

"May I sit down?" asked Phil, and there was a tremble in his voice. As Marion did not speak, he pulled a chair over and sat down beside her. Then Phil spoke, hesitatingly. "Marion," he said, "I don't know as you've noticed it, or cared, but I haven't been around as much lately."

"No," said Marion, in a curious toneless voice, "you haven't."

"Well, you remember that last big dance. They told me that you were engaged to that fellow." Marion gave a gasp. "The same one you're with tonight. At first I didn't believe it, and well, it sure looked it, and now she—they say it was all a joke and he's your cousin, and—he turned a puzzled, hurt face to Marion—"what does it mean, anyhow?"

"Then you're not engaged?" cried Marion huskily, "and you're not going to marry Mabel Bradley?"

"What," exploded Phil, "what do you mean?"

"Why Doris said—"

Phil gave a suppressed whistle. "It was Doris told me about you," he cried.

Phil's eyes fell, but his hands tightened their grasp on hers.

"I was jealous and I just wanted to show you I didn't care," he mumbled in a shamefaced voice; and then, raising his head again, he looked straight into her eyes and said quietly: "There never was anybody but you, Marion, and you know it. I don't ever want to live another two weeks like these last two. Tell me, you do care?"

Marion's tremulous, happy smile was answer enough. As Phil bent to kiss the hands he held in his own, the gay voice of Doris broke in on their happiness. "Well, so you've made up, you two! We've been looking every-where for you. Come on!" and she pulled Marion to her feet and led her toward the dance floor, looking over her shoulder at Phil with a teasing smile.

"I'm so relieved to find there wasn't anything in that Bradley business," she confided to Marion's tolerant ears. "I knew it couldn't be. You and Phil make such a good-looking couple."
