The John Deere No. 999 Planter
Assures Accurate Planting

This planter will drop in each and every hill the exact number of kernels you wish to plant. Change in drop to meet the various conditions of soil in the same field to two, three or four kernels per hill, or change in drilling distances can be made instantly without stopping the team or leaving the seat of the accurate John Deere No. 999. Full variable drop planter. This makes it possible for you to get the biggest yield your land is capable of producing.

The John Deere and the Black Hawk are the two leading makes of corn planters today.

Furniture

Furniture is scarce, but we were fortunate in securing a nice shipment. See us when in need of anything in this line. Also a complete line of Rugs and Linoleums.

Memorial Sunday Services.

The usual Memorial Day services will be held in St. Paul's church at 10 o'clock a. m., Sunday, May 23, at which time the Roll of Honor will be read. The services will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Krause. It is hoped that the people of the community will find it convenient to attend this service, thereby paying tribute to the memory of the nation's departed heroes.

The Civil War veterans and the W. R. C. are requested to meet at Odd Fellows hall at 9 a. m.

The members of the American Legion are requested to meet at the Post room at 9:30 o'clock, not in uniform.

Decoration Day Exercises.

The program for the Decoration Day exercises has not been fully completed, and the full program for the day will be printed in the next issue of the Standard. At the present time it is intended to hold the exercises out of door at the flag staff, intersection of Main and Middle streets, if the weather will permit, on Monday, May 31.

The members of Herbert J. McKune Post, No. 31, American Legion, particularly urge all Civil War veterans and Spanish-American War veterans to co-operate with them in observing the day.

American Legion at U. of M.

Ex-service men among students in the University of Michigan are rapidly completing plans to organize a university post of American Legion men, and have been co-operating with Col. A. H. Gansser, of Bay City, commander of the Michigan Legion, to this end. National officers of the Legion launched a six day drive for membership in the Legion Monday, May 17, have arranged a satisfactory means of transfer whereby student members of Legion organizations in their home towns can transfer to the U. of M. organization during their academic life in Ann Arbor, and then back to their home Posts when they have completed their college work. It is said the Post of the University of Michigan will be the first of its kind in the country.

Memorial Day Proclamation.

Governor Sleeper has issued the following proclamation:

Time has greatly thinned the ranks of the brave men in whose honor Memorial Day was instituted fifty-two years ago, but it cannot dim the luster of their heroic deeds. While this government shall endure their splendid achievements will be held in grateful remembrance. They won the cause that was more than all their victories. They saved the Union; and they established liberty not only throughout this broad and blessed land, but when the four years of agony were over a new witness to human freedom and to human brotherhood went forth from these shores and the light shed all around the globe. Their glory shall not fade.

In the war with Spain and in the great World War, the sons and the grandsons of the men who fought at Shiloh and Antietam and Gettysburg nobly upheld the honor and the traditions of the American army and navy; and, while we look back with pride and satisfaction upon the achievements of the heroes of the Civil War, we may take equal pride in the more recent achievements of American soldiers and sailors and marines.

Therefore, that we may pay a tribute of respect and esteem to the surviving veterans of the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the recent World War, and honor the memory of the men who gave up their lives in all these wars, I, Albert E. Sleeper, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby issue this my proclamation and sincerely urge the observance of Sunday, May 30, 1920, as Memorial Day, and I earnestly appeal to the people of Michigan for hearty co-operation in plans for the observance of the day in their respective communities, and for special provision this year for the comfort and convenience of the old soldiers. Age is telling on them physically but the same undaunted spirit is there as of yore.

On that day flags should be displayed at half mast until noon and then hoisted to the top of the staff. In this connection it is proper to point out that the law of the state provides that whenever the 30th of May shall fall on a Sunday the following day shall be deemed a legal holiday.

Regular meeting of Olive Chapter, O. E. S., Wednesday evening, May 26, at 7:30 o'clock.

CHURCH CIRCLES.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Last Tuesday evening the basket ball boys entertained the basket ball girls in Firemen's hall. Special music was provided for dancing. After an evening of dancing, the young people went to the Liberty Cafe for refreshments. A little talk on basket ball and its possibilities was given by Superintendent McClosky and Miss Roode. The girls surely enjoyed themselves.

Tuesday, May 18, was "Senior Sneak Day." The seniors, accompanied by Miss Roode, their class adviser, drove to Wampler's lake. It was a jolly crowd in spite of the gloomy weather. The day was spent in various ways of amusement, the especially popular one being dancing in the pavilion. Late in the afternoon the sun came out and the kodaks were kept pretty busy. Plenty of good "cents" were in evidence at dinner time. In the afternoon a freezer of home-made ice cream was opened and quickly disposed of. The crowd returned home early on account of the next day being a school day.

Farmers Ask Aid of City Folks.

Washtenaw county farmers on Friday took up with Ann Arbor business men the question of farm help. With many farms throughout the county idle and others short of help, the county faces an almost certain crop shortage, the farmers pointed out.

They declared that as long as factory wages offer a bigger inducement to farmers than the gains to be made in agricultural pursuits, they would continue to face this shortage of help.

The suggestion that city folks spend their vacations on the farms and help with the labor problem failed to impress the ruralites, who declared that few city folks know enough about farming to be of real help. No solution was offered at the meeting.

President Hutchins of the University of Michigan has received from Secretary of Agriculture Meritt the request that steps be taken to ascertain at once the number of students who can be depended upon for farm work this summer. This information is necessary within two weeks, the secretary declared, so that farmers may know how extensively to plant, with the assurance of being able to harvest their crops.

The S. P. I. will meet next Monday evening with Miss Milda Faust.

Body of Jas. McCormick Found.

The body of James McCormick was found about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon by Patrick Prendergast in the woods about a half mile from the residence on his farm in Lyndon township.

About seven weeks ago McCormick was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luke Guinan, and he had not been seen since that time. Nothing was thought of his disappearance, as was in the habit of wandering about. He had evidently started across the Guinan farm to call on some other friends.

He was subject to epileptic fits, and as he was lying face downward when found, it is thought that he died in a fit.

When a young boy he resided at the home of James Savage, father of Mrs. Jas. L. Wade, of this place.

He has a sister who is a resident of Rochester, N. Y., in which state he was born about 66 years ago.

Thirty-Four in Class of 1920.

The class of 1920 of the Chelsea high school consists of thirty-four young ladies and gentlemen.

Turning to Sorghum For Sweets.

As a result of the high price and threatened shortage of sugar many Michigan farmers are turning to sorghum as a syrup crop, declares Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the M. A. C. A number of new sorghum mills have started up over the state, and indications point to a record production of "home grown" syrup during the coming season.

"Under present conditions it would be a good thing for many farmers to grow a half acre or acre of sorghum," says Prof. Cox. "The usual yield is from 50 to 75 gallons per acre, though a few have produced more than that. The early Amber variety is the best for syrup purposes, giving the best yield and having the sweetest juice. Michigan seed companies can furnish the seed."

"The crop is planted on ground prepared in the same way that land is prepared for corn. It usually does best when planted the latter part of the corn growing season, in late May or early June. A good piece of fall plowed land that has been manured will give best results."

"When sorghum is planted for syrup six or eight pounds of seed should be planted in rows 36 to 42 inches apart, using an ordinary corn planter. Cultivation is similar to that for corn."

"The crop should be cut in the dough stage before the seed becomes hard. The leaves are usually stripped while the canes are in the field, though this is not necessary. The stripping the leaves increases the yield of the juice a little and insures a better quality. One ton of cane will yield from 500 to 1,000 pounds of juice, which will make from 8 to 25 gallons of syrup. An acres should yield from four to six tons of cane."

Will Plant Soy Beans.

Quite a number of Washtenaw county farmers are continuing the practice of the past two years of planting soy beans with their corn for silage. Through the efforts of the County Farm Bureau a number of farmers have followed this practice and were so well satisfied with the result that an increased acreage will be planted to this combination of crops during this present year.

The Farm Bureau has been able to secure some good seed directly from the grower in northern Indiana. This is of the hollybrook variety of soy beans which is recommended as the best variety for this county, where soy beans are to be grown with corn for silage. Eight to ten pounds of seed is sufficient to plant an acre.

