250,000 Words at His Command

And at your command—and a sure point for every word. Always sharp but never sharpened, the Eversharp Pencil brings you a totally new idea of pencil efficiency, downright convenience and better writing.

As much a marvel of construction as a perfect writing aid. Built with jeweler precision. A built-in clip prevents it from being lost. An Eversharp becomes your right-hand friend and bosom companion for life.

EVERSHARP
The name is on the pencil

Come and see the Eversharp line, whether you are seeking the world's best pencil for yourself or some writing friend. Made for pocket, chain, or lady's bag. A 25c box of leads—enough for another quarter million words—replenishes the writing chamber; leads come in various degrees of hardness.

Pure Bred Cattle For Calf Clubs.

Fifty-three head of young heifers have been secured for boys and girls' club work in Washtenaw county. Last week County Agent Osler and County Club Leader Lyons returned from a trip in southeastern Ohio, where they purchased twenty head of Jerseys and eleven head of Shorthorn heifers, all of which will be used in club work. All of these are pure breeds and are of good breeding and fine individuals.

James Waldron, of the Michigan Agricultural College, and Glen Bird, of Ypsilanti, selected twenty-two head of registered Holsteins, which were all sired by a grandson of the King of the Pontiac. Several of the leading cattle breeders of the county have seen the cattle since they arrived and pronounced them excellent individuals, and consider that they will be of benefit in improving the live stock of the county. Arrangements have already been made for a large number of these to be taken by boys and girls, and within a short time the date for their distribution will be announced.

Perry C. Depew.

Perry C. Depew was born in Sylvan township, Washtenaw county, November 3, 1837, and died at the county infirmary Sunday evening, June 6, 1920. He was stricken with paralysis on Friday, May 21, and was found by Ray Whipple the next day. Being unable to get him in one of the hospitals in Ann Arbor, he was taken to the infirmary.

He never married, and had lived his entire life in Sylvan. He was youngest of a family of seven children, all of whom with the exception of one sister, Mrs. Martha Dean of Charlotte, have passed away. He is also survived by several nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon, Rev. H. R. Beatty conducting the services. Interment at Vermont cemetery.

Youths Suggested as Farm Workers.

Horatio S. Earle, director of the Boys' Working Reserve, has sent to every school principal in the state a request that efforts be made to get high school boys to take farm jobs this summer to avert a great shortage in food production. High school boys have done this work for the last three years but this year their help is needed more than ever, Mr. Earle says.

To each principal Mr. Earle is sending a list of responsible farmers in the same county, and to each of these farmers he is also sending letters, asking them, if they get letters from boys seeking work, either to hire them, help find them a job, or at any rate answer the request.

The limited funds at the disposal of the working reserve make it impossible to conduct a labor bureau, Mr. Earle says.

NORTH LAKE.

Ralph Deisenroth made a business trip to Sandstone Saturday.

Ernest and Laura Hudson spent the week-end with friends in Jackson.

Mrs. Geo. Webb and Mrs. Olive Clark were Jackson visitors Friday.

Mrs. Mary Gilbert is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. J. Brown, of Chelsea.

CHURCH CIRCLES.

"A Little Children."

By Rev. P. W. Dierberger.
Next Sunday the churches of America will observe Children's Day. The rights of childhood will be expounded and the great characteristics of childhood will be proclaimed. Has it ever occurred to you how often Jesus took a little child for His text. How often He rebuked the selfish behavior of feverish, ambitious men by putting into their midst a little child? Here is one of the great characteristics of the child-nature in which all healthy maturity must share.

Pure affection. In childhood, affection is spring water. In manhood, affection is too often tap water. It flows through pipes of expediency, prudence and calculation, and has lost its sparkle and limpidity. "Master, who shall be the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven?" There you have affection which is losing its purity, affection with an aim yoked to personal ambition. Now that is the perilous tendency when our lives merge out of childhood. Affection is prone to pass into long-sighted calculation.

"We have left all and followed Thee; what shall we have therefore?" Here love sets a price upon itself and demands payment. That is not the way of little children. Little children loved Jesus for the pure luxury of loving Him. Their love was its own reward. They loved Him and were happy. But are not older people prone to think that devotion to Jesus ought to be returned in the shape of temporal prosperity? Do we not half expect material payment for spiritual service? The Lord wants us have the pure, uncalculating love of childhood. He wants us to live so much with Him that to love Him shall be our highest bliss.

May Children's Day teach us this lesson.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

H. R. Beatty, Preacher.

The Sunday school will have charge of the service Sunday morning, rendering the Children's Day program, beginning at 10 o'clock.

Sunday being Community and Neighbor Sunday, the theme for the evening service will be "Boosting Chelsea." Mr. and Mrs. Tucker will sing.

A cordial welcome to all.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. P. W. Dierberger, Pastor.

Next Sunday is Children's Day and we will have appropriate exercises, both morning and evening, in which the children will take a very prominent part.

Baptism of children at the 10 o'clock service.

You are cordially invited.

License Mark Taps Last Year's Record

During the first five months of this year 22,500 more motor vehicle licenses have been issued than during the entire year 1919, according to a compilation made by F. D. Fitzgerald, deputy secretary of state. Up to June 1, 347,313 motor vehicles had been licensed, as against 325,813 in 1919. License fees collected during the last five months amounted to $1,853,000 as against $3,522,000 during 1919. Licenses are being issued at the rate of 1,000 a day, and it is estimated that 400,000 motor vehicles will be in operation in the state before the end of the year.

Big Conference of Rural Ministers.

Rural ministers from all parts of the state will gather in East Lansing from July 6 to 16 for the sixth annual conference of pastors and laymen, which is to be held in connection with the summer session of the Michigan Agricultural college.

More than twenty-five special lecturers are scheduled to address the conference, many of them being nationally known educators. Among these will be, Dr. Warren H. Wilson, of New York City; Bishop T. S. Henderson, of Detroit; Prof. C. H. Mochel, of Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. E. A. Ross of the University of Wisconsin; and Ralph Felton of New York City.

Women who attend the conference will have meetings of their own, presided over by members of the home economics faculty at the college, while many features of entertainment are being arranged.

Recreational work under the direction of the department of physical training at M. A. C. will be mixed in with the "mental exercise" of the conference.

Other special conferences to be held during the college summer term, which runs from June 21 to July 30 this year, will include a conference for teachers of household art and domestic science, June 29 to July 2; a school of instruction for women in political organization, June 29 to July 2; the fifth annual conference for leaders of boys and girls clubs, July 6 to 9; and special meetings for science teachers and teachers of agriculture.

Lafayette Grange Meeting.

Lafayette Grange will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sager on Thursday evening, June 17. The program follows:

Music—Miss Cora Feldkamp.
Roll Call—Conundrums.
Recitation—Glenn Wiseman.
Reading—Mrs. G. K. Chapman.
Solo—Mrs. Elba Gage.
Reading—Mrs. B. Fortman.
Topic for Discussion—Are Farmers Getting a Fair Share of the Wealth They Produce? If not, why?

UNADILLA.

Mrs. Frank Birney is visiting relatives in Howell.

Miss Ruth Watson of Jackson, spent the week-end at her home here.

Miss Agnes Ellsworth spent the week-end with Miss Esther Barnum.

Mr. and Mrs. Helvey and family called at the home of Vet Bullis Sunday.

Miss Nen Wilkinson, of Chelsea, spent the week-end with Miss Lucille Barnum.

Mrs. E. Bowling and son, of Ann Arbor, called at the home of Frank Aseltine Tuesday.

William Secor and daughter Ida and Miss Esther Barnum were in Chelsea Thursday.

L. Z. Hartsuff, of Jackson spent a few days of last week at the home of his parents here.

Rev. and Mrs. Matthews and family of Webberville, visited Rev. and Mrs. Harris, of Unadilla, Wednesday.

Children's day will be observed at the M. E. church Sunday morning, June 13. A fine program is being prepared.

Miss Grace Ellis, who has been teaching school in the west, returned to her home here for the summer vacation.

Richard E. McKinder, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard McKinder, died at the family home as the result of a shooting accident Saturday. A party of boys were shooting at a mark, when, while in play, the gun was discharged, the shot taking effect over the right eye of the McKinder boy, who never regained consciousness.

Unadilla was the scene of an accident Saturday, when a Ford car going about fifty miles an hour, turned over in the middle of the road just north of the bridge. The machine was all smashed up, but Cecil Teachout and Harold Bates, who were the passengers, luckily escaped with nothing more serious than skinned legs and bruised heads. The machine was owned by Frank Bates, Harold's father.

BREVITIES

Dexter—At a meeting of the Allion Vermin Proof Perch Co., Tuesday evening, Jay Page was elected treasurer and Jos. Schnebelt as a director. Dexter Leader.

Manchester—Mrs. Henry Steinway, a resident of this village, died at her home June 2, of cancer, leaving a husband, a son and two daughters. Funeral services were held at Emmanuel's church Friday.

Saffee—Robert Parsons was called to Chicago the first of the week as a witness for the government in an accident case with one of the boys at the training camp two years ago. Saline Observer.

Manchester—Car drivers have been reckless as to traffic rules and an officer made complaint against a number, who were fined $5 each and costs of $5 more. With the increased amount of traffic every car driver should use the utmost care to prevent accidents. Manchester Enterprise.

Jackson—Both main lines of the Michigan Central railroad were blocked for nearly four hours Sunday morning as a result of the derailment of a heavy train loaded with crushed stone at Michigan Center. The wrecking crew had the lines clear and service restored shortly after noon. Jackson News.

Stockbridge—About 11 a. m., last Friday, H. K. Smith was called in to investigate the killing of sheep on the T. Berry farm. In all 13 were killed and crippled by dogs, which Vincent followed up and claims the same are owned by Arthur Manger and Will Fink, and killed Fink's dog. Stockbridge Brief-Sun.