A POINT OF VIEW

Some people, we fear, look upon a bank as a place where a few "rich old codgers" keep their money. Others not so fully prejudiced, may think only large accounts are wanted and that this bank would not care for their business.

If your point of view has been anything like this, we want to correct it. We want you to feel that this bank wants and appreciates your business--large or small--and that an account here will be of great practical value to you.

INTERNATIONAL NO. 2 CORN PLANTERS

Strength and Simplicity are the strong features of the International Planters. The strong one-piece frames; adjustable pole to insure accurate checking no matter how large or small the team; the simple and accurate dropping mechanism; the quick-acting valve arranged to place the seed in the bottom of the furrow without stringing; the variable drop to plant any number of kernels without a change of seed plates.

These are a few of the features that make the International the 100% perfect planter and the one for you to buy.

Allow us to demonstrate the superior qualities of this planter to you and you will be convinced that it is the planter for your requirements.

TWO-ROW CORN CULTIVATOR

Use of Corn Binders Increases Efficiency of Man-Labor 50 Per Cent
Over That Done by Hand—Good Work of Hay Loader.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With a 25-inch horse-drawn plow, one man accomplishes from 70 to 80 per cent more than with a single-bottom plow. One man with a 28-inch plow drawn by a tractor covers from 30 to 35 per cent more ground in a day than does a man using six horses.

on a horse-drawn plow of the same size. A three-bottom plow drawn by a suitable tractor enables one man to accomplish from 60 to 70 per cent more than does the two-bottom plow drawn by six horses.

Two-Row Cultivator.

These facts were brought out by about 600 replies to an inquiry addressed to farmers in central Illinois by the office of farm management, United States department of agriculture. Under conditions where the use of a two-row corn cultivator is practicable, this machine enables one man to cover nearly twice as much ground per day as with a one-row cultivator. In the section represented by replies received by the department, three horses are most commonly used on the two-row cultivator and the addition of a fourth horse apparently increases but little the amount of ground covered per day.

Such of these farmers as use corn binders have found the use of this machine increases the efficiency of man labor 50 per cent, on the average, over that achieved when cutting and shocking by hand. Eighty bushels, the reports show, is an average day's work for one man when husking corn from the standing stalk by hand.

Value of Hay-Loader.

With respect to the value of a hay-loader, they learned that the use of this implement reduces by about 25 per cent the time required to put on a load of hay, while the amount of labor required for unloading into the mow is only a little more than half as great when a hayfork is used as when the work is done by hand.

BOOST FOR PUREBRED SIRE

Efforts Being Made to Eliminate Scrub
Sires Appreciated by Many Stock Breeders.

Many breeders of purebred stock do not realize the value of the state and national purebred sire crusade. They fail to see that this crusade is increasing the use of purebred sires and consequently, increasing the demand for them and prices.

This crusade is a business proposition and is of greatest value to the breeders of purebred stock and they should support it.

APPEARANCE OF FARM HOME

Surroundings Must Be Made Attractive to Uplift Family, Visitors and Passersby.

A home and its surroundings must be attractive in order to be most uplifting to the family, visitors and passersby. Facemasters especially need attention in order to secure satisfactory conditions, says the United States department of agriculture. The farm home and the farm business are so closely related that the success of the latter is reflected in the appearance of the former.

TIMBER PROFITABLE FOR UNUSUAL SPOTS

Many Corners and Slopes Can Be Utilized by Trees.

Light and Acidic Build Up Poor Soil
Through Nitrogen-Gathering Bacteria in Root Nodules—Small Culties Checked.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Timber is essentially a poor land crop. Steep slopes, poor soil, rocky land, unusual corners, gullies and wooded tracts—all these afford opportunities for growing timber profitably. A careful survey of the average farm will reveal a surprising number of spots of this sort which can be utilized to advantage. If they do not already have trees, planting them with the proper varieties will materially increase the value of the land.

Certain kinds of trees, like the locust and the acacia, build up poor soil through the nitrogen-gathering bacteria in the root nodules, according to the forest service, United States department of agriculture. The soil building power of trees on slopes is a fact which the farmer should not overlook. Steep lands, which have been cleared of timber at much expense, after being cultivated for a few years often become gullied, and the rich lands adjoining are covered with deep deposits of sand. The surest and cheapest method of protecting such slopes is to maintain forests on them. Small gullies can be stopped up by closely packed brush and tree tops, and planted by stakes if necessary. Large, open gullies are checked successfully only by planting over the entire gully basin, supplemented by low brush dams across the larger units of the gully.

INSURE RAPID TREE GROWTH

Sod-Mulch Method Is Not Intended for Trees Just Planted—Aim to Conserve Moisture.

The conditions for young trees should be made so favorable that they will start rapidly into growth so that a good, well-ripened growth will be assured before winter. While the sod-mulch method of growing trees gives very good results under certain conditions it is not intended for trees which have just been planted. When the sod-mulch method is adopted it is usually after the trees are well established, when the ground is seeded down to grass and when sod is formed the grass is cut and a pile put about each tree. This kills the sod about the tree, allows air to penetrate readily and conserves moisture. The drawback to this system is that very often there is not sufficient material grown in the orchard to make enough mulch for each tree, and the sod is not conserved.

ADD FERTILIZER TO MANURE

Yield of Corn Increased by Eleven
Bushels Per Acre in Experiment at Ohio Station.

The fact that manure itself is not a balanced plant food, but may, with profit, be reinforced with phosphate, is becoming more and more a matter of general knowledge.

At the Ohio experiment station fertilizer added to manure, increased the yield of corn by 11 bushels per acre. The residual effect of the fertilizer increased the wheat crop which followed the corn by five and a half bushels per acre. The clover crop, following the wheat, showed a gain of 1,700 pounds of hay per acre. The fertilizer paid for itself three times.

CURRENT WORM IS HARMFUL

First Brood Appears Early in Spring and They May Be Destroyed by Arsenical Spray.

The imported currant worm is about three-fourths of an inch long, green with yellow tips. They appear first in early spring as soon as the leaves are out, and there is one other brood, and sometimes a third later in the season. They devour the foliage. Those are readily destroyed by an arsenical spray or a dusting with an arsenical poison. By catching the first brood there will be little trouble later in the season.

ATTRACTIVE FROCKS FOR LEISURE HOURS

THE two very attractive afternoon frocks which present rival claims to adaptation in the picture above, employ the two most favored silk fabrics, georgette and taffeta, and each makes the most of this advantageous start. In spite of the disparity in these materials the two frocks have several features in common; both are made with a tunic, both achieve the widened hip lines which fashion encourages, and both show the bodice extended over the waistline at the front, forming a straight-line, girlish effect. These are all important style features, and each of these frocks is distinctive enough to answer for somewhat more formal dress than the average afternoon frock is equal to.

Taking note of the small items that go to make up the success of the georgette frock, it appears that the straight undershirt has no hem, but is finished with a pleated edge. Its tunic is long and full, draped and shortened at the sides and embellished with handsome embroidery in silk at the front and back. There are three-quarter-length sleeves having a narrow band of embroidery at the bottom, and, best of all, the original management of the bodice at the front, embroidery emphasizes it and calls attention to the narrow collar. Four small, silk-covered buttons fall from the ends of the unnecessary but pretty pretense in collars.

In the taffeta frock the tunic becomes an apron drapey at the front and back, edged with a flounce of the silk that joins the draperies and widens the hips at the same time. This feature has three narrow cordings along its edge and is set on to the drapery with a cord, insuring it considerable care. This frock has an underbodice cut with short kimono sleeves and these sleeves are corded near the edge. Below the cords narrow tabs made of folds of taffeta carry a narrow ribbon run through them as a finish. The round neck is finished in similar fashion. Sleeves as short as these are infrequent in American frocks, but there is plenty of authority for them in French importations.

The Etiquette of Weddings

OF ALL things that must be accomplished according to set customs a wedding requires the closest following of accepted rules. In order that the celebration of the ceremony and all the incidental events may move smoothly and successfully, minute attention must be given to all the details of preparation for the occasion, from the assembling of the wedding party to the departure of the bridal pair on their honeymoon. Leaving out the matter of the trousseau—which is a separate affair—there are many other things that must be considered and adjusted.