Ypsilanti—There is on display in the recreation window a suit worn by Guy Robinson, an aviator in the late war. It is not much for beauty but was built for warmth. It comprises a coat, pants, gloves, boots, all lined throughout with heavy fur. The suit has six bullet holes through it, and Mr. Robinson carries the Hun mark in a disabled arm. He is well known here and is at present attending the university at Ann Arbor. Ypsilanti Record.

Ann Arbor—The contract for a five mile drain in Sumpter township has been let to a Mr. Fosket, a Howell dredger, according to an announcement made by County Drain Commissioner Deake Saturday morning. The contract price was $10,900. This is a joint drain leading partly through Wayne and partly through Washtenaw counties. Bids were received on sections from the farmers of the community through which the drain will lead. The farmer bids amounted, however, to $13,908.

Ann Arbor—Daniel C. Haas, merchant of 114 West Liberty street, was arraigned before Justice John D. Thomas Friday morning on the charge of selling short of the specified weight. Haas pleaded not guilty, and his case will come up Wednesday for hearing. The complaint was made by William Warner, 704 Felch street, who charged the grocer of selling sugar to him supposed to be 25 pounds in weight when in reality he claimed it weighed but 19 1/2 pounds. Ann Arbor Times News.

Ypsilanti—John Gruel, of Detroit, thought he put one over on Deputy Sheriff Elliott Sunday afternoon. The officer however turned the tables and threw Gruel into jail. Elliott, Sunday, caught Gruel speeding and took him to police headquarters where he put up a deposit of $25 for his appearance in court. Officer Elliott gave him a receipt for the money and remained to talk with Chief Connors and Supervisor G. M. Gaudy, who happened to be present. Gruel picked up the $25 without being noticed and left. The officers called up Dearborn where Gruel was stopped and Elliott brought him back and into jail.

Tecumseh—Superintendent E. E. Crampton announces the Tecumseh high school has just been admitted to the list approved by the North Central association. This means that graduates from the local school are to be admitted to any college or university in Central United States without examination. E. E. Gallup, state director of the agricultural department, was here yesterday, inspecting the work of our high school. He reports the local "ag" department 100 per cent efficient and that only one school in the state is entitled to more of the state money for that department and that is due to its employing two teachers. Tecumseh Herald.

As Clean Cut as a Thoroughbred

The clean-cut businesslike design of the "Z" Engine results from efficiency in manufacture. A farm engine, to be efficient, must be properly designed—may also have graceful lines—free from geggaws.

Immensely strong in every part—weight where weight is needed. Every strain foreseen—every contact part case hardened—all parts carefully, precisely made by accurate machine work—therefore interchangeable.

Looks like a thoroughbred—is one. Delivers a steady flow of power—runs smoothly—operates economically. Unit assembly, precision methods, and efficient design make it the perfect farm engine. A mighty pleasing engine to look at. Come in and see it today.

Other "Z" features are: Runs on kerosene, coal oil, tops, as well as gasoline; built in Bosch high tension oscillating magneto; more than rated power; every part interchangeable; long-lived endurance.

They Visited Detroit.

Recently a company of Chelsea people were taken to Detroit by Dr. Victor Brown of Wayne, and given the city.

They were taken first, on reaching Detroit, to the Majestic building, to the offices of the Security Mortgage Corporation where they met the president and other officers of the company, and where a young man with a blackboard and chalk and a head full of facts and figures spoke of the plan, the management and the safety of the corporation as an investment proposition.

The officers, at the request of Dr. Brown, extended the courtesy of showing them their books and the actual transactions that are being made, and also their profits which are far more than satisfactory.

As one of the men from Chelsea remarked to Dr. Brown afterward, "You did not begin to tell us how good a proposition this actually is."

The company was next taken to the Detroit Athletic Club for a fine lunch. The diners were pretty well up in the world, most of them being Detroit business men drawing salaries of from $5,000 to $20,000 a year, but the Chelsea visitors got away with their part in excellent shape.

Now, said Dr. Brown, do you want to see a belt, a beam and a coil of tin go in a factory on one side and come out on the other side a Ford car? The vote in the affirmative was unanimous.

Town Sells for $10,000.

The entire town of Moneta, Wyo., has been sold for $10,000. The purchaser, John Goodman, received title from A. Kanson, who founded Moneta twenty years ago, to the following:

One townsite of forty lots, one eighteen-room hotel, one five-room cottage, one three-room cottage, two two-room cottages, one large livery barn, one railroad eating house and a miscellaneous assortment of outbuildings.

No person other than Goodman owns a single thing in Moneta, but the Chicago and Northwestern owns the right of way on which the town site fronts and a small depot building on this right of way.—Christian Science Monitor.

Biggest Opal in the World.

Proclaimed as the largest uncut precious stone in the world, an enormous, absolutely flawless black opal, recently discovered in this country, is now in the office of a government official in Washington. The gem contains approximately 21 cubic inches, and weighs 2,572.332 carats. It is valued at $250,000 by the owners. The famous Viennese opal, which was without an equal until the American specimen was found, weighs 1,658,927 carats, but has a number of flaws.