To begin at the beginning—there are the invitations. At least three weeks and even a month before the day of the ceremony, these are to be sent out to lists of names which include those furnished by the groom whose mother or sister assists in making up his list. The bride's parents furnish the invitations and announcements and the latter are to be mailed immediately after the wedding to friends who have not been invited to attend the ceremony. No near relative or close friend is to be overlooked, even though they live too far away to come conveniently. The wedding invitations and announcements are to be engraved on heavy white paper, in script or shaded Roman letters, and cards to the reception and "at home" cards enclosed. If the wedding is to take place out of town, train cards are also necessary and if in a large city cards for admission to the church may be required.

"At home" cards are enclosed with announcements. If a limited number of people are to be asked to the reception, the card to the reception will be left out of invitations to others. The invitations are enclosed in two envelopes, the inner one bearing the name of the recipient without any address and without first names, except when they are necessary to distinguish between members of the same family. The outer envelope carries the name and home address of the recipient and the names of the street and state are spelled out. Invitations are issued in the name of the bride's parents, if only one of them is living, in the name of that one, or if the bride is an orphan, in the name of a senior relative. A widow without a near relative to announce her marriage issues a joint announcement with the groom. Upon receipt of a wedding invitation and card to the reception, an acknowledgment is made immediately, written in formal style.

Besides furnishing the invitations the parents of the bride assume all other expenses—the decoration of the church, the fees to the sexton, the awning at the church door, the music, the expenses of the reception, furnishing motors for the bride and her attendants. If the bride is an orphan with no close relatives and is married under the chaperonage of a married friend, she assumes these expenses herself. The bride decides upon the gowning of her attendants, her maid or matron of honor, maids and flower girls deferring absolutely to her in this matter. On the day before the wedding the bride entertains her attendants at luncheon and presents each with a souvenir. She selects her attendants from among her own and the groom's relatives, including in the cortege close friends as well. A few days before the wedding the bridal procession is rehearsed, with every member of the bridal party present and with the music to be played at the wedding. On the day of the wedding motors are sent for the maids and the maid of honor, who assemble at the home of the bride where they receive their bouquets. At the ceremony the maids are to stand in the positions decided upon and leave the church in pairs or each with an usher. The maid of honor will hold the bride's bouquet or prayer book, which the bride hands to her at the proper time, returning them at the end of the rite of pledging troths. At the end of the ceremony the maid of honor may throw back the face veil, if one is worn by the bride and see that the train falls gracefully. When the bridesmaids leave the church each in company with an usher then the maid of honor is escorted by the best man. But if the maids go out two by two, the attendant of honor precedes them alone. In this case the best man goes out by the vestry door and goes from there to the place of the reception. The motor which brought him and the groom to the church takes the bride and groom away from it.

A good many duties fall to the lot of the best man, who is chosen by the groom, who also selects the ushers. These usually include several relatives or friends of the bride. Just before the wedding the groom gives a farewell bachelor dinner to his best man and ushers and presents each with a souvenir, usually a scarf pin or other bit of jewelry. He also may instruct his best man to see that the ushers have no choice for the ushers and best man are delivered at their houses the day before the wedding.

THE PLAGIARISTS

By ELLEN M. MOORE.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Girls—listen," cried Ruth Danton, as she dashed into one of her classmates' rooms, where at least a dozen young collegians had gathered to discuss plans for their commencement week. "Dick Lule is going to accompany Lucy Drens at the commencement exercises."

"Really?" they chorused. "Who told you?"

"Never mind how I heard, but it is true," answered Ruth.

"Well, Lucy is one ahead just now, isn't she?" suggested Mary.

"Of course, we all know that the thousand-dollar prize will rest between them, also," continued Ruth. "I can hardly wait to see who wins it. Naturally, I would like to see Claire victorious, as she is from my home town."

The prize was to be given to the student who wrote the best thesis on any one subject of ten given by the faculty. The four scholars who had attained the highest mark in English, during their senior year at school, were eligible to enter the contest. Lucy was making her way up to her room just as Claire emerged from it. "Good evening, Claire," she said very pleasantly.

"Oh, good evening, Lucy. I thought you were in your room, and dropped in to see if you had any extra stamps, so it wouldn't be necessary to journey out for some."

Claire sauntered down the corridor, while Lucy closed herself in her room—a slight wonder in her mind.

It was glorious the next afternoon, an ideal day for graduation exercises. The diplomas were awarded. Now it was time for the prize essays to be read.

The first one opened and read was contributed by Amy Tudor. Clever presentation of the subject. Puffed forth quite a deal of enthusiasm.

During the reading of the next, everybody was intensely interested, and it was plain that it was making a wonderful impression. Claire's face was radiant when the reader spoke her name as belonging to the above.

During the reading of the third, which was not Lucy's, she sat very still, between her uncle and Dick. She was almost positive that what she wrote far exceeded Claire's, and she did not worry about the other two, as she felt assured that they were out of the race.

It was time for hers—she could not account for the feeling at her heart.

By this time her envelope was open. The president, gasped, and all dumbfounded held a blank paper before the astonished audience.

Everything went blank before Lucy. The next day Lucy read in all the papers of Claire's triumph. Her heart was broken. She couldn't understand. Dick came over to spend the day with her. He and her uncle tried to discuss the affair with her, but she refused to talk. She was like one in a trance.

Her uncle was greatly disappointed. He had placed so much faith in her sincerity and ability. Late in the next fall, her old uncle's days were few. One afternoon while Lucy and Dick were sitting at the bedside of the old man a letter came to Lucy. She opened it and almost devoured its contents. Dick noticed the amazed expression on her face. As he was about to question her she sensed it and shook her head in the negative. Shortly after her uncle asked to be propped up on some pillows so that he might look at both his children, as he called them, Lucy and Dick propped him up to comply with his wishes.

"Lucy," he faintly said, "I have not long to live and before I go, dear child, won't you as a favor tell me how that blank sheet of paper got into the envelope?"

"Uncle," she said, "I never knew myself until this afternoon and now you shall know." She drew forth a letter from the pocket of her frock and read aloud: "Dear Lucy—Inclosed find check for $1,000 which by all rights belongs to you. Of course the honor of accompanying it is gone, never to come back. I can't ask you to forgive me, as I am unable to forgive myself. Lucy, I happened to pick up your notebook one day and read the outline of your thesis. I knew in my heart that I could never excel or even equal it."

"You remember the night when you met me coming from your room when I asked you for the stamp? Well, that was when it all happened. The day previous I was over to dad's laboratory. He showed me some ink that he prepared which would fade within 24 hours. I brought some back with me and substituted it in place of your own ink. That accounts for the blank sheet of paper."

"It has nearly killed me—the thoughts of it. I'm sorry. Can you forgive? Of course not, but, Lucy, will you keep it from the world for my good parents' sake?"

"CLAIRE." In an instant one could see the look of relief come into the old man's face. Dick and Lucy knew that the next day when he passed into the great beyond he did so with a load off his mind.

"What happened to Dick, Lucy and the thousand dollars?" you ask. Well, Dick made Lucy happy, Lucy made Dick happy, and the thousand helped to make Lucy and Dick happy.

MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE HAS RAPID GROWTH

In the winter of 1914 a law was passed by the State Legislature which provided for the organization of mutual automobile insurance companies. The men who prepared this law organized the CITIZENS' AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE COMPANY of Howell, Michigan, taking out their license to do business August 27th, 1915. The company grew rapidly. Within a few months a number of competing companies were organized until now there are nine competing companies in the state.

One of these smaller companies had assets of $887.80; another had assets above liabilities of $88.14; a third had assets in excess of liabilities of $1,273.55; while a fourth had a surplus of but $65.27, according to their statements of January 1st, 1920.

The careful automobile owner is anxious to insure with a company having sufficient surplus on hand to pay the big claims. The CITIZENS' MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE COMPANY of Howell paid one liability claim in April, 1920, of $2,975, one fire claim of $5,975, a personal injury claim of $1,750. The company has never had to borrow a dollar and has always had sufficient surplus to pay its claims promptly. On account of the increased cost of automobiles and repairs it has made a slight increase in the cost of its policy. This has been approved by attorneys, bankers, business men, and farmers.