"Should a Husband Forgive?"

In this Fox Big Special Production the problem that has baffled mankind ever since "Eve bit into the Pippin" and lost her home is All-Starred into the heart and memory of everybody who sees this elaborately done photodrama.

Delicate and masterly situations crowd one another every foot of the way. Pathos and comedy happily commingle. Tenseness and relaxation are in superabundance. Every dull second was deleted before this stalwart picture production was first publicly displayed.

Ypsilanti—There is on display in the recreation window a suit worn by Guy Robinson, an aviator in the late war. It is not much for beauty but was built for warmth. It comprises a coat, pants, gloves, boots, all lined throughout with heavy fur. The suit has six bullet holes through it, and Mr. Robinson carries the Hun mark in a disabled arm. He is well known here and is at present attending the university at Ann Arbor.—Ypsilanti Record.

THE QUESTION OF FIT

When applied to our summer Suits means perfection as nearly as human hands are capable of producing.

Our new summer Suits are absolutely and positively free from puckers, wrinkles and creases and there is not a Custom Tailor on the face of the earth who could supply more graceful drape and fit than our new summer clothing affords.

The VALLEY of the GIANTS

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "Cappy Ricks"

Copyright by Peter B. Kyne

"SOMETHING NICE—"

Synopsis: Moore in the California redwood region John Cardigan, at forty-seven, is the leading citizen of Sequoia, owner of mills, shins, and many acres of timber, a widower after three years of married life, and father of two-year-old Bryce Cardigan. At fourteen Bryce makes the acquaintance of Shirley Sumner, a visitor at Sequoia, and his junior by two years. Together they visit the Valley of the Giants, sacred to John Cardigan and his son as the burial place of Bryce's mother, and part with mutual regret. While Bryce is at college John Cardigan meets with heavy business losses and for the first time views the future with uncertainty. After graduation from college, and a trip abroad, Bryce returns home. On the train he meets Shirley Sumner, on her way to Sequoia to make her home there with her uncle, Colonel Pennington. Bryce learns that his father's estate has failed and that Colonel Pennington is seeking to take advantage of the old man's business misfortunes. John Cardigan is despairing, but Bryce is full of fight. Bryce finds a bird redwood felled across his mother's grave. He goes to dinner at Pennington's on Shirley's invitation and finds the dining room paneled with bird from the tree. In a diplomatic way, unpersuaded by Shirley, the two men declare war. Pennington refuses to reveal his financial contract with the Cardigans, believing his action means bankruptcy for the latter. Bryce forces Cardigan to confess he felled the tree in the Valley of the Giants, at Pennington's order. After punishing the man Bryce burns him at Colonel Pennington, who has tried to foul him in the light. Pennington is humiliated, and the girl, indignant, orders Bryce to leave and forget their friendship. He leaves, but refuses to accept dismissal. Returning to Sequoia, the logging train on which Shirley and her uncle and Bryce are traveling breaks away from the locomotive, and Bryce, who could have escaped, at the risk of his life cuts out the engine and saves them from certain death, being seriously injured in doing so. Shirley tries to put their friendship back on its old basis, but Bryce tells her he intends to smother her uncle at all costs. So he all but abandons her. Bryce renews acquaintance with Moira McCavish, daughter of his wood-boss.

"I think so, Mr. Bryce. I copied it from Colonel Pennington's niece, Miss Sumner."

"Oh," he replied briefly. "You've met her, have you? I didn't know she was in Sequoia still."

"She's been away, but she came back last week. I went to the Valley of the Giants last Saturday afternoon."

Bryce interrupted. "You didn't tell my father about the tree that was cut, did you?" he demanded sharply.

"No."

"Good girl. He mustn't know. Go on, Moira. What was she doing in the timber?"

"She told me that once, when she was a little girl, you had taken her for a ride on your pony up to your mother's grave. And it seems she had a great curiosity to see that spot again."

"I've met Miss Sumner three or four times. That was when she first came to Sequoia. She's a stunning girl, isn't she?"

"Perfectly, Mr. Bryce. She's the first lady I've ever met. She's different."

"No doubt! Her kind are not a product of homely little communities like Sequoia. And for that matter, neither is her wolf of an uncle. What did Miss Sumner have to say to you, Moira?"

"She told me all about herself—and she said a lot of nice things about you, Mr. Bryce, after I told her I worked for you. And she insisted that I should walk home with her. So I did—and the butler served us with tea and toast and marmalade. Then she showed me all her wonderful things—and gave me some of them. Oh, Mr. Bryce, she's so sweet."

"I can see that you and Miss Sumner evidently hit it off just right with each other. Are you going to call on her again?"

"Oh, yes! She begged me to. She says she's homesick."

"I dare say she is, Moira. I'm glad you've gotten to know each other. I've no doubt you find life a little lonely sometimes."

"Sometimes, Mr. Bryce."

"How's my father?"

"Splendid. I've taken good care of him for you."

"Moira, you're a sweetheart of a girl. I don't know how we ever managed to wiggle along without you. Fraternally—almost paternally—he gave her radiant cheek those light little pats as he strode past her to the private office. He was in a hurry to get to his desk, upon which he could see through the open door a pile of letters and orders, and a moment later he was deep in a perusal of them, oblivious to the fact that ever and anon the girl turned upon him her brooding, Madonna-like glance."

"That night Bryce and his father, as was their custom after dinner, returned to their coffee. John Cardigan opened the conversation with a contented grunt.

"I believe you have something on your mind."

Bryce slipped a cigar and held a lighted match while his father "smoked up." Then he slipped into the easy chair beside the old man.

"Well, John Cardigan," he began eagerly, "fate ripped a big hole in our dark cloud the other day and showed me some of the silver lining. I've been making head medicine for Colonel Pennington."

"What's in the wind, boy?"

"We're going to parallel Pennington's logging road."

"Inasmuch as that will cost close to three-quarters of a million dollars, I'm

"We're Going to Parallel Pennington's Logging Road."

of the opinion that we're not going to do anything of the sort."

"Perhaps. Nevertheless, if I can demonstrate to a certain party that it will not cost more than three-quarters of a million, he'll loan me the money."

The old man shook his head. "I don't believe it, Bryce. What's the crazy man?"

"His name is Gregory. He's Scotch."

"Now I know he's crazy. When he hands you the money, you'll find he's talking real money, but thinking of Confederate greenbacks."

Bryce laughed. "I'm declared, 'if you and I have any brains, they must roll around in our skulls like hailstones in a tin pan. Listen, now, with all your ears. When Bill Henderson wanted to build the logging railroad which he afterward sold to Pennington, and which Pennington is now using as a club to beat our brains out, did he have the money to build it?"

"No. I loaned it to him."

"How did he pay you back?"

"Why, he gave me a ten-year contract for hauling our logs at a dollar and a half a thousand feet, and I merely credited his account with the amount of the freight bills he sent me until he'd squared up the loan, principal and interest."

"Well, if Bill Henderson financed himself on that plan, why didn't we think of using the same time-honored plan for financing a road to parallel Pennington's?"

John Cardigan sat up with a jerk. "By thunder!" he murmured. That was as close as he ever came to uttering an oath.

"All right, John Cardigan. I forgive you. Now, then, continue to listen: To the north of that great block of timber held by you and Pennington lie the redwood holdings of the Trinidad Redwood Lumber company."

"Never heard of them before."

"Well, timber away in there in back of beyond has never been well advertised, because it is regarded as practically inaccessible. You will remember that some ten years ago a company was incorporated with the idea of building a railroad from Grant's Pass, Ore., on the line of the Southern Pacific, down the Oregon and California coast to tap the redwood belt."

"I remember. There was a big whoop and furrah and then the proposition died aborning. The engineers found that the cost of construction through that mountainous country was prohibitive."

"Well, before the project died, Gregory and his associates believed that it was going to survive. They quietly gathered together thirty thousand acres of good stuff and then sat down to wait for the railroad. And they are still waiting. Gregory, by the way, is the president of the Trinidad Redwood Lumber company. He's an Edinburgh man, and the fly American found him to put up the price of the timber and then mortgaged their interests to him as security for the advance. He foreclosed on their notes five years ago."

"And there he is with his useless timber!" John Cardigan murmured thoughtfully. "The poor Scotch sucker!"

"He isn't poor. The purchase of that timber didn't even dent his bank roll. But he would like to sell his timber, and being Scotch, naturally he desires to sell it at a profit. In order to create a market for it, however, he has to have an outlet to that market. We supply the outlet—with his help; and what happens? Why, timber that cost him fifty and seventy-five cents per thousand feet stumpage—and the actual timber will overpay the cruiser's estimate every time—will be worth two dollars and fifty cents—perhaps more."

"He loans us the money to build our road. We build it—on through our timber and into his. The collateral security which we put up will be a twenty-five-year contract to haul his logs to tidewater on Humboldt bay, at a base freight rate of one dollar and fifty cents, with an increase of twenty-five cents per thousand every five years thereafter, and an option for a renewal of the contract upon expiration, at the rate of freight last paid. In addition we sell him, at a reasonable figure, sufficient land fronting on tidewater to enable him to erect a sawmill, buy out his yards, and build a dock out into the deep water."

"Thus Gregory will have that which he hasn't got now—an outlet to his market by water; and when the railroad to Sequoia builds in from the south, it will connect with the road which we have built from Sequoia up into Township nine to the north; hence Gregory will also have an outlet to his market by rail. He can easily get a good manager to run his lumber business, and he finds a customer for it, and in the meantime we will be charging his account with our freight bills against him, and gradually pay off the loan without pinching ourselves."