THE STATEMENT OF THE COMPANY AS OF MAY 1st, 1920, IS AS FOLLOWS:

CLAIMS PAID	No.	Amount.
Since organization	3270	$435,092.98
First 4 months of 1920	505	72,716.85
During April, 1920	131	25,557.38

RESOURCES

Current—
Cash in Banks, Commercial Acct.		$ 26,957.60
Cash in Banks, Savings Acct.		22,000.00
U. S. Bonds and Stamps		26,240.50
Total Current Assets		$ 75,198.10

Capital—

Insurance Building and Site	$26,402.57
Our Up-to-Date Equipment	10,745.47
	37,148.04

Total Resources $112,746.14

Why insure in a small company with insufficient surplus when you can insure in the largest exclusive mutual automobile insurance company in the world with experienced officers and adjusters to take care of all serious claims?

Boxes to Hold 8,000,000,000 Cans.
One hundred million wood boxes were required to pack last year's output of the canning industries in the United States, estimated at 8,000,000,000 cans.

Cuticura for Sore Hands.

Soak hands on retiring in the hot suds of Cuticura Soap, dry and rub in Cuticura Ointment. Remove surplus Ointment with tissue paper. This is only one of the things Cuticura will do if Soap, Ointment and Talcum are used for all toilet purposes.—Adv.

A Real Grievance!

The railroad official invited the stern citizen to communicate his troubles.

"I want you to give orders," demanded the visitor, "that the engineer of the express which passes through Elm Grove at 11:55 be restrained from blowing his whistle on Sunday mornings."

"Impossible!" exploded the official. "What prompts you to make such a ridiculous request?"

"Well, you see," explained the citizen, in an undertone, "our pastor preaches until he hears that whistle blow, and that confounded express was twenty minutes late last Sunday!" —New York Central Magazine.

Pleasure Missed.

"O!" said Marjorie as the dessert came on, "how I wish you had told me this morning, mamma, that you were going to have strawberries and cream for dinner!"

"Why, what difference would that have made?" inquired her mother.

"O, lots!" with a sigh. "I could have looked forward to it all day then."

Handicapped.

"I tried to tell that lady about my new Paris gown, but she wanted to talk about the new books."

"Embarrassed you, eh?"

"Yes; I don't know a thing about the latest style in books!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Answered.

If a new soda fountain drink or a new chewing gum is given a name that is foolish enough it will queer it.

Literal One.
"So you met Miss Daisy through church fair raffle?"
"Yes, quite a chance acquaintance."

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.
There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these annoying spots.
Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.
Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

ALL OF FAMILY NOT THERE

How Many of Spaniard's Daughters Were Missing Had to Be Left to the Imagination.

In Spain, and particularly in the province of Andalusia, families are so large that even Theodore Roosevelt would have been appalled.

Hamilton Pyfe, the well-known writer, was touring Andalusia on horseback one winter and spent the night in a fonda near Los Boliches.

At dinner over his hominy soup, Mr. Pyfe was amazed to see the multitude of daughters that the innkeeper possessed.

"You have a fine, a very fine family of daughters there," he said.

"Ah, señor," said the innkeeper, "we've been very unfortunate with our daughters. During a 1917 terror, the chimney fell in and killed all but eleven of them."

A Crazy Idea.

"Now, in this film you make violent love to your wife. And, if you like, you may have that part played by your wife."

"Are you plumb daffy?" demanded the screen star.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Patience—"Do cucumbers really affect all people?" Doctor—"No; only those who eat them."

Every Ford Owner Should Know

just what Ford Service is, and why it is different from ordinary garage service, and why it is more profitable to patronize the Authorized Ford Dealer? The Ford Dealer is a part of the Big Ford Family. He carries a large stock of genuine Ford parts for repairs and replacements so you don't have to wait while he sends for them, and he uses only genuine parts because he knows the imitation parts aren't dependable and don't wear.

He has a thoroughly equipped up-to-the-minute garage with tools that enable his Ford Mechanics to efficiently and properly make any repair, from a minor adjustment to a complete overhaul. And when the work is finished, his bill represents the reasonable, standard Ford prices.

Now, we are Authorized Ford Dealers, a part of that great Ford Service organization which was formed chiefly to put within each community a dealer who would have more than a passing interest in Ford repairs and adjustments. We are prepared and equipped to render prompt, careful Ford service. Drive in or phone and we'll come after your car.

Who OUGHT to be interested in seeing that your Ford operates as cheaply as possible—someone who is selling another make of car?

BREVITIES

Stockbridge—The graduating class of the Stockbridge high school will number twenty-two this year.

Grass Lake—The graduating class of the Grass Lake high school has nineteen members, seven boys and twelve girls.

Manchester—Deputy Sheriff Middlemiss arrested a man named Frey in Jackson Saturday on a charge of larceny of a load of wool from the Watkins farm and sold it in Jackson.

Ann Arbor—Writs of attachment have been issued against property owned by Homer C. and May Millen restraining them from disposing of such property during the hearing of suits brought by George Spatthelf, Fred Brown, Mary A. Lehman and Fred E. Tallmadge.

Jackson—The disposal sale of Jersey cattle, held at the farm of H. F. Probert, here on Wednesday of last week attracted buyers from all sections of the country. Sixty head of registered cows, calves and bulls were sold, the reports say, for $24,000. The stock went to New Jersey, Alabama, Kentucky, Missouri, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois.

Ablon—Mrs. Juliet Calhoun Blakeley, Ablon's oldest resident, who has been in this city since 1837, when it was known as the "Forks," quietly celebrated her one hundred and second birthday here last Thursday. She is still mentally active, but her physical powers are waning. Scores of letters and telegrams of congratulation came from all parts of the country.

Jackson—After nearly two months of fruitless investigation and search, the mystery of the Jackson "poker robbery," which occurred here early Sunday morning, March 28, when three men held up over forty poker players at a resort on Main street at the point of revolvers, has been solved. Three of five men apprehended at Battle Creek for planning a bank robbery broke down and confessed to the crime before leaving for Jackson to serve long terms. The men were Claude M. Atte, Howard Wayland and Harry Briggs. Each had been sentenced to serve from two to five years in prison.

Ann Arbor—Erwin Koch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Koch, of this city, met instant death Sunday morning in a peculiar manner. Koch, with his wife, 9-year-old boy and a party of relatives and friends, had started for Whitmore Lake, in a heavy truck. About two miles out of the city, half way up a long hill, the truck was stopped, the engine shut off and the brakes were applied, while Koch and a guest went down hill to get water for the radiator. In some manner the brakes failed to hold, and the heavy machine started down the hill. The truck struck Erwin in the back and ran over him, crushing him to death.

SHARON.

Sunday, May 9, being Mothers' Day, the daughters of Mrs. H. J. Reno and their families came to spend the day with her. As she was not aware of their coming each brought a basket containing eatables for the dinner. Pink carnations decorated the table. These present were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Breitenwischer and children of Sharon, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Hayes and daughter of Sylvan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Furgason and daughters of Clinton, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Lyon of Scio. The guests left for home at an early hour, wishing their mother many returns of this joyous occasion. The surprise was planned by her daughter, Miss Mayne Reno.

And Is Happening to Chelsea People Every Week.

The case told below is not an uncommon thing. The same occurs frequently and will continue to happen as long as folks have kidneys and overtax the kidneys.

Lewis Eichelbach, farmer, R. F. D. 2, Chelsea, says: "Two years ago I was in pretty bad shape with kidney trouble. I wasn't fit for any kind of work as my back was so painful. There was a constant weakness and soreness just over my kidneys. My head ached and I was very nervous, too. I didn't get any relief until I started taking Doan's Kidney Pills from Freeman's Drug Store. Three boxes cured me up and sound and well. I am glad to recommend them."

A Good Medicine for the Whole Family

Foley's Honey and Tar is a scientific combination of carefully selected remedies that experience proves loosens and breaks up a cough in short order.

Feels Like a New Man Now
Jas. Edwards, 208 Harriet St., Montgomery, Ala., writes: "I feel like a new man now from using Foley's Honey and Tar. I can sleep all night and cough but little. My whole family is using it—the little ones and the old ones. My wife tells me just as soon as the bottle gets low and I have to get another one. I have relieved all of our coughs and broke our colds. They are all in better shape than me now, and I am in good shape myself. My health is getting good—my cough is broken—the soreness in my chest is all gone. So many thanks to you for your treatment."

Foley's Honey and Tar COMPOUND

STOPS THAT DISTRESSING COUGH—checks it quickly and surely, clears the throat of phlegm and mucus, and coats the raw, inflamed surfaces with a healing, soothing medicine.

"We can prove no imitation or substitute is as good as the genuine Foley's."

Built In Bosch Magneto
Insures Hot Spark

"Z" Engine ignition—positive—powerful—perfect—from Bosch high tension oscillating magneto, built into every "Z" Engine, insures hot spark that gives utmost power from fuel. Oscillating type means quick start with little cranking.

Highest grade magneto on the market—every part interchangeable—accurately made as a fine watch. Its action is positive, its spark is fiery—intense—hot!

All contact parts extra strong—case hardened—wear resisting. This guarantees lifetime ignition service for the "Z". Perfect ignition gives the "Z" added power—quick starting—smooth, steady operation under all loads.

Come in today and let us tell you about other exclusive "Z" features. For instance: Runs on kerosene, coal oil, tops, as well as gasoline; more than rated power; every part interchangeable; clean-cut, efficient design; long-lived endurance.

Rats—

Rats destroy over THREE MILLION dollars' worth of corn, wheat, oats and other food products every year in the United States and we think it a great waste, as it is, but Government Reports show that losses due to people buying stocks, bonds and other speculative securities are over SEVENTY MILLION DOLLARS in our state alone. Is it not time to "sit up and take notice" that our

"More Power"

You know what happens when a car runs dry for lack of gasoline—it is just naturally out of business.

In other words you can't run a car without gasoline. A telephone company, or any other company, is in exactly the same fix; it can't run unless it gets enough financial "power" to keep the employees working "on all cylinders", and to insure proper operating conditions.

WE MUST HAVE YOUR SUPPORT
IF YOU ARE
TO HAVE THE TELEPHONE

You also know that it takes more "power" today to keep a business going than it ever did before. Workers must be paid more if they are to meet the increased cost of living; also everything that goes into the building and repairing of property has gone up in price. So long as you furnish the necessary "power" we will see to it that the telephone keeps running.

Arnold Steger, oldest son of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Steger, who underwent an operation for appendicitis last week, is making a nice recovery.

Philip Keusch has sold his residence on East Summit street to George M. Seitz. Mr. Seitz will move his family here from Jackson in the near future.

The family of Rev. Harvey Pearce, former pastor of the Chelsea M. E. church, has been quarantined in Detroit, on account of Mrs. Pearce having diphtheria.

The engagement of Miss Leona M. Belser to Mr. Gerrit J. Diekema, of Holland, Michigan, was announced at a breakfast given at her home, 350 Webb avenue, Detroit, on Saturday, May 15.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Slocum and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schanz have moved from the Farrell house on East street to the residence of Mrs. K. Otto Steinbach on the corner of West Middle street and Grant street.

The Chelsea Fishing Club will receive on Friday of this week, forty-one cans of perch fry from the state hatchery at Comstock Park. The members of the club will plant the fry in the lakes in this section.

Last Sunday a number of motocy-clists from various parts of the state gave an exhibition of hill climbing at the big hill north of Grass Lake village. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Collins of Chelsea witnessed the exhibition.

Railway employees inform the Standard that the Michigan Central railroad has let a contract to the firm of Palma & Marble for the section work on their right of way. So far there has been no change in the employees on the two sections in Chelsea.

Rev. G. W. Krause, pastor of St. Paul's church, attended the convention of the Ann Arbor district of the Evangelical League, at Manchester, Saturday and Sunday. Saturday afternoon he read a paper on "Our Schools," and on Sunday evening he conducted the altar service.

At the final meeting of the Bay View Reading Circle the following officers for the next term were elected: President, Mrs. G. W. Palmer; first vice president, Mrs. Rose J. Gregg; second vice president, Mrs. A. A. VanTyne; secretary, Mrs. Anna Hoag; treasurer, Miss Nina Crowell.

The following delegates from St. Paul's church Chelsea, attended the Ann Arbor district convention of the Evangelical League at Manchester, Saturday and Sunday: Misses Esther Bahnmiller, Katherine Hoffman, Lillie Wackenhut, and Dorothy Piele-meier, and Messrs. Oscar Lindauer and Otto Lucht.

Frank Leach on Saturday received a carload of cattle which he will feed this summer. A number of the farmers in this section have made arrangements for young cattle, which will be placed on their farms during the summer months. One of the largest feeders so far reported is Austin Balmer, of Lyndon, who has about eighty head of young cattle on his farm.

At a meeting of the Farm Bureau delegates at Ann Arbor last Friday, Geo. W. Gage, of Sylvan township, was elected as a delegate from Wash-tennaw county to the State Farm Bureau. Mr. Gage will also be an ex-officio member of the executive committee of the county organization and will represent the farmers of the western part of the county on the Farm Bureau board.

J. F. Waltrous, who has been ill for several months, is reported as being much improved.

The Chelsea merchants will close their stores all day on Decoration Day, Monday, May 31.

Mrs. Caroline Schiler and daughter will move to their new home in Jackson on Friday of this week.

The council has ordered a carload of calcium chloride to be used on the streets in an endeavor to keep down the dust.

County Clerk Smith has issued a marriage license to Oscar Bertke, of Manchester, and Miss Lavina Klose, of Sharon.

A party of fifteen members of Chelsea Lodge, K. of P., went to the home of J. H. Boyd, on the Chelsea-Manchester road, and gave him a surprise Wednesday evening.

The convention of district eight of the Pythian Sisters will be held in Ann Arbor Friday, May 21. It is desired that a large delegation from Chelsea Temple will attend. Take the 8:45 a. m. car.

The ballots in the Newberry-Ford senatorial election were taken to Ann Arbor Tuesday by the various township clerks of Washtenaw county for transfer to Washington, where the recount will take place.

During the past week the Chelsea merchants have been entirely out of sugar, and from present indications the shortage may continue for some time. The sugar problem is not the only one that has confronted the local dealers, as the gasoline supply at the Standard Oil Co.'s storage tanks here gave out Saturday, and with the present transportation facilities it is hard to foretell when a new supply will be received.

Chelsea merchants received cards this morning stating: "The Housewife's complaint to the pure food department stops the sale of Steffin granulated sugar to the retail trade. Can sell to manufacturers and bakers only. Sell what you have, will get no more." The sugar mentioned is the cornmeal colored sugar turned out by some beet sugar manufacturers. We fail to see why it is good enough for the bakers but not for household use, as their products go into the homes.

At the children's clinic held at the cement plant last Wednesday afternoon, there were twenty-four children examined, with five negative examinations and twenty-eight defects in the remaining nineteen children. Of these defects, two were rickets, five adenoids, thirteen abnormal tonsils, four poor dentition, two weak eyes, etc. Dr. Kempton of the U. of M. hospital did the examining. Miss Havey and Miss Stoll, of Ann Arbor, came over to assist in the work.

Married, on Wednesday afternoon, May 19, 1920, at the M. E. parsonage in Jackson, by Rev. Mr. Jones, assistant pastor of the First M. E. church, Miss Viola E. Dietle, of Jackson, and Mr. H. G. Shutes, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Shutes, of Lima. They were attended by Miss Rose Dietle, sister of the bride, and Mr. Leon Shutes, brother of the bridegroom. The bride is a graduate of the Manchester high school, and was deputy treasurer of Washtenaw county for the past two years. Mr. Shutes was a graduate of the Chelsea high school, and spent nearly two years with the A. E. F., the wedding occurring on the anniversary of his return from France. After a short trip to Cleveland and other cities, they will be at home to their friends at 403 Francis street, Jackson.

The M. E. church has secured for their next entertainment, May 28, "The Last Days of Pompeii," a play that will not only entertain everyone, but one that is instructive as well.

The VALLEY OF THE GIANTS

"FOR MY SAKE!"