John Cardigan's old hand came gropingly forth and patted affectionately upon his boy's. "You forget, my son, that we cannot just in business enough to get that road built, even though Gregory should agree to finance the building of it. The interest on our bonded indebtedness is payable on the first."

"We can meet it, sir."

"Aye, but we can't meet the fifty thousand dollars which, under the terms of our deed of trust, we are required to pay in on July first of each year as a sinking fund toward the retirement of our bonds. Bryce, it just can't be done. We've had our road about half completed when we'd built up in business; indeed, the minute Pennington suspected we were paralleling his line, he'd choke off our wind. I tell you it can't be done."

But Bryce contradicted him earnestly. "It can be done," he said. "If we can start building our road and have it half completed before Pennington jumps on us, Gregory will simply have to come to our aid in self-defense. Once he ties up with us, he's committed to the task of seeing us through. I can do it! I tell you."

John Cardigan raised his hand. "No," he said firmly. "It will not allow you to do this. That way—that is the Pennington method. If we fail, my son, we pass out like gentlemen, not blackguards. We will not take advantage of this man Gregory's faith. If he joins forces with us, we lay our hand on the table and let him look."

"Then he'll never join hands with us, partner. We're done."

"We're not done, my son. We have one alternative, and I'm going to take it. I've got to—for your sake. Moreover, your mother would have wished it so."

"You don't mean—"

"Yes, I do. I'm going to sell Pennington my Valley of the Giants. It is my personal property, and it is not mortgaged. Pennington can never foreclose on it—and until he gets it, twenty-five hundred acres of virgin timber on Squaw creek are valueless—nay, a source of expense to him. Bryce, he has to have it; and he'll pay the price, when he knows I mean business."

With a sweeping gesture he waved aside the arguments that rose to his son's lips. "Lead me to the telephone," he commanded; and Bryce, recognizing his sire's unalterable determination, obeyed.

"Find Pennington's number in the telephone book," John Cardigan commanded next.

Bryce found it, and his father proceeded to get the Colonel on the wire. "Pennington," he said hoarsely, "this is John Cardigan speaking. I've decided to sell you that quarter-section that blocks your timber on Squaw creek."

"Indeed," the Colonel parried. "I had an idea you were going to present it to the city for a natural park."

"I've changed my mind. I've decided to sell it at your last offer."

"I've changed my mind, too. I've decided not to buy—at my last offer. Good-night."

Stoody John Cardigan hung the receiver on the hook, turned and groped for his son. When he found him, the old man held him for a moment in his arms. "Lead me upstairs, son," he murmured presently. "I'm tired. I'm going to bed."

When Colonel Seth Pennington turned from the telephone and faced his niece, Shirley read his triumph in his face. "Old Cardigan has capitulated at last," he cried exultingly. "He just telephoned to say he'd accept my last offer for his Valley of the Giants."

"But you're not going to buy it. You told him so, Uncle Seth."

"Of course I'm not going to buy it. At my last offer. It's worth five thousand dollars in the open market, and once I offered him fifty thousand for it. Now I'll give him five."

"I wonder why he wants to sell," Shirley mused. "From what Bryce Cardigan told me once, his father attaches a sentimental value to that strip of woods; his wife is buried there."

"He's selling it because he's desperate. If he wasn't teetering on the verge of bankruptcy, he'd never let me outsize him," Pennington replied gayly. "I'll wait until he has gone best—and save twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars."

"I think you're biting off your nose to spite your face, Uncle Seth. The Laguna Grande Lumber company needs that outlet. In dollars and cents, what is it worth to the company?"

"If I thought I couldn't get it from Cardigan a few months from now, I'd go as high as a hundred thousand for it tonight," he answered coolly.

"In that event, I advise you to take it for fifty thousand. It's terribly hard on old Mr. Cardigan to have to sell it, even at that price."

"You do not understand these matters, Shirley. Don't try. And don't waste your sympathy on that old hunchback. He has to dig up fifty thousand dollars to pay on his bonded indebtedness, and he's finding it a difficult job. He's just sparring for time, but he'll lose out."

As if to indicate that he considered the matter closed, the Colonel drew his chair toward the fire, picked up a magazine, and commenced idly to silt the pages. Shirley studied the back of his head for some time, then got out some fancy work and commenced playing her needle. And as she piled it, a thought nebulous at first, gradually took form in her head until eventually she murmured loud enough for the Colonel to hear:

"I'll do it."

"Do what?" Pennington queried.

"Something nice for somebody who did something nice for me," she answered.

About two o'clock the following afternoon old Judge Moore of the Superior court of Humboldt county, drifted into Bryce Cardigan's office, sat down uninvited, and lifted his long legs in the top of an adjacent chair.

"Well, Bryce, my boy," he began, "a little bird tells me your daddy is considering the sale of Cardigan's Redwoods, or the Valley of the Giants. How about it?"

Bryce stared at him a moment questioningly. "Yes, Judge," he replied. "We'll sell, if we get our price."

"Well," his visitor drawled, "I have a client who might be persuaded. I'm here to talk turkey. What's your price?"