Synopsis—Pioneer in the California redwood region, John Cardigan, at forty-seven, is the leading citizen of Sequoia, owner of mills, ships, and many acres of timber, a widower after three years of married life, and father of two-year-old Bryce Cardigan. At fourteen Bryce makes the acquaintance of Shirley Sumner, a visitor at Sequoia, and his junior by a few years. Together they visit the Valley of the Giants, sacred to John Cardigan and his son as the burial place of Bryce's mother, and part with mutual regret. While Bryce is at college John Cardigan meets with heavy business losses and for the first time views the future with uncertainty. After graduation from college, and a trip abroad, Bryce Cardigan comes home. On the train he meets Shirley Sumner, on her way to Sequoia to make her home there with her uncle, Colonel Pennington. Bryce learns that his father's eyesight has failed and that Colonel Pennington is seeking to take over the old man's business misfortunes. John Cardigan is despairing, but Bryce is full of fight. Bryce finds a buried redwood felled across his mother's grave. He goes to dinner at Pennington's on Shirley's invitation and finds the dining room paneled with built from the tree. Bryce and Pennington declare war, though Shirley does not know it. Bryce tells Jules Bonneau, Pennington's fighting logging boss, and forces him to confess that Pennington ordered the built tree cut. Pennington butts into the fight and gets hurt.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

The helpless bulk of the woods-boss descended upon the Colonel's expansive chest and sent him crashing earthward. Then Bryce, war-mad, turned to face the ring of Laguna Grande employees about him.

"Next!" he roared. "Steady, in pairs, or the whole damned pack!"

"Mr. Cardigan!"

He turned. Colonel Pennington's breath had been knocked out of his body by the impact of his semi-conscious woods-boss, and he lay inert, gasping like a hooked fish. Beside him Shirley Sumner was kneeling, her hands clasping her uncle's, but with her violet eyes blazing fiercely on Bryce Cardigan.

"How dare you?" she cried. "You coward! To hurt my uncle!"

He gazed at her for a moment, fiercely, defiantly, his chest rising and falling from his recent exertions, his knotted fists gory with the blood of his enemy. Then the light of battle died, and he hung his head. "I'm sorry," he murmured, "not for my sake, but yours. I didn't know you were here. I forgot—myself."

"I'll never speak to you again so long as I live," she burst out passionately.

He advanced a step and stood gazing down upon her. Her angry glance met his unflinchingly, and presently for him the light went out of the world.

"Very well," he murmured. "Good-bye." And with bowed head he turned and made off through the green timber toward his own logging-camp five miles distant.

With the descent upon his breast of the limp body of his big woods-bully, Colonel Pennington had been struck to earth as effectually as if a fair-sized tree had fallen on him, the last whiff of breath had been driven from his lungs; and for the space of a minute, during which Jules Bonneau lay heavily across his midriff, the Colonel was quite unable to get it back. Pale, gasping, and jarred from soil to suspenders, he was merely aware that something unexpected and disconcerting had occurred.

While the Colonel fought for his breath, his woodsmen remained in the ring, paralyzed into inactivity by the onset of the swiftness and thoroughness of Bryce Cardigan's work; then Shirley motioned to them to remove the wreckage, and they hastened to obey.

Freed from the weight on the geometric center of his being, Colonel Pennington stretched his legs, rolled his head from side to side, and snarled violently several times like a buck. After the sixth snort he felt so much better that a clear understanding of the exact nature of the catastrophe came to him; he struggled and sat up, looking around him a little wildly.

"Where—did—Cardigan—go?" he asked.

One of his men pointed to the timber into which the enemy had just disappeared.

"Surround him—take him," Pennington ordered. "I'll give a month's pay to each of the six men that bring that scoundrel to me. Get him—quickly! Understand?"

Not a man moved. Pennington shook with fury. "Get him," he croaked. "There are enough of you to do—" the job. Close in on him—everybody. I'll give a month's pay to—everybody."

A man of that indeliberate mixture of Spaniard and Indian known in California as cholo swept the circle of men with an alert and knowing glance. His name was Flavio Arctian, but his straight black hair, dark russet complexion, heavy eyes, and hawk nose gave him such a resemblance to a fowl that he was known among his fellows as the Black Minorca, regardless of the fact that this sobriquet was scarcely fair to a very excellent breed of chicken. "That offer's good enough for me," he remarked in businesslike tones. "Come on—everybody. A month's pay for five minutes' work. I wouldn't tackle the job with six men, but there are twenty of us here."

"Hurry," the Colonel urged them. Shirley Sumner's flashing glance rested upon the Black Minorca. "Don't you dare!" she cried. "Twenty to one! For shame!"

"For a month's pay," he replied impudently, and grinned evilly. "And I'm takin' orders from my boss." He started on a dog-trot for the timber, and a dozen men trailed after him.

Shirley turned helplessly on her uncle, seized his arm and shook it frantically. "Call them back! Call them back!" she pleaded.

Her uncle gazed uncertainly at his feet. "Not on your life!" he growled, and in his cold gray eyes there danced the lights of a thousand devils. "I told you the fellow was a ruffian. Now, perhaps, you'll believe me. We'll hold him until Bonneau revives, and then—"

Shirley guessed the rest, and she realized that it was useless to plead—that she was only wasting time. "Bryce! Bryce!" she called. "Run! They're after you. Twenty of them! Run, run—for my sake!"

His voice answered her from the timber: "Run? From those cattle? Not from man or devil." A silence. Then: "So you've changed your mind, have you? You've spoken to me again! There was triumph, exultation in his voice. "The timber's too thick, Shirley. I couldn't get away anyhow—so I'm coming back."

She saw him burst through a thicket of alder saplings into the clearing, saw a half dozen of her uncle's men close in around him like wolves around a sick steer; and at the shock of their contact, she moaned and hid her face in her trembling hands.

Half man and half tiger that he was, the Black Minorca, as self-appointed leader, reached Bryce first. The cholo was a squat, powerful little man, with more bounce to him than a rubber ball; leading his men by a dozen yards, he hesitated not an instant but dived under the blow Bryce lashed out at him and came up inside the latter's guard, feeling for Bryce's throat. Instead he met Bryce's knee in his abdomen, and forthwith he folded up like an accordion.

The next instant Bryce had stooped, caught him by the slack of the trousers and the scruff of the neck and thrown him, as he had thrown Bonneau, into the midst of the men advancing to his aid. Three of them went down backward; and Bryce, charging over them, stretched two more with well-placed blows from left to right, and continued on across the clearing, running at top speed, for he realized that for all the desperation of his fight and the losses already inflicted on his assailants, the odds against him were insurmountable.

"Get Off My Property, You Savage!" He Shrieked.

Seeing him running away, the Laguna Grande woodsmen took heart; and hope and pursuit him. Straight for the logging donkey at the dog-handling Bryce ran. Beside the donkey stood a neat tier of firewood; in the chopping block, where the donkey-drummer had driven it prior to abandoning his post to view the contest between Bryce and Jules Bonneau, was a double-bitted axe. Bryce jerked it loose, swung it, whirled on his pursuers, and rushed them. Like turkeys scattering before the raid of a coyote they fled in diverse directions and from a safe distance turned to gaze apprehensively upon this demon they had been ordered to bring in.

Bryce lowered the axe, removed his hat, and mopped his moist brow. From the center of the clearing men were crawling or staggering to safety—with the exception of the Black Minorca, who lay moaning softly. Colonel Pennington, seeing his fondest hopes expire, lost his head completely. "Get off my property, you savage!" he shrieked.

"Don't be a nut, Colonel," Bryce returned soothingly. "I'll get off—when I get good and ready, and not a second sooner. In fact, I was trying to get off as rapidly as I could when you sent your men to bring me back. Prithree why, old thing? Didst crave more conversation with me, or didst want my camp cleaned out?"

He started toward Pennington, who backed hastily away. Shirley stood her ground, heading upon Bryce, as he approached her, a cold and disapproving glance. "I'll get you yet," the Colonel declared from the shelter of an old stump behind which he had taken refuge.

"Barking dogs never bite, Colonel. And that reminds me: I've heard enough from you. One more cheap out of my mouth, my friend, and I'll go up to my logging-camp, return here with a crew of bluejays and wild Irish and run your wops, bobunks, and cholos out of the country. I don't fancy the class of labor you're importing into this country, anyhow."

The Colonel, evidently deciding that discretion was the better part of valor, promptly subsided, although Bryce could see that he was unlimbering threats to himself, though not in an audible voice.

"The demon Cardigan halted beside Shirley and stood gazing down at her. He was smiling at her whimsically. She met his glance for a few seconds; then her lids were lowered and she bit her lip with vexation.

"Shirley," he said.