"Before we talk price," Bryce parried, "I want you to answer a question."

"Let her fly," said Judge Moore.

"Are you, directly or indirectly, acting for Colonel Pennington?"

"That's none of your business, young man—at least, it would be none of your business if I were, directly or indirectly, acting for him."

"Then, Bryce, my boy," he began, "a little bird tells me your daddy is considering the sale of Cardigan's Redwoods, or the Valley of the Giants. How about it?"

Bryce stared at him a moment questioningly. "Yes, Judge," he replied. "We'll sell, if we get our price."

"Well," his visitor drawled, "I have a client who might be persuaded. I'm here to talk turkey. What's your price?"

"Before we talk price," Bryce parried, "I want you to answer a question."

"Let her fly," said Judge Moore.

"Are you, directly or indirectly, acting for Colonel Pennington?"

"That's none of your business, young man—at least, it would be none of your business if I were, directly or indirectly, acting for him."

"The Lord Loveth a Quick Trader," He Declared.

directly, acting for that unconvicted thief. To the best of my information and belief, Colonel Pennington doesn't figure in this deal in any way, shape or manner; and as you know, I've been your daddy's friend for thirty years."

Still Bryce was not convinced, notwithstanding the fact that he would have staked his honor on the judge's veracity. Nobody knew better than he in what devious ways the Colonel worked, his wondrous to perform.

"Well," he said, "I can name you a price. I will state frankly, however, that I believe it to be over your head. We have several times refused to sell to Colonel Pennington for a hundred thousand dollars."

"Naturally that little dab of timber is worth more to Pennington than to anybody else. However, my client has given me instructions to go as high as a hundred thousand if necessary to get the property."

"What?"

"I said it. One hundred thousand dollars of the present standard weight and fineness."

Judge Moore's last statement swept away Bryce's suspicions. He required now no further evidence that, regardless of the identity of the judge's client, that client could not possibly be Col. Seth Pennington or anyone acting for him, since only the night before Pennington had curtly refused to buy the property for fifty thousand dollars. For a moment Bryce stared stupidly at his visitor. Then he recovered his wits.

"Sold!" he almost shouted, and after the fashion of the West extended his hand to clench the bargain. The judge shook it solemnly. "The Lord loveth a quick trader," he declared. "Here's the deed already made out in favor of myself, as trustee." He winked knowingly.

"Client's a bit modest, I take it," Bryce suggested.

"Oh, very. Of course I'm only hazarding a guess, but that guess is that the Colonel is in for a razzooing at the hands of somebody with a small grudge against him."

"May the Lord strengthen that somebody's arm," Bryce breathed fervently. "If your client can afford to hold out long enough, he'll be able to buy Pennington's Squaw creek timber at a bargain."

"My understanding is that such is the program."

Bryce reached for the deed, then reached for his hat. "If you'll be good enough to wait here, Judge Moore, I'll run up to the house and get my father to sign this deed. The Valley of the Giants is his personal property, you know. He didn't include it in his assets when incorporating the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company."

A quarter of an hour later he returned with the deed duly signed by John Cardigan and witnessed by Bryce; whereupon the judge carelessly tossed his certified check for a hundred thousand dollars on Bryce's desk and departed whistling "Turkey in the Straw." Bryce reached for the telephone and called up Colonel Pennington.

"Bryce Cardigan speaking," he began, and the Colonel cut him short.

"My dear, impulsive young friend," he interrupted in oleaginous tones, "how often do you have to be told that I am not quite ready to buy that quarter-section?"

"Oh," Bryce retorted, "I merely called up to tell you that every dollar and every asset you have in the world, including your heart's blood, isn't sufficient to buy the Valley of the Giants from us now."

"Eh? What's that? Why?"

"Because, my dear, overcautious and thoroughly unprincipled enemy, it was sold five minutes ago for the tidy sum of one hundred thousand dollars, and if you don't believe me, come over to my office and I'll let you feast your eyes on the certified check."

He could hear a distinct gasp. After an interval of five seconds, however, the Colonel recovered his poise. "I congratulate you," he purred. "I suppose I'll have to wait a little longer now, won't I? Well—patience is my middle name. Au revoir."

The Colonel hung up. His hard face was ashen with rage, and he stared at a watch on the wall with his cold, phidlian stare. However, he was not without a generous stock of optimism. "Somebody has learned of the low state of the Cardigan fortune," he mused, "and taken advantage of it to induce the old man to sell at last. They're figuring on selling to me at a neat profit. And I certainly did overplay my hand last night. However, there's nothing to do now except sit tight and wait for the new owner's next move."

Meanwhile, in the general office of the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company, joy was rampant. Bryce Cardigan was doing a buck and wing dance around the room, while Moira McCavish, with her back to her tall desk, watched him, in her eyes a tremendous joy and a sweet, yearning glow of adoration that Bryce was too happy and excited to notice.

Suddenly he paused before her. "Moira, you're a lucky girl," he declared. "I thought this morning you were going back to a kitchen in a logging camp. It almost broke my heart to think of fate's swindling you like that." He put his arm around her and gave her a brotherly hug. "It's autumn in the woods, Moira, and all the underbrush is golden."

She smiled, though it was winter in her heart.

"Stop it, boys. No fighting, if you please."

Pin and Candle Auction.

The many centuries old custom of letting, "Poor Folk's Closes" every fifth year has again been observed at Old Bollingbrook, where Henry IV. was born in 1390. The biddings cease when a pin inserted in a burning candle falls. The field, three acres, was let for £12 10s. For about twenty years it has not made more than £5—London Daily Mail.

ITCH!

A WAR-TIME ILL THAT'S SPREADING HUNT'S SALVE CURES IT!

BREED in the war trenches of Europe, a wave of ordinary ITCH is spreading over the country. This skin disease, history shows, has always prevailed, following wars and the concentration of armies. It was common during the Civil War and following that conflict. There was an epidemic of the Itch after the Spanish American War. Now history is repeating itself after the great European struggle.

Returned soldiers and those with whom they come in contact will find a recognized remedy for the Itch in Hunt's Salve, commonly known as "Hunt's Itch Cure." Many a veteran of the late 19's will testify to its merits.

It directions are followed HUNT'S SALVE will prove a never failing cure for all forms of the Itch, and your druggist will tell you so. He sells HUNT'S SALVE under a strict guarantee to refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied user.

A Medford, Oklahoma man, among thousands who praise HUNT'S SALVE, says:

"Some people dislike to call it the Itch, but candor compels me to admit I had it badly. Your Hunt's Salve, however, cured me after many other remedies had totally failed. One box completed the cure—the first application afforded wonderful relief. My advice to those who have to scratch, is to use Hunt's Salve."

Hunt's Salve is especially compounded for the treatment of Itch, Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter and other itching skin diseases and is sold on our guarantee by all reliable drug stores, or it will be sent direct by mail if your local druggist cannot supply. Price 25c per box.

KEEPS FLY PAPER IN PLACE WOULD MAKE AN EXCEPTION

Device That Will Be Appreciated by Anyone Who Has Sat on the Abomination.

Captured German Captain Decided That on This Occasion He Would Forget About Honor.

A New Jersey man has invented a device to keep fly-paper in one position and from being blown by the wind on to father's favorite chair or mother's most treasured lace curtains. It consists of a frame having grooves at each end to permit the insertion of the sheet of fly-paper. A narrow strip of wood is forced down into the groove over the paper to hold it taut. At the lower end of the frame three grooves are located for taking care of any variations in the lengths of the fly-paper.

When the fly-paper is in its frame, it may be placed up in any convenient place, and will be so conspicuous as to be readily seen before being sat upon. In addition to being useful as a holder for fly-paper, the device can be used as an embroidery-frame or as a stretcher for cloth or paper.—Popular Science Monthly.

Powerful Subs.

The submarines of the English "K" class are said to be the fastest and most powerful submersible craft in the world. They are propelled on the surface by steam turbines at a speed of 24 knots, which is about eight knots faster than the speed of ordinary submarines. They are 340 feet long, and displace 2,570 tons. These boats have unusually long periscopes, measuring 30 feet from top to bottom. Their funnels are made to hinge back before the boat dives.

Tired Out?

Do you know that languidness, that "awful tired feeling," heaviness, lame or weak back, sore muscles, stiff or swollen joints, rheumatic pains, lumbago, in the great majority of cases, indicate kidney trouble?

Foley Kidney Pills

act promptly and effectively to restore weak, overworked or diseased kidneys and bladder to a healthy condition.

Mrs. Robert Blair, 461 S. 20th Street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "I suffered two years with kidney and bladder trouble, frequently getting backache. Mornings I would arise feeling very tired and having headaches, and see double spots before my eyes. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and made up my mind to try them. After taking them a few weeks I found my trouble directed. The backache stopped and my kidneys were restored to healthy, normal action. I am also free of those tired spells and headaches and my vision is no longer blurred. My recovery is entirely due to Foley Kidney Pills, which I gladly recommend."

"Little Women"

An all-star Paramount special.

AT THE

M. E. CHURCH

ON

Friday Evening, June 11, 1920

The M. E. church for this week's entertainment is putting on "Little Women," a Paramount art craft picture, following the famous story of Louise M. Alcott by the same title. The story is clearly depicted in six parts by four famous Paramount stars. Where ever this film has been shown it has met with universal approval and comes to us with absolute guarantee to give the very best satisfaction.

A Few of the Many Reasons

WHY

You Should Eat Chelsea Bread

- 1st.—You get our Bread from 10 to 12 hours fresher.
- 2nd.—The Bread is baked here and is not exposed in shipment.
- 3rd.—Foreign Bread is shipped in boxes that often are left on the sidewalk, dogs come along, and —?—?—?
- 4th.—You don't pay a cent or two a loaf royalty on a registered trade name.
- 5th.—When it comes to QUALITY Ours Can't Be Beat.