"You are presumptuous," she quavered.

"You set me an example in presumption," he retorted good humoredly. "Did you not call me by my first name a minute ago?" The heir to Cardigan's redwoods bent over the girl.

"You spoke to me—after your promise not to, Shirley," he said gently. "You will always speak to me."

She commenced to cry softly. "I loathe you," she sobbed.

"For you I have the utmost respect and admiration," he replied.

"No, you haven't. If you had, you wouldn't hurt my uncle—the only human being in all this world who is dear to me."

"Gosh!" he murmured plaintively. "I'm jealous of that man. However, I'm sorry I hurt him. I give you my word I came here to fight fairly—"

"He merely tried to stop you from fighting."

"No, he didn't, Shirley. He interfered and fouled me. Still, despite that, if I had known you were a spectator I think I should have controlled myself and refrained from pulling off my vengeance in your presence. I shall never cease to regret that I subjected you to such a distressing spectacle. I do hope, however, that you will believe me when I tell you I am not a bully, although when there is a fight worth while, I never dodge it. And this time I fought for the honor of the House of Cardigan."

"If you want me to believe that, you will beg my uncle's pardon."

"I can't do that. He is my enemy and I shall hate him forever; I shall fight him and his way of doing business until he reforms or I am exhausted."

"You realize, of course, what your insistence on that plan means, Mr. Cardigan?"

"Call me Bryce," he pleaded. "You're going to call me that some day anyhow, so why not start now?"

"You are altogether insufferable, sir. Please go away and never presume to address me again. You are quite impossible."

He shook his head. "I do not give up that readily, Shirley. I didn't know how dear—what your friendship meant to me, until you sent me away; I didn't think there was any hope until you warned me those dogs were hunting me—and called me Bryce. He held out his hand. "God gave us our relations," he quoted, "but, thank God, we can choose our friends." And I'll be a good friend to you, Shirley Sumner, until I have earned the right to be something more. Won't you shake hands with me? Remember, this fight to-day is only the first skirmish in a war to the finish—and I am leading a forlorn hope. If I lose—well, this will be good-bye."

"I hate you," she answered dearly. "All our fine friendship—smashed—and you growing stupidly sentimental. I didn't think it of you. Please go away. You are distressing me."

He smiled at her tenderly, forgivingly, wistfully, but she did not see it. "Then it is really good-bye," he murmured with mock dolorousness.

She nodded her bowed head. "Yes," she whispered. "After all, I have some pride, you know. You mustn't presume to be the butterfly preaching contentment to the toad in the dust." "As you will it, Shirley." He turned away. "I'll send your axe back with the first trainload of logs from my camp, Colonel," he called to Pennington.

Once more he strode away into the timber. Shirley watched him pass out of her life, and gloried in what she conceived to be his agony, for she had both temper and spirit, and Bryce Cardigan calmly, blunderingly, rather stupidly (she thought) had presumed flagrantly on brief acquaintance.

The Colonel's voice broke in upon her bitter reflections. "That fellow Cardigan is a hard nut to crack—I'll say that for him." He had crossed the clearing to her side and was addressing her with his customary air of expansiveness. "I think, my dear, you had better go back into the caboose, away from the prying eyes of these rough fellows. I'm sorry you came, Shirley. I'll never forgive myself for bringing you. If I had thought—but how could I know that sounder was coming here to raise a disturbance? And only last night he was at our house for dinner!"

"I wonder what could have occurred to make such a madman out of him?" the girl queried wonderingly. "He acted more like a demon than a human being."

"Just like his old father," the Colonel purled benevolently. "When he can't get what he wants, he sulks. I'll tell you what got on his confounded nerves. I've been freighting logs for the senior Cardigan over my railroad; the contract for hauling them was a heritage from Bill Henderson, from whom I bought the mill and timber-lands; and of course as his assignee it was incumbent upon me to fulfill Henderson's contract with Cardigan, even though the freight-rate was ruinous.

"Is Mr. McTavish at Home?"

"Well, this morning young Cardigan came to my office, reminded me that the contract would expire by litigation next year and asked me to renew it, and at the same freight-rate. I offered to renew the contract but at a higher freight-rate, and explained to him that I could not possibly continue to haul his logs at a loss. Well, right away he flew in a rage and called me a robber; whereupon I informed him that since he thought me a robber, perhaps he had better not attempt to have any business dealings with each other—that I really didn't want his contract at any price, having scarcely sufficient rolling stock to handle my own logs. That made him calm down, but in a little while he lost his head again and grew snarly and abusive—to such an extent, indeed, that finally I was forced to ask him to leave my office."

"Nevertheless, Uncle Seth, I cannot understand why he should make such a furious attack upon your employee."

The Colonel laughed with a fair imitation of sincerity and tolerant amusement. "My dear, that is no mystery to me. Cardigan picked on Bonneau for the reason that a few days ago he tried to hire Bonneau away from me—offered him twenty-five dollars a month more than I was paying him, by George! Of course when Bonneau came to me with Cardigan's proposition, I promptly met Cardigan's bid and retained Bonneau; consequently Cardigan hates us both and took the earliest opportunity to vent his spite on us."

The Colonel sighed and brushed the dirt and leaves from his tweeds. "Thunder!" he continued philosophically. "It's all in the game, so why worry over it? And why continue to discuss an unpleasant topic, my dear?"

Her uncle took her gently by the arm and steered her toward the caboose. "Well, what do you think of your company now?" he demanded gayly.

"I think," she answered soberly, "that you have gained an enemy worth while and that it behooves you not to underestimate him."

CHAPTER VIII

Through the green timber Bryce Cardigan strode, and there was a lit in his heart now. Already he had forgotten the desperate situation from which he had just escaped; he thought only of Shirley Sumner's face, torn-stained with terror; and because he knew that at least some of those tears had been inspired by the gravest apprehensions as to his physical well-being, because in his ears there still resounded her frantic warning, he realized that however stern her decree of banishment had been, she was nevertheless not indifferent to him.

The climax had been reached—far passed; and the result had been far from the disaster he had pictured in his mind's eye ever since the knowledge had come to him that he was doomed to battle to a knockout with Colonel Pennington, and that one of the earliest fruits of hostilities would doubtless be the loss of Shirley Sumner's prized friendship. Well, he had lost her friendship, but a still small voice whispered to him that the loss was not irreparable—whereas he swung his axe as a bandmaster swings his baton; he was glad that he had started the war and was now free to fight it out unhampered.

Up hill and down dale he went. Within two hours his long, tireless stride brought him out into a clearing in the valley where his own logging-camp stood. He went directly to the log-landing, where in a listless and half-hearted manner the loading crew were piling logs on Pennington's logging trucks.

Bryce looked at his watch. It was two o'clock; at two-fifteen Pennington's locomotive would appear, to back in and couple to the long line of trucks. And the train was only half loaded.

"Where's McTavish?" Bryce demanded of the donkey-driver.

The man mouthed his quid, spat capriciously, wiped his mouth with the back of his hand, and pointed. "Up at his shanty," he made answer, and grinned at Bryce knowingly.

Up through the camp's single short street, flanked on each side by the woodsmen's shanties, Bryce went. At the most pretentious shanty on the street Bryce turned in. He had never seen it before, but he knew it to be the woods-boss's home, for unlike his neighbors the house was painted with the coarse red paint that is used on box-cars, while a fence, made of fancy painted pickets painted white, inclosed a tiny garden in front of the house. As Bryce came through the gate, a young girl rose from where she knelt in a bed of freshly transplanted pansies.

Bryce lifted his hat. "Is Mr. McTavish at home?" he asked.

She nodded. "He cannot see anyone," she hastened to add. "He's sick."

"I think he'll see me. And I wonder if you're Moira McTavish."

"Yes, I'm Moira."

"I'm Bryce Cardigan."

A look of fright crept into the girl's eyes. "Are you—Bryce Cardigan?" she faltered, and looked at him more closely. "Yes, you're Mr. Bryce. You've changed—but then it's six years since we saw you last, Mr. Bryce."

He came toward her with outstretched hand. "And you were a little girl when I saw you last. Now—you're a woman." She grasped his hand with the frank heartiness of a man.

"I'm twenty years old," she informed him.

"Stand right where you are until I have looked at you," he commanded, and backed off a few feet, the better to contemplate her.

He saw a girl slightly above medium height, tanned, robust, simply gowned in a gingham dress. Her hands were soiled from her recent labors in the pansy-bed, and her shoes were heavy and coarse; yet neither hands nor feet were large or ungainly. Her head was well formed; her hair, jet black and of unusual lustre and abundance, was parted in the middle and held in an old-fashioned coil at the nape of a neck the beauty of which was revealed by the low cut of her simple frock. Her nose was patrician, her face oval; her lips, full and red, were slightly parted in the adorable Cupid's bow which is the inevitable heritage of a short upper lip; her teeth were white as Parian marble; and her full breast was rising and falling swiftly, as if she labored under suppressed excitement.

So delightful a picture did Moira McTavish make that Bryce forgot all his troubles in her sweet presence. "By the gods, Moira," he declared earnestly. "you're a peach! When I saw you last, you were awkward and leggy, like a colt. I'm sure you weren't a bit good-looking. And now you're the most ravishing young lady in seventeen counties. By Jinco, Moira, you're a stunner and no mistake. Are you married?"

She shook her head, blushing pleasantly at his unpolished but sincere compliments.

"What? Not married. Why, what the deuce can be the matter with the eligible young fellows hereabouts?"

"There aren't any eligible young fellows hereabouts, Mr. Bryce. And I've lived in these woods all my life."

"Are you lonely, Moira?"

She nodded.

"Poor Moira!" he murmured absently.

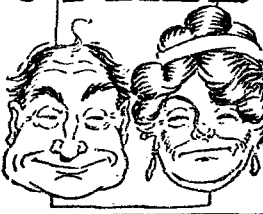

Moira McTavish and her "Prince Charming."

Movies Aid the Styles.
A prominent designer and importer of women's gowns has stated that the films have had an important effect on the demand for certain styles, particularly gowns of simple classic lines and "intriguing fabrics." A druggist reports that the sale of cosmetics has increased 25 per cent since the movies became popular.

In the Ink Pot.
An old steel pen, if kept in your ink pot to absorb the acid, will make you pens in daily use wear better.

A MAN AMONG MEN.

"I beg your pardon, but are you girls going East?" inquired the new-looking man as he leaned over the wheel of his packline in front of a Green street sorority house.

"Oh, yes," giggled one of the two co-eds, as she reached a daintily-poofed foot for the running board. "Thank you so much. I never can keep my directions straight in Cham-paign."

And the car glided away—Siren.

Admits One Failure.
First Henpeck—Ain't these wives the limit?

Second Henpeck—Nope, there's one thing my wife admits she doesn't know.

First Henpeck—What on earth is that?

Second Henpeck—Why she married me.—Judge.

A MYSTERY.
Bird—Now just what kind of a bird could have laid those funny green eggs?

A Prodigy.
For baby in independence. Rose. Our baby, can't be beat: Already 'twixt her mouth and toes She's making both ends meet.

All Settled.
Father—You won't marry Henri because he has red hair. You don't want M. Duquet because he has gray hair. I've no patience with you—

Daughter—Oh, papa!

Father—So now I have found a husband for you who has no hair at all!—Ruy Blas (Paris).

Advantage of Poesy.
"I understand Blighius has taken to composing poetry."

"What for?"

"He has made a lot of blunders in facts and dates; so he has adopted a form of expression which doesn't absolutely require a man to know exactly what he is talking about."

Quick Verdict Answers Question.
Eason—What kind of a lawyer did you have in your action for damages? Meeks—You can guess. The jury was out five minutes!—London Tit-Bits.

The Reason.
"I asked him to come down and talk things over. You see, he is such a high-priced man."

"Then he won't come down."

A MISTAKE.
Bug—Hey—this is the roughest sliding board I ever saw!

Queer.
It's curious, but it's often said, And I should like to know, Why some men tell to earn their bread And others work for dough.

His Finish.
Bluebird—What's this toy you're giving me for a birthday present? His Last Wife—Oh, you dear old stupid! I thought you'd look so much sorer without the horrid blue brush all over your face so I bought you this darling little safety razor.

Time's Changes.
"Doesn't it give you a kind of humble feeling to meet a girl you used to be engaged to long ago?"

"Yep. Always makes me wonder whether her taste used to be as bad as mine was."—Life.

What Mother Thought.
Joan (blushing)—Jack, mother was looking when you kissed me last night.

Jack—How did she take it?

"Well, she said she felt satisfied that you meant business."—London Tit-Bits.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me."

I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache. I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better. I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. You can publish this and I will tell any one who writes to me the good it has done me. Write to Mrs. MARGARET DANZ, 743 N. 25th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

Prayed for Cure Finds it After 10 Years

Food Would Sour and Boil—Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.

They'd Met Before.

My first attempt proving a failure. I embarked a second time upon the matrimonial seas. We returned from our honeymoon by way of a little town where my new husband had business interests. That afternoon, much to my surprise, I met an old schoolmate of mine on the street. She made me promise that we would dine with her the next evening.

"I'm a newly wed, too," she explained, "and I want you to meet Harry."

For me a most delicious dinner was spoiled. Harry proved to be my first husband! I experienced the most embarrassing moment of my life when my friend exclaimed, "O, you're acquainted!"—Chicago Tribune.

Italy Trains Blind Soldiers.

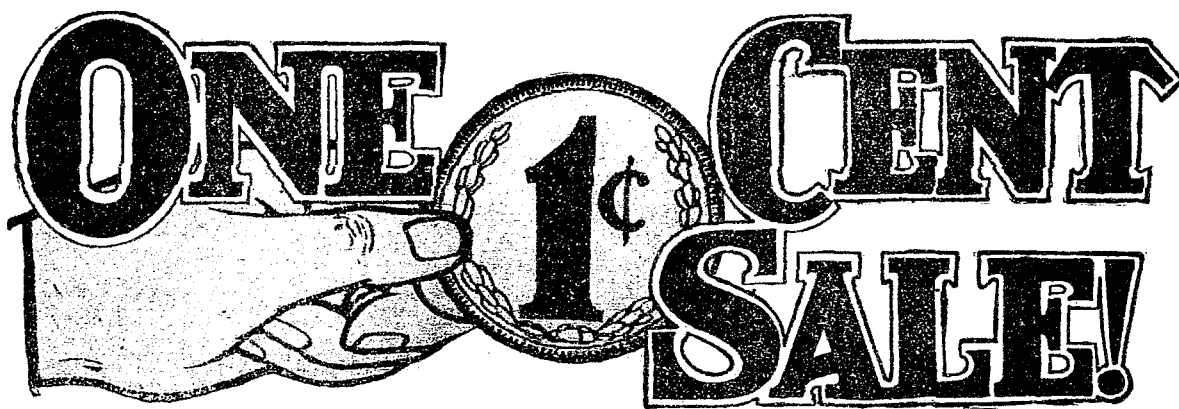

Italy has about 1,500 blind soldiers. All of these are being trained for useful employment. In addition to having lost their sight, a number of these unfortunate soldiers are without arms or legs. Several ingenious devices have been invented to assist the armless blind soldiers to read. One of these consists of a little pocket battery and a belt encircling the chest and containing small needles. The device plays a record that causes a different needle to prick for each letter and so the blind man reads.

Oranges for Marmalade.

Women who are in the habit of making orange marmalade—this is just time of year for doing it—will be interested to know that the crop of bitter oranges in the Seville consular district is very full and of magnificent quality, though only about 75 per cent as plentiful as that of last year. Most of it goes to the marmalade manufacturers in Dundee, but about 10,000 half chests are available for other markets.

What is a One-Cent Sale? It is a sale where you buy an item at the regular price—then another item of the same kind for 1c. As an illustration: The standard price of Rexall Tooth Paste is 25c. You buy a tube at this price, and by paying 1c more, or 25c, you get two tubes. Every article in this sale is a high-class standard piece of merchandise, just the same as we sell you every day at regular prices and have sold you for years.

A New Way of Advertising This sale was developed by the United Drug Co. as an advertising plan. Rather than spend large sums of money in other ways to convince you of the merit of these goods, they are spending it on this sale in permitting us to sell you a full-size package of high standard merchandise for 1c. It costs money to get new customers, and the loss taken on this sale will be well spent if the goods please you.
